Three to be inducted into Cowgirl Hall of Fame

Rhinestone Roundup Weekend coming up

The National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center will hold its annual Rhinestone Roundup Weekend on Saturday, June 19.

Two women will be inducted as Cowgirl Honorees -- Dorothy Tomlinson Satterfield of Tucson, Ariz., and Janet "Jan" Alley Youren of Garden Valley, Idaho.

Being inducted as a Western Heritage Honoree is Gertrude Maxwell of Elk City, Idaho.

The induction ceremony will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Hereford Senior Center, 426 Ranger. The affair will begin with a breakfast and will include introduction of past honorees.

Admission to the induction is $15 per person.

Reservations may be made by calling the Hall at 364-5252.

The following are biographies of the three Hall of Fame inductees:

1993 COWGIRL HONOREE DOROTHY SATTERFIELD

Born in Denver, Colo., Dorothy grew up in Cheyenne, Wyo. Always shadowing her father, she was exposed to ranching and came to love horses at an early age.

In conjunction with Denver's big annual National Western Stock Show, The Denver Post newspaper held a Best Cowboy and Best Cowgirl contest. Encouraged by friends, Dorothy decided to compete at the age of 12. Her win cast the die for her future. The prize was a colorful pinto mare, complete with bridle, blanket, saddle-and a hidden bonus. The mare was in foal and Dorothy christened the resulting colt Lucky.

Dorothy's first big event in rodeo was riding a relay string in the very popular ladies race at Cheyenne Frontier Days. "That was an education all by itself, and it was my one and only time of riding relay," Dorothy recalled. She kicked off her professional trick riding career at the Fourth of July Independence Stampede in Greeley, Colo., in 1944. Accompanied by her mother, she started traveling through Colorado, New Mexico, Texas, Arizona and California.

At one 1944 rodeo in Texas, Dorothy met a bulldogger/bronc and bull rider named Carl Satterfield and, within the year, a wedding in Las Vegas, Nevada, created a new team for rodeo road.

In addition, the year marked her introduction to a new women's rodeo event barrel racing. "This was before there were any women's rodeo associations and before the cloverleaf style of running barrels. At that time the barrels were set in a straight line, more like pole bending today."

Since Dorothy hadn't a horse trained for barrel racing, she'd just borrow somebody's bulldogging horse or another girl's barrel horse and compete anyway. Bulldogging horses are notorious for being uncontrollable and having no "handle," but being the tough competitor she was, Dorothy could get to the pay window.

The Satterfields quit rodeoing in the mid '50s, turning their attention to the increasingly popular Quarter Horse with Carl training and Dorothy showing. In 1969 they moved their headquarters from Cheyenne to Tucson, adding a breeding program to their already successful training/showing operation. In fact, Dorothy may hold the record for qualifying for the AQHA World Show, having done so every year since its inception through 1990.

"It's been a long career," Dorothy grinned, "I've been around and on horses all my life. We want to start taking it a little easier, but we'll always want to keep a couple of good ones around."

1993 COWGIRL HONOREE JAN YOUREN

She's not your typical grandmother. After all, how many grandmothers do you know who hold two World Champion Bareback Riding titles: have been riding barebacks and bulls for 38 years; have had cheekbones broken seven or eight times, all but one rib broken, a broken back, a split skull, a bruised heart, a collapsed lung, and all from riding broncs and bulls; and still ride bareback broncs and bulls?

Jan's dad, Sterling B. Alley, farmed, ran a hunting pack string in the Idaho wilderness and produced some rodeos. Jan was totally fascinated with her daddy's rodeos and, at the age of 12, she competed on her first bareback bronc.

After her initiation, Jan spent the next two decades competing around the northwestern U.S. and across Canada, working the Idaho Girls Rodeo Association, the Girls International Rodeo League, the Canadian Girls Rodeo Association and the Girls Northwest Rodeo Association. A true all around hand, Jan worked the cow riding, bareback

Hereford saddlemakers take craft to Hollywood through television movieBy GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

As far as a Hereford family is concerned the stars of a new television movie/series will be a pair of saddles which the hero rides.

