Voter Apathy Defeated Water Plan

Metropolitan Areas Turn Down Plan

With an average of 35 percent of the area voting in the special amendment election on Tuesday, August 5, voter apathy has been blamed in the defeat of the proposed Texas Water Plan.

Although a light vote was recorded in metropolitan areas such as Houston in Harris County, ty, their vote of 67,719 against the water plan overwhelmed the 134,431 in that county who favored the plan.

In Bailey County, twenty-seven percent of the registered voters turned out to vote Tuesday, and although they favored the water plan by a margin of 80 percent, the 724 total was far below the 2,623 registered voters in the county. Bailey County voted 642-85 for the plan.

With 254 counties in Texas, if 25 more votes per county had been cast in favor of the plan, it would have carried with a safe margin a thousand votes.

Although the vote count has not been completed in Dallas, the Texas Election Bureau said the water plan proposal failed by little more than 5,000 votes. Cont. on Page 2, Col. 2

Fire Destroys Hawkins' Home; TV Stolen

A fire Tuesday night just before midnight completely destroyed a frame and stucco house on West Cedar owned by Mr. and Mrs. Pink Hawkins.

Mrs. Hawkins discovered the blaze around 11:50 p.m. as she was returning to her home from a nearby restaurant where she had gone a short time before.

As she had left the house locked, she went to a house next door to summon the fire department. First call to the fire department came in at 11:55 p.m. Firemen from Bailey County Volunteer Fire Department converged at the fire and started hooking up fire hoses. They were hampered by the fact that the nearest fire connection they could use was several blocks from the fire.

By the time they could get the fire hose stretched over the five or six blocks to the fire the house was virtually destroyed. Had the fire been about one-half block further away the fire hoses could not have been stretched far enough to use, according to a statement by Fire Chief Earl Ladd.

Charles Ray Young, a young boy who lives close by, attempted to get into the house before firemen arrived to save what he could. He brought out the television set and set it on the ground. While attempting to bring out a couch, it opened Cont. on Page 2, Col. 2

Bailey County is expanding production of various types of commercial vegetables each year. This year, L.A. 'Lusky' Green says the vegetables 'are looking good.'

Friday, August 8, he made his first picking from his 150 acres of Bell Pepper. He said they will be shipped to the packing plant at Bovina, New York, Chicago, Salt Lake City, Houston and Florida.

He also has 15 acres of Roma and table tomatoes. His tomatoes will go to Allen Canning Co., in Springdale, Ark.

He said he plans to replant squash for a fall squash crop. Green has been planting vegetables for 12 years and said, "the crops are looking extra well this year."

W.C. Casey also has Bell Peppers and tomatoes this year.

He said that production from the tomatoes will begin around September 1. "Although my peppers got a slow start they are looking real good this year and I expect a good crop," he stated.

Bernis Camp, who is growing a Bell Pepper crop for the second year said he is uncertain at the time as to what type of yield to expect although the crop looks pretty good.

Another Bell Pepper producer is Ben Roming who has approximately 10 acres of Bell Peppers. He also has 15-17 acres of pumpkins which are outstanding at this time according to all reports from those who have checked this relatively new crop for the area.

Kendall, Harris Win Farm Bureau Honors

Seventeen-year-old Darla Kendall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Kendall walked away with top honors at the Farm Bureau Queen Contest Friday night. She was named queen for 1969-70 in competition which was held at the Muleshoe High School Cafeteria.

Darla has previously been awarded for her work with sheep and barrows. She is a senior in Muleshoe High School.

