Rain good provided sunshine coming

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

As long as hot, dry weather returns fairly soon, the generous rainfall Deaf Smith County is receiving should be entirely beneficial, an area agriculturist said this morning.

John Fuston, executive director of the local U.S. Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service office, was especially optimistic about the county's approaching corn harvest.

"Our corn crops - I hate to say it - could be the best we've ever had in the county," Fuston commented. "And we've had some good ones."

Hereford seems to have gotten as much rain in the 24 hours prior to 8 a.m. today as did any other part of the county. According to KPAN news director Chip Formby, 2.67 inches fell Thursday and today. That brings the week's total to 3.59 inches, he said, and the year's figure to 13.31 inches.

The Bootleg area, according to Bobby Hammock, received about 1.5 inches of precipitation overnight and around .5 to .6 more Thursday afternoon. It was still "pouring" as of 8:30 a.m. today, he said.

"Water's coming down the ditches this morning," Hammock commented. "It looks like we're going to need to start selling trout licenses."

Summerfield Fertilizer, according to Chris Carter, had about 2 inches of moisture descend on it between 8 a.m. Thursday and this morning. Not quite as much - about 1.5 inches - fell on Walcott, according to County Commissioner Bruce Coleman. It was still raining in each location as of 8:30 a.m. today, though much heavier in Walcott.

Flora Homfeld said a rain gauge on her farm in the county's northwest section recorded about an inch of precipitation. "We had more rain last night," she remarked, "than I believe we've had in all the other days of the week combined."

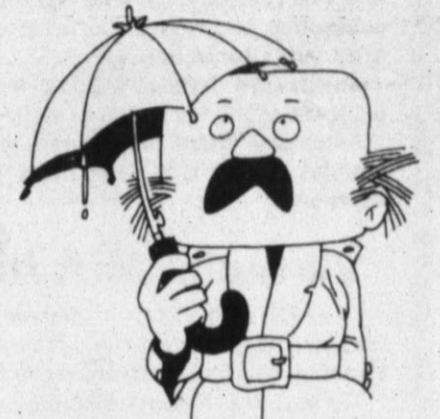

Vega, on which rain was falling in increasingly heavy amounts this morning, got about .25 or .3 inches of moisture. "We've had a lot of rain in town," Les Linger commented. He felt nearby farms, however, had not received nearly as much precipitation this week.

Approximately 2 miles east of Dawn, about half an inch of rain fell, according to J.E. McCabe. Somewhere around an inch has fallen there this week.

"I think it's all good," Fuston said about the wetness, though adding, "We're going to need some sunshine around here pretty soon." He thought it "unlikely" rains would continue too much longer and crops would not be allowed to dry out.

Though claiming moisture has saved farmers a lot of irrigation money, Fuston admitted insects may multiply thanks to the recent conditions. "This is good weather for worms in cotton, but I think we've gotten that taken care of with 2, 4-D," he said half-heartedly.

The application of weed killer 2, 4-D has been controversial this summer, causing threats of legal action by farmers whose cotton crops have been excessively damaged.

"All we need," Fuston added, "is some good hot, dry weather and the milo drop ought to be pretty good, too."

Rodeo Cancelled

Pat Minick, vice president of the Women's Professional Rodeo Association, gently leads her horse through the mud at Circle A arena.

Minick, who had made the drive from Fort Worth Thursday, was scheduled to make an appearance at the All-

Girls Rodeo, but rains postponed the event for approximately four weeks, she said.

Police try to separate warring factions

By KEN SUGAR Associated Press Writer

LAWRENCE, Mass. (AP) — Scores of heavily armed police patrolled streets acrid with the smell of tear gas today, forcing a tense calm after Hispanics and whites traded ethnic insults, rocks and firebombs in a second straight night of rioting.

Despite an enlarged police presence, violence flared again Thursday night in the poor, six-block area called Tower Hill where officials say tensions have been building for months.

Gunshots were reported, but apparently no one was hit, authorities said.

Police at the scene said about a dozen people were hurt in the latest round of fighting, and hospital officials said four people were treated and released for tear gas inhalation, cuts and a knee injury.

Tear gas used for racial riot

Twenty people were arrested on charges that included looting, inciting to riot, disorderly conduct and assault and battery on a police officer, said police Sgt. Calvin Hall. Eight other people were taken into protective custody, he said.

On Wednesday night, several buildings were burned and 13 people were hurt, some by gunfire.

"It's like Vietnam. ... People walking down the streets with guns," said Joe Johnson, a witness to the fighting.

The hostilities began after a street-corner religious service designed to draw the community together attracted knots of both whites and Hispanics, who started shouting epithets at each other.

At one point, about 180 police formed a uniformed wedge between a group of 300 predominantly Hispanic men who were beating on metal garbage cans and a smaller group of whites. Some of the whites, including people of French-Canadian, Irish and Italian descent, chanted: "U.S.A! U.S.A!" and, "Go home! We were here first!"

"We've got a riot. We don't have time to talk now," a Lawrence police dispatcher said at the height of the conflict in this aging factory city of 63,000 about 30 miles north of Boston.

Using tear gas canisters, police dispersed the largest crowds, but clusters of angry youths remained on the streets well past midnight, more than three hours after the rioting began.

By 2 a.m., an uneasy quiet had been established with about 60 armed police covering the area, drinking coffee and eating doughnuts.

"It's been contained," said police Capt. Thomas Nastasia. "It's very quiet out there."

But residents remained awake and alert all through the night.

"I haven't slept the past two nights," said Angel DeJesus, 47, as he leaned out an open window today. "I have no idea whose fault it was. I just hope for me and my family's sake that it ends soon."

Police were staying at the scene of the trouble today. Authorities planned to assemble a force of 180 specially trained riot police from other Massachusetts communities for tonight, said police Capt. Samuel Aliano.

Alderman Raymond Johnson said that city officials planned to meet today to declare a state of emergency, allowing authorities to impose a curfew and request state aid.

