4-H, FFA show set March 10

Muenster youths will get a chance to put their animals in front of a judge March 10 at the annual 4-H and FFA livestock show.

The show, which will be held in the parking lot south of the Muenster High School football field on a Sunday, will begin at 2 in the afternoon. Trophies and ribbons will be awarded on the spot to animals winning their divisions.

Show organizer Barbara Bayer said Wednesday they are expecting around 22 steers, 19 dairy heifers, 15 feeder calves, four hogs, three heifers and maybe even a rabbit.

Thirty-three 4-H members are scheduled to show animals along with a dozen or more FFA students.

Weigh-in for all animals will begin at 12:30 p.m. and be cut off at 1:45. The alternate site for the show, in case of bad weather, is the county barn just west of Gainesville.

Finally, Edwin Meese has received the Senate's endorsement to become President Reagan's appointee to the office of US attorney general. The approving vote by an insulating count of only 63-31 came after a 13 month witch hunt during which spiteful political enemies exhausted all possibilities to find some substance in the many attacks on his character and principles. As a last resort they organized a filibuster by farm state senators demanding action on the agricultural credit crisis as a condition to allowing the final vote on the Meese appointment.

As regards the filibuster, it seems to be unnecessary and insulting to the president. He has assured the country that he's working hard to give farmers a break, and that his goal is to relieve them of government interference and regulation and restore a free market to the farm industry while eliminating some of the high cost of the current program. Very likely those who prefer to lean on the government are leading the objections. But on the other hand the president is well known for integrity and judgment. No one can deny that he's seeking the best solution and does not deserve to have the issue used in spite against a very worthy and unrelated appointment.

Getting back to Meese, an interesting observation in the Washington Post is that the man is out of place in Washington, that he's not one of the familiar types. "He is a man from another culture...he is a zealous law-and-order man...he's a fierce defender of free enterprise and business... he grew up in modest, middle-class surroundings, the son of an Oakland tax collector. He escaped to a bigger world, winning a scholarship to Yale, then graduating from law school in Berkeley, but he made no attempt to move into higher society. Instead he became an assistant DA.

He was one of those persecutors who loves to ride around in police cars...he seems to share a policeman's view of the world. He often speaks to police groups in their kind of language...Well into his 40s, Meese gave up one weekend a month and two weeks a year to the Army reserve, which he also loved." Generally speaking, he's our kind of guy, and people who speak ill of him are actually revealing a lack of the right basics.

Another sign of being a misfit in the DC atmosphere, Meese isn't rich, nor socially or politically influential, nor an advocate of legal

Deadline nears for candidates

Elections draw little interest

Midnight Wednesday is the deadline for filing in city and school board elections throughout the state.

Several area races — including the Muenster city council — were still in need of candidates with just a week left in the filing period.

In Muenster, only incumbent Willie Wimmer has announced his intention to seek re-election. Wimmer's term, along with those of mayor Ronnie Felderhoff and councilman Ted Henscheid, expires next month.

As of Wednesday, however, Felderhoff and Henscheid had not filed to run again, and no other candidates had entered the race for any of the three at-large positions.

In the Muenster school board race, the three incumbents — board president Joe Hellman and trustees Harold Bindel and Dickie Pagel — have all filed for re-election. No challengers were in the race as of Wednesday. Those wishing to file should contact City Hall for the city council race or the school administrative office for the school board race. By state law, the filing period closes at midnight Wednesday.

Voting for all the elections will be April 6.

Other races across the area looked like this:

Lindsay school board: Incumbent Carol Fuhrmann filed last week to seek her first full three-year term on the board. With board president Frank Sandmann stepping down, the only announced candidate for his position is Dr. Jim Neidhart.

Era school board: Incumbents Lanny Lewter and Harold Brown are seeking re-election, so far with no opposition.

Public School Week observances slated

Next week marks Texas Public Schools Week in Muenster and throughout the state.

MISD superintendent Charles Coffey said an open house is planned at Muenster schools on Tuesday night, from 7 to 9 p.m. All classrooms throughout the buildings will be open to the public, and parents and guests are encouraged to visit their children's classrooms, view their work and visit with their teachers.

Also on Tuesday night, the school's annual Arts & Crafts show will be going on in the gymnasium and will be open to the public for viewing.

Coffey noted that parents and relatives are welcome to visit the school any time during classes on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, or eat lunch with their children if they so desire. Classes will be dismissed Thursday and Friday as the student's "mini-break" begins.

Parents who plan to visit for lunch should let their children know so that teachers may get a count in the morning for cafeteria personnel, Coffey said.

Commissioners to rule on use of roads

by Bob Buckel
Cooke County commissioners will hold a special meeting Monday to decide whether Pro Rally racers will be allowed to use short sections of public road near Muenster for their March 9 event.

Rally organizers Roger Gibson and Gary Davis, along with Muenster Chamber of Commerce president John Fisher, met with the commissioners Monday to request permission to use county roads to stage part of the Red River Rally.

