Fisher era ends with election

FISHER

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Saturday's election will end a long era of public service for Mayor Wes Fisher.

While his successor won't be sworn in until later this month, when returns are certified by city and state authorities, Fisher is looking forward, in a way, to stepping down from the mayor's post he has held for eight years. Fisher plans to devote more time to Barrett-Fisher Co., a produce marketer, but won't be leaving public service altogether.

After all, he's served too long to completely walk away. Fisher, who served as a city councilman for four years before serving eight years as mayor, plans to be active in the Panhandle Area Alliance, a group he helped form about three years ago. The group has been active in securing the West Texas State University-Texas A&M University merger, the Texas Engineering Experiment Station recently opened at WTSU, and has helped solicit new business and industry in the region.

During his time spent at City Hall (actually two City Halls, including the current one built in 1979 while Fisher was a commissioner), Fisher figures he has been in about 300 commission meetings, including about 200 over which he has presided as mayor.

Fisher, who spoke to the Hereford Lions club last Wednesday, pointed out that while the mayor is the presiding officer at council meetings he has just one vote and holds no veto power. While the mayor has no regular administrative duties, he could be found at City Hall on many days, poring over mail, making and receiving phone calls and other administrative work.

Brand Publisher Speedy Nieman joked that Fisher probably holds the record for having his picture in the Brand. Among Fisher's duties have been thousands of proclamation signings, ribbon cutting, speeches and welcomes and other ceremonial functions. No where in the city's charter does it say the mayor has to do all of these things, be all of these places, but Fisher was almost always there.

Fisher also led Hereford delegations hither and yon, including a trip to New York City three years ago to help open the Cowgirl Hall of Fame Restaurant. While there, Fisher received an official welcome from his counterpart, Ed Koch, and was given a "tour" of a produce market which had been a Barrett-Fisher customer for several years.

Fisher readily admits everything hasn't been rosy during his years of public service, recounting the frustrations from the Texas Rural Legal Aid, the nuclear waste issue and later pullout of the Department of Energy and affiliated businesses, and the infamous 8-day, 38-story "Hereford and the Hispanics" series in the Amarillo Globe-News.

Fisher said the TRLA had first affected him when workers struck Barrett-Fisher, then later orchestrated a "strike" at Stanton Junior High and sued for single-member city commission districts.

Jail workers welcome challenge

By DANEE WILSON
Staff Writer

Sitting just north of the Deaf Smith County courthouse lies one of Hereford's few all night businesses, serving around 54 regular customers. It employs 14 full-time staff members whose salaries are paid by the taxpayers of the county.

The Deaf Smith County jail is run with the professionalism of an accounting office, the care of the family doctor and is as high risk as working daily with radioactive materials.

"We house around 55 to 57 inmates daily," said Jail Administrator David Castillo. "The most we have had in jail is 87."

Castillo is in charge of the entire jail operation. He has 14 employees who work under him. Castillo also must make daily inspections in order to keep in compliance with jail standards.

"It's a tough job, but I just do the best I can," Castillo, who has been jail administrator for seven years, said. "I have to keep the jail running as smoothly as possible."

Everyday the jailers pass through the doors to work it is not known what lies ahead.

"Every time I walk through the door I think about death, getting hurt, having to always watch my back," said Sgt. Shirley Wheeler. "It takes a special person to work in this kind of atmosphere."

Wheeler followed in the footsteps of her father and brother who were also law enforcement officers.

"I like working in the jail better than on patrol," said the 10 year veteran. "The job can be depressing, but it is rewarding."

Walking through the narrow halls of the bland, windowless, cinder-block building, the depressing atmosphere and stench of people living in closed quarters can wear on anyone working there daily.

"It's hard here because we never know for sure if we made a difference," Wheeler said. "The job is draining mentally. We never see any good in jail, it's always the bad. Work here is very mental."

Her job can be very physical at times as well.

"The older I get the more I start thinking I'm getting too old to handle the fights. I've had people hang themselves on me, one die on me and one put me in the hospital."

"We see more and more people in jail. I would like to see people become more of a family unit. Parents need to be responsible for teaching their kids instead of leaving it up to law enforcement and schools to raise their kids. I see so many just looking for attention and guidelines. I'm a staunch supporter of education. Most of the people in jail are here because of drugs or alcohol, whether it's directly or indirectly.

"It takes compassionate and caring people to work in this profession."

Wheeler, besides being a jailer, supervises other officers, makes shift schedules and makes sure all the paperwork is done properly. "I like to come up with new things and ideas," she said. "Now, I'm in the process of writing a jail manual. My job might sound boring to someone else, but it's exciting to me."

Another jailer, Hope Garza, misses most of the action in the jail. She is in charge of the kitchen and her workday is over at 4 p.m.

"I'm in charge of picking trustees (inmates) who actually do the cooking," said Garza. "I pick two males and two females to cook. I have to make sure the meals are prepared on time, the kitchen is clean and prepare the menu."

Garza serves as the general purchasing and commissary officer. "I make purchases twice a week,"

Depressing jailhouse scenery

Looking from the inside out of a cell in the Deaf Smith County jail, there isn't much scenery. The jail has the capacity to house 93 inmates. The jail averages 53-57 inmates daily and in the 60s and 70s over the weekend.

Baptists agree: split coming

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A battle for control of the Southern Baptist Convention almost certainly means some churches will leave the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

The question is how many. Southern Baptist goals are as lofty as ever. Winning souls to the Lord, reading the Bible and worshipping God are what they are all about.

But for 12 years there's been a struggle for control of the denomination. On the one hand there are fundamentalists, who believe their moderate brethren have strayed from basic beliefs such as the Bible's literal truth.

Moderates lately have been fighting a losing battle, arguing that fundamentalists are trying to impose their beliefs on all Southern Baptists.

That, moderates say, is against the Baptist tenet of a believer's right to interpret scripture as "led of the Lord."

Baptists are uneasy about the public attention focused on their squabbles. "I don't think that a split defines what is happening. That's not our intention," said the Rev. Daniel Vestal, pastor of Dunwoody Baptist Church in Atlanta.

"We are seeking ways to function and fellowship within Southern Baptist life in ways that do not violate our conscience or the Baptist instincts that form our conscience," he said.

Fellow moderates elected Vestal their head and set up an alternative giving program to avoid supporting seminaries and programs dominated by fundamentalists, while still paying for mission work.

Diverting money is one of the most tangible signs of the division from which no one benefits, fundamentalists and moderates in the 15-million-member convention agree.

Moderates, who consistently poll 45 percent to 48 percent of the votes at national conventions, hope their alternative giving program will force SBC leaders to share power and seats on convention committees.

City to meet Monday

The Hereford City Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at City Hall.

JAIL

HOPE GARZA AND SGT. SHIRLEY WHEELER
..serving the public day and night

she said. "We spend between $700 and $800 a week on food. Usually, I buy between 350-400 pounds of hamburger meat, 50 pounds of potatoes a week and three cases of 30 dozen eggs weekly."

All the meals prepared at the jail are approved by a dietician. Meals are prepared to serve around 60 inmates.

"My work isn't as exciting, but I enjoy it," she said. "It gets in your blood."

Jail work, no matter how dull or exciting, comes with a responsibility few other jobs carry.

The jail has liabilities that are sometimes hidden to the general public.

"We have to be careful with everything we do to avoid a lawsuit," said Castillo. "I try to teach my people to follow the law."

"You would not believe what the inmates come up with these days, trying to get out. Today, the inmates are more concerned with beating the system. We have to stay in accordance with the law. I don't want an inmate accusing us of violating their rights."

"We've started bringing a doctor to the jail to do check-ups because we had so many saying they were sick, just to get out and go to the doctor. It was costing the county a lot of money, but what could we do?"

Daily upkeep of the jail is draining to the county's budget. According to County Auditor Alex Schroeter, 25 percent of the county's proposed $1,817,538 budget will go to the jail.

"People don't realize how much costs just to keep the jail in compliance with the jail standards," Castillo said. "In our detoxification holding cell, we had Lexan windows that had an inch air space between them. Because the inmates are intoxicated, some tried to break the windows. They would hit it with their fists or their head. The Lexan cost around $300 to replace. We've replaced that with glass windows because they hurt more to hit."

"It's a challenging job," said Castillo. "I have to come in everyday and deal with the general public and I have the responsibility to train my people not to get hurt. Horsing around or becoming too friendly with the inmates could cost a life."

"I have a responsibility and I do my job the best I can. I try to keep the jail running smoothly and efficiently as possible and that's all I can do."

As one shift is over, the jailers coming on duty must face another day of uncertainty of what kind of criminal element, if any, the day will bring.

Upward Bound seeks students

Eligible Hereford students are encouraged to enroll in the Upward Bound project this summer at West Texas State University.

Over 100 Hereford students have participated in the unique program at WTSU since its inception in 1967. Students selected will spend six weeks on the WTSU campus receiving special academic enrichment.

The Upward Bound Academic Camp is free to those who qualify. A student must be a first generation college student and/or low income, or physically handicapped. Room, board and all fees are paid by WTSU.

The program will give target students a look at the college environment before graduation from high school. It will also let students gain information about college and the college community.

The number of slots available is limited, and persons wishing application forms may write Roger C. Scott Jr., Box 94 WTSU Station, Canyon, TX 79106 or call 656-2350.

Mayor proclaims Chamber of Commerce Week

Mayor Wes Fisher, seated, has signed a proclamation designating May 6-10 as Chamber of Commerce Week in Hereford. On hand for the proclamation signing, from left, were Bobby Moore, Ruth Newsom, Dr. Ronda Clark, Darwin McGill, Pat Robbins, Donna West, Kim Buckley, F. Michael Carr and Rex Easterwood. The week is designed to call attention to the many facets of the chamber's work. The week is being observed throughout the state.

Chamber week proclaimed

Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher proclaimed May 6-10 as "Chamber of Commerce Week." Leaders of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and local government officials were on hand this week for Fisher's proclamation.

"Chamber of Commerce Week" will be celebrated throughout the state. The week was designed to acknowledge the work that local chambers do to enhance their communities.

The local chamber is defined as "a voluntary organization of local business and professional people who are interested in the community's civic and economic progress." The Chamber is funded primarily by the annual investments of its members.

"Chambers provide information to newcomers and visitors, attract new businesses to the area, help improve the existing business community and promote a positive community image," said F. Michael Carr, C of C executive vice president.

The local chamber has received recognition throughout the state for its activities and support. Members have participated in supporting the many functions that occur throughout the area. Although the Chamber works on special projects, it has many day-to-day activities.

The Deaf Smith C of C produces monthly publications and special seminars for local business people. It operates as the central agency for members to work together to enhance Hereford and the county's business community.

The Chamber serves as an information center for those interested in the area. The voluntary organization promotes the area for conventions and tourism, and it encourages business and industry to relocate to the area to provide more jobs. The organization helps future residents by providing information about schools, housing and area activities.

The mayor's proclamation encourages "all citizens to join in the week's activities and to recognize the contribution the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce makes to our community."

BAPTISTS

For their part, fundamentalists say the majority of the convention's 37,000 churches applaud the direction of the convention and simply won't leave.

"There may be a little tiny, infinitesimal fraction that splits from the convention, but it will be very, very small," said Rev. W.A. Criswell, a fundamentalist leader and pastor at First Baptist Church of Dallas for 47 years.