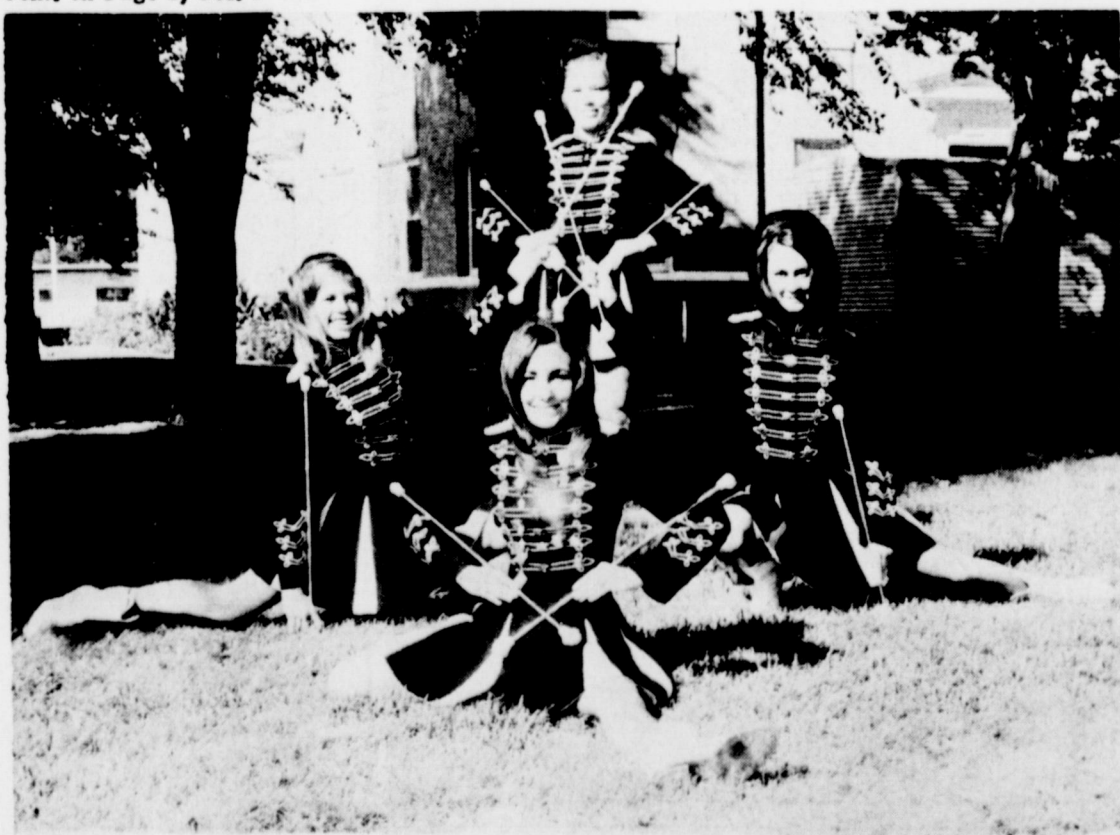

Cynthia Harris, 19 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen D. Harris of the West Camp Community was named first runner-up in the competition. Cynthia is a graduate of Muleshoe High School and is employed by Muleshoe Publishing Co. as a typesetter-typist. She was a contestant in the 'Miss Muleshoe' Pageant which was held in June.

Darla was crowned by the 1967-68 Farm Bureau Queen who went on to district and state, Sharron (Hutton) Putman. The seven contestants vied for the title amid a garden setting which was tastefully prepared by Farm Bureau wives. Entering through an archway entwined with large red roses and red net, the beauty contestants strolled down the walk which was simulated grass enclosed by a rock fence topped with white picket and entwined with roses. Completing the setting were mesquite trees and a dark blue background. The entire setting was built around the theme, "Let's Take an Old-Fashioned Walk."

He said they are looking real good and that he expects from average to above average yields this year. He also has watermelons, cantaloupes and tomatoes. Lee has been raising vegetables for 12-14 years and likes that type of farm operation.

In a couple of weeks Byron Gwyn will begin harvest of his 25-30 acres of Bell Peppers. They are all looking good said Gwyn. He also has 40 acres of watermelons and he expects top yields from the Black Diamonds, Jubilees, Garrisons and Tender Sweet.

Gwyn said he was slightly disappointed in his potato yield this year.

Gwyn also grows a few rows of hot pepper and has about 10 acres of tomatoes.

Cucumber production is in full swing at this time and David Stovall has a small acreage which Mrs. Stovall said J.L. Calvert is another cucumber producer. He said he has 70 acres which are producing a good yield. He increased from 45 acres he planted last year and is in his third year as a cucumber grower.

E.W. Locker said he has 200 of the approximately 700 acres of commercially grown tomatoes in Bailey County. He has been growing tomatoes for the past 10 years and said this will be the best year so far. He added that he is expecting a top yield.

Tomato production is down 300 acres in the county this year from the 1000 acres planted last year, said Locker.

His ripe tomatoes go to Allen Canning Co. in Springdale, Ark. and the pinks are shipped to Pampa, Amarillo, Dallas, Midland, and Oklahoma City.

Arvis Grogan has 100 acres of carrots which will be ready to start harvesting about September 15. He said he expects about an average yield from his crop, and will complete the harvest the first of December. He has been growing carrots for 11 years now.

Although he has planned onions in past years, Grogan said he did not plant onions this year.

