Movable Type's Origin

Little does the world realize the large blessings it owes to the occurrence of small incidents. One of the most fruitful of these happened about 500 years ago in the shop of an obscure young German jeweler and engraver.

One day, in great secrecy, the young man was engraving a page of manuscript on a block of wood, when his chisel slipped and a small portion of the engraving was broken off. The dislodged bit bore a single letter, and as the young workman ruefully regarded it an idea occurred to him—why not carve one letter at a time, each on a single little block, and put the letters together to make words? In that moment was invented movable type, a discovery which, by making possible the rapid and inexpensive duplication of books, was destined to bring knowledge and learning to the common man and the light of progress to a dark and superstitious world.

The first sheet this young man, Johannes Gutenberg, printed was the Lord's Prayer. This was followed by the wonderful Gutenberg Bible, a fine copy of which sold several years ago for over a million dollars.—Christian Science Monitor.

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

Only the time will tell whether the President's new Board can keep strikes from hamstringing defense production, just as time proved to Washington that something needed to be done about strikes.

Some people in Washington, particularly Congressmen who know what strikes are all about, feel rather dubious. They point out that the government has the power to crack down on defense industries, even to the point of taking them over and running them itself, but does not have nor seek similar power over workers in the plants.

They become especially pessimistic when they see what they consider to be indications of the administration's attitude on the situation. There was House debate recently over the following remark attributed by one columnist to a high Washington official:

"The right of the CIO to strike is paramount to the right of this country to have a national defense program, and prior to the safety and welfare of this nation."

The official has not publicly disavowed this statement, so some legislators assume it is correct. And they object vigorously to letting any group declare that for any reason whatever they do not choose to make goods for defense.

Less than two weeks ago, laborites were successful with their propaganda to the effect that strikes weren't interfering with defense. Even the President said so. And then officials began to get curious. They found some astounding facts.

The over-all conclusion is that if foreign agents had deliberately set out to impede production with as few strikes as possible, they couldn't hope for better results than are being achieved. Here are some of the facts that were disclosed:

Powder for shells and bombs is a No. 1 need. Private industry is building a number of powder plants. One at Radford, Va., was opened with fanfare, three months ahead of schedule. Another at Charlestown, Ind., promises to be finished two months early. But the Radford plant can produce at only one-quarter of its capacity until the Allis-Chalmers plant catches up on time lost by strikes in making generators. And the Charlestown plant will be even in a worse spot.

Fuses for explosives are "must." One concern has a contract for about a third of the fuses needed. It wants steel for them. But a CIO strike has stopped the flow of steel so that the fuse-maker has informed the Government that he may have to shut down.

Aluminum is so essential for defense planes, shells, radios, and the like that the government temporarily isn't even letting any aluminum be used to make pots and pans. Yet an aluminum strike in a key plant is delaying production of millions of dollars worth of aluminum.

The Government's own arsenal at Frankford, Penn., is being delayed in its production of ammunition for small arms because of a steel strike. Another strike is impeding Pennsylvania production of howitzers, and the heavy guns now most favored by defense experts.

Strikes caused by disputes as to which union should have its members working on the job are slowing construction in a number of places. But in general, the industrialists who are building these new plants are far ahead of schedule.

One plant will be ready to make Rolls-Royce engines in 9 months when the government estimated it would take 12; two machine gun factories will be ready months ahead of schedule; an aluminum foundry will be ready to produce in 6 weeks instead of an expected 12.