Johnson described the area as a declining, largely Hispanic neighborhood plagued by crime and drugs and bordered by two housing projects.

Four people were treated for tear gas inhalation, cuts and one knee injury at Lawrence General Hospital, said supervisor Estelle Passeri. No one was admitted, she said early today.

Most Jubilee events to occur as originally set

BY KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

While inclement weather has postponed the All-Girl's Rodeo and moved Jubilee Junction to Deaf Smith County Bull Barn, all other events should go off as planned during the remaining two days of the Hereford Town and Country Jubilee.

Mike Carr of the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce said this morning that all activities scheduled to be held in Dameron Park will take place at the Bull Barn instead. If the weather is nice on Saturday morning, the booths will be set up on the grounds surrounding the facility. If it rains again, Carr said, everything will happen inside the barn.

On tap today were the Jubilee of Arts, Senior Citizens Quilt Show and Sweet and Fancy Club Cake Show, all at the Hereford Community Center until 6 p.m.

The Merry Mixers still plan to square dance tonight at 8 p.m. at 801

Junction may be held indoors

N. Main. If it rains, the exhibition will take place in Sugarland Mall.

The Jubilee of Arts continues on Saturday, along with the 10:30 a.m. parade, YMCA 10K and 2-Mile Fun Run at 8 a.m. and the Simms Road Club Road Rally, the latter event is to begin at 1:30 p.m. at the T.G.&Y. parking lot.

The cake walk will conclude with judging and a sale Saturday, when senior citizens quilts will be on display again.

The 35th reunion of the Girls Rodeo Association, planned in conjunction with the All-Girl's rodeo, will also take place at a later date.

Carr asked that booth operators arrive around 8 a.m. to set up their wares at the Bull Barn.

Man recovering after accident

A rural Hereford man was listed in stable condition this morning at Deaf Smith General Hospital after being injured in a bicycle wreck Thursday morning.

Dwight Jesko, 26, was reportedly riding his bicycle in a barn eight miles west of Hereford when he slipped and fell. The Hereford Fire Department rescue crew was dispatched and Jesko was taken by ambulance to the hospital for treatment of cuts to his face and a possible concussion.

Gary Hollinger, director of nurses at DSGH, said Jesko is being held for observation in case of a head injury.

David Castillo, meanwhile, was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at the hospital. According to police, he shot himself in the lower left abdomen at approximately 1:05 a.m. today. He was found lying in the front yard of his 109 Douglas St. residence with a .25-caliber automatic pistol at his side.

Police ledger light Thursday

On Thursday, Hereford police investigated one incident apiece of assault, harassing telephone calls, indecent exposure and juvenile problem.

Two arrests were made, one for driving while intoxicated and the other for both public intoxication and theft.

There was also one minor, non-injury motor vehicle accident Thursday.

Lightning strikes home

Neighboring houses were damaged slightly Wednesday night when lightning struck an antenna on top of 612 Ave. K, home of David Casarez, Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain reported.

Spain said the bolt of lightning blew off a small portion of the roof of the first house, then somehow jumped over to the 610 Ave. K house owned by E.W. Dungan. As a result, the hot water heater exploded. No fire resulted from the incident, Spain said.

Hereford Volunteer Firemen also answered an alarm from the Fullwood Apartments, Third Street and Lee Avenue, Thursday afternoon. A pan on which a grease fire had started was carried outside, with the apartment receiving no damage.

Towns look at desalting process

ARANSAS PASS, Texas (AP) — The mayor of this coastal community wants to know how much it would cost to build a desalination plant to make his town less dependent on the strained Corpus Christi water system which begins rationing water Aug. 25.

Mayor Tommy Knight said Aransas Pass and the nearby cities of Rockport and Ingleside all buy water from the San Patricio Municipal Water District, which has a contract to purchase water from Corpus Christi.

He said the district has asked all municipal customers to begin seeking alternative water sources because of the prolonged drought.

Aransas Pass has asked for an engineering study to determine the feasibility of building a desalination plant and is also considering drilling water wells for immediate relief from mandatory rationing.

But Knight said the city has problems in seeking the supplementary water because of its contract with the water district. That contract requires the city to buy all water from the district.

Knight has asked the water district's board of directors for permission to drill wells and the board as agreed to study the request.

Dallas to roll out red carpet

DALLAS (AP) — Full-time chauffeurs, express hotel check-ins and checkouts, and custom-made office spaces are just a few of the amenities in store for those "very important people" attending the Republican National Convention.

More than 300 people have been designated VIPs by the Republican National Committee and will be given red carpet treatment.

"They all won't get everything we've got to offer, but we're going to try to do something special for each and every one of them," Jim Oberwetter, VIP chairman for the Republican Host Committee told The Dallas Morning News.

The host committee has worked hard to decide just who is a VIP and who isn't. The national committee has assigned a full-time subcommittee to oversee the process and some lists are still being drawn up, Oberwetter said.

To ease the decision-making, the committee has limited the VIP list to those playing key roles in the convention and its production.

Automatic membership has been given to the 54 Republican members of the U.S. Senate and the 166 GOP representatives from the House.

Vietnam MIA finally buried

IRVING, Texas (AP) — There was joy and sadness for family and friends who gathered to pay their last respects to Maj. Hugh Michael Fanning, who had been missing in action from Vietnam 1967.

The joy, said Kathryn Fanning, wife of the MIA, was returning to the University of Dallas, where she met her husband. There were also the friends she had not seen in 20 years, some of whom traveled as far as Hartford, Conn.

But the sadness, she said, is knowing her husband will never return home. For 17 years, Mrs. Fanning clung to the hope Fanning would return from Vietnam alive and be reunited with her and their three children.

Fanning was buried with full military honors Wednesday in Oklahoma City, and Thursday's memorial service at the university gave his friends another chance to honor him.

The 60 people who attended the 45-minute mass at St. Thomas Aquinas Chapel on the university campus heard the Rev. Monsignor James I. Tucek speak of a very caring and intelligent man.