L.B. Peugh, who farms east of Muleshoe, has raised watermelons and cantaloupe for the past 25 years. He has gradually reduced his watermelon acreage through the years and from 60 acres in the past, he now has some 11 acres of Black Diamonds, Black Lees, Orange Meated and Tender Sweet. He said he expected fair to very good production from his watermelon and cantaloupe.

One of the more unusual crops in the area is 40 acres on the Lewis Scoggin farm which is producing certified seed okra which is contracted to a company in Georgia.

The okra seed will be harvested with a combine late in the year.

Mrs. Scoggin said they raised peppers and tomatoes in the past, but have only the okra seed this year. A good yield is anticipated.

Many other farmers who were not contacted prior to press-time also have various vegetable operations on their farms.

Due to the soil conditions, climate and other assets, vegetables continue their upswing and add to the overall economy of the area.

and he could not drag it through the door. Firemen saved a king sized box springs, mattress, sheets, one pillow and a bedspread; coffee table, one end table, a small stereo and a lamp. All other furniture, clothing and personal belongings were destroyed in the fire.

Sometime while a mixed crowd was watching the house burn, the television disappeared. Mrs. Hawkins said it was a 21 inch Philco portable in a walnut cabinet. She said her father reported it to the police who reportedly said, "they would come down and check on it, but they doubted if they could find it."

Hawkins was in Galveston at the time of the fire at the bedside of a critically ill sister. He was summoned back to Muleshoe and returned at 2 a.m. Wednesday. He said he had lived in Muleshoe for about seven years and was employed by Kerr Construction Co. of Lubbock.

Mrs. Hawkins said she had lived in Muleshoe for more than 27 years.

They are presently staying in the home of Hawkins' brother who lives two houses away from their burned home.

resident of the area, Echols has helped many young aspiring musicians on to their way to fame. He helped Charlie Phillips of 'Sugartime' fame. Young Phillips was a farmer and part time disc jockey when Echols took an interest in his career and helped him achieve the success he enjoys today.

In years past, Echols was lead baritone with the Stamps-Baxter Quartet and helped popularize the song, "Give the World a Smile," a philosophy which he adopted for his own and continues to live with the same philosophy today.

The three out of town judges were hardpressed to choose a queen from among the seven area beauties represented at the contest. They included the queen Darla and runner-up Cynthia, Jolene Cox, Karen St. Clair, Becky Gulley, Sharon Ensor and Beverly Evins.

Darla was crowned and received a bouquet of red roses, and a scholarship for $150 to the college of her choice. She will compete in the district contest at Lubbock next Thursday night.

At intermission in the pageant, while the judges were completing their records, entertainment was provided by Lee Ann and Connie Harlan of Lazbuddie, who sang three numbers and by organist Eugene Burman who provided unusual and outstanding organ selections.

Chamber Corner

Jerry Hutton,
C of C
Manager

For this week's Chamber Corner, I would like to acquaint you with some of the activities in Muleshoe at the present time, plus some of the future events. There was a meeting recently of the Museum Committee, in which definite plans were discussed concerning the new West Plains Museum to be built here. The charter has been acquired for this, and we should have one of the best museums in this area within the next year. Plans are now being made for the Teacher Appreciation Banquets to be held for all the teachers in this area, and we are looking forward to these. The construction of the sign is coming along well at the Mule Memorial, and we feel this will be a valuable addition to the Memorial site. We are eagerly anticipating the completion of the new City Hall, where our new office will be located. We hope to be able to serve you more effectively after moving into this new office. I have talked to some of the service station, cafe, and motel owners, and they all report that the tourist business in Muleshoe has been excellent this summer. I also feel that the Youth Employment Service we conducted this summer has been successful, and that these kids as a whole have done a good job.

Fine Arts Students Win Top Honors

Muleshoe brought home the bacon again this time from Nacogdoches, where speech and debate students of MHS have been attending a two week workshop.

Outstanding debater of the group was Betty Harbin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Harbin of Muleshoe. Jim Mardis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mardis tied for top place with Betty for outstanding extemporaneous speakers.

Participating in the debate group were Jim Mardis, Martha Jane Chapman and Betty Harbin. In the drama competition were Steve Woodard, Joe Duke, Jolene Rempe and Greta Bamert. There were about 25 drama students and approximately the same number of debaters. Joe Duke was awarded a scholarship to return next summer.

Joe, Steve and Greta were all in the plays presented for the parents the final day of the workshop.

