

The Golden Cocoon

by RUTH CROSS

SYNOPSIS

Gregory Cochran, gazing out of the car window as his train draws into the home town, is attracted by the sight of a forlorn-looking girl at the side of the tracks. After alighting he follows and rescues her when she plunges into the river. The girl is Molly Shannon, university student, who has been driven to desperation by the desertion of her fiance, Stephen Renfro. Cochran takes her to his own home, one of the finest in the town, and, against the wishes of his proud old mother, shelters her.

Cochran got up, went behind her chair, and put both hands on the stately black silk shoulders. "My dearest mother, I don't expect you to believe anything—only—don't you see she's just another of those little birds with a wing half shot off? And we've got to give it time and chance to mend so that she can fly away again."

"But if she has no people," his mother persisted, softened not by his plea, but by himself, "surely a hospital—"

CHAPTER XVI

There are illnesses of the soul more deadly and wasting than the most virulent infections that attack the body. Barring a flurry or so with measles and scarlatina, Molly had never been ill in her life. There had not been time or money. Sickness was a luxury only property to be indulged in by the well-to-do. The true depths of poverty are not sounded until disease is superadded to other and lesser evils. This she knew from the various seasons when her mother had been confined with the perennially a-borning babies. Days passed. She had no more conception of the passing of time than the unborn, but one day the par of a closing day pierced the immu-nable layers and swathings of silence. It was the first sound she had heard. Immediately after, she felt a relaxation of the presence. It had gone away; probably it had to eat.

With grotesque effort she opened her eyes. The lids were heavy and stiff; no longer with the stiffness of marble; rather that of wood. For some moments there was only a giddy circling blur of darkness. Here and there an object detached itself—a wall with an old-fashioned engraving on it, high windows with oiled drawn blinds; across the foot of the four-poster mahogany bed a lavender silk coverlet should be and usually wasn't. The room, too, she concluded presently, was all that a room should be and usually wasn't.

Near the bed stood a small mahogany table with a glass and a spoon on it. She stared fixedly at the table. Beside the glass was a row of neatly folded white papers. Without doubt, they had been responsible for the lumpiness and the silence. If one could do as much as that—frowning with the laboriousness of her attempt to concentrate, she pulled herself up to one elbow. She inched slowly and painfully toward the edge of the bed. If one could do as much as that—there were eight or ten all told.

When she gained the edge of the bed the stand was still more than a foot away. She had to hold on with one hand to the bedpost while she reached out with the other and gathered the flock of papers into a heap. They fell fluttering to the counterpane as she dropped back a dead weight against the pillows. Drowsiness and torpor swept over her flood on flood threatening to overwhelm, to sweep her back into her chasm of silence.

Pushing and struggling at them, she contrived at last to open her eyes again. She put out her hand and drew the papers to her, unfolded one and began to empty into it the contents of the others. It was slow work. Her fingers were thick and clumsy, and the papers wiggled and curved about until some of the precious white powder was spilled.

She had not heard the door open nor anyone come into the room. But that unerring sixth sense which warns when we are not alone made her drop the powders abruptly and turn her head. The warning had come a trifle late, though, for she had an idea that the man standing on the other side of the bed had been there for some time. He was looking down at her with curious attentiveness, but he showed no inclination to stop whatever it was she was doing.

Instead he smiled and observed in a casually cheerful bass. "Good morning."

Molly, glancing back furtively at her own occupation, found, to her dismay, that the powder had spilled and was trickling in a slow stream over the edge of the counterpane. If the man noted the circumstances, he gave no sign. He came round to Molly's side of the bed and drew up a chair, which creaked a trifle as he subsided deliberately into it. "I'm glad to see you're awake this morning," he said still cheerfully. "When a young lady has slept for two blessed weeks—"

He broke off with a slight humorous gesture and looked down rather doubtfully at the chair, which was of fragile build.

Molly watched him in silence. She had no interest one way or the other. If he had said two months or two years, the effect would have been equally negligible.