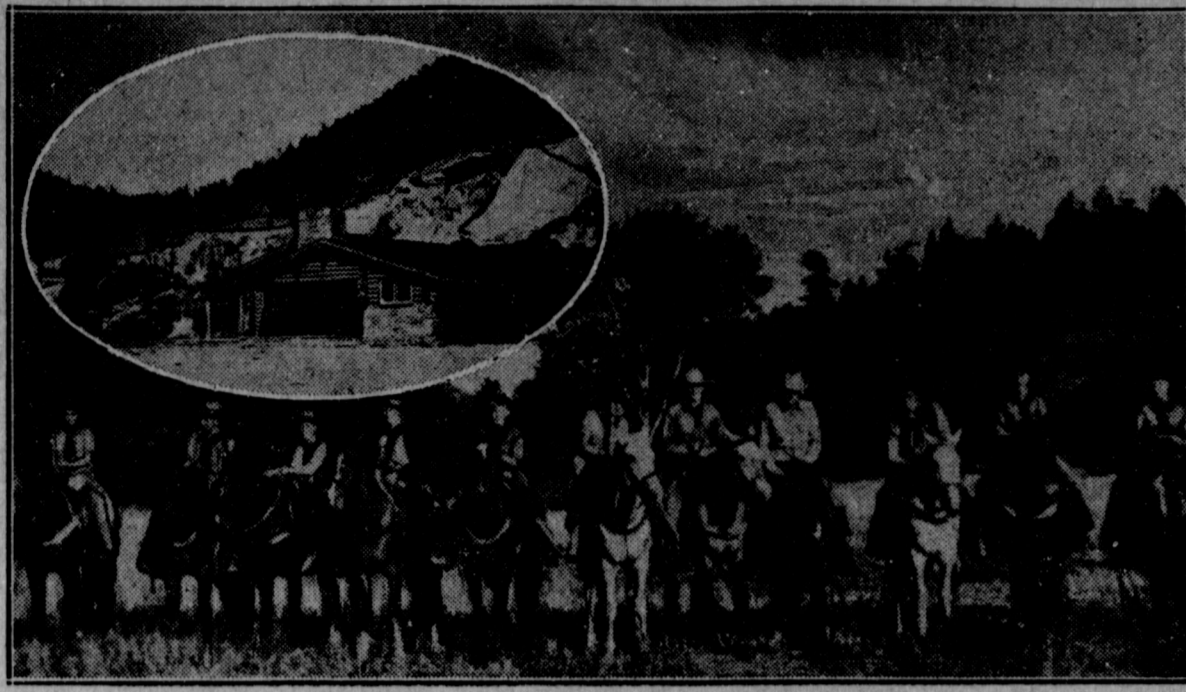

Marvelous things have been done to achieve this record. Structural steel framework out in the open has been kept heated behind insulation because frozen steel cannot be worked satisfactorily. Even frozen earth is dug up, run through a heat-by John R. Swanton, deals with Indian languages of the Texas Gulf region and consists primarily of a dictionary of those languages, but it starts with a brief historical sketch, mentioning the cannibals.

First information of consequences regarding the tribes living around there came from Cabeza de Vaca who was cast upon the shore of Galveston Island in 1528. He went from tribe to tribe and wound up at the Gulf of California.

In 1658-87 La Salle made an unsuccessful attempt to plant a colony on the Texas coast near Matagorda Bay, then occupied by Karankawan tribes. This undertaking served to arouse Spain to the importance of forestalling further attempts of other nations by occupying the country themselves, so in 1689 an expedition was sent out to destroy a French settlement. However, the expedition "found that the Indians had accomplished this task for them."

According to the report, relatively little attention was paid to the Karankawa Indians after that, but after Stephen F. Austin began his settlement on the Brazos in 1823, frequent conflicts arose between the Americans and the Karankawa in which the latter lost heavily.

This tribe apparently took a beating all around and was wiped out before many years had passed. The Smithsonian report said:

"In the war for Texas independence they sided with the Texans but again suffered severely. In 1844, having murdered an American on Guadalupe River, part of the tribe fled to Padre Island and part across the Rio Grande into Mexico. The remnant is reported to have been surrounded and exterminated in 1858 at their hiding place in Texas by some rancheros."

OLD REPORT SAYS CANNIBALS ROAMED TEXAS GULF COAST

WASHINGTON.—The Texas Gulf Coast was at one time apparently not as hospitable as it now is, because, according to a report from the Smithsonian Institute, it was at least partly inhabited by cannibals.

