County discovers unpaid court cases

By Janet Felderhoff

Cooke County District Attorney Janice Warder's curiosity led to the discovery that Cooke County was not being reimbursed from the State for criminal cases it prosecuted under the authority of Health and Human Services. These are basically cases of food stamp and welfare fraud.

Warder explained to Cooke County Commissioners Court on Monday, "We've always prosecuted those for the State. I was aware that we could get paid by the State for prosecuting those. We filled out the paperwork to get paid. One day I became curious as to where that money went." Assuming it went into the County's General Fund, she approached the County Auditor who was not aware of the County getting any money from those services.

An investigation ensued which revealed that the County was not getting the money and the reason was that the contract had never been signed that would allow the money to be paid. The paperwork was being filed, but the contract was not in place. The State was then in the process of renegotiating contracts with all DAs in the State, so there was a waiting period for a new contract.

District Attorney Warder presented a contract between the Department of Health and Human Services and the District Attorney's office. The County Judge's signature was required on the contract before it could be returned to the Cooke County prosecutes about one of these cases a month. According to the DA, for every non contested case that is settled with a plea, the County receives $280, and for every case that is tried by judge or jury the County receives $678. It is very rare for a case to be tried by judge or jury since most all plea. Warder anticipates being paid for the

MMH approves discount pay plan

By Janet FelderhoffMuenster Memorial Hospital District CFO Jerry Pickett presented a new self-pay discount policy proposal to the Board of Directors at the monthly meeting on Tuesday, April 19. In an effort to build business, he felt that discounting self-pay patient bills if paid up front would be one way to do so without hurting the Hospital.

"What I landed on was if we charge the patients that pay up front 5% higher than what Medicare pays us, we're guaranteeing ourselves a 6% profit at that point," explained Pickett. "I went through each department and looked at what our costs are as a percent of our charges, plumped that by 5%." He showed a table with the proposed prices with discounts.

'This would only apply to people who have exhausted their insurance, don't want to charge their insurance, or don't have any insurance," Picket said. Currently, the maximum discount for up front pay is 25%.

The prompt pay discount was unanimously approved by the Board. Those who pay in full at the point of service (POS) will receive a 45% discount on lab and imaging, 54% in physical therapy, 57% in occupational therapy, 25% in speech therapy. The discount if the bill is paid within 10 days of the first statement will be 22%, within 10 days of the second statement 18%, within six months of the service date 15%, and within 12 months of the service date 10%. Emergency room patients who are not admitted or transferred will be charged 75% of a Level III visit at the time of

Eric Hoenig soaks up Thai culture during Peace Corps mission

By Janet Felderhoff

Eric Hoenig, a resident of Denton, enjoyed its urbanized culture. He relinquished all that to serve more than two years as a Peace Corps volunteer in Thailand where he was assigned to instruct teachers in a small village in the province of Mukdahan in northeast Thailand. It has about 1,000 people. Most of the residents farmed, especially rice. The village got only one harvest of rice instead of two or three, making it a

For transportation, Eric rode his bicycle everywhere unless someone offered him a ride. This is because one of Peace Corps' rules is that you are not allowed to ride a motorcycle or drive a vehicle.

Teacher collaboration community outreach or TCCO is what his project is called. Eric worked with two co-teachers from Thailand. He would show them basic teaching strategies to help them in the classroom. This included lesson planning and participatory learning activities.

"It's a really good opportunity to give back and volunteer and also learn about another culture," Eric said of his decision to serve in the Peace Corps. "You've an opportunity to learn another language. Peace Corps provides a really good training program. It has the best program that helped me meet my goals of helping out and getting to learn about another culture." Eric began his mission in January 2009 with training in Thailand. On April 8 of that year, he was sworn in as a volunteer. That service ended March 14 this year. He had to learn the Thai language. Lao is actually the first language there and Eric picked up some of that, but Thai is what he learned "The training was amazing," remarked Eric. "We lived with a host family for two months who didn't speak English. For four hours a day, we'd study Thai - no English allowed from day one. There were only four of us in the class. So, just using flash cards, examples, or acting out, we had to lean Thair really quick."