Wholesale prices should climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, which have held steady for three months partly because of good news on the food and energy fronts, should resume a modest upward climb, many private analysts are predicting.

But the uptick will not be enough to re-ignite fears that the surprising strength of the economic recovery means the country is headed back to high inflation rates, these analysts say.

The latest news on inflation was being released today as the Labor Department announced its July report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods.

The index has remained unchanged for three straight months, helped along by three consecutive declines in food prices.

While many analysts expect food prices to be up for July, they predicted only a slight climb in the index as a whole, in part because of an expected further decline in gasoline prices.

After the Producer Price Index remained stuck with no increases for April, May and June, many economists slashed their annual forecast for inflation this year from 4.5 percent to 5 percent to a range of 2.5 percent to 3.5 percent.

Gas hearings going slowly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal hearing on a dispute between Panhandle oil and gas producers ends its third week today with 44 more scheduled witnesses yet to be heard.

An administrative law judge for the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is hearing the lengthy technical testimony to decide whether oil drillers are illegally diverting gas owned by Dorchester Gas Co.

Dorchester owns the rights to gas beneath about 50,000 acres of Panhandle land and had contracted to sell the gas to an interstate distributor.

The company contends that 37 oil drillers are tapping into Dorchester's gas and selling it as "casing-head" gas, which is not subject to the same interstate price limits as the "dry" gas Dorchester produces.

The oil producers counter that the gas they have produced is casing-head gas — a byproduct of oil drilling — and that it is legally theirs.

Republicans argue 1984 platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — A steamy battle is shaping up among Republicans over whether their 1984 platform should echo President Reagan's pledge for no new taxes.

Party conservatives are pushing for an "ironclad" no-tax-hike stance while moderates are arguing for the flexibility to raise taxes if necessary.

"President Reagan is ours. We want a platform he feels comfortable with," Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., chairman of the 106-member Republican Platform Committee, told a news conference on Thursday.

But a group of party conservatives vowed to press their fight for an absolute prohibition against tax increases to the convention floor, if necessary.

And, at the same time, moderate and liberal Republicans were staking out a rival position, proposing a plank declaring that "tax increases may ... be necessary."

Lott said he expects the tax issue to be one of the measures that will have to be resolved in Dallas

That Iran exploded ships

Khomeini complains about accusations

By The Associated Press

Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini complained that, "Whatever happens, they blame us," and a U.S. official said Iran and Libya are considered prime suspects in a Red Sea mine-laying operation.

The Reagan administration is not making any public accusations until the U.S. Navy investigates explosions that have damaged at least 13 ships in the Red Sea and the Suez Canal in the past two weeks.

But a U.S. government official in Washington, who declined to be identified, said Thursday that Iran and Libya, both with radical Islamic regimes, are "the logical candidates" for suspicion because they are angry at Egypt for signing a peace treaty with Israel and they "want to upset the status quo."

But until mines or other explosive devices are found and examined, the U.S. official said the United States — like Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Britain and other affected nations — is not prepared to make an official accusation.

Part of the doubt arises from an Iranian about-face this week.

On Tuesday, Iran's state radio praised the attacks and attributed them to an Islamic, anti-Western extremist group.

However, on Thursday, Khomeini was quoted by the official news agency IRNA as criticizing the radio reports because they made Iran look bad.

"Any corrupt action which takes (place) in the world, (they say) Iranians and the Iranian government have a hand in it," Khomeini was quoted as saying.

"Look and see what a problem we have. Whatever happens, they blame us," he was quoted as saying.

"How could we support something which is against world feelings, against Islam and against reason?" Khomeini's statement said. "Mining someplace means an innocent group would be annihilated. How could Iran permit this."

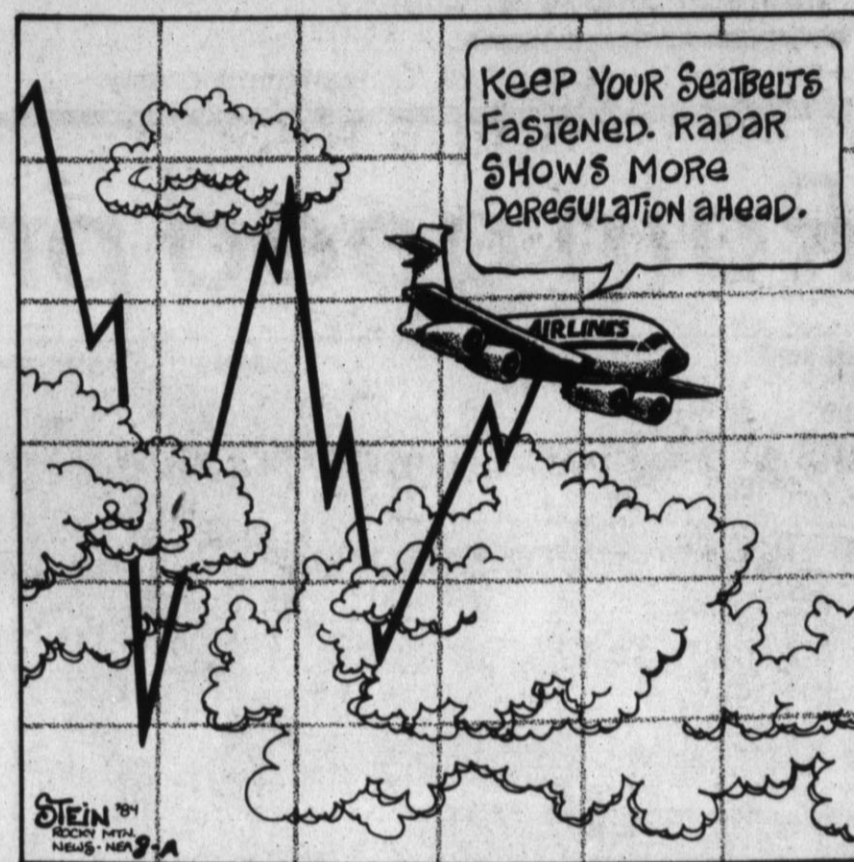

There have been no explosions in the past few days as hundreds of thousands of Moslems make their annual pilgrimages to Mecca and Medina in Saudi Arabia. Many of them travel by ship through the Red Sea.

