VOLUME X

MUENSTER, TEXAS, COOKE COUNTY, FRIDAY, JANUARY 4, 1946

NUMBER 6

When Secretary of State James Byrnes announced at the close of the Big Three conference that agreement had been reached for the creation of an atomic energy council he may and he may not have been bringing us good news. It all depends on what the council is expected to do.

If this means an effort to check the uses to which atomic energy will be put it may be fine. We don't like the idea of using atomic bombs on other countries and we'd be grateful for any provision offering a little assurance that they will not be used on us.

If on the other hand it means that the three nations will pool their efforts to develop and perfect atomic energy the news is not so cheering. That implies all nations will compare notes on progress already made, and we have no doubt who will gain by the exchange of ideas. In effect it would amount to surrendering the most potent weapon we have for maintaining world peace and our own security.

We dread to think that any such thing has happened partly because the Reds have not proven themselves to be cooperative and trustworthy, partly because we are getting tired of their overbearing attitude.

They don't rate much confidence for spreading their totalitarianism over most of Europe and much of Asia after paying lip service to the four freedoms all through the war. They don't rate much of our friendship after their hostility to American soldiers in Europe, or after using for their own political ends the enormous store of relief supplies furnished principally by this country. Nor do they rate much cooperation for their refusal to let American correspondents diplomats and soldiers take a look and tell what they see in Russia, either during or after the war. There is something suspicious about a power that insists on the right to snoop in our affairs but is so very careful to keep its own affairs secret.

So, if Secretary Byrnes has put over a deal to prevent certain uses of atomic energy, more power to him — provided he has a fool proof plan that Stalin and company will not be able to squirm out of. But if he's agreed to swap our secrets for theirs he was a sucker. Russia gains immeasurably if everything is on the level. And, judging from past records, it can't even be trusted to be on the level.

It is altogether within our right to insist on a little more assurance of good will before getting further involved with Russia. She should be made to understand that we are not interested in loans if our correspondents are not permitted to tell what is done with the money, nor in sharing our best weapons if she continues her program of militarism and expansion. We're glad to contribute in every possible way to world peace and prosperity but we hate to stick out our necks.

If labor and management ever get together we can begin looking for some very welcome improvements as a result of scientific progress during the war. The principle of tank gun stabilizers applied to passenger train cars will add a lot of comfort to rail travel. Radar will bring a new era of safety to air and sea travel. Jet propulsion along with the gas turbine will furnish smoother more efficient power for planes. Aluminum and magnesium will find thousands of uses. The same is true of plastics. Penicillin and DDT will do wonders at eliminating infection and disease.

Looking forward to those possibilities, in addition to houses, automobiles, appliances, clothing and the many other things we have wanted for years, we can't help being amazed at the shortsightedness of labor and management big shots for their failure to get together. Time's wasting and the longer they delay the longer they are postponing the comforts and pleasures they themselves are looking forward to.

For years, they say, automobile engineers have been able to build more efficient and longer lasting cars but declined to do so because both they and the oil companies wanted more sales. Now because of the appalling drain on our natural resources maybe we can hope for a change which is as urgent for the welfare of posterity as for our own economy.

According to recent reports France and England already have such cars. France has one that is supposed to make 60 miles on a gallon of gasoline. England has one supposed to get double use

EARL ROBISON T O SEEK RELECTION AS COMMISSIONER

Stress Insect Control Methods

"It's a mistake to expect miracles of an insect killer unless exact methods of application are used," it was stated recently by Dr. Heber C. Donohoe, research director and entomologist of the Peterman laboratories, in a message to the nation's housewives.

For example, many new DDT-fortified products have disappointed users who fail to realize that DDT must be applied in a certain way for each variety of insect.

Particularly resistant to many widely sold insecticides is the Cimex lectularius (bedbug). A bedbug killer containing DDT is much more effective as a residual agent if it is evenly applied to the mattress, bed frame and springs and other surfaces. Such application is best managed with a paint brush, as shown above.

Most Of County Officials Will Seek Reelection

Two Are Running For Higher Offices; One Retires From Post

Most of Cooke county's public officials will be candidates to succeed themselves in the Democratic primary next summer, they have indicated in statements to the Enterprise this week.

Two are seeking promotions by running for higher offices, while only one is definitely not a candidate for public office this year.

County Attorney Ray Winder is the office holder who will not seek a county post in 1946. "I'm taking out," is the way he put it. Justice of Peace L.V. Henry is seeking advancement and will be a candidate for county attorney this year. Friends of John Atchison, former county attorney now in the army, have announced he will also be in the county attorney's race.

County Judge Carroll F. Sullivan will seek reelection, he said, and H.O. McCain, former city superintendent of schools in Gainesville, will be an opponent.

County Tax Assessor and Collector Tom Hayes will be in the race for reelection and his former deputy, M.L. Helm, will be an opponent.

County Superintendent Randolph O'Brien will seek another term and Hubert H. Moss of the Gainesville High school faculty has announced he would also seek the office.

Sheriff Emory Horn, recently appointed to the post he now holds, will be a candidate for the office. He has two opponents, Luther F. McCollum, former sheriff, and Constable W.A. Fletcher.

County Clerk Tom Blount, District Clerk Martin Davis and Mrs. Eva Townsley, county treasurer, will be candidates to succeed themselves and no other candidates for their offices have made public their intentions.

QUIET OBSERVANCE MARKS ARRIVAL OF NEW YEAR HERE

Muenster stores and other business houses were closed Tuesday in observance of New Year's day.

