

Music to the ears of a big majority of Americans was President Nixon's speech last Wednesday night. His promise to bring back 100,000 troops between May 1 and December 1 is a firm assurance that we are gradually but definitely breaking away from the Vietnam mess.

The speech did not please the people who have been nagging for instant withdrawal, but the rest of us are glad that the president again declined to be influenced by them. We definitely don't favor giving the enemy the benefit of knowing just when our troops will be gone.

As the situation looks to us, Nixon was justified in his claim of success in the pull-out program to date. Attacks on the enemy in Cambodia and Laos have destroyed vast stock piles of supplies and have fouled up the enemy supply lines. They have, furthermore given South Vietnamese troops the experience and confidence needed to take over defense of their own country so that American soldiers can return home. Success is apparent also in the fact that US casualties are much lower even though we have only about half of our former troop strength there to do the job.

It would seem that this success should be enough to silence the loud mouth politicians like McGovern, Bayh, Kennedy and Fulbright. After their party's record of escalation in two administrations they certainly have no grounds to criticize the present effort. The president's schedule says that only a third of the former troop strength will remain on December 1. And some national leaders are saying that few if any will be left a year later. We fervently hope the president will be able to do just that.

As Nixon and his helpers gradually bring about our disengagement, we think they should be striving also to improve our national image regarding the war. Perhaps they can start by persuading some of our leading politicians to quit the mean mouthing. We do not violate our moral standards or national interests by being involved. The fact is North Vietnam was the aggressor when it infiltrated South Vietnam with the Viet Cong, and again when it invaded to support the Cong. U.S. had a valid reason for being there. It responded to South Vietnam's request for help.

And certainly there was nothing immoral about our intention to prevent the enslavement of a nation by communism. Nor did it violate our national interest to try to prevent a red take-over of all of Southeast Asia. After all, that is a big step toward the red goal of world domination and a big threat to our national security. The national consciences, if aware of our reasons for involvement, will feel that we have been justified, and it will also feel that we would have been wrong in abandoning the South Vietnamese.

However, there is one point on which criticism is justified. That is, the miserable no-win policy we followed for so many years. We committed the military blunder of allowing the enemy to choose his kind of warfare. Despite costly lessons we learned in Korea, we fought a defensive war, allowing the reds to hit when and where they wished and run back to their sanctuaries. GIs could not shoot until they had been fired upon. Our planes could not bomb prime enemy targets nor shoot at enemy planes until those planes had attacked them. Our role in the war was a military man's nightmare. We had to take whatever the enemy chose to inflict but we could not employ the methods endorsed by centuries of military judgment.

We could not, as in previous wars, bomb the enemy's supply line at its source. We could not invade the enemy's domain even though centuries of military custom says that an aggressor risks the loss of his own country. We were guilty of those absurd military blunders at a time when our military men were saying that a real effort could end the war in a few months.

If there is any justification in calling this an immoral and senseless war, it is only because of our method of fighting, not our reasons for being there.

Something to be grateful for (Continued on page 8)

Electric Co-op Members Receive $51,283 in Checks

Checks totaling $51,283.35 have been mailed to consumer-owners of Cooke County Electric Cooperative Association, has announced Michael E. Sloan, the cooperative's manager.

These checks represent capital credit payments to consumers of the cooperative, and bring the total of such payments to $398,705.51 over the last five years.

Since Cooke County Electric is a consumer-owned utility, added Sloan, this method is used to distribute the profit margins of the company to its member-owners.

Manager Sloan further pointed out that not only does this represent a savings to the consumer, but that in many cases the original rates charged to the consumer were lower than those charged by other area utilities.

Steady growth, economy of operation, increased KWH consumption per consumer and high load factors were cited as reasons for the continued savings to the cooperative's consumer-owners.

Cooke County Electric serves the electric energy needs of consumers in Cooke, Montague, Denton, Wise, and Grayson Counties.

The Davis Definition

Angela Davis is working to disqualify the fourth judge — by now it may be the fifth one — assigned to preside over her murder-kidnap trial in San Rafael, Calif.

The charge against the judge is, as before, racism. Judge Alan A. Lindsay, say the Davis lawyers, is a Ronald Reagan appointee; that it is common knowledge that the California governor had a vendetta against Miss Davis before UCLA fired her.

There are other allegations and they all add up, the defense says, to Judge Lindsay's being "... the very model of the white professional whose assumptions, philosophy and actions are racist at their very core."

Angela Davis, of course, is the very model of the black revolutionary whose everything is communist at its very core, but that is not what she is being tried for — though she is trying hard to make the world think so.