Egyptian sources said Thursday that the Cairo government would provide military escorts 25,000 pilgrims sailing across the Red Sea from Egypt to the Arabian holy cities.

The United States and Great Britain have said they will have minesweepers in the area by the end of next week, to search for the cause of the explosions.

A U.S. Navy survey ship has been in the Gulf of Suez since last week, helping search for mines and serving as a base for 15 American experts.

Oil spill larger than thought at first

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — One of the Gulf of Mexico's biggest crude oil spills was even bigger than suspected, the Coast Guard said.

When the hull of the British tanker Alvenus split open 12 miles off the coast here July 30, officials calculated that 1.8 million gallons of Venezuelan crude poured into the Gulf.

Those figures, however, were based on estimates provided by Conoco, which owned the cargo, and has now revised them upward.

Conoco now says almost 2.3 million gallons drifted toward the Texas coast, said Galveston-based Coast Guard spokesman Dale Puckett, adding that not all of it got there.

"Federal scientists assisting the Coast Guard say 34 percent of the oil dissipated, evaporated, or emulsified," Puckett said.

That was small consolation to the 96 heavy equipment operators and cleanup workers toiling on the hot, sunny beaches of Galveston Island, where the bulk of the spill ended.

Between noon Wednesday and noon Thursday, the crews picked up and hauled away more than 2,100 cubic yards of contaminated sand.

In addition, 90 cubic yards of tarry crude residue was hauled away to a waste dump in Hitchcock, Texas, Puckett said.

"We've got 50 of the 25-yarders (trucks), nine road graders, four pickups, and seven front-end loaders all on Jamaica beach," Puckett said.

The ship's owners and operators have agreed to pay the millions of dollars it will cost for the cleanup, but have already gone to federal court to limit their liability.

In addition, they face a civil penalty of up to $5,000.

Texas Gov. Mark White named an advisory panel Thursday to review the handling of the spill and recommend ways to improve state-federal response to massive oil spills in the future.

Meanwhile, Capt. N.J. Bartlett, an investigator for the British Department of Transport, spent Thursday aboard the tanker interviewing crew members about the accident and events leading up to it.

As a representative of the United Kingdom, Bartlett alone has the authority to investigate the accident that caused the spill, but he is being assisted by the Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board.

Bartlett, who has refused to release any details of his inquiry, said when he is finished here he will return to London and report to his ministry.

The Department of Transport will then decide whether a formal investigation is required, Bartlett said.

In the last two years, however, only three of about 100 incidents have required a formal inquiry, Bartlett said.

New space station needs less technology

JOHNSON SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Less technological development will be needed to build the $8 billion U.S. space station than any manned project to date, a key engineer in the program said.

"The project will be easy compared to some we have done so far," said Bass Redd, deputy chief of systems engineering at the Johnson Space Center. He cited the achievement of the moon landing and the development of the space shuttle as more difficult projects technologically.

"We have to move quickly and crisply, and we have to watch the money" to meet the 1992 time schedule and budget, Redd told the Houston Chronicle in an interview published today.

The $8 billion will include design, development, engineering and hardware for the project. It is expected to take six to eight shuttle launches to put the station into space and launch costs will be extra, Redd said.

Designers are planning on a six-to-eight-person crew for the station. Redd said the station, which will orbit the Earth roughly over the equator, will be "somewhat awesome" in size.

It will be 400 feet long end-to-end and weigh about 200,000 pounds.

Redd said one area that requires technological development is the production of enough electrical power. Initial studies indicate the station will need 75 to 120 kilowatts of power.

"We have not stepped up to anything close to that yet," Redd said.

Electricity for the station probably will be produced by solar cells, and so far these systems have been limited to 20 to 40 kilowatts.

Ferraro juggles office, demands of campaign

By ANN BLACKMAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The door to Rep. Geraldine Ferraro's congressional office, once wide open, is closed these days. Secret Service and a Capitol Hill policeman stand guard outside.

Eighty-five members of Congress had their pictures taken with the New York congresswoman Thursday morning, each separately.

And mail in her congressional office jumped from 150 pieces a week before Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale named her to be his running mate to 5,000 pieces last week.

Ms. Ferraro has spent the week attending to congressional business, but the "gentle lady from New York," as she is called by colleagues on the House floor, is finding that her new status has put a crimp in her business-as-usual style.

She has become a juggler in the capital's center stage, trying to keep track of congressional bills at the same time she is trying to organize her vice presidential campaign.

Every once in a while, she drops a ball.

She held a press conference Thursday, but she convened it 20 minutes early while most of the reporters who cover her regularly — and her new press secretary — were waiting for her to appear at another event.

But Ms. Ferraro had a good week in terms of what counts most — legislation.

On Monday, the House passed the Truck Safety Act of 1984, a bill she authored and introduced which allows the closing of portions of the interstate highway system to tandem trucks. And on Thursday, the House passed a bill designed to make it easier for women to earn pension rights, a bill first introduced by Ms. Ferraro in 1981.

The House mailing standards committee debated whether Ms. Ferraro can legally use her free mailing privileges to reply to mail from people around the country. The 3-3 vote split along party lines — and Ms. Ferraro is left to make the final call.

But tough questions about her personal finances are still being asked.

The conservative Washington Legal Foundation asked the Justice Department earlier this week to investigate whether Ms. Ferraro violated the Ethics in Government Act by declining to disclose her husband's finances on reports she filed with the House of Representatives over the past six years.

Ms. Ferraro has promised a full disclosure of her family's finances by Aug. 20. The Justice Department will wait to see Ms. Ferraro's new disclosure before deciding whether to investigate, according to a government source who spoke on condition that he not be identified.