Martha Jane and Betty went undefeated through ten rounds of debate, the only undefeated team. They participated in a demonstration debate the final day.

Jim Mardis spoke extemporaneously on the final day, when only the outstanding students were presented.

All of the Muleshoe students at the workshop were given a rating of either superior or excellent.

This is the second year Betty Harbin has been chosen as outstanding debater. Last year she was chosen outstanding debater, outstanding extemporaneous speaker and recipient of a scholarship for 1969. Only one scholarship is given each year for debaters and one for extemporaneous speakers.

Sells Stamps and Good Will

Mrs. W.E. Young

The soft low voice calls the individual by name and the dark laugh-inkled eyes reflect good will and singleness of purpose.

"...Best girl in the country..." "Such a sweet person and always willing to help anybody any time. She never takes any glory for anything and does not praise herself... just the nicest person".

"I never heard her run anyone down"...."She takes that smile and pleasant manner with her wherever she goes".

Ambassadors of good will for the United States Government are usually sent abroad, but our government may have such a person right here in Muleshoe, in the Post Office. It just may be that Mrs. W.E. Young, an employee of the United States Postal Department in Muleshoe the past 22 years, has warmed enough hearts with her pleasant, un-failing manner with patrons of the money order window to merit such a title. Her efforts to be helpful are dispensed with complete disregard of race, color or social standing and seem to be prompted by a genuine respect for human dignity.

Her postmaster calls her the very best kind of employee and says, "I could not be more pleased...she leaves her troubles at the backdoor and is always kind and thoughtful."

Born in Cook County, Maude Barlow was married to Wendell E. Young at Medicine Mount in Hardeman County, in 1922 and the family lived at Quanah until they moved to Muleshoe in 1935.

W.E. Young was a long time employee of the City of Muleshoe and retired in 1967. He is at present a truant officer for Muleshoe school system.

The Youngs are parents of a daughter, Mrs. Tommy (Anallita) Haley, of Muleshoe and a son, Lowell, of Oklahoma City. Their grandchildren are Mrs. Ronald (Linda) Braig of Casper, Wyoming; Mrs. Phillip (Caryn) Wilcox and Jerry Don Haley, of Muleshoe, Linda has two sons and Jerry Don has a son.

Mrs. Young has been a member of First Baptist Church since the family moved here in 1935 and has sung regularly in the choir during all that time. She is a member of Friendship Club, Eastern Star, and an active member of Rebekah Lodge, where she has served as Noble Grand.

She and her husband have for a number of years played "South of the Border" or "Canasta" and shared a meal with friends each Friday evening.

Since beginning work at the post office, Mrs. Young has done everything there is to do, from rolling sacks to her present position of money order clerk. "When I first started we even had to do the janitor work". She has done the sorting, dispatching, substituted many years for the late Gil Woolard and carried the mail from Muleshoe to Olton five years. She has substituted on every rural route out of Muleshoe except routes two and three.

Mrs. Young says, "I like my work, all of it."

Mrs. Taylor Attends HD Agents' Convention

Mrs. Robin Taylor attended a three day convention of County Home Demonstration Agents Association of Texas at the Herring Hotel Thursday through Saturday of this week. More than 100 persons, agents and former agents and other personnel, attended.

Activities Thursday included tours of the city and surrounding area, a get-acquainted tea, and a barbecue supper at Palo Duro Canyon. Convention delegates attended the "Texas" drama in the canyon amphitheater Thursday night.

"Orbiting Toward Family Stability Through Changing Concepts of Youth Education" was the topic of address at the Friday night banquet given by Mrs. Wilding Edwards, associate professor of home and family life of the home economics department at Texas Technological College. The Saturday morning featured speaker was Mrs. O.M. Spurlock, an expert on restoring and refinishing antiques.

Workshops on professional improvement, service, research, recruitment, public relations, and the constitution and year-books were held Saturday morning. Following a style show and luncheon, Judge Mary Lou Robinson of the 108 District Court discussed the legal rights of women.

Kennedy's TV Appeal

Senator Edward Kennedy's resort to nationwide television in an effort to win the public relations battle, and sympathy, of Massachusetts voters was unparalleled in American political history.

That he was given prime time on three networks to speak to the people of Massachusetts is interesting. No other Senator in the nation would likely have been given such an opportunity.

Senator Kennedy was ostensibly appealing to Massachusetts voters but in reality to the nation, after pleading guilty to leaving the scene of a fatal accident and conducting himself in a questionable manner for some time thereafter. His speech was good and he projected a good television image. As he knew he would win a vote of sympathy from Massachusetts constituents, everyone sympathizes with his mental burden.