She is charged with furnishing guns to convicts in a courtroom shootout last year that left a judge and three others dead in San Rafael.

Her politics and race could matter less in a criminal trial, but she is trying to parlay both into a case of persecution instead of prosecution. Many think she will not settle for less than a black judge.

That may be exactly what the country needs to show that American criminal justice is blind both to race and politics — a distinction regarded as laughable in the philosophical system to which Angela Davis and all Communists belong.

Editor's Trials

If you stop to think about it, every community, large or small, gains its sense of identity and purpose through the pages of its local newspaper. If you want to find out anything or let other people know about some event, service or product, it's a pretty fair bet that the pages of your local newspaper can lend a hand, even ex-subscribers seem to think so.

A letter published in the Hayti, Missouri, Herald, makes this point and illustrates, as the editor put it, "... one of the better days in the life of a weekly newspaper publisher." The letter says, "Dear Editor: Please send me a free copy of your newspaper containing the obituary of my aunt. Also publish the enclosed clipping of the marriage of my niece. And I wish you would mention in your columns, if it doesn't cost anything that I have two calves for sale and our church is having a chili supper Friday night and the tickets are only 75 cents. As my subscription has expired, please stop the paper as I can't waste money on newspapers." — Ex-subscriber.

Don't Demolish the Chuck Wagon

A few years ago not many people had ever heard the word ecology. But today, along with God and motherhood, it ranks well up there as a sacred subject. Consequently, the stampee is on to join the safe and right side of the ecology issue. As usual, when there is a stampee, the innocent chuck wagon may get demolished.

American farmers are something like the chuck wagon. They feed the nation, and yet they have been caught in a cross fire of controversy over use of chemicals such as pesticides that are indispensable to high food production. Today, due in large measure to the success of the chemical industry, one man in agriculture can feed himself and 46 others. By 1975, he will have to feed himself and 55 others. However, even as the need for more food is being predicted, chemical companies and agriculture are facing greater restrictions on the development and use of agricultural chemicals. It now costs between $3 and $5 million to register a new compound.

Far from being unconcerned about the ecology, the chemical industry is a leader in public education in the safe use of pesticides and other chemicals. It is also keenly aware of the contribution of pesticides to a more wholesome life. They have been a major contributor to an increase in crop production of from 20 to 30 percent in the past 30 years. Food production costs have been reduced by an estimated $2.5 billion annually, principally as a result of judicious use of chemicals in agricultural production. Without pesticides, production would decline and food prices soar. This is a side of the pesticide story that has been drowned out in the uproar over the ecology. It is a victim of the ecology stampee.

The most dangerous spot on any highway is the spot where you take your eyes off the road — even for an instant.

"Back in 1909, when horse-and-buggy travel reached an all-time peak, there were 30 fatalities for each 100 million horse-travel miles," comments the Associated Petroleum Industries of Pennsylvania. "Today, with more than 96 million motor vehicles driving 967 billion miles a year, the traffic toll is just a little over five fatalities for each 100 million vehicle miles."

Problem of Monopoly

At the moment, soaring wages have passed the point of "keeping up" with inflation. In some areas, they have become an inflationary force of their own. Mr. Fred H. Sexauer, an expert in the field of marketing cooperatives and a long-time observer of the business scene, suggests that the monopolistic powers of labor unions should be brought under control just as were the monopolistic abuses of large industry 50 or 60 years ago.

Mr. Sexauer points out that excessive wage demands are not in the "public interest". They reflect the exercise of rights and privileges granted to labor unions by the public, and he believes it is now time that these rights and privileges should be subjected to the same controls, i.e. antitrust laws, that apply to business. Comments Mr. Sexauer, "To the extent that labor unions exercise their rights and privileges' (their monopolistic powers) in making excessive demands, these powers should, at that point, be restrained just as corporate monopolistic powers were restrained under similar circumstances... any restraining legislation or legislative program should preserve the institution of unions just as the institution of corporations was preserved under antitrust and regulatory legislation."

No group in the country should have the power to disrupt with impunity essential services or cripple basic industries. These are the kind of abuses that have come as a result of the unrestrained use of monopolistic powers. Excessive wage demands should be treated as a problem of monopoly — not of inflation.

Ski Trips for Needy?

Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia, the new watchdog of the Treasury, charged recently that $30,000 in tax funds had been diverted from a New York Model Cities program to send welfare recipients on ski trips to Massachusetts, Vermont and upstate New York.

WCBS radio of New York said that 600 relievers had been given ski outings through the Bronx Model Cities program.