But rally organizers stressed that the fate of the event does not hang in the balance. While failure to win the commissioners' approval would not cancel the rally, it would mean all of the events except the Rally-sprint — which will take place on an ungraded city street in front of Muenster High School — would be held on private roads within Prentiss Harris' Red River Motorcycle Park north of Marysville. "We do have the rally in place," chairman Roger Gibson told the commissioners. "As it stands now, it is all on private roads. What we're trying to do is enhance the event and add more mileage, with the idea of making it a national event next year."

County judge Jim Robertson raised questions, however, about safety, insurance coverage, the county's liability in case of an accident and even the legality of the event.

"I don't mean to throw cold water on all this, but I would want some assurances that the county wouldn't be held liable if someone got hurt or cattle got killed or something," Robertson said. "I would like to see an insurance policy before I make a decision, and I'd like to see written permission from everybody who lives on the road."

Even then, Robertson added, he would still "like to sit and think about it" before approving the use of public roads.

"Sometimes insurance companies don't pay off," he noted. "I think we're sticking our neck out when we do this." He also said he would like to see a local agent handling the insurance.

Davis, a Dallas accountant who serves as scorer for the rally, explained that the event's $10 million insurance policy is purchased through the Sports Car

"Vanities" now on stage in Gainesville

The Butterfield Stage Players' final production of the season will go on stage tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 at the playhouse at Main and Denton in Gainesville.

"Vanities" deals with changes over an 11-year span in the lives of three high school girlfriends. From the opening scene in a high school gym in the fall of 1963, the play moves to a college sorority house five years later, then winds up six years later with a reunion at one of the girls' apartments.

The cast includes Kathy, "the strong one," played by Bridget Head, "innocent by choice," Joanne, played by Danna Johnson, and "avant-garde" Mary, played by Mary-Larsson-Gwyn. Lynette Kirk, drama teacher at Callisburg High School, is director of the production.

The play will run Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, then return for another Thursday-through-Saturday run next weekend. Tickets may be reserved by calling the box office, 665-8152, between the hours of 2 and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday or 10 a.m. to noon Saturday.

Appraisal District files delinquent tax lawsuits

The first round of delinquent tax suits has been filed by the Cooke County Tax Appraisal District, according to chief appraiser Pat Dennis.

Dennis and attorney R.J. Hagood of Sherman filed the suits, mostly dealing with vehicles and personal property items, in district court in Gainesville recently and have already received some judgements on people who did not reply to the lawsuits.

"Some people feel like if they don't pay their taxes on these items (cars, personal property)

Oak Creek to purchase land

Oak Creek Homes has opted to purchase a tract of land on the south side of Highway 82 to build their new 80,000 square-foot manufacturing plant.

The company now builds mobile and modular housing in a plant on airport property north of 82, which is owned by the city of Gainesville.

Monday, representatives of the Cooke County Industrial Authority requested and received permission from the county commissioners to increase the amount of Oak Creek's industrial revenue bond issue from $1.89 million to $1.99 million to cover the cost of land acquisition.

The site, at the southeast corner of the intersection of Highway 82 and FM 1201, replaces the city-owned site at the airport which the company had planned to lease on a long-term basis.

The commissioners approved Oak Creek's bonds on November on the recommendation of the Industrial Authority. The expansion will create 60 additional jobs for the company increasing its annual payroll to around $4 million.

Bank contracts approved Also Monday, the commissioners gave their approval to a series of "depository contracts" with four county banks, continuing a policy of spreading the county's money around.

The banks pledged securities to cover any county deposits in excess of $100,000 — the limit of FDIC insurance coverage.

First State Bank pledged

$1,665,000, Gainesville National Bank pledged $1,285,000, Valley View National pledged $817,425 and Muenster State Bank pledged $700,000, noting that addition securities would be pledged if needed.

North Texas Bank & Trust did not submit a bid.

The amount pledged is merely to guarantee the safety of the county's deposit, and does not correspond to the amount of money the county has in each bank.

The depository contracts were sought after none of the county banks submitted a bid on the county's specifications.

Bob Buckel

Have cause, will travel ...

It seems that these days everybody wants to win more than they want anything else. I'm not sure why, but that makes me uneasy.

This thought crept up the other day while I was watching television. A commercial came on, urging me to watch the upcoming Academy Awards program and telling me who was nominated, who was likely to win, etc.

I remembered a past Oscar ceremony when George C. Scott refused his award for "Patton" because he didn't believe actors should be in competition with each other. He said he didn't make movies for the purpose of winning awards, didn't want the award and wouldn't take it if they gave it to him. They did, and he didn't.

Then there was the year Marlon Brando sent a young American Indian girl to turn down his award for him. She went up in full native dress and told the crowd Brando was bypassing the ceremony to call attention to the plight of the Indians up in South Dakota or somewhere.

I don't pretend to know those guys' real motives, but those were worthwhile gestures. They gave up some glory in order to make a point they believed in. Things like that don't happen much nowadays, in Hollywood or anywhere else. Winning is back in vogue.

Madison Avenue throws nothing but winners at us all day long, sculpting our mental image of what makes a person worthwhile. Winners smile at us from the front of Wheaties boxes; they zip down mountainsides on skis, run, hang-glide, break-dance — successful and supremely self-confident. A lady in a soup commercial announces her steely goal of winning her first 10K race. A businessman rows his racing shell on the icy river to maintain "that winning edge."

