A Better Plan Than Cashing War Bonds.

Let us assume that you bought War Bonds. You plan soon to cash them and buy a car, or refrigerator, or washing machine, or radio, or some other necessity.

We suggest a better plan to meet your needs than by cashing these Bonds. Hold them against future emergencies as a reserve. They represent savings of the past. You are to the good by that much.

Use our simple installment payment plan to finance your needs out of current income. Many are finding this a far better plan. Our Bank will be glad to go over this with you. Come to see us.

ANNIVERSARY PARTY FOR MR. AND MRS. MATT MULLER

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Muller were honor guests at a party given in their home Sunday evening in observance of their 31st wedding anniversary. The courtesy was extended by their daughter, Miss Rosa Lee Miller, and their son Arnold Muller, and was a surprise affair.

Following informal diversion, refreshments were served to some 50 relatives and friends. The refreshment tables were prettily appointed and two large decorated cakes were presented to the honor couple, along with useful and lovely gifts for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Muller were married here on Jan. 12, 1915. She is the former Miss Angeline Herr and they are the parents of eight children: Arnold, Mrs. George Gehrig, Mrs. Norbert Knabe, Rosa Lee, Donald, Eva, Clyde and Jeanette, and also have 4 grandchildren. Mr. Muller engages in farming 8 miles south of the city.

New Job for Dairy Farmers in 1946—Help Broaden Markets

The dairy industry has squared away to another big job, not even pausing to pat itself on the back for the record breaking milk production in 1945.

In this brand New Year of 1946, this new job is to reach even higher standards of quality and to get even more milk and more milk products into the daily diet of more people.

In 1941, Americans consumed an average of slightly more than six pounds of cheese each year. During the war, consumption dropped to around four pounds, due to demand by the armed forces and for lend-lease. The job the industry has set for itself is not only to get back to that level but to go beyond it, to eight pounds or more per person.

We need to do this for some very important reasons. First, the consumer needs more cheese and other dairy products to get the great benefits of these best of all foods. Second, we need to build a greater market for milk from American farms . . . from your farm and your neighbor's farm.

Just take a look at what an extra two pounds of cheese would mean. It figures up to a total of about 280,000,000 pounds more cheese per year and that means a market for two and a half billion pounds more milk just to provide that increase in one dairy product.

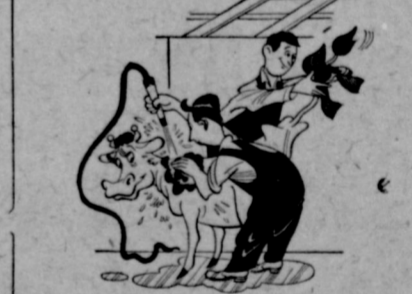

The way to get it done is to produce high quality products, backed by a nationwide program of selling and promotion. A big help also in making markets for more milk will be new products such as ice cream mixes, powdered whole milk, and new varieties of cheese. Kraft will have these and other items ready for the consumer.

That little word "quality" will be a big factor in getting this job done. The quality program starts on your farm. You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, nor can you make high grade dairy products out of poor milk.

Your part of the program starts in your barn and in your herd. Right here at the beginning of this new year I want to review, in a few words, the things which make up a sanitation program on a dairy farm.

Clean barns, clean cows, clean utensils and clean workers; prompt and proper cooling; correct milking—these are the primary parts of your program to produce the kind of dairy product the consumer is going to demand.

Keeping ceilings, rafters, sidewalls, mangers, stanchions and barn floors clean is vital. Brushing cows, clipping flanks and udders, washing udders with warm water are the important steps in animal cleanliness.

I imagine you have on hand some extension bulletins which tell the proper steps in clean milk production. If not see your county agent.

And be sure and study the articles on the proper handling of milk in the November-December issue of the Kraftsmen. If you do not receive it regularly, write me at 500 Peshigo, Chicago 90, Ill., and I'll send you a free copy.

These practices are all matters of habit—getting started on a system of work and following through every day at each milking. Once you have set up this program you'll find it easy to follow. And you'll know you've done your part in the nationwide, long range program of building this great industry to new high levels.

All of us learned how working together during a war can bring miracles of production. The dairy industry, from farm to distributor, can show the rest of the business world how working together can accomplish still greater goals in times of peace.

Funeral services were held Monday at 9 a. m. at Saint Mary's church in Gainesville with Rev. John P. Brady officiating and burial was in the Lindsay cemetery under direction of George J. Carroll and Son Funeral Home.

Bearers were Charles Fulte, Henry J. Schad, Adolph Dudenhoeffer, Arthur Dietz, A. Pittner, and Joe Gieb.

MARY WIEDEMANN, STEVE MOSTER WED IN TUESDAY RITE

Miss Mary Wiedemann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F.J. Yosten, and Steve Moster, son of Mrs. Leo Moster, were married in Sacred Heart church here Tuesday morning in a pretty ceremony performed at 6:30 o'clock. Rev. Herman Laux, pastor, officiated at the double ring ceremony and at the nuptial high mass.

The wedding procession and recessional were played by Anthony Luke, organist, on the pipe organ and he also assisted the church choir in rendering music for the mass.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of white brocaded satin fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long fitted sleeves tapering to points over the hands, sheared long-waisted bodice and full, wide skirt. Her fingertip veil of net fell from a pleat-edged calot of net and was worn with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a white prayerbook topped with a gardenia corsage and from which fell white satin streamers and white sweetpea buds. For "something old, borrowed and blue" she wore an antique ring, set with blue stones, that is an heirloom in the bridegroom's family.

horrified by the demonstrations of overseas GIs. They regard the incident at Manila as about the worst disgrace the country has ever experienced. In their minds the country is no more secure than its army and the army is no more secure than its discipline and organization.

It's a regrettable incident, to put it mildly. The prestige of the army and the country has suffered because of it. And it was mutinous, besides. According to the interpretation of military law any organized uprising, no matter how orderly, against existing conditions or existing authority comes under that heading.

At the same time it should be remembered that the soldiers at Manila were only carrying out an old tradition, which unfortunately did not quite fit in with army tradition. Experience over previous years has taught them that mass meetings and mass petitions are the most effective means of making their wants known.

Even though, technically, their demonstration can be interpreted as mutiny it is grossly unfair to bring such an accusation against the men. Probably there is not one among them who, in case the fighting had resumed, would have refused to return to the front. They intended no disloyalty. They only wanted to put across the idea that they were tired of waiting and want to get back home. They feel as though they put on the uniform for only one reason, to help win the war, and now that the job is done they should have the privilege of taking it off. They can't be blamed for resenting the delay, and as long as they were not violent they can even be excused for their unorthodox method.

When a few thousand men put on an orderly demonstration it is more than misbehavior. There must be a principle involved. Thank goodness the nation and Congress saw fit to consider the incident in that light.