"There's just no place for them particularly to go. Where are they going to go, whom are they going to join?"

That question may be answered May 9 in Atlanta when moderate Southern Baptists gather to organize The Baptist Fellowship.

Moderates deny they are starting a new denomination, but they won't rule out a complete break in the future.

The Rev. Bill Sherman, a moderate leader and pastor of Woodmont Baptist Church in Nashville sees the fellowship as a safety net. If Sunday School literature published by the Baptist Sunday School Board becomes too fundamentalist, the fellowship can provide alternatives, he said.

A survey of 1,400 Southern Baptists commissioned by the Sunday School Board pointed out differences over how to interpret the Bible:

- 35 percent believed the Bible is the literal word of God;
- 49 percent said it was the inspired word of God with no errors, but some verses could be taken symbolically rather than literally;

- 11 percent said the Bible is the inspired word of God, but may contain historical and scientific error;
- 2 percent said the Bible wasn't inspired by God but represented humankind's best understanding of God's nature.
- 1 percent considered it an ancient book of fables, legends, history and moral precepts.
- Two percent didn't respond.

During the moderate-fundamentalist fracas, two Baptist Press editors were fired, the Sunday School Board President resigned, and seminary students and professors complained that fundamentalists imposed their viewpoints at the cost of academic freedom.

Fundamentalists deny any of the dismissals or resignations were over theological or political differences.

"A few churches may leave, but most churches will stay within the canopy of the convention, while they may shift giving to different endeavors (such as the diversion program)," Sherman said.

Sherman said one thing that will prevent a split is that most churches get along fine on the level of the state and local Baptist associations.

United they are powerful. Split, they may have trouble paying for foreign missions and seminaries to train ministers.

The Rev. Paige Patterson, president of Criswell College in Dallas, is one fundamentalist who thinks 300 to 500 churches will leave the Southern Baptist Convention.

Fisher pointed out that the city's tax rate, 42 cents per $100 valuation, has not changed during his tenure, although the city has had to increase fees in some areas. One of his fears is that some fees, especially for garbage collection, may rise even higher in the future.

He pointed out that the Texas Department of Health's sudden closing of the city incinerator two years ago cut the city landfill's life from 35 years to seven years, and the city may be faced with even greater problems when the Environmental Protection Agency comes out with new landfill regulations.

"Each person creates four pounds of garbage a day, and we had been burning 85 percent of our trash," Fisher said. "The city is waiting for the EPA regulations and will have to consider many alternatives, including the possibility of a regional landfill."

Another challenge facing the city, Fisher said, will be replacing retiring City Manager Darwin McGill, who will leave in August. Fisher went through similar straits in 1985 when Dudley Bayne, Hereford's city manager for 29 years, retired.

"Darwin has done a great job despite the fact that the city has lost population and has had a flat economy," Fisher said. "We have maintained the same tax rate and have provided reasonable service to the community."

Fisher plans to continue working with the area alliance and other groups when needed.

"I certainly haven't retired from life and stand ready to assist whenever I can," Fisher said. "I will continue to work with the PAA and other groups for regional cooperation and economic development."

"Our city is in good financial shape, and I feel it is left in good hands and is moving into the future with a positive attitude."

Crimestopper Spotlight

When it comes to being on the front line of solving crimes in Hereford, Esreal Silva is there. Detective Silva was with the Hereford Police Department for five years before becoming a detective. He says that Crimestoppers has been an instrumental part in solving crimes in the Hereford area. The important factor Det. Silva stresses is for citizens to call the Clue Line (364-2583) with information concerning crimes anywhere in Deaf Smith County. There are rewards offered for such information, and it helps convict criminals.

Join Det. Esreal Silva and the Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers in making Hereford a better place to live.

Key Club event set

The Hereford Key Club will hold its annual banquet and install new officers at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Hereford Community Center.

The speaker will be Danny Haney, Hereford head football coach and athletic director.

The Key Club will officially retire the 1990-91 officers and install the 1991-92 officers. Key Clubbers, dates and parents are encouraged to purchase tickets, for $5 per person, from club treasurer Ben Weatherly.

FISHER

Fisher and others finally had enough and, armed with petitions bearing 3,000 signatures, sought an investigation of TRLA by its parent Legal Services Corporation, a quasi-governmental agency.

Fisher and many others participated in an LSC hearing in El Paso. "We didn't pull any punches, but there was a room full of TRLA people there." Eventually, TRLA closed its Hereford offices.

In 1983, the Department of Energy announced that Deaf Smith County was one of seven sites the DOE was considering for a high-level nuclear waste repository. Fisher said television and newspaper reporters descended on Hereford for the story, and he got his first taste of how the electronic media could easily pull things out of context. Fisher said he had told a news crew that the city would look on the project with utmost caution but would welcome any economic benefits. The part about the caution was left out, and it made not only area but national news.

Fisher said he regretted the deep rifts in the community caused by the nuclear waste issue, but feels those rifts are healing.

Fisher recalled the infamous Amarillo newspaper series and recalled how citizens throughout the Panhandle, not just in Hereford, were miffed. Through the efforts of many persons, including Mesa Petroleum's T. Boone Pickens, Panhandle Citizens for a Better Amarillo Newspaper (PCBAN) was formed.

While Fisher was happy that changes were made in the Amarillo newspaper, he feels that greater benefits may be derived from the Panhandle Conference of Mayors and Panhandle Area Alliance, two groups formed as a result of the newspaper fight.

"Several of us mayors got to calling each other, and we began realizing that some of the others might have answers for our problems," Fisher told the Lions Club.

Between the Covers

BY REBECCA WALLS

The list of new books begins with Extreme Measures by Michael Palmer which is a fast-paced medical thriller that will keep you on the edge of your chair.

A secret clique of medical professionals is watching Eric Najarian, a dedicated and ambitious young doctor. Najarian performs a bold, experimental technique and saves a dying man in the frantic urgency of the emergency room. Afterwards the secret clique contacts Najarian with a proposal: administer a highly unorthodox treatment to specific designated patients and enjoy a prestigious new post, or refuse and watch his career come to a dead halt.

The secret clique watch as Najarian helps Laura Ender search for her missing brother, who looks remarkably like a derelict treated and pronounced dead in the emergency room by Eric himself. When Najarian takes Laura to see the body it has disappeared and its disposition obscured by a smokescreen of lies.

An unspeakable desecration of a second body occurs, convincing Eric that something evil is happening and he must discover the truth. After watching Eric Najarian, the clique decides that action must be taken and Eric, who refuses to be their ally will become their victim. The deadly conspiracy moves from a funeral home's hidden chambers, to a voodoo ceremony on a Boston back street, to a remote clinic where the dark side of a sacred profession is practiced in ruthless secrecy.

Catherine Cookson's new book The Wingless Bird is a romantic saga set in a 1913 northern English countryside. Agnes Conway is twenty-two years of age and works selflessly for her loutish father and dreary mother in the family's candy and tobacco stores. Jessie, the pampered younger sister attending secretarial school, becomes pregnant out of wedlock by one of the town's ruffians, which does not improve the family situation any.

Although rumors of war are rumbling throughout Europe, Agnes is determined to make a better life for herself. By chance Agnes meets the high-born, well-to-do Charles Farrier who offers her a glimpse of a far different world. Charles shocks his family by taking Agnes as his bride. Agnes begins to feel that her virtuous life has been rewarded until the cruel realities of war and illness cut her hard won happiness short. Through resilience, courage, dignity and strength Agnes is able to survive and triumph over the difficulties life has for her.

Nancy Reagan, the unauthorized biography by Kitty Kelley is here at last. Through over 1,000 interviews collected over a period of four years Kitty Kelley feels she has succeeded in unmasking Nancy Reagan "as she is," her husband's materialistic social climber; a bitter foe and formidable strategist and an American phenomenon.

This story takes place in the highest reaches of public life, from the world of movies to Capitol Hill. Beginning with a lonely young girl who learned the power of fantasy and self-creation from her mother who "invented" herself, Nancy was able to shape herself into a Smith College coed, a Hollywood starlet, an ambitious governor's wife, and finally as the First Lady of the land.

Kelley shows that Nancy was the first person to see Ronald Reagan for what he could become and explains how this clever, ambitious woman went on to create the two most spectacular careers in modern politics: her husband's and her own.

In Dr. Martin Katahn's book One Meal At A Time you learn that "between 1.25 and 1.5 million people will have a heart attack this year, and about 500,000 people will die of ischemic heart disease. Ischemic heart disease is where a blood vessel supplying oxygen and nutrients to the heart are blocked and part of the muscle that does the heart's work dies."

Dr. Katahn also emphasizes that "too much fat is the greatest hazard in the American diet. Too much saturated fat is the primary dietary culprit in heart disease. Too much fat of any kind is associated with certain cancers, obesity, hypertension, gallbladder disease, and non-insulin dependent diabetes...Overall, about half of the 80 million or so people who are already ill (not simply overweight) are under 65 years of age.

Dr. Martin Katahn shows people how to make sensibly, beneficial and permanent changes in their eating habits. The One-Meal-at-a-time program is based on these principles:

1. You don't have to change everything over night. A new eating style is mastered in easy steps.
2. You don't have to be perfect.

The program allows plenty of leeway for treats, rewards and even controlled binges.

3. You don't have to spend your life counting. After three to four weeks you will know the fat content of the foods eaten and the rest is second nature.

4. It has to taste good! Anyone looking at this book will be able to see that it is nutritionally sound, user-friendly, and it is something that you can do.

This country has a lot of faith in the younger generation--just look at the size of the national debt we expect them to pay.

Nostalgia: The VCR of our minds.

We have a lot of respect for candidates in this Saturday's elections. Those who are elected have some difficult times ahead, whether they are on the hospital board, city commission or school board.

All the local governmental entities have some major problems. Funding is always a problem and that could lead to local tax increases. The hospital faces financial shortages as well as the recruitment and retention of local doctors. The city will be hiring a new city manager and faces problems on the landfill. The school district is awaiting the final outcome of the school funding reform plan, and is not yet certain how it will affect this district.

The people we elect need our input in making some critical decisions in the days ahead.

Nowadays, lemonade is flavored with artificial lemon, and furniture polish with real lemons.

A letter to the editor in Friday's paper from Dr. Grant Cettie touched on a point that has been mostly avoided in public discussion over the hospital's problems--that of doctor referrals. Dr. Cettie, a podiatrist, stresses that citizens must use local doctors and the hospital, but physicians must also support new doctors and specialists by making referrals. In far too many instances, says Cettie, patients are referred to Amarillo when their needs can be met here.

Dr. Cettie challenged The Brand on reporting that "all-eight local physicians" were present at the last board meeting. Cettie, a doctor of podiatric medicine, says it should have read "eight of the nine local physicians." He was not invited to the board meeting.

One specialist told us recently there is a joke among new doctors and specialists that the well-established physicians have a "three-year referral rule." That is, the doc must live here three years and prove himself, aside from being board certified, before he receives referrals. Not true, do doubt, but it does indicate a problem which only the doctors can solve.

"Sinners don't squawk as loud as regular taxpayers," says James Roberts of Andrews, one of our favorite columnists. He says he's figured out the way to get the state legislature off the hook as far as deficits are concerned.

