

JINX ON WATER WELL UNBROKEN AFTER 3 WEEKS

Limit Is 43 Gallons A Minute, Should Be 100

Water Supply Believed OK But Pump Unable To Deliver Rated Volume

The jinx on Muenster's recently drilled municipal water well is still in effect. In spite of repeated efforts during the past three weeks production remains at only 43 gallons a minute.

At the present time the city is using the well's output and supplementing with water from the Farmers Marketing Association well.

Convinced at first that the casing perforations were too small to permit an adequate flow of water, the city removed that part of the casing and left the bottom of the hole open. When the output still fell short of the pump's rated capacity, 100 gallons a minute, the casing was perforated at two upper levels in order to trap additional water sands.

Now that the source of water seems to be adequate and the production remains at 43 it is taken for granted that the fault is in the pump. This opinion is based on the fact that even after a shutdown, when a pool of water surrounds the impeller, the pump will throw no more than its usual amount. "If the pump does not start with a 100 gallon per minute volume when the water is there," Frank Hoedebeck said, "it is certain that the pump is at fault." It is possible too, Hoedebeck said, that water would not hold out at 100 gallons a minute, but there is no way of determining that until the pump will produce to capacity.

Wednesday city officials were pumping the usual 43 gallons a minute while waiting for an engineer from the pump's factory. The probable trouble, Hoedebeck thinks, is excessive wear on the impeller from pumping sand for several hours.

In addition to their worries city officials may encounter some trouble from surface water. Cemented only at the bottom and for about 10 feet at the top, the well has no way of shutting off hard water from sands near the surface. What trickles down beside the casing can enter the casing at the upper perforations.

It is possible that an analysis of the water will show the need of a cementing job just above the level of the perforations.

THE POLISH ARMY ON PARADE

WARSAW, POLAND.—Columns of Poland's army are showing amazing coolness in the face of an impending war that might engulf the greater part of the world. Poland's army is now estimated to be at 1,500,000 men under arms.

KINDERGARTEN CLASS TO BE DISCONTINUED AT PUBLIC SCHOOL

Beginning this year, kindergarten class will be discontinued at the Muenster Public School. The statement was released Wednesday by trustees of the local district.

As explained by Aloys Kleiss, member of the school board, the school is not dropping one of its essential courses but rather eliminating an expense that is not warranted by existing school laws. Heretofore children under scholastic age were admitted, but it was discovered that a kindergarten course, according to law, can not draw on the regular per capita allotment for its support. Since Muenster has no special provision for the tiny tots it will have to discontinue their course.

HOWARD QUITS BREAD TRUCK AFTER 6 YEARS, JOINS WEBSTER LINE

Announcement was made Monday by Webster Truck lines of the appointment of J. Weldon Howard as new agent for the company.

Mr. Howard has been connected with the Purity Baking Company for the past six years and is well known in Muenster and throughout the county's trade territory.

Jesse Reeves of Gainesville is employed by the bakery, replacing Mr. Howard.

14 INJURED AS 10,000 RAID RED MEETING

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—Part of the crowd of 10,000 that attempted to break up a communist meeting here last week-end in the city auditorium, are shown tearing up the seats. The interior of the hall was left in shambles and windows were smashed. The damage was estimated at $5,000. During the melee 14 persons were injured, including six policemen.

Oil Activity Gets Lively As Production Shutdown Ends

Returning to the old production basis Wednesday morning, the Muenster oil field opened another spurge of activity that has chances of becoming the most intensive since the excitement following Voth's discovery last winter.

Marvin Russell, local promoter, predicts that a dozen rigs will be running in the South Muenster field within three weeks. Two rotaries are drilling at top speed now to complete the first offsets on the recent discovery, Staley et al Number 1 brought in last week in the southeast part of the Voth place. More offsets will follow immediately.