"I think once the ethics committee sees (the forms), they will recognize the fact that when I claimed an exemption, I had a legitimate claim," Ms. Ferraro told reporters. "There are 20 other members who also claimed the same exemption as I. With reference to the investigation, the only thing I hope is that I would be treated fairly and not differently because I am the Democratic nominee."

Ms. Ferraro is set to leave Sunday on her first solo campaign swing, five days of events in California, Oregon and Washington state.

Mickey Kantor, chair of the Mondale-Ferraro campaign in California, said she will attend events in Los Angeles associated with the Olympics, speak to the national association of district attorneys in San Diego, meet with senior citizens in Sacramento and stress high technology jobs in San Jose.

Asked what chances the Democrats have of beating President Reagan in his home state, Kantor said, "It's an uphill struggle for us in California, but she can make a big difference. Whether we can pull it off is open to question. But no one has California locked up."

Road rally slated Saturday

The TG&Y parking lot is to be the starting point for the first local road rally, set to begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in conjunction with the Town and Country Jubilee. The rally is being sponsored by Simms Lions Club, and members are hoping to make it an annual event.

The road rally, which is to be similar to a treasure hunt on wheels, is open to two person teams consisting of a licensed driver and a navigator, using any licensed vehicle. Entry fee is $20 per vehicle, or $10 per person.

Each team will be given a set of instructions with a series of clues and questions to answer. Participants will also be given playing cards at random at the various stops, with a grand prize to be awarded for the best poker hand at the conclusion of the rally.

Approximately 30 miles in length, the course will include city streets and rural highways surrounding Hereford, but no dirt roads. The road rally is not a speed race, and drivers may be penalized for driving too fast or too slow. Any traffic violations incurred during the event will mean automatic disqualification, stressed Ricky Lloyd, chairman of the rally.

As competitors finish the road rally, points will be awarded based on total number of correct answers, with points being deducted from the scores of teams who have had to open to sealed final destination clue packet in order to finish.

Johnson to chair Welfare Board

Beverly Jayroe, who recently moved to Amarillo, Wednesday resigned from the Deaf-Smith County Child Welfare Board, for which she served as chairman.

Carolyn Johnson, who had been vice-chairman, is to replace Jayroe.

Bill Johnson was selected to be the new vice-chairman. A new board member is to be appointed by county commissioners.

Jayroe had served on the board for three years. In addition to chairing the local group, she was secretary of Child Welfare Regional Council 1.

Meanwhile, board members heard a trampoline was still needed for a foster family. A local upholstery firm has reportedly offered to perform for free any necessary repairs should a trampoline be purchased.

It was announced foster parents will be reimbursed for their foster children's school supplies and clothes. Bills should be submitted as soon as possible.

In rainy weather

Golfers have to find ways to practice

By DENNIS BALL
Sports Editor

Many sports activities automatically shut down when rains cover the land, some temporarily and some for longer periods of time.

Most golfers, and all professionals playing in PGA tournaments, must abide by nature's rules and keep off the courses when it rains. Mike Horton, course professional at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course, said most golfers in Hereford are no different and will abstain from playing on the Hereford course when it rains.

"You know, you can't hurt the golf course (by playing in the rain)," he said. "Most of the golfers here don't play when it rains and try to take better care of the course."

Horton said the golf course sometimes might have to close three or four days because of rains, but that lost business is quickly made up by golfers wanting to play the course after a rain.

"The rains we've been having really help the golf course," he said. "We've had about four inches the last three days, and the golf course will really be in good shape. The golfers love to play when the course is pretty."

South Korean dies watching Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — For the second time in three days a South Korean television viewer died of a heart attack while watching one of his countrymen win a gold medal in the Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

Cho Sung-tae, 32, a city employee in Taegu, 200 miles south of Seoul, collapsed today while he was watching Korean judoist Ha Hyoung-joo win the gold medal in the half-heavyweight class of Olympic judo competition, the Yonhap news agency reported. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a university hospital.

South Korea's third gold medal was won Thursday in Los Angeles, but because of time zone differences, the event was broadcast today in South Korea.

On Tuesday, Ahn Young-bae, 49, of Yoju, 50 miles east of Seoul, died of a heart attack after watching South Korean Ahn Byeong-keun win a gold medal in the lightweight judo competition in Los Angeles.

Just before he was stricken, Young-bae reportedly shouted, "Mansei," which means "Long live."

The longest game in big-league history was a 1-1 tie covering 26 innings between the Brooklyn Dodgers and Boston Braves in 1920.

The practice putting green doesn't close during the rains, but the driving range does. However, one way to keep a golf game in shape during the rain is by practicing putting on the carpet, Horton said.

"Keep in practice by doing some stretching exercises or by swinging a short club in the garage, too," he said. "I don't care if people play in the rain, though. Like I said, they're not going to hurt the course."

Golfers usually are able to play the morning immediately following a one-inch rain because the Hereford golf course drains well, Horton said.

Tournaments at John Pitman Golf

Course seem to have been scheduled at the right times in 1984, as only the last two weekly scrambles have been cancelled due to weather. Horton said persons entered in the best-ball tournaments usually are refunded their money when a tournament is cancelled for rain.

Last Wednesday's tourney, however, was a little different. Horton said entry fees would be carried over to next week's contest.

"I asked everybody, and only one player couldn't play next week," he said. "There are a lot of golfers in Hereford, and most usually can come back to play next week."

'World's greatest athlete'

Thompson wins second decathlon

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Presenting the world's greatest athlete, Daley Thompson of Britain.

His credentials are impeccable. He has won his second straight Olympic decathlon, the two-day, 10-sport event that tests the full range of track-and-field skills.

Start with the 100-meter dash, long jump, shot put, high jump and 400-meter dash the first day. Come back the next day with the 110-meter high hurdles, discus, pole vault, javelin and, if you have any strength left, the 1,500-meter run. Begin in the early morning, stay through the long, hot afternoon, finish after dark.