Would Eric repeat the experience? Yes, in a heartbeat he said.

Eric described his experience as, "Amazing. It was challenging, but very rewarding.

I met some really great people and formed some great relationships. I really enjoyed my time there living in a totally different culture and living in a tiny little village."
Almost everyone in the village was Buddhist. The culture was much more laid back than here and the residents very friendly. Eric said he could ride his bike through the village in the middle of the day and half the villagers were hanging out. They would in-

Letter to the Editor

About two weeks ago, someone from Gainesville asked me what the school bond election controversy was about. After I told them, they were shocked. Their response was, "Why are you arguing about it? It's for the kids, simple as that.;

As both a taxpayer and parent of MISD students, I have heard both pros and cons of the upcoming bond election. I am also an organization volunteer and a substitute teacher within the district. In my opinion, our children and teachers need these new schools. They are at capacity, especially in the elementary school, and the buildings are no longer safe - period. It is also imperative we build another gym-regardless of what it is called.

Be aware there is some false information being circulated in the community that needs clarification. The only way to do that is to attend one of the community meetings, and/or get a tour of the present facilities. Don't rely on hearsay from someone else. It is your vote—be educated! It's as simple as that.

Michael Claude Vogel 1947 - 2011

at Muenster Memorial Hos-

Born Dec. 23, 1947, in Saint Jo, Claude was the second son and fifth child of the late Theodore "Tee" Roman and Marie Hoenig Vogel. He was the grandson of the late Emil and Anna Kleiss Vogel and Aloys and Anna Elizabeth Koelzer Hoenig. He was baptized into the Catholic faith, sponsored by his aunt, the late Matilda "Tillie" Otto, and his uncle Alphonse Vogel.

Before beginning first grade, his parents asked him if he would prefer to be known as Claude or Michael. He chose Claude, though his family's nickname for him, Sonny, stuck throughout his life. When he became an uncle to his first nephew, also named Michael, he earned the nickname Uncle Mike. With characteristic wit, he always said he didn't care what name he went by, as long as the name was correct on the check.

Claude graduated from Sacred Heart School in May 1966. He worked for McKinney and Deaton Construction before being drafted into the military in October 1967. He served 15 months in the 65th Medical Group of the U.S. Army in South Korea and was honorably discharged in May 1969. He attended Cooke County Junior College and later worked as a machinist at Valenite and Peterbilt. At the time of his death, he was employed by Gainesville State School, and was also a part-time farmer in Muenster.

He married Linda Harvill at Sacred Heart Church on Oct. 22, 1983. Linda was born in the same clinic in Saint Jo, and, as young children, Claude and Linda both had their photos taken at Kent Bellah Studios, seated on the same bench. They have two sons, Roman Louis, 22, and Phillip Nathaniel, 18. Claude is survived by his wife Linda of Muenster; sons Roman Vogel (LeeAnn) of Justin, and Phillip Vogel of Muenster; grandson Levi

Mass of Christian Burial was held at 10 a.m., Monday, April 25 at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, with Father Ken Robinson officiating. Imelda Rohmer led the rosary before Mass. Many of Claude's family and friends participated in the Mass: Janet Vogel and Linda Knabe (readings); Dana Bass (eulogy); Alvin Hartman, Sylvan Walterscheid, and Chuck Bartush (altar servers); Kathy Vogel, Leon Fuhrmann, Carolyn Bayer, Frances Bayer, and Rebekah Hesse (Eucharistic ministers); Christy Hesse, Linda Flusche, and Diane Grewing (singing); and Pat Hennigan (pianist). Don Hess, James Hess, Gilbert Hess, Bernard Hesse, Don Eckart, Don Hellman, Arthur Bayer, William Fisher, and Leonard Vogel formed the military honor guard. Taps were played by Ronnie and Tina Weinzapfel.