In analyzing the Senator's television appearance, however, one is forced to conclude the Senator is counting on public sympathy and forgiveness to enable him to overcome the repercussions of admittedly poor conduct. He resigned from nothing, nor did he bar himself from a future effort to become President.

Yet the Senator's very able appeal leaves questions unanswered. He wins public support with personality, appearance and emotional appeal, as did another member of his family generations ago after found guilty of wrongdoing. The public is quick to forgive, witness the love and adoration showered on movie stars and musicians who turn to narcotics, etc. But does the public think such a man is the best choice to be President of the most powerful nation in the world in the nuclear age? That is the key question on the minds of Kennedy aides and Kennedy opponents, which only the future will answer.

United States Senate

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

LEGISLATIVE PICTURE

As the August recess approaches, I would like to take this opportunity to discuss the current legislative picture in the Senate.

The Senate is presently debating this year's military procurement bill of which President Nixon's proposed Safeguard Anti-Ballistic Missile system is a significant part. Safeguard would provide protection for our land-based deterrent force of ICBM's from the threat of an attack utilizing a high degree of advanced and sophisticated technology.

As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I am familiar with the military procurement bill and with the proposed Safeguard system. I have devoted much of my time over the past several weeks to a concerted effort to secure Senate approval for the initial AEM deployment which the bill now before us would provide.

The Congress is also wrestling with the issue of tax reform. I have supported efforts to extend the surtax because I have believed that step necessary as a means of controlling inflation. None of us enjoys having to pay taxes, but the American people suffer much more severely from the affects of inflation.

We need responsible tax reforms which will treat the majority of taxpayers in the middle income group more equitably.

At the same time, all Texans should be concerned about efforts to reduce the depletion allowance for oil. The allowance encourages concerned about efforts to reduce the depletion allowance for oil. The allowance encourages continued exploration for oil reserves at a time when experts are warning that our domestic oil reserves will have to be vastly increased during the next several years. A healthy domestic oil industry also strengthens our national security posture. If the foreign oil reserves which are now available to us and to our European allies were suddenly shut off, we would need to be able to rapidly increase our domestic production. If exploration does not go forward, we might find ourselves unable to meet such a crisis.

This is why I am working against efforts to reduce the 27 1/2 per cent depletion allowance for oil.

I am working against efforts to eliminate the present tax incentive which encourages the sale of municipal bonds. The current law does allow wealthy individuals to receive tax free interest on the state and municipal bonds which they have purchased. Thus, the law encourages those wealthy individuals to purchase those bonds at a rate of interest much lower than they would otherwise demand. If states and municipalities are forced to compete on the open bond market and pay competitive high interest rates, it would be we, the taxpayers, who would have to pay additional state and local taxes to enable those governing bodies to pay those competitively higher interest rates.

Earlier this week, I introduced two bills which I believe should be of interest to all

Chamber of Commerce
Muleshoe
Texas 79347

Gentlemen:
I want to tell you about a good deed done by one of your citizens, Odessa Linville, Box 614 Muleshoe.