"In the past, our representatives in Austin and Washington have found it expedient and easy to pass sin taxes. Consequently, taxes on cigarettes, cigars, snuff, whiskey, beer and other alcoholic beverages have gone through the ceiling. They've almost made smoking a luxury tax."

Trouble is there's not enough sins left to tax to yield anywhere near the amount of money needed to offset soaring budget deficits. They only solution, it appears to us, is to create more sins to tax.

"We might have to go back to Moses and the Ten Commandments delivered to the Israelites. Thus far, our legislators have not levied a tax on those who do not observed the Sabbath, nor on those who take His name in vain. Properly administered, those two taxes alone might raise a couple hundred million.

"A tax on those who kill probably wouldn't even raise enough money to outfit the Teacher Retirement Center in Austin, but a tax on those bear false witness, who lie, cheat, steal and those who are consumed by jealousy and envy ought to yield about as much money as a state income tax.

"But we could probably balance the budget both in Austin and Washington if our duly elected representatives could come up with a means of taxing adultery and that commandment about coveting thy neighbor's wife and goods.

"It's either that or we've got to invent some new sins in order to render unto Caesar..."

Two men at the nursing home were listening to a speaker rattle off statistics concerning the elderly.

"Currently," said the speaker, "there are 14 women for every man over the age of 65."

One of the old timers, age 74, turned to the other and said, "That's the most useless piece of information I've ever heard!"

Well, Nolan Ryan certainly stirred things up amongst all the middle-age folks, didn't he?

Here's a guy, 44 years old, that is doing something (pitching baseballs in the major leagues) better than anyone else in the game.

I don't know that there's an easy way to put into perspective what he did Wednesday night when he pitched his seventh no-hitter. No one else has thrown more than four in the 100-plus years of professional baseball. It would be like someone all of a sudden hitting 70 home runs in a single season (nine over the current record), or the career home run record being reset at, say, 900 (currently 751).

For a baseball buff like me, Wednesday night was special. I am proud to say I listened to the whole thing on the radio and taped the ninth inning. I listened to the tape Thursday evening on my way to Amarillo and had goosebumps all the way from Dawn to Wildorado as Nolan mowed 'em down again as I flew down Farm Road 809.

Who knows what the guy will do next. But I can hardly wait for Tuesday night. That's when he'll pitch again, against the same Toronto Blue Jays. We all know that most sequels aren't anywhere near as good as the original, but here's a guy that has broken all of the old molds, the preconceived notions, the cast-in-stone ideas. It should be interesting.

A successor was elected Saturday to Mayor Wes Fisher. City Hall and everything else around Hereford won't be the same without Wes there.

It seemed like anytime two or more were gathered, Wes was there. Wes did a lot of things, ceremonial stuff, that may have been beyond the call of duty, but Wes always did it and did it with a smile and a sense of humor.

Hereford's been through some tough times for the past few years, but Wes has helped steer the city's ship through the choppy waters. I think we will all be able to look back in a few years, or in many years, and appreciate what Wes has done for this city.

Wes' work hasn't all been confined to this city. Thanks to PCBAN a few years back, Wes helped from the Panhandle Area Alliance and the Panhandle Council of Mayors. These groups have already done some good for the area, and will continue to work for the betterment of the region.

Wes, for all that you've done, thank you. You're a good one, and we'll miss you at City Hall. Do come around and see us.

The candidates' forum the other night was interesting, I thought.

Plus, I got to see myself on TV several times, so that was good, too. Some smart aleck told me that TV added 30 pounds to me, but I couldn't really tell. When you're this size anyway, what's another 30 or so.

Editorial opinion around the state

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

April 25
Waco Tribune-Herald on John Sununu: White House Chief of Staff John Sununu has been taking a lot of trips on government planes, causing a small political uproar.

No one has found anything illegal in the trips, but Democrats have instituted a congressional audit of his travel expenses. Few people question whether government planes should be used for official government business. That's the reason the government has planes.

Sununu, however, is getting some justified heat because it takes a creative mind to believe some of his business trips actually involved government business. Also, some of these trips involved Republican Party business and others were purely personal.

Another reason Sununu is taking some shots for his expensive trips on government planes is because of the hypocrisy; Sununu practices one thing while preaching about cutting back on waste and excessive spending in big government.

Government planes should be used for government business. The taxpayers should not have to subsidize anyone's personal or political expenses.

April 28
The Houston Post on state aid: On Thursday, Feb. 19, 1987, an Austin radio station gave away $100,000 in a call-in contest. So many state employees called in that the state telephone system temporarily shut down.

It spoke volumes about how many state workers spend their time on the job. And it explains why the public has such a distrust, even dislike, for most state employees.

So when Gov. Ann Richards says there will be some changes made, all of Texas cheers. On her 100th day in office, the governor said state government is a "sloppy ship" in bad need of repairs.

Fighting words, governor. And good words, too. The problem is saying it shall be done and actually getting it done.

Now Richards must follow up with carrots and sticks. Competent workers must be rewarded and incompetent workers demoted or dismissed. In some cases this may take a change in rules, policy or even the law.

April 29
Dallas Times Herald on no-pass, no-play: Let's make sure we understand this: ... Gov. Ann Richards proposed some major legislation aimed at improving the quality of Texas education, saying that with school financing out of the way, it was time to focus on student performance.

A day later the house Public Education Committee approved a bill that would cut the no-pass, no-play penalty from six weeks to three. ... Are we missing something here?

Logically, it would seem that if improved scholastic performance is the goal, reducing the no-pass, no-play penalty is a step in the wrong direction. Not so, say the coaches. Under the current rule, they say, the season is often over before the player's penalty ends, stifling any incentive to improve the grades.

But critics of the change say the current penalty fits the crime like a well broken-in baseball glove fits the hand.

"If you set high standards in performance on the playing field and in the classrooms you will be amazed at how the young people will exceed your expectations," said Mark White, governor when no-pass, no-play became law. "If you set low standards, they will meet those as well."

Now that, to us, makes sense. ...

April 28
Houston Chronicle on free trade with Mexico: The United States has seldom if ever enjoyed better relations with Mexico than it does now. Congress should be building on that with every opportunity. But Congress is instead being pushed toward what would be a disaster in U.S.-Mexico relations.

It cannot be emphasized too forcefully that if Congress takes it upon itself to explicitly label Mexico as an unworthy partner for a free-trade agreement, ... the Mexicans, with good reason, are going to consider this an insulting and gratuitous slap in the face - and react accordingly. It will take years to repair the damage. ...

Congress is being pressured to reject fast-track authority by a coalition of labor unions, protectionists and environmentalists. They are parading a scenario of horrors and demands for intrusion in Mexico's sovereign affairs which is quite simply insulting. ...

Mexico is a proud and sensitive country - very sensitive to its larger neighbor which too often treats it with benign neglect and malign insensitivity. If Congress rejects Mexico as a fit partner for free trade, with this record as the reason for rejection, the anti-Americanism it will provoke will poison relations for years. ...

April 29
San Antonio Express-News on nuclear power: The tragedy of Chernobyl endures five years after reactor No. 4 showered radiation on the Ukrainian countryside. The human costs are still being paid, as cancers appear among the early rescue workers and surrounding farms remain closed, perhaps forever.

But the tragedy does not serve the aims of American anti-nuclear activists, who like to see in Chernobyl a "metaphor" for technological hubris. Nor is it a cautionary tale for the U.S. nuclear power industry.

In fact, the practical lessons learned from Chernobyl are few. Its reactor could never have been licensed in the United States. ...

The only lesson of Chernobyl, then, is really rather banal: Stupidity and indifference don't work. But nuclear power, managed with intelligence and care, does.

April 29
San Antonio Light on Mexico's economic success: Amid the opening salvos of the public debate over a proposed free-trade agreement with Mexico, an important tale of political courage and economic improvement has been pushed to the background.

While comparisons of the United States and Mexico often focus on the economic gap between them, that focus obscures the remarkable success of Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari in taming inflation and slashing the government's budget deficit. ...

Many in this nation have a tendency to find lessons for Brazil and Argentina in Mexico's success. But could it be that the world's largest debtor just might be able to learn something here, too?

At a time when U.S. leaders call a $300 billion budget deficit progress, and some members of Congress advocate protection from wicked foreign competition, maybe this nation should pause and look south. ...

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,
Not long ago someone penned the phrase, "People Helping People." This was never more obvious than at the Hereford EMS Golf Tournament on April 27.

There were teams entered in this event that knew they wouldn't win a thing. They had entered simply because it was for a good cause. Some had not played golf since 1976. To all you many friends, thank you for making the Hereford EMS Tournament a success. And thank you to all of the many businesses that donated gifts.

These golfers and businesses bonded together for Deaf Smith General Hospital's ambulance service. We can now purchase some of the equipment we were in need of. Many thanks to you all.

Dear editor,
It has finally arrived. The longer days and warmer temperatures have brought back America's pastime, T-ball, Kids Inc. style. In less than two weeks another season will begin.

The board members of Kids Inc. are excited about this season and have worked hard to get the program back on its feet. They have made some changes to increase participation levels and make the program financially sound.

T-ball is growing. We will have three new boys teams, and there is softball and T-ball for the girls this year.

As a concerned parent and T-ball coach, Kids Inc. needs your help. Very soon kids of all ages will be knocking on your door for the annual Kids Inc. fundraiser. Out of the money from the things you purchase, Kids Inc. will keep 60 percent. I wish we could keep 100 percent. Please support our kids this year, and maybe next year we can keep 100 percent. If you don't need another jar of cheese or a calendar or whatever, we can always use money. If you would rather donate money than buy something, send your donation to

Kids Inc., Box 1945, Hereford 79045. Thank you for your support, and "PLAY BALL!"

Dear editor,
To all Hereford, Walcott, St. Anthony's, Nazarene and Community church fourth, fifth and sixth grade students, I am writing this letter on behalf of the Hereford Kiwanis Club to inform you we will not be hosting our annual spring track meet.

Our board of directors has been informed by the University Interscholastic League that we were in violation of their rules. According to Bonnie Northcutt, assistant to the UIL director, "No interschool athletic competition is allowed in any conference for teams in the sixth grade and below. This does not apply to annual interschool elementary field days, assuming there is no awarding of place ribbons or determination of team champions."

The Hereford Kiwanis Club is very upset about this decision. This track meet was one of our best projects, and we know the students always looked forward to this event.

Hereford Kiwanis Club

Dear Editor:
Thanks to you, your staff, and KPAN for the excellent publicity on the community shower to benefit M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. It was a great success.

On April 23, we were able to ship 24 boxes, valued at more than $3,500. They were filled with wigs, gowns, robes, pajamas, house shoes, slippers, scarves, greeting cards, games, toys, books and magazines, kitchen kits and many more useful items for the patients and their families.

We wish to thank all the lovely people who so generously contributed, Sugarland Mall for the space and help on the two pick-up days, and Central Truck Lines who shipped the boxes as their contribution.

Again, thank you.
Sincerely,
Rosemary Thomas, President

Person burns Bird, Celtics with 30 points

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - In a season filled with firsts, the Indiana Pacers have put themselves on the verge of another one.

Chuck Person scored 30 points, including 12 straight, as the Pacers overcame a 13-point third-quarter deficit to beat the Boston Celtics 116-113 Friday night and even their first-round playoff series at 2-2.