We've become a society of upwardly-mobile self-cheerleaders. There is no room for losers and no time for failures. The only statement most people want to make is that of good old Muhammad Ali: "I am the greatest!"

Ali, always a social activist, would seem humble by today's standards.

I realize I'm probably longing for the return of something that never existed, but it seems there have been times in this country's history when causes were more eagerly taken up, more righteously and passionately defended.

Whether it was saving baby seals and blue whales, fighting against slavery or unfair labor practices, war or racial prejudice or pollution, it seemed that once upon a time people looked outside themselves occasionally for grand crusades rather than devoting themselves to firm tummies, tax loopholes and impressive resumes.

The few real crusaders leftover from the 60's seem today more like anachronisms than heroes, humorous relics of our radical past. The typical activist these days is a well-paid lobbyist in Washington, pulling down a tidy salary while defending the downtrodden.

I'm not completely nostalgic about the 60's (although the music was much better) but I can't help feeling I'd rather see a thousand people out on the White House lawn than a few guys in suits inside, having lunch with cabinet members. Just for a change, I'd like to see a whole bunch of people get all worked up over something besides their own entertainment or glorification.

Maybe it's a phase I'm going through, like when I decided to become a scientist in the fourth grade after reading a book on Louis Pasteur. But I've decided to look around for a cause of my own.

Thanks to people like James Watt, the environment still needs a lot of defending. And the whales and baby seals are still out there fighting for survival along with any number of other endangered species. Farmers could use some agitation on their behalf (from someone other than Jimmy Hightower) and there'll always be plenty of work to be done in the areas of poverty, racial prejudice, nuclear disarmament, religious freedom, etc.

I guess what I'm looking for is something bigger than my own problems, something more urgent than improving my self-concept — a battle so important that it must be fought despite the odds.

Something more important than winning.

If that doesn't get me out of step with the world, nothing will.

Dear Editor

Several weeks ago Dear Abby ran some 1980 statistics designed to show why we need gun control, presumably because the availability of guns inevitably results in more murders and other violent crime.

Well, how does Dear Abby explain the steady decline of the 1980 homicide rate of 10.2 per 100,000 to 9.1 in 1982 while approximately 2.5 million new handguns each year were going into private hands?

Why didn't Dear Abby include the Mexican homicide rate which is five-and-a-half times greater than that of the U.S.? Maybe it doesn't count that the Mexican murder rate with knives is three times greater than the U.S. handgun homicide rate. Maybe Dear Abby left Mexico out of the account because the country is like a huge Morton Grove — it's illegal for private citizens to have handguns.

For Dear Abby to support gun control she has to assume that control reduces guns in circulation which, in turn, reduces crime. The facts clearly don't support Dear Abby's wishes.

One thing we know works. Keeping violent criminals off the street and executing murderers keeps them from preying upon new victims.

State Capitol Highlights

AUSTIN—When the Legislative leadership asked state agencies last year to prepare for a major belt-tightening, most responded with pleas for more aid, a reflection that budget realities had not yet sunk in.

That was never the case with State Comptroller Bob Bullock, the man constitutionally charged with keeping his finger on state government's economic pulse.

Last week, instead of asking for more money, Bullock returned $4.7 million to the Legislature, saying he had tightened his agency's belt and could "live without" the money.

He has set the example for fiscal behavior that the budget leadership hoped other agency heads would display.

"It's a pleasure to be here," Bullock told the Senate Finance Committee last week. "I've come here to give you $4.7 million back. That is $4.7 million the Legislative Budget Board recommended for us which we can live without."

Fiscal Warning

At the same hearing, Bullock warned senators of a continuing fiscal crisis for Texas government that is just starting and "it will be worse in two years."

Bullock also told senators that even though he recently terminated 11 district offices and 149 employees, he expected to bring $34.5 million in added revenues to the state due to automation and pay raises for well-trained employees.

This recent action by Bullock provides a dramatic contrast between him and Gov. Mark White, whom Bullock once hoped to replace. White campaigned on a theme of "no new taxes," but once in office he promoted a record $4.6 billion tax increase. Bullock has forecast fiscal conservatism and tightened his own belt first as an example for others to follow.

Ruffled Feathers

White, for his part, spent some time last week trying to make amends with state senators who felt left out of his appointments process.

Some feathers were ruffled because senators felt White did not consult with them enough in making his selections. After a meeting with Senate deans Oscar Mauzy and Chet Brooks, White agreed to hire a liaison between his office and the senate.

Name Withdrawn

Meanwhile, former State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo told friends he withdrew his name from consideration for an appointment to the State Board of Insurance because he was tired of waiting on word from Mark White and decided he did not need the job.

Simpson was the highly respected chairman of the House Committee on Insurance and a conservative Democrat during his legislative tenure.

Mattox Trial

The felony commercial bribery trial of Jim Mattox closed its first week of testimony in which prosecutors attempted to establish that Mattox had indeed threatened to end the multi-million dollar bond business of a Houston law firm.

