Through the valley

THIS WEEK we come to what is perhaps the best known and most quoted verse in the 23rd Psalm: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me," (Psalm 23:4).

Although this verse is often thought of as referring to the comfort the Lord gives when we face death, I believe it refers to the peace and comfort which the Lord gives those who place their faith and trust in him when they face a trial of any kind, whether that trial be death, enemies, or any other kind of hardship. A valley is a low place with mountains on either side. Enemies may be posted on those mountains to shoot their arrows at the traveler, as they so often did; but he must pass through it. The Psalmist said he would fear no evil, not even the fiery darts of Satan, for the Lord was with him as he walked through the valley beset with enemies.

Notice that the believer did not quicken his pace when he came to face hardship or death, but calmly "walked" with God. To walk indicated the steady advance of a soul which knows its road, knows its end, resolves to follow the path, feels quite safe, and is therefore perfectly calm and composed.

Observe that it is not walking "in" the valley, but "through" the valley. Every mountain has its valley. The way to the mountain top is up through the valley. In reference to death, we see that death is not the goal, but that we go through the dark tunnel of death and emerge into the light of immortality. We do not die, but sleep to wake in glory.

And, then, it is not "the valley of death," but "the valley of the shadow of death" for death in its substance has been removed, and only the shadow of it remains. Some one has said that when there is a shadow there must be a light somewhere, and so there is. Death stands by the side of the highway in which we have to travel, and the light of heaven shining upon him throws a shadow across our path; let us then rejoice that there is a light beyond. Nobody is afraid of a shadow, for a shadow cannot stop a man's pathway even for a moment. The shadow of a dog cannot bite; the shadow of death cannot destroy us. Let us not, therefore be afraid. "I will fear no evil." He does not say there will be no evil, but "I will fear no evil." Why does he fear no evil? Because "Thou art with me." It should be enough to know that Christ is with us. Because "Thou art with me" we can have perfect comfort and absolute security.

"Thy rod and thy staff," which the shepherd uses for protection, discipline, and guidance of his flock, "they comfort me." The rod was a stick, some thing like a small club, which could be used to beat off wild animals such as wolves and bobcats. It could also be thrown; therefore it could be used for protection by throwing at the enemies of the sheep such as wild animals, and it could also be used for discipline by throwing at sheep which had strayed away from the flock to drive them back to the safety and security of the flock. The staff, of course, was bent or hooked at one end, and with it the shepherd could reach out with the crook and catch a sheep which was going astray and guide it back to the trail upon which it was supposed to travel. Likewise, the Lord protects, disciplines, and guides us along the pathway of life, but how often do we fail to give Him the credit which is due Him?

The initial problem is that Ed Meese and his wife are poor compared to so many government people. As a valuable campaigner in 1980 he was offered a position on Reagan's staff. Acceptance involved a financial sacrifice with salary decrease from $100,000 to $61,000 a year. At the same time they failed to sell their former home in San Diego and had to support two houses.

Additional expense was the cost of sending a son to Princeton and a daughter to a girls academy, plus the tragedy of having a son killed in a car accident. Understandably they could not make ends meet, and they needed to borrow money. Generous and sympathetic friends charged no interest, which the critics say was illegal and dishonest. This posed a problem. It is really wrong to help a friend in distress without charging for the service? Those loans, the critics continue, are related to Meese's influence in appointments to the Reagan staff. It matters not that the persons concerned were on the Reagan staff while he was governor of California and were appointed by Reagan when he became president. Meese simply was not involved, but he's accused of influence peddling. Throughout this with hunt President Reagan is standing solidly behind Meese. Hopefully his support will prevent dismissal of his capable and worthy friend. But whether or not, we can feel confident the liberals will not have the last word. This story, like school prayer, deserves ardent conservative discussion in the coming political campaign.

TV is anti-business

ONE OF the most dangerous characteristics of media lack of objectivity, is its obvious anti-business bias. Business is nothing more than the collective commercial or industrial enterprises in the market economy which produce, transport, buy and sell goods and services.