The deciding game in the best-of-5 series will be played Sunday in Boston with the winner facing Detroit or Atlanta in the second round.

Indiana, 3-10 in four NBA playoffs, will be playing a fifth game in a series for the first time ever and Person is confident his club can move into the second round for the first time since entering the NBA in 1976.

"The Celtics know we're the better team and we've got to prove it Sunday," said Person, who made a pair of 3-pointers in his spurt as he shot 5-for-6 in the final quarter.

In other action Friday night, Golden State eliminated San Antonio with a 112-97 victory in their Western Conference series.

Chicago hosted Philadelphia today in the opener of an Eastern Conference semifinal series while Seattle played at Portland in the fifth and deciding game of a first-round series in the West.

Boston star Larry Bird was defending Person in the last quarter.

"Larry knows that I'm gonna be in his dreams tonight and tomorrow night and he knows I'm coming for him in the (Boston) Garden," said Person, the leading scorer in the four games with 98 points.

Person, who had 39 points in Indiana's Game 2 victory at Boston but was held to six in Wednesday's loss, began his streak by hitting a basket with 4:42 left to cut Indiana's deficit to 105-102. He tied the game by making a 3-pointer with 4:22 remaining.

"I told Chuck you got to do whatever you've got to do," Indiana coach Bob Hill. "If you've got to go out there and get into an argument, or bark and fight or talk, be Chuck and that's what you've got to do. That what he did. ... It was a big game for him, a breakthrough game for him."

Warriors 110, Spurs 97
Tim Hardaway scored 32 points as seventh-seeded Golden State eliminated San Antonio in four first-round games.

The Warriors stayed with their four-guard offense most of the way to beat the Midwest Division champions for the third game in a row, and advance into the Western Conference semifinals against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Golden State led 80-64 in the third quarter and 82-73 going into the fourth before the Spurs pulled within 84-79 on Willie Anderson's driving layup with 9:53 to play.

But Hardaway hit a pair of 3-point shots to help the Warriors go up 95-84 with 5:16 to play. San Antonio got no closer than six points the rest of the way as the Warriors made nine of 10 free throws in the final two minutes.

Chris Mullin added 23 points for the Warriors. Sean Elliott scored 23 points to lead the Spurs, who were 55-27 during the regular season. Rod Strickland added 21 points and David Robinson, taking 11 shots, scored 18 points.

"We wanted the ball in Tim's hands the last five minutes, and we extended that to the last eight minutes," Warriors coach Don Nelson said. "He just came up with big shot after big shot. I thought we ran off too much time on the clock a little too often, but we managed to come up with a big shot with a second or so left."

Ump, White Sox no trouble for Clemens

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Roger Clemens had no trouble with Terry Cooney, and the Chicago White Sox weren't much of a problem, either.

Clemens, pitching for the first time since his five-game suspension, shut down Chicago on five hits Friday night and led the Boston Red Sox to a 7-2 victory.

Clemens' shutout streak ended at 30 innings when the White Sox combined three singles, two of them bunts, a walk and a sacrifice fly for two runs in the first inning. After that, Clemens (5-0) breezed past the Chicago batters and he did the same with Cooney, who umpired at first base.

The last time Clemens and Cooney crossed paths on the field, it was Game 4 of the playoffs and their argument led to Clemens being suspended and fined $10,000. This time, they seemed to avoid each other as Clemens went back-and-forth between the mound and the first-base dugout.

In the fourth inning, Clemens took first baseman Carlos Quintana's throw and tagged the bag for the final out. Then he gently tossed the ball to Cooney and walked away.

"Terry's and my situation is pretty much behind us now and it could go no further," Clemens said. "What's happened is not going to change the way he goes about umpiring or the way I go about pitching."

Cooney declined comment after the game at Comiskey Park. Before it began, he said: "I hope from now on it goes back to baseball. When Roger's gone and I'm gone, baseball will still be here."

Clemens, the top winner in the major leagues, struck out seven and walked two. He has given up just three earned runs in 41 innings this season, those coming on two sacrifice flies and a bases-loaded walk.

Jack McDowell (4-2) was the loser.

Athletics 4, Indians 3
Bullpen aces Dennis Eckersley and Doug Jones each blew save tries before Terry Steinbach's two-run double in the 11th inning gave Oakland its team-record 10th straight home win.

Beau Alford's solo home run with one out in the ninth off Eckersley tied it at 2. Cleveland went ahead in the 11th when Albert Belle led off with a triple against Eckersley and Carlos Baerga singled off Joe Klink (1-1).

Jones relieved with one out in the 11th and runners on first and second. Steinbach greeted him with a sliced double for Oakland's sixth straight victory overall. Steve Olin (2-2) took the loss.

Yankees 5, Mariners 0
Scott Sanderson (2-1) pitched a three-hitter, struck out nine and walked none as New York stopped a four-game losing streak.

Hensley Meulens hit a two-run homer in the second off Brian Holman (2-3).

Tigers 7, Rangers 6
Rob Deer tied the game with a two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning and Detroit won in the 11th on Mickey Tettleton's RBI single.

Alan Trammell drew a leadoff walk from Brad Arnsberg (0-1) in the 11th and moved to third on a balk and a sacrifice. After Cecil Fielder was intentionally walked, Tettleton singled to left field and made Mike Henneman (3-0) the winner.

Orioles 2, Angels 0
Ben McDonald (1-1) bounced back from his worst start ever and Mike Devereaux homered and doubled twice as Baltimore won at California.

Kirk McCaskill (2-3) was the loser.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 1
David Wells pitched eight effective innings and Toronto sent Kansas City to its seventh straight loss.

Wells (2-3) gave up eight hits, struck out three and walked one.

Manuel Lee put the Blue Jays ahead in the fourth with a run-scoring grounder off Storm Davis (2-2).

Brewers 6, Twins 5
Dante Bichette's two-run triple in the eighth inning rallied the Brewers on a chilly night in Milwaukee.

Franklin Stubbs singled with one out off Jack Morris and reliever Rick Aguilera (0-2) walked Greg Vaughn. Bichette tripled to send Milwaukee to its seventh victory in eight games.

Brian Harper hit a two-run homer during a five-run second inning against Jaime Navarro (2-0).

NL games finish quickly

By The Associated Press

It was a tough night for the folks selling hot dogs and beer around the National League.

Of the six games played in the NL on Friday night, the longest was 2 hours, 42 minutes. That's almost unheard of in an era when the 3 hour-plus game has become quite common.

The fastest game of the night was played in Pittsburgh, where the Pirates took only 1:45 to beat the Houston Astros 1-0. It was the shortest game in the NL since Philadelphia and Atlanta played in 1:41 on Sept. 1, 1981.

"Both pitchers were throwing strikes and getting quick outs ... there were a lot of 1-2-3 innings," loser Pete Harnisch (1-1) said. "The way I look at it, Zane Smith pitched a one-pitch game better than me."

That one pitch was a home run by Orlando Merced with two outs in the sixth.

"It's a good feeling when you hit the ball like that," Merced said. "You don't feel that way very often."

Smith (3-1) retired the first 12 hitters and pitched out of a fifth-inning jam with the help of two key defensive plays.

Dodgers 7, Phillies 1 (2:42)
Ramon Martinez pitched a four-hitter for his third consecutive complete game as visiting Los Angeles beat Philadelphia, ending the Phillies' five-game winning streak.

Braves 5, Cubs 2 (2:34)
Greg Olson's two-out, two-run single in the sixth inning broke a tie as Atlanta beat visiting Chicago.

David Justice started the winning rally with a one-out walk from Shawn Boskie (2-2) and Sid Bream followed with a single. Bream avoided a double play on a grounder up the middle by Terry Pendleton, who was thrown out at first, and Olson then singled in the hole to left field to break a 2-2 tie.

Expos 4, Padres 1 (2:24)
Ivan Calderon drove in two runs to help Oil Can Boyd win for the first time this season as Montreal beat visiting San Diego for its fourth straight victory.

Cardinals 4, Reds 2 (2:34)
Ray Lankford and Ozzie Smith singled home ninth-inning runs, leading St. Louis past Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Mets 3, Giants 0 (2:40)
David Cone retired the first 16 batters and finished giving up four hits in eight innings as New York beat San Francisco at Shea Stadium, sending the Giants to their fourth straight loss.

WORD OF MOUTH

You've read our ads, your reading this, and you have probably seen our For Sale signs around town. But the very best kind of advertising for almost any business, is word of mouth. The opinion of a customer telling a friend. Before you choose a contractor to remodel your kitchen, a photographer to record a wedding or even a new restaurant for an evening out, you ask friends for referrals. Who has done good work for you? Were you satisfied with the workmanship, or the photo album, or the food? Choosing a real estate broker is very similar. We are proud of the work we've done for our area, your friends and neighbors. We have sold their houses efficiently and effectively, getting good prices for them within a reasonable time. We invite you to inquire about our services. We hope you'll find that we have earned our reputation in town. Ask about us, then call us, the local real estate pros.

Ryan's longevity even impresses Ryan

NEW YORK (AP) - Even Nolan Ryan is impressed by Nolan Ryan. "I can remember when I came up with the Mets, my goal was to last four years and qualify for the pension plan," Ryan said Friday in Detroit, where his Texas Rangers were playing the Tigers. "I had no idea I would be different than the other power pitchers, who start getting weeded out about 30."

If that had happened, Ryan would just be a 14-year-old memory. Nor would George Herbert Walker Bush, who will be 67 June 12, have sent him a one-word telegram Thursday after Ryan's seventh career no-hitter.

"Wow," it said.

"Wow," which is what the rest of the sports world thinks of an athlete who is better at 44 than at he was at 34 or 24. Tom Watson, 41, said the inspiration of Ryan's no-hitter helped him shoot a 65 for the first-round lead in the Byron Nelson Golf Classic Thursday.

"He's 150 percent better now than at any time before," Baltimore manager Frank Robinson, 55, said after Ryan blew away Toronto, the best hitting team in baseball, striking out Roberto Alomar with a 93 mph fastball for the final out.

Robinson should know. He faced Ryan in the 1969 World Series, when Ryan was a 22-year-old with a fastball that approached 100 mph but often missed the plate by yards. He was a teammate of Ryan's with California in 1973 when Ryan set the single-season strikeout record of 383.

Robinson knows that Ryan is better now, a unique example of success in the era of the senior citizen as athlete.

Sure, there are others his age still competing.

Jack Nicklaus won a Masters at 46 and Hale Irwin won last year's U.S. Open at 45. But that was golf, a sport in which players in their 70s still can break par.

Sure, Bill Shoemaker won a Kentucky Derby at 54. But Angel

Cordero, 49, has a mount in Saturday's Derby and cynics claim that jockeys are just passengers on equine athletes.

How about George Foreman, 42, waving the banner of paunchy middle age? He still lost to 28-year-old Evander Holyfield, albeit valiantly.

And 42-year-old Mark Spitz? He probably can win a seniors swimming meet, but he was no match for Tom Jager and Matt Biondi, both 20 years younger.

Perhaps the best example is 45-year-old Jim Palmer, already a Hall of Famer. Inspired by Ryan, he tried a comeback with the Baltimore Orioles this spring after seven years out of baseball. No fastball, no command, no comeback.

