Most welfare mothers do not work for funds

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Only one of every hundred women on public assistance works for her family's welfare check, say studies illustrating the staggering task President Clinton faces fulfilling a promise to move welfare mothers off the rolls and into jobs.

Clinton has said that low-income Americans deserve help with education and training but after two years of assistance "you have to ask people to take a job, ultimately, either in the private sector or in public service."

A record 5 million families - almost all of them headed by a single parent - collect a check under Aid to Families with Dependent Children. At least 3 million mothers probably have been on welfare for two years or more.

A handful now work in exchange for their checks, as teachers or Head Start aides, hospital candy-strippers, welfare office clerks or in other low-skill positions.

Right now, the JOBS - or Job Opportunities and Basic Skills training program - requires states to put an increasing share of their AFDC recipients into education, training or work programs.

Studies by two Washington research groups, one conservative and one liberal, say most JOBS participants are in education or training.

The studies say about 1 percent of the 4.4 million families on AFDC in 1991 worked in exchange for their check.

Robert Rector, a welfare policy analyst for the conservative Heritage Foundation, pegs the number of women in jobs or on-the-job training at 20,000 to 50,000, based on a recent analysis of federal data.

The liberal Center for Law and Social Policy estimated the number at 17,000 to 35,000 in an average month in 1991. Its 1992 study was based on preliminary 1991 federal records and a survey of the states.

Increasing the numbers is "an enormous, daunting task," said Paul Offner, an aide to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

David Ellwood, assistant secretary for planning and evaluation at the Department of Health and Human Services, wrote in December that at least 3 million women probably have been on welfare for two years or more.

"If half of these are required to work, the cost and mechanics could be staggering," he said, citing Offner's estimate of the cost of creating a public service job and day care at $3,500 per case.

In a recent interview, Ellwood said the administration's overhaul of the welfare system would put limits on the time a family could collect benefits without a member working. HHS Secretary Donna E. Shalala said last week that mothers of young children would not necessarily be exempt from those work requirements.

Federal records released Friday show 498,195 AFDC recipients were in the JOBS program in 1991, including 262,977 who participated for at least 20 hours a week.

Advocacy groups for the poor say the states have emphasized education and training under JOBS.

"Given that a large percentage of the AFDC caseload has some serious skill or educational deficits, it's clear that providing people with education and training programs that improve their employability will be a good long-term investment," said Susan Steinmetz, senior legislative associate for the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Steinmetz also notes that state welfare caseloads have risen with the recession, while jobs vanished.

Rehearsal time

Contestants for the 1993 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant bend and stretch during a run-through of the opening number in Saturday's pageant. The theme of the pageant is "The Entertainer." The opening number features the contestants and their male dance partners tripping to a 1920s-inspired routine. Their costumes will be patterned after the same time period.

Curtain about ready to go up on 1993 Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

The work has been going on since February to take a field of girls and make one of them a star.

Now, all the hours of preparation -- the staging of production numbers, the selection of props and back-grounds, the naming of judges and solicitation of contestants -- is about over.

Just a couple of more days and the new Miss Hereford will be crowned and ready to reign for the next year.

Today is the last full day of preparations for this year's Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant, which will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Hereford High School auditorium.

Admission is $3 per person for the pageant, which is sponsored annually by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division.

The theme for the pageant is "The Entertainer." Eleven contestants will vie for the honor to receive the crown from 1992 winner Vanessa Gonzalez.

The contestants, listed in their order of appearance at the pageant, are: Jill Walsler, Sarah Wagner, Beth Weatherly, Alexia Sciumbato, Gabriela Gamez, Dusty Saul, Jennifer Holmes, Misty Dudley, Shambryn Wilson, Fidelia Hernandez and Emily Fuston.

Prizes and scholarship money will be awarded to the winner, first runner-up and second runner-up. In addition, the Miss Congeniality winner will receive a special prize.

Also to be awarded at the pageant will be a trip for two to Las Vegas, Nev. Miss Hereford contestants and steering committee members have been selling raffle tickets for the trip.

Proceeds from the raffle will go toward the Miss Hereford Scholarship Fund. Master of Ceremonies for the night will be County Judge Tom Simons. Judges will be announced at the pageant.

This year's pageant co-chairs are Rita Bell and Julia Laing. Steering committee members are Kim Buckley, Linda Daniel, Betty Drake, Lacy Mueggenborg and Kim Porter. Helpers are Gayla Sanders, Sheri Jones, Donna West, Marsha Winget and Colleen Meyer.

Planning for the affair, Bell and Laing said, began back on Feb. 23, when the committee held its first meeting.

"That's where we picked the theme and began to plan for the set -- everything we were going to put up there," said Bell.

On April 4, the group who would be competing for the crown began to take shape as the steering committee held a Mother and Daughter Tea.

This, Bell said, was open to qualifying girls and their mothers. At the time, the girls were invited to apply and were told what would happen with the pageant.

April 9 was the final day to sign up to be in the pageant.

In between all the work with the contestants, the women said, judges had to be selected.

Laing said she has a master list of possible judges, while Bell said the judges are all individuals who have had experience judging pageants before.

Official photographs were taken of the 11 contestants on May 5, while a cookout for the girls on April 20 included a discussion of what was ahead, as well as what to do and what not to do.

Finally, with the dress rehearsal set for today and the finals for Saturday, all the details have been tended to, all the dance steps learned, talents practiced and outfits readied.

Now all that remains is to see who will wear the crown as 1993 Miss Hereford.

Former nursing home employee convicted

A former employee of a Hereford nursing home was found guilty by a jury Wednesday of a charge of obtaining a controlled substance by fraud and assessed a 10-year prison sentence.

The jury recommended probation of the sentence and set a fine of $7,500.

The 222nd District Court trial began Monday afternoon and ended when punishment was decided by the jury late Wednesday afternoon.

Twila G. Ortiz, a former charge nurse at Golden Plain Care Center, was accused of calling a Hereford pharmacy for a re-fill of a prescription for a resident of the center.

Testimony revealed that the prescription had been discontinued by the resident's physician eight days earlier. The prescription was for a pain medicine with codeine as an ingredient. Codeine is a controlled substance, by state law.

Jurors spent an hour in deliberations on the guilt-innocence phase of the trial, returning their guilty verdict at 12 noon Wednesday.

After a lunch break, they returned to the courtroom for the punishment phase. Deliberations began at 2:18 p.m. and continued until 4:42 p.m. when the jury returned to court to announce the punishment.

Maximum sentence on the charge is 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The defendant has 30 days in which to file an appeal of the conviction. She is free on bond.

Aspin looking for $5.5 billion to cut from Pentagon budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - Defense Secretary Les Aspin is trying to slash an additional $5.5 billion from next year's Pentagon budget as his aides near final decisions on their "bottom-up review" of defense needs and weaponry.