Clearly, if you survive that punishing menu and beat 25 competitors, you must be the best athlete on this planet.

Maybe. To win this event, you must be good in a variety of disciplines but you need not be great in any of them. Consider the performances Thompson turned in to win the gold medal.

The decathletes started with the 100-meter dash and Thompson posted the best time of the field, winning in 10.44 seconds. In the Olympic 100, Carl Lewis won the first of his three gold medals in 9.99. The slowest finisher in the field was Tony Sharpe of Canada in 10.35. Thompson's 10.44 might not even have qualified for the final.

In the long jump, his best event,

Thompson padded his lead with a jump of 26 feet, 3 1/2 inches, best in the field. That would have been fifth best in the gold medal event, won by Lewis with a leap of 28-0 1/4.

It goes on like that through all 10 events. Thompson's 46.97 seconds in the 400 would have placed him behind Innocent Egbunike of Nigeria, whose 45.35 was seventh and last in the gold medal race won by American Alonzo Babers' 44.27.

Thompson did 14.34 in the 110-meter dash the first day. The slowest finisher in the gold medal race was Jeff Glass of Canada, timed in 14.15 and eighth behind Roger Kingdom of the United States, whose winning time was 13.20.

In the pole vault, the event that clinched the crown for him, Thompson went 16-5. That was well short of the 16-8 3/4 of China's Yang Weimin and Jeff Gutteridge of Britain, who shared 10th and last place in the gold medal event.

The range in the Olympic javelin ran from the gold medal 284-8 by Arto Haerkoenen of Finland to 232-6 by 12th place Jean Paul Lakafia of France. Thompson's decathlon throw was 214-1.

None of Thompson's numbers would have earned him so much as a bronze medal in the individual events. Milt Campbell, who won the decathlon gold medal for the United States in 1956, thinks, however, that if Thompson concentrated on a single

Golf Courses Need Rain, Too

Play at John Pitman Municipal Golf Course also fell victim to the rains this week. Course pro Mike Horton said the rains benefit the course much more than they harm it, however. The last two weekly scrambles were cancelled due to rainy weather.

U.S. team goes for gold medal tonight

By DICK JOYCE AP Sports Writer
INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The unbeaten United States men's basketball team has every reason to be overconfident heading into tonight's Olympic gold medal game against Spain. But chances are it won't.

"Bobby Knight won't let 'em lose," said Canadian Coach Jack Donohue, whose team fell twice to the Americans in the tournament, then lost the bronze medal to Yugoslavia on Thursday.

"There's not going to be any fat cats going into that game," Donohue added. "They're a very good basketball team, and they're very well coached."

Just last Saturday, the Americans whipped the Spaniards in the preliminary round 101-68.

But Knight, who has been driving his players hard in the quest to return the gold to the United States for the first time since 1976, said the Spaniards have the best shooting team in the tournament, his own included.

The figures back him up — barely. Spain, which suffered its only loss in the tourney to the United States but sent previously unbeaten Yugoslavia, the 1980 gold medalist, to the bronze medal game, has made 56 percent of its field goal attempts in seven games compared to the Americans' 55.

But defense, Knight's trademark, has been a big factor in the Americans' 7-0 record. They have held opponents to an average 63 points while pouring in 95.3 points a game.

Tonight, the American defense is expected to key on forwards Juan

Antonio San Epifanio, 6-foot-6, and 6-8 Fernando Martin, Spain's top scorers. San Epifanio, a 49 percent 10 tries. Their only loss came to the Soviet Union 51-50 in the controversial final of the 1972 Games.

Ogrin grabs early Buick lead

By HARRY ATKINS AP Sports Writer

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — David Ogrin takes a lot of ribbing about his name, but when you're chasing a dream on the PGA tour, those little things are all part of the fun.

"It's not O'Smile, it's Ogrin," the 26-year-old native of Waukegan, Ill., tells folks who try to kid him.

Thursday, however, you could call him anything you wanted after the way Ogrin cruised around the 7,014-yard, par-72 layout at Warwick Hills Golf & Country Club.

Ogrin, playing nearly flawless golf, put together nines of 33-34 for a 5-under-par 67, matching his best round ever on the tour and earning a three-way tie for second place after one round of the $400,000 Buick Open.

Four players — Tom Kite, Gary Hallberg, John Adams and Jodie Mudd — were tied for the lead at 6-under 66 heading into today's second round.

"This is the way I've always dreamed of playing on the tour," Ogrin said. "Right from the start, I was hitting it close. It was a very comfortable round."

It took Ogrin four tries to earn his tour card and last year, his first as a pro, he earned only $36,003. This year, his best finish has been a tie for 15th at the Western Open last month, but he already has earned $37,803.

A victory in the Buick Open would fatten his bank account by $72,000.

Ogrin was just one stroke back with Tom Purtzer and Tony Sills.

The golf course had been softened somewhat by a heavy rain that washed out Wednesday's pro-am event and the golfers took advantage.

Multi-billion dollar mergers are reshaping the U.S. oil industry. Experts say they may make refineries and exploration more profitable. If this year's proposed mergers are all completed, Exxon will keep its top spot. But Mobil will drop to third place from No. 2, while Southern Oil of California (Socal) will move ahead of Texaco for the first time.

With Hollywood film companies

Movie parlor fighting battle

By JEFF BARKER Associated Press Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — When Jacque Spangler and her teenage friends want to see a movie, they pay to go to a darkened, soundproof viewing room, pop the film of their choice into a video-cassette recorder and relax on a couch to watch.

The movie companies hate them, but entrepreneur John Leonard says his video parlors are here to stay.

The Nickelodean Video Showcase has changed the movie-going experience for hundreds of residents of this central Pennsylvania college town, said Leonard, of Erie.

If he can win a battle over royalties with eight Hollywood film companies, Leonard believes his formula can catch on in scores of other communities as well.

