ADKISSONIAN'S BANQUET

The Annual Banquet of the Purple and White Brigade Held Monday.

The followers of the purple and white colors held their annual banquet in the Young Ladies' Dormitory and those present enjoyed a feast of good eating, oratory and music. The decorations were in the colors of the Adkissonian Society, Purple and White, the walls bearing the Add pennants, the light globes having purple and white shades and in the dining room from the center of the ceiling to each corner and to the walls were strung purple and white streamers. The color scheme even went into the eatables for the cake and ice cream were in the two colors. All those present expressed themselves as having had a really nice time and were sorry when the hour for departure came.

A good crowd was gathered in the parlors of the dormitory to help the Adds celebrate the birthday of the Father of Our Country and also the anniversary of the division of the old Adkissonian society into two societies. Merry conversation was freely indulged in by the young people, the young men enjoying talking to the Sappho's and Euterpeans present who for the evening had transformed themselves into Adds, and the young ladies delighted in listening to the voices of the Adkissonian Apollos.

The program rendered was a good one. Miss Laura Pace came first in a reading entitled "What They Say About Cupid."

Next Miss Rebecca McMicken sang "Firelight Faces," and then Miss Ruth Gage gave a reading "An Old Woman's Complaint." Miss Lucile Neely rendered a vocal solo entitled "Sing Slow, O Heart of Mine." John E. Arnold gave a fine oration on "William B. Gladstone." Miss Rollie Gordon sang "With You in Eternity." And then just before the guests gathered around the banquet board Miss Lelia Ross closed the program singing a pretty song "Violets."

Then the merry banqueters gathered at the tables and were served a dainty luncheon, in two courses

Ham Sandwiches Chicken Salad
Pickles Olives

Pea Patties
Waldorf Salad

Coffee Cocoa
The second course was purple and white Ice Cream with all kinds of cake.

Then everyone passed to the punch table which was presided over by genial Fred Madison and Miss Florence Harrington. The delicious drink served in a delightful way by the host and hostess of the punch bowl led the merry banqueters to drink to the good luck of the Adkissonian Society.

During the luncheon the toast-line was given. In the absence of Hon. Clyde D. Wright, of Hereford, who was to have acted as Toastmaster and who was not able to reach Clarendon on account of missing train connections, Mr. Will M. Clower who with Mr. Wright represented the society in the first inter-society debate ever held in Clarendon College, acted in that capacity.

Mr. Clower made a few appropriate remarks and called upon Harwood Beville to respond to the toast "To Our Absent Brothers."

Hon. O. T. Warlick of Childress once a strong Add debater and also figuring in inter-collegiate debates was the next called upon. He offered the toast "To Our Add Girl's, to their good health, pleasure and success."

The next speaker was G. T. Palmer who gave the toast "To Our Commencement Debaters."

C. K. Howe offered a toast to all those having a good time on the holiday evening.

The last speaker was Miss Mary Peebles who spoke to the toast "The Add Boy's."

Music was rendered at times by the Adkissonian Orchestra, an organization of the society who are musically inclined and who are good Musicians and in the society program furnish the music at each meeting.

At a late hour the guests departed each declaring himself well pleased with the entertainment given and wishing the Adds good luck in every thing and especially wish they would entertain again. Several visitors in the city from out of town were guests and took the opportunity to visit and see the kind of people C. C. have here, and all seemed satisfied that Clarendon College was good and the students better. "Goodnight" came all too soon for those present, but the parting came until Washington's birthday comes round again.

The Death Roll.

Monday morning at three o'clock the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Creager, and carried away the spirit of their little babe, Carl Curtis. He was born December 29th, 1908, and only lived about two months to brighten the home, during this short time he had so entwined himself into the hearts and affections that his death has left them almost crushed with grief. The remains were carried to Wynnewood, Okla., and buried Wednesday evening. The Banner-Stockman extends sympathy.

Congenial Work.

Try to find work that you like. If you are not indolent there is some useful employment that will give you pleasure. Seek your work and find it. That way lies abiding happiness. A man who had tried every other road concluded at sixty "Happiness is complete absorption in some effective form of work."

Our closest friends are liable to disappoint us. These whom we love best may grieve us most. But work never disappoints us. Its reward may be inadequate, but the work itself, if it be the work for us, never disappoints.

You can readily recognize the girl who loves her work by the way she lifts the lid of her desk or takes her sewing chair or opens her ledger. If she does these with a drawn face or a sigh there is one of two reasons—either she hasn't found her work or she has chosen to be a drudge.

If in her face, no matter how physically weary, there is the glow of satisfaction, the pleasure of the congenial task, she is indeed a happy girl.

Happy is the man who has found his work, and thrice happy the girl.

There is no trouble too great for the work you like. Artistry is doing a thing as well as you can and afterward trying to do it still better.

Work is the grave in which you can bury your grief. It is the mantle that covers the ugliness of life. It is the great absorber of the humors and moods of the moment. No matter how hard the work—all work worthy of the name is hard—it is a bright jewel, whether in the dull setting of dismal or the bright frame of splendid surroundings.

Find your work! Be sure whether you have not already found it, for what you think is dislike for your work may be the Plant Growing.

More women would grow flowers in the house if there was not an erroneous impression that it required too much skill and an abundance of time.

There are, perhaps, certain kinds of flowers, such as roses and carnations, which do not respond well to the effort of the amateur, but bulbs rarely fail. Their culture is simple in the extreme—a good potting soil containing plenty of sharp sand, a long period of seclusion in the dark to make root growth and gradual bringing to the light.

It is at this period that most women are at a loss as to the proper care of plants. They cannot fail if they remember these few pointers on pot grown bulbs:

The best temperature for root growth is 40 degrees, for leaves and stems 50 degrees and for the best bloom 60 degrees. The ordinary living room is too hot for successful bulb growing. The cooler the room the longer the flowers last and the larger they are.

Bringing the potted bulb directly from the dark into the hot living room is the cause of short stems and stunted foliage.

Do not have too strong a light when the bulbs are first brought in from the dark. A shelf away from the window where the temperature is about 50 degrees is best until the flower buds began to show.

Bulbs should never be kept in a temperature of 70 degrees unless they are to be quickly forced.

It pays to buy a high grade of bulbs if you would not be disappointed in results.

If the soil in the yard is too heavy for potting it can be lightened by mixing sand with it. Never bring manure in contact with bulbs. It is fatal to them.

To tell whether a pot is filled with root turn it upside down, tap the edge gently

A Grocery Talk

TALK is cheap and a lot of it is being done that amounts to but little. But in reference to groceries we are selling lots of them because we carry in stock a nice, fresh, clean line, and our prices are right. We don't propose to try to tell you about the other fellow's goods, about how high or how low he sells them. We can only find time to attend to our own part of the business. However, will say that if the other fellow sells you cheaper (grades considered) than we are selling he is not making too much money.

We would like to have your next month's account. We will promise you a square deal and will do our best to please you.