Businesses are the means by which we produce economic growth, so that everyone can enjoy a high level of living. When the media disparages business, it is helping to create an anti-capitalist public opinion. This tends to make people susceptible to Socialist propaganda, and Socialism is the route to poverty and slavery.

The media is extremely powerful in society, because it largely determines what a person believes — and what a person believes determines how he will act. How people act is crucial in today's world, and has been throughout history.

Abraham Lincoln once addressed himself to his subject when he said, "With public sentiment, nothing can fail; without it nothing can succeed. Consequently, he who molds public sentiment goes deeper than he who enacts statutes or pronounces decisions."

The media has a noble role to play when it factually, honestly, and objectively reports the news or portrays our family, social and business institutions in art forms. But it plays a destructive, ignoble role when it practices adversary and advocacy journalism or "entertainment", presenting biased information.

Lawyer-journalist Ben Stein interviewed the writers and producers who determine what we will see on prime-time television. He found most of these people are anti-business. That most certainly shows up in their programs.

Media Institute analyzed fifty top prime-time shows and found a definite anti-business bias. They found two-thirds of "corporate characters are portrayed as foolish, greedy, or criminal... Almost half of all work activities performed by businessmen involve illegal acts... Television almost never portrays business as a socially useful or economically productive activity."

A study done for the American Enterprise Institute, and released this year, found those prominent television writers, producers, and executives whose programs are seen by all of us, are "politically liberal" and have moral views which are sharply different from mainstream America. In other words, they are immoral.

While these people are quite wealthy, "70 percent believe government should substantially reduce the income gap between rich and poor... most reject American social institutions and structures... and would like to see substantial changes in society... Two out of three believe that TV should be a major force for social reform... They... seek to move their audience toward their own vision of the good society."

What all this means then, it seems obvious, is that those who determine what we see on TV, are largely left-wingers who want to see this nation moved toward Socialism, and intend to use television as a means to accomplish this.

So much for the bad news, now for the good news: The American people are waking up! They realize they are being "brain-washed" by the media — and why! And, accordingly, their confidence in the press and TV news has dropped to an all-time low of 16 percent and 24 percent respectively.

Eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty!

Gary Lantz Looking back

I make the pilgrimage every year. Early April is a good time, because the rebud trees are in bloom and one in particular is special because I was very young when it was planted. The first pink buds were an occasion I marked on my mental calendar if not on any written one. It is still there and it still buds every spring. Some things endure; others fade into memory, some to simple dust.

The house is no longer standing, although fragments of rotten two-by-fours and rusted nails remain to prove it did. Some of the trees remain, mostly as skeletons: the acreage has reverted to rangeland, sprayed with herbicides it seems more a graveyard now than the timbered headwaters of a prairie stream.

The simple milkshed is also fallen down, yet behind where it stood I can still find the grave of a favorite hunting dog we marked with flowers — a formal ceremony for a rather informal dog. But when you're ten, and young friends converge over footpaths from as much as a mile away, then the ceremony is just.

And the horseborn too is gone; blown down, burned up, the tin recycled by local ranchers, the rest returned to the earth. But I found a single horseshoe, nailed long ago to a post still standing in a thicket of wild plum. The horse was a big, "flea-bitten" grey, fast and the envy of the community. Anyway, of those 14 years of age. I ran him one mile every morning before school. And it was, while it lasted, a pure and perfect freedom.

On one trip back, I saw an eagle circling overhead. A good omen if you believe in such things, which I do. I also found a badger burrowing in the creekbank and several covays of quail sheltered where the roses have spread. The place is going back, the land reclaiming its own, "dust to dust."

My memories make the old home place beautiful, but in a way, I find it more beautiful to see the old order, the natural order, prevail. Nothing we build can last; where the concrete cracks, flowers grow. We tease ourselves with arrogance and pride, but time takes little heed of our illusions. What prevails is simply the spirit of the place, and it is that I return in search of.