The review, which will guide future long-range budget decisions, will be the subject of a briefing this weekend for Aspin and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Pentagon sources say.

The force is destined to be far smaller than that envisioned by the Bush administration, given President Clinton's call for slashing defense spending by more than $120 billion over the next five years.

And Aspin has asked the Navy, Army, Air Force and other defense agencies to come up with an additional $5.5 billion in cuts for the budget year beginning Oct. 1 to cope with an unexpected spending crunch.

Testifying Wednesday before a Senate Armed Services panel, Army

Gen. Malcolm O'Neill, the acting director of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, promised that Congress would get results of the review by July 4.

One Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said draft proposals call for moving forward with producing the F-A-18 E-F Hornet, destined to be the Navy's "bridge" aircraft into the next century as the service phases out its A-6 bombers by 1999 and awaits production of a futuristic substitute.

Therefore, this source said, the review is expected to call for a delay in the AF-X, the Navy's next-generation, carrier-based attack aircraft. The long-range bomber could also be used by the Air Force to replace its F-111, F-15E and F-117 aircraft.

"There's going to be an airplane. They're just delaying a decision (on the AF-X) a couple years down the road, saying, 'Let's take a look at it down the line,'" said the source.

January's optimism is gone, lawmakers find

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Across the country, the frustration is building again for voters who feel they've seen this all before: the congressional bickering, broken promises, a White House adrift.

Won't Washington ever change? That dark mood is what Democratic lawmakers say they encountered on trips back home last week.

"The optimism of January has turned to fear - they're afraid it's not going to get fixed," said Rep. Karen Shepherd, D-Utah, who was swept into office on last year's banner of change.

"Democracy is inordinately messy. People are watching it close up, and I think it's terrifying for them," she said.

In interviews with several Democrats who returned to their home districts last week, lawmakers reported that constituents are disappointed with Clinton for what they see as his inability to make good as quickly as he'd pledged on jobs, health care, deficit reduction and other campaign promises.

But the Democrats, who'd hoped to capitalize on their first control of the White House and Congress in 12 years, said their constituents are equally as annoyed with them.

"They don't think either one of us are doing a very good job," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La. "They think we just blame each other."

"In the view of many voters," added Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., "we're not ending gridlock, we're just fighting. Now we're even fighting within our own party. That doesn't sit too well out there."

"Everybody," said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., "seems to have forgotten what the voters told us last November - lead, follow or get the heck out of the way. Do something. Voting no and saying we can't do it is not acceptable."

Democrats said many voters reported being troubled by Clinton's early missteps, such as the failed jobs bill, and management debacles such as the doomed nomination of Zoe Baird. Still, voters are rooting for the president to succeed, they said.

"They fault him - no bones about it, mistakes were made - but it's not a throw-him-out attitude," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. "They're asking me, 'Can't you do something to help him?'"

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., said voters don't understand Clinton's budget package because the president failed to explain it. So "the enemies defined the package," Glickman said.

"People are feeling used," said Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo.

Search still on for parents of abandoned 'Baby Jane'

Law enforcement officers still are searching for the parents of an infant found in an incinerator, just outside the Hereford city limits, on March 18.

An investigator for the Deaf Smith County criminal district attorney testified briefly Wednesday in a hearing related to custody of the child, identified as "Deaf Smith Baby Jane" in papers filed in 222nd District Court.

Gene Gerringer, the investigator, said that blood tests and genetic tests had eliminated from the investigation a young woman rumored to be the mother of the baby.

The Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services is seeking custody of the infant and has asked termination of parental rights, required by law even though the mother and father are unknown.

Oney Avalos, TDP&RS specialist, testified Wednesday, also, reporting that the baby continues to progress satisfactorily. She is in foster care in another county.

Baby Jane was found by workers at an animal clinic on March 18. She had been wrapped in a plastic bag and placed in an incinerator. After treatment at Deaf Smith General Hospital and in an Amarillo hospital, she was placed in a foster home.

Wednesday's hearing was the latest in a series of hearings held at two-week intervals, as required by law in temporary custody proceedings. The hearing was continued until 1:15 p.m. on June 23.

The earliest District Judge David Wesley Gulley may rule on the state's request for managing conservatorship of the baby and termination of parental rights is June 28 because of the length of time that must elapse after publication of legal notices.

NEW YORK (AP) - Usually, publishers are eager to give a new book plenty of publicity. But when the author is Oprah Winfrey, and the subject is her life story, publicity can become too much of a good thing.

Winfrey is collaborating with Joan Brthel on the book, which is to be published Sept. 20 by Alfred A. Knopf.

"We're not talking about anything to do with the book until Sept. 20," Erroll McDonald, the book's editor, said in Wednesday's New York Times. "Given that the media feeds off Oprah to a great degree, we don't want people to cannibalize the book before it comes out."

Cult leader called 911 during raid

Koresh told police federal agents killed his children

WASHINGTON (AP) - As his followers traded gunfire with Treasury agents, David Koresh called local police and charged that federal authorities "killed some of my children."

"There is a bunch of us dead and a bunch of you guys dead, now that's your fault," Koresh was heard telling Lt. Larry Lynch in a recorded call to the Waco, Texas, police emergency desk on Feb. 28.

The 30-minute tape was made at the time of the initial Treasury raid on the heavily armed Branch Davidian compound outside Waco that left four Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents and six adult cult members dead.

The tape of exchanges between a police dispatcher and Koresh as well as one of his aides, Wayne Martin, was played Wednesday by the House Appropriations Committee's treasury subcommittee.

The panel is investigating what went wrong in the raid.

"We're being shot all up out here," Koresh told the dispatcher. "Who am I speaking with?" Lynch said as he picked up the line. "This is David Koresh."

"OK, David," Lynch said. "The notorious. What did you guys do that for?" Koresh replied. "What I'm doing is I'm trying to establish some communications links with you," said Lynch, a McLennan County sheriff's deputy.

"No, no, no, no, no, let me tell you something. You see, you brought a bunch of guys out here and you killed some of my children," Koresh said.

"We told you we wanted to talk. How come you guys try to be ATF agents? How can you try to be so big all the time?"

"You have come and stepped on my perimeter," Koresh said at another point.

The sharp sound of gunfire could be heard repeatedly in the background as Lynch and Martin discussed a cease-fire that would allow ATF agents to rescue 16 wounded comrades.

"They're still shooting, I can hear the bullets, God almighty," Lynch remarked at one point.

"Tell me what's happening, Wayne, talk to me Wayne, let's get this thing resolved, Wayne," Lynch said.

"We got women and children in danger," Martin said.

Martin, a Harvard-trained lawyer who was a cult leader, insisted repeatedly during the conversations that "we're under fire."

"We'll stop when they stop firing," Martin told Lynch.

The 45-minute shootout began when ATF agents tried to arrest Koresh and search the compound for illegal weapons and explosives.