We call especial attention to our Queen of the Pantry flour and Chase & Sanborn teas and coffees. They have no superior in this market. We are selling them at the price you generally pay for ordinary goods. Try us, and if we don't please you tell us and we will try the harder next time to please you.

Panhandle Hogs.

During the past year the output of hogs in the Panhandle has increased 400 per cent. It is the great new field for the hog industry in this state. In East Texas, where hogs were grown at one time, the farmers have turned to fruit and truck growing.

There is a reason for the remarkable development of the hog industry in the Panhandle. The farmers are raising milo maize, kaffir corn, alfalfa and other cheap feed for hogs. At present prices, hog-raising is profitable, even if the animals are fed 50-cent corn. But the big reward comes to the man who provides Burmuda, wheat or alfalfa pasturage for his hogs.

Panhandle farmers have learned this lesson from their neighbors on the north, and will soon be rivaling their teachers in this great branch of the producer's business.—Fort Worth Star.

GOOD ATTRACTION COMING

The Gertrude Ewing Co. to Occupy The Boards at Opera House Three Nights Next Week.

The play-goers of Clarendon will be delighted to learn that the Gertrude Ewing Co. will again visit Clarendon. Manager Trent has procured this excellent troupe for three nights next week, March 4, 5 and 6. Miss Ewing is well known to a great number of theatre-goers of this place, having played a three-night stand here last season. In these performances she was voted the best actress that had visited the town. During the present engagement she will play nothing but high-class drama. Many, who remember her excellent work in Camille, will wish to see her in other plays of a like character. Her repertoire includes such plays as "The Slaves of the Orient" and kindred attractions.

This will be, beyond doubt, the best company that has made Clarendon this year, and the S. R. O. sign will not be a surprise.

Citizens Bank Sold.

The citizens National Bank building has been purchased by the Masons. The consideration was $5000. For the present the building will be rented, later the Masons intend adding to the building and making it two stories.

The lots corner First and Sully streets and recently contracted for by other parties, were not taken and the Masons are now in possession of them. For the present however new lodge rooms will not be fitted up, but the rooms now rented will be used.

Ninety Three Cars Shipped

Mr. T. F. Connally was looking after the loading of a car of corn not many days ago and a gentleman from Collin county approached him and said, "Shipping it?" "Nope, shipping it out and this is the ninety-third car I have shipped from this county and most of it has gone to what has here-to-fore been considered the corn country."

The gentleman from the black land seemed very much surprised when he learned the enormous amount of corn and other grain that is raised and shipped from this great and growing country. When our farmers get down to farming in earnest there will be many surprises for people who have become accustomed to regard the Panhandle as a desert. When they know this rich and beautiful section of the Lone Star State they will be surprised to learn that it raises more of everything that man and beast eat, with less labor than any spot on the globe. Yes, hundreds of cars of corn, maize, kaffir corn and oats have been shipped from the Panhandle to the eastern and southern parts of the state.

At the Churches.

Rev. D. T. Pitman, of Ferris, Texas, filled the pulpit at the Baptist church Sunday at both the morning and the evening hours. He preached two excellent sermons and large audiences greeted him at both services. At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon he lectured to the young people.

Rev. O. P. Kiker preached at the Methodist church Sunday morning. The house was well filled and an excellent sermon was delivered. At the evening hour Rev. C. N. N. Ferguson preached a magnificent sermon, taking as his subject, "Visions." There was one conversion, and one addition to the church. Both leagues had good services.

Rev. E. Dubbs preached two good sermons at Christian church Sunday.

A BIG LAND DEAL CLOSED

Y. O. McAdams of Greenville buys the McCombs Farm and Ranch North of Town.

Eli McCombs and Y. O. McAdams of Greenville were in the city this week. Mr. McAdams came prospecting, and says he thinks this is the greatest country in the world. In proof of the fact that he believes in the future prosperity of Donley county he purchased from Mr. McCombs a farm and ranch, five miles north on the Jerico road, for consideration $35,000 for the 2013 acre of land. Mr. McAdams' son, Ed, will come here in a few weeks and will have charge of the ranch.

Mr. McCombs was a popular citizen here, and Clarendon people regretted to see him leave here, and regret still more to have him entirely dispose of his interests in this county, but his health demanded that he make a change, and he thought best to have his property transferred here.

Y. O. McAdams is one of the leading business men in Hunt County, having large interests in farming, stock-raising, oil mill stock, and in banks in Greenville and in the county. It is hoped he will decide to make his home in this county.

PAN'S ANNUAL BANQUET

Very Pleasant Evening Spent With the Panhandle Society.

The Panhandle society of Clarendon entertained about 200 of their friends in the McDaniel Hall Monday night, with the annual banquet. The hall had been tastefully arranged for the occasion. Ferns, palms and cut flowers in profusion, with the society pennants and decorations of red, white and blue, met the eyes of the guests as they entered. After hats and wraps were removed pleasant conversation passed the time until nine o'clock, when Mayor Journey was introduced and welcomed the guests, in a few well chosen words. Jas. A. Hall, of Altus, Okla., first president of the Panhandle society, delivered a splendid address on "Education." Misses Dodson, Sullivan, Smith and O'Neill sang "My Old Kentucky Home," and responded to a hearty encore with a parody on "Kentucky Babe." Miss Carrie Smith sang "How much he loves me," and responded to an encore with "The Rainbow."

After the program the guests gathered around the tables and enjoyed the delicious course luncheon. Following is the menu: oyster bullion, pickles, involzo, roast turkey, cranberry jelly, salmon salad, sweet potatoes southern style, string beans, waldorf salad, salted peanuts, brick ice cream in the society colors, red, white and blue, and Pan's anniversary cake in the same colors, crackers, cheese and black coffee.

Herbert Hilburn, president of the Pan society as toastmaster offered a toast to the guests of the evening, to their happiness, health and prosperity. Hugh Black responded to "The Ex-Pan Girls." Miss Claire Teague offered a toast to the "Ex-Pan Boys," and Sims

Sheffy responded to "The Pan Girls." The first toast, and one that found a ready response in every guest, was offered by Mayor Journey, "To the Hostess of the evening. Mrs. Tresise, who has been so untiring in her efforts to make the banquet a success."

The toast, program numbers and conversation of the evening were interspersed with music by the Clarendon band, who seemed untiring in their efforts to make pleasant their part of the evening's entertainment, and to them is due in a great measure the pleasure of the evening. Several selections were also rendered by the string band, and were enjoyed.

As the guests left the banquet tables they made their way to the punch bowls, where delicious fruit punch was served by Miss Claire Teague and Charlie Jordan. Then because it was late, but not "two late," the guests reluctantly made preparations to say "good-morning" and went home, with one accord praising the Panhandle Society and Mrs. Tresise for the very delightful manner in which the evening had been spent. So passed into memory the banquet of 1909.