One-hundred yards below where the house stood the spring still runs, and I can still follow the faint trail where my mother carried pails of water. Cattails grow there now, and my mother draws water from a spigot. She remembers those days, yet she does not dwell upon them.

She was neither a martyr nor a pioneer, but simply a young wife with babies in need of bathing. We do what we have to do, then we move on. The spring still runs, and maybe someday again someone will dip a pail there. For time encircles us all.

I go back to that place because it was there I learned to love the land, and I go back to reaffirm my faith in the land. I have changed much; a little for the good, and much, I realize when I go back there, for the bad. In my absence from the land I lose my faith in the true and simple things that mater. But the land endures. It bears the scars of bad usage, but it struggles to heal and restore the ageless order.

Men have come and gone from that place, taking much and returning little, hoping to build a bank account or maybe buy a new suit. But it all seems of less significance when I find an arrowhead by the spring. They left chipped flint, we left rusty nails.

Pilgrimages are as old as man's quest for spiritual fulfillment. Many are long and agonizing journeys, made seemingly more holy by great hardship. Mine is but a simple drive.

Nothing exists there anymore, nothing of the old home place except the pages of memories I carry in my mind. The forests of my childhood are now scrubby oaks, the stream a meager trickle from a cattail-shaded spring.

The place was always poor by anyone's standards, good only to feed a couple of range cattle. If that is the proper manner for measuring good. More-and-more I don't bother anymore. I am pleased I was born there, pleased I was free to wander alone and to learn. In some manner the land imparted something, some part of its spirit. Nails rust away and wells go dry, but the wild plum creeps back and because that land became a part of me I can understand why now.

Sometimes, when I am away from the land, pride, arrogance, greed, avarice, self-esteem and all the other temporary insanities of man have their way. And they wear away at whatever real values I might have gained, just as the nails weaken in rotting wood. But still the wild plum thickets grow. It is good to see, a good place to go back to. It takes the shrillness out of all the voices, makes them small again. And it makes them seem so very far away...

Morton Museum will exhibit Texas constitutions since 1938

Texans have lived under six state constitutions since 1836. A seventh comes up for consideration from time to time.

Some have been lasting, others short-lived. Some have been good, some bad.

A major exhibition on Texas constitutions in the form of a lavishly illustrated essay will open in the Morton Museum on April 15, 1984. It will close on May 14, 1984.

The exhibition is a production of the Institute of Texas Cultures in San Antonio. It tells the story of Texas's constitutions as it never has been told before. Named simply "Texas and Her Constitutions" the show reviews the times and men who shaped the constitutions, and the way each shaped the lives of Texans in its time.

In a representative government, the constitution is the strongest, most sustained expression of the will of the people on matter of law. Any law or government action conflicting with it can be reversed under the onerous term, "unconstitutional."

The exhibition consists of 36 panels, each three feet by seven feet high. The size of the show makes it convenient for many people to read it at the same time.

It begins by saying that even before there was a Texas Constitution, Texans, as citizens of Mexico, lived under consitutional government. The Mexican federal constitution of 1824 and the Coahuila-Texas Constitution of 1827 shaped the course of history which led to the separation from Mexico, and the establishment of the Republic of Texas.

"Texans might well have remained Mexican citizens forever, except for the machinations of a politically ambitious soldier, General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna," the show reads.

High drama connected with constitutions is laid out in intriguing detail when the show tells of how Texans wrested control of their government from Northern sympathizers toward the end of Reconstruction.

A part of The University of Texas System, the Institute is a learning and communication center for Texas history, culture and folklore. In addition to traveling exhibits, the Institute produces slide shows, video cassettes, and books for statewide distribution.

Morton Museum, located at the corner of Dixon and Pecan Streets in Gainesville, is open Tuesday through Saturday from 12:00 until 5:00 p.m. and Sunday from 2:00 until 5:00 p.m. The public is invited to visit this interesting exhibit.

Olney Savings started in 1927, has grand opening

Olney Savings extends an invitation to all to attend the grand opening of its Gainesville office Saturday, April 7, 10 to 3 o'clock at 1000 N. Grand Ave.