Officials say ATF agents were ambushed after they were met at the compound's front door by Koresh.

"He stepped inside the door and firing began," Daniel Hartnett, associate ATF director, told the House subcommittee.

A 51-day standoff ended April 19 when FBI agents lobbed tear gas into the wooden structure. Authorities say cult members started the fire that destroyed the compound and killed its occupants, including many children.

Texas officials have determined that 78 people, including Koresh, died in the inferno.

Lynch, who was assigned to man the phones during the raid, told the panel that Martin called about 10:45 a.m.

"There's about 75 men around our building shooting at us in Mount Carmel," Martin said.

"Mount Carmel?" Lynch replied. "Tell them there are children and

FBI investigation in Corsicana slated after death of black man

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) - Four law officers remained on administrative leave today after a black man died in police custody, and the FBI said it opened an investigation into the death.

About 150 protesters Wednesday waved banners in front of the Corsicana Government Center and demanded justice for the death of Craig Thomas, 29.

Also Wednesday, the FBI opened a civil rights investigation into Thomas' death in response to requests from Corsicana officials, said Tom Ruppert, an assistant special agent in Dallas.

Some participants in the peaceful march complained that they felt City Hall and the all-white police department did not represent their interests.

"I think this happened a long time ago," said protester Sharon Williams. "I think a lot of things have been pushed up under the rug. I think it's time something needs to come out."

Another woman said the police department refused to hire her even after she scored well on a civil service exam.

"They don't say nothing. They don't call; they don't say nothing," Terry Henry said. "You come in, you write your application down, you turn it in. You're qualified - as a matter of fact, overqualified - but still refused for the job."

The crowd marched from the grassy field on Corsicana's east side, where authorities said the Wortham man was arrested Saturday, to the government center and back again.

Protesters, including Thomas' mother and other family members, demanded that the four officers now on leave should be fired.

"And they talk about the police being on the street, about what all they do," said Estella Washington, Thomas' mother.

Her son died Saturday night after he was arrested by Corsicana police officer Todd Morris, who is white. Morris had pulled over a vehicle in which Thomas was a passenger because of an expired registration.

Police said Thomas ran away but was caught by Morris, who bound Thomas' hands and feet.

Thomas threw something while he was fleeing the officer, Corsicana Police Chief Lewis Palos said. The object was found to be a matchbox containing an unknown type of

Death row inmates hear convictions reversed by court

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Two ecstatic death row inmates whose murder convictions were reversed say they are eager for new trials they contend will prove their innocence.

"This is good news," Francisco Cardenas, 27, said Wednesday. "It's a miracle. I thank God."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Wednesday threw out the conviction of Cardenas, an illegal immigrant from Mexico, for killing a Fort Bend County sheriff's deputy who had stopped to question him as he hitchhiked in 1988.

Jackie Barron Wilson, originally from Lubbock, also won a reversal of his conviction for abducting and killing a 5-year-old girl from an Arlington apartment, also in 1988.

In a third reversal, the court rejected the conviction of a Dallas man, Gayland Bradford, for a 1988 murder during a robbery in Dallas.

Fort Bend County District Attorney John Healey said he likely will ask the criminal appeals court to reconsider its decision in the Cardenas case. If it refuses, he said he would retry Cardenas and again seek the death penalty.

Norm Kinne, first assistant district attorney in Dallas, made a similar statement regarding Bradford and Wilson.

Alley, Holmes are named as 'Outstanding UIL Performers'

Two Hereford High School students were among 144 high school musicians who were selected as Outstanding Performers at the 1993 University Interscholastic League Texas State Solo and Ensemble Contest recently.

Aimee Alley and Jenifer Holmes participated in the three-day competitions, which was held at the University of Texas in Austin and Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

More than 16,000 high school musicians attended.

"To be recognized as an Outstanding Performer at the UIL Texas State Solo and Ensemble Contest is one of the highest individual musical achievements that a high school student can attain," said Richard Floyd, UIL State Director of Music.

Both Aimee and Jenifer were cited for their twirling solo performances.

The contest was judged by music educators, university professors and professional musicians from throughout the U.S.

The contest format provided both a performance evaluation and specialized musical instruction for each student musician.

McCathern receives degree Saturday in Austin ceremony

Mike McCathern, former Hereford resident, will realize a dream come true Saturday when he receives a college degree in special ceremonies at the LBJ Library in Austin.

McCathern, 41, has been employed with the Texas Water Development Board for about eight years, and he is now the director of Creative Communications Services for the board. About five years ago, he started attending night school at Bergstrom Air Force Base, taking accredited college courses offered by Park College.

He has earned a degree and will graduate magna cum laude with a 3.8 grade average Saturday. His graduation comes only a few weeks after his son, Michael Wayne, graduated from high school.

Mike and his wife, the former Cathy Crist of Hereford, also have a daughter, Amber. Mike is the son of Gerald and Bonnie McCathern of Hereford.

'New Deal' exhibit set for museum at Canyon

The History Department at West Texas A&M University and the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum at Canyon plan to mark the 60th anniversary of the beginning of the New Deal with a museum exhibit and two-day conference at West Texas A&M.

In preparation for the project, the Museum and the History Department at WTAMU Canyon wish to locate individuals who participated in New Deal programs in the Texas Panhandle-Plains region from 1933 until 1942.

Information especially is needed to compile an inventory of projects conducted by various New Deal agencies, including the National Youth Administration (NYA), National Recovery Administration (NRA), Farm Security Administration (FSA), Civilian Conservation Corp (CCC), Works Progress Administration (WPA), Public Works Administration (PWA), Civil Works Administration (CWA), Soil Conservation Service (SCS) and the Shelterbelt Project.

"We also are looking for photographs of New Deal projects and related artifacts. These items include tools, posters, documents, clothing, quilts, furniture, or anything else pertaining to the New Deal. The Museum may wish to photograph or borrow such objects for the exhibit," said Bill Green, Curator of History for the PPHM.

If you participated in New Deal programs or have photographs or other materials relating to the New Deal in this region, please contact: Dr. Bill Green, Curator of History, Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, Canyon, Texas 79016 or call (806)656-2264.

Entitled "A Visual Legacy: The New Deal on the Texas Plains," the exhibit will open at the Museum September 4, 1993 and close January 16, 1994. The conference on the campus of WTAMU October 1 and 2, 1993, concludes with a tour of surviving New Deal sites.

The school, which was founded in 1899, has an enrollment of 1,600 undergraduate and graduate students.

Dairy Goat Clinic set at Bull Barn

By JILL JOHNSON

The Deaf Smith County 4-H will be sponsoring a Dairy Goat Clinic on Tuesday, June 15th. The Clinic will be held at the Hereford Bull Barn beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Topics such as breeds of dairy goats, their many uses as well as dairy goat care and showing will be presented. There will also be milking and cheese making demonstrations.