Fashion Notes

For early spring wear nothing will take the place of silks. The most popular this spring seems to be the soft finished fabrics, either messelines or chiffon taffetas, with a decided preference for the messelines. Plain colors as well as the beautiful shaded stripes and checks will be generally shown. There has been an effort to revive the large foulard patterns in both messelines and duchess satins, but the smaller designs of checks and stripes are by far the better taste. There will be considerable demand for satin skirts this season. The wash silk or Habital for midsummer will still be a favorite. Net waists will be made over china silks and the softer mercerized fabrics.

Among the favorite trimming will be the Persian bands and all-overs to match, while the dainty Vals and Mecklins are exceedingly good. Plain colored messelines and Duchess satins make very handsome gowns, when made up with embroidered chiffon yokes and bands.

Spring millinery shows a decided tendency to the toque and turban shapes. The larger and more extreme shapes will be worn, it is thought, later in the season. But for early spring the preference will be given to the toque and turban. Large crowns and narrow brims is another feature of the coming season. The trimmings seem to be set high and look a little steep and give a slightly military effect. Pearl and jet ornaments, will be greatly in evidence in millinery. Some pretty and dainty turbans and toques are covered with violets, forget-me-nots, sweet peas and other small flowers. Some of the most popular flowers will be roses, orchids, lilacs, violets, pansies, wisteria, sweet peas and buttercups. In many cases, several different kinds of flowers will be used on the same hat. Ribbons and fancy braids will continue to be largely used. Where only one best hat a season can be afforded, it will be well to avoid conspicuous extremes, both in the shape and trimming of your spring hat.

Visits Banker's Association.

Wesley Knorpp, cashier of the Donley county State Bank, is upon attendance at the bankers association at Ft. Worth this week. Mr. Knorpp is among the youngest bankers in this section of the state, but his capabilities along financial lines have put him to the front in banking circles. That he enters enthusiastically into the spirit of his business is evidenced by the fact that he never fails to attend a bankers' meeting if possible, and in his present visit to the panther city he will probably pick up several ideas that will be of benefit to the institution with which he is connected.

Clarendon, Tex., Feb. 26, 09

Why not Clarendon have a trade day? Those days are great to draw people and are kept up by many cities larger and smaller than Clarendon. What say you?

Natural advantages will not build a town by themselves. It takes get-up-and-go on the part of the citizens of a town to build it no matter what the natural advantages are.

A Ft. Worth girl, Miss Ethel Calloway, captured a burglar, whom she saw leaving the house with an arm full of valuables. She chased him and brought him back to the house and placed him under arrest.

As a result of Roosevelt's efforts to punish New York publishers for libel, the editor of the New York world and others have been indicted. Perhaps this row among the big paper men and Teddy will result in giving the people valuable information concerning the Panama canal fuss, and bring out the truth.

Men who are too narrow between the eyes to see that money spent judiciously in public improvements will enhance the value of their property beyond comparison are a menace to their town and should move.—Plainview News.

Very few men are that narrow, but not a few make that an excuse for not doing their part in building of the town and enhancing their property. Such men prefer to let other people spend the money necessary to build up the town and fortunes of all. In other words such men are generally stingy and hoggishly selfish.

A fellow down at Austin, named Kellie, has had the gall to introduce a bill in the Senate to stop prohibition speaking in church houses. His bill makes it a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $50 or imprisonment to make a political speech in 'all public houses commonly known as churches.' Of course he is after stopping prohibition speaking in the churches. That is what the liquor and beer dealers have advocated for a long time, and this fellow Kellie is staying by the liquor interest. This fellow and his little gang of boltercrats or liquorcrats may thwart the will of the people in the matter of submission, but it will be a cold day in August when they get through the Texas legislature such a moustrisity as that fellow Kellie's bill.

Selected corn on Maj. N. C. Baldwin's farm in Erath county, Texas, made twenty bushels more per acre than other corn planted in the same soil, on the same day, and given the same cultivation. One plant made 55 bushels per acre, the other 35 bushels. There are people who do not think it worth while to plant good seeds. They will become 'book farmers' and plant intelligently when they have a few more object lessons.—Farm and Ranch. The farmers of Texas have lost

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

I.—In Which We Get Acquainted

By Henry Herbert Huff

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

"Hello, Mr. Business Man! And how is trade?"

"Improving."

"I'm glad to hear it. Oh, we'll have things moving nicely pretty soon. Everybody's optimistic down our way. Got nearly an hour yet in town—want to catch that 4:29 out of here. If you're not busy, sit down a few minutes and let's talk things over. Mail order houses bothering any?"

"Yes; they're cutting quite a hole in our trade. Thought that dull spell would fix them, but it didn't here in our town. Never believed they were getting so much business till I was shown the pile of goods from them that arrived on this morning's freight. Some of our best people buying there too. Really I cannot understand why any one should send away and wait several weeks for goods he can buy just as cheaply right here in town."

"Got any soap clubs here?"

"Yes; there are several, and it does beat all how those premiums take. Looks as though one was getting something for nothing, but he pays for all of it. I can sell the whole assortment for half their list price and premiums. Buy them separate and get what you want. Each of these clubs takes from $100 to $300 worth of business from our town every year.

"And then there's Near City—only twelve miles away, and the fare is 60 cents. Many of our people go there to buy clothing, millinery and the like. Often they pay more than in their home town. We merchants had been charging up the bulk of our lost trade to the mail-order houses, but found upon investigation that a large part is going to Near City instead. With our trade leaking out in every conceivable way it seems up to us to take what's left."

"Do you have any trouble with 'leftover' goods?"

"Yes; we lose a lot that way. In summer business goes on a vacation. Most days of the week are pretty slow, too, except Saturday, and that's hustle, hustle, hustle, all day long. I wish we might shift some of this day's business to the others."

"Mr. Business Man, I've a solution to all of your problems. I can tell you what will hold your trade at home, what will move your slow sellers and remainders, what will make business for you in the dull seasons, what will sell the new and better goods. It's no complicated mystery or trick of magic—just plain ADVERTISING.

"I know you'll say you've tried it without success or that a competitor failed to make it pay or something else, but it resolves itself into this—if you advertise RIGHT, it will PAY you; if you do so in the WRONG way, it will FAIL. Advertising is no child's play—it's a science. A person of average ability can write good copy.

"And now I must be going, but I'll be back next week and every week for several months, and I intend to have a little chat with you each time. I shall first show you how advertising will SOLVE your problems, and then I'm going to tell you how to advertise SUCCESSFULLY."

millions of dollars by planting inferior seed. Think of the difference in yield in the case above cited. At sixty cents per bushel the selected seed made Mr. Baldwin six dollars per acre more than the corn planted without selecting seed. Every farmer should at least make a trial by planting part of his crop of crop in with the best seed, and of course if the results are what Mr. Baldwin's experience shows that will settle the question of selecting seed to plant.

Tip to the legislature: If you want a Sunday law that will be no trouble to enforce, just pass a law that will make the buyer equally guilty with the seller and you will hear of few violations of Sunday laws. Nine times out of ten the buyer is more guilty than the merchant or the saloon keeper who sells him goods, fire or water. It takes at least two to make a trade, and if a man knows he will be fined if he buys on Sunday, few of them will ask a business man to violate the law by selling him something Sunday that he could just as easily buy Monday.—Baird Star.