At an early period, the report says, the Spanish navigators "were made aware of the nature of the 'Texas' coast and the inhabitants and discovered that some of the Indians living there "were addicted to cannibalism." Consequently, the maps of those times bore the legend "wandering and cannibal Indians" spread along the margin of the Gulf in this section.

IF YOU LIVE IN North Texas YOU'RE IN THE OIL BUSINESS

I live on an oil lease and operate a few small pumping wells. 95 per cent of all the oil wells in North Texas are small pumpers like these.

Thousands of North Texas families like mine depend upon such stripper wells for their living. The petroleum industry of this area supports nearly 75,000 persons, including oil workers and their families. Wage earners of this group get nearly 23 million dollars a year.

North Texas farmers and ranchers receive over 8 million dollars a year in lease and royalty payments and tax collectors get nearly 4 millions more.

All told, the petroleum industry pays out 54 million dollars a year in North Texas. This money is spent and repaid until every merchant and business and professional man—in fact everyone—in our section gets his share of it.

You and I and our families and our community have a very important stake in the oil industry and its future in Texas.

CALVARY—THE WORLD'S ONLY REFUGE

This Friday is the anniversary of the greatest event in the world's history. It recalls that day more than nineteen centuries ago when the Son of God, moved by His infinite love for men, endured bitter agony and shameful crucifixion as an atonement to restore them to Divine favor.

Textbooks as a rule have little to say on the subject, hence would have us assume that Christ's mission was secondary to temporal factors in the development of civilization. Perhaps something is said about the extensive influence His teachings had on succeeding centuries—and the tribute usually is inadequate—but seldom is anything said about the redemption by which mankind again became eligible for an eternity of supreme happiness.

The opinion above was expressed in defiance of a sure knowledge that it seems old fashioned or preachy to a vast number of people who profess to be Christians; to some who have ignored the dictates of common sense it may seem totally absurd. By all the generally accepted standards of this era it is at least unusual outside a religious publication.

But this is Good Friday and, custom or no custom, the only adequate reference must deal with man's eternal destiny. Only that can touch on the real significance of the first Good Friday.

For years we have been content with a mere superficial reverence, the remnant of a once profound appreciation of the day's real meaning. And all the while the trend of human affairs obviously went from bad to worse. As people lost sight of their eternal destiny they jeopardized their temporal welfare. Current events bear indisputable evidence supporting that fact.

We have heard all kinds of opinions on the causes of our chaotic conditions. Depressions, aggressions, hunger, subjection, oppression and the rise of wild political or economic theories are all responsible, but they do not reach down to fundamental causes. In the last analysis, the reason for our woes is our departure from Calvary.

People who forget the meaning of Christ's death lose sight of their final destiny and grow lax in fulfilling their obligations to God and man. Things just do not work out properly when we adopt purely human methods to the exclusion of Divine plans. History has shown that fact time and again. As soon as God's laws were disregarded trouble started, and it lasted until people came back to their senses—usually after calamity had forced them back.

Through the centuries, through all the cycles of desolation and reconstruction, the spirit of Calvary remained constant, always waiting as a refuge for those poor deluded unfortunates who finally saw the folly of their ways. It is waiting still, able as always to restore the world to peace, security and happiness.

Just as surely as Christ's death on Calvary was followed by His glorious resurrection, so the world's return to Calvary will be followed by its resurrection. Furthermore, there will be no resurrection except by way of Calvary. Christ's resurrection had to take that course.

OBSERVING GOOD FRIDAY PROPERLY

For years it has been customary in all parts of this nation to observe Good Friday in a spirit of special reverence. Muenster, we are proud to recall, has been consistently faithful in that respect.

As usual, an official proclamation was issued by the mayor reminding people of the day and urging a fitting observance. It is an appropriate Christian custom befitting a Christian civilization. By all means it should be a function of municipal administration.

But as far as the city is concerned, the proclamation ends there. It is meaningless unless individual citizens of their own free wills and out of their own appreciation for the sacrifice of the first Good Friday, will follow the suggestion of that proclamation.