Anyone interested in attending should contact the Deaf Smith County Extension Office at 364-3573.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Blankenship on dean's honor roll

Jenna Blankenship, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Blankenship of Hereford, was one of 714 students at Abilene Christian University named to the Dean's Honor Roll for the spring 1993 semester.

To make the Honor Roll, a student must complete at least 12 semester hours for grades and earn 3.45 or higher grade point average.

ACU is a private liberal arts college that offers 116 baccalaureate programs, 39 master's programs and one doctoral program through its five undergraduate colleges, Graduate School and School of Nursing.

Urbanczyk cited at South Plains

LEVELLAND -- Hereford resident Gregory Urbanczyk has been named to the Dean's Honor List for the spring 1993 semester at South Plains College.

To be on the Dean's Honor List, a student must maintain a minimum 3.25 grade point average while carrying at least 12 semester averages.

There were 351 students receiving this honor among the school's Levelland and Lubbock campuses.

Bulls take 1st game of NBA finals

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer
PHOENIX (AP) - It's too early to say the Chicago Bulls can't be stopped in their march toward history. Wait another day.

"Let's not go crazy after one game," Charles Barkley said calmly after his Phoenix Suns had crumbled. "Let's wait until Game 2. If we lose that, then we can go crazy."

The weapons that gained the Suns the NBA's best record vanished with their homecourt advantage in Wednesday night's 100-92 loss in the opener of the finals. Phoenix must find them for Friday's second home game.

Barkley couldn't hit his shots, point guard Kevin Johnson couldn't create, and the highest-scoring team in the NBA was held 21 points below its average by Chicago's aggressive defense.

On the other side, the Bulls did the things that brought them the last two titles and put them in position to become only the third NBA team to win three in a row.

Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen scored almost effortlessly, all the Bulls defended tenaciously and they passed so well that four players had five assists each.

And they kept their cool when their 20-point lead midway through the second quarter dropped to two late in the third.

"We never lost our poise and that's a part of the experience and maturity of this team," Jordan said. "We don't lose our control, especially on the road."

"We don't lose our composure and we do the right things down the stretch."

Jordan had 31 points and Pippen 27 as Chicago hit 53 percent of its shots.

Barkley scored 21, but made only 9 of 25 shots, and Richard Dumas added 20 with a game-high 12 rebounds. Johnson managed only 11 points and two assists and committed five turnovers. The Suns sank only 44 percent of their shots and never led.

"Kevin and I both struggled, but as long as you're human, that's going to happen," Barkley said.

"Maybe it was nerves and maybe it wasn't," Barkley said of the finals debut for a team with a rookie coach and rookies Dumas and Oliver Miller counted on to play key roles.

The Bulls are in a tough spot, having lost a chance to boost their confidence with an opening victory.

"I think this does put pressure on them," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "We've got one game now, and they really want to hold serve on their home court on Friday."

Before the game, Jordan broke his two-week media boycott in an interview with NBC in which he said he didn't have a gambling problem. He let his teammates make the most noise in the first quarter - 11 points by Horace Grant and 8 by Pippen - as Chicago led 34-20.

"Scottie and the other guys got out of the box quickly," Jordan said. "I didn't want to force the issue until I felt I had the opportunity."

A 15-6 spurt cut Chicago's 46-26 lead to 52-41 at halftime. And a 12-3 run made it 71-69 before the Bulls went ahead 73-69 with one quarter left.

"There's no moral victory in the NBA Finals," Phoenix coach Paul Westphal said after the comeback fell short.

Jordan decided to take over in the fourth and scored Chicago's first eight points in the period. But the Bulls stayed close, trailing only 88-85 with four minutes left.

Then the Bulls' defensive intensity heated up as Phoenix went scoreless on its next five possessions, three of them ending in blocks by Jordan, Grant and Scott Williams.

Chicago, meanwhile, reeled off eight straight points, the last three on B.J. Armstrong's 3-pointer that made the score 96-85 with 2:17 remaining.

While Armstrong, who scored 16 points and kept Johnson from penetrating, tended to business with the rest of the Bulls, the Suns fell behind early.

"We were just going, 'Wow,'" Dumas said of the excitement of being in the finals. "They were very composed."

Card playoff decides scramble

Two teams scored a 29 in the Wednesday Scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. Winning first on a scorecard playoff was the team of Bobby Weaver, Scott Taylor, Hugh Blakey and Charles Hoover.

Taking second place with the other 29 score was a team composed of Santry Hacker, Mikel Walsler, Kent Morrison and Dave Harbison. In third place, with a 30, was the team of Rick Hopping, Speedy Nieman, Jim Crosson and Art Clark.

Three teams carded a 31 in the weekly event. The scramble is open to all golfers, with registration starting each Wednesday evening.

Dates set for sports camps

Dates have been set for both Lady Whiteface Volleyball Camp and Lady Whiteface Basketball Camp. The volleyball camp will be July 12-16, and the basketball camp will be July 26-30.

The two camps have several similarities. Both are for girls who are about to enter the fourth through ninth grades. Both will concentrate on individual skills in the morning (9 a.m.-noon) and feature team competition in the afternoon (1-4 p.m.). Instruction will come from high school and junior high coaches and from ex-players.

Campers should bring a sack lunch each day. If they leave for lunch, only a parent may pick them up.

Each camp costs $60 per camper, who will get a T-shirt. A deposit of $10 for each camp needs to be turned in by July 1 along with a registration form, which is available either in the Hereford Junior High office or in the office of girls' athletic director Brenda Reeh, which is at HJH.

Deposits and forms should be sent to Reeh, 509 Ave. J, for the volleyball camp, and to Eddie Fortenberry, 234 Aspen, for the girls basketball camp. Registration for either camp also can be sent to Hereford Junior High, 704 LaPlata Dr. Checks should be made out to either "Hereford ISD Volleyball Camp" or to "Hereford ISD Girls' Basketball Camp."

Pete Maravich of LSU made 30 of 31 free throws in a 1969 basketball game against Oregon State.

Walt Dukes of Seton Hall came down with 734 rebounds in the 1953 basketball season, an average of 22.2 per game.

Canadiens claim Stanley Cup

MONTREAL (AP) - The Stanley Cup was sitting in the Montreal Forum, and the Montreal Canadiens meant to keep it there.

Playing as if their careers depended on it, the Canadiens simply outworked the Los Angeles Kings. The score showed it.

"We did not want to go back to L.A., and when you have a chance to walk with the Stanley Cup, you'd better do it," said John LeClair after the Canadiens clinched the Cup with a 4-1 victory over the Kings on Wednesday night.

The Kings might have been a desperate team, but the Canadiens were more determined.

They didn't even need overtime this time to pull out a victory. The overtime kings of this year's playoffs had won a record 10 straight OT games, including three in a row against the Kings. That set the stage for Wednesday night's relatively easy victory.