Operators here are generally agreed that the new Staley well is the best of the Voth field. It flows from the lime formation of about 1700 feet but was topped a full 30 feet higher than old wells of the field. It came in as a better producer and is expected to last longer than the others.

Activity peeps up likewise in the shallow sand field in the Linn area. Both Linn and TCU-Stark are due to have offsets under way in a few days and the same is true of the Rosson well a mile farther southeast.

New wells on semi-proven territory are those scheduled for the near future on the Henry Trachta and George Gehrig places, both of which are on a direct line between the Voth and Linn fields.

North of the Voth field, on W. M. Trubenbach's drilling continues slowly between numerous break-downs. Several operators are anxiously watching that test, ready to move in equipment in case the showing is good. If a pool should be opened at Trubenbach's it would indicate that oil extends all the way from the Muenster townsite wells to the Linn community field four miles south.

Development north of Muenster is gaining momentum but less spectacularly than in the large production area south of town. Lease activity in the vicinity of Al "Skinner" Wiesman's place is picking up since he got a 74 barrel producer from a 700 foot sand last week. The vicinity is regarded as a good possibility for an active shallow field.

Another well that may open the way for a drilling spurge is that spudded in last Saturday on the Hays school playground. It is an offset to recently completed wells for Perkins and Martin.

COOKE COUNTY FAIR SETS ALL TIME HIGH ATTENDANCE RECORD

With a record attendance of 27,373, which was 1,580 better than the all-time record attendance of 25,793 established last year, the Cooke County Fair closed shortly after midnight Saturday. It was the most successful fair in the history of the 13-year-old exposition.

Attendance surpassed the fondest hopes of fair officials. Saturday was the grand finale for the event, with 9,113 paid admissions and fully 4,000 more complimentary passes to children under 12 years of age.

The attendance was made up of liberal spenders who patronized all the attractions on the grounds, the carnival, the rodeo performances, the famous Community Circus and the softball games. There were more home demonstration club exhibits, a greater number of individual exhibits and more free attractions than ever before.

Weather conditions were ideal throughout the week. The rain that fell on Sunday and Tuesday night, served to rid the grounds of dust, lower the temperature and cause many people who would otherwise have engaged in farm work to come to the fair.

ONE SEVERELY HURT, FOUR SUSTAIN MINOR INJURIES IN CRASH

Miss Rosalie Schmitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schmitz of Lindsay, is in the Gainesville hospital suffering from a fractured skull as the result of an automobile accident near Red River bridge on Highway 77 shortly after midnight Saturday. Four other persons were slightly injured.

Misses Elfreda Bezner and Gertrude Schmitz, also of Lindsay, sustained cuts and bruises, and two Gainesville youths received minor injuries.

Muenster Sewer Plan Gets Encouragement In Hearing Before WPA District Men

LOCAL MEN SEEKING METHOD TO ORGANIZE SEPARATE COUNTY

Remarks about secession of the west part of Cooke county to form a separate, independent county are more than mere rumors. Cooperating with a group of local citizens Ben Seyler has sent a letter to Attorney General Gerald Mann requesting him to specify the requirements that would have to be met in order to form another county. No reply had been received Wednesday from the Attorney General.

The proposed dividing line is somewhere between Lindsay and Gainesville and extends due north and south from Red River to the Denton county line.

An outstanding reason for the proposed secession is the present county regulation on beer. After dyes in the rest of the county had blocked five attempts to legalize the sale of beer, and after Governor O'Daniel vetoed a bill permitting the creation of a wet precinct in a dry county, Muenster and Lindsay turned to the secession plan as the best means of attaining their objective.

Another long felt grievance was the fact that, exclusive of the City of Gainesville, this portion of the county carried far more than half of the tax burden but did not receive back its proportional share in improvements. A re-distribution of funds among commissioners this year has remedied the situation to a great extent, but, according to some local opinions, the distribution still is not proportional to the tax.