Oh, by the way. The stream of powder had made by this time a small white hillock on the floor and his foot appeared to come in contact with it. He pushed back and examined it attentively. "It's too bad you happened to spill those. I believe they're the last in the house."

"I didn't happen to spill them," she said at last, low but very distinct. After another interval of silence—without the change of an infection, hands still pressed to her face: "I hate you. I hate you. I hate you! Why couldn't you leave me alone? It was none of your affair."

When there was no answer, she went on in the dreary, infection-less monotone, "You knew I wanted to die—I had to die." She broke off, this time for sheer lack of strength. After a little: "It's no use your trying to interfere. I shall find some other way."

condition now. A doctor might as well leave it to the judgment of a delicious man whether he wants to take medicine or not.

"I don't want anything but to be let alone—to die. You don't understand. . . ." She turned away her face. Her fingers were still tightly pressed to her eyes.

"Yes, I think I do—at all events, up to the evening when you left Mrs. Parkers."

"Mrs. Parkers," she echoed faintly. Once more the shudder ran down her body.

"I found her address on a letter in your hand bag."

"You didn't tell her. . . ?" The words were scarcely a breath.

"Only that you had been hurt in a street accident." He paused, significantly. "You are going to tell me the rest—now?"

"No—no. . . ." Again the tremor as of the final breakup of life forces. "You don't know what you ask."

"I think I do. Besides—you've no idea how it will help."

"I don't want to be helped. I only want to be let alone—to die."

He straightened up decisively, took out his watch. "I have an appointment at ten-thirty. That gives me fifteen minutes longer here."

Watch in hand, he waited. There was a silence, impassive and stubborn on her side, patient but inflexible as steel on his.

"Ten minutes," he announced presently.

Heavy Loss Of Goats From Cool Weather And Rain

BRADY, Texas, October 3.—(Sp.)—The several day six-inch rainfall last week together with a big drop in temperature caused local ranchmen the loss of several hundred goats, according to reports received. The loss is attributed by ranchmen to the recent shearing of the animals, especially those sheared with a thin comb which takes the fleece off close to the skin, leaving no protection against inclement weather.