We hope it can be said of Muenster that business stood still during the sacred three hours from noon until three o'clock. Let every business house close its doors, let every other form of transaction pause for three hours in grateful tribute to Him who gave his life for our salvation. Should there be any among us who do not share in these sacred convictions, we hope they will be generous enough to close out of respect for the sincerity of others.

A proper observance presupposes also a reverent meditation on the real meaning of Good Friday—to think it over, get a greater appreciation of Christ's infinite goodness. The best place to do that is in church.

Those reddish-brown spots we occasionally see in grain fields nowadays are the remains of green bugs' banquet tables. From the size of many of those spots we assume the bugs have really had their fill. The area covered may be anything from a few feet to a couple hundred feet in diameter.

In general the damage hasn't been so bad. Affected areas are few and far between. But, unfortunately, much of the loss is confined to single patches, hence certain farmers are sometimes pretty hard hit. Green bugs apparently are not so strong for migration. They move forward only as fast as they can consume everything in their path.

The pests constitute another factor in a farmer's annual gamble. They have a place among such worries as drought, flood, hail, unfavorable markets and what not. Every year a farmer has alternate spells of good and bad luck and usually manages to come out with the equivalent of wages for his year's work. After living expenses are paid he's even again. It's like a session of poker. Luck comes and goes and by the end of the game a fellow is about even again.

From what we've been able to hear, the day of the green bugs for this season, is about over. Lady bugs are supposed to be on the job again. Their special delight, you know, is green bugs. Fellows who have observed the process say it is actually interesting. While the pests continue their destruction of the tender grain plants their exterminators are right in the midst devouring one after another. They work fast too. Once they get started the area of dead grain soon stops spreading.

Here is another fine example of the wonderful balance of nature. So many things work out that way. One insect feeds on a plant, the next insect feeds on the first. Then there are animals, reptiles and birds, all with varying appetites, and the final result is a vast variety of creatures all serving some useful purpose. Sometimes our limited understanding cannot see sufficient reason for the existence of snakes, flies or mice, still we feel certain that the Master Mind behind the universe knew what He was doing.

The fellow who will not admit a Master Mind is even more at a loss for answers. Perhaps he never thought what could happen if the balance of nature were broken. Suppose rabbits, for instance, had the chance to multiply unchecked. The anniversary of the Savior's resurrection. But what does the rabbit remind a person of? Is there anything at all about him to remind anyone of the real meaning of Easter?

Obviously the bunnies are out of place, but there is a very significant reason why they hold the limelight. They are more popular with the public than religious scenes. One of the sad characteristics of our day is that we seem over anxious to soft pedal everything sacred. We don't mind the celebration of Christmas and Easter. That angle of the ancient custom appeals to us; the meaning has less appeal, however, so we mention it as little as possible.

In short we just like to shove religion into the background. We took it out of our educational system after it had been the sole support of all learning for centuries. We took it out of great holidays that became great only through their religious significance. We have all but completely removed it from business and social relations.

The use of the rabbit as a symbol of Easter is another regrettable sign of our times. It shows one of the many ways in which we have discarded sacred values. It helps explain why our moral standards aren't up to the level we would like, why human beings haven't been getting along with one another.

From the Wyoming Game and Fish Department comes a report about a perturbed fisherman who seemed to think he was missing something in the way of fishing. He wrote in asking, "Where is the Blitz Creek that everyone is talking about? Is the fishing good there?" The department replied, "It's hell, as far as we know."

Something to remember when you think the world is not giving you a decent break: No one who keeps kicking you in the pants can ever get ahead of you.

In case you did not know, there are 2,769 languages in use in the world, according to the French Academy. Of those, Chinese in its various dialects serves the greatest number of people—estimated at 488,573,000. English ranks next and is used as first choice by 250 million, as second choice by another 50 million. Next in their order are Hindi dialects, Russian, and Spanish.

By a cruel trick of fate Nazi Von Ribbentrop and Japanese Matsuoaka had to use the detested English language at their recent conference in Berlin. Of all the 2,769, it was the only language they both knew.

NOTES FROM the COUNTY AGENT

By ALBERT BRIENT County Agent

The following is some very valuable information on starting out baby chicks.

