STOP OUR OWN DICTATORS, TOO

We Americans can be so pitifully inconsistent. While we spend billions of dollars to arm ourselves against a foreign dictator, we are plunging headlong into our own system of dictatorship. While fully aware that private and free enterprise is chiefly responsible for this country's economic greatness, we keep drifting toward the same brand of socialism that has proved such a dismal failure abroad.

The city of San Francisco now offers a typical example of such blundering. Years ago it built a municipal water system and sold its by-product, electric power, to a local private utility. But public power advocates were not satisfied. They wanted to distribute as well as produce the current, and tried on seven different occasions to get approval of a 30 to 40 million dollar bond issue to build distribution lines. Each time the voters said "No".

But now the socialistic champions have unearthed an ancient Federal law proclaiming that no city can sell its power to a private utility. A court upheld the law. The city appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and here is what happened:

An injunction against the sale of power has been extended until July 1, 1942, provided the city officials would pledge full support to the next campaign for a bond issue. They had to sign an agreement to secure the support of civic groups and newspapers, to issue pamphlets, make radio speeches, and use various other forms of spreading propaganda—all at the city's expense.

Talking about dictatorship, what is this? Doesn't it seem a little ridiculous for us to be so gravely concerned about a foreign dictator and still put up with such dictatorship here at home? While we are pretending to be so loyal to our American standards of freedom, it might be well for us to turn some defensive effort on the forces that threaten from within.

According to the forefathers who framed the constitution, the American government should serve only one purpose, to guard the interests of its citizens from all encroachment, either foreign or domestic. It is supposed to stand on guard permitting citizens to work out their own economic problems, but it has no right to dictate or force its pet theories on the public.

To defend our nation against this dictatorial tendency is fully as important as defending it against the outside dictator. There is no point in fighting for freedom against one force and meekly surrendering it to another.

Let's not lose sight of freedom for one moment. Let's meet every foreign threat with a barrage of lead and let's meet every domestic threat with a barrage of resentment.

PRIVATE INDUSTRY PLANNED AHEAD

A newspaper interviewer recently asked an executive of a leading oil company this highly significant question: "If an enemy air bombing force were able to reach Southern California and attack the thousands of oil wells located there, is it likely that the supply of petroleum for our Army and Navy would be seriously lessened?"

The executive's answer was an emphatic "No!" There are 20,000 wells in California alone, spread over a tremendous territory. If an enemy could destroy half of these wells—which is obviously a ridiculous assumption—the remaining wells could double their production.

That isn't all. For example, oil storage tanks offer good targets for enemy bombers. Therefore, the oil industry, with commendable foresight, has long made it a policy to build these tanks sufficiently far apart so that if one were hit its neighbor would not be ignited. On top of that, the oil industry makes full use of the safest storage of all—the underground pools, provided by nature, where oil is found.

The oil industry, to sum up, is one of the many private industries which planned ahead for just such an emergency as we are facing now. Private enterprise made this country great. And private enterprise is today making this country secure.—Industrial News.

Washington Snapshots

by JAMES PRESTON

It is reported that the even-tempered Robert E. Lee became tired of receiving instructions from so many sources at one point during the Civil War, and humorously complained "that he had got a crick in his neck from looking over his shoulder towards Richmond."

The average business man with a defense contract is likely to feel a certain amount of sympathy with Lee's plight these days. Partly because of the complexities of defense work, but even more because of the bureaucratic habits of Washington itself, it frequently looks as though there are more officials—"more cooks than customers" than there are occasions to officiate.

Thus, one commentator observes, a regulation from the Office of Production Management will be signed by five important officials and attested by another gentleman. Meanwhile the Labor Division of the same OPM will announce "a new and concentrated approach to the problem," which it immediately signalizes by naming one man as a director of a particular branch to work in association with 12 other chiefs, chairmen, and commissions!

It all points to the need, often reiterated here by experienced observers, for one man with a business and executive sense who is permitted authority enough to clear up the defense program's ambiguities and divided responsibilities.

Incidentally all the cricks in industry's neck don't come from looking to Washington for "go-ahead" signals. You've heard a lot about the growing power of labor union officials. Well, here's an actual case where one wielded "life or death" authority over part of the defense program itself.