Mr. Byrd said he had requested verification of the facts from George Romney, secretary of housing and urban development, but that Romney had proved reticent.

These funds come from hard-working American taxpayers," said Senator Byrd. "They are a public trust. To use public funds for frills such as ski trips is to take money away from people truly in need."

Mr. Byrd said that HUD was not alone in squandering tax dollars. He recalled that in January a mother and her four children were put up at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York at a cost to the taxpayers of $76 a day with the full approval of welfare officials, and that a man in Pennsylvania earning $21,853 a year qualifies for a monthly welfare grant of $250.40 under a loophole in state law.

"I think the American people are getting fed up with this kind of abuse of trust by public officials," Mr. Byrd said.

He can say that again!

Health Hints

FROM BLUE SHIELD

Rocking Chair Exercise

Grandmother's rocking chair may be just what the doctor ordered when he told her to get more exercise. Rocking stimulates blood circulation and maintains muscle tone and supple joints for senior citizens who get little exercise. "Rocking chair medicine" also helps combat insomnia through its back-and-forth motion.

Heart Attacks

Minutes count when heart attack strikes, so familiarize yourself with these usual warnings of heart attack: prolonged, oppressive pain or unusual discomfort in the center of the chest—behind the breastbone; pain which radiates to the shoulder, arm, neck or jaw; and pain or discomfort which is often accompanied by sweating, nausea, vomiting and shortness of breath. Frequently these symptoms subside and return later. Therefore, consult your physician promptly. Delay may cause your life.

Getting In Shape For Spring

If you're thinking of beginning a diet to shed those excess pounds of winter fat before spring arrives, follow these simple nutritional precautions. Drink one or two 8 ounce glasses of milk everyday; eat three ounces of lean, cooked meat, poultry or fish; and eat four or more servings of vegetables and fruits each day. Included should be one good source of Vitamin C every day such as broccoli, carrots, and spinach. And always consult your physician before dieting.

Disaster Planning Makes Difference If Tornado Hits

One of nature's deadliest phenomena is the tornado — a violent, destructive whirling wind that strikes almost without warning and seemingly at random, sweeping everything out of its path as its whiplash tail moves in a narrow path over the land.

The tornado that struck the city of Lubbock last year, like the earlier disasters in previous years in Dallas, Waco, and San Angelo, once again reminded Texans that disaster health planning is the difference between safety and catastrophe.

The Texas Department of Health has joined with other state and federal agencies and medical associations to see that all areas of the state are prepared in case of a disaster. Consequently, Texas is meeting the 1971 tornado season with one of the world's most complete storm warning systems, and a well-oiled public health relief organization.

Texas' "local severe weather warning system", the first established anywhere in the world, now has radar storm warnings sets in almost all major cities in the state. These stations are all connected by teletype and radio. Any station is able to instantly appraise all other stations of a tornado traveling in their direction. All communities in the vicinity of the twister can be warned of the tornado's approach through normal channels of communications, or through special warning devices.

If a tornado does strike a community, the Texas Health Department stands ready to provide vaccine and public health engineering and emergency nursing know-how to stem the threat of disease or further complications while disaster relief is underway.

The National Weather Service has developed a new system of terminology to more accurately inform you of the severe weather conditions around you.

A "SEVERE WEATHER WATCH" indicates that weather conditions are such that severe weather could develop in the immediate area. A "SEVERE WEATHER WARNING" means that severe weather has actually developed, and care should be taken. A "SEVERE WEATHER ALERT" is a warning that severe weather is moving directly into the area.

The same holds true for tornado warnings. A "TORNADO WATCH" indicates the possibility of conditions existing that could lead to the development of a tornado. A "TORNADO WARNING" means that a tornado has actually been sighted in the area, and extreme caution should be taken. A "TORNADO ALERT" means to act fast, a tornado is in the immediate area.

Well, What Do You Know? fun, games and knowledge

by MARTHA GLAUBER SHAPP, Editor, The New Book of Knowledge

With a string telephone you can quietly carry on a conversation with a friend who is 15 or 20 feet away. The telephone is easy to make and fun to use.

- Here is what you will need:
- 1.—2 6-ounce paper cups
 - 2.—a pin
 - 3.—20 feet of string (preferably waxed) or 20 feet of thin wire
 - 4.—cellophane tape

Make a pinhole in the bottom of each cup. Push an end of the string or wire through each hole, leaving a 2-inch piece inside the cup.

Knot the ends of the string or wire inside the cup, and fasten the knots to the cups with cellophane tape.

