Good news is that thousands of black evangelical Christians are heading for Chicago to attend a massive national conference on spiritual awakening. These people have learned that something is missing in this country, as in the rest of the world, and they have hopes to bring about changes that will spark a spiritual comeback.

Their conference will in-comeback.

Their conference will include helpful ways of communicating God's message, along with workshops on counseling, education, social work and other activity applying spiritual principle to every day life.

As Paul Harvey states, most of society's sickness is self inflicted and relates to drink, drugs, promiscuity and drugs, promiscuity and stress. It's a good sign that blacks realize this important fact. They have a starting point for taking on their trouble.

Unfortunately, the announcement has two faults. In the first place it is not getting adequate coverage. A movement as constructive as this deserves abundant publicity, reminding more people that it is going on and telling them how urgently it is needed. Another fault is that it does not mention a sign of spiritual awakening in whites. As any thinking person knows, the drift away from God and morality applies to both races. Both need to restore the fundamental values. Both need to review their old time religion and be reconvinced that they came from God and will return to Him with an account of their stewardship. Him with an account of their stewardship.

Our trouble has been that Our trouble has been that we did not know how to live with our success. We were too smugly satisfied with ourselves and too much inclined to concentrate on gratifying our selfish wants. We drifted away from God and we are gradually becoming aware that our troubles are mostly the consequence of our wrong doing.

The situation is not at all The situation is not at all new, The chosen people of Biblical times were as human as we are. They too ignored the Lord when all was going well and became more concerned with satisfying their selfish desires than doing God's will. They as we made a satisfying their setting desires than doing God's will. They, as we, made a mess of things, and they finally reached the point of getting on their knees, begging for forgiveness and help. The blacks flocking toward Chicago seem to have about reached that point.

Their program no doublt will include devout prayer asking their Heavenly Father to guide them back to the right path. Hopefully they will return with an understanding of the problem and influence others to join them in the good work.

Regarding the nation as a whole, we wonder how long

Regarding the nation as a whole, we wonder how long it will be until they advance as far as the assembling blacks are at this time. When will they come to a realization of their failures and turn to prayer, admitting that our long list of moral, social, political and economic sins have resulted from banishing God?

As of now the outlook is still discouraging. Much of our society apparently is not concerned with the existence of God and has a long way to go before realizing our responsibility to Him.

There are reasons to think that vast numbers of people in the secondary of the

that vast numbers of people understand the country's spiritual and moral hunger spiritual and moral hunger, but their trouble is that they are not working together for a solution. On this week's anniversary of Pearl Harbor we are recalling again how the nation was united in a mighty effort of meeting the enemy's challenge. Those who lived in that time remember President Roosevelt's reference to

Other attractions to look for will be a group of carolers at the Hess Furniture corner. They have been practicing old Christmas favorites with Juanita Bright specially for the occasion. More decorations are the city's lights installed last week on Main and the Highway, and especially the landmark "Noel" display on the water tower. That unit is a permanent installation turned on during the Christmas season. The annual replacement of bulbs was done Monday.

The parade will start shaping up at 1 p.m. Saturday at the corner of highway and Mesquite with Arthur Bayer arranging the marching order. The VFW Honor Guard, directed by him, will head the parade starting at 2 p.m. and follow the highway to Main, then march north to Fourth.

City will qualify for compensation, insurance

Members of the City Council Monday night proceeded to qualify for a flood insurance program which can be used by itself or by its residents. The first step was to pass an ordinance of eligibility for the protection.

In complying with federal regulations the council discovered that the protection can be retroactive to damage sustained in the Progress was reported on the dust problem following the city's recent paving job. Mayor Leo Hess said that a machine has been located machine has been located which, hopefully, will remove the dust. For now the city is waiting to see if it will. More progress is an agreement with the contractor to share the cost of cleaning up the mess.

The city council also took up the matter of collecting for the library's over-due book rentals as well as charges for loss and damage. An added clause states that a parent is responsible for losses caused by his or her child. Councilmen approved the suggestion and ordered preparation of an ordinance to be passed the usual way.

Another bit of business was preparation of a contract to be submitted to county commissioners for answering rural fire calls. Since expiration of the last contract firemen continue to answer calls but without proper authorization. The city has prepared a contract specifying $2250 a year for the service and intends to present it to the county court for a signature.