The title role in "Ned Blessing: The Story of My Life and Times" is played by Brad Johnson who ordered the saddles from Wilford Lewis and Sons Saddle Shop in Hereford.

Johnson first became acquainted with the Lewis craftsmanship when he bought a steer-roping saddle in 1990, said Ray Lewis.

In all modesty, Ray Lewis said, Johnson found the Lewis shop because "we're famous among steer-ropers... if they want something good, they come to us."

Lewis-made saddle to be in movie starring Brad Johnson

When Johnson started making the television Western, he was dissatisfied with the saddles the producer ordered from a Montana saddlemaker.

"He thought about us and called to see if we could make them," explained Lewis.

The project became a family affair with Ray Lewis building the trees for the saddles. His father, Wilford, and his sister and her husband, Ellen and Dallas Tiekling contributed toward the finished product.

"We did a modern saddle in disguise," Ray said about the appearance of the items when they were finished.

Because hand-tooling was not as popular in the era in which the movie is set, the saddles have no patterns, such as many do today.

The small amount of "decorating" was done by Ellen Tiekling, using a tool that probably is 100 years old and belonged to her grandfather.

Ray Lewis said the saddles were "made from scratch" to Johnson's specifications. "He's pretty picky," laughed the saddle-maker, "but he knows quality when he sees it".

The television movie is based on a novel by Larry McMurry, author of Lonesome Dove. Screenwriter is Bill Wittliff who performed the same task on the "Dove" mini-series.

Ray Lewis was invited to visit the set where "Ned Blessing" was filmed. He and his wife went to "Willieville," owned by Willie Nelson, at the behest of Johnson, who introduced him to the cast and crew.

"It was the same set they used for the Fort Smith, Ark., scenes in Lonesome Dove," Lewis pointed out. Willieville is located about 35 miles northwest of Austin.

The day before he was to leave on the trip in April, Johnson called to order a fancy guitar strap he wanted to give to Nelson. Ellen Tiekling worked into the wee hours to finish the strap.

Besides the two identical saddles, the Lewises made holsters for Johnson.

"They want two of everything," said Ray Lewis about the order.

The television movie's star has appeared in pictures previously with Richard Dreyfus, "Always," and Danny Glover and Willem Dafoe, "Flight of the Intruder," Lewis pointed out.

The new movie's plot centers on a sheriff, played by Johnson, who recalls his life while in jail himself. Told in flashbacks, the movie features Luis Avalos as the sheriff's sidekick and Tim Scott, who appeared as P.E. Parker in Lonesome Dove.

Wes Studi, who was seen in the theatrical motion picture, "Last of the Mohicans," also has a role in "Ned Blessing."

Lewis met the cast while visiting in Austin and took some videos of the people involved.

He was cautioned, though, not to tape any scene being rehearsed or filmed.

The two-hour movie will be aired on CBS on June 20. Apparently, "Ned Blessing" will be a mini-series. Listings for television programs indicate a summer series will begin June 30 on the same network.

"I think they shot about six hours," Lewis said. "They hope they can get it on as a regular series."

Hereford saddle-makers

City to get special flags for Flag Day

The nation's 116th anniversary of Flag Day will be celebrated Monday as the city of Hereford receives a U.S. Flag from representatives of U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and a Texas flag from State Sen. Teel Bivins.

The ceremonies will be held at 3 p.m. at the City Hall flagpole, 224 North Lee. It is open to the public.

Jennifer Crabtree, regional director of Gramm's San Antonio office, and Tammy Shaklee, district director for Bivins, will each deliver remarks regarding the significance of Flag Day before presenting Mayor Bob Josslerand with the flags.