Hold one of the cups and have a friend hold the other. Walk away from each other until the string is taut. Have your friend hold his cup to his ear while you talk into your cup. Then let him answer you by talking into his cup while you listen through yours.

The telephone works because the sound waves made by your voice cause the cup bottom to vibrate. The string transmits these vibrations to the other cup, and to the air inside it. That is why you can hear each other on this string telephone.

Be sure always to keep the string taut. If you allow it to hang loose, it will not vibrate properly, in step with your voice. Also do not let the string touch any other objects. If it does, the vibrations will be stopped.

SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

by Eual Davis
District Conservationist
Muenster, Texas

Asthma sufferers should pay close attention to the actions of certain groups which are trying to get a ban on the use of all herbicides.

If "hay fever" is a problem for you it would be to your advantage to see herbicides for weed control stay in use. Each time a land owner goes over his pasture with a herbicide to control the weeds he is in effect eliminating millions of weeds which would grow, bloom, produce pollen and thus make life more miserable for asthma sufferers.

Landowners who spray their pastures to control weeds do you a favor. These herbicides do not kill birds or insect of any kind. Empty a barrel of it in a pond and it will control the weeds but will not kill the fish.

Herbicides for weed control are not poisons which kill, but a product which simply activates the growth points of weeds causing them to grow themselves to death. Any plant classified as a grass is not affected by herbicides for weed control. If herbicides are banned for use by land owners there will be a tremendous increase in the amount of weeds and you will suffer more and longer.

Economically speaking you not only will be out more for treatment, but you will also pay more for your groceries. Herbicides help keep the price of producing food down. Eliminate them and groceries will cost much more. The land owner who controls his weeds each year should not be falsely condemned as one who is destroying our environment but rather praised for his efforts to produce more and cheaper food and as one who provides great relief to asthma or hay fever sufferers throughout the land.

One-fifth of all cropland harvested in the U.S. is used to produce products for export, according to the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Eggs Have Long Been a Tradition At Easter Time

Whether the chicken or egg came first, eggs have long been important to man, reports Dr. David Mellor, Extension poultry marketing specialist at Texas A&M University.

Ancient people considered eggs a delicacy, and even a staple food when the supply was abundant. History also associates them with science, sports, and superstition, and exalts eggs as a symbol of pagan and Christian custom.

Many of the ancients thought the egg represented the world and its elements, shell (earth), white (water), yolk (fire), and under the shell (air).

Our present-day custom of decorating and giving Easter eggs is a symbol of the Resurrection. However, the custom originated in pre-Christian times, according to Dr. Mellor.

In China as early as 722 B.C., the practice was already established. Messengers in the State of King-ts-oo were sent to the countryside to proclaim that all fires were to be put out for three days during the Spring Festival. One provident chieftain accumulated supplies of painted eggs, and set the fashion of dispensing them as gifts.

The early Christians adopted a similar custom. In the British Isles, after eggs were blessed by a priest, they became holy gifts benefiting both the giver and receiver.

For best results, follow these cooking suggestions from Dr. Mellor.

Place the eggs in a dish of lukewarm water to prevent cracked shells. Bring water in a pan to a rapid boil, using enough water to come one inch above the eggs.

Carefully transfer eggs from the warm water to the boiling water; reduce heat to keep the water at a simmering temperature. Leave the eggs in the water, covered, for about 18 minutes.

Remove the eggs from the hot water, plunging them immediately into cold water.

Many homemakers complain that hard cooked eggs are hard to peel, Mellor reports.

He explains that the problem can be solved by using older eggs or aging them before cooking. To age eggs, simply leave them out of the refrigerator at room temperature for 24 hours.

Crackel the shell and peel from the large end. As a further aid, place the egg under running water to ease off the shell.

By using these steps, even the freshest eggs, which tend to peel poorly, will present no problem, says Mellor.

In Shakespeare's day, school hours were from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. during the summer, and from daybreak to dusk in winter.

FARM PONDS — Good farm ponds like the one in this SCS photo are a good investment for land owners. The importance of a good deep pond for year long water is being seen and felt by many in the Muenster area. Good ponds also provide many hours of enjoyment for family and friends through fishing. Nothing can sour the fun of fishing any faster than pond weeds and pond scum. This need not happen for these pests can be easily controlled. Bluestone or Copper Sulfate will rid your pond of "scum" and there are a number of safe, approved herbicides for controlling pond weeds. These weeds are now beginning vigorous growth and as soon as the water gets a little warmer they should be treated. Don't miss out on the fun of fishing, see your local SCS men today for recommended treatment and fertilization.