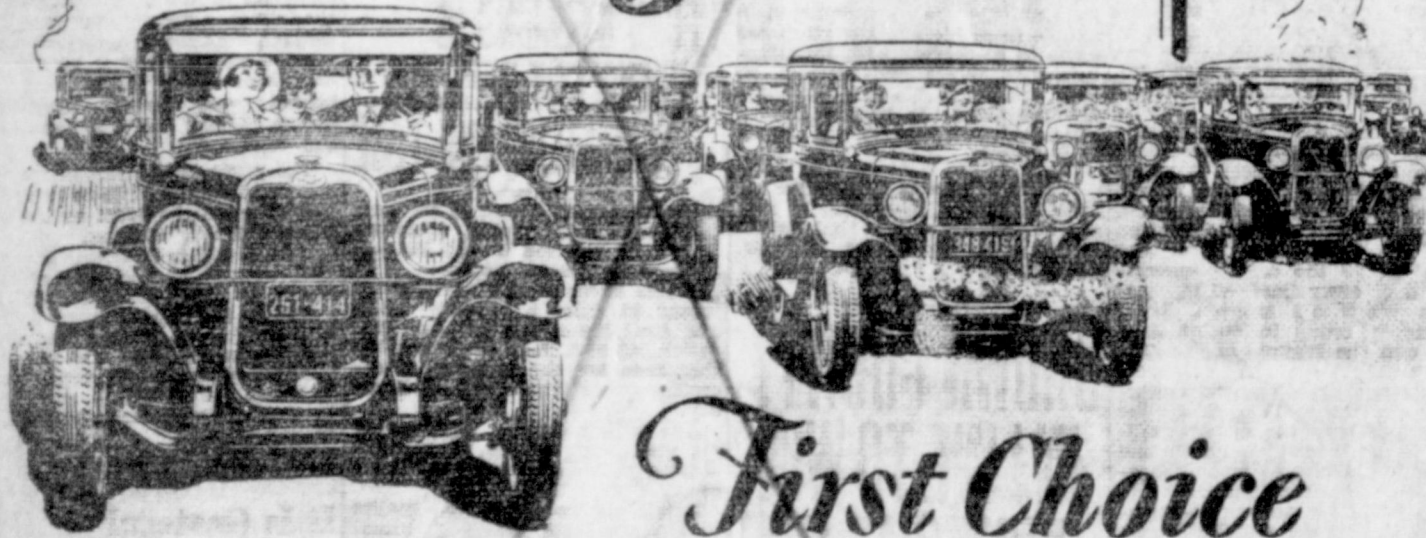

The heaviest individual loss reported was 138 sheep out of a flock of 500.

Although causing some loss in livestock, the six-inch rain which fell over a period of several days, has been of immense benefit to the range and winter grains.

MAYFIELD CASE NEXT MONDAY

Bert Mayfield, charged with the murder of Ruby Osborne near Goldthwaite July 18, will go on trial in the district court at that city next Monday, it was announced by Sheriff D. D. Bledsoe Wednesday.

District Judge Lewis H. Jones will hear the case.

Miss Osborne, 17, was found at midnight Wednesday on the Goldthwaite-San Saba road unconscious, and died the following Monday without regaining consciousness. Her skull had been crushed and she had a broken collar bone.

Mayfield, who lived at Indian Gap, worked for a time in a

Brownwood garage, was said to have made the statement to an uncle that Miss Osborne jumped from his car after the two had driven from the Mills County fair.

Following the finding of Miss Osborne, Mayfield disappeared. A reward was offered for his capture, and on August 2 he was taken into custody. He made a $2,500 bond, waived examining trial and has refused to make any statement of his guilt or innocence.

COUNCIL TO ASK BIDS ON TRUCK

J. A. Speaker, chief of the Brownwood Volunteer Fire Department, appeared before City Council Tuesday night and asked that the city purchase a new chemical truck. Mr. Speaker pointed out that the truck now in use is very unsatisfactory and not dependable. And in view of the fact that the danger season of the year is rapidly approaching, a new truck is badly needed. Mr. Speaker said:

B. F. Adams, former fire chief, also addressed Council in interest of the new fire truck and at the conclusion of the talks by three town men, Mayor Malina stated that he favored buying the truck asked for, as he believed that it is needed. Upon motion of Alderman Shugart it was voted to ask for bids on 1-2-3 and 1-3-4 ton trucks, three to be made between now and next Tuesday night. At that time all bids will be considered and the needed truck purchased.

Petition Presented

W. G. Low, local real estate holder, presented a petition to City Council Tuesday night asking that the ordinance governing the parking of automobiles in front of Brownwood Senior High School be changed. The petition asked that drivers be allowed to park on A-street, Avenue in front of the High School while making purchases from business houses located in that district. All business men in that vicinity had signed the petition. Council voted unanimously not to make any changes in the parking law and called attention to the fact that it is strictly against the law to park in front of the High School building.

Upon the recommendation of City Manager H. V. Brown, a rezoning for the city this to cost $2,500. Mr. Hennen stated that 31,800 would be received for an old tractor being traded in.

Mr. Hennen also recommended the purchase of an air drill and council instructed him to receive bids on same, these to be presented next week.

KENNY STARS AS SOUTH AMERICANS WIN SECOND POLO MATCH WITH YANKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Threatened with displacement from the Argentine team after its defeat in the first game of the series for the polo championship of the Americas, Arturo Kenny, young South American Number 1, has earned for himself a prize on the honor roll of international polo.

Kenny seemed to be the weak link in the Argentine four when it lost its opening match when the four horsemen of the Pamperos came back yesterday to ride rough shod over the United States to win 10 to 7 and even the series. Kenny was, perhaps, the most brilliant of the four stars.