The council also approved purchase of a pickup for the Water Department on a low bid of $7673.84. The vehicle is a GMC. And it voted to renew its insurance on workmen's compensation, liability and secretary's bond.

Mischief delays progress on lake

Members of the Muenster City Council in session Monday night were infor-med that the time required for the next phase of the City's lake project is dif-ficult to estimate because of possible difficulties in get-ting the work done. Charlie Case, surveyor, was asked to prepare a sur-vey on land to be used as recreational area for submit-ting to the Soil Conservation Service, which will share in the over-all cost. Case menthe over-all cost. Case mentioned weather as a possible cause of delay but added that a greater problem in previous survey work was interference and mischief. Stakes were often pulled up from their proper places and destroyed or thrown away or set in the wrong place. When he returned to continue the work he frequently had to return to the original starting place and start over. It's caused the city to lose a great deal of time and money.

Another chore facing Another chore facing Case is a survey to specify the route of a right of way to pipe water from the city's new well to its distribution system. Intent on having the well's water available for next summer, the city has decided to get ready for condemnation in case it is necessary to obtain the right of way.

Chamber gives reward for information on conviction

The first reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of a person on the charge of vandalism has been paid by the Chamber of Commerce.

President Dick Ferber reported at Tuesday's chamber meeting that the amount is $100 but declined to give information about the receiver, the nature of the offense or the identity of the guilty person or persons. He explained that the chamber chooses to say as little as possible to minimize the chance of identification and retaliation.

He further stated that the chamber's intention is to set a reward proportional to the offense. A big reward will not be given for lesser mischief nor a trifling reward for information on a serious offense. The pur-pose, Ferber said is to enpose, Ferber said is to ele-courage persons to give in-formation on vandalism, burglary and various other offenses. The reward follows arrest and convic-tion. Persons willing to give information are encouraged to tip the police who can take up their investigation on that information. Any report to the police is kept in confidence.

In other business the chamber spread its interest over three major projects of the year. The Christmas parade is ready for what ap-pears to be the best yet, on Saturday. Planning is under way for the annual banquet and Germanfest. courage persons to give in-formation on vandalism,

Texas receives glowing report

by Senator Bob Glasgow

In the midst of the Thanksgiving and Christmas holiday season, one has the opportunity to think about things other than state government, budgets, governors and Mediterranian fruit flies.

I'm thankful to be from a crowing and vibrant state

I'm thankful to be from a growing and vibrant state and I'm glad to be living in this day and age. Somehow the "good ol" days" were never quite as good as we remember them.

Twenty years ago air conditioning (home and car), color television, frost-free refrigerators, etc. were luxuries rather than the necessities we consider them now.

Twenty years ago the Dallas Cowboys were one and eleven (although television commentators even then were telling us that Tom Landry was the only head coach the Cowboys ever had).

Thirty years ago many of Thirty years ago many of us used to get cold or wet going to the restroom, and the bathtub was of the No. 3 washtub variety. A television was something your neighbor had.

We've come a long way, and it's good to be from Texas. There are several good reasons—including the people, the climate and the resources.

Most Texans I know are still neighborly. If your ox is whether you are talking about the weather or the life in the well, they'll still help you pull it out.

And Texans I know work hard - they're productive, in fact, probably the most productive workers in this nation. Texas factory workers outproduced their national counterparts by 34 per cent during the late 1970's. Texas workers in 1977 produced an average of $4.99 for every dollar they earned. This compared with a national average of $3.72.

This is one of the major reasons companies want to come to Texas. Also, because of the general work ethic, unemployment at 8 per cent nationwide while Texas had a rate of only 5 per cent.

I once read an article by an anthropologist that said that in those regions where there is a dramatic change between the seasons, those living in that region tend to be more inventive and adapbe more inventive and adaptable than those that live in an areas where there is little change. Well you all know about the Texas weather—if you don't like it, just wait ten minutes

If you don't like it, just wait ten minutes.

The tax climate on the State level is favorable when you compare Texas with other states. Texas is the only major industrial state that does not have either a personal and/or corporate income tax. The sales tax and franchise tax are among the lowest in the nation. Even though we have probably the best (and the largest) highway system in the nation, the motor fuel tax that primarily funds the system is one of the lowest. Texas is one of the few states that is not a financial keep it that way.

The business climate is favorable, too. With the productive workers, educated and skilled individuals, the taxes and our natural resources, business and industry which provide jobs, find Texas a good place to come.