J. Wiley Caldwell, who heads the bond division of the Fulbright & Jaworski firm and was a top political fund raiser for Mattox in '82, was the chief witness who testified that Mat-tox "threatened war" over their lawyer's attempt to question Mattox's sister in an unrelated case.

Other witnesses testified they had no evidence that Mattox ever delayed approval of their bond issues during that period, until Thursday when Mattox's former bond chief told the Court Mattox had instructed him to hold the F&J bonds until further orders.

Other interesting highlights of the week included:

—North Texas farmer Noel Cowling became the first announced candidate to challenge Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, and Amarillo state Sen. Bill Sarpalius confirmed he is seriously thinking of adding his name to the list.

Hightower responded "if you want to take me on, you better strap yourself to the saddle."

—Texas Monthly reporter Paul Burka, who writes the controversial "Ten Best/Ten Worst Legislators" column, has advised the Legislature to abolish the state's two black universities, Prairie View A&M and Texas Southern, saying the state could save $44 million.

—A survey conducted for the Texas Education Agency indicated that Texas school districts raised local property taxes an average 15 percent to help pay for the state's new massive school reforms last year.

—Another poll reflected that 75 percent of Texans approve of their local schools.

—H. Ross Perot, the Dallas billionaire who headed the education reform committee, suggested the creation of a new panel to overhaul higher education.

For starters, Perot would cut out "junk course like the history of rock and roll."

enemies kept digging for reasons to claim that the "misfit" did not belong in government. The country has learned that he's a right kind of guy whom the corrupt accuse of corruption, an honest man who has a hard time defending himself because he doesn't know how to get down in the dirt with his foes.

Summarizing briefly, Meese is against quotas, busing, high taxes and welfare for people who can work but refuse to. He favors the civil rights of crime victims and a tough policy to criminals. He's on the political hit list of Common Cause and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Meese comes to the attorney general's office with the prime qualifications for his job. He is firmly grounded in the law of God and the law of his country. That, plus his own integrity will assist the country enormously in restoring its original high standards.

Dr. George S. Benson

On what to do ...

OVER THE past two centuries the historians have warned us of the fate of previous democratic societies. Interesting, but does this have any relevance to us today? Is there a relationship between our worsening national budget/deficit situation and our changed philosophy of government?

When this nation was founded, and for a century and a half after, our people believed that personal well-being was matter of individual responsibility. But beginning with the New Deal, and accelerating with the advent of the so-called Great Society, our people began to believe their welfare was the responsibility of "government."

Our long-time very good friend, Dr. Hans Sennholz, chairman of the Department of Economics at Grove City College, summarized the condition which exists today in his monograph, Inflation, or Gold Standard:

"Even the noblest politicians and civil servants can no longer be expected to resist the public clamor for social benefits and welfare. The political pressure that is brought to bear on democratic governments is rooted in the popular ideology of government welfare and economic redistribution. It inevitably leads to a large number of spending programs that place heavy burdens on the public treasury.

"By popular demand, weak administrations seeking to prolong their power embark upon massive spending and inflating in order to build a 'new society' or provide a 'better deal.' The people are convinced that government spending can give them full employment, prosperity, and economic growth.

"When the results fall far short of expectations, new programs are demanded and more government spending is initiated. When social and economic conditions grow even worse, the disappointments breed more radicalism, cynicism, nihilism, and above all, bitter social and economic conflict. And all along the enormous increase of taxes, chronic budget deficits and rampant inflation."

We are not here simply wringing hands in despair. Rather, we are looking realistically at conditions which exist, conditions which, if not corrected, will lead to the destruction of this Republic. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan recently stated, "The economy of the country is almost as important as our defense against outside enemies, and with these huge deficits we could be in danger of losing our economy." But what to do? We think there is but one answer: There must be a significant change in the attitude of the American people, and through them of the Congress, as to the proper purpose of government! In his recent "swan song" as he left the House of Representatives, Congressman Ron Paul said:

"Most importantly, a new attitude about the role of government is necessary if we expect to solve our problems. As long as we, as a nation, accept the notion that government is the ultimate provider and world policeman, implementing the elusive concept of liberty will be impossible..."

"The strict limitation of government power imposed by the Constitution must be respected. We must accept the principle that Government's function is not to regulate and plan the economy, protect us from ourselves, arbitrarily attempt to make us better people, or police the world by interfering in the internal affairs of other nations. Its proper function in a free society is to protect liberty and provide for a common defense. When that proper role is assumed, our problems will vanish."

Benson is president of the National Education Program, based in Okla. City.

Rally organizers seek use of county roads

Club of America, the national organization which sanctions it, and is underwritten by a large national company.

"Auto racing insurance is a very specialized type of policy," he said. "I doubt if any of your local agents will want to touch it — there are only a few in the country who deal with this type of insurance."

Gibson said the policy had not been finalized because all the entries were not in. He promised, however, to have the county named as an insured and to bring the policy to the commissioners once it was finalized.

As to the legality of racing on public roads, a Department of Public Safety officer present at the meeting read the law which clearly states such events are illegal.

There is, however, a catch. Although state law forbids racing on public roads, the law is open to interpretation due to the fact that race organizers plan to close the road during the competition, Gibson said. DPS headquarters in Austin told Gibson the law could allow racing on public roads if those roads were closed and traffic controlled during the race.