While sentiment seems to favor a split, popular opinion is generally agreed that the requirements will be such as to make it practically impossible.

PARISH GROUP SET FOR ANNUAL LABOR DAY PICNIC, DANCE

With the weather co-operating, mothers of the Muenster parish are hopefully looking forward to a substantial addition for the new church fund at their annual Labor Day benefit picnic and dance next Monday. Preliminary plans for the event have been under way for some time, and this week-end will find a group of the ladies making final preparations.

As usual the affair is presented by the mothers, under the supervision of their president, Mrs. Felix Fecker. They will be assisted by a group of men and young ladies who respond to their call for help.

The picnic opens at 1 p. m. and lasts until about 11 o'clock. Its principal diversions will be the old favorite tango game, other games and contests and domino or card games. Its refreshment stands will offer sandwiches, ice cream, candies, and iced drinks.

Beginning about 8:30 o'clock Gordon Shay and his orchestra of Wichita Falls, will play for a dance on the main floor of the hall. The picnic will be held in the basement.

OKLAHOMA OFFICERS NAB CARNIVAL CROOK IN BILL WOLF'S CAR

Luck favored Bill Wolf in the prompt recovery of his car last Friday night, apparently little more than an hour after it was stolen and less than ten minutes after Gainesville police had broadcast a description of it.

Bill parked the machine near the fair grounds about 8 o'clock and missed it shortly after 9:30 when he was preparing to return home. He promptly reported to police who in turn broadcast a description to patrolmen. Very shortly afterward officers at Ardmore identified the machine as it was driving through town, and made the arrest. The thief said he had been employed at the county fair carnival and was then on his way to a city in North Oklahoma.

Mr. Wolf returned to Muenster Friday night with friends, unaware that his car had been recovered. The following morning he received word of his good fortune and had the car back in Muenster before noon.

Miss Irene Fleitman of Dallas is here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fleitman. She recently returned from a seven weeks' trip with Dallas friends. They visited in Indiana, Kentucky, Kansas, Illinois and Missouri.

Application For Allotment And Map Being Prepared

If Granted, Expense to City Will Be Lower Than Originally Estimated As PWA Project

The first step in Muenster's second effort to secure a modern sewage disposal system was taken Tuesday when Mayor Ben Seyler, accompanied by Joe Ward, Wichita Falls engineer, met with division leaders of the WPA at Dallas. Encouraged by a favorable hearing Seyler and Ward agreed to proceed immediately with the preparations of a formal application for federal allotment.

Mr. Ward is the consulting engineer who assisted the city in building its water system and at the same time drafted plans for a sewer system. When the city prepared its application for a PWA grant almost a year ago, Ward revised his earlier plan to agree with the city's changes. Within the next few days he will again check and revise so that the plan is applicable to the city as it now stands.

The revised plan and extensive questionnaire accompanying the application should be ready in about 10 days, Ward estimated. Eight or ten weeks from that time, he advised, the city should learn whether it was favored with the WPA allotment. In case the answer is favorable actual work can begin a short time thereafter. Ward based his estimates on time required by other similar projects.

WPA labor for the job would be drawn from Cooke County relief rolls, the Dallas officials advised. That statement was considered especially encouraging in view of the previous report that this city has little chance for a WPA project because it has no men listed on current WPA records.

Originally Muenster planned to build the sewer through a FWA project which would provide 45 per cent of the cost while the city provided the remaining 55 per cent. An election authorizing a bond issue to raise as much as $20,000 for the city passed by a small majority eleven months ago.

In the event that a WPA allotment is granted, it is believed the city's expense would not run as high as for a FWA project. Since the greater part of installation expense would be labor and since allowance is made for each man-month of labor to apply to materials, the city's share of expense should fall well under 50 per cent.

LARGE SIZE PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM NOW AVAILABLE IN CITY

A public address system with amplifying power suitable for a crowd of 10,000 persons is now available in Muenster. J. W. Fisher secured it Wednesday and introduced it to the city by broadcasting a series of musical numbers from a phonograph.