"When Jim Palmer made his comeback, I followed it with great interest, but not much optimism," Ryan said. "I know that if I were out seven years, I would never be able to come back."

The closest anyone has come to duplicating Ryan's feats may be Warren Spahn, who at 42 in 1963 was 23-7 with a 2.60 ERA. But Spahn didn't win his first major-league game until he was 25.

Now, at 44, he may not be the most dominant pitcher in baseball. But he's certainly the most amazing, particularly in a sport where survivors are junk ballers like Tommy John or knuckleballers like Phil Niekro or Hoyt Wilhelm, who couldn't break 80 mph at 20.

To put it another way: Can anyone imagine Roger Clemens, 28, or Dwight Gooden, 26, throwing over 90 mph if they're still pitching when they're 40? Both already have had arm problems, something that Ryan never has experienced.

But he did experience learning difficulties - particularly with control. His career started in 1966, but until 1983, he had never gone nine innings without walking a batter. And between 1970 and 1983, he walked more than 100 batters in a season 11 times. Since then, it hasn't happened.

"He used to be just power," said Tom McCraw, the Orioles' 50-year-old hitting coach, who played with or against Ryan in three of his seven no-hitters.

"Strikeouts were his reputation," McCraw said. "He'd get ahead in the count, go for the punch-out and end up walking people and getting in jams. But he gradually learned how to pitch and now he's awesome. It's not a pretty thought, but I swear it's true - he's getting better. He's gone from no control to good control and now he's finally got command of everything."

All of this is relative, of course. John Kennedy was considered too young when he ran for president in 1960 at age 43.

But pitchers? Ryan is a contemporary of Palmer, Tom Seaver and Steve Carlton, fastballers all. They survived into their late 30s or early 40s, but not on fastballs - on experience, wisdom and guile.

"I think a lot is genetic," Ryan said Friday. "The aging process affects everyone differently, and it hasn't affected me as quickly. I've played with guys that were just as dedicated to working out and mechanics as I was, and their careers were cut short by injury or aging."

"If people find me an inspiration, I'm very pleased."

TV station feels heat for airing Ryan's gem

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - The dust of Nolan Ryan's seventh no-hitter is starting to settle, and the NBC affiliate in Dallas-Fort Worth is in hot water over its live broadcast of the final two outs, a violation of Major League baseball rules.

The only live telecast of the historic game between the Texas Rangers and the Toronto Blue Jays Wednesday night was provided by Canadian Television. ESPN broadcast the last two innings live.

HSE, the cable network that will broadcast 50 of the 81 Rangers' home games this season, chose not to air Wednesday night's contest, a decision that was made in February, said assistant general manager John Heidtke.

ESPN's baseball contract allows it to pick up live the final three innings of any game it wishes. ESPN broke away from its Kansas City-Detroit telecast to show Toronto batting in the eighth and ninth innings via the CTV telecast with announcers Don Chevrier and Tommy Hutton.

KTVT-TV shows eight Rangers home games to supplement its package of 67 road telecasts, but ESPN's contract with Major League Baseball prohibits over-the-air stations such as KTVT from telecasting baseball on Wednesday nights.

But KXAS-TV picked up the CTV telecast live and showed the dramatic final two outs on its 10 p.m. newscast. KDFW-TV and WFAA-TV in Dallas videotaped CTV's coverage and later used highlights on their newscasts.

Officials from those stations, as well as ESPN and Major League Baseball were angered by the KXAS violation.

KXAS general manager Doug Adams said his station has apologized to baseball commissioner Fay Vincent's office.

"There was no malice or forethought," Adams said. "It was not planned. We were taping game highlights to play back during the news, and the producer in charge said, 'Let's put it on the air.' It was obviously an incorrect decision."

Jim Small, manager of public relations for Major League Baseball, said baseball is "exploring all of our possible actions, which could include legal remedies."

Small refused to elaborate, but The Dallas Morning News said sources indicated a complaint with the Federal Communications Commission could be filed, or that KXAS might be temporarily prohibited from showing highlights of any major league game.

HSE, meanwhile, was scrambling to locate a tape of the game for future broadcast.

Mike Lovejoy of Arlington has his own taped memento of the historic game.

Tuesday night, Lovejoy went to the Rangers' Fantasy Play-by-Play booth and for $100 purchased the opportunity to call the play-by-play for the final four innings Wednesday.

Lovejoy received a videotape of the final four innings with his voice providing the description.

"I was trying to do a professional job, and it was really a challenge trying to contain myself," said Lovejoy, a 46-year-old bus driver with professional broadcasting ambitions.

Bob Benson, coordinator of the Fantasy Play-by-Play promotion, said Lovejoy's call was better than the one on the Canadian telecast.

"He really got excited," Benson said. "The Canadian broadcaster just said, 'No. 7 is in the books.'"

Ranger managing general partner George W. Bush, the president's son, wasn't in his normal seat behind the Rangers' dugout for the game. He watched Ryan whiff Roberto Alomar for the final out from the Lincoln Bedroom of the White House.

Bush skipped the game because of a speaking commitment in his hometown of Midland. He left West Texas for a presidential visit shortly thereafter.

Frustrated at watching alone, Bush called friend and team ownership partner Roland Betts in New York for a pair of long-distance box seats to the no-hitter.

Rangers' phenom finally on scene

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Left fielder Juan Gonzalez didn't look to be running fast enough to catch the ball that was headed for the gap.

And he was headed directly toward center fielder Gary Pettis, the American League Gold Glover who was moving at top speed.

Pettis' churning legs couldn't get there.

Gonzalez and his long strides did. Somehow the pair avoided collision.

The breathtaking catch in a 4-2 loss to the Cleveland Indians was just another example of why the Texas Rangers have a "Hope-Of-The-Franchise" label on the 20-year-old from Puerto Rico.

After fooling the lean, 6-foot-3, 200-pound Gonzalez with two curves, Candiotti tried to sneak a fastball by him. The ball reached the left field seats before Candiotti could turn around.

Gonzalez, who suffered a knee injury during spring training that kept him out of the Rangers lineup until April 26, also has shown he can adjust to the curveball. Cleveland's Eric King dazzled Gonzalez early with breaking pitches, but the kid ripped a curve for a double in the later innings.

Gonzalez already has made most of the Rangers fans forget about Pete Incaviglia who was cut in spring training. Texas manager Bobby Valentine was booed when introduced on opening day because of the Inky chopping.

the final month of the year and had 150 at-bats. He has 20 too many to be eligible for rookie of the year awards.

In Oklahoma City, he did some amazing things. He had three homers in one game. During a three-game series, he had five homers and 12 RBI.

With the Rangers, he hit .340 and homered in the bottom of the ninth to beat Milwaukee. At age 19 years, 11 months, he's the youngest player ever to hit a homer for Texas.

"The key to Juan's success will be patience," said Texas manager Bobby Valentine. "He's still learning. But he could be awesome before he's through, if he can stay injury free."

Last September, Gonzalez suffered back problems, a bloated disc that caused nerve irritation.

Gonzalez didn't play winter ball so he would be ready. But he suffered knee ligament damage in the spring and had to have arthroscopic surgery.

Then came divorce proceedings back in Puerto Rico.

Now, the injuries and the divorce are behind him.

Gonzalez isn't fluent yet in English, but almost every other sentence starts: "I'm very happy..."

And the Rangers and their fans, who haven't had a division pennant since the old Washington Senators moved here in 1972, are very happy their promised baseball messiah is finally on the scene doing wondrous things.

Juan, the phenom. That's him, the kid who scout Sandy Johnson signed as a teen-ager in Vega Baja, and labeled him a pennant player, the kind who can lift you into the playoffs with glove and bat.

His quick-wristed, flowing swing sends baseballs on line drive missions that resemble a Titleist struck by Ben Hogan 1-irons. The ball gets out there in an eye-blink.

In a recent series, Cleveland's Tom Candiotti learned about Gonzalez's "fast bat."

The Rangers players, some of them disgruntled because the popular Incaviglia was let go, aren't protesting any more.

"If we had Juan in the lineup last year we would have finished first or second in the division," said Rangers' second baseman Julio Franco. "He's just starting out, but you can see the tremendous talent."

Gonzalez was the most valuable player in the American Association last year for Oklahoma City. He started 22 games for the Rangers in

YOUR EYES

ALLERGIES AND YOUR EYES

No question but that allergies can seriously compromise the comfort of your eyes, especially if you wear contact lenses. What can you do?

When allergies are caused by foods, simply identifying the culprit and removing it from the diet will usually clear up the problem. If pollen or dust are the cause, antihistamines may restore comfort, though some lens wearers must retire their contacts during allergy "season."

But don't neglect the most common cause of chronic eye allergies -- eye makeup. It's even possible to become allergic to a product you've used for years, once you become sensitized to the ingredients. Remember that soaps and perfume, and makeup removers, can cause itching and swelling of the eyelids.

Many hypoallergenic beauty products are available today. It may be necessary to try a few brands before finding one that doesn't produce a reaction. Test cosmetics first in the fold of your elbow and, if no redness occurs, try on the eye area. Test new products one at a time.

Workshop for pesticide applicators set Monday

Farmers and ranchers that apply and supervise the application of pesticides can receive training and take the licensing examination at a meeting on Monday, May 6 in the Hereford High School Agricultural Building, 6 p.m. The training and recertification of producers who supervise the application of pesticides is required due to changes in the Texas Pesticide Laws which were passed in the last regular session of the Texas Legislature. These new regulations required the licensing of private applicators that previously had a private applicator certification. Producers that have a private applicator certification, can continue to purchase and apply pesticides on their own land. They cannot, however, supervise other employees that may be applying pesticides. The training program will be conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The licensing examination will be given immediately following the training by the Texas Department of Agriculture. The Private applicator license will cost producers $50. And is payable at the time the examination is taken.

Persons desiring more information on the Private Applicator Licensing training and examination, can call the Deaf Smith County Extension Office at 364-3573.

Granado, Sanchez wed in Hereford April 20

MRS. RICHARD SANCHEZ
...nee Martha Jane Granado

Martha Jane Granado became the bride of Richard Sanchez in an afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday, April 20, in St. Anthony's Church. Officiating was Father Orville Blum.

The bride is the daughter of Larry and Janie Granado of Route 2, Hereford, and the bridegroom is the son of Pablo and Gabriela Sanchez of 407 Ave. D.

Two white floral bouquets adorned the front altar and pews were marked by white ribbons.

The bride's sister, Gracie Ann Ruiz, was matron of honor and the groom's brother, Charlie Sanchez, was best man.

The bride's niece, Brandi Stephanie Ruiz, daughter of Jimmy and Gracie Ruiz, was flower girl and ring bearer was Eric Christopher Sanchez, son of Charlie and Tina Sanchez.

Members of the San Jose Church Choir vocalized principal wedding selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a formal-length white satin gown. It was designed with a fitted bodice and wedding ring collar embellished with lace and miniature seed pearls. The short full sleeves were created by layers of satin ruffles and the basque waistline was adorned with white lace swirls and pearls. The skirt was full and flowing.

The shoulder-length bridal illusion veil formed a pouf at the back of a V-shaped headband created from strands of beads and accented with white flowers and matching side sprays.

She carried an all-white bouquet of carnations and daisies trimmed with ribbon streamers.