"What it boils down to is, if the local people want it to come off, it will come off," Gibson said. "If they don't, it won't."

Gibson explained that rally organizers would make use of extensive procedures to control traffic on the private roads, should they be used for the event. People would be posted at all access points, with walkie-talkie communications, and the roads would be closed for no more than an hour overall.

"If somebody wants in there, we'll ask them to wait a couple of minutes while we shut the race down, then we'll let them in. They have a legal right to go in there," he said. "Of course we would have permission from the people who live on the road. If somebody doesn't want it, we won't come in. Usually they bring out their lawn chairs and sit in the driveway to watch the cars go by."

The sections of road to be used would be no more than one or two miles long, he noted. Cars in rally racing do not go "wheel-to-wheel" but are started at one-minute intervals and race against the clock over rough terrain.

Gibson brought a map showing several unpaved county roads in precinct four which would, he said, be "ideal" for rally racing.

"We don't mean to be putting any pressure on the court, coming this late," he said. "We have the same courses laid out on private roads, but the event has expanded more than we'd ever dreamed. Had we known we were going to be at this level for this event, we'd have done all this homework last year."

The commissioners, after hearing a description of rally racing,

Tower use studied

Cooke County Emergency Medical Services director Don Rice is studying alternatives to EMS use of a privately-owned radio tower after being told last week that rental rates have been increased.

Rice told the commissioners tower owner Roy L. McDaniel had indicated he was raising the charge from $120 to $160 a month for the service's two antennas, due to "dramatic increases" in taxes and the cost of electricity.

"It's my personal opinion that this is an unnecessary increase," Rice said. "We've got tower space of our own we can use that will allow us to get by without it (McDaniel's tower)."

Rice noted the sheriff's department has an open spot on their radio tower where the EMS antenna could be installed. The other antenna on McDaniel's tower is for paging doctors, a service EMS provides to the hospital but would like to be rid of.

Rice suggested the county put the EMS antenna either on the sheriff's tower or another county-owned tower at the Poor Farm, and see if the hospital will take over the paging service and operate it out of the emergency room.

The cost of placing EMS base antenna on another tower would be $1,500 to $2,000, he said, but it would save the county about $4,000 a year in tower and phone line rental fees.

Rice was asked to talk to hospital representatives and see if they might be willing to take on the paging service if the county gives them the equipment. Currently they pay EMS $20 a month for each of the 11 doctors who are on the service.

Also in Monday's meeting, the commissioners: — approved the final plat of Woodlawn Acres off FM 3164 southeast of Woodbine;

— reappointed County Judge Jim Robertson to the Juvenile Detention Center administrative board;

— passed a resolution opposing a bill to raise fees in district clerks' offices and use the money to supplement the salaries of district judges, favoring instead a resolution calling for a smaller hike in fees with the money to be used to cover district clerks' costs of operation; that they'll never be collected," Dennis said. "We are filing lawsuits to collect these taxes, and we will file more."

The meeting went into the afternoon Monday after a lunch break.

Dennis said the Tax Appraisal District files about 50 suits at a time and works them all the way through the court before filing another round. She pointed out that the district has the power to seize personal property if taxes are not paid, but also added that they will work with taxpayers who make an effort to pay.

"We don't want to go to court with people," she said, "but it's not fair for some to pay their taxes while others don't. If there's someone who cannot pay, we will work with them any way we can on a pay-out contract."

Those with questions about their taxes, which were past-due on February 1, are urged to call the Tax Appraisal District office at 665-7651 in Gainesville.

DISTRICT CLERK BOBBIE CALHOUN stands behind the county's antiquated "jury wheel" which holds the names of all registered voters who are eligible for jury duty. Calhoun plans to computerize the juror selection process soon, leaving the wheel a thing of the past.

Process helps ensure justice

Jury selection strictly chance

by Diane Hill

Have you ever found a jury summons card in your mailbox, positive it was the third one you had received that year, and wondered just how the jury selection system works?

During a recent interview, District Clerk Bobbie Calhoun explained that the process starts in her office.

Every year on August 1, Calhoun receives a box of computerized cards containing the names of the county's non-exempt registered voters. These cards are locked inside the elongated, black jury wheel kept in a back room of her office.

When jurors are needed, the district clerk, in the presence of a judge and a sheriff's deputy, spins the wheel, opens it and pulls out a number of cards.

"We pick approximately 300 names a month," the district clerk explained. "Once a name is removed from the jury wheel it is not returned."

Many registered voters believe they can be called for jury duty more than once a year, but that only happens to an unlucky few. Since names in the jury wheel are changed on August 1, not January 1, an occasional individual could be called, for example, in June and then in October of the same year.

But they would not be bothered again until after August 1 of the following year.

The wheel is used to select prospective jurors for district and county court case, but there are other agencies in the county that need juries as well.

According to bailiff Royal Winters, a 14-year veteran of the county's judicial system, the Justice of the Peace can hand-pick jurors and, on occasion, has actually sent him out into the street to gather up the six people required for a J.P. jury.

When the grand jury needs jurors, a district court judge appoints a commission of five people who, in turn, choose 20 names from the voter registration list. After these names are submitted to the judge, he personally selects the 12 individuals who while serve.