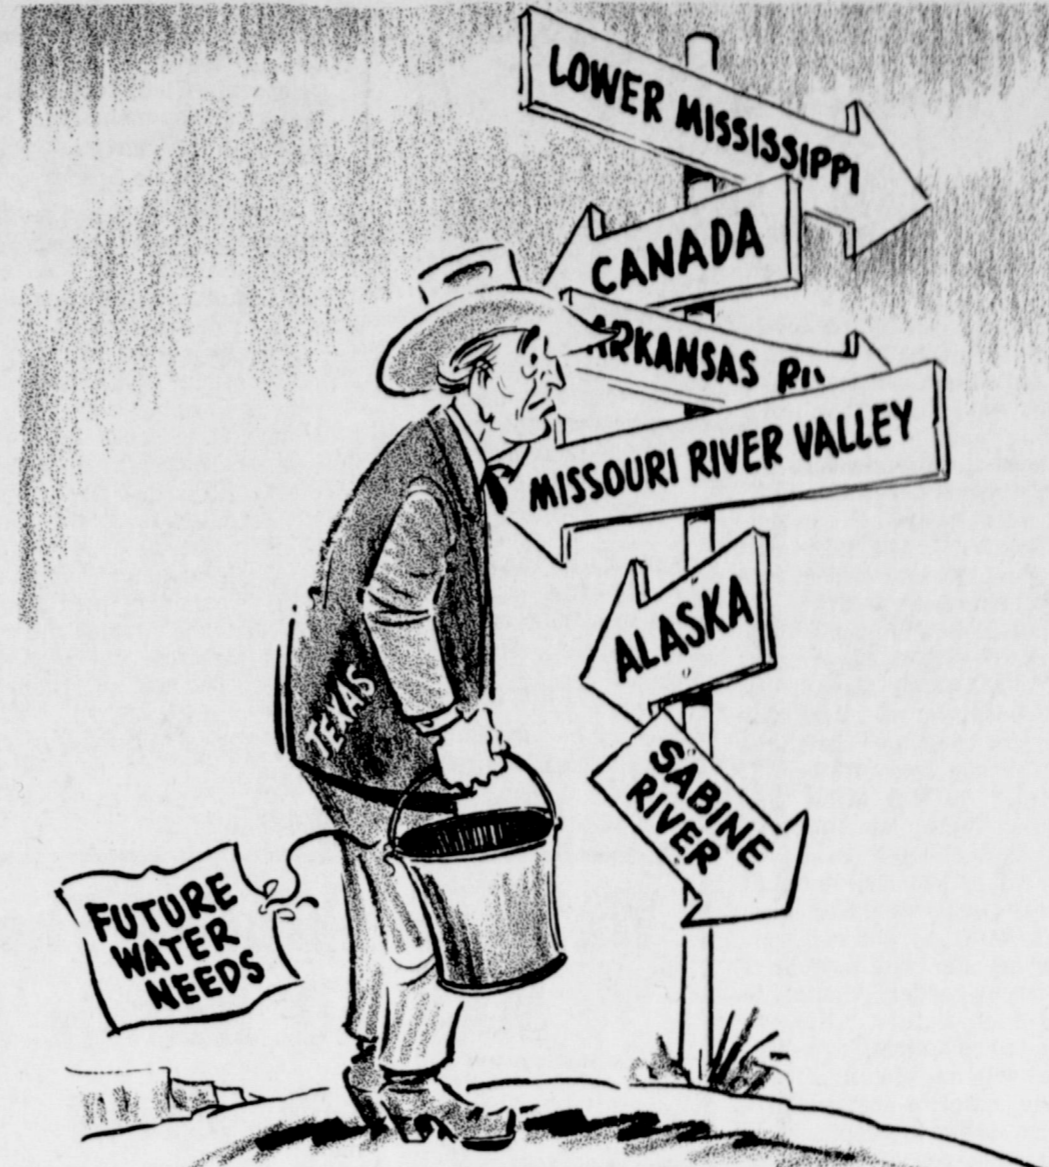

Last week my wife and I were passing through Muleshoe and stopped at the Dinner Bell Cafe. My wife left her purse in the cafe, and it was not until we were a hundred miles away that she remembered it. The next morning she telephoned and asked that the purse be mailed to her in Fort Worth.

There was some money in the purse, and my wife asked that it be used to pay the postage and that the name of the sender be included so that we could return some sort of reward.

Odessa Linville not only mailed the purse to my wife, she used her own money for the postage and further said that she expected nothing for doing this.

Her attitude is what I have always considered as typical of West Texans, and I am sure that hers is not an uncommon virtue in your city.

Yours very truly,

Washington Report

From Congressman
BOB PRICE 10TH DISTRICT, TEXAS

1323 LONGWORTH OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D. C. 20538

Congressman Bob Price announced that applications for appointment as Cadet, United States Coast Guard, Class of 1974 are now being accepted. Candidates interested in competing for appointment to the US Coast Guard Academy must submit their applications to the Academy prior to December 15, 1969, and must arrange through their secondary school guidance counselor to participate in the prescribed College Entrance Examination Board (CEES) tests. Only those test results prior to or including the December 6, 1969, administration of the College Entrance Examination Board tests will be accepted.

As the home of the Manned Spacecraft Center, I believe that an appropriate site for the statue provided for in my bill would be at the Manned Spacecraft Center near Houston. My bill, however, does not dictate a location for the statue for I do not want the bill to become a political football with various interests jockeying for the privilege of having the statue in their state.

The important thing is, that an American achievement of such great significance as the moon landing be appropriately marked for posterity.

by that time. All applicants must have completed three units of English, and three units of mathematics including algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents.

ON REDUCED SPENDING

Government agencies have been ordered by President Nixon to reduce spending by an additional $3.5 billion to bring soaring spending estimates back down to the $192.9 billion target he set in April.