Frequent demands in the past for an address system induced Fisher to secure the equipment. At almost all functions attended by a considerable crowd, such as community meetings, community picnics, and dances, there has long been a need for an instrument to raise a voice above the drone of the crowd. Renting a system in a distant city has always been inconvenient and has sometimes been impossible.

Fisher's instrument, a late model combining improvements of recent years, is far superior to the usual small speaker systems. It has a clear distinct tone with a minimum of metallic ring and volume to carry several blocks.

WHY GO TO COLLEGE?

This is the time of the year when thousands of American youngsters are preparing to embark on their college careers. It is the time, too, when American parents are wondering whether the benefit derived by their boys and girls are worth the normal family's sacrifice.

"Just how will a college education help my son or daughter?" That question has puzzled parents for generations, and it continues to be especially puzzling when confronted by dozens of success stories about great men who reached the heights without benefit of a college training.

There is only one reasonable way of answering that question. Undoubtedly the person who achieved great things in spite of a handicap would have gone just as far, perhaps even a little farther, had he not been compelled to spend much time acquiring knowledge the hard way. Men who have the determination and ability to dig out knowledge for themselves would be good students and would graduate from college with a splendid intellectual background.

On the other hand, one hears of so many cases in which college trained men are failures. Like conspicuous success such failure stands out as especially suitable food for comment. It shows conclusively that family savings can be wasted on youngsters who do not have the natural ability to use their opportunity to advantage.

The general rule is that a person increases his opportunity by a college education. If he takes his work seriously he improves his reasoning powers. The college course is filled with subjects that demand profound, logical thinking and will give a student a habit of thinking. Unlike the widespread opinion that he is supposed to graduate with ready answers for all the problems he will face later, he is simply in a more competent mental condition to think things through. Just as physical exercise develops a better body, mental exercise develops a better mind.

In connection with the above thought it might be added, for the benefit of prospective students, that the hardest courses are usually the most beneficial. Those, and not the ones that demand a minimum of study, are the subjects that will develop a habit of concentration and an ability to think. The boy who chooses a "snap course" passes up the greatest advantage of a college training.

Another point worthy of more than passing notice is that college training is frequently expected to take the place of vocational training. Parents have complained that their children, when graduating, were not especially fitted for any particular work. General knowledge, much of it based on abstract study, develops general ability that is useful in any line, but it does not necessarily furnish the technical training nor the skill for vocational work. Some courses such as engineering, geology, law, medicine, business administration, etc., are offered in college, and other vocational courses are offered in high schools or vocational schools, but they should not be confused with academic college work. The one is specialized, the other is general.

In the last analysis, the value of a college education is determined by the ability of the person receiving it. Good gasoline does not show its true worth when placed in a car of deficient horse power. Education does not show its true worth when placed in a mind of deficient horse sense.

COMPLETE TRAINING

A mention of education would not be complete if it did not include a word on the nature of the school a student chooses. Man has two faculties, intellect and will, and it is imperative that both of them receive adequate training.

Perhaps at no other time in the history of the world was there such a widespread diffusion of false doctrine as today. Important universities, many supported by state funds, are openly teaching atheism, communism, and other poisonous theories that strike at the very roots of Christianity and democracy.

Parents who are selecting a school to continue the training they started at home would do well to consider whether the university of their choice harbors men who claim there is no God, no existence beyond the grave, no responsibility or obligation to God and neighbor, no code of right and wrong.

Incredible as it seems, such professors are found by the hundreds in American colleges. Their presence is a constant threat to the security of civilization. Consider just a minute what would be a reasonable reaction in a person convinced of ideas to get all he can out of life any way he can do it. The person who stands in his way would simply be removed or trampled. Dishonesty, immorality, anything to satisfy his selfish greed would become his rule of life. Justice, honesty, decency, kindness would all become absurd.