District Judge Larry B. Sullivant explained that the grand jury "meets four or five times during a six-month period to determine if there is enough evidence against someone to warrant a trial."

Cases are assigned to the Justice of the Peace, County or District courts according to the amount of money involved or the degree of the crime.

The Justice of the Peace handles small claims and traffic tickets while the county court handles civil cases up to $1,000 and misdemeanor criminal cases where time is served in the county jail.

The district court accepts civil cases from $500 to infinity, domestic relations cases, crimes with sentences involving two or more years in the state penitentiary and capital murder cases.

Unless you are over the age of 65, the legal guardian of a child under the age of 10, or a full time student at a secondary school or institution of higher learning, you are required, by law, to show up for jury duty.

Once in the courtroom, it is up to the district or county judge to determine if you are qualified to sit on the jury. To qualify, you must be a resident of the county and a registered voter, can not have served on a jury for more than six days in the last six months and must be able to read and write.

In addition, you can not have a felony record or be under indictment for a felony or a theft, and you must be mentally competent.

You can be excused from jury duty for "cause". "Cause" includes medical or hearing problems and, in a few instances, extreme economic hardship.

Very few people can expect to be excused for economic reasons. "It's out of my hands," Judge Sullivant explained. "Both attorneys must agree to that kind of release and if they don't agree, I can't let anyone go."

After the judge releases those who do not meet the qualifications, the summons cards of the remaining individuals are shuffled and everyone is re-seated according to the order of the cards.

Shuffling summons cards throws an element of chance into jury selection. Since the system requires 12 jurors and attorneys can only strike or refuse 12 individuals in a civil case and 20 in a criminal case, it is likely that the jury will be picked from the people seated in the first 24-32 chairs.

The next step in the jury selection process is the lawyer's "voir dire" or beginning questions.

In a telephone interview, Lynn Grisham, a partner in the law firm of Henry, Hatcher and Grisham, discussed what lawyers are looking for in a juror.

"I am always working for the plaintiff in a civil case, and I am looking for working people and minorities, someone who is liberal, less conservative," he explained. "The defense, on the other hand, is looking for conservative, middle class jurors."

In a criminal case, it is just the opposite. "The defense is looking for minorities and liberals while the state or prosecution wants middle class, conservatives."

Lawyers use the jury summons cards to learn a prospective juror's occupation, age, marital status, spouses' name and occupation and the number of children he or she has. Then they ask questions. By inquiring into someone's social background, education, employment history or hobbies, attorneys hope to learn something about that individual's beliefs and attitudes.

"We really try to get people who will be fair," Grisham explained. "We try to exclude people (from the jury) who would hurt us more than we try to include people who would help us."

Another issue most people called to jury duty wonder about is money.

There is a small financial reimbursement for each day an individual serves: Prospective jurors make $6 while jury members receive $12.

Judge Sullivant would like to see companies pay their employees for the days they are off the job, but said, "It is not the law."

He went on to say that some companies did pay, while others made up the difference between the money paid by the court and an individual's daily wages.

"I believe the jury system is essential to a free society," he said. "It keeps the power in the hands of the people." The general populace believes judges and prosecutors set the standards, but that's not true. It's the juries across this country that set them."

Sitting on a jury is one way each of us can take an active part in our government. And if we refuse to do our part, don't we forfeit our right to complain when the system fails?

Crownover steps down

Jack Crownover, director representing the 6th District of Cooke County Electric Cooperative for the past 40 years has resigned because of his change of residence. He is moving from the Prairie Valley rural community to the city of Nocona.

Crownover became a director on January 10, 1945 and has served 22 of his 40 years on the board as its president. He has never missed an annual meeting and very few of the regular directors' meetings.

In behalf of the board, Robert Lewis, president, said "Mr. Crownover's leadership, dedication and tireless efforts to make Cooke County Electric an outstanding organization will be long remembered. He did much to bring electricity to the area, thus enabling farmers, ranchers and others to make significant progress while enjoying modern comfort and convenience."

Programming course set

The course, "Basics of Computer Programming III" will be offered by the Callisburg Community Education project beginning Wednesday, March 6, in the Callisburg computer department.

The programming class, which will meet from 6:30 to 9 p.m. on six consecutive Wednesday nights, will be taught by Louis Harvill for students who have had prior computer programming classes.

The cost of the class is $35 per person, and that includes all class materials.

Students will learn to write programs in the BASIC language.

MRS. WALLACE MORGAN
... nee Lanette Ann Lehnertz ...
McWhirter of Tyler

Lehnertz, Smith wed in Tyler

Lanette Ann Lehnertz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.M. Lehnertz of Tyler and granddaughter of Mrs. Agnes Lehnertz of Muenster, was married to Wallace Morgan Smith, on Saturday, Feb. 2. The groom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Morgan Smith of Austin.

Msgr. Milam Joseph of Tyler officiated for the double-ring ceremony in Immaculate Conception Catholic Church at noon.

Presented at the altar by her father, the bride was wearing her mother's wedding dress, doubly treasured because it was also worn by her sister, Mary Lauren on her wedding day.