Appointments are made solely on a nationwide competitive basis; there are no separate quotas for states or districts and no special categories," he said. "I urge all qualified young men who are interested in this worthwhile profession to write for details and application forms as soon as possible to the Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. 06320."

To be eligible for the next competition for appointment to the Coast Guard Academy, a candidate must be single, a citizen of the US, in excellent physical condition and must have reached his seventeenth birthday by July 1, 1970.

A high school diploma is the minimum educational requirement, although high school seniors assured of being graduated by June 30, 1970 are eligible to enter the competition if they will have at least 15 credits

Yanqui Butt Out!

BY PAUL HARVEY

Two of our Latin-American neighbor nations are at one another's throats. Honduras and El Salvador have been fighting an undeclared war. At one point there were border penetrations more than 40 miles deep.

These noisy neighbors have irritated one another for years but the recent fighting was triggered by a disputed soccer game.

And when the shooting started, weapons supplied by the United States were used by both sides.

Within the last year the United States provided $800,000 in military aid to Honduras, $500,000 to El Salvador. American Corsairs have been dropping bombs on El Salvador; American Mustangs have bombed Honduras.

So again our well-intentioned intervention in the affairs of others has left both sides blaming us for their difficulties. Many Latin-American nations prefer their military solution to internal problems. It can be argued that military dictatorship is the only form of government which can preserve order among volatile Latins who have neither the education nor the appetite for representative government.

And it's here, close to home, that the United States should learn the first obligation of a truly good neighbor. I think we are learning.

Within the past year two Latin-American governments were overthrown overnight and replaced by military dictatorships. This is what we've been fighting to prevent elsewhere--the overthrow of elected governments by military dictatorships.

Yet when it happened in Peru and Panama our State Department--quite rightly I think--decried that it was none of our business.

Yet that contradiction makes it difficult for us to explain Korea and Vietnam to our enlightened sons.

In Latin America's several nations, about 123 million people are presently ruled by dictatorships.

Yet we have banned US arms shipments to only two of those nations, Peru and Ecuador, and those because of a dispute over fishing rights.

Further, the United States, since 1950, has trained 21,000 Latin officers in US military schools and another 25,000 in the Panama Canal Zone. Understandably, many of the leaders of Latin-American revolutions have been trained in US schools at your expense.

Little wonder that American statesman cannot tour South and Central America without being, almost everywhere, resented, resisted or openly assaulted.

When the "good neighbor" policy was adopted by our nation under F.D.R., it sounded so good we did not stop to analyze what it means to be a good neighbor.

He is not the one who takes sides in your inevitable family disputes. Nor does he furnish the weapons to either side. He does not buy expensive gifts for your wife. He does not turn his dog into your garden.

But he keeps his own wife happy and his own grass cut and his own house painted.

The truly good neighbor is the one who, first of all, minds his own business.

California Water Project Near Goal

By Kimmis Hendrick
Staff correspondent of
The Christian Science Monitor
Sacramento, Calif.

Notions about canals on Mars were never as intricate as the reality of California's vast State Water Project. It's 80 percent completed. It's partly operational.

For more than a year now, its keystone feature, the world's highest earth dam located at Oroville--700 feet high and made of 78 million cubic yards of earth and rock--has been storing water.

Engineering problems solved in building this state-long system of canals, tunnels, pump lifts, and the like, will doubtless show the way for years for other big-scale water schemes. If not for Mars, at least for western North America and arid parts of Africa and Asia.

CALIFORNIA LEADS NATION
California calls it the largest single water project in the world to be financed all at once. A single appropriation paid for all but certain incidental modifications, to be mentioned later.

Californians have been in the water delivery business almost from the beginning of state history in 1850.

The state's mining companies, mutual water companies, municipalities, irrigation, and reclamation districts have, it is widely agreed, led the nation in developing water transportation systems. Together they have accumulated immense water know-how. They have devised a huge body of water law.

They had to. In this state the water needed for agriculture, industrial enterprise, and city growth always has been available--but somewhere else.

Soon after the turn of the century, both San Francisco and Los Angeles began going to far-off mountain areas for added water supplies. Southern California later took the initiative for developing the Colorado River as a major water source. Today California has some 4,000 separate organizations and agencies dealing, in one way or another, with water.

It wasn't until after World War II that the State of California itself concluded it had to go into the water business, people, water separated.

Eighty percent of the people of this state live in metropolitan areas--Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego. But 70 percent of the state's water supply originates in rivers north of San Francisco.