Of course this is not to say that there are no problems confronting us. Although oil and gas revenues have increased dramatically, production has fallen each year since 1973. Everyone knows that we have to plan for an upcoming water shortage as the level of the underground aquifiers falls. But the people of this State have faced greater problems; and with careful planning and wise use of our resources, these can be surmounted.

On the whole, the state of our State is good It's a Reprocessing aluminum cans reduces waste problems and also saves energy. So would reprocessing nuclear fuel.

We Americans have a well-earned reputation for finish ing whatever we begin. But today there's unfinished business delaying our progress toward energy independence. We don't yet have a national policy for reprocessing nuclear fuel and storing nuclear waste.

When the used fuel is removed from nuclear power plants, less than three percent of the volume is waste. The remainder makes substantial amounts of fuel available for future use, after the wastes are removed in a reprocessing plant, A large commercial reprocessing plant, to large commercial reprocessing plants and the second future use, after the wastes are removed in a reprocessing plant. A large commercial reprocessing plant has been successfully operating in France since 1976. In America this same process can help us extend our supplies and ease the problems of waste disposal by making it possible to store only the wastes.

We know how to reprocess the fuel and how to store wastes safely. When to start reprocessing, and where to store the wastes, are decisions the Federal Government is responsible for. And they still haven't been made.

At your electric company, we believe the decisions should be made. And we believe that the users of the reprocessing and storage facilities should bear their expense. We also believe there's an urgent need to make decisions now — so that we can plan for the future, and you can be assured of a dependable supply of electricity at a reasonable cost.

WASHINGTON, D.C. The United States is unquestionably better at responding to emergency situations than preventing problems from becoming full-fledged crises. We are a nation whose history seems to be built on our ability to react rather than to prepare seems to be built on our ability to react rather than to prepare. The 40th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor might serve as a tragic, timely reminder of this tendency. Congress' failure to deal with politically sensitive problems is not new. That failure must also be shared, however, by the general public that often encourages the philosophy of "let's put it off until tomorrow."

"let's put it off until tomorrow."

In no industry is the folly of refusing to face reality — and plan for its actualities — more evident than in the agricultural industry. Nor do we seem to learn from the lessons of the past. Fifty years ago President Franklin Roosevelt warned, "The nation that destroys its soil destroys its soil destroys itself," And yet today we are losing topsoil at a faster rate than at any time in history, including the Dust Bowl era that prompted Roosevelt's warning.

Technological advances — the use of fertilizers, pesticides, better seeds and better strains of livestock — masked many of the potential problems, with emphasis on increased productivity ner acre projeting short

Much of the technology that the agricultural industry became so dependent upon to increase production became, in the mid-70s, increasingly expensive as it depended on available, cheap sources of petroleum. The Arab oil embargo changed that scenario and we began to recognize that continued expectations of more and more production from less and less resources were unrealistic. Production more and more production from less and less resources were unrealistic. Production capabilities at some point are limited in growth.

In 1977, Congress responded to concerns about our future to produce limitless amounts of food and fiber from limited soil and water resources and passed the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act (RCA). In the Act, the Secretary of Agriculture was asked three basic questions: What are the resource problems? How do you propose to solve these problems? What are the expected results of your solution?

Unfortunately, the Soviet Union is on the verge of being able to threaten our security and that of our European allies. We have the national will and the ability to counter that threat through building new weapons of our own. But still we seek the stability that can only come as a result of balanced arms control agreements.

However, under President Reagan's arms reduction proposal, we would not deploy these new weapons if the Soviet Union agrees to remove their comparable ones. This is the so-called "zero option," and would be a firm step on the road to a safer world.

In fact, the President has said he views these negotiations as a first step. If they are successful, we would hope to expand arms reduction to other kinds of nuclear weapons, and even to conventional forces.

in a democracy, where people have the ability to affect changes in public policy, attempt to find out what people believe and then influence those beliefs.

Probably no belief is so important to the well-being of the American people as what they think about our system of economic organization. Every society must have some kind of organized program for supplying its essential needs for survival. They must choose some modification of capitalism or socialism.

In the words of the great Austrian economist, Ludwig von Mises, "Socialism cannot be realized because it is beyond human power to establish it as a social system. The choice is really between capitalism and chaos. A man who chooses between drinking a glass of onlik and a glass of potassium cyanide does not choose between two beverages; he chooses between life and death. A society that chooses between capitalism and socialism does not choose between two social systems; it chooses between social cooperation or the disintegration of society."