Along with a show of facilities and refreshments and an Easter bunny giving chocolate eggs to the kids, the event will have attendance prizes and penny a pound donations to the Gainesville Boys Club for weights of the visitors.

Olney Building and Loan Association originated in July, 1927, the outgrowth of a golf course conversation among Olney businessmen and L.C. Boyd, then manager of a savings and loan in Decatur, Texas. Boyd led the Association as president from its inception until his retirement in 1963; he was managing officer from 1927 until 1961.

Olney Building and Loan Association operated under a State charter until 1935, when it became a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. At that time it secured a Federal charter and the name was changed to Olney Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Although times were hard in the early 1930's, Olney Federal fared well. Only four distressed mortgages were transferred to the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and minimal losses of $1,108 occurred between 1932 and 1935. Olney Federal continued to pay dividends during the depression. Starting with assets of $25,622, $102,257, and $166,271 Historic Overview of Olney Savings Association's development of Electra Savings, a Division of Olney Savings Association. Assets in 1978 totaled $110 million.

Three new branch offices were opened, and two mergers and one branch purchase took effect in 1981. New branches were opened in Graham, Archer City, and Wichita Falls. Provident Savings and Loan Association of Brownwood and First Federal Savings and Loan of Vernon were merged into Olney Savings Association, and Bowie branch was purchased from First Texas Savings Association of Dallas.

Also in 1981 came the death of Don McClatchy, President and Chief Executive Officer of Olney Savings since 1963. In addition to the dynamic leadership he gave Olney Savings, McClatchy was active in civic, educational, youth, and business-related organizations. Among the offices and directorships he had held were the following: President, Texas Savings and Loan League and National Savings and Loan League; Director, Savings Systems Corporation, Tigor Mortgage Insurance Co., First National Bank of Bridgeport, Hankamar School of Business of Baylor University, and two time director and vice chairman, Federal Home Loan Bank of Little Rock. McClatchy was succeeded by Alan D. Myers, Jr., a 22 year employee of Olney Savings, who had most recently served as Executive Vice President and Chief Operations Officer.

The first floor of the home office building was destroyed by fire December 26, 1981. The building was completely renovated, and a nearby building was remodeled to provide 7,000 square feet of office space for the accounting department. Although employees were displaced for periods ranging from twelve to fifteen months because of the fire, not one day of business was lost.

During 1982, Decatur Savings, including its branches in Boyd and Bridgeport, was merged into Olney Savings Association; a branch office in Throckmorton was purchased from First Security Savings of Abilene; and branches in Albany, Anson, Cisco, and Coleman were purchased from United Savings of Texas. Branch locations were approved for Gainesville and Crowell. Crowell opened their doors in September 1983 and Olney Savings begin serving the community of Gainesville March 12, 1984.

A full service family financial center, Olney Savings offers a wide range of checking and savings accounts, consumer loans, mortgage loans, retirement plans and commercial services. Special services that are available include night depository, drive-in windows, direct deposit of government checks, traveler's checks, money orders, notary service and loan payment drafts.

A branch location for Saginaw was approved March 28, 1983 and the Holiday Branch of United Savings of Texas was purchased effective April 1, 1983. Application to convert from a mutual to a stock association was filed by with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board on April 28, 1983. The Conversion was complete in November of 1983.

Olney Savings is a $700 million savings and loan association with branch offices in Olney, Seymour, Jacksboro, Nocona, Azle, Weatherford, Graham, Archer City, Bowie, Brownwood, Crowell, Wichita Falls, Vernon, Gainesville, Holliday, Decatur, Boyd, Throckmorton, Anson, Albany, Cisco, Coleman and Bridgeport. Also Ranger Savings in Ranger, Eastland Savings in Eastland, and Electra Savings in Electra. All are Divisions of Olney Savings.

This front entrance of the handsome new Olney Savings Building at 1000 N. Grand in Gainesville will welcome visitors to the firm's grand opening of its Gainesville office on Saturday, the 7th 10 to 3. Olney Savings, originated in July 1927, has branch offices in 26 cities.

