HIGH AND HALF RAINFALL HERE THIS MORNING

The heaviest rain of the month fell in Brownwood in a hard downpour this morning. The rainfall measured 1.5 inches on the government rain gauge. It began shortly after 8:00 o'clock and fell for some time, being blown in sheets by a strong wind. The sky was overcast that the middle of the morning.

Gutters were soon filled to overflowing in the downtown section and the water was running in the streets. The two subways, on Austin and Vine, were also standing deep in water and a number of automobiles were stalled on either side and in the subways.

The rain was welcomed by farmers and town dwellers alike—the farmers because reports for some time were that the crops needed rain and the city dwellers because it was refreshing and at the same time was of benefit to home gardens.

The rain was fairly general over this section as shown in the following reports received by Southwestern States Telephone Company:

Ablene, none; Austin, none; Ballinger, none; Brady, .65 inch; Bangs, 2 inches; Brooksmith, 1 inch; Blanket, good rain; Comanche, good rain; Coleman, shower; Cisco, none; Dublin, heavy rain; Dallas, good rain; Fort Worth, none; Fry, shower; Goldthwaite, good rain; Grosvonts, light shower; Lampasas, shower; Indian Creek, good rain; May, shower; Mercury, shower; Mason, shower; San Angelo, shower; San Saba, good rain; Santa Anna, good rain; Waco, mist; Rochelle, heavy rain; Winchell, 1 inch; Zephyr, good rain, and Rising Star, shower.

D. W. Ross, engineer, said a heavy rain fell at Brownwood dam this morning, adding more water to the lake.

Peach Crop Survey Reveals That Cold Killed Many Trees

DALLAS, Texas, March 30—A peach survey in The Dallas News today says that "it is now definitely established that the bulk of the commercial Elberta crop in East and North Texas was killed by the Feb. 8-9 freeze."

Most of the early varieties which have been on the increase in plantings during recent years will produce a fair to normal crop, however, the survey indicated. It shows also that there will be considerable fruit in small home orchards enabling housewives to can a fair supply for home use.

The Elberta crop was reported practically lost in Smith, Anderson, Cherokee, Henderson, Franklin, Hopkins, Titus, Morris and adjacent counties comprising the East Texas peach belt. Early varieties are expected to yield from 25 to 50 per cent of a normal crop.

One Parker county grower with 100 acres in bearing reported his Elberta and Hart cling crop was practically killed in the sub-zero weather but that his early varieties promised a fair to good crop.

ROOSEVELT'S LIBERALISM HAS SPLIT PROGRESSIVE GROUPS INSTEAD OF UNITING THEM

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, March 29—The Roosevelt program has been beating down party lines and, what is more extraordinary, has partly effaced some of the old markers that used to distinguish the progressives from the conservatives.

The majorities behind the president's proposals contain Republicans, Democrats and progressives and in each case there appears a division of opinion among the progressive members of Congress as well as in the ranks of the two parties. The phenomenon of progressives standing on opposite sides of important roll calls is rather new.

No one has yet found the answer to the question, often asked before the inauguration, whether Roosevelt would have to give up his progressive or his conservative friends. National emergency legislation tends to obliterate such alignments as the liberal-conservative one which most of us have thought would eventually enter into the two-party system, but the progressives have more principles to preserve at such a time, and that's one reason why they have been found divided.

Roosevelt already is regarded here as a "progressive" president, if it is possible to apply such terminology to his work thus far. The cabinet is certainly a liberal group in the main. Liberals and even radicals are conspicuous in the professional group which has had so much to do with framing the Roosevelt program.

Line Up With F. D. R. But in Congress there is no unanimity of any group behind him. The composition of the small minority against the banking bill demonstrated that first.

Senator George Norris of Nebraska, feeling that the national welfare required giving Roosevelt what he wanted, voted with other progressives for the bill. LaFollette of Wisconsin, Costigan of Colorado and Borah of Idaho voted against it, disliking the grant of dictatorial powers, fearing the concentration of banking power in Wall Street, and perturbed as to the fate of many state banks. Progressives are still divided by the banking issue—as to the future of the big banks and the little banks and the desirability of the government taking over the whole business.

Roosevelt's idea of putting the proposals to let him cut veterans' expenses and federal salaries, both in the same bill left many of them in a pickle. Nearly all of them in the Senate voted against it after LaFollette had led a close but fruitless fight to exempt employees earning less than $1,000 a year from the maximum 15 per cent reduction.

Split Over Farm Bill

The emergency program for unemployment relief has developed still another argument among the liberals. Most of them favor bond issues for public works and federal grants to states which can't raise any more money for relief, but the reforestation camp plan with its dollar-a-day wage brought another yelp from many of them who believed that the effect would be to drive down wages for labor everywhere. Yet there are liberals who don't believe that and who think it was a grand idea even though their old friends in the labor movement opposed it.

Coming mostly from agrarian states, progressives have usually been as one in supporting all advanced programs for farm relief and now want to vote for any major legislation that seems to have any possibilities. But John Simpson, head of the Farmers' Union—most radical of the three large farmer organizations—came here to fight the Roosevelt-Wallace program with the possibly wild assertion that it would cost $600,000,000 a year to administer. The two leading liberal weeklies of the country are in opposition as to the bill's merits one insisting that the process tax feature is indefensible because it burdens the consumers with a means subsidizing the farmers by sales tax of $800,000,000.

On the banking, economy and farm measures there have been divisions among both conservatives and progressives as to the desirability of giving one man such enormous power as Roosevelt demanded.

Three Names Are Filed for Places On School Board

The names of A. N. Thomason, J. C. Galloway and Mrs. Tom Glover have been filed as candidates for school trustees in the election of Brownwood Independent School District to be held Saturday. The names are filed with R. R. Holloway, vice-president of the board. Names to be printed on the ballot must be filed with Mr. Holloway not later than tonight.

Two trustees are to be elected this year. The terms of Mr. Thomason, who is now president of the board, and Mr. Galloway, who is secretary, expire. Both have announced for re-election. The voting will be done at the regular voting places in the city: Ward 1 at the court house, Ward 2 at Howard Payne auditorium, Ward 3 at Daniel Baker auditorium and Ward 4 at Central Methodist church.