SMITH LAUDED AT MEETING TO ORGANIZE HERE

Governor Alfred E. Smith is the best equipped candidate for the office of President of the United States the Democratic Party has had since Grover Cleveland," said Chester Harrison Tuesday night at the court house when the opening session of the Brown County Democratic campaign was held at a meeting held in the county court room with about sixty voters present. Heralded in the Bulletin Monday night as a meeting for business purposes only and not as an oratorical gathering, an abundant amount of oratory cropped out between the sessions of business and was roundly applauded.

Selecting of committees in each of the thirty-two voting districts of the county to carry the work there; choosing a local financial committee; signing a pledge to support the Democratic nominees; and making plans for a big Democratic rally to be held Friday afternoon and night, were the outstanding business features of the meeting.

Taylor Presides

Thomas H. Taylor, who was selected as Chairman of the 25th Senatorial District, C. L. McCartney as the Brown County Chairman, took charge of the meeting. During the first part of the business when the selection of district chairmen was being made, there was quite a bit of laughter in deciding among old, heretofore loyal Democrats, who were still loyal to the party and who were not.

A roll of the 32 voting precincts was called and names of committees were suggested for each precinct. As soon as this list has been perfected the names will be given to the press. Brief enthusiastic speeches were made by W. U. Early, C. L. McCartney, F. S. Abney, Chester Harrison and others.

A local committee consisting of E. W. Gill and J. J. Timmins was chosen to handle the expenses of the campaign within the county. They were instructed to secure a supply of Democratic buttons. Over thirty dollars was collected at that meeting to go for this purpose.

Chairman Taylor caused a bit of amusement when he held up before the assembled Democrats a heavy volume of 1,400 pages, the printed 1928 Budget for the United States, which he referred to as a sample of the Coolidge and Hoover economy.

W. U. Early in a short speech said that the opposite side, meaning those Democrats who have been working for Hoover, had gotten quite a head start on the loyal Democrats in the matter of campaigning, and that it was time, now that the road bond election is over, to get busy and do some work.

The fact that Congressman Gunn of the Wichita Falls district will be in Brownwood to speak for Al Smith in the District Court room at 3 p. m. Friday, prompted those at the meeting to make that day a big rally for Brown County Democrats, extending the afternoon meeting into the night and marshaling their forces for the fight.

Judge C. L. McCartney believed he said in his speech, that there are many Democrats who have been led off the trail toward Hoover, who have not gone so far but could be brought back again into the fold before Nov. 6.

"There is no use in underestimating the opposition," the Judge said. "It is strong, aggressive and well financed, and from all indications it will carry in the races. It remains for the country to vote to save Texas as a Democratic state at this election."

Mr. Harrison outlined the history of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, and said that the Republicans tried for a long time to find some one slip of Smith's in his public life where they could point a finger of suspicion, but that the had not one blot on his public record. The fight, he said, was one of religion, camouflaged with the prohibition question.

F. S. Abney, who heard Governor Smith's speech recently in Oklahoma City, emphasized that the Democratic party had at this time a most wonderful man as its candidate.

Cotton In Eastern States Recovering From The Storms

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Crop and weather conditions for the week ended yesterday as summarized by the department of agriculture indicates that in the more eastern states of the cotton belt, especially in the Carolinas considerable recovery from the effects of recent storms was reported in places although some lowlands were still too wet and it was rather cool in northern districts. In Georgia, further rains were unfavorable. Elsewhere the weather was favorable although opening was retarded in the month by low temperatures and there is much soiled staple with continued reports of bolts rotting in the south. In the Central states of the belt much sunshine promoted rapid opening of bolls and produced conditions generally favorable for picking and ginning; there were some local reports of continued boll rotting. In Oklahoma warm dry weather favored rapid opening, with picking and ginning advancing satisfactorily, though continued dryness, especially in the west, has been unfavorable with the general condition of the crop spotted. In Texas spottedness is also noted with condition ranging from poor in the south to very good in parts of the north and some deterioration in northern districts because of shedding and root rot; picking and ginning made mostly good advance.