I would suggest that they be started on a good commercial chick starter and this kept before them for at least six weeks. When they are about two weeks old I would start feeding a little chick-size grain, sprinkling a little over the mash and then in a few days putting it out in a hopper for them. I would also feed a little chick-size oyster shell and chick-size granite grit every few days by sprinkling a little over the mash. After the chicks are about four weeks old I would be feeding a hopper of mash and a hopper of chick grain.

If cannibalism has been a factor, then I would feed some whole oats to these chicks after they are about five weeks old, sprinkling a little of this over the mash the same as you started them on grain. Where you are feeding oats, it is very essential that you feed granite grit. After they have started eating the oats, then you can keep a separate hopper of oats for the chicks.

When the chicks are six weeks old I would start feeding a developing mash or growing mash, keeping this in one hopper, oats in a second hopper, and maize or other grains in a third hopper, and letting them have free choice to all of these. I would also see that they had access to some granite grit and some oyster shell during this growing period. By all means see that they have plenty of green feed after they are on the range.

If intestinal parasites are a problem in your section, then perhaps it would be a good practice to treat these pullets when they are around three months of age, with a pullet-size worm capsule and again when they are ready to lay. If you have had any trouble with sorehead or fowl pox, then I would suggest vaccinating these pullets against pox when they are approximately eight weeks old, using the feather follicle method of vaccination.

TOM CONNALLY ASKS COLLEAGUES TO HALT DEFENSE SHUT-DOWNS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Rising to the floor of the Senate last week, Senator Tom Connally urged his colleagues to give heed toward halting labor shut-downs in national-defense plants. Connally emphasized his interest in getting immediate legislative action on the problem.

"It seems to me," said the Texas Senator, "that fundamentally there is no difference between the employer refusing to go on and produce and the employes refusing to proceed with normal production. So, if I had my way about it, I would adopt a provision directing or authorizing the President, through the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy, to take over any plant which has a contract for the production of essential national-defense articles, arms or ammunitions, where disputes between the employer and the employes, or other labor disturbances, are impeding and delaying production."

Law exists now for the government to take over plants where the owner refuses to cooperate in the defense drive; Connally feels that the law can and should be amended to permit the Government to take a hand in cases where employes refuse to cooperate and tie-up defense production.

"There is a law against striking against the United States," remarked Senator Connally. "If the government should take over a plant as it did during the World War, governmental boards would determine in each particular factory what is a fair wage and what are fair working conditions."

Connally's legislative record has long been considered as friendly to labor; yet at the present time he considers "the Union of the United States as Union Number 1 in this country, which is superior and paramount to any other union."

Reiter

"Old Faithfuls," of the Sodality members who were present at the annual cleaning of the church, classes were dismissed Friday afternoon for the girls of the 10th, 11th, and twelfth grades in order to enable them to assist the other girls. Due to illness there was not a sufficient number to clean so large a church therefore the high school girls were called. They worked diligently and the church was cleaned by three o'clock that afternoon.

A new fire extinguisher was installed in the high school last week. The pupils were instructed how to use it and told not to handle it except in case of fire.

EASTER POEM

He carried His cross to Calvary
Urged on by mocking soldiery,
A thorn crown on His head was laid,
Three long hours on the cross He stayed.

And they nailed Him to the cross,
They never realized the loss;
Nor did they realize the gain
That came when Christ for us was slain.

When Christ had risen from the dead
The marks of the thorns were on His head;
He died for man, for one for all,
And all some day shall hear His call.

This week a number of students were absent from classes due to sickness.

A new tennis court is being laid out in the parish hall yard. This court will be used by the Sophomore and Freshmen girls.

FORD STRIKE NEARING SOLUTION

DEARBORN, Michigan.—Strikers and non-strikers clashed many times at the huge River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor company when it was re-opened for a short period. This picture shows police breaching up one clash between workers. Federal conciliators and officials are ironing out many of the difficulties that caused the strike and it is hoped that a solution will be quickly reached.