Anent the Sunday law, the above is full of reason and common sense and if adopted will put the 'lid' on good and stout and no mistake. Make the buyer liable as the seller and there will soon be no 'lid' to close.—Sulphur Springs Gazette.

It takes the seller and buyer both to complete a sale, and there is no moral reason why the buyer should not suffer the same punishment as the seller. If selling on Sunday is wrong buying is wrong and there is no justice in punishing one wrong doer and let another equally guilty escape.

ENTHUSIASM.

Enthusiasm is a great mover of the world. They who are animated by any great idea and are inspired by any noble thought or exalted motive keep in motion with the wheels of progress.

As long as men remain indifferent they remain inferior.

One great reason why so many live and die without accomplishing anything is that they are not deeply in earnest about any worthy thing.

To succeed means a life of toil, of self-denial, but enthusiasm makes even these sweet, and then the reward comes from one's inner consciousness, which is the whisper of God.

The quality of a man's thought, the quality of a man's love, determines whether a man succeeds in making his life rich, fair and beautiful.

Nothing outside of ourself can entitle us to think we have been successful in life. Life does not consist in having an abundance of the material things. That a man has gathered two or three million dollars does not entitle that man to say he has succeeded in life. It is not what you have; it is what you are.

Any man will lead a disappointing life and himself be barren, narrow and unsuccessful in gaining the best that life has to give, unless he has some enthusiasm for some great principle, purpose or idea, that rises above self, that teaches, lifts us and nourishes the world.

A wise man once said that no man is a hypocrite in his amusements, and it is equally true that a man's character is revealed by his admirations, his enthusiasms.

It is fine to be of serene mind and self controlled. But it is far finer to have feverish, noble impulses to control, and to find serenity of mind in worthy achievements.—Anti-Mail Order Journal.

Daughters of the Confederacy.

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock a large number met in the court-house, pursuant to a call to organize a chapter of Daughters of the Confederacy. A number gave their names for membership in the chapter, Mrs. Bourland was elected temporary secretary and Miss Katie Stout, chairman. It was decided to meet in march and make the organization permanent. After a reading by Mrs. Bourland Hon. T. H. Peebles delivered a splendid address to the newly organized chapter and the confederates who were present. Mr. Sowder, of Ft. Worth, who is here visiting his daughter, Mrs. Holder, also addressed the audience. He is an old soldier, and made an interesting talk. The confederate camp then held a business session.

Tariff Fight.

As there will be a called session of congress to undertake the revision of the tariff and as it is a well settled fact that the republican policy of a high protective tariff will continue; it appears to us that it would be well for southern democrats to make a fight for an equalization of the benefits that may accrue from any revision that may be made. They should not surrender one iota of principle but should claim a square deal for the South. The following from the Atlanta Constitution expresses what we have in mind:

We may continue to insist that protection in the degree that republicanism clings to and fosters it, is radically wrong, but knowing that it is to be the unchanged and unchangeable policy of the government at least for four more years to come, the thing to do is to seek wherein it may be turned to the advantage of the people of the south and—turn it.

Southern representatives may consistently pursue this course, demanding equalization, as far as possible, in tariff schedules where in the south shall be given a square deal.

It needs no argument to convince that the Dingley tariff was made primarily for the advantage of the east, the north and the west: in its almost every phase it leaves the south at material disadvantage with the rest of the country.

Southern members in house and senate are, in some degree, responsible for this. They should cease their quibbling over trivial details and go into the tariff fight as a business proposition and upon a business basis—not as protectionists, nor yet as free traders, but upon the merits of each particular article and industry involved, and demand for it, in the light of the unquestioned national policy, only justice.

They should join in turning the coming tariff legislation at every possible point to the interest and advantage of southern agriculture and southern industry.

If the industries of other sections are to be protected, those of the south should be given that measure of it which equity and justice and fair and free competition demand.

But even more important than this, perhaps, is the securing of concessions in the shape of reduced duties upon articles which the southern farmer is compelled to use.

More than all is southern agriculture hampered by the injustice of this double-cross game of selling in open and buying in highly protected markets.

There is a field here for valuable and advantageous service, and the south expects it of those who represent her in the national legislative body.

But achievement will not yield to obstruction.

Machines may be made to transform and transmit the tremendous power of Niagra Falls; but no dam will stop their ceaseless and determined flow.

So the south, if it cannot abate protection, may still turn tariff legislation, here and there, to its commercial benefit.

The fight will soon be on. Congress, in extra session, will wrestle with it for many months.

The changes in the Dingley law may be few and far between, but what there are, the south should get its share of them.

It will, if its representatives pursue a constructive policy and discontinue their futile game of making it a football of useless politics.

Notice.

I will close the passway through my pasture March first, and kindly request parties who have been going through not to do so after that date. If parties should insist on going through I will enforce my rights.

Death of Mrs. Walker.

The many friends of Mrs. A. J. Williams and Mrs. Giddens in this city will sympathize with them in the loss of their sister and daughter, Mrs. S. C. Walker, of Archer City, whose death occurred the third of February. Mrs. Walker had visited in this city and had many friends here who feel a personal loss in her death.

Mrs. Walker was thirty-eight years of age, and leaves to mourn her loss, besides her mother and sister, her husband, Judge Walker, three sons and one daughter. That she was a useful woman is evidenced by the tribute to her life, by her pastor, Rev. A. N. Julien, in the columns of the Archer County News.

The News editor thus voices praise of this noble christian character; "It has never been our pleasure to know a more consistent christian character, or a more devoted wife and mother, and her death will be felt alike by her family and her church. She has planted seeds of righteousness and truth in the hearts of many. She has worked faithfully on earth and earned her crown in heaven, and if there is a jewel added for every good and kind act we feel sure her crown will be full."

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas God in His infinite love and wisdom, has removed by death Prof. C. M. Morton, a faithful teacher and a devoted member of the Sunday School of Clarendon M. E. Church, South, from this transitory life to the life elysian beyond the confines of mortal existence.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That by his death the Sunday School has sustained a grievous loss—the loss of an intelligent and consecrated Christian manhood at the meridian of life, adorned with a character that has fully exemplified the teaching of the Master whom he delighted to serve.

2. That while his living example and active influence are no longer visible in the Sunday School, within the hearts and consciences of all with whom he came in personal contact, will live and grow the honor of his memory, and a deeper devotion to the cause he loved and served.

3. That the life of this teacher whose life was patterned after that of the Great Teacher, as nearly as the finite may approach the infinite, is worthy of the love and emulation of every member of the Sunday School.

4. That to the wife and relatives, the members of this Sunday School tender their sincerest sympathy and prayers, commending them to the Father who gave and hath also taken away, and who will give grace for every sorrow and prove an ever present help in every need.

5. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Sunday School, and that a copy be furnished the wife and each of the brothers and sisters of the deceased, and to Clarendon papers for publication.

Evangelistic Funeral Service.