The parlor in State College, which opened in 1982, combines the privacy of 44 rooms of varying sizes with the ability to choose from any of 300 top films to be seen on 19-inch television screens.

A customer pays $1.95 for the film rental, plus an additional fee for the viewing room. Prices range from $2 for a one-person booth the size of a large walk-in closet, to $32 for a room designed to accommodate 16 people, according to assistant manager Andrew Miller.

Leonard, who owns a similar shop in nearby Lock Haven, said he hopes to open up to 200 franchise outlets in the next three years, mostly in the East.

But first he said he must win a suit with the film companies, which filed action in federal court in Williamsport last spring claiming Leonard is getting rich through illegal public showings of their movies.

"Mr. Leonard has a store with little rooms of varying sizes and the public can walk in and pick a picture they want to see," said Burton Hanft, an attorney for the plaintiff companies.

"But the law is very clear. Why should he be different than the theater down the street? It's great business if you can sell soap and cereal and never pay the person who supplies it," he said.

Leonard, who also owns a video rental store in Erie that does not have viewing rooms, maintains that what his customers do with their rented films is their own business. The viewer places the movie in the machine, not the employee, and customers are under no obligation to rent rooms to watch their movies, he said.

Leonard's parlor retains many of the amenities of the neighborhood theater. There is licorice, soda and buttered popcorn.

He said people under 17-years-old are not permitted to rent R-rated films at the parlor, and no X-rated films are offered.

By House Cleanup Bill near final vote

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An $8.6 billion expansion of the "superfund" toxic waste cleanup program is moving toward a final vote in the House, but without a key section allowing people injured by pollution to sue the companies responsible in federal court.

Under debate was legislation to boost the "superfund" from its current $1.6 billion to $10.2 billion over five years and to impose new standards and deadlines for the Environmental Protection Agency to meet in cleaning up abandoned hazardous waste sites.

The program enjoys broad support in the House and was considered likely to pass in the final hours before Congress begins a three-week recess.

But in debate Thursday night, the House voted 208-200 to strike a key section from the bill that would have given citizens a new legal right to sue polluters in federal court over injuries they suffer from toxic pollution.

Opponents argued successfully that the section trampled on the right of states to define the civil law within their borders. Pollution victims now must sue in the state courts under a wide variety of terms and restrictions.

"These are sovereign states, and they have a right to set their own standards," argued Rep. Harold Sawyer, R-Mich., who offered the amendment. And Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, said that if the section remained in the bill, "we're going to federalize ... the whole legal system of the United States."

Some opponents also said they feared that court judgments to individual pollution victims could divert money from limited corporate funds available for cleaning up pollution, creating more victims in the long run.

Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J., the bill's sponsor, said after Thursday's vote that he would attempt to reverse the outcome in a second vote after other work on the bill is finished.

Even without the federal right to sue, the "superfund" bill marks a major expansion of the government's principal program to confront the problem of hazardous wastes seeping into the nation's drinking water supplies.

Besides the sixfold increase in the money available for cleanup, financed principally by increases in oil and chemical feedstock taxes, the bill would set deadlines for the EPA to meet in cleaning up sites — a minimum of 150 sites a year — and the standard the agency would have to meet for a site to be considered clean.

Only six toxic waste sites have been cleaned up in the program's four-year history, out of 546 on EPA's top priority list.

Inmate escapes, carrying gun

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Law enforcement officers are combing the western part of this city for an escaped jail inmate who overpowered a sheriff's deputy, grabbed his service revolver and fled.

Inmate Ralph Yearly had been taken to the dentist's office by deputy John Tye Thursday when the incident occurred about 11:35 a.m., said a sheriff's department official.

No one was injured in the incident. "We have sightings coming out our ears," said Police Officer Terry Admire of the Georgetown Police Department late Thursday. "We're tracking them down one by one."

Admire said that authorities were concentrating their efforts in the neighborhood of the San Gabriel River in the western section of the city where Yearly escaped.

Possible sightings of the escapee were confined to that area, Admire said.

Yearly, who was in the Williamson County Jail on an aggravated sexual assault charge from Round Rock, said "he wouldn't be taken alive," according to a police dispatcher, who declined to give her name.

Yearly is described as a white male, 5-foot-9, about 175 pounds with red hair and blue eyes. When last seen he was wearing a dark blue shirt and blue jeans.

That's how much you could lose just on resale value if you don't buy a John Deere

Looking for a big discount when you buy a tractor? Don't get stuck with an even bigger discount when you want to trade.

Always consider resale value when you price a field tractor. Because the differences among brands may sometimes be bigger than ANY purchase incentive.

Compare John Deere with our two leading competitors. According to the Spring 1984 Official Guide of the National Farm and Power Equipment Dealers Association, the average 5-year-old John Deere 4440 sells for 106 percent of its 1979 list price. One leading competitor averages 87 percent of its 1979 list price. The other averages 73 percent.

What's that mean in dollars? Add the John Deere gain on original price to the competitor's loss. The John Deere advantage is as much as $8,938!

Is this only true of one model? No. Every 40 Series 90- to 180-hp tractor has an average resale price that's higher than its new price five years ago.

Is resale your only John Deere advantage? No. Don't forget the remarkable fuel efficiency of today's 50 Series John Deere Tractors. And don't forget our unmatched reputation for high quality and high reliability. See your John Deere dealer. He'll be happy to explain the big difference between a low-price tractor and a low-cost John Deere: 100-hp 4050, 120-hp 4250, 140-hp 4450, 165-hp 4650 or 190-hp 4850.

NOTE: Average resale prices taken from Spring 1984 Official Guide of The National Farm and Power Equipment Dealers Association.

Percentages calculated from best currently available information on 1979 list prices.

Ann Landers

No special prices

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please rethink your comments to the lady with eight stray cats. She had just received a bill for $24 for the removal of a tumor in her newly acquired tomcat. She wanted to know if it would be O.K. to ask the vet for a special price since she was a "high-volume customer." You told her, "It never hurts to ask."