The formal gown of candlelight organzine taffeta was designed with a Sabrina neckline of imported alencon lace and long fitted sleeves tapering to petal points over her wrists. The princess bodice was appliqued with alencon lace in front and fastened with miniature covered buttons in back, creating a beautiful accent for the very bouffant skirt flowing elegantly into a cathedral length train.

The bride carried her paternal grandmother's wedding prayer book with its original ivory cover and shower of ivory satin ribbons, used for the first time in November 1915 when Agnes Fette became the bride of Joe Lehnertz. The prayer book was used again for the wedding of the bride's parents and the bride's sister, Lauren Lehnertz to Bruce Faulkner, adding another treasured memory. The antique ribbons held fresh flower buds tied into the individual lovers knots.

The bride also carried the wedding rosary of a family friend, Mrs. Oscar West.

Attendants
Mary Lauren Faulkner of Denver, Colo. was her sister's matron of honor. Mary Kesser, Staley Gray, Dena Frankfurt, Amy McMurrey, Caroline Rose, Amy Painter and Carol Crowley were bridesmaids.

They wore identical gowns in a candlelight shade matching the bridal gown. Their flowers were off-white lilies and gerber daisies with a touch of peach.

The groom's father, Dr. Ralph Morgan Smith was his best man. The groom's brother, Peyton Smith and brother-in-law William Love, and Joe Young, Doug Roach, Jamie Durbin, Tim Crowley and Dr. Kelly Danks were groomsmen.

Lisa Morgan Love, niece of the groom and William Jeffrey Love, nephew of the groom were flower girl and ring bearer respectively.

Wedding music was given by Varina Johnson organist and Joe Carrell soloist.

Ushers were the bride's brother-in-law Bruce Faulkner, and William Bean, Tim Perkins and Curt Fenley.

A reception followed at Willow Brook Country club. The couple is residing in Austin since returning from a wedding trip to Kapalua Bay in Maui, Hawaii.

The bride is a graduate of Robert E. Lee High School, attended Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Virginia and is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin. She was a Lady-In-Waiting at the 1980 Texas Rose Festival in Tyler. She is the director of art production at Fellers, Lacy and Gaddis.

The groom is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin and Baylor School of Law. He is a trial attorney with Lynch, Chapell, Allday and Allsup.

reported on the football board used as a Ways and Means project. Proceeds were divided with the winner, and Asthma Foundation and Beta Kappa.

Agnes Seyler notes 84th birthday here

Mrs. Agnes Seyler's 84th birthday was observed at two events. The first was a week in advance of the actual date, when family members could be together, with Mother Mary John visiting from Jonesboro, Mary Adams visiting from Midland and Johann Bezner joining them from Gainesville.

On Feb. 25 the birthday was observed when Mrs. Seyler's daughter Johann Bezner took her to have dinner at Rohmer's Restaurant. A family friend, Fr. Leonard was a special guest.

Later in the afternoon several old friends gathered at the home of Herbert and Evelyn Meurer for birthday cake and coffee. They included Mmes. Agnes Lehnertz, Bertha Pick, the honoree and daughter Johann and the hosts.

Scouts due Ad Altare Dei awards here

Four Cooke County Boy Scouts will take part in ceremonies to be held in St. Patrick's Cathedral Sunday afternoon, March 3 at 2 p.m., when they receive the Ad Altare Dei award and medal presented by Most Rev. Bishop Joseph P. Delaney.

They are Eric Dankesreiter, 14, a member of Muenster Scout Troop 664, son of Thomas and Rosemary Dankesreiter and an 8th grader at Muenster Public School; George Spaeth, 13, of Gainesville, and a 7th grader at St. Mary's School, Jeff Walterscheid, son of Clyde and Sharon Walterscheid and an 8th grader at Muenster Public School and Murlin Evans, son of Mrs. Lupe Evans and an 8th grader at Muenster Public School — all the latter three are members of Gainesville Scout Troop 659.

As candidates for the award, they have completed all requirements, projects and tests.

Ad Altare Dei, "To the Altar of God" is the first religious award for which Boy Scouts may qualify at ages 12 to 14. The second is the Pope Pius XII award for Scouts 15-16 and the next is the St. George medal for Scouts or adults 18 to 20.

Purpose of the Ad Altare Dei program is to help Scouts develop a fully Christian way of life. The program is organized in steps based on the Seven Sacraments. These encounters with Christ are the Scouts' best means toward spiritual growth. Another purpose of the program is to equip the Scout to take his place in the world as a maturing Catholic and a maturing American.

The award is presented once a year by the bishop of the diocese.

The Ad Altare Dei program was designed by the National Catholic Committee on Scouting. The program takes six months to complete. Eric Dankesreiter completed his requirements for the Ad Altare Dei medal under direction of Sister Cecilia Marie Shannon, OSB, Counselor. He has begun work on the Pope Pius XII award and is also working toward his Eagle rank.

George Spaeth, Murlin Evans and Jeff Walterscheid completed their requirements under direction of Lupe Evans, Counselor for Ad Altare Dei in Cooke County. Preliminaries were begun early last fall following the annual retreat for Catholic Scouts at Leonard Scout Camp near Granbury, and training sessions for counselors.