"For a young team, we played our best hockey at the right time," said Canadiens forward Kirk Muller. "It's a great feeling."

This was a victory for Team Togetherness, no doubt. Few NHL teams have been closer in recent years.

"I've never played on a team that was this close," said LeClair, one of the many playoff heroes for the Canadiens with two straight overtime goals. "We've spent so much time together and nobody gets sick of each other. It's a very close team and that might be the difference down the line."

This season's Canadiens were described as a working-class outfit with only one star, goaltender Patrick Roy. But even Roy proved he was human during the season when his game faltered along with the team and there were rumors he might be traded.

He redeemed himself in the playoffs, winning his second Conn Smythe Trophy as the playoffs' most valuable player.

"It was a great feeling to come back and have a great playoffs and win the Stanley Cup," Roy said.

The Kings seemingly were on their way to a victory and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 series when defenseman Marty McSorley's stick got in the way in Game 2. The stick, curved beyond the legal limit, cost the Kings a penalty that the Canadiens cashed in for a power-play goal by Eric Desjardins. That tied the game at 2.

Desjardins completed a hat trick, the first by a defenseman in the finals, 51 seconds into overtime.

That was a turning point in the finals, but not as big as Game 3, according to the Kings' Wayne Gretzky.

"We battled back (in Game 3) from a 3-0 deficit in the third period and had three glorious chances to win," Gretzky said. "(Jari) Kurri was robbed by Roy, (Luc) Robitaille missed a breakaway and (Tomas) Sandstrom's shot hit our guy in the back."

"Then they won real fast in overtime (on LeClair's goal 34 seconds into the extra period for a 4-3 victory) and that was a key."

LeClair scored another overtime goal in Game 4, putting Montreal on the brink of its 24th Stanley Cup. Wednesday night, the Canadiens pushed the Kings over the edge.

Montreal's Paul DiPietro scored from the right circle at 15:10 of the first period. The Kings tied it on McSorley's shot from between the circles at 2:40 of the second.

The rest of the night belonged to the Canadiens, as Muller scored at 3:51 and Stefan Lebeau on a power play at 11:31, both from in front of the net.

Playing catchup did not suit the Kings.

"They are a great team with a lead," Kings coach Barry Melrose said of the Canadiens. "With Patrick Roy and a one or two-goal lead, they are very hard to catch."

DiPietro added the finishing touch at 12:06 of the third, setting off an avalanche of noise from the 17,959 fans in the Forum - and later disturbances by fans celebrating in the streets of Montreal.

Vandals looted stores, smashed windows, hurled bottles, overturned cars and uprooted trees in the downtown shopping district.

Ashe's newly published book criticizes Magic, Chamberlain

NEW YORK (AP) - Arthur Ashe had tender words for his daughter and harsh criticism for the promiscuity of fellow athletes Magic Johnson and Wilt Chamberlain in a memoir completed just weeks before his AIDS-related death.

The sexual shenanigans of basketball stars Johnson and Chamberlain reinforced racist stereotypes of the black man as a slave to his sex drive, the late tennis star writes in "Days of Grace."

"African Americans have spent decades denying that we are sexual primitives by nature, as racists have argued since the days of slavery," Ashe says. "These two college-trained black men of international fame and immense personal wealth do their best to reinforce the stereotype."

The behavior of Johnson, who has detailed sex with six women in a single night, and Chamberlain, who claimed 20,000 "conquests," produced "a certain amount of racial embarrassment" said Ashe.

He adds that he didn't believe Chamberlain's claim, concluding, "I felt more pity than sorrow for Wilt as his macho accounting backfired on him in the form of a wave of public criticism."

Despite being criticized, Johnson had words of praise for Ashe.

"I look upon Arthur Ashe with the utmost respect and as a role model for all, but especially for blacks," Johnson said in a statement.

As far as Ashe's remarks about him, Johnson said, "I have always taken full responsibility for my actions and risked public alienation by coming forward with my story. It is my hope that by taking the straightforward approach, I have begun and will continue to educate and bring awareness to the prevention and spread of this disease."

Wilkins' power leads Cubs to win

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Rick Wilkins realizes his defensive skills got him to the major leagues. Now, if only he could raise them to the level of his offense...

"Defense is the worst part of my game right now," the Chicago catcher said after hitting two home runs Wednesday night in the Cubs' 8-3 victory over the woeful New York Mets.

But things are looking up after he threw out New York base-stealing ace Vince Coleman once in two tries.

Wilkins, who had only eight homers last season, hit his second and third in two nights to stand at 11 in the early going this year.

Wilkins and Mark Grace drove in three runs apiece to back the strong pitching of Jose Guzman. Grace had three doubles.

Guzman (4-4) allowed three runs on seven hits, striking out seven and walking none in 7.2-3 innings. Frank Tanana (3-5) yielded five runs on nine hits through four-plus innings.

Ryne Sandberg had three singles in five at-bats and drove in a run in the first inning, when the visiting Cubs took a 3-0 lead.

Chico Walker homered for the Mets.

Phillies 8, Astros 0

Terry Mulholland, backed by four homers, had his league-leading sixth complete game and second shutout as Philadelphia cooled off visiting Houston.

Darren Daulton, Lenny Dykstra, Jim Eisenreich and Milt Thompson homered.

Mulholland (7-5) allowed six hits, struck out nine and walked none.

Pete Harnisch (6-3) lasted 4 2-3 innings, giving up all six runs on nine hits. He struck out six and walked two.

Giants 3, Cardinals 1

Matt Williams' three-run homer in the first inning - which tied him with Cleveland's Albert Belle for the major-league lead with 18 - stood up despite Bub Black's struggle.

Black (5-1) allowed nine hits and one unearned run in six innings. The Cardinals outthit the Giants 11-5. Rod Beck's 17th save matched his total for all of last season.

Darren Lewis led off the first against Donovan Osborne (3-3) and was safe on third baseman Tracy Woodson's fielding error. Robby Thompson singled and Williams hit his 18th homer.

Pirates 4, Rockies 1

Al Martin had a two-run homer and a triple, and Denny Neagle won his second in a row since becoming a starter.

Neagle (2-1) limited the Rockies to six hits in six innings.

The Pirates reached Willie Blair (2-3) for three runs in the first two innings.

Reds 3, Expos 2

Cincinnati's Bip Roberts scored from second base on a throwing error by third baseman Mike Lansing in the top of the 12th inning.

Roberts reached on a fielder's choice against Mike Gardiner (0-2), took second on a two-out walk to Barry Larkin and scored when Lansing threw a ball into the dirt at first base.

Greg Caderet (2-1) pitched 1 1-3 scoreless innings of relief. Bobby Ayala got the last two outs for his second save.

Cincinnati's Joe Oliver had a solo homer off Jeff Shaw in the sixth.

Marquis Grissom had a homer off Tom Browning in the first.