Rev. Clifton P. Pledger, one of the celebrated Methodist evangelists of the United States, died last Thursday in Spokane, Washington, where he had been, with the celebrated Billie Sunday engaged in a revival in which there were 5666 conversions. Mr. Pledger was a Texas man, beg a his education at Polytechnic College and finished at Harvard. He was a power in the pulpit, and had held some remarkable meetings. His death was due to pneumonia, contracted while helping Mr. Sunday in the meeting at Spokane.

7000 people attended his funeral services, which were held by the Pastor's Association in the tabernacle in Spokane. A remarkable feature of the service was the calling of penitents, when sixty-six people were converted. A collection was taken at the service for his mother, who was dependent on him. His remains were interred in the Glenwood cemetery in Chicago.

Alpha Beta Zeta's Entertain

The Alpha Beta Zeta Sorority entertained with whist at the residence of Mr. Frank Harrington on last Friday night. The occasion was one of the most delightful of the season, the crowd being just large enough to be congenial. Dainty refreshments, consisting of oyster patties, stuffed eggs, olives, pickles, sandwiches, coffee, and salpicon with cake, were served. The young ladies composing the sorority are rare entertainers, and their efforts to make the occasion one long to be remembered was successful in the highest degree. This is not the first time they have entertained, and it is to be hoped that it will not be their last, but it is doubtful if their most strenuous efforts in the future will be crowned by a more nearly perfect entertainment than that of last Friday night.

Those attending were: Misses Martin, Harrington, Cooke, Fleming, Collinson, Craig, Gorrissen, Jefferies, Josephine Chamberlain, Katherine and Harriette Chamberlain, and Ruth Harrington. Messrs Burnum, Hewitt, J. G. Martin, McDonald, Early, Hillis, Will and Tom Cooke, Lewis, Albert and Crit Conally, Jefferies, VanHorn, Yancy, and Will Tresise, and Mr. and Mrs. James Trent.

Mrs. James Trent won the lady's prize, a pair of silk hose, while Tom Cooke captured the gentlemen's prize, a box of cigars. Will Tresise won the consolation prize, consisting of a beautiful bunch of carnations, on a cut.

When Polly Ran Away.

By PERRY MOORE.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

"Ebullition of pique!" Polly pucker- ed her pretty face into a scowl and jabbed in her hatpin viciously. "Temper, he meant! As if I hadn't reason and more! And he'll come tonight as usual, will he, in spite of my note, which he is sure says much more than I intended."

Then she glanced at an open letter on the dresser. "Sure, are you, Mr. High-and-mighty? Well, I guess you'll see, and I guess when you arrive with your benignant favor all ready to hand out and find no little slimmer anxiously waiting for it you'll begin to think that my note didn't say an atom more than I meant."

She giggled a little, dashed her handkerchief across her eyes, adjusted her veil and slipped out quietly—very quietly—for Polly was running away, and not a soul of them should know her whereabouts until she had indicated and dispatched an epistle to Mr. Fred Hanlon giving him to understand thoroughly that their engagement was forever at an end.

This epistle should be very dignified and emphatic, leaving no possibility of its being attributed to mere pique. She would have delighted in imparting her irrevocable decision to Fred personally, only—well, Fred had such a way, and he would just pick her up and kiss her and laugh at her and maybe say, "Nonsense, little girl!" and make her effort ridiculous.

"Why, Polly, spouting! Is it possible?" he exclaimed.

her dignity. She would give in and take Fred's petting and chocolate creams instead of carrying out her serious intention. The dear boy always remembered her taste for chocolate creams, but she must remember he wasn't a dear boy any more.

He was an autocrat who had assumed authority over her beyond his right, had dictated as to her conduct and made himself so disagreeable that she was determined to put up with it no longer.

She had been merely amusing herself with that new, Spanish-looking young man, who had a delightful accent and a gratifying admiration for Miss Polly. It was great fun to engage him entirely and render him oblivious to the charms of the other girls.

She had meant nothing more at all, but now, since it was to be all off with Fred—Mr. Roderique was very wealthy—perhaps she would eventually consent to reign in the ancestral halls he had described so glowingly.

Polly was swiftly pursuing her way, mindful that there was need of haste if she would reach her destination before it was "scary" dark, when a couple of the girls appeared around a corner and halted her.

She shook her head and passed on, a little vexed, for she was obliged to make a long detour to avoid their company and her own inclination to tell things.

Nobody should know of the rupture with Fred until she could exhibit the Roderique diamonds in her engagement ring. Then if Elsie Wilson, who admired Fred openly, could capture him let her! Anybody was welcome to Fred. Nevertheless she felt a twinge of jealousy and sneered at herself for it.

"Wait, Polly, wait!" She turned to see three of the girls, this time hurrying toward her with "news" on their eager faces. She coolly deflected from her course again, obviously avoiding them.

"Such a time as I'm having running away!" she mused whimsically. "Heroes usually have adventures and difficulties in escaping, but they run away at night. I'd be scared to death! Then, too, Fred will be sure to come early, whispering 'Pretty Polly Oliver' and—"

"With a shriek Anabel Hanlon fell upon her."
"Oh, Polly! Don't be awful!"
"I should think so by your looks"

Polly smiled, though she heartily disliked Fred's cousin.
"You've been so thick with him I thought you'd feel sort of disgraced—or mortified anyway. I'm thankful I was never intimate with him—gambler, blackleg, thief!"

"What are you talking about, Anabel?"
"Then you haven't heard—and they trailed him here, arrested him and took him away handcuffed—that fine Spanish gentleman, impostor, fraud, you've gone to such lengths with?" Anabel laughed maliciously.

"And with whom any of you girls would have been glad to go greater lengths if he had looked at you!" Polly flushed and marched on.

She was intensely shocked and—Fred had been right in his estimate of the fellow. He would be justified in his position now: he would be more autocratic than ever. She must assert herself and break the engagement, even if she afterward forgave him.

As she finally boarded the car she recalled, with a throb of dismay, the long country lane she would have to traverse in the gathering dusk from the trolley line to her old nurse's home.

The car was filled with suburban laborers, and she did not notice a square-jawed young man who had persistently but cautiously followed her—swinging himself on behind, where he presently appeared to be arranging something with a rough but honest looking man, who nodded and winked knowingly as he pocketed a generous bill.

Square jaws squatted on the car steps out of sight; the other crowded inside and seated himself close to Miss Polly. She glanced at him anxiously as the men dropped off one by one, hoping he, too, would leave. But when she alighted he sprang off and slouched away.

She looked doubtfully at the darkening road, half determined to go back to the car, but discarded the idea with a toss. "Run away and turn right around and run back, Polly Paget! Well, I guess not, miss. I can sprint like a deer, and in ten minutes I'll be in Marjorie's kitchen."

She caught up her skirts and skinned away, stopping suddenly, with a frightened squeal. The rough man had stepped into the road before her with an offer of his company.