TUNNEY WEDS MISS LAUDER TODAY IN ROME

ROME, Oct. 3.—(P)—Surrounded by a little group of intimate friends and in the greatest simplicity, Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, and Miss Mary Josephine Lauder, of Greenwich, Conn., were married today at the Hotel Russie. Two salons of the "Royal Apartments," normally reserved for visiting sovereigns, were used, one for the civil ceremony which was performed by Signor Brofferio, a leading Fascist, and the other for the religious ceremony performed by Monsignor Joseph A. Brelin of the American College in Rome and one-time Parish Priest of the Tunney family in New York. After the ceremony a luncheon at which there were twenty-five guests was served, and it was announced that the couple planned to leave shortly by automobile for an unrevealed destination on their honeymoon.

The Wedding Dress
 Miss Lauder, who is wealthy and socially prominent, was dressed in mauve velvet trimmed with lace. She wore a silver net over her hair which gave her the appearance of a medieval Chateleine. Tunney wore a blue sack suit which brought out his superb physique strikingly, a black and white tie, white spats and black shoes. The famous Roman Cerullian blue sky was at its best for "Polly" Lauder's bridal day and just when Tunney was putting the ring upon her finger a ray of sunlight shot through the window of the Royal salon making it glitter for all the witnesses to see. As the religious ceremony was finished Tunney kissed his bride and then Mrs. Lauder, his mother in law.

Marriage Witnesses
 The walls of the room were hung with old red damask against which masses of gorgeous white roses stood out strikingly. In the room where the religious ceremony was held there was a large picture of the Madonna and child surrounded by white roses.

At the civil ceremony Tunney's witness was Attorney Del Frate, a lawyer for the American Embassy who had assisted in making the necessary arrangements for a rapid dispatch of the formalities, and Leon Dominian, American Consul here, while those for Miss Lauder were Vice Consul Wesley Jones and Mrs. Thomas L. Daniels, wife of the secretary of the American Embassy.

Pastor Talks About Movies

(Dallas News)
 Speaking of "The King of Kings" the motion picture story of the life of Jesus which is showing at a local theater, the Rev. Otho B. Morris, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, declared Sunday evening in his sermon that the picture was the best of its kind he had ever seen. "I have seen it three times since it has been in Dallas," he said, "and every time it means more to me."

Some of the Bible characters are not as I would have painted them," he admitted. "However, we take a lot of things for granted about the picture of Christ and the disciples, and it matters very little how they combed their hair. The picture was not intended to be chronologically arranged, he ventured, but... "That does not matter. The great thought in it all is that Jesus is the 'King of Kings.'"

"I think I have a score of sermons from seeing the picture," the minister declared, and he mentioned possible subjects of those sermons: "The Ropes That Bound Jesus Hung Judas," "Jesus and the Stones," "Seven Deadly Sins," "The Power of Testimony," "Party Loyalty Crucified Jesus."

"Above all," the Rev. Mr. Morris declared, "I see Jesus as King of Kings. He was King with the children. He was master of passion and dealt tenderly with women. He was King over the soldiers. The Captain cried out in the end, 'Truly, this was the Son of God. He was King over Pilate. He was King over death, for He raised the dead. He was King over sickness and sorrow. He was King over the Jews, for the high priest finally saw his mistake. The picture reveals the fact that Jesus hates sin. As one watches it, he forgets many objections that folks make against such pictures."

"I am profoundly glad that this picture has been shown in Dallas. I wish it would remain here for one month. I pray that thousands may see and be led to a closer walk with God."

"Any car will climb a hill better if the car travels the outside of the curves, provided traffic conditions and safety permit. The grade is least at the outside and for the same reason, a car will not run so fast if the driver stays on the outside of curves when descending winding roads."