Needless to say, such an education would do more harm than good. Furthermore, it is foolish to assume that a boy or girl can face such instructors without sustaining moral scars. Youth is impressionable. Even if it revolts against theories that clash with earlier teaching it cannot muster the facts and the logic to cope with false claims. In the end it gives way to the other person's apparent logic.

The only safe choice is the school that is known to adhere to traditional Christian standards. College training must be a continuation of early training. It must teach, along with secular subjects, that there is a God to whom mankind is responsible, that every person has rights and duties which must be observed, and that right and wrong are determined by something more profound than "what you can get away with." The proper college not only teaches these things, it insists on their observance by the students.

It is important to bear in mind that good citizens can not be developed without moral training. People who train their minds along atheistic principles are likely to become clever scoundrels.

What Others Say

IS IT WORTH SAVING?

Words spoken in jest sometimes contain a grain of truth. Such, for instance, is the question asked by the Detroit (Mich.) Free Press, regarding modern civilization.

"After all," asks the Free Press, "why worry so much about the fate of modern civilization? What is modern civilization doing except make everybody worried, discontented and envious?"

The writer of this paragraph was probably speaking facetiously, but, after all, what he said is true. Modern civilization, with its stress and strain, its complexity and speed, is making neurotics of all of us. Mechanical inventions, by accelerating the tempo of living, have succeeded in making robots of men, destroying individuality and forcing all of us to submit to a standardized pattern.

As a result of modern civilization, we are all trying to keep up with the Joneses and ahead of the Browns, and, consequently, we have made the accumulation of money the chief end of living. We have glorified "success" and have ridiculed the esthetic dreamer out of existence. Money is our standard and "progress" is our religion, thanks to modern civilization.

No one is happy or contented nowadays. We are driven forward by some unknown force which will permit us to see no peace. Our hospitals for the insane are full and overflowing. Our institutions for the treatment of nervous ailments are crowded. Our people are dying off like flies, chiefly from degenerative diseases, such as cancer and heart trouble.

And, all the while, the world rushes madly toward war.

Would we not be better off if we scrapped the whole thing and went back to a simpler way of living? Would the world be much worse off if the so-called "modern civilization" were destroyed? Considering what it is doing to the human race, one can hardly be blamed for doubting that modern civilization is worth saving. — Denison Herald.

SUCCESS

He has achieved success, who has lived well, laughed much, who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty, or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration and whose memory a benediction.—Bessie A. Stanley.

POWER SOCIALISM CASTS ITS SHADOW

Washington and Oregon have new legislation to permit and encourage the organization of Public Utility Districts (PUDs) for the purpose of utilizing power from the government-owned and tax-exempt Bonneville and Grand Coulee hydro-electric developments. A recent map showing where transmission lines are under construction from Bonneville, shows that they are going through territory which is now being served, and which has been served by private companies since electricity first was used in the Northwest.

This means that highly-taxed private companies will either be superseded by government projects, or that such companies will be prevented from expanding and taking up new loads. Publicly-subsidized power will take over this field of private enterprise.

The argument is advanced that government plants can deliver electric current to consumers at a lower price than can private companies. Any industry enjoying tax-subsidization from the standpoint of capital requirements, and various tax-exemptions not accorded private enterprise, should be able to cut rates. But if this is a sound argument in a nation founded to encourage private enterprise, why should the principle not be extended to such items as food, clothing and rent which absorb the bulk of every family income, instead of to one of the most minor living expenses, power?

Following the reasoning of proponents of government power plants through to the end, can lead to but one conclusion, advocacy of socialism or communism. Is this nation ready to pay such a price, namely, the destruction of our theory of government and private ownership of basic lines of business? The pattern for power socialism is now so plain in this country that it is casting its shadow over every individual activity.—Exchange.