"No, no! Thank you, I'm not—at all afraid!" cried Polly, with chattering teeth. Even at that fearsome moment it occurred to her that this was to be expected. Runaway heroines always have adventures. "But I never meant to be in the dark, the girls hindered me so," she moaned inwardly.

"Let me pass, sir," she demanded, striving to be haughty, but quivering woefully.

"I shall walk with you, miss!" He put a hand on her arm, and Polly screamed wildly.

Some one dashed up, knocked the impudent fellow down with surprising ease, and she found herself clinging frantically to Fred.

"Why, Polly, darling! Is it possible?" he exclaimed, stimulating great surprise.

"Oh, Fred, Fred! I should have died if you hadn't come!" Polly panted presently. "But how—how did you happen to be here?"

"Oh, I've been out to see a man," he said lamely. "But, say, kittens, I want to tell you that I was idiotically jealous of that Roderique fellow; that was all. I was as much taken in as anybody. I only let on different because I was jealous. I thought him the sure thing and was afraid he might!"

"Oh, but he couldn't, Fred!" Polly asserted, promptly forgetting certain things. "And, Fred, I was running away because—"

"Never mind, little girl. Who cares a hang? If anything's said on account of your little flirtation with him, I'll take the brunt of it. Yonder comes the car, and we'll go home and arrange our wedding."

They had the car to themselves, and when Polly essayed another embarrassed explanation of her running away Fred laughed, softly whistling "Pretty Polly Oliver."

"It was a boy!"
There was no booth in the corner drug store. The young man at the telephone, therefore, could be heard by all the customers ranged about the soda water fountain. His face beamed as he talked.

"Everything is all right," he was saying.

"Ma'am?"
"Yes'm. Eleven pounds. Beautiful boy. Like me, they say."
"Ma'am?"
"Yes'm. Resting quietly. Would have sent for you, but thought it best not to. Didn't want to worry you."
"Ma'am?"
"Yes'm. I'll attend to all that."
"Ma'am?"
"Yes'm. I'll tell her you're coming down right away. Beautiful boy."
"Ma'am?"
"Yes'm. Eleven pounds and looks just like me."

He rang off and walked proudly out of the drug store apparently oblivious of the smiling countenances of his interested listeners ranged around the soda fountain.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

INDIAN ROMANCE.

Quanah Parker, Noted Chief, Has Wonderful Life Story.

IS NOW A BIG RANCHMAN

Lives Near Lawton, Okla., but Will Join Geronimo in Leading Band of Braves at Fat Stock Show at Fort Worth Shortly.

Born of a white mother, whom his grandfather stole in 1836, from a frontier Texas settlement, and a celebrated Indian chief, whom Lawrence Sullivan Ross and a fellow ranger killed in personal combat in 1860, Quanah Parker, chief of Comanches, who, with Geronimo, chief of the Apaches, comes to Fort Worth with forty of their people during the National Feeders and Breeders' Show, March 13 to 30, has a life story which recalls much of the romance of early Texas history.

First in the story comes the attack on Parker's Fort, in what is now Limestoe county, the murder of Silas and John Parker and the carrying away with them of Cynthia Ann Parker. There follows a break of many years in the story, and next comes the duel to the death in Peace river breaks. In 1869, when Lawrence "Sul" Ross, then an eighteen-year-old ranger-officer, killed Pete Nacoma, chief of the warring Comanches, and captured his squaw, who turned out to be the long lost Cynthia Ann. Cynthia Ann had been too long an Indian to say very much about herself, but it was learned that she had two sons, one of whom was Quanah Parker, and the other had died before reaching maturity. Quanah Parker, the surviving son, and leader of his people for forty years, is the man who will head the band of Indians at Fort Worth.

The building of railroads, the founding of new towns and the pushing out of the ranches and farms has broken up the old open country through which the Comanches had raided for the past hundred years. Perhaps these checks have brought out the white blood in Quanah Parker's nature, for he has settled down on a big ranch near Lawton, Okla., where he raises good cattle, and by shrewd business judgment has become a wealthy man.

ACRE OF STABLES.

Increased Accommodation For Stock at Fat Stock Show.
There will not be any "grand opera" appliances in connection with the National Feeders and Breeders' Show, to be held at Fort Worth March 13 to 20 this year. It will be remembered that last year it was necessary to use the mammoth tent in which Madame Sarah Bernhardt played when she toured Texas, for the overflow exhibit of cattle and horses from the stables under the big Coliseum. This year the directors of the show have provided better than "grand opera" accommodations for exhibitors, and when the show opens on March 13, new stables covering nearly an acre and a half, immediately adjoining the Coliseum on the north, will be ready for the accommodation of all the horses and cattle entered in the various classes.

With the new arrangements this year visitors may pass from the Coliseum out through the north door and enter the stables, making a complete tour without being exposed to the weather. In the new barns there are accommodations for 634 halter cattle, and these barns will be used exclusively for southern cattle. In the horse barns, which are part of the new buildings, are stalls for 128 head, and extra accommodations can be provided as needed. All cattle from above the quarantine line will be given accommodation in the basement of the Coliseum, thereby separating the cattle from north and south of the quarantine line and doing away with any danger of infection.

RULING ON AGE.

Secretary of Fat Stock Show Decides on Lambs.

When is a lamb not a lamb? This is one of the problems which confronted Secretary Andrews and his assistant, Mr. C. C. French, this past week. They decided that it could be definitely classed as a lamb until after it was a year old. Full lambs fed through the winter for the spring market are thus made eligible for the $100, first prize and $150 in other prizes in sheep class No. 2.

Fat spring lambs easily bring from $8 to $10 per hundred weight, and have been known to go to the phenomenal price of $25 per hundred weight, so that exhibitors disappointed in obtaining one of the coveted cash prizes, are certain of realizing a satisfactory profit on any desirable stock they may bring to the show.

Pouring Prosperity Through a Puncture.

Ever see a drunken man trying to fill a bottle with the bottom broken out? It's a great waste, and it looks mighty silly.

But it's no mere foolish and no more wasteful than for a sober man to expect his town to fill up with people and bubble over with prosperity when he is continually pouring his dollars into the wide world outside THROUGH THE MAIL ORDER HOLE in the bottom of his home town.

STRANGE SHEEP.

Caraculs From Persia to Be Seen at Fat Stock Show.

FAMOUS PERSIAN LAMB.
From Young of Caracul Sheep That Valuable Fur is Obtained—Dr. Young Expects Shipment Before Show Opens.

Who has not seen and admired the soft fur, known to commerce as "Persian lamb"? But how many have ever seen the Caracul sheep, from the young of which this beautiful fur is obtained? The management of the National Feeders and Breeders' Show to be held in Fort Worth March 13 to 20, hope and expect to have a herd of these sheep on exhibition when the show opens.

Dr. C. C. Young, the government livestock sanitary expert of Wichita Falls, who has devoted much time to the raising of sheep, has fifteen of these sheep on their way from far off Persia, the only place in the world where they are to be found. If they reach a port in time to pass the government inspection, they will be sent to Fort Worth and be placed on exhibition there.