Burial followed in Sacred Heart Cemetery under the direction of McCoy Funeral Home. A prayer and vigil service was held Sunday, April 24, at 7 p.m. with Father Ken Robinson leading the rosarv.

National Teacher Appreciation Week May 2-6

The first week of May is "National Teacher Appreciation Week." I want to let the public know of some of the good things that are happening in Muenster ISD, mainly due to the teachers and staff in Muenster ISD.

Teachers are our treasure! We each have a memory of a teacher, or teachers that inspired us to become who we are today. Well beyond the curriculum taught, teachers wear many hats, such as, mentors, encouragers, counselors, supporters, and disciplinarians. Teachers are the most important key to a child's learning.

At Muenster ISD the students are very successful. According to the Texas Education Agency's accountability standards of 2010, Muenster ISD is currently an "Exemplary" school dis-

poration donated to the Keep trict, as it was in 2009. Muenster ISD has been an "Exemplary" district 12 of the last 17 years. These are very impressive stats for the students of Muenster ISD. Muenster ISD was recently recognized as a "Higher Performing School" by the National Center for Educational Achievement. (NCEA is a department of ACT.) Some recent successes of students come from extracurricular activities (Academics, Agriculture, FCCLA, and athletics). In UIL Academics, the CX Debate team was 3rd in State, and six students will be competing in events at the UIL State Academic Meet next week. By the way, all six of these students are involved in Ag, and some of these six are in FCCLA.One of these students is a State Officer of FCCLA. I was asked recently how these activities. The overall operating budget of Muenster ISD is just over $5 million. Staff salaries and benefits make up about 80% of budget. Instructional supplies and operating materials and costs are approximately 15%. Extracurricular activities are about 5%. Of the 5% for extracurricular activities, athletics is about 4% of the total budget. Instructionally the district spends about $4 million, athletics about $300,000.

According to the State's Comptroller's office in their Financial Allocation Study of Texas (FAST) comparing the academic progress of students against how much money is spent, Muenster ISD was rated as a 4.5 star school with a spending index of "very low." For the amount of money that is spent on the education of Muenster ISD students the public gets a great value! This brings me back to next week, Teacher Appreciation Week. If you believe that the teacher is the most important key to a child's learning, then appreciate and thank those that teach.

HOENIG .......continued from pg. 1 down to enjoy life," he noted. "And very non confrontaculture is no confrontation

This mission proved to be a very rewarding experience for Eric. Just seeing his students' confidence grow is one of the best things Eric recalls from his experience. He told of a map project that three schools took on. They painted large murals of a map on the walls to teach about Geography. At first all said they could not do such a project. After completing it, Eric observed two 8th grade girls who had helped the most were sitting on the floor staring at the map with big grins on their faces. "That was the proudest moment for me. Just seeing my students gain confidence and seeing them grow. I was there for two years, so I got to see two pretty pivotal years of my students' lives. Not just learning English. Seeing them grow up as human beings was cool.' During his two years in the village, Eric became a member of that community. He was invited to weddings, attended funerals and participated just as any other resident.

Things done for fun in this rural village included fishing, hunting frogs and lizards, playing tagra (similar to volleyball but one uses feet and a wicker ball), visiting family and friends, and even watching television.

Eric kept in touch with family and friends through Facebook and his cell phone. Aside from being away from friends and family, which Eric found the most difficult part of the assignment, he found adjusting to the culture very difficult.

"Thai culture is very complex, very different than our culture," explained Eric. "It is challenging trying to work in a Thai school system, a Thai work place and try to be respectful of the local traditions, but still be yourself. That can be somewhat of a challenge to be true to yourself and your culture, yet be respectful of their culture. I was very open minded, and once you learn about their culture, you understand what's okay to do and what's not okay to do.'

"People really slow your legs crossed and feet you get a small spoonful of pointed at someone is considered offensive. The head tional. A huge part of Thai is considered sacred and you small portions never touch someone's head, a big no no.