Rangers welcome chance to heal numerous injuries

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The rain-out of their game against the Minnesota Twins offered a welcome night of rest for the Texas Rangers' walking wounded.

The Rangers' posted lineup again Wednesday was missing slugger Jose Canseco and designated hitter Julio Franco, both out with injuries.

And the team's leading home run hitter, Juan Gonzalez, was unable to start in left field due to a pulled hamstring. Gonzalez was penciled as the cleanup hitter at designated hitter.

Starting shortstop Manuel Lee and Nolan Ryan also remain on the disabled list.

Wednesday's game, called after a rain delay of an hour and 56 minutes, will be made up as part of a two-night doubleheader on Sept. 10.

Considering the number of injuries he's had to contend with, Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy was also concerned about playing on a wet field.

"We don't need any more injuries, any guys slipping and sliding and hurting their knee," Kennedy said. "It's good for us. It's another day off the legs for several of our guys who are hurt."

Kennedy also was worried about the arm of his ace right-hander Kevin Brown. Brown warmed up twice for a total of 30 minutes in anticipation of the game's start and Kennedy said he was not going to ask Brown to warm up a third time.

If the game did begin, left-hander Craig Lefferts was going to get the start out of the bullpen.

"I don't like to do that to any pitcher," Kennedy said. "He has a resilient-type arm but to ask him to warm up again isn't the smart way to go."

Brown (5-3) who leads the major leagues in complete games with six, will wait until Friday night against the Cleveland Indians to make his next start.

"Although I never like to miss a start, overall we could use the night off because we've got so many guys with hamstring pulls and leg problems," Brown said.

The Rangers will send Charlie Leibrandt (6-2) against the Twins Thursday night.

Jim Deshaies, Wednesday's schedule starter for the Twins, will throw Saturday night against Oakland.

Kevin Tapani (2-6) will start Thursday night for Minnesota.

"It's not going to affect our rotation," Twins manager Tom Kelly said.

Hot McLemore gives boost to Orioles

By The Associated Press

Mark McLemore has been bouncing around baseball for 12 years, from Salem to Peoria. At long last, he finally might have a home.

McLemore had a career-high five hits and drove in three runs as Baltimore beat Bob Welch (4-5) and Oakland 7-4 Wednesday night at Camden Yards. The Orioles have won seven straight games.

McLemore went 5 for 5 and scored three runs for the Orioles, who completed a 6-0 homestand.

"Without him in there, we'd probably be 15 games out," winning pitcher Rick Sutcliffe (6-2) said.

McLemore, a utility player until this season, boosted his batting average to .308, compared to his lifetime mark of .229. His big night came after he got his first day off since April 26.

"You could say that this was the best game of my career," McLemore said. "The hits were timely, too, and that made the night sweeter."

After six seasons in the minors, he broke into the major leagues with California in 1988. He also played for Cleveland and Houston, as well as returning to the minors, before signing with the Orioles organization in July 1991.

"That's one good player," Dennis Eckersley said. "I guess it was just his night."

The victory put the Orioles (28-30) two games under .500 for the first time since they were 1-3. Baltimore moved within a half-game of fourth place and stayed 7 1/2 games behind first-place Detroit in the AL East.

Tigers 7, White Sox 4

David Wells, released by Toronto in spring training, won for the seventh time in eight decisions as Detroit beat Chicago at Comiskey Park.

Wells (7-1) pitched five innings and gave up four runs on seven hits.

Alan Trammell and Travis Fryman

each drove in two runs for Detroit.

Wilson Alvarez (5-2) gave up six runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Angels 6, Blue Jays 4

Mark Langston (7-1) pitched 7-2-3 strong innings and Kelly Gruber homered against his former team as California beat Toronto at the SkyDome.

Dave Stewart (2-2) gave up five runs and six hits in eight innings. He struck out five and walked four.

Indians 3, Red Sox 2

Wayne Kirby homered and three Cleveland pitchers combined on a seven-hitter as the Indians beat visiting Boston, ending Danny Darwin's personal five-game winning streak.

Darwin (5-5) had gone 5-0 with a 1.13 ERA in seven starts prior to Wednesday. He allowed three runs and seven hits in 7 2-3 innings.

Cliff Young (2-2) was the winner in relief.

Mariners 6, Brewers 1

Randy Johnson (7-3) pitched six-hit ball for eight innings and struck out 11 as Seattle beat Milwaukee at County Stadium.

Bill Wegman (4-9) allowed 14 hits in a complete-game loss.

The Mariners snapped a 1-1 tie with three runs in the seventh and added two in the ninth. Mackey Sasser drove in two runs.

Royals 10, Yankees 3

Rookie Phil Hiatt drove in five runs with three hits, including a homer, to help Kansas City rout New York. The Yankees have lost 13 of their last 20 games at K.C.

Hiatt, in a 3-for-25 slide, homered off Jim Abbott (4-7) into the right-field bullpen after Harvey Pulliam doubled leading off the sixth inning. Hiatt also had a two-run double in a four-run third inning, and singled in a run when Kansas City scored four more runs in the seventh.

Hipolito Pichardo (4-2) pitched five innings for the victory.

1993 features more freak injuries

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Baseball Writer

When it comes to injuries, Jose Canseco knows the bizarre ones. First, he got hit on the head trying to catch a fly ball, then he hurt his arm as a mop-up relief pitcher.

Dwight Gooden also is familiar with unusual aches. He was minding his business in the New York Mets clubhouse this season when he got hit with Vince Coleman's 9-iron practice swing. Gooden missed a start.

"These are accidents that happen to people every day," said Bret Saberhagen, who needed 16 stitches to close facial cuts after he tripped in a New York hotel room a few years ago while with the Kansas City Royals.

Some of the most notable injuries are the strangest. Bob Ojeda nearly severed a finger with hedge clippers; Curt Simmons sliced a toe with a lawn mower; Dick Allen put his hand through a headlight while pushing a stalled car uphill.

Coleman's career almost ended when his leg got caught in an automatic tarpaulin machine. Pat Zachry, upset at giving up the hit that enabled Pete Rose to tie for the longest hitting streak in National League history, kicked the dugout steps and broke his toe.

Ruben Sierra, one of the American League's most talented players, put himself out of action while playing for Texas when he sprained an ankle chasing after his daughter on a mall escalator in Texas.

"When it happened," he said, "I just thought, 'I don't get hurt on the field, but I get hurt here. I can't believe it.' It just shows you have to be careful everywhere."

John Smiley, now with Cincinnati, slammed a taxi door shut on his left hand after a game for Pittsburgh in Atlanta.

"I didn't think it was that serious," Smiley said. "I broke the hand before and it wasn't as swollen as the first time."

Gooden was a clubhouse victim this season for the second time in his career. In San Diego a few years ago, reserve catcher Mackey Sasser was looking for a place to put a metal chair and accidentally set it down on Gooden's left foot, and then sat down.