These sheep are far below many of the breeds with which this country is familiar, so far as strict wool or mutton qualities are concerned, but they are the only source of supply of the famous Persian lamb skin, much esteemed in the north for the making of fur garments.

When the baby lambs are born they have a coat of very soft, kinky, glassy fur, which loses its luster a few days after the lamb is born. It is for these baby lambs that the sheep are raised. They are a hardy breed, and stand great cold well.

Should Dr. Young's experiment prove successful, it is probable that a new industry will be added to the many Texas now has. The sheep will be kept on Dr. Young's ranch near Wichita Falls after being shown at the exhibit at Fort Worth.

P. P. P. Cures Rheumatism

F. V. LIPPMAN, Savannah, Ga.

Dear Sir:—
For many years I consumed much medicine, and in fact tried every means in my power to get cured of that terrible disease, rheumatism, which had undermined my health. I visited Hot Springs, Ark., without gaining relief, and at last in sheer desperation I took P. P. P. (Lippman's great remedy), and was in a short time entirely cured. In the eight years since that time I have not had a symptom of rheumatism.

P. P. P. did the work to my entire satisfaction and made a quick and permanent cure.

Yours truly,
Nicholas Lang.

Here and There.

And now the Jews demand that the Bible be a prohibited book in the public schools of America. They also want a declaration made that this is "not a Christian Country." The Bible has made this a land of the free, and now many of those (beside the Jews) who have found the blessing of freedom here, would have us forsake the very foundation of our freedom. We do not want to see sectarianism taught in our public schools, but the Bible is not a sectarian book, and any people who are afraid of its teaching are perfectly welcome to find homes in some country where the Bible is not read.—Bonham News.

"A man who can vote and won't vote ought to be made to vote," said Penelope dramatically.

"Of course if you feel that way," Oswald Deering said stiffly.

"Every woman should feel that way," Penelope's scornful little nose was in the air—"and every man. The welfare of the country depends on it." "I'm not so sure"—Deering was fast becoming aggressive—"that a woman knows"—

And then Penelope blazed. "Of course"—becoming aggressive—"that a woman ought not to dabble in such things. But the blood of my ancestors is in me. All of my grandfathers were in the Revolution and in the war of 1812. My father served with honor in the civil war and my brothers in the Spanish war. How can I help feeling that the men who wouldn't fight were"—She stopped.

Oswald was very pale. "I know what you were going to say—that because I didn't fight I was a coward." "Something in the stillness of his anger frightened Penelope.

"I didn't mean"—she faltered.

"Yes, you did," he told her. "You meant that I was a coward because I didn't go to the war when your brothers did. But there were reasons."

"There are always reasons," she flashed out. "You may now say there are reasons why you are not going to vote tomorrow."

"Well, I don't think you could understand if I told you, Penelope."

She stood up and faced him. "Oh," she said, and her little figure in the clinging mauve gown was drawn up to its full height—"oh, I always thought that you put women on a low plane. Oswald, and now I know it."

"It isn't that," he said doggedly. "But I think I ought not to be made to explain my reason for not voting. It involves some one else. I shall stay away from the polls tomorrow as a matter of conscience, Penelope."

Her little nose was buried in the bunch of violets he had brought her.

"I don't think it is worth arguing about," she said at last wearily as she lifted her head from the flowers. "But I really think we couldn't be happy if we feel so differently."

"You mean"—He had risen and was standing beside her.

"I mean that—that I think we have made a mistake."

"Then you won't marry me, Penelope?"

"I have never said that I would, Oswald."

"No, but you gave me hope. You knew that I thought"—

Before his accusing eyes her own dropped.

"But I never really said 'Yes,' she whispered.

"Perhaps not. But I understood that it was because you wanted to be sure." His voice broke, and then all at once he gathered himself together and, with his head held high, said sternly, "Don't talk of a man's allegiance to his country, Penelope, when you have failed in your allegiance to your love."

"I don't love you," she began, but he interrupted her. "You do. You know you love me, Penelope. But keep down in your heart you don't trust me. And I don't want that kind of love. I want the love of a woman who believes in me."

She was staring at him in a dazed way. "Then—then—goodbye," she quivered.

He came over and took both of her hands in his. "Oh, little Penelope," he said, "why can't you trust me?"

Her lips quivered. "Why can't you tell me," she demanded tearfully, "why you won't vote, Oswald?"

He hesitated and then shook his head. "No; it's a matter best left undiscussed. Perhaps some day you'll see things differently."

Her chin was raised mutinously. "I shall always love my country, Oswald."

"And I shall always love you." And with that he was gone.

Left alone, she wondered if it was true. Surely in a little while Oswald would be back begging her to forgive him.

But the next day came, and the men gathered at the polls, and Penelope's father and his sons went out to vote as the men of their family had done before them for conscience and for country, and at dinner they toasted their favorite candidate in water from their own clear spring, and their father made a little speech. "We have all been fighters," he said, "and I hope I shall never have a son or a grandson to break our record."

And Penelope, thinking of Oswald, winced. What place had he among these men of war?

But when the feasting was over her youngest brother, Bruce, said, "I've always felt that there was no force like the force of arms, but I tell you I heard something about Oswald Deering today that made me believe in a new kind of courage."

"What was it?" he demanded.

"Well, the nurse who takes care of Oswald's mother told me when I was waiting in Oswald's office today. It seems that his father was killed in the civil war and that since then his mother has been very delicate.

"When the first news of fighting in Cuba came Oswald was wild to go, but she opposed it strongly, and at last, when she found that his mind was made up, she had a heart attack that nearly killed her. So Oswald stayed at home and studied medicine, but he has never really got over his disappointment."

Penelope's father brought his hand down on the table with a bang. "But he should have gone at his country's call," and Penelope's eyes flashed.

"And have killed his mother?" Bruce asked quietly. For a moment the older man was silent, and then he said, "It was a test of patriotism, but the boy did the right thing."

Penelope leaned across the table and asked an eager question, but only her mother knew her real interest and why her cheeks were pale and her eyes shadowed.

"But—but do you know the reason why Oswald didn't vote?" she demanded.

"Bruce nodded. "Same reason. His mother insists that he shall vote the ticket that his father always did, and his conscience won't let him. He says conditions are different now. So he doesn't vote at all."

"I think he's somewhat tied to his mother's apron strings," Penelope's voice was scornful.

"Little sister"—Bruce's steady gaze made her flush deeply—"if you knew what Oswald's mother had done for him, the sacrifices she made that he might go to college! She cannot live many months now, the nurse says, so I feel that he is right, even if she is wrong to demand it."

And after that Penelope fled to her room and thought it over. What a little prig she had been to call him a coward! He was braver than—why, he was the bravest man in the whole world to face the world's scorn for his mother's sake.

And even as she thought it she resolved that she would tell him at once. It was late, and beneath the dull gray clouds in the west was the line of deep orange where the sun had set.

Far down the street she could see the light in Oswald's office, and toward that light when she had slipped on her raincoat and hat she made her way.

Her timid knock brought her lover to the door.