Confetti

By CON FETTE

Whenever foreign diplomacy and war talk become so important as to crowd accidents, murder, embezzlement, and scandal off the front pages of American papers, and when it crowds valuable advertising time off the American air waves, we've got something really serious. For almost a week now news has been dominated by war, negotiations, mobilization, Hitler, Danzig, etc. At this writing there is some hope that peace can still be preserved. By the time it reaches print that hope may be completely blasted.

Not being familiar with circumstances of the international mess this column hesitates to express an opinion. It is mindful that Hitler claims some justice in demanding that which his country lost at Versailles, at the same time it is inclined to regard the Fuehrer as a modern Napoleon who will not stop until he reaches his Waterloo. If such is the case it is better if the modern Wellington shows up now rather than to let conflict drag on.

The greatest calamity of all is that innocent people have to suffer for the sins of national leaders. Of course, the propaganda machines in every nation have people worked into a frenzy, but cut off the wild talk, lay the cards on the table, and it is probable that there would not be enough war minded men in all the countries combined to make a good gang fight. Even if this thing goes no farther than mobilization maneuvers, thousands of ordinary folks, who don't want war, will have to pay dearly. If war comes there is no describing the heartbreak, suffering and butchery.

Why can't national leaders save the horror by resorting to arbitration? By now they should have sense enough to know that force does not bring justice. War will determine a winner and a loser—with both losing immeasurably in life and resource—and then, God pity the loser.

There is a ray of hope shining through the favorable comment of the Pope's plea for peace. Nations that are at one another's throat apparently are agreed on one point, the supreme pontiff's sincerity and justice. They know that he has no axe to grind other than to bring justice, peace and happiness to mankind. He is War's most formidable enemy today, and he has a fair chance to win his struggle.

We in America get the creeps just thinking of what might happen to us if things break loose over there. Would we keep out of it? We like to think that it is no concern of ours, that we will have nothing of a war that does not directly threaten our own soil, etc., etc. But look what happened in 1917! People were jubilant over the neutrality, they re-elected Wilson principally because he kept us out of war, but then the propaganda machines started turning and the nation was cussing the Hennes within ninety days. Propagandists now would have a fairly easy time working up some anti-Hitler prejudice. We say that we know better than to fight Europe's battles, but what will we say later? All we can do is hope for sensible national leadership.

What's all this boycott talk we've been hearing? Is it actually a fact or is it a mere rumor to make conversation here and worry at Gainesville? From all indications it is not a reality—at least it is not general and systematic—though, of course, it may apply to a scattered few.

While dealing with rumors we can mention also the proposed secession of this end of Cooke county. "Why not form a county of our own?" they say. "It will not only permit us to handle our own problems but it will give us a chance to keep tax money at home."

Well, all that can be said about boycotting and secession is that one is very improbable and the other is next to impossible. Business and personal relations with Gainesville are so old and firmly set that breaking off would be very inconvenient, to say the least. And secession would bring on legislative red tape.

But just the same men at Gainesville are worried about the rumors. Regardless of what they think of either scheme's success, they do not like the current of ill will that flows through it all. Which is just the way some of the locals want them to feel.

Bring up the subject around here and it doesn't take long to get a correct view of the situation. Muenster has tried for five years to legalize beer and has voted almost 100 per cent wet every time. It has pleaded for a chance to handle its own beer question, it has explained that dry communities can do likewise, but it has been unable to put the idea across. When it asked for Gainesville's help it got no response. It was told that Gainesville business did not want to get involved in the affair.

But Muenster feels that Gainesville business should take an interest. With the help of civic organizations it can and should convince its people that Muenster is entitled to a chance to control beer as it sees fit. Since other localities need not give up their principles, Muenster regards this as the only fair solution.

The doctors, Jas. Graham (left) and Dr. Alex Jones (right) are removing the ice pack from the body of Lum in a refrigerated bed at the St. John's hospital here. It is hoped the experiment may restore him to health.