We have been very fortunate in America that we chose capitalism, which means we opted for private ownership of the means of production, the free market for exchange of the means of production, the free market for exchange of goods and services, all directed by the profit motive. This has likewise been true of Swit-zerland, West Germany and The spectre of nuclear war has threatened the world for over 30 years.

The United States' response to the awful possibility that mankind might destroy itself has been to maintain a force designed to deter use of these weapons by others—while at the same time seeking a way, through negotiazerland, West Germany and Japan.

Now the private enterprise system operates by mean of "agencies" which we call businesses. The purposes of business is the creation and marketing of goods and services, placing them in the marketplace where they can be exchanged, bought and sold.

Capitalist businesses have given the world "a higher standard of living for a steadily increasing number of people," wrote von Mises. But he pointed out, "A social system, however beneficial, cannot work if it is not supported by public opinion.

The advocates of Socialism

not supported by public opinion

The advocates of Socialism are highly organized and have very active propaganda programs to affect the beliefs of people in the United States and throughout the world. Evidence of their effectiveness is all around us.

Most of the economic problems we face in America today are the result of our succumbing to the seductive fallacies of socialist propaganda, always presented under an alluring guise. Any program in which goods and services are produced or distributed by the government is by definition, socialistic, whether it be education, transportation, electricity production, mail delivery, retirement pension or whatever.

retirement pension of whatever.

Never was a cause so noble or so just as the preservation of free enterprise. For if we continue the drift toward socialism, not only will our standard of living suffer, but we will also lose many of the hallmarks of a humane civilization which have been made possible by capitalism-produced abundance.

What our people believe now about private enterprise business will determine the direction of the economy in the short-run. What our students believe will determine the future of America over the long-run.

Jack Schoppa weds Debra Pippin

Debra Jewel Pippin of Jacksboro became the bride of Jack Cole Schoppa on November 28. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pippin of Jermyn, Texas and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. (Jack) Schoppa of Bulcher.

The officiating minister was A.W. Chism of Texarkana Church of Christ, and cousin of the groom. The couple repeated vows in a double ring ceremony held outdoors at the home of the groom's parents, at 3 p.m. under an arch of cedar boughs and dried natural flowers, accented with wicker bells.

Recorded traditional music was played before and after the ceremony.

Recorded traditional music was played before and after the ceremony.

Escorted by her brother, Johnny Pippin, the bride was wearing a long garden gown of ivory lace designed with Queen Anne neckline, bishop sleeves, and boulfant skirt. Her headpiece was a halo of silk flowers in her chosen colors of earth tones with ivory and wedgewood accents. Her bridal flowers were carried in a garden basket of silk flowers matching her headpiece, and centered with a mauve orchid which she later wore with her going-away suit. Traditionally, "something old, borrowed and blue" was the blue garter the groom's mother wore at her wedding in 1956.

What was under the American Christmas tree nearly a half-century ago?
According to the first Christmas "Wish Book" from Sears in 1933, you would have found a cedar chest with floral-patterned stationery, felt slippers, a pearltone dresser set in a satin-lined gift case, and a five-pound box of chocolate drops. Also a "two-in-one" Tiddledy Wink game.

Things have changed.
Catalogs from Sears have long been known as chroniclers of American lifestyles and economic conditions. They are frequently used by movie makers and historians to determine what people bought and how they lived at certain times.

While American children today ask for Snoopy dolls, Star Wars toys, Supperman T-shirts, Muppet watches and soccer balls, the kids of 1933 had different tastes.

Dolls with real hair and "eyes that sleep" were the choice of that decade's little girls. The catalog carried their favorite - "Miss Pigtails" - for only $1. And a solid oak children's dining set for those late afternoon tea parties was one of the more expensive gifts, at $5.95.

"Any boy would be tickled pink", said the catalog, "to get a Strike Out King baseball with a Howto-Pitch booklet by Dazzy Vance himself." (Who among us will admit to remembering Dazzy Vance!) That year's toy offerings -and maybe life in general -

Take the year 1899. The catalog offered youngsters a battleship bank that looked like the U.S.S. Maine - the warship destroyed in Havana Harbor during the Spanish-American War. This was also the era of Teddy Roosevelt. So the Sears catalog offered a "Rough Riders" chime toy, in honor of his historic charge of San Juan Hill.