"Penelope!" he stammered when he saw her.

"Yes"—she fitted past him and dropped into the big chair in front of the fire—"I've come to make up."

She was smiling up at him, but there came no answering smile.

"I want you to forgive me," she faltered.

"For calling me a coward?" There was a bitter note in his voice.

"I—I understand now that it was because of your mother that you didn't go."

"You had to be told that?" he asked sternly. "No belief in me brought you here until you had proof—oh, Penelope!"

"You should have told me, Oswald."

"After your distrust, no."

There was so much of finality in his tone that she stood up trembling.

"Then there's nothing else to say," she murmured and went to the door, a little forlorn figure in her gray raincoat and soft felt hat.

Then suddenly she wheeled and came back.

"Oswald," she said and stood in front of him, confessing like a child, "I love you. I ask you to forgive me."

He was very white. "No," he said.

"Oh," she reproached him, "a brave soldier forgives his enemy!"

"You have told me that I am not a brave soldier."

"You are the man I want to marry," she said.

"I am?" His lips were set in a grim line. He came up to her and caught her hands almost roughly in his.

"Then if you marry me you shall vow allegiance to your husband."

"What do you mean?" tremulously.

"Say what I tell you," he commanded. "I love you, Oswald, more than home or friends or country."

And, with white lips, she repeated it. And then he took her in his arms tenderly. "Little girl, little girl," he whispered, "forgive me for hurting you, but a man has his pride."

"I know," she whispered back, her eyes shining. "A man has his pride, especially a brave man like you, Oswald."

A Country of Wonders.

The story below was told by the Hon. Peter White of Marquette, Mich., in the course of his historical address upon the development of the Lake Superior region on the occasion of the Sault canal semicentennial celebration:

Some years ago, when the side wheeler Baltimore was making very slow progress up the lake against a heavy head wind, a Frenchman, who was a passenger, walked out on deck just before dark, took a look at the Pictured Rocks and was much pleased with the view.

In the morning, before breakfast, he again came out on deck, and the panorama astonished him.

"What see dis beautiful sight you have here?" he asked.

He was told, "You are agahn looking at Pictured Rocks."

"What a great countree!" he exclaimed. "Before you go to bed you walk on de deck. You have a grand view de Picture Rock. Den you go to bed, you sleep well all night—de steamer is go ahead all de time—you come out on deck in de morning, you see Picture Rock agahn. What a big countree you got and what big Picture Rock!"

No one told the admiring Frenchman that the captain, finding that he could make no headway against the wind and the waves had run back to Whitefish point during the night and that he was then, looking at the same rock pictures he had seen the evening before.

HISTORIC FIGURE.

Chief Quanah Parker of Comanche Indians Half Breed.

RECALLS BYGONE DAYS.

His Mother Captured in Indian Raid When a Child—Never Returned to Whites—He Will Attend Fat Stock Show.

Chief Quanah Parker of the Comanches and Chief Geronimo of the Apaches are easily the foremost living Indian chiefs of today. They are as truly historic figures as is King Philip of Colonial days, and their lives mark epochs in the history of the nation. Both of the famous chiefs will be seen at the head of forty braves in daily street parades in Fort Worth during the National Feeders and Breeders' Show, to be held in that city March 13 to 20. Both these chiefs and the braves which they head will also be seen in daily exhibitions to be held in the arena at the Coliseum on paint ponies from Burke Burnett's ranch.

Chief Quanah Parker is the son of Cynthia Ann Parker, the white girl who was stolen from her father's ranch near what is now Groesbeck, Tex., in 1836, and of Peta Nocona, the Indian chief who married her after she had grown to womanhood in the tribe. Geronimo is the grizzled old warrior of the Chiricahua Apaches, whose long war against the whites made his name a fearsome word all over the great west, even after he had been captured and put in prison with a guard of 5,000 soldiers. Probably never again will the opportunity be offered of seeing two such representatives of an age, hallowed in the history of the country. And this fact in itself, aside from the spectacle of the exhibitions to be given in the arena, will doubtless serve to draw large crowds to the show, which promises to be the largest and most successful ever held by the Feeders and Breeders' association.

FARMERS' DAY MARCH 19.

Management to Encourage Raising Five Horses.

The inauguration of "Farmers' Day" at the National Feeders and Breeders' Show, to be held at Fort Worth March 13 to 20, has met with the heartiest endorsement of the farmers and stockmen of the southwest. Friday, March 19, has been set apart for this day, on which the various grade draft and grade coach horses and mules will be judged. No entry fee will be charged, and there will be no expense whatever in connection with entering stock in these classes.

Many farmers within a radius of thirty miles of that city have announced their intention of driving in the night before, resting their animals over night, and entering them the following morning, the entry books remaining open until 9:30 of that day. Others from more distant points will ship their stock in, but either case affords an opportunity, at very limited expense, to exhibit horses, and perhaps win one of the coveted prizes.

STRIKING TRANSFORMATION.

Will Be Shown at Fat Stock Show This Year.

Seventy-six years ago next May Chief Quanah Parker's grandfather, at the head of a band of marauding Comanche Indians, fell upon an outlying settlement and fort in Limestone county, murdered Benjamin Parker and most of the other settlers, and carried away as captives Parker's nine-year-old daughter, Cynthia Ann, and five other women and children. This year Chief Quanah Parker, son of that Cynthia Ann Parker, and of Peta Nocona, a war chief, comes to the National Feeders and Breeders' Show at Fort Worth from March 13 to 20, with old Chief Geronimo and forty of their people, to take part in parades for the entertainment of visitors to the show.

From Limestone county, of the present day, will come prosperous stockmen with their families, to show, by their exhibits, the progress which has been made in the interval of time which has elapsed since the fateful day in the long ago. And here visitors will see one of the few links left directly connecting this day with those of others, when an epoch has come into the history of the country. In no other way, and probably in no other time, will the transformation of the southwest from savagery to a rich and peaceful commonwealth be so vividly presented as by the show and these Indian warriors. In those days it was the farmer and the stockman who pushed out into the wilds and claimed as his own the land. It was these Indians and their families who resisted their coming with all the savagery of their innate savage natures.

As, perhaps, best fitting, the National Feeders and Breeders' Show brings together these formerly irreconcilable foes, and these two chiefs and their warriors will supply the pageant which shall more forcibly impress on visitors the radical changes which have come in this great southwest in the past seventy years.

Easy Confinement

If you have cause to fear the pains of childbirth, remember that they are due to weakness, or disease, of the womanly organs, and that healthy women do not suffer, like weak ones.

The specific, medicinal, vegetable ingredients, of which that famous, female medicine and womanly tonic

WINE OF CARDUI

is composed, will build up the womanly organs to a healthy state and thus prevent needless suffering.

"Before my confinement," writes Mrs. Rose Schubarth, of Monument, Colo., "I had such bearing-down pains I didn't know what to do. Cardui quickly relieved me. Some months later I had a fine 12-lb. baby, was sick only thirty minutes, and did not even have a doctor."