Would you ask an M.D. to give a discount to a woman with a large family? Most M.D.s charge more than $24 for an office call.

A veterinarian must spend as many years training as an M.D. Also, there are only a handful of schools of veterinary medicine in the U.S., which makes for stiff competition. What I'm saying is - it's no cinch.

Removing a tumor from a cat means anesthesia for the animal as well as a day or two with the vet.

A better answer would have been: "You're a good samaritan and it's wonderful that you're taking care of these strays. Get involved with an animal aid group in your area, or your Veterinary Medical Association. Ask how you can help to initiate spay and neuter programs so we can put an end to this problem of unwanted animals."

People listen to you, Ann. Please tell them.—Not A Vet...Yet

DEAR NOT YET: I caught plenty of heat from veterinarians all over the country for my answer to that one. I goofed. Pay the askin' price, folks, and cut down somewhere else.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Anyone takes a dangerous chance in claiming to know how to pronounce place names all over the country. I'll bet you published that letter just to see how many screams of outrage it would produce. It didn't surprise me that you received thousands.

We lived in Ohio for many years and we've never, but never, heard anyone pronounce Lima "Lee-ma" unless he had just been to Peru. And we've lived in Massachusetts, also, so we know that Gloucester is Gloss-ter. I only visited Louisiana once but what I heard sounded like N'awlins. (It took months before I could understand anything they said down there. And they kept telling me "I" talked funny!)

The poor joker who wrote that first letter managed to get Oregon right. I wonder what he would do with Tualatin or Yachats or Denio? Don't even ask.—E.A.T. In McMinville, Oregon.

DEAR MCMINN: I'm not asking. In fact, this is absolutely the last letter you will see on the subject—so help me!

HIGH SEAS
NEW YORK (AP) — The world's oceans have risen over half-a-foot in the last century, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

As freshwater glaciers continue to melt from the warming trend caused by carbon dioxide in the earth's atmosphere, scientists predict sea levels may rise as much as 15 feet in the next 100 years.

Thomas Pickering, U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, has also been meeting with lawmakers on Capitol Hill. One of the administration's biggest guns, however, is Gen. Paul Gorman, commander of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, who has been drawing rave reviews from lawmakers for his persuasiveness in making the administration's case for more aid.

Mexican population undernourished

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The head of the Ministry of Agriculture says there is no hunger in Mexico but "most of the population" is undernourished.

Eduardo Pesqueira spoke Wednesday at a meeting attended by directors of state companies and farm and livestock leaders.

The meeting was called to coordinate activities between government agencies and private enterprise to promote food production.

James Buchanan was the only U.S. president never to marry.

Hirings hamper computer development

AUSTIN (AP) — Academic researchers are concerned that business interest in artificial intelligence will drain the basic research talent pool and slow down development of computers that can think.

Marvin Minsky, professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said, "There is a small population of basic research people in this field. There are only less than a hundred people doing these things, and there are many hundreds of hard problems."

Minsky and thousands of other university professors and business representatives attended the American Association for Artificial Intelligence conference at the University of Texas this week.

Those grappling with artificial intelligence are trying to create computers that can see, hear, speak, understand human language, reason and learn.

In business, complex computer programs that mimic the decision-making abilities of human experts are the rage in the high-technology community. But to develop these systems, business needs people well versed in artificial intelligence, and there just aren't many of them.

"For a long time, artificial intelligence has been real ivory tower stuff that only the true believers would commit their careers to," said Gordon Novak, head of the new Artificial Intelligence Laboratory at UT. "Only recently did the big bucks start flowing."

The desire to hire experts, in areas ranging from medical diagnosis to oil well exploration, has prompted creation of several start-up companies and major efforts to develop expert systems within large companies such as IBM, Texas Instruments and Xerox.

The president of Carnegie Group Inc. in Pittsburgh, Larry Geisel, said there are only a few hundred people with qualifications for building expert systems, and "as many as a thousand companies are competing for these people."

Some professors with new companies have maintained their academic ties, but UT has seen two researchers in artificial intelligence leave for the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., a private research consortium based in Austin.

MCC Chairman Bob Inman said he tries to avoid hiring academics when possible, largely because he is a strong supporter of fundamental university research. However, he said, in artificial intelligence, most of the available talent can be found only in universities.

The full effect of such losses on long-range research is not known. "You'll never know what you might have done if this particular guy had stayed at the university," said Novak.

A more immediate problem is the effect on graduate students.

"If you lose the people in teaching you don't get any good students," Minsky said.

Some company executives, however, say enough professors remain to train students, and interest among students in artificial intelligence will remain strong, especially where because of high salaries. Workers with advanced degrees start at $25,000 to $50,000, Geisel said, although people with badly needed skills have received offers of from $80,000 to $90,000.

Also, Geisel says, industry is offering more internal training programs, and new, more powerful computers make it easier for less-experienced workers to develop expert systems.

"Hopefully, this will allow industry to reach its potential," he said.

Hurricane threatens Pacific coast

MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP) — Port authorities here eased restrictions on small craft in effect for 24 hours while Hurricane Iselle threatened Mexico's Pacific coast.

The Communications and Transportation Ministry announced Wednesday that small craft are being permitted to leave Mazatlan and other Pacific ports but have been advised not to travel far from the coast and to return to their home ports by 5 p.m.

The National Weather Service said Iselle is heading for the Socorro Islands, 712 miles west-southwest of Acapulco, and is losing strength.

It said the western states of Colima, Michoacan, Jalisco and Guerrero were still experiencing heavy winds and rains as a result of the hurricane.

Where Is He?

The most important question is
The question, "Where is He?"
The question asked in Bethlehem
By the wise and humble three.

Man has asked through the ages;
The question, "Where is He?"
While seeking to be wiser
And longing to be free.

Without the answer to this question
The question, "Where is He?"
Man's spirit gropes in outer darkness
And cannot...cannot be free.