A Pennsylvania company received a defense order from the Army and found that it required certain raw materials on which priorities were in force. Having duly applied to the local Army Ordnance Department for a priority certificate, which was sent to Washington, countersigned, and returned to it, the company naturally assumed that it was ready to go ahead and fill the defense order. But it happened that there was a trucking strike in the Pennsylvania city that completely tied up operations. The company found that it would be permitted to submit the priorities certificate to union officials, who would determine whether the shipment of raw materials was sufficiently important in their eyes to justify delivery.

The officials having concluded that it was worthwhile to have the defense equipment in question, they then gave the company a list of "approved" truckers and also presented it with the names of men whom it could hire to unload the needed materials.

Thoughtful people have already been greatly concerned over the manner in which defense strikes have hamstringed large parts of the defense program. But how would they react to the idea of local union officials entering into the realms of high military strategy and deciding whether Army orders are important enough to be filled?

Washington Snapshots: Buried in the middle of Leon Henderson's recent gloomy report on sacrifices that lie ahead in the defense program was a real tribute to the efficiency of American industry, and its component parts—skilled management and loyal workers. Henderson declared that we can out-produce Nazi Germany and its conquered territories by working three hours out of every eight on defense, although Germany is working four to five hours out of eight to produce war materials. The Price Administrator didn't go into the reasons for this superiority, but they ought to be pretty plain—private enterprise, and a way of life based upon individual opportunity!

BUY COAL NOW

COLLEGE STATION. — Texas families who burn coal had better lay in a supply this summer. That's the advice—directed to consumers from the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply and given in a letter to Director H. H. Williamson of the A. and M. College Extension Service.

Buying coal this summer will not only save consumers money but it will contribute to national defense, the OPACS says. State and local defense councils have been asked to cooperate in this effort.

STRANGE FRIENDSHIP

The mountains of West Texas about six miles from Van Horn are the scene of a rather strange friendship. A seven-point deer and a young ewe highhorn mountain sheep have been seen together several times. Not long ago a biologist of the Game Department came upon the strange pair bedded down together under a bluff on the side of the Beach Mountains. They sprang up together and the buck bounded off up the mountain, closely followed by the sheep.

DISPOSE OF COTTON ACREAGE THAT WILL NOT BE HARVESTED
"It might be advisable," J. T. Biffle Jr., chairman of the Cooke County AAA committee has announced, "that in cases where Cooke county cotton producers will suffer total or partial loss of their 1941 cotton crops because of excessive rains, insects or abandonment, to dispose of the acreage on which cotton will not be harvested."

In explaining this point, Mr. Biffle said that a high acreage of cotton with a low lint yield per acre because of factors such as these, will in all probability, affect cotton yields on individual farms under the 1942 agricultural conservation program and probably will have a direct effect on cotton insurance since an extremely low yield might affect premium rates.

Producers should remember, however, the AAA official continued, that acreage will be considered as planted to cotton this year if the cotton is not disposed of before it reaches the boiling stage or within 10 days after notice of the seeded acreage is given, whichever is later.

This would not change the basis for cotton stamps to be issued on a farm since cotton stamps cannot be obtained on more acres than was shown on the original intention sheet.

Miss Adams, Health Nurse Transferred From County
Official confirmation of transfer of Miss Amilee Adams, county nurse, from the Gainesville Health Unit was announced last week by Dr. H. H. There's Always a Chance
One Negro was worrying about the chance of his being drafted for the army. The other consoled him, "There's two things that can happen, boy. You is either drafted or you ain't drafted. If you ain't got two chances; if you is, you still got two chances. You may be sent to the front and you may not. If you go to the front, you still got two chances, you may get shot and you may not. If you get shot, you still have two chances, you may die and you may not! And even if you die, you still has two chances."

Texas Has Bumper Peach Crop; 2 1/2 Million Bushels
COLLEGE STATION.—The 1941 Texas peach crop is expected to be the biggest in 30 years. J. F. Rosborough, horticulturist of the Texas A. and M. College Extension Service, estimates a yield of 2,500,000 bushels, or 1,000,000 more than the average. "Prices," he says, "will be reasonable."

as a whole is cleaning up its scraps that thoroughly. More likely the dog food is selling well because so many will not take the trouble of gathering Fido's meal from the table scraps. Otherwise they have some silly ideas about his vitamins. Con happens to recall the remark of one fellow who does a great deal of fix-up work around homes. He says the food wasted by some people would almost be enough to feed his family. Betcha the people he was thinking about buy dog food too.

It is easy to agree with the Methodist bishop who, when asked to name the two most influential books in his life, replied, "My father's