Rome built aqueducts and tunnels throughout Italy, Spain, and Gaul, including one that still keeps the Trevi Fountain flowing. These were engineering marvels, but they served relatively small distances and populations who were modest water users compared to California.

It takes 400 barrels of water to process just 1 barrel of crude oil in Los Angeles. It takes 100,000 gallons to cool 1 ton of steel. It takes the California householder--or any American householder, in fact--150 gallons of water daily just for his own share of what is required for washing, cooking, drinking, plumbing, and heating.

WASTED WATER PUT TO WORK
Meanwhile water was wasting from California's upstate rivers--the Feather, the Sacramento, the Eel, and others--into the Pacific in acre-feet by the millions. An acre-foot of water is equal to 325,900 gallons; it is enough water to cover an acre of land to the depth of one foot.

To store and deliver this wasted water downstate was, as it still is, the purpose of the State Water Project. The voters of California approved the project in 1960 by voting in favor of a bill known as the Burns-Porter Act. This authorized the issuance of $1.75 billion in general obligation bonds.

It is to this move by the voters that the State Department of Water Resources refers when it speaks of the project as "financed at one time."

Some qualifications arise from the fact that now the state will probably have to increase its interest on the bonds if it is to attract buyers for them all.

It has had to defer certain project facilities until it can figure out how to finance them. It has reduced the scope of others. It has made some cost cuts by improving its procedures.

POWER PLANT REVENUES
Even so, say state officials, there will probably have to be another bond issue some day. Population growth by 1990, the state reckons, will require it. This assumes that alternative ways of getting water--from an augmented Colorado flow, from desalination, and so on--will not by then have been accepted.

Meanwhile, the state is getting revenue from power generated by power plants developed in connection with Oroville Dam. And water districts throughout the state have contracted for enough water to pay for the project's cost. Its annual delivery capacity will be 4,230,000 acre-feet.

To supply them, the completed project will operate almost 700 miles of aqueducts. The Romans built complex structures, but nothing like these. The tunnels are as big as two-lane highway tunnels. The open canals, some like great rivers, are concrete lined. The system includes two nuclear reactors to run the electric pumps that lift water 2,000 feet over the state-dividing Tehachapi Mountains.

WATER CONCEPT CHANGES
Already water is serving parts of the San Joaquin Valley scarcely 100 miles north of Los Angeles. In the early 1970's water will reach the region dominated by Los Angeles that extends south another 100 miles to Mexico.

It looks now as though this imported water will sell wholesale for about $80 an acre-foot. Colorado River water imported into the area sells for approximately $37. Water districts will blend the two figures into some kind of realistic rate, depending on the market.

More and More the old concept of water as a free right giving way to the view that it is a purchasable commodity. Western water specialists say the time will come when people will have to be much more conscious than they are, even today, that they pay for every drop they use.

Western farmers are notorious for wasting water, but municipal and industrial users are considerably clued in to the pay-as-you-use approach. Even so, the easy-come, easy-go approach lingers.

MANY PROBLEMS SOLVED
If water development for the coming century follows the pattern cut out by California--the transport of water over long distances, over mountains, and through deserts--engineers will undoubtedly study numerous problems solved here.

California had to figure out how to lift the water over record heights and then keep it from flowing down hill too fast. It also had to find a way to move it across the biggest earthquake fault in North America, which the canal cuts across in the Tehachapi Mountains.

To solve this, the engineers simply decided to cross the area with a canal instead of building tunnels. Just building Oroville Dam required developing enough new techniques for earth moving to set precedents for years.

Today's exploratory talks about eventually linking the California water system with the Pacific Northwest's mighty Columbia River call for even more venturesome engineering. The United States Bureau of Reclamation is researching, for instance, the possibility of using a plastic tube under the ocean, along the continental shelf.

CANADA AND ALASKA REPORT
Regional differences and regional water needs make it, at this writing, a very open and uncertain question whether there ever will be developed such an intertie. Yet at the recent Western Water Congress, sponsored by the Wenatchee Daily World in the center of the water-rich state of Washington, such possibilities were discussed.

Spokesmen for western Canada and for Alaska considered in detail the needs they foresaw for using all the water in their areas. At the same time they indicated that eventually they might have surpluses they would be glad to export.

It may be prophetic that the State of California has completed contracts for the purchase and transmission of electric power from both the Bonneville Power Administration and Canada. The first deliveries of Pacific Northwest power were made to California's new pumping plants on April 1, 1968.
