SAVE YOUR TYPEWRITER RIBBON SPOOLS
 The War Production Board has limited the manufacture of metal ribbon-spools to 25 per cent of the 1941 output. This will leave very little, if any, spoils available for commercial use since the government will probably take all of the production allowed. This is going to inconvenience all of us, but this reduction in ribbon spoils will save 38,400,000 pounds of steel for tanks, shells and guns.

ARRANGE ROOMS FOR NEW BEAUTY

Rearranging Furniture Can Create Stylish Interiors

Room arrangements are pretty much a matter of symmetry. There are certain laws of balance which are essential in arranging furnishings in a room to provide that interesting simplicity which is immediately noticeable and admired. Pairs of things make pleasing room arrangements — a pair of chairs, a pair of lamps, a pair of end tables, a pair of throw rugs, a pair of nicknacks.

Arranging furniture is very much like painting a picture. All you have to start with is a bare room and furnishings. What you do with them is what counts.

Stand just outside of the room studying it carefully. Note its size, its shape and particularly its peculiarities as to size, shape and location of windows, doors, the fire place, recesses in walls, kind of floors, woodwork, etc.

Build a composition around interesting things. Make the various individual arrangements in the room balance with the arrangement as a whole.

If all of the heavy pieces are at one side or at one end of the room, the balance is destroyed. Remember, windows are to look out of, particularly if there is a pleasing view promised. Make your room arrangements so a view from your windows is easily possible.

Take into consideration the number of people who are going to use a room and what they will probably be doing when they are in the room.

Change your rooms from time to time. Various pieces of furniture show up better in different room arrangements.

respect is a small placard that was brought to Con's attention: "I had a sore foot and complained—until I met a man who had no legs."

Of course the war will not be won nor real happiness acquired by merely overcoming self-pity. That's a good start, but here's another slogan to get the kind of results that really count: "There's no limit to the amount of good a man can do if he doesn't care who gets the credit."

Confetti--

In this connection Con is happy to be returning to something more interesting than a hospital ward. Better subject matter with greater activity simplifies this little task of writing.

A return to training will also harmonize better with military ambitions. Even though not fond of army life as a career—which would be promptly terminated under peace-time conditions—Con has hopes of doing a good job for his country, of carrying all the responsibility he can manage. Incidentally also to add something to this community's fine war record.

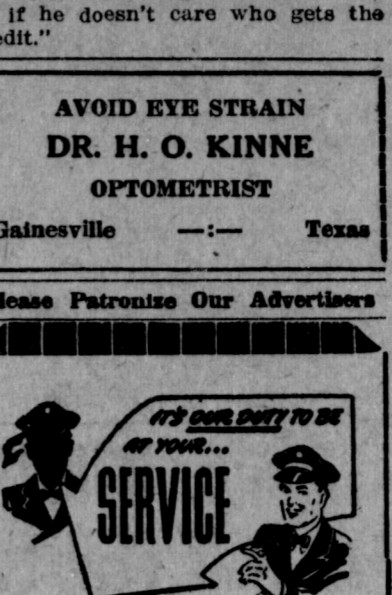

Another source of pride, that we share with every Texan, is the Memorial Day induction of 1000 men at Houston to man the new cruiser Houston. While the glory for this unprecedented event goes particularly to the sponsor city, the rest of us Texans are also enjoying a glow of pride. The rest of the country for that matter, the rest of the civilized world, must doff its hat to the Lone Star State. A glorious heritage that dates back almost to the time of Columbus is further embellished today. The spirit of Bowie and Crockett and Sam Houston continues to live. Is it surprising that native sons are inclined to identify themselves as Texans rather than Americans?

What they actually mean is the cream of the American crop—and usually they are understood that way.

What with rationing sacrifices, bad news and various discomforts facing us every day we are inclined to complain about our lot in this war, until we compare our insignificant misfortunes to those of other people. Especially apropos in this