They don't shake hands, but instead wai or bow with hands folded. Depending on how high up someone is, the deeper the bow. "They give us really good training on culture and language, so I felt pretty well prepared for that.'

Eric lived alone in a house, but sometimes with uninvited guests. These included a six-foot snake, mice, lizards, rats, bugs, and even a few egg-laying chickens that made quite a mess!

"My house was a sim-ple little wooden house on stilts," said Eric. He paid $60 a month for rent. He had a microwave that his mother water from a bucket.

There was a host family who took Eric in, inviting him to meals in their home, providing transportation, and Dad and they treated him like their child, doing anything for him that they would for their own children. His host dad was the principal at a school and his host mom was a teacher at the preschool.

Eric's mother Karen Hoenig remarked, "It sounded like she had a mother's heart. I could relate. Here I was all these miles away and I felt like she was loving my son there with the same heart that I would love my some here. That doesn't change by boundaries.

Food there is not the American hamburger and fries, steak, or even salad. Eric tried dishes that many here would cringe to think about dining on. This included crickets and other bugs, raw beef, rat, ant eggs, and even cow placenta - a luxury dish served at his going away party. "The food there was actually pretty good, but every now and then I'd eat something crazy. It'd help you bond with the villagers. They offer, so you eat what they do," said the adventurous Eric. Sticky rice is a staple in the Thai diet and is eaten at meals three times a day.

Thailand is developing, said Eric. Cities are very developed with modern conveniences. The rural areas are still developing. In the village Eric stayed, there were no restaurants, stores, or shops. Some people cook food outside their house and sell it. Some have small repair shops or small shops at the home to make an income.

Prior to his service with Peace Corps, Eric performed missionary work in Guatemala in 2005 and 2006. In 2006, he lived at a convent for six months where he helped some nuns teaching English, assisting with some medical missions, and did odd jobs.

What Eric saw on his first provided. Baths were cold trip motivated him to give more volunteer time. "When you see how a lot of people in the world live, I couldn't not help out," Eric remarked.
"I saw there was a definite and caring for him in other need in this world and defiways. He called them Mom nite ways I could help out. After seeing extreme poverty, I really wanted to find a way to give back.'

While in Thailand, Eric enjoyed visiting many places including Laos, Malaysia, Cambodia, Vietnam, Bangkok. He enjoys traveling, meeting new people, and seeing other cultures.

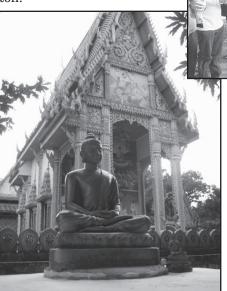

Graduating from college with a major in Spanish and a minor in History, Eric seeks employment now as a Peace Corps recruiter. He'd like to work in one of their offices here in the States.

2011's first quarter was very dry

Many are of the opinion that the first quarter of 2011 is the driest ever with a mere 2.13 inches of moisture since Dec. 31, 2010, and some of that fell as snow. Records kept by Steve Moster indicate that at least three years were drier in their first quarter, and 1954 wasn't much better than this year with its scant 1.96 in January, 0.7 in February, and 0.21 in March (total 2.87). Years with drier first quarters than 2011 were 1963 with a total of 1.69 inches from 0.10 in January, 0.4 in February, and 1.19 in March; 1971 total 1.74 from January's .41, February's 0.97, and March's .36; and 1972's total of 1.18 from January's 0.37, February's .45, and March's 0.36. Of those years with dry beginnings, the total moisture for the whole year was 26.10 in 1954, 20.99 in 1963, 39.15 in 1971, and 25.18 in 1972. For this year, Spring seems to be settled in earlier than normal and the temperatures have already reached the low 90s with high winds compounding the dry conditions as they suck up the little moisture that is keeping the green in Spring. Carol Vogel keeps the official moisture and wind records for Muenster.