Her jewelry consisted of pearl earrings and a pearl ring borrowed from her sister, Gracie Ruiz.

The matron of honor was attired in a tea-length black and white dress and carried a bouquet of white daisies. The flowergirl wore a dress adorned with white lace and black ribbon and carried a basket of white daisies.

Elijah Jim Ruiz invited guests to register at the reception held at El Caribe.

Beatrice Macias served cake and Irene Leon poured punch and coffee. Others members of the houseparty included Dolores and Pablo Sanchez Jr.

The three-tiered white bride's cake, which was trimmed in black and made by Margaret Gamez, was decorated with white roses and black ribbon icing. The table was covered with a white lace cloth and centered with a white floral arrangement. Black napkins were used for accent.

The couple will make their home in Amarillo.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School where she was a six-year band member. She currently substitutes for the Hereford Independent School District.

The groom is also a 1988 HHS graduate and was a six-year band member. He is presently employed by Holly Sugar Corp.

Wedding guests represented Friona, Morton, Dallas, Littlefield, Amarillo, Phoenix, Ariz., Kansas, Ulysses, El Paso and Carlsbad, N.M.

"One of the ways that we can help ourselves is with the support of others," said an organizer of the group. "Experts say there are millions of Americans that suffer from such disorders. We want to help others who want to lead a happier life. We may not have all of the answers, but at least we can steer people in the right direction and help find the answers."

"The group is for persons of all ages, and no problem is too large or too small. We encourage anyone who may be facing problems to contact us."

Persons interested in learning more about the support group may write to Support Group, PO Box 673NTS, Hereford 79045. All correspondence will be held in strict confidence.

National Music Week scheduled May 5-11

"Music-Is It For Everyone?" is the theme of this year's National Music Week observance which begins today and concludes Saturday, May 11. 1991 marks the 68th observance of the anniversary.

Hereford offers many musical opportunities throughout the year. In the public schools, students in grades one through six have general music classes and sixth graders may take beginning strings instruction. Junior high and high school students have choir, band, and orchestra programs available as elective courses.

According to James Maclaskey, director of bands and music supervisor of Hereford schools, students have been active in UIL competition.

The Hereford Community Concert Association offers a variety of professional musical entertainment. During the 1991-92 concert season, several outstanding performances will be offered to CCA members. Planning to perform in Hereford are the Moscow Balalaikas, Larry Logan, Neal and Leandra, the Saturday Brass Quintet and the Texas Boys Choir.

Members of the Hereford Chamber Singers, which was organized in 1974, will be presenting concerts at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, May 26, and at 7:30 p.m., Monday, May 27, in the Hereford High School auditorium. The talented musical group, composed of adults who love to sing, has spread "human relations through music" throughout the community, state, nation and the world. Their travels have included a trip to Australia in 1988 to sing for World Expo '88 in Brisbane, Australia, a Friendship Ambassador sponsored trip to Romania in 1977 and guest appearances at the Texas Choral Directors Association meeting in San Antonio in 1975 and 1985.

The Hereford Music Study Club, founded in 1916, has an active membership. The club offers a scholarship to a graduating Hereford High School senior majoring in music, sponsors a music festival each spring, and holds senior recitals.

The area also offers junior music clubs, and private vocal, piano and Suzuki string studios. Church programs include choirs for adults and children, and handbell and other specialty choirs and groups.

National Music Week, first observed in 1924, was founded by Charles M. Tremaine of the National Bureau for the advancement of music.

The National Federation of Music Clubs--dedicated to encouraging young musicians, to increasing musical knowledge, and to advancing American music--joins forces with cooperating organizations to direct attention to the dynamic influences of music in everyday living.

"TEXAS" souvenir program to feature Melvin Warren

The 1991 "TEXAS" souvenir program will feature 44 color prints by nationally acclaimed cowboy artist Melvin C. Warren.

Warren is one of 23 "Cowboy Artists of America," who work to perpetuate the culture of Western American. Their art is recognized across the world. Warren was selected as one of the ten best western artists by this esteemed group.

For 25 years "TEXAS" has selected cowboy artists to display in the program. Full color art was added two years ago. The 1987 "TEXAS" souvenir program also featured Warren, but this is the first time his works will appear in the program in color.

Collectors and fans of Warren's paintings include: former Governor John Connally and former President Lyndon Baines Johnson. President Johnson said, "There is no man's talent that gives me more comfort and satisfaction than that of Melvin Warren."

Warren resides south of Meridian in the Texas hill country on the Broken W. Ranch.

Born in Los Angeles in 1920, he moved to West Texas at the age of ten. His father was a cowboy, and his early life was spent moving from ranch to ranch in the southwest. Much of his work reveals early memories of adobe villages, Indians and life on the range.

Although he paints largely in oil and watercolor and sculpts for bronzes, Warren also uses some pastels and charcoals. Noted for this extensive research, Warren thoroughly studies and incorporates every historical detail in his work.

During the past 20 years, Warren received some of the highest awards an artist can acquire including: Drawing and other Media, Gold (1982); Silver (1984 and 1985); CAA Memorial Award (1980). In one unprecedented 1975 showing, Warren won five awards.

Represented in the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, Warren was designated by the Texas Legislature as one of 300 Honorary Rangers.

"TEXAS" opens June 12, 1991, and will play nightly except Sunday through August 24 beneath the cliffs of Palo Duro Canyon near Canyon and Amarillo.

The Paul Green musical drama traces the settling of the area, using a cast of 80 accented by song, dance and the latest sound and light effects.

For reservations to "TEXAS" or a $3 copy of the souvenir program, write P.O. Box 268, Canyon, Texas 79015 or call 806-655-2181.

The flag raising ceremony was conducted by Bob Morris, Grant Hanna and Pete Jack. The pledge of allegiance was said by those present.

Pos. Commander Bill Craig and Auxiliary President Betty Boggs placed a wreath at the memorial in honor of all veterans who have served this country and in memory of all who died in service, especially Roy Wederbrook, for whom Post 4818 is named.

After brief talks by the commander and president, Jo Irlbeck led the group in singing "God Bless America" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

The program was closed by a prayer from Tom Draper.

Special guests were auxiliary member Erma Loving's grandson, Blake Johnson who has just returned from serving with Desert Storm; his wife, Robin; his mother, Carolyn Johnson; and his brother and sister-in-law, Brent and Brenda Johnson.

Following the program, the group had refreshments of cookies, coffee and tea in the post home. A film on "Satanism" was presented by Officers Terry Brown and Albert Garza.

Gov. Ann Richards has announced that the Texas Department of Community Affairs has funded Panhandle Community Services $31,768 to assist in the prevention of homelessness in the local area.

The organization is one of 55 across Texas that TDCA has chosen to receive assistance.

The funding is part of the $2,055,737 Emergency Community Services Homeless Grant Program awarded to TDCA in February by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

The program provides a variety of services aimed at the assistance and prevention of homelessness in the local community.

Specifically, it seeks to prevent potential homeless situations through shelters and temporary assistance with bills, such as rent and utilities.

TDCA withheld $500,000 of the grant to be distributed as performance awards later in the contract year.

The awards will be distributed based on criteria which may include planned performance versus actual performance, cost per client served, types of activities and assistance provided and amount of total grant spent on direct services.

1971 class reunion slated

The 1971 graduating class of Hereford High School is currently making plans for its 20-year reunion to be held Aug. 9-10 in conjunction with the annual Town and Country Jubilee Celebration.

Class members who are interested in working with one of the many committees needed to make the reunion a success are asked to call Chip Formby at 364-6532, Corky Vargas Campos at 364-6418 or Marilyn Leasure at 364-6070.

The following students have not been located. If you know the whereabouts of these people call Formby, Campos or Leasure.

Addresses have not been found for Blake Arnwine, Samii Ayden, Alicia Barnard, Cruz Barrientez, Bruce Battey, Donnell Benefield, Patti Carter, Mitzi Charles, Greg Chisholm, Yolanda Condarco, Steve Connelly, Glenda Cooksey, Suzy Wagner, Jose DeLa Paz, Earlene Deas, Lynetta Mercer Dickson, Denise Stone Ference, Carlos Galviz, Kay Tucker Grubbs, Shera Anderson Hammett, Janet Messer Henderson.

Also, Robert Holland, Sylvia Deyke Lueker, Dorothy Maddox, Delma Benavides Martinez, Tommy Mason, John Mayo, Mike McKenzie, Bill McQuery, Alex Mendez, Ralph Mercer, Janet Messer, Deborah Nance, John Nelson, Pam Turner Noyes, Yolanda Ortiz, Joe Pesina, Joe Ramirez, Juan Ruiz, Cynthia Scott, Barbie Sellers, Becky Sellers, Connie Bainum Sooter, Ricky Stokes, Sandra Stotts, Doug Tatum, Susie Torres, Arlene Wade, Linda Williams and Ellen Wooderts.

The Savings and Loan failures are expected to cost each taxpayer thousands of dollars. Now, Congress is considering action to keep that kind of thing from happening again.

Making sense out of labels

While the federal government struggles to write regulations for nutritional labeling of meat, consumers are still trying to make sense out of required labels on other foods.

It's hard to choose the right foods because their nutrition labels can be extremely confusing, if not misleading, said a nutritionist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Nowadays, more people concerned about their health realize how important it is to cut fat, sugar and sodium in their diets," said Dr. Mary Kinney Bielamowicz. "While they value nutrition labels -- all are not clearly understood."

The Food and Drug Administration requires a food label to state the name and address of the manufacturer and to list ingredients in the descending order of weight, she said. However, calorie information is optional.

"Terms such as 'light' and 'lite' are misleading because they have no standard definitions," she said. "Yet, they are used to appeal to consumers."

To remove fat from hot soup, put an ice cube in a thin cloth and swish back and forth in soup; the fat will collect in the cloth.

Girls of the Year named

The three local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority celebrated Founder's Day Tuesday evening, April 30, at the Hereford Country Club. Among the highlights of the annual event was the presentation of Girl of the Year by each chapter. Receiving the honor for 1990-91 were, from left, Kay Williams of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter, Patty Frerich of Alpha Iota Mu Chapter and Virginia Jackson of Alpha Alpha Preceptor Chapter. Approximately 50 local women were present to honor the sorority's 60th anniversary internationally.

Annual Founder's Day observed

"Celebrate the Magic" was the theme featured at the Founder's Day celebration held Tuesday night at the Hereford Country Club by members of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

Approximately 50 women representing three local chapters were present for the 60th anniversary of the international sorority's founding.

Multi-colored ribbon adorned floating candles set on mirrors enhanced by confetti were present on each table and a large floral centerpiece of spring flowers decorated the head table.

Ruby Lee, president of the three local chapter's City Council, welcomed guests and members of Alpha Iota Mu Chapter (AIM), Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter (XEA) and Alpha Alpha Preceptor Chapter (AA). Jan Walsler, accompanied by Susan Shaw, sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Lee led the opening ritual and Glenna Calaway said Beta Sigma Phi Grace. Peggy Hyer led the Founder's Day Pledge and Marge Bell read the Message from International. Holly Bixler, president elect of XEA chapter, noted "What Beta Sigma Phi Means to Me."

Dinner of lemon chicken, potatoes, asparagus, rolls and dessert was served.