For the most part the observance of the new year's arrival was quiet, though there were several watch parties throughout the community. Bells of Sacred Heart church rang out merrily at the stroke of twelve, and dinner parties in a number of local homes added a note of gaiety to the occasion.

Special church services were held on New Year's day at Sacred Heart church. Father John officiated at the 7 o'clock mass. Father Weinzapfel sang the 9 o'clock high mass and delivered his first sermon for the occasion. Father Herman officiated at the 9 o'clock mass which was followed by rosary and Sacramental Benediction.

Both Muenster schools will resume classes next Monday, Jan. 7, after the holiday recess. The resumption of the regular schedule is somewhat delayed this year due to numerous cases of flu among students and members of the faculty.

CYO MEMBERS TO GIVE SOCIAL HERE THIS FRIDAY NIGHT

Muenster's CYO members are sponsoring a social this Friday evening in the parish hall and all are invited to attend, it was reported by officers this week. Also included on the invitation list are CYO members from Lindsay and Gainesville.

The entertainment committee has planned an interesting program, with good music, and a lunch featuring refreshments and good foods.

The party is to get underway at 8:30, and for this reason members ask personnel of the Youth Band to be on hand for their regular practice at 7:30, so that the two events will not conflict.

Members also stated that all local veterans and servicemen at home on leave or furlough are welcomed for the affair.

Visiting Mrs. Joe Hirsch during the holidays were her daughters, Miss Josephine Hirsch of Dallas and Mrs. Richard Gregorcyk and little son of George West. The former returned to Dallas Sunday and Mrs. Gregorcyk and baby will remain for a longer visit.

By Edna Mae McIntosh

It would be very convenient if physicians and nutritionists could set up a schedule telling exactly when each new food should be started during baby's first year. Just as babies vary in the age when the first tooth and then other teeth appear, so they vary in the age when new foods should be started. Your physician is by far the best guide, for he knows your baby's requirements.

Orange juice and cod liver oil are started any time after the first week, usually when the baby is two or three weeks old. Your doctor will tell you how much to give. One of the special baby cereals, fortified with vitamins and minerals to supplement those in milk, is given next. This may be started any time from one month to three months and is given at the noon feeding.

About a month later, which means between two or two and a half months to about three and a half months, one of the strained vegetables is given. After a week on one vegetable, change to another one, but give baby plenty of time to become familiar with each one. Then change the cereal to breakfast or supper time and after two or three weeks it may be given at both meals.

Strained fruits may be started any time after a vegetable has become familiar. Gradually, very gradually, more of a variety is given. By nine months of age there should be several vegetables, some meats and vegetable soups, egg yolk, several fruits in the menu. Good food habits are started early and learning to eat a variety is an important part in this training.

some fifty guests enjoyed informal diversion, games, dancing and refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Herr were married on Dec. 27, 1938. She is the former Miss Ruth Dean of Gainesville and they have three children. The business anniversary commemorated Herr Motor Company's 9th birthday, which occurred on Dec. 21.

MR. AND MRS. EDELEN HOSTS AT DINNER PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. O.B. Edelen entertained with a turkey dinner in their home Saturday evening as a compliment for Phillip Petroleum company employees and their wives.

The meal was served buffet style and was followed by informal diversion.

brooch worn by her paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Rosalie Spaeth, at her wedding, some eighty years ago, while "something borrowed" was a rosary belonging to her sister, Miss Georgia Spaeth. It was brought from Europe in 1930 when her father made a tour of that country.

Miss Evelyn Spaeth attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a frock of jersey, the bodice in chartreuse and the skirt of melon color. Her head dress was of chartreuse feathers with velvet streamers and her flowers were a corsage of gardenias.

Namesake

I. J. Fox, left, nationally famous furrier, meets Sam (I. J.) Fox, star of the New York Giants professional football team, who was nicknamed "I. J." by sports writers. The shortage of women's girdles has broadened the masculine outlook.

They are constructing apartment houses so fast now that you can watch one going up while on the way to work and see the land lord evicting tenants for non-payment of rent on the way home.

Confetti---

out of its fuel by directing the exhaust to a turbine arrangement on the flywheel. Shortage of fuel forced these countries to design for economy. Common sense should prompt us to do likewise.

The difference in public attitude toward automobiles and so many other things is amazing. When a man buys a home he wants permanence but when he buys a car it for only a year or two. In a truck or any kind of productive machine he looks for efficiency and economy. In a car he demands something flashy and spunky. The reason is that he has been taught to think that way by expert sales publicity.

What we're looking for now is a different kind of publicity. Instead of boasting that a car will take any hill in high and accelerate to 60 in so many seconds, we want a sales line to emphasize so many hundred thousand miles as the life of the car and 30 to 60 miles on a gallon of gas, and encourage people to shift to a lower gear when climbing a grade.

We'd like to get along on less car expense and spend the difference on a few other appealing gadgets.

FAIRBANKS-MORSE Hammer Mills

You can get a Fairbanks-Morse Hammer Mill immediately.

Fairbanks-Morse Hammer Mills grind grain or roughage fast, and with low power cost.

Because of their large breaker plates and large screen area, most of the grain is ground first time around.

Large-diameter cylinders give the necessary hammer-tip speed at only 2400 r.p.m. This permits using a larger pulley for greater efficiency.

One of three models will match your tractor perfectly, and combine lowest fuel consumption with greatest grinding capacity.