Renting a car

Renting a car use to be simple. Not anymore! The contracts are long and obligate you to cover the entire cost of any damage when that vehicle is returned. For years Texans enjoyed a policy which automatically covered any damage to a rented vehicle. Not any longer. In 2005 the Department of Insurance deregulated the Personal Auto policy. This opened carriers to file and use policy forms which may restrict coverage to rented vehicles. Now every policy may contain different wording regarding rented  ${

m vehicles}.$

How do you know for sure? At FMW Insurance Agency we can review your policy and advise if it covers damage to rented vehicles. Please feel free to call Gary Fisher, Paula Kerr, or Anna Braziel at 940-759-4644, or bring your policy by 206 North Main anytime.

Spoons

fish?

Considered the most simple of all other lures, they got their name because they look like the head of a spoon. They act for the bait fish by doing a flickering and wobbling movement or action. Spoons are excellent for starters in lure fishing; easy to use and very affordable.

Spinners

The spinner is basically a blade wherein it does a rotating action on a spindle when being retrieved or taken back through the water as well as it gives off a flash as light is being reflected on the revolving blade, characterizing the bait fish's scales and movements. This is a lure that is flexible because only can one verify and know the retrieve depth by the period or time frame one leaves before one starts a retrieve. One can also alter the speed of the revolving blade around the spindle by either speeding up or slowing down one's retrieve. For the Trout and Mullet, a smaller size is recommended, and a larger spinner with the pike liking, along with the treble hook in a red wool.

Surface lures

These lures are used on the water surface and are considered to be the most explosively thrilling of all lures as one could actually see the fish taking the lure, and the anticipation and the expectation of one looking forward of the take is an exciting experience. The fish can be completely seen exiting the water when they send off at a surface lure. Since these lures are being retrieved on the surface of the water, they can be a good choice in areas that have a lot of weed.

Suspending plugs

Having neutral buoyancy and resistance, when the plug has dived or dropped to the required depth and left alone, it will continue on being suspended to that depth. For this reason, this type is perfect for pursuing your prey hidden near the weed beds, rocks, or banks. When yanked in order to imitate life to the plug, it causes some crashing attack

Floating drivers

A necessity for all lure anglers, they cover a wide scope in diving depths; beginning from just beneath the surface up to f15 feet or more. The diving depth is established on the point of view of the vane or fin to the body of the lure. The lesser the angle to the body of the lure, the deeper it can dive. The shape as well as the size of the vane and the lure's body contributes to the movement of the plug in Sinking plugs

These are excellent for deep water fishing, wherein the retrieve can start as soon as the preferred depth is reached. This is accomplished by counting down before one starts the retrieval process. Therefore, the same depth will be reached whenever one casts. The distance that the lure has sunk down in a particular time, will give a suggestion of how deep or how far down the fish are situated when they strike; thus this is called the sink rate of the lure.

Soft baits

This is soft rubber bait that comes in various shapes and forms, with matching sizes and colors. These are commonly used for sea and fresh water fishing, which can be used on a weighted jig head handled in the same manner as the jerk bait, being managed as a plug is used.

Jerk baits

Having no movement of its own when in the water, the angler gives life to this lure; whenever the rod trembles or shakes or jerks, this lure can appear to have life. This lure for the most part, mimics an injured or wounded fish that the prey fish find tempting, and be compelled to thrust or lunge at.

component of food production—nearly half of retail food price increases (44%) come from fuel, transportation and energy costs. Comparatively, raw farm products contribute less than a third

every stop in the food production chain, starting in the field where the crops

Consumers can expect are grown. Farmers and ranchers are paying more for basic business inputs like diesel to power equipment and fertilizers that foster plant growth. Manufacturing and processing facilities also must account for the rising cost of fuel.