Survey Shows that Family Diets Are Poorest in Spring

More U. S. families have poor diets in the spring than in any other season, according to Frances Reasonover, Extension Foods and nutrition specialist at Texas A&M University.

These findings from the 1965-66 Household Food Consumption Survey were reported recently by Arletta M. Beloit, U. S. Department of Agriculture food specialist.

In the survey, 21 percent of U.S. family diets rated poor during the spring months; in each of the other seasons, 18 percent of the diets ranked "poor."

Generally, the diets receiving a poor rating lacked ascorbic acid (vitamin C) and vitamin A found in fruits and vegetables, and calcium from milk and milk products.

Shortages of the two vitamins occur more often in spring, when family consumption of fruits and vegetables is the lowest. Southern families in the study had a greater proportion of diets below the recommended allowances for vitamin C and vitamin A than families in other regions.

These nutrients, Miss Reasonover adds, are a problem in every season.

The Household Food Consumption survey also showed that food budgets and the portion of food dollars spent on the individual food groups varied little from season to season. Dietary improvement must then come from changes in food group buying patterns, Miss Reasonover explains.

CYO Group Plans Coming Events

Muenster CYO planned coming activities at their April meeting held in Sacred Heart Lounge. Primary business was the choosing of a "Love Campaign" for April activity. Members will make posters with such topics as "Love your Brother," etc. to be placed in downtown business places.

Election of officers was scheduled for May and members discussed the election of local candidates for Mr. and Miss CYO. When elected they will compete with other youths at the Catholic State League convention to be held in San Angelo in June.

Mary Lou Kralieck opened the meeting with prayer. Peggy Sicking read minutes and roll call, Tim Bindel gave the treasurer's report. Ann Bar-tush led the closing prayer.

CHANGES IN LIVESTOCK MARKETING NOTES

Auction markets and terminals are still the major sources of slaughter calves for packers, but the feedlot is providing most of their fed cattle in the west and southwest.

The 1969 report of the Packers and Stockyards Administration of the USDA indicated that Texas and California alone accounted for more than one-third of the cattle fed by packers.

In 1969, packers fed or had fed 1.6 million head of cattle and calves (seven percent of fed cattle marketings).

The concentrated feeding areas in the west and southwest make markets and terminals relatively unimportant in states such as Arizona, California, Colorado, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Texas.

It was held on the Gulf Coast at Buena Vista Hotel where over 1500 honor students from across the nation were present.

The two spent Easter with their parents, the Norbert Koesslers in Muenster and the Richard Schumachers at Gainesville and reported back to classes Monday.

Gift of Eighty Navajo Willows Received by CCJC

Tom Bolack, former Republican governor of New Mexico, recently donated eighty Navajo Willow trees to Cooke County Junior College to be used in the campus beautification program. The donation came as the result of a personal letter written to Bolack by Whitten Williams, history instructor at CCJC and a former resident of New Mexico.

According to Williams the Navajo Willows are a hybrid variety that grow to enormous size in a relative short period of time and take the shape of a large globe or dome. The trees were developed as a part of the experimental program on Bolack's famous B Square Ranch on the San Juan River, near Farmington, New Mexico.

The farm specializes in the improvement of varieties and production methods of non-surplus type vegetable crops. Another interesting aspect of the B Square farm is that almost all employees are Navajo Indians. Bolack sees this as a means to promote the self-sufficiency of the Indian tribes who are developing large irrigation projects in the four-corners area of New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, and Arizona.

J. D. Bomer, groundskeeper at CCJC, is already at work setting out the trees at strategic locations around the campus. Those not used immediately in the beautification program are being set in rows on the back side of the campus. They will be moved to desired locations as the beautification plans continue to be developed.

is the overwhelming public support for Lieutenant Calley and the country in the My Lai case. Fortunately, only a small percentage have accused Calley of a premeditated criminal act. The others are taking other factors into account, making allowance for the fact that Calley was on a dangerous mission in the service of his country and he had to be on guard against any kind of treachery.

Men of the mission had learned from bitter experience that many innocent looking civilians were enemies who suddenly fired guns and threw grenades. That is what soldiers expected as they attacked My Lai.

It is understandable that Calley went berserk under the strain. It is understandable that he refused to be calmed by the presence of babies. A favorite Cong trick was to use women and children as shields in their treachery. So, the most likely explanation is that children were unfortunate victims while Calley fired on the adults.

It is true that he did not handle his assignment to the satisfaction of his superiors or his country. But accusing him of murder doesn't seem right. More likely this can be described as a tragic mistake which embarrassed his country and will haunt him for the rest of his life.
