Scouts Hike and Take Tests Sunday

At Austin nowadays the state's motor vehicle inspection law is getting a lot of official consideration. Some legislators want to repeal it. Others want to revise it.

We'll have to wait to see what happens, but in the meantime we can hope that the lawmakers who promised to work for the law's repeal will see the light and change their attitude otherwise that they will lack the strength to carry through.

The reason is that law is good and Texas should have it. It's only fault is that the original authors went overboard and made it too good. They required such a high standard of safety that a large number of car owners could not afford to comply. Repairs needed to make the average car pass inspection were expensive. On badly worn cars the cost sometimes ran higher than the value of the car itself. Of course it was desirable that brake bands were thick and tire treads deep, that windshields were clear and mufflers sturdy. But all that was not really necessary. A car could be reasonably safe without that much perfection. In fact such a car with a good driver was still less of a hazard than a perfect car in the hands of a wild driver.

It doesn't make sense to scrap the entire law because it happens to include some unnecessary requirements. The better way is to get rid of the essentials, but by all means retain the basic safety standards.

The wisdom of the law is apparent in last year's state traffic record. Texas had 65 fewer traffic deaths than in 1951 although it had a 9 per cent greater total mileage. For the first time in fifteen years traffic fatalities fell below 7 persons for each 100 million miles of vehicle travel. Still better records are enjoyed by states that have had the safety inspection law for several years. In view of such facts lawmakers ought to think seriously about modifying the promises they made last summer. Repeal isn't the solution. Texas needs a safety inspection law, and the average Texan wants it, so long as it is reasonable.

One proposal along that line would require that inspections be confined to five items: brakes, headlights, steering mechanism, horn and windshield wipers. Certainly nobody can fuss about that. It includes the basic needs of safe driving. Most people comply with it anyway, and those who don't have no right to be on the road.

About the Korean war, it seems as though the country is gradually being conditioned for a well organized, all-out offensive against the reds. Another notable contribution to that line of thought is an article in the current Readers Digest by William C. Bullitt, former ambassador to Moscow. He believes the Korean war can be ended, and he goes farther to state that the reds can be held in check after that by a blunt ultimatum advising Stalin that we know who is the real aggressor and we intend to hold the Kremlin accountable for any other communist trouble anywhere in the world.

Bullitt's proposal is to turn the main fighting job over to freedom loving Asiatics such as the ROK's and Chinese Nationalists. We'd help with air power, supplies and top level advisers. These Asiatics (Continued on Page 8)

Boys Win, Girls Lose In Tourney Openers

Muenster High boys advanced to the championship bracket and girls slipped into the consolation bracket Tuesday night in their opening games at the Chico invitation tournament, which will close the '53 season for both of the local teams.

Both games were close. Muenster girls were edged out 29-28 by Boyd and Muenster boys emerged 56-50 winners over Boyd. In other games Tuesday night both Era teams lost to the Chico teams.

Next on schedule for Muenster teams are semi-finals in their respective brackets of Saturday. Girls will play Era at 10:30 and Boys will play Chico at 2:30.

Other teams participating in the tourney are Saint Jo, Bridgeport, Paradise and Azle. Results of their opening games Wednesday night have not been revealed here.

Muenster Boy Scouts hiked to Red River Sunday accompanied by Scoutmaster Nick Miller, Troop Chaplain Rev. Louis Deuster, and Committeemen Andy Hofbauer, Oscar Walter and Andrew Schoech. Actually the group hiked about three miles. A school bus furnished transportation the rest of the way.

A group of boys cooked stew, scout fashion for the noon meal and after dinner 10 boys qualified for advancement by passing tests in cooking, clean-up, and trail blazing.

In the cooking and clean-up group were Jim Myrick, Francis Fisher, Johnny Fette, Bernard Hesse, Regi Bayer and Clifford Endres. Fisher and Endres also passed trail blazing tests.

Melvin Kaiser, Tim Mosman, Billy Joe Dangelmayr and Melvin Wilde passed the clean-up tests.

Monday night at their regular meeting the boys participated in a knot tying contest and Billy Ray Otto passed tenderfoot requirements.

Melvin Schoech won the contest, tying 16 out of 17 Scout knots. The prize was a dollar in cash.

Local Teams Place Third in Loop Race

Muenster's standing in the district basketball race remains unchanged after last week's tournament here. As in the season's race both MHS teams finished the tourney in third place.

The district champs were Prairie Valley boys and Forestburg girls. Runner-ups were Saint Jo boys and Prairie Valley girls.

In both divisions an extra game was needed to decide the standing. Before the tournament Prairie Valley boys broke the conference tie by nosing out Saint Jo in an extra game here, then beat Saint Jo again in the tournament final. Forestburg girls, after trailing Prairie Valley in the season's race, got back in the running by winning the tournament and finally the play off with Prairie Valley.

The two local teams went different ways to attain the same tournament standing. The boys started by losing a 48-50 thriller to Saint Jo, then beating Forestburg 49-37 in the consolation final. The girls triumphed 36-31 over Saint Jo and went down 34-18 against Forestburg. Prairie Valley, losing by only 2 points to Forestburg in its tourney opener, was declared the second place winner.