WALTER HAGEN MEETING MEAN OPPOSITION

BY F. G. VOSBURGH, Associated Press Sports Writer
 BALTIMORE, Oct. 4.—(P)—Day by day the going is getting tougher for Walter Hagen in the national professional golf championship now in its quarter-final round. A virtual unknown, Julian Blanton of Toledo, under the stimulus of having everything to gain and nothing much to lose, gave him a great run for his money yesterday and today the Hale, champion for the last four years, faced the prospect of playing Leo Diegel, Gene Sarazen and Al Espinosa on successive days.

Unless Hagen plays considerably better than he did in winning from Blanton 2 up yesterday, he is apt to find himself in considerable trouble against any of these three veterans. That the champion is in for a real battle in the quarter-finals, was indicated in the manner in which the flashy Leo Diegel polished off Geo. Christ of Rochester, 6 and 4.

Having downed Jim Barnes yesterday by 3 and 2 and beaten Bill Melihorn the previous day, Gene Sarazen now draws a less widely known antagonist in Fred Dudley of Los Angeles. It was Dudley who yesterday eliminated Al Watrous, 3 and 2.

Espinosa, the medalist, who has been figured as about the best man in the upper half of the draw and a likely finalist suffered a bad slump yesterday, winning from Bob McDonald, a fellow Chicago pro, by the narrow margin of 1 up in 37 holes.

ENGINE NOISES
 Lost motion in the bearings cause a regular and continuous pound in the engine, and if the noise is irregular, it is probably due to pre-ignition caused by incandescent carbon or imperfect connections. Occasional pounding and missing usually results from imperfect electrical connections if the missing is more frequent when the car is running than when the engine is idling.

WORTH REMEMBERING
 Gears, shafts and bearings are put under a tremendous strain when an attempt is made to shift into reverse if the car is in forward motion. Always come to a full stop before the shift is made and this should be done slowly.

COURTESY STRESSED AT OAKLAND FACTORY

To expedite the work of commercial men calling on the Oakland Motor Car Company, of whom there are more than 2,000 a month (approximately one for every ten cars built), Charles O. Miller, supervisor of purchases, has installed a courtesy plan designed to eliminate so far as possible the annoying wait in the lobby.

Under this system the information clerk checks the time of arrival of all callers having business with members of the purchasing department, and the time each caller had to wait before seeing his particular party.

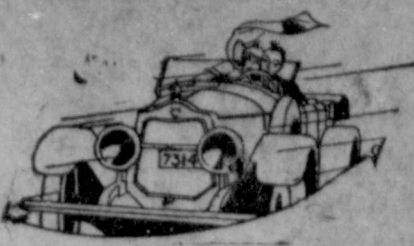

In the operation of the plan during the past few months, the average wait of each caller has been reduced to 3.16 minutes. The best day's average was 1.5 minutes. This is the more remarkable in view of the fact that from one hundred to two hundred men are interviewed every day by the Oakland buyers.

A poster in the lobby tells the aim of the courtesy plan, and a bulletin board hanging by the information desk shows the number of men interviewed the previous day and their average waiting time. Each buyer also has posted before him, over the signature of Mr. Miller, this constant reminder of the courtesy creed.

"It is our aim to have the Purchasing Department callers delayed as little as possible in seeking an interview. It is the duty of each buyer to see salesmen promptly."

"It is also his duty to see that salesmen have the proper regard for other salesmen who may be waiting their turn. I wish this policy to be something more than a framed notice on the lobby wall. It is up to each buyer to see that this is the case." Every morning Mr. Miller sends the members of his department a record of the preceding day which shows the number of contracts each man made and the length of time he kept his callers waiting. The resultant intra-department rivalry has cut down the waiting average by a considerable margin, and has won for Oakland "good will" a new significance in the mind of the caller at the factory.

SIMPLE RULE FOR BRAKE TEST
 A simple way to learn that it is time to have the brakes taken up, is to take an empty match box to the floor mat under the brake pedal. When the pedal has to be pushed down far enough to crush the box, the brakes should be adjusted.