The president's yearly reports were given by Marrie Leverett of AIM chapter, Gaye Reily of XEA chapter and Virginia Jackson of AA chapter.

Highlighting the event was the presentation of Girl of the Year by last year's recipients. AIM's sponsor, Kay Williams, announced that Patty Frerich was winner of that chapter's award. Gaye Reily of XEA chapter presented that chapter's award to Kay Williams while Karren Ruland and Lynda Brown gave Alpha Alpha's award to Virginia Jackson.

Peggy Hyer made a special presentation honoring Ruby Lee as outgoing City Council president. Barbara Burkhalter announced the 1991-92 theme as "A Time For Us." Lee led members in the closing ritual.

Care, cleaning of jewelry

Jewelry, like the clothes you wear, needs cleaning and polishing to restore its natural sparkle.

Most stones and their settings can be cleaned with liquid jewelry cleaner available in jewelry or department stores. Or you can clean them just as well and with less expense using the following homemade formulas.

A word of warning: If you clean jewelry in the sink, be sure to keep the drain tightly closed and covered with a washcloth.

CLEANING TIPS

- AMBER: Put two drops linseed oil on a cotton ball and rub it into the amber. Remove oily residue.

- DIAMONDS: Mix one cup hot water with one-quarter cup ammonia and one tablespoon mild liquid detergent. Soak the diamonds in this mixture for 20 minutes. Scrub slowly but firmly with an old toothbrush. Rinse in hot water, then dip in rubbing alcohol and air-dry or dry with a lint-free cloth. (Don't rinse off the alcohol. Allow the diamonds to cool to room temperature; don't plunge them into cold water.)

- OPALS: Clean with a mild detergent (not soap) and water. Handle carefully since opals are very fragile. When not worn, opals should be stored in a special humidior or water.

- PEARLS: Soak pearls in a mild soap and water solution. Rinse and buff with a flannel cloth. Don't soak a string of pearls; clean each one individually. For greater luster, wear pearls often so they can absorb natural skin oils. For the same effect, rub a little olive oil over pearls and wipe dry with a chamois cloth. Store pearls in a bin of rice.

- LAPIS, MALACHITE, TURQUOISE: Use a mild detergent (not soap) in cool (never hot) water. Clean with a soft brush.

- AMETHYSTS, AQUAMARINES, EMERALDS, GARNETS, JADES, SAPPHIRES, RUBIES, TOPAZ, TOURMALINE: Add one tablespoon of ammonia to one-half cup warm water. Immerse jewelry and scrub with a soft toothbrush.

Rinse in clear water and dry with a lint-free cloth.

- IVORY: Rub with denatured alcohol. Then, for an extra shine, rub with a drop of lemon oil.

- GOLD: Mix one cup warm water with one-half cup ammonia. Soak jewelry for 10 to 15 minutes. Gently scrub with a soft toothbrush, then rinse in warm water. Let dry on an absorbent towel.

- SILVER: Rub with silver polish, toothpaste or a dry cloth dipped with baking soda. Use a toothbrush to get into holes or crevices. Then rinse and towel-dry. For a quick clean, rub dry ashes over silver.

REGULAR CARE

- When giving jewelry a final rinse, use the jet spray on your oral-hygiene appliance.

- Don't swim in a chlorinated pool while wearing gold jewelry - chlorine can eat away at gold.

- To keep track of your pierced earrings, fasten them through the holes of buttons. Or line a section of your jewelry box with foam rubber and stick the earring posts into it.

Betty Crocker

Q. How can I prevent hard candy from sticking together? I keep it in a covered candy dish. E.D.N., Los Angeles, CA

A. Unwrapped hard candy absorbs moisture and becomes sticky. If it's homemade candy, cook the candy to the right temperature, because undercooked candy will always be very sticky and moist and won't dry. For a decorative look wrap homemade candy in colored plastic wrap or candy wraps you can purchase at specialty food stores.

Q. I refrigerated my olive oil and it became cloudy. Is it alright to use? W.A., Kearney, NE

A. Yes, the olive oil is safe to use. It becomes cloudy and firm at cool temperature, but will be clear as it warms to room temperature. Olive oil need not be stored in the refrigerator.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

The Science Of Seeking

I recently asked five managers to define management and got five different answers. "Getting tasks done through others," one said. "Solving problems and making decisions," said the second. "The catalyst for accomplishing your company goals," said another. "Planning..." stated the fourth. "Management is 99 percent planning." Uh, I don't really know," said the fifth manager. All of these answers were correct.

Small business management is a combination of planning, solving problems, making decisions, delegating, setting goals, prioritizing and dealing with the unknown. For the small business owner, management skills must be mastered to some degree if the business is to succeed. Larger businesses must accomplish the same tasks. However, they often can afford a specialist -- a manager to handle each area or set of tasks.

Typical entrepreneurs must truly be jacks-of-all-trades. At the ring of the telephone, they must be able to exchange the bookkeeper's hat for the customer service crown. They must change from mild-mannered human relations specialist to crusty credit collector on demand. They must plan for the future but make payroll today.

When I complained about the stress of managing my own business, my wife just smiled. She would pause -- long enough for me to remember that this was my idea -- and then say, "Life is hard...and then you die."

"I Don't Know"

Most owners and managers, if they were entirely truthful, would have to say occasionally, "I just don't know." It happens to all of us. Every week, we encounter first-time situations, find new problems to solve, and have new decisions to make and new directions to take.

Early in my management career, I learned it isn't a sin to say, "I don't know." The sin is omitting "but I'll find out." My clients sometimes ask questions that I can't answer. However, I always try to find out.

Management is a science of seeking. It is constantly gathering new information to enhance the decision-making process. Progressive managers learn from the success and failure of others. They must be aware of new techniques, monitor trends and build their basic skills. One of the goals of this column is to provide information that will help managers become more successful.

Management Tools

Every productive administrator must possess certain basic tools. They are necessary for survival and required for growth.

A carefully prepared plan may be the most important management tool. Each plan should include the mission of the company and the goals it seeks to achieve. Therefore, knowledge of the goal-setting process is critical.

Other important tools include understanding your financial statements, prioritizing tasks, managing your time, and communicating effectively.

In the next few weeks, we will look at these topics in detail. We will explore the importance of planning and help you understand the difference between strategic and operational plans. We will discuss the value of setting goals for your personal life and your business situation. We will show you how the process can yield the results you want.

We will devote an entire column to financial management and cost control techniques. Another will share some tips from managers who excel in prioritizing tasks and time management. Finally, we'll wrap up this management series with tips on becoming a better communicator.

In the past few years, I have worked with hundreds of successful men and women. As managers, they have a common trait -- they are growing. They are constantly seeking new and better ways to run their businesses. Stay tuned to this column and we'll share some of their most valuable lessons.

Processing adds billions to economy

Texas could add billions of dollars and tens of thousands of jobs to its economy by processing more of the raw foods and fibers grown in the state, according to the Texas Agri-Business Electric Council.

The growing awareness of this potential economic boom by leaders of business, agricultural and state government is an encouraging sign, said Greg Boggs, agricultural marketing consultant with Southwestern Public Service Company. SPS, along with nine other Texas investor owned electric utilities and Texas A&M University, compose the council.

The potential for ag-processing has been documented by a recent study done by the SPS economic development department. The "Target Growth Study," listed 80 industries which would fit well into the SPS service area. One-quarter of those industries were related to agriculture processing, including such industries as textile mill production, confectionery production and grain mill production.

SPS Economic Development Manager Cheryl Pink said the study demonstrates that ag-related industries should continue to be encouraged to locate to the area. "Communities have been working hard and will continue to work hard to attract such industries," Pink said.

"As the cooperation of state and local governments increases, our chances of attracting one of these ag-related industries also increases," Pink added.

Governor Ann Richards earlier this month related that Texas produces a significant amount of the nation's cotton, but most of it is processed elsewhere into clothing and other goods. In fact, according to a 1989 study by the Agri-Business Electric Council, Texas grows one-third of the nation's cotton, but ships 92 percent of its crop out of state to be processed.

Boggs said Gov. Richards is to be commended for encouraging emphasis on more ag-processing in Texas. "Think of all the jobs that never would have been created if we had shipped all Texas' crude oil out of state to be turned into gasoline and other petroleum products," Boggs said. "Yet, that's just the sort of thing we're doing with much of the Texas' huge agricultural resources."

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry also is committing resources toward the development of more ag-processing in the state, Boggs said. "Commissioner Perry knows that the value added by processing is significant," said Boggs "and it's money the Texas economy is losing. For example, the value of corn is more than doubled when turned into corn masa flour for making tortillas and other Mexican-food products. And one dollar's worth of milled corn becomes ten dollar's worth of corn flakes cereal."

The Agri-Business Electric Council is fighting to change the situation. It has produced feasibility studies of increasing the Texas processing of corn, rice, timber and natural fibers, including cotton, wool and mohair. In addition, the council may do feasibility studies of processing vegetables, leather and other agricultural products. For copies of future and existing studies, contact Greg Stark, executive director of the council, at Texas A&M University.

Disease hurting spruce

Sirococcus shoot blight, a fungus disease that attacks and severely damages blue spruce trees, has been positively identified in trees in the Hereford area. The disease caused by the fungus Sirococcus strobilinus, effects conifers throughout the North Temperature Zone of North America and Europe. In the Great Plains, it has occurred for years on blue spruce and Norway spruce in Kansas and South Dakota, but was identified in the High Plains of Texas for the first time in 1990.

The disease is not common in the Great Plains area and is thought to have increased in recent years due to the distribution and importation of infected nursery stock in turn infects established trees.

The fungus causes tip dieback and cankers on current year's growth. Foliage infected will become chlorotic, turns reddish-brown, dies, and is shed from the plant. Infected shoots tend to elongate, and may curl and become hooked shaped.

Symptoms of the disease are similar to those of winter drying or frost injury. Shoots killed by the fungus are usually scattered, however, and fewer in number than the more uniform patterned of injury associated with winter injury.

Infection begins in needles and spreads into the stem to form a canker. The fungus grows within the succulent stem tissue but rarely into older wood. As the canker develops, fruiting

Clovis bound by search for Matthew

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) - His black tombstone is covered with Match Box cars, toy soldiers and a tiny football left by visitors to his grave. The inscription on the stone reads in gold letters: "Clovis' Child. Our little boy forever."

A year after 6 1/2-year-old Matthew Joseph Roberts disappeared, no one in this eastern New Mexico town has forgotten him or the impact of his death.

Hundreds of children are reported missing every day in cities across the country. Often their cases become merely additional statistics.

But not in Clovis, where farmers work together to make sure crops are planted on time and where with a nearby Air Force base most every house flies an American flag regardless if a war is going on.

In this community of about 30,000 people, when a child under the age of 7 disappears, it becomes the police department's top priority for the next 72 hours.

On May 8, 1990, Matthew Roberts went missing after his mother, who had just left for the grocery store. The boy did not return.

Officers were dispatched. Radio stations broadcast a description of the boy, and within hours more than 10,000 area residents were organized into a search.

Parents and children alike teamed up and scoured the city's narrow streets, rummaging through alleys and garbage bins in hopes of finding the likable first-grader.

People who knew Matthew claimed to have seen the child in three different locations around town the day he disappeared.

But one week went by without a trace of the boy.