"As those prices go up, it costs more and more money just to get the food product to the grocery store shelf. The farmers' and ranchers' share of that consumer dollar is very, very small," said Central Texas cattle rancher Lloyd Huggins. "The rest of that cost is going to the people in between who take the raw product and turn it into something consumers really want to eat.' Commodity prices also have been increasing, due to rising global demand and recent supply disruptions around the world. Although the costs of raw farm products are higher, processed tabletop.texasfarmbureau. foods are more likely to post noticeable price increases.

"We'd expect to see goods with a higher degree of processing to them, like break-fast cereals and pre-packaged, pre-cooked materials, to go up faster than a fivepound bag of flour," said Jim Sartwelle, Texas Farm Bureau director of Public Policy. "Those products have a lot more processing, transportation, and marketing costs."

Ultimately, food prices are expected to level out, and consumers can expect to pay only slight increases over the long term. As for the men and women who grow our food, they will continue providing the fresh produce, grains, and dairy products that stock our grocery store shelves, while trying to maintain profitable and lasting businesses. #### Prices mean nothing to farmers if it doesn't rain

I heard it again at a civic club meeting just this week: "Wow farmers must be making a killing with these commodity prices so high." This comment came from a friend who knows work for farmers. I've heard it dozens of times during this recent and historic escalation of most commodity prices. It's a quick, top of mind question that takes less than 10 seconds to ask. It takes several minutes to answer properly. Recently, I conducted an interview with Frank Lucas, chairman of the U.S. House Agriculture Committee. Lucas hails from the Oklahoma Panhandle, which shares a border with the Texas Panhandle. That part of Oklahoma also shares the Texas climate.

Lucas said, in response to a question about commodity prices: "I was 17-years-old before I knew you could end a prayer without calling for rain." There are many such prayers spoken all over Texas, Oklahoma, and other places right now. Lucas' point was simple. It doesn't matter for farmers and ranchers how high prices get—if it doesn't rain—and soon. A quick look online at the U.S. Drought Monitor tells the tale. The ugly, bright red splotches cover much of Texas. This is the indicator for "extreme drought." One part of the Texas Gulf Coast is a darker shade of red, indicating "exceptional drought," the highest level on the scale. There is one tiny little pocket of yellow on the lower Gulf Coast which is defined as "abnormally dry." That's the good news. The rest of the map displays shades of tan and brown which denotes drought from "moderate" to "severe." I've talked to farmers in the last week or so that actually stopped planting rather than disturb the powder dry soil. Others are rolling the dice, planting in hopes of a rain. If a rain—and a good one—does not dampen Texas soil soon, there will be very little to harvest or sell. Cattle herds, already depleted from the droughts of the last decade, will be further decimated. Crops will not even come up.

Of course, the meter has not stopped running on farm costs. The American Farm Bureau Federation completed a study that estimates farmers will pay 85% more this year—due to rising oil prices—than last to produce any crop.

The thing about extreme and exceptional drought is that there is so little that can be done by individuals or government. Disaster declarations help a little, buying time for agricultural producers. But in the end, we all resort to adding that call for rain to our prayers. Without rain, what looked like a very promising year for the people of the land, could well dissolve into full-blown crisis.

Are baby carrots the new 'junk food?'

Bolthouse Farms, a leader in the carrot market, is challenging Americans to eat baby carrots "like junk food." The new advertising campaign emphasizes the fun and convenience of baby carrots—but not necessarily their health benefits.

To have a great advertising idea, you have to get at the truth of the product," said Omid Farhang, vice president and creative director at Crispin Porter + Bogusky, the agency Bolthouse Farms commissioned to launch the campaign last spring. "The truth about baby carrots is they possess many of the defining characteristics of our favorite junk food. They're neon orange, they're crunchy, they're dippable, they're kind

Bolthouse Farms has branched out beyond its typical products, which include juices and salad dressings, to "cool" and convenient. The company has tested colorful. individual carrot packages and even baby carrot vending machines. Marketing efforts include edgy commercials in test markets, a web series featuring two "slacker" grocery clerks, and a Twitter account, @babycarrots.