As during the season, Callisburg teams lost their tournament games to retain undisputed claim to the cellar position.

2 Tigers Named on All-District Team

Better late than not at all, some of the Sacred Heart High Tigers learned last weekend that they have been named on the all-district team of the North Texas Academic League. Father Cletus Post brought back the information Friday night when he and William Walterscheid returned from a program at Bedford.

Walterscheid received a plaque at the program in recognition for being named on the Academic League all-state team.

Tigers on the all-district team are Joe Felderhoff and William Walterscheid. Those on the all-district second team are Jerry Hoerig, Donald Bayer, Gilbert Knabe and James Mollenkopf. Fred Hennigan received honorable mention.

C. B. Fowler Wins Texas Service Pin

C. B. Fowler received a 20-year service pin from the Texas Company at a banquet in Wichita Falls honoring 20-year employees. He is connected with the production department here.

Others honored at the special program included D. C. Kline of Gainesville and T. C. O'Neal of Sandusky, both formerly of Muenster.

Company officials from Fort Worth, from Wichita Falls district, and Carl Schumann, Nocona district production field superintendent, were banquet speakers.

City Gets Mercury Type Street Lights

Since Tuesday, Muenster's main Street is brighter than it has ever been before. New style mercury street lamps okayed by the City Council last October have all been installed.

There are ten of the new lights, which have been described as the nearest thing yet to actual daylight. Nine were installed for the city at intersections from the Katy depot to Seventh, the parish hall corner, and the other was installed for the FMA in front of the cheese plant.

T. P. and L. installed the lights under an arrangement it has with the city. The company owns and maintains the lamps. The city pays for the current. Operation of the better lights will run about $20 to $25 a month more than the old lights.

Another change is in the control system, from a time switch to a photo-cell switch, which is turned on or off by darkness or daylight. There will be no more delay because of time lost during power failures. Lights come on automatically when needed and go off when not needed, regardless of the hour.

The American Way

By The Rev. Norman Vincent Peale

TWO LIVES, TWO FORCES— BUT WHAT A DIFFERENCE

Do you have a problem in thinking straight?

If you do, you are no different from the rest of us. I find the start of a new year a particularly good time to take an inventory of my thoughts. "Are they all lined up with the forces of right?" I ask myself. "Do some of my thoughts pull against the basic spiritual laws at work in the world?"

Let's face the fact there is a world-wide struggle to capture men's minds, a death struggle between Christianity and Communism, between all religion and that evil force. Sometimes the issues aren't clear, and we can easily get confused.

The late Henry C. Link was greatly concerned about the war for men's minds and did considerable research into the life and background of Karl Marx, whose writings founded modern Communism.

"The story of Marx's life," Dr. Link writes in "The Way to Security" is one of complete and sordid failure with people. He did not get along with the members of his family. He failed in the good schools in which his father supported him. He made no friends among his classmates. He failed with his employers and associates in business. He failed miserably in supporting his wife and family. Two of his three daughters and a son-in-law committed suicide."

Dr. Link goes on to point out that Marx's writings on Communism are a perfect reflection on his failure with people. "They are the expression of his deep-seated inferiority complex, and of his hate, his deep neurotic ill will. Because of it he divided all people into two classes, the capitalists and the proletariat, the successful and the unsuccessful. He formulated the doctrine of class warfare with his appeals to the emotions of hate, covetousness, and violence. This doctrine has brought the whole world to the verge of barbarism.

"The great influence of Communism is owing largely to its appeal to the sense of inferiority. A person's inferiority in dealing with people or his failure to succeed in material things makes the Communist short cuts to success appear, to some neurotic types, attractive. The way in which Russian communists hope to rid themselves of their inferiority is by the conquest of what they regard as superior America."

In contrast to Marx's doctrine, are the spiritual teachings of Jesus, Dr. Link adds: "Though the multitudes followed and He fed them, He dealt with people above all as individuals. He cultivated personal friendships and loyalties. He associated with persons high and low, educated and ignorant, rich and poor, Pharisee and Sadducee, landlord and laborer, pious and sinner. For Jesus there were no classes, no proletariat or capitalists; there were only individuals with immortal souls. For Him the temporal or political state was unimportant as compared with the individual in an everlasting World Order under God and His universal moral law.

"Jesus taught the civilized way of life, the evolutionary way, the spiritual way. Christianity has always been a battle of the spiritual against man's materialistic and animalistic tendencies. Hence its uphill and often interrupted progress."

Today the world is in desperate need of straight thinking. What side are you on? Whom do you serve?

Even more important, do your business and personal activities contribute more to the advancement of Marx's philosophy of hate and violence—or to Christ's doctrine of love and understanding?

To collect on a torn greenback you must have three-fifth of it.

I set my sights.. and got my RANGE!

Electric.. of course!