T-shirts were printed up with Matthew's picture. Thousands of fliers with the boy's smiling blond-haired, blue-eyed face were distributed to missing children centers across the country.

After a second week passed, police approached the case as an abduction and feared for the boy's survival.

Still the town searched. "With each passing day, the chances of finding him alive decreased," said then-Police Chief Caleb Chandler.

On May 23, 15 days after Matthew disappeared, the case took a horrifying twist.

Two joggers passing by the Roberts' residence smelled a strong stench coming from the back of a car parked in the family's driveway.

Matthew's body was found curled up in a rear compartment of a 1978 Chevrolet Impala station wagon that had been loaned to the family.

"My first thought was outrage," Chandler said. "I thought it was a homicide and that whoever was involved had put his body back at his home. I thought the person had to be one of the most weirdest, most thoughtless people ever to walk the earth."

But after crime and medical lab results were returned, Matthew's death was ruled an accident. Authorities determined the boy had played a deadly "game of hide-and-seek. He entered an 18-by-18-by-12-inch storage compartment that could not be opened from the inside, police said. "He likely stopped breathing within a matter of minutes," according to the autopsy.

The car had been recalled for the very reason that small children could become trapped inside the compartment. Geoff and Debbie Roberts, who adopted Matthew when he was 2 days old, were recently awarded a settlement from General Motors. Neither side will discuss the amount.

A year after Matthew's disappearance, the town still is feeling the effects.

A plaque at the entrance of Highland Elementary School, where Matthew grew to love playing soccer, commemorates the boy as "Clovis' Child" with a verse from the Bible.

"Matthew has made the community come together and be more concerned about each other, especially the safety of our children," said Grace Jones, principal at Highland. "The boys and girls now go everywhere in pairs."

The Robertses are still trying to recover from Matthew's death. Part of the healing has been to help other parents who have lost children, working through the Matthew Roberts Foundation.

"We circulate hundreds of fliers of missing children every week," Mrs. Roberts said. "But every time I pick up a flier the first thing I see is Matthew's face. The shock of his death has still not worn off. I don't think you ever get over something like that."

One mention of Matthew's name and local residents immediately recall where they were and the feeling of urgency that stirred when the little boy disappeared.

"I was working that night," said Alex Romero, 22, an employee at a Clovis restaurant. "I just remember seeing people all over the place looking for him. It was like a mission. But if there is one good thing, I think the people today remember the coming together more than they remember how Matthew died."

But to some local residents the cause of Matthew's death remains a question.

"I think a number of us still do wonder if it was truly an accident and that maybe there was some foul play involved that was never uncovered," said Shirley Kaiser, the grandmother of a 4-year-old boy and an employee at a Clovis bank.

Kristi Lovelace, a 20-year-old employee at a Clovis photography store, also questions whether Matthew's death was an accident.

"I don't think too many kids would climb into a compartment that small when it's hot outside," she said. "And the fact that he was in a car right in the back yard for two weeks, wouldn't someone have found him sooner? You have to wonder if someone didn't put him there."

Chandler stands by his department's investigation.

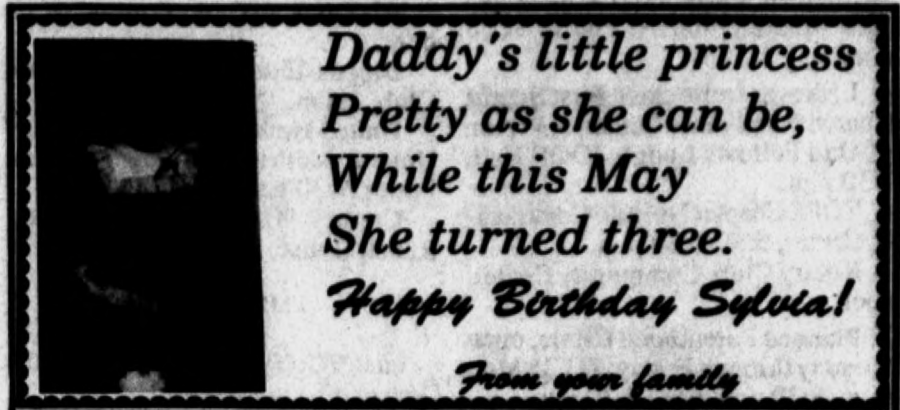

Sightings of Matthew the day he disappeared were discredited as children who looked like the boy, Chandler said. And the car's airtight compartment kept those passing by from discovering the child sooner, he said.

"I can understand where someone who doesn't have 100 percent of the information might think there was some foul play," Chandler said. "But if you take all the information gathered from the crime and medical labs, there is no other explanation than the death was an accident."

Mrs. Jones said the community will use Matthew as a source of strength for years to come.

"We have to get to the point of reality that we have really lost him," she said. "Now we must make sure that this never happens again. And I think Matthew's memory will help to keep it from happening again here or in other communities."

Something new to worry you: Doctors warn of caterpillars

DALLAS (AP) - This is the season to beware of tiny hairy caterpillars that pack a big sting.

"I tell my grandchildren, 'Anything with long hair on it, you do not touch,'" says Dr. J.W. Stewart, Texas A&M Extension entomologist in Uvalde.

There are several types of stinging caterpillars in Texas, Stewart said, including the io moth, saddleback caterpillar, buck moth and hag moth.

But the most unpleasant crawling critter of the bunch is the puss caterpillar, also known by the deceptively cute name of woolly worm - or, more ominously, the tree asp.

A report in the May issue of the Annals of Emergency Medicine warns that the puss caterpillar can cause severe pain. Although no deaths have been reported, two U.S. Army doctors who studied the effects of the caterpillar's sting say it has caused swelling, shock-like syndromes and convulsions.

The caterpillars do not have a stinger such as a wasp or bee. Instead, their venom flows through hollow spines.

Reaction to the caterpillar's venom is fast. The site of the sting often swells rapidly and limbs can double in size. Other symptoms include headaches, fever, nausea, vomiting and cramps, said doctors Robert T. Pinson and James Alan Morgan.

"The cases I treated complained of intense pain, with a couple requiring treatment with narcotics," said Pinson. The research was conducted at Darnall Army Community Hospital at Fort Hood.

Hands and arms are most often affected, the doctors said. The best way to avoid being stung is to stay out of the caterpillar's way, Pinson said.

"The fur is very fine, almost the texture of a pussy willow," Pinson said.

The pattern of the spines creates a characteristic grid pattern on the victim's skin, Pinson said.

"It doesn't take much contact," Pinson said. "It's like brushing a cactus. If you pick it up wrong, have it fall on you or step on it in bare feet, you have envenomation."

Treatment includes ice packs, pain medication and treatment for the intense itching that can follow.

Populations of the puss caterpillar vary from year to year, depending on the number of natural predators, wasps and flies. Scientists said it is too early to guess what this year's population will be.

In 1921, the caterpillars became so abundant in San Antonio that public schools were closed until the larvae could be controlled.

The puss caterpillar is the larval stage of the flannel moth. Scientists know the caterpillar by its Latin name, Megalopyge opercularis.

In various regions of the United States, the caterpillar also is known as the "Italian asp," "woolly slug," "opossum bug," "el perrito" (little dog) and "Bicho peludo negro," (black hairy bug), the report said.

The adult moths, which do not sting, emerge from their cocoons in April through June and lay hundreds of eggs on tree leaves. The eggs hatch in four to eight days, producing larvae that mature in 30 to 60 days. A second generation then appears in September to November.

The mature larva is about an inch and a half long and range in color from tan to dark brown and from red to gray. The caterpillar has three rows of long hairs and shorter spines on each side. Some of the hairs are tufted, producing sort of a tail.

bodies that form on the dead shoots produce large numbers of spores which are spread to nearby susceptible host by splashing rain or irrigation water. Under favorable conditions of high humidity, mild temperature, and low light, the spores germinate and infect current year's shoots.

The blight causes growth loss, stress, and unsightly appearance of ornamental spruce and can kill seedling trees.

Cool, humid, shady conditions that favor infection should be avoided when planting new trees. Infected trees should have the infected shoots clipped off and destroyed to reduce the spread of spores. Inspection of newly purchased nursery stock is very important to prevent the introduction of the disease into established landscapes.

Control on established trees and new seedling can be achieved with applications of Daconil 2787. The formulation of Daconil will cause the rate of application to the variable. Consult the label for mixing directions. Applications will be necessary at 3 to 4 week intervals if conditions for infections persist. If known infection is confirmed, watch for infection in subsequent years.

For more information on Sirococcus shoot blight or other tree diseases contact the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in the county courthouse.

All programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are open to persons of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, creed, religion, sex, handicap or national origin.

First Floor Embraces Private Master Suite and Daytime Areas

TRADITIONAL STYLE APPEARS LARGER THAN IT IS

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The entry will direct you to either the second floor or the large great room and formal dining room. The breakfast and laundry are to the rear forming a pathway to the rear double garage. The central kitchen easily serves the breakfast room or the dining room.

A central half bath serves daytime use and a luxury bath is private to the full depth master bedroom suite. A separate shower and commode area are featured in the master bath and twin lavatories are shown for the vanity area.

There are two large bedrooms within the steep gable roof of the second floor. Each has a wall of closet space and an identical closet is central for linen storage. A central bath services both upstairs bedrooms.

The traditional exterior is enhanced by a decorative chimney, recessed entrance, steep gable roof and multiple windows. One dormer is shown to give light to an upstairs bedroom. Brick is shown for exterior facade.

The plan is Number 2258. It includes only 2,259 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are designed to meet FHA and VA requirements. This is a computer generated plan. For further information write W. D. Q. - I would like to replace some worn parts in my washing machine, but the agitator is just about impossible to remove. I don't want to force and possibly break anything, so do you know a way to get out the agitator?

A. - To remove a tightly fitted agitator or one that has become firmly glued in place by soap residue, first unplug the washer and remove the agitator cap. Then, if there is room between the bottom edge of the agitator and the tub bottom, work a completely deflated bicycle tire in underneath the agitator. Distribute the tube as uniformly around the agitator as possible. Leave the valve stem sticking out and attach a hand pump or mini air compressor to it.

Gradually pump up the tube. It shouldn't take much pressure because the agitator's surface area is large.

The agitator will let go with a pop. This method won't harm the agitator since the force is not concentrated and is fairly evenly distributed around its circumference. Of course, this method can also be used to separate other stuck parts on appliances if applied carefully. Certainly, it is far less apt to damage parts than attempting to pry them apart.

Q. - I own a Cape Cod house with a full rear dormer for the two upstairs bedrooms. My low-pitched roof restricts clearance so that I can't use a gable-end whole house fan. I'd like to have an airflow of 8,400 cfm (cubic feet per minute), which is the volume of livable space, both upstairs and down. Can I install a permanent fan or window unit that would provide the airflow I want?

A. - Your 8,400 cubic feet of livable space must be divided by 2, because you have a two-level house. (To help vent it, open the lower windows during the day, and the upper windows at night.) Thus, you're really only venting one-half the livable space at a time. Multiply this 4,200 cubic feet by 30 (changes per hour for good summertime ventilation), and divide by 60 (minutes per hour). This accounts for a required flow of 2,100 cfm.

A much simpler way of figuring required fan size is to use square feet of area. Dividing your house's volume of 8,400 cubic feet by a room height of 8 feet would give you 1,050