So far, the campaign appears to be making an impact in test markets. By November, Bolthouse Farms' sales in test markets increased 10 to 12% over the previous year.

The construction of the Cooke County Fairgrounds multi-purpose facility continues to progress through the generosity of several grants, but more funding will be needed to complete the project. On Saturday, June 11, there will be a benefit BBQ dinner at the Fairgrounds, which will include entertainment and a chance to win a shotgun.

Farmers support bill to end duplicative pesticide permitting

In just six months, Cooke County agricultural producing and potentially costly pesticide permitting requirements by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). However, a bill has been filed to correct the duplicative permitting process, and farmers and ranchers across the country are calling for Congress' approval.

"Recently, a federal court ruled that anyone who applies pesticides to more than an acre of land will be required to jump through another hoop with the EPA beginning Oct. 31," said Robert Klement, County Farm Bureau president. "The new requirement cites compliance with the Clean Water Act, but many legislators agree with the agricultural community that pesticides are properly regulated by the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA)."

The Reducing Regulatory Burdens Act of 2011 (HR 872) aims to uphold FIFRA's full authority to regulate pesticide use. HR 872 was filed by Rep. Bob Gibbs (R-Ohio)

Committee Chairman Frank Lucas (R-Okla.), ranking member Collin Peterson (D-Minn.), John Mica (R-Fla.), and Mike Simpson (R-Idaho), as well as several other legislators.

"Texas farmers and ranchers are hopeful that legislators will put a stop to the EPA's unnecessary regulations and reinforce the permitting process," Klement

The House passed HR 872 on March 31 with a 292-130 vote and significant bipartisan support. On April 4, HR 872 was referred to the Senate Agriculture Committee, where it currently is under consideration.

HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE CASH IN ON MODERN DAY GOLD RUSH!

By Jason Delong

STAFF WRITER

Yesterday at the Hampton Inn & Suites, hundreds lined up to cash in antiques, collectibles, gold and jewelry at the Treasure Hunters Roadshow. The free event is in Gainesville all week, buying gold, silver, antiques and collectibles. One visitor I spoke with yesterday said, "It's unbelievable, I brought in some old coins that had been in a little cigar box for years and some old herringbone necklaces—in less than fifteen minutes I left with a check for $700. jewelry box and dresser for at least 20 years." Another gentleman brought in an old Fender guitar his father had bought years ago. The man said, "Dad had less than fifty bucks in that guitar." The Roadshow expert that assisted him made a few phone calls and a veterinarian in Seattle, Washington bought the guitar for $5,700.00. The seller continued, "I got another $150.00 for a broken necklace and an old class ring. It's not every day that someone comes to town bringing six thousand dollars with your name on it."

Jeff Parsons, President of the Treasure Hunters Roadshow, commented, "Lots of people have items that they know are valuable but just don't know where to sell them. Old toys, trains, swords, guitars, pocket watches and jewelry is valuable to collectors. These collectors are willing to pay big money for those items that they are looking for."

This week's Roadshow is the best place to get connected with those collectors. The process is free and anyone can bring items down to the event. If the Roadshow experts find items that their collectors are interested in, offers will be made to purchase them. About 80% of the guests that attend the show end up selling one or more items at the event.

Antiques and collectibles are not the only items the Roadshow is buying. "Gold and silver markets are soaring," says Archie Davis, a Roadshow representative. "Broken jewelry and gold and silver coins add up very quickly. I just finished working with a gentleman that had an old class ring, two bracelets and a handful of silver dollars. His check was for over $650.00. I would say that there were well over 100 people in here yesterday that sold their scrap gold."

One gentleman holding his check for over $1,250.00 in the lobby of the event yesterday had this comment: "I am so happy I decided to come to the Roadshow. I saw the newspaper ad for the event and brought in an old German sword I had brought back from World War II and some old coins, and here is my check. What a great thing for our community. I am heading home now to see what else I have that they might be interested in."

The Roadshow continues today starting at 9am. The event is free and no appointment is needed.