ON MAY 5th, 1984 VOTE FOR
STATE REPRESENTATIVE
DISTRICT 63

I continue to identify the pressing issues affecting our district. You should demand a firm commitment from your representative. I am committed to this race in part because I believe all elected officials should discuss openly and publicly a course of action to confront the issues. This is my pledge to the voter — commitment and hard work. Representative Bill Coody was never shy about expressing his viewpoint and I intend to follow his example. Waste disposal, long range water planning and public utility regulation will be discussed in Austin in 1985. Take advantage of my ten years as a successful small business owner by allowing me to express your viewpoint in Austin. Let my experience in dealing with people and organizational problems work to your benefit. Common sense and practical experience — a good combination.

● WASTE DISPOSAL ●

Several items fit into this category — Toxic and non-toxic waste, solid and liquid waste including sewage disposal. Currently, we have little control locally concerning the location of waste disposal sites. The Texas Department of Health and the Texas Department of Water Resources can overrule local decisions. I WILL SUPPORT LEGISLATION TO RETURN RESPONSIBILITY FOR LOCATION OF WASTE DISPOSAL SITES TO THE COUNTY LEVEL. Let the State set the specifications but leave the authority to select the site with the people that are directly affected. Concerning toxic and nuclear waste, I WILL VIGOROUSLY SUPPORT LEGISLATION TO REQUIRE THE MOST STRINGENT SAFETY MEASURES. Concerning rural sewage, primarily in rapidly developing new sub divisions, we run the risk of destroying our water table and ground water by non-regulated disposal of rural sewage. I WILL SUPPORT LEGISLATION TO SET MINIMUM SAFETY STANDARDS FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL. Nobody wants to limit government bureaucracy anymore than I, but protection of our water table is critical in rural areas and even now, we don't have sufficient ground water to lose any of it by neglect.

● LONG RANGE WATER PLANNING ●

It's time to act on the anticipated shortage of fresh water. Earlier I discussed the explosive population growth situation in Texas and this growth will put increasing pressure on available fresh water supplies. FIRST, I WILL SUPPORT LEGISLATION TO ENCOURAGE CONSERVATION OF EXISTING FRESH WATER SUPPLIES. For example, State funded appropriations to control flood water to maximize water storage and treatment of existing non-portable water. SECOND, I WILL SUPPORT LEGISLATION TO ALLOW BONDS (supported by the State) TO BE SOLD BY LOCAL POLITICAL SUB-DIVISIONS TO PROVIDE FUNDS FOR WATER DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS — new storage facilities and transportation agreements for example. THIRD, I WILL SUPPORT THE EFFORTS OF OUR AGRICULTURE DEPT. TO RESEARCH NEW AND BETTER METHODS TO EFFECTIVELY IRRIGATE CROPLANDS WITH EXISTING SUB-SURFACE WATER.

● PUBLIC UTILITY REGULATION ●

The legislature regularly develops law to deal with public utilities — electric, gas and telephone. These are businesses and as such, with ten years experience as a business man I can cut through the BULL and get to the heart of the problem. FIRST, I SUPPORT REGIONAL HEARINGS OF THE PUBLIC UTILITY COMMISSION. This will allow a greater number of citizens to have input at the local level and witness rate regulation at the local level. SECOND, I WILL SUPPORT LEGISLATION TO REQUIRE UTILITIES TO JUSTIFY EXPANSION OF FACILITIES THAT ARE PAID FOR NOW BUT NOT NEEDED UNTIL SOME POINT IN THE FUTURE. THIRD, I WILL OPPOSE LEGISLATION THAT THREATENS SMALLER COMMUNITIES WITH UNUSUALLY HIGH UTILITY RATES DUE TO A LACK OF POPULATION GROWTH. FINALLY, I WILL USE MY MANAGEMENT ABILITIES TO REVIEW ALL UTILITY LEGISLATION TO ASSURE EFFICIENCY AND GOOD MANAGEMENT.