Dolls always have been a popular Christmas gift. More than any other toy, they reflect existing styles and fads. Dolls of the early 1900s showed the popular long, curly and bushy hair style. What Was Christmas Like in 1920? For one man, the morning of Christmas Eve started like this. The above picture shows Rural Mail Carrier, Ben Luke's mail cart loaded with packages from Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward awaiting delivery to anxious customers who were beginning to worry about the next morning if the packages did not

Because the roads were muddy, the horse-drawn cart plodded along more slowly, and because the cart was so loaded, the mail carrier walked alongside until there was room for

The day stretched long and cold and several families brought out plates of hot pancakes and cups of coffee. It was almost dark when the mail carrier got home that night, Christmas Eve.

There's a magical fascination with toys, especially at Christmas time. And while Christmas toys reflect children's dreams and desires, they also mirror our nation's history and its heroes and heroines. Popular toys in early catalogs, such as from Sears, give a glimpse of the mood of the nation through the years. appeared in the catalog, straight from television fame.

Today, the Christmas Wish Book lists dolls and stuffed animals made popular by TV and comic strips, like the Cookie Monster and other Sesame Street stars, as well as Snoopy and the Pink Panther.

Don't forget the everpopular Barbie. (She appeared in Sears catalog for the first time in 1960. Twenty-one years later, she and Ken still maintain that teen look.) Barbie's now available in western gear with My Pal Palomino horse. And to round out the family, there are black and Hispanic Barbies.

Children have always been fascinated by fire engines. The 1899 Sears catalog's hook-and-ladder fire truck (25 cents) has evolved into the 1981 Wish Book's "emergency-equipped fire station" (18.49). It includes a chief's car, ambulance and "1 Dalmation dog."

Photos from the past

Last week's "Photo from the Past" was that of the late Loyd Orrell. The Orrell the Past was that of the late Loyd Orrell. The Orrell family is another pioneer family of the area. I could write a book on what a fine, wonderful man Loyd was. He was first of all a good christian man, a good son, husband and father. Loyd was also a dear friend and neighbor - always ready and willing to help those in need and lend a helping hand. In all the years I knew him I never heard an unkind word spoken of him - perhaps because he never gossiped or spoke unkindly of people. Therefore, I, if I should make it through those Pearly Gates - know Loyd will be right there to greet me.

Sacred Heart looks great in two losses to Lake Dallas

In spite of two losses, the SH teams looked like a million Tuesday night at Lake Dallas. That's the judgement of Coach Jon LeBressaur after very close see-saw games with the highly rated Lake Dallas boys and girls. The lead went back and forth in every

Cub Scouts win 'Presidents Award'

Cub Scouts of Pack 664 came home from the "Scout Fun Fair" with the highest award given: "The President's Award."
The Cubs booth was the Gerry II ping pong ball toss, where the boys sold ping pong balls to be tossed into Gerry II's trunk. Profit for the booth was $40,965 (play money of course). The booths were judged on theme, decoration and boys' participation. Taking part were Murlin Evans, and Johnny Herr of the Webelos den. Also Jimmy Herr, Rodney Knabe, Troy Pagel, Darren Russel, Douglas Evans, Terry Felderhoff, Steven Fisher, Scott Hudspeth, Brad McDaniel and Paul Black.

period of both contests, but the Tigers and Tigerettes had the misfortune of being at the short end at the finish. In the girls game Sacred Heart led 7-5 and 18-15 at the first and second periods, Lake Dallas led 31-30 and 41-36 at the third and fourth. A fault that probably made the difference was turnovers. The Tigerettes had 27 of them. Susan Walterscheid led the SH effort with 11 points and 15 rebounds. Carol Walterscheid and Anne Felderhoff also made 11 points each and Marilynn Hartman made 3.

Although the Tigers had temporary leads in all periods the Falcons were ahead at the end of each period, the scores being 15-14, 34-30, 44-42 and 61-51. A disappointing change in the final minutes was the deciding factor. After Tigers lost the lead with 4 minutes to go the Falcons stalled and SH troubles started. Tigers fouled trying desperately to get possession, LD cashed in with free throws, and Fuhrman and Brian Herr fouled out. Another factor: SH made only five of 21 free throws.