SPRINGTIME

Springtime is like the Resurrection. As the flowers begin to open and the trees begin to bud one gets a queer feeling. It reminds us of the Resurrection of our Lord from the dead.

The singing of the birds reminds us of the choir of angels singing when Christ came forth gloriously from the grave. Spring marks the beginning of life for flowers, trees, and shrubs for a new year so Christ's resurrection marks the beginning of life anew for all mankind.

We, the students of Sacred Heart High, take this means of wishing you, the readers of the Muenster Enterprise, a very Happy Easter.

Albert Steinberger and Tom Carter Open Cafe

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Steinberger assumed management of the cafe located in the Schenk building during the weekend. The place was formerly managed by Mr. and Mrs. Alf Schumacher. The new management has named the place Our Cafe.

During the past week the building was remodeled and interior improvements were made. All new fixtures, booths and kitchen equipment has been installed.

The ladies are in charge of the front and the men supervise the recreation room in the rear.

Endres, Hennigan Named Delegates K-C Convention

Members of the local K of C council in session Wednesday night elected H. P. Hennigan as co-delegate with Grand Knight Roy Endres to the order's annual state convention in May.

Previously it was customary to send the immediate past grand knight as delegate, but other arrangements were necessary this year because Father Francis Zimmerman transferred to another council. Hennigan was chosen from among all the council's past grand knights.

Alternates for the delegates are Joe Fisher Jr., and Joe Horn.

Oil Field Notes

Further indication of an active oil field in the area northwest of Muenster was noted last Friday when H. E. Harrill drilling the No. 1 W. H. Endres for Texas Company set pipe at 1903 feet. The well is the first offset to the No. 1 Peter Bindel test recently completed and good for 240 barrels a day from sand at 1886-95 feet.

Up to Wednesday noon the Endres well had not been drilled in, but first signs were described as very similar to those in the Bindel well. A derrick was being erected Tuesday for the second well on Bindel's east of the discovery well.

Activity in other parts of the Muenster field continues at a steady pace. Nine new locations were made on various tracts during the past week. At the same time eight wells were completed and twelve rigs were running.

Among new wells brought in were the J. C. Roberts No. 4 Sicking from sand at 1811-16 feet. Nearby Harvey Drilling Co. completed its No. 4 Sicking in sand 1281-1303. Both wells are said to have produced about 45 barrels on a four hour test. Whitfield and Grimes No. 9 Sicking produced 48 barrels from 1268-71 sand on a seven hour test. C. J. Bohner's No. 4 Sicking tested 36 barrels in eight hours from sand at 1291-93.

Another Bohner well is his No. 3 Linn which pumped 15 barrels in six hours from 1137-40 foot sand.

Your Health

BY GEO. W. COX, M. D.
Texas State Health Officer

AUSTIN.—Thousands of children and adults die every year from diseases carried by the fly. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, summer complaint, cholera, intestinal diseases, and frequently death follows closely in the trail of the common house fly.

"Control of the fly menace comes at the top of the list of necessary public health measures which should be applied by every city and individual in the State," urges Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"Most effective measure for control is to prevent breeding," he said. "Flies breed in filth and about eight days are required to complete a life cycle. During her lifetime of several months one housefly lays from 600 to 1,000 eggs. Thus it can easily be seen that in a season, which usually begins in the spring of the year, the descendants from one fly number countless thousands.

"To eliminate flies, breeding places must be destroyed. Manure piles, garbage, and other organic filth furnish the requirements of warmth, moisture, and food necessary for the propagation of the fly. The flies should be kept from contact with food or drink or utensils in which food and drink are prepared and served. Likewise, they should be kept from access to privy vaults where they pick up the infections which they later spread to humans by contact with food and drink and by unwashed hands and utensils. See that your windows, doors, and porches are screened so that the stray fly from some careless neighbor will not molest your family. Also, see that your grocer keeps his meat, vegetables, and fruits free from flies.

"Organized health measures to destroy the breeding places, control of flies' access to your home and food, and established standards of cleanliness in your community will eliminate the fly. The number of flies is an index to the cleanliness of any community, and they can be entirely eliminated."