Gooden thought his middle toe was broken, but it wasn't. Instead, the Mets said there was some "soft-tissue damage."

But another Cy Young Award winner, Jim Lonborg, was never the same after a skiing accident following Boston's pennant-winning season in 1967. He tore ligaments on the slopes at Lake Tahoe and did not completely recover.

Then there was the time All-Star Lou Whitaker hurt himself trying to do splits while dancing with his wife at a party. Or the time Cecil Upshaw sliced his hand on a rain gutter, trying to show teammates how he used to dunk basketballs.

Sometimes, even the celebrations cause injuries. In 1949, the New York Yankees had been plagued by injuries so many times that the newspapers began a daily count. So when the Yankees finally outlasted their injuries and beat Boston on the final day to win the pennant, coach Bill Dickey jumped for joy.

He jumped right up and hit his head on the dugout ceiling, and knocked himself out.

'Women Artists of Texas' exhibit scheduled for historical museum

In 1936, one of the greatest exhibitions of contemporary Texas art ever assembled was an integral part of the Texas Centennial Exposition. Works by the most important artists working in Texas were exhibited at the Exposition; over 60 percent of the works in the Texas Section were by women.

Historians acknowledge women's lead in establishing art communities in Texas. Theoretically, while men were occupied with settling the state and forging its economic foundations, cultural pursuits were left to women. Groups of women (professionally trained artists among them) organized art-related activities in all parts of the state, often on the heels of settlement. These sophisticated art patrons created exhibitions with works borrowed from collections outside Texas and soon sponsored exhibitions of "native" Texas artists, most of whom were women.

Trained artists were rare in Texas before 1900. However, by at least 1900 the majority of Texas artists (both male and female) were trained. Women dominated the major annual Texas exhibitions at Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, and San Antonio, and were the driving forces in other parts of the state.

The importance of women artists to Texas art history should have been assured by their strong showing at the Texas Centennial Exposition. Yet, today only a handful of Texas women artists have been recognized as significant...most have been forgotten.

In an effort to increase the level of awareness of the contributions of women artists, the Museum is organizing an exhibition, "Women Artists of Texas, 1850-1950," to be shown from June 11 through August 22, 1993, in the temporary exhibitions gallery. The exhibition is a survey of some of the most important artists who worked in Texas and includes some 110 pieces.

Using the PPHM's significant collection of works by Texas women artists as a foundation, the Museum has borrowed numerous works from both public and private collections. This exhibition is of special significance, since it is the first comprehensive exhibition on women artists of Texas of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Exhibition funded by Panhandle-Plains Historical Society; The Summerlee Foundation, Dallas; Bill and Mary Cheek, Dallas; United Pawn, Fort Worth and Denton; and The Dozier Foundation, Dallas.

Protect your eyes

(NAPS)--Good news for contact lens wearers - or those who'd like to be among them - new advances in optical technology can help you see your way clear to better sight, healthier eyes and greater savings.

For example, many people who thought they couldn't wear contacts due to severe astigmatism and other eye conditions, or aren't happy with the vision or comfort they're getting from their present pair, can get a whole new outlook on vision correction with rigid gas permeable (RGP) lenses. Combining the best features of hard and soft lenses, RGPs may be a healthy choice for five good reasons:

-Visual acuity: RGP lenses keep their shape, unlike soft lenses, providing sharper vision for those who are nearsighted, farsighted and many severe astigmatics.

-Superior eye health: the most frequently used RGPs allow approximately two to two and a half times more oxygen permeability compared to the most commonly prescribed soft contact lenses. RGPs are made from advanced materials that allow oxygen to pass through the lens and feed the cornea; in general, soft lenses don't offer the same degree of oxygen delivery. As a result, the cornea may become starved for oxygen (hypoxia). This condition could compromise the cornea's ability to protect itself by impairing the function of its protective barrier against injury and organisms.

-Custom fit: unlike soft contact lenses, RGPs are custom fit to the wearer's cornea. A contact lens practitioner can exercise more control over many RGP lens design and fitting variables. Their control allows the practitioner to achieve a more accurate fit between the RGP lens curves and the wearer's cornea, than can be achieved with soft contact lenses. This relatively new development is available in an RGP called Envision.

-Long-term comfort: although RGP lenses may require a short "break-in" period, they're soon completely comfortable and once you're used to them, they're likely to be as comfortable, longer than soft lenses. That's because their slick surface makes them less prone to deposit build up. In addition, they are less likely to dry out, so your comfort level doesn't vary as the day goes by. Many soft contact lens wearers complain of symptoms of dryness. This is because all soft contact lenses contain water and are predisposed to evaporation and dehydration. Since RGPs don't contain water, they are not subject to environmental changes that would lead to a sensation of dryness.

-Lens care and life span: RGP lenses last longer (two years or more) than soft lenses (nine to 19 months); deposits are less likely to build up because the new fluorinated RGP lens materials are less likely to dry out, resist deposits better and are easier to clean when depositing occurs. In fact, over time, RGP lenses such as Boston Envision, are more economical than either disposable or traditional soft contact lenses. When compared to soft lenses, RGPs are more durable lenses requiring fewer replacements and lower than average solutions costs over the lifetime of the lens.

To find out if RGPs or Boston Envision lenses are right for you, see your eyecare professional.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Miserable in Maine" whose husband is spending a lot of time with his attractive assistant. I could have written that letter word for word except I was married for 24 years instead of 15.

From personal experience, I would advise "Miserable" to do exactly as you suggested--get counseling, don't issue any ultimatums and make home a pleasant place to be. And I would add: Assume your husband still loves you, reevaluate your strengths and weaknesses and get on with a self-improvement program.

After several years of absolute misery, my husband and I ended up in a counselor's office. It turned out that in spite of his persistent denials, an affair had indeed taken place with his assistant. She made the mistake, however, of assuming that because he was involved with her, he didn't love me. She began to pressure him to get a divorce.

After a while, my husband resented the pressure and ended the affair. The woman became extremely angry and accused him of ruining her life. He was filled with guilt over what he had done to her and grief-stricken because of what he had done to me. His successful business plummeted into bankruptcy, and he became deeply depressed. That's when we ended up in the counselor's office.

He asked me to forgive him and said he loved me and wanted to spend the rest of his life making up for what he had done. We renewed our marriage vows and continued counseling for 18 months. He apologized to our three adult children for what he had put them through and asked for forgiveness. A healing has taken place in our entire family.

I hope you will publish my letter and let couples know that fractured marriages can heal. We have never been happier in our entire lives.--Blessed in Bakersfield.

DEAR BAKE: What a heartwarming story. Your letter is also proof that good counseling can make a world of difference. Thanks for the testimony.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is in reply to "J.R., Sandborn, Ind." who was sick of the sex, violence, profanity Wedding information must be submitted by 5 p.m. Monday to be included in the next Sunday Brand. Wedding information forms, as well as those for engagements and showers, are available at the news office, 313 N. Lee.

and complete lack of moral ethics in the programming forced upon television viewers. I say, right on.