Boys receiving the award invite the attendance Sunday of all scouts, past and present, and relatives and friends, to witness the ceremonies. The Scouts and their counselors hope to share with all the beauty of the program of Ad Altare Dei and the enrichment of spiritual life they gained with its meaning of "Serving God."

MUENSTER ENTERPRISE SPORTS

PRO RALLY DRIVER John Buffum powers his Triumph TR7 sports car around a turn on a typical rally road in a recent event. The car and the terrain will be similar when Pro Rallying comes to the Red River Motorcycle Park March 9 for the Red River Rally and Rallsprint.

Rally plans take shape

Plans have been finalized for the Red River Rally and Trail's End Rallsprint to be held in and around Muenster on March 9.

Sponsored by the Sports Car Clubs of America, the rally will bring as many as 40 drivers and their crews to town for an eight-state regional racing event on private roads in Prentiss Harris' Red River Motorcycle Park north of Muenster.

Kicking off the activities Friday will be a draw party for drivers and crews, during which rally videos will be shown and a drawing will be made for starting slots.

Registration opens Saturday morning at Wilde Chevrolet on East Highway 82 in Muenster. "Scrutineering" of the cars will take place from 9 to 11:30 a.m. at the auto dealership before the first timed event begins at 1 p.m.

That event, the 1.2-mile "Rallsprint," will take place on an unpaved city street in front of Muenster High School, according to race organizer Roger Gibson of Dallas. The high-performance sports cars will run the course one at a time, racing against the clock and the terrain, as an exciting warm-up for the afternoon and evening events at the motorcycle park.

There the actual rally starts at 6 p.m., with 25 miles of timed racing to take place in various stages by 11 p.m.

A party and awards presentation is scheduled at 11 p.m. in Muenster, after the event is over.

In Pro Rallying, the cars are dispatched at one-minute intervals to travel over a course they have never driven before. The driver and co-driver, who serves as a navigator, use an exciting style of driving to cover the rough roads in highly modified cars.

The Red River Rally will be the first Pro Rally in Texas in two-and-a-half years, and organizers hope to make it an annual affair — perhaps even turning it into a national event which would attract many more racers and big media coverage to the area.

Race officials appeared before the commissioners court in Gainesville Monday in hopes of securing permission to use a county road near Muenster for one stage of the afternoon rally. The outcome of that plea will be known next week.

Teams take to track

Track workouts are underway for both girls and boys in the area, with the first meet scheduled for the Muenster boys March 9 at Sadler-Southmayd.

While it's still a little early to make predictions, the Texas Track & Field News lists several area athletes as faces to watch on the track scene this year.

Senior Keith Klement of Muenster is billed as a top contender in the 3200-meter run after notching a best time of 10:45.4 last year.

Over at Sacred Heart another senior, Brett Walterscheid, is expected to do well in the weight events. Walterscheid threw the shot 48'8" last year and sailed the discus 142'8.5".

Muenster's schedule starts with the boys only entering the March 9 meet at S&S. Boys and girls teams will then enter a meet at Springtown March 16.

Muenster's district this year consists of the Hornets, Lindsay, Era, Valley View, Slidell, Ponder, Krum, Collinsville and Gunter. Coach Leonard Peters is in charge of the boys program and Charles Meurer is coaching the girls.

Sacred Heart's track season opens March 9 when both the boys and girls will travel to Bridgeport for a meet. After a March 16 meet at Coppell, they will enter the Muenster meet here March 23.

Coaching the Sacred Heart track program this year are Ron and Mike Dangelmayr.

Lindsay falls to Krum Friday

The Lindsay Knights had a hot-shooting first half, but Krum took over in the second half to send the district runner-up packing and advance in the playoffs with a 72-66 win last Friday at CCC.

Krum led early, holding a 21-15 margin after one quarter, but Lindsay charged back in the second period to lead 37-34 by halftime. They held on to lead 52-49 going into the final eight minutes, but Krum took over in the fourth quarter to outscore Lindsay 23-14 and claim the win.

Jeff Hellman led Lindsay with 19 points while Tim Carpenter turned in his best game of the year, scoring 14 points. Kevin Fuhrmann added 10, Wayne Fleitman pitched in with nine and Leroy Hermes and Scott Fleitman got seven each.

Wheat referendum set

Meeting scheduled March 7 on background

Texas wheat producers will vote in April to decide if they want to expand the check-off territory from the existing 34 counties under the jurisdiction of the Texas Wheat Producers Board.

To learn more about the upcoming wheat referendum, producers in Cooke and surrounding counties will want to attend an informational meeting sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service on March 7 at Sherman.

The meeting will be at the Silver Wings Club at Grayson County College - West Campus and will start at 7:30 p.m.

Producers will hear from an Extension economist regarding the current wheat situation, outlook and changing wheat production trends in the state. Also, the mechanics and timing of the referendum voting process will be discussed, including recent changes in the commodity referendum law.

Following these discussions, Texas Wheat Producers Board representatives will present information on the existing wheat check-off program and the potential outcome of a total statewide effort. There will be ample time for questions from producers regarding the program.