"He was glad, later, that I stood firm. The first perfect breakfast cooked on my modern electric range impressed him. But the real clincher came when he found electric cooking costs just about half what he had thought. Now he's completely convinced electric is the only way for me to cook. You should hear him brag about how fast and efficient electric cooking is... how we wake up to freshly perked coffee attached to our range the night before... how the automatic oven-timer lets me relax while dinner is cooking. Now he's so completely sold on the new electric range you'd think it was his idea in the first place!"

Soil Conservation Notes

To succeed with any crop the farmer who plants and harvests must have a good working knowledge of the whys and wherefors of the plant he is working with. Here are some questions being asked about sweet clover by co-operators of the Upper Elm-Red soil conservation district in the Muenster area and very briefly how they would be answered by local soil conservation service personnel.

Q. What kind of, sweet clover should I plant?

A. That depends on your rotation and use to be made of the clover. Hubam sweet clover is a one-year clover. It makes rapid growth in early summer and produces seed usually in July. Bien-nial white and Madrid sweet clovers are two-year clovers. They do not seed the first year, but act similar to alfalfa giving grazing or a hay crop deep into the fall months. The second year the plants make rapid growth and will provide early grazing and a seed crop.

Q. Why should I plant sweet clover?

A. Sweet clover is beneficial to the farmer in several ways. It protects the soil against erosion by its green cover and abundant residue after maturity. It is a tap rooted plant that penetrates plow pans and increases the soil's water intake rate. Clover adds nitrogen to the soil through root bacteria. It improves the tilth of soil by addition of organic matter. It increases yields of following crops by increasing soil fertility and improving soil condition. And it furnishes a high protein hay or grazing.

Q. Why phosphate and inoculate sweet clover?

A. Soils around Muenster are nearly all low in available phosphate. Clover uses large quantities of phosphate in its growth, but returns it to the soil in its residue. So by phosphating clover we increase the growth of the plant and so increase the benefits derived from it. Clover is inoculated to insure a lot of nitrogen-fixing bacteria to form nodules on the clover roots. The bacteria take nitrogen from the air and change it to nitrates which the plants can use. Properly inoculated clover can add 50 pounds of nitrogen to each acre. That is equal to the nitrogen contained in 1000 pounds of 5-10-5 fertilizer.

Q. Will clover bloat my cattle?

A. Yet. But so will nearly all succulent green crops. Bloat in clover and alfalfa is most dangerous when the cows are first put on it when it is young and tender. Cows simply over-eat and bloat starts. By feeding dry hay to cattle before turning them on clover fields and watching them carefully the first few days they graze the clover, much of the danger of bloat can be overcome. Allowing the cow access to grass hay or pasture while she is grazing clover also helps. Once cattle become used to eating the clover very little management is required.

Q. I've heard that sweet clover hay will kill cattle. Is that true?

A. Sweet clover disease causes a loss of the clotting power of the blood of animals. It is caused by feeding straight clover hay over an extended period. It is usually produced by moldy or spoiled hay or silage, though spoilage is not always visible. Trouble from the disease may be prevented by feeding twice as much other roughage with sweet clover hay or by feeding only for two weeks, then switching to roughage for two weeks.

Q. What kind of seed bed is needed for sowing sweet clover?

A. A well prepared, but firm, seed bed is needed. The seed should be planted in one-half to one inch depths.

Q. Will sweet clover grow in pasture sods?

A. Yes. Sweet clover will do well in pasture grasses if grazing can be rotated to allow the clover to get some growth between grazings. Clover should be seeded in pasture when the ground is wet. Phosphate is also needed on pasture seedings. For further information contact your local soil conservation office.

Pansies are best grown in the shade or at least partial shade.

Cook Pork Well to Avoid Trichinosis

"Trichinosis is a disease caused by eating raw or partly cooked pork which contains the trichina worm. This disease as a rule causes several deaths and an undetermined amount of illness in Texas each year," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

Definite symptoms and signs of illness are associated with trichinosis. In the beginning there are abdominal pains, nausea, vomiting and diarrhea, lasting about a week. Migration of the embryos in the blood stream causes fever and severe muscle soreness, especially in the diaphragm and the muscles of the arms and legs. The third stage, during which cysts surround the larvae in the muscles, is the critical one. If infection is severe, there may be edema, or swelling of the eyelids and elsewhere, marked loss of weight, weakness and delirium.

The prevention of trichinosis depends primarily upon the thorough cooking of all pork. Most cases follow the indigestion of wieners, sausage or other pork products, eaten in raw or partly cooked form. The hazard of this disease is greater in connection with home butchering, unless safeguards are exercised. Rats should be exterminated because they play an important part in the spread of infection among swine. Prolonged refrigeration, as carried out under federal supervision, destroys trichina larvae. Thorough cooking and the use of meat which bears the stamp of federal inspection are safeguards against trichinosis.

He suggests also not to waste men on impregnable red fortifications in Korea, but rather to make a flank attack and cut off the fortified area. It could not last long without supplies.

Another suggestion is to cut off supplies. That could be done by blocking the China coast, and by bombing the factories and railroads furnishing the supplies.