While I applaud all of those who try to create entertainment that is wholesome, positive and thought-provoking, I send a loud hiss and a louder boooo for those media market grabbers who think the average American TV watcher is some sort of moron.

It's time to get involved and make people take responsibility, Ann. Sure, it's easy to just turn off the set, but why do you think advertisers spend millions selling on TV if they think television didn't have some sort of lasting impact? Children are especially vulnerable to what they view and listen to, and I sincerely hope you think about what is really at stake here.

I believe in the First Amendment, too, but enough is enough.--Ramona, Calif.

DEAR ROMONA: TV is not merely "entertainment." It's a business--and a mighty big one. Everything depends on the ratings. If huge numbers of viewers watch garbage, we're going to get MORE garbage. If viewers switch channels or turn the set off and complain to the sponsors, we're going to get higher quality fare. Readers, unite! Money talks, and the consumer is king.

Few mothers, daughters get to wedding without fights over preparations

By MARYLN SCHWARTZ
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) - Anna Dwyer never will forget her daughter's wedding.

"We had a fight a week before the ceremony," she explains. "We didn't really become friends again until my first grandchild was born. And I think we're lucky. A lot of mother-and-daughter relationships never survive the wedding."

She can laugh about it now. At the time, it wasn't so funny. Anna's the first to admit that all brides are beautiful, most weddings turn out to be lovely and weddings are supposed to bring families closer together.

"But if mothers make it through without at least one terrible blowout with the bride, they ought to be written up in the Guinness Book of World Records."

"When my daughter got engaged, I went to the bookstore and found at least 20 books on how to help the bride survive a wedding. There was nothing for the mother of the bride. When our daughter's wedding (with 350 guests) was all over, my husband wanted to go on a vacation to the beach to get over it. I wanted to start three-day-a-week therapy. Every hostility I ever had was boiling up to the surface."

She also had to battle distant cousins who wanted to bring 4-year-old twins to the ceremony and bridal dinner.

"No children," she emphasized. "These aren't children" she was told. "This is family."

There were other problems. "My daughter wanted an informal reception that, as far as I was concerned, was one step from being a picnic," Anna says. "I thought that was terrible. She was wearing a formal dress; I said we should have a formal buffet."

They also disagreed on the invitations, the bridesmaid dresses, the mother-of-the-bride dress, the relatives who should and should not be invited.

She says her husband was no help. "He said I raised her to be independent, I had to let her be that." At least that was the attitude until the daughter announced that she was serving barbecue for her friends at the party. "My husband told her in no uncertain terms he wasn't paying $30 a person for guests to eat barbecue."

All is well in the family now. "And I've started a tradition with my friends," Anna explains. "Instead of giving a shower for the bride, I now give showers for the bride's mother. Friends are invited to come and bring helpful hints on how to make it through the ceremony. It's amazing what a little support will do. Mainly, it helps us all realize that this is the last time you're ever going to have to really be in charge with your daughter. No wonder we all go off the deep end."

She's not the only one who's finding ways to honor the mothers as well as the daughters during nuptial festivities.

Recently Val Bashour gave a party honoring three bridal moms "because the happy couple gets all the attention. I thought it was time to let the moms have a little of the spotlight."

Another popular party is being given for bridal moms no earlier than five years after the wedding.

"We all spend a fortune on the mother-of-the-bride dress and then never get a chance to wear it again," says Hillary Forbes. "A few years ago, I read in a magazine about a mother-of-the-bride dinner dance. The only rules are that everyone who attends has to wear her mother-of-the-bride dress."

She called around and found lots of support for the idea. Somehow there just isn't a good occasion for a mother-of-the-bride dress.

Some people, however, didn't respond to her invitation.

"It wasn't that they didn't like the party," she says. "I waited too long, and some of them could no longer fit into their dresses."

Poll finds few attain the American Dream

NEW YORK (AP) - Only 17 percent of Americans polled say they have achieved the American dream, and eight in every 10 say it will be harder for the next generation to do so.

A poll conducted by Gallup for the CNBC cable network found most Americans worried about obstacles that could keep them from achieving their goals.

The obstacles, ranked by those who said they were "extremely" or "very" worried, included rising taxes (72 percent), the cost of education (71 percent), catastrophic illness (67 percent), pension cuts by the government or their employer (62 percent) and cuts in employee benefits (61 percent).

Fully 58 percent were strongly worried about losing their job. Of less concern was personal debt (46 percent).

While 17 percent said they had achieved the American dream, 68 percent said they had some hope or expectation of achieving it. But less than half, 43 percent, said they had a better chance than their parents had. Especially pessimistic were baby boomers.

Fifteen percent said President Clinton's administration will make it easier to achieve their dream, 46 percent said harder, and the rest said the White House would have no impact or they were not sure.

Few Americans of any age group thought the next generation will have an easier time. Eighty percent said those who are children today will have a harder time achieving the American dream.

The poll was taken by phone May 21-23 with a random sample of 602 adults. Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Harden confesses to having fallen into career as published songwriter

By NICKI BRUCE LOGAN
Plainview Daily Herald

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) - "I guess you could say that I fell face forward into the song writing business ... with a little help," says Jason Harden, talking about "Houston Solution," his first song writing attempt that was published and recorded.

Harden had been interested in music for several years, but his interests, and his talents, he thought, were in the area of performance.

In fact, he ended up studying at South Plains College in Levelland, recognized across the U.S. as a college with an excellent music performance department specializing in bluegrass music. South Plains wasn't Harden's first choice. He attended several other universities, including Wayland Baptist University in Plainview, searching for a career that interested him.

He credits Plainview musician John Sandits with defining his goals.

"He knows a lot about the music business. Because of what I learned from him, I was able to pitch a song to (country music legend) George Jones. He didn't buy it. But it was a thrill to get to pitch it to him."

Harden is pleased with his college choice. At South Plains, he has received numerous honors such as Outstanding Student in the Performing Arts, the Dean's List, and one that he looks back on with pride - performing on stage with Redd Stewart when the Redd Stewart Studio was dedicated last March.

Stewart is the author of the classic country song "Tennessee Waltz" as well as "Bonaparte's Retreat."

His vocal performance began in earnest, Harden recalls, when he won Male Vocalist in the KFOR Sparrow Music Contest in 1987. He spent that summer taking his music to youth camps.

Actually composing music came a little later.

"I was working one summer as youth director at Stamford. I heard the lines to 'I Love You More Than Life' in my head and sat down at the keyboard and wrote it."

Harden recorded that song, plus another composition, "Cottage Blue Music," at South Plains, then sent the tape to several producers.

The rejection letter from one producer was bittersweet. While rejecting "Cottage Blue Music," he suggested that "I Love You More Than Life" had possibilities.