"I salute the residents of Hereford for your patriotism and reflection upon the assured rights guaranteed to our citizens, life and liberty," Gramm said. "Freedom is very precious and highly valued in our world. We should all be thankful to live in a land that allows us the freedom to dream and to pursue those dreams."

"Our forefathers recognized the importance of our flag as a constant reminder of our hard won freedom. And we, as Americans, should always respect the privilege to draw strength and pride from Old Glory, recognized world wide as a symbol of freedom," Bivins said.

June 14, 1777, was the day the Continental Congress in Philadelphia adopted a resolution to prepare a flag for the new republic. Now, June 14 honors the Stars and Stripes. The first Flag Day celebration occurred on June 14, 1877, on the 100th birthday of the flag.

In 1894, a group got together to form a special Flag Day Association. The holiday did not become official until 1949, when President Harry S. Truman issued the proclamation.

There is a well-known story about the origin of the flag. It says that George Washington went to the Philadelphia home of seamstress Betsy Ross and asked her to make a flag that would be right for the new country.

Although this story has become part of American folklore, there is no proof that it ever happened.

In fact, the name Betsy Ross was not known until about 1870, when her grandson told the story. The only thing anyone knows for sure is that Betsy Ross did exist, and she was, indeed, the official flag maker for the U.S. Navy.

Each part of the flag and each color has special meaning.

The stars, of course, represent each state of the Union. They are set in a blue background like the stars of heaven.

The red stripes, which represent England, are separated by bands of white. The number of stripes

Trucking firm recommended for tax abatement program

A five-year tax abatement program for a trucking firm's new facilities will be recommended by the Deaf Smith County Tax Abatement Board for consideration by two taxing entities.

During a meeting Thursday, the board heard Roy Newton present a request for the abatement on a new facility estimated to cost about $346,000.

The abatement does not apply to present property or vehicles owned by Newton Trucking Company.

The abatement board will recommend to Deaf Smith County and Hereford Independent School District that 100 percent of taxes be abated for the first two years of the five-year program.

In the remaining three years, the abatement would be at 50 percent of assessments.

At current rates, the company would be relieved of paying taxes totaling approximately $6,000 in each of the first two years and half that amount in each of the next three years.

The trucking firm's new facilities will be located just south of the city limits of Hereford. Only the county and HISD are involved in the abatement request.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors will review bids and financing options on a renovation project during a regular monthly meeting Tuesday night in the board room at Deaf Smith General Hospital. The agenda also includes a marketing report by board president John Perrin, a disaster drill report by Claudia Smith, medical staff report by Dr. Jesse Perales, and a report from Ron Rives, chief executive officer.

County agenda set

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will review proposals submitted by engineering firms for services related to installation of water and sewer lines in an area outside the Hereford city limits during a meeting Monday, beginning at 9 a.m. Other agenda items are opening bids for a vehicle for the sheriff's department, consider funding for the July 4th celebration, approve expenses incurred in the June 5 election and continue work on a budget for the next fiscal year.

Immunization schedule noted

The Texas Department of Health has announced its June immunization clinic scheduled for Hereford. Vaccines against polio, diphtheria, lockjaw (tetanus), whooping cough (pertussis), measles, rubella, mumps and HIB (hemophilus influenzae type B) will be offered. Charges are based on family income and size and ability to pay. Funds are used to help keep the clinic open. The clinic's regular sessions will be held from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. The clinic will be held Thursday in the Health Department offices, 205 W. Fourth St., Suite B. After this week, the final session of the month will be held June 24.

Breyer likely pick as Clinton's first nominee to Court

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal appeals Judge Stephen Breyer impressed President Clinton and senior aides during a six-hour White House visit, administration officials said as Clinton prepared to make his first Supreme Court nomination.

Breyer, chief judge of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, was said by presidential advisers to be Clinton's likely court pick. He spent Friday night in the Washington area.

Clinton and Breyer met for an hour and 40 minutes Friday before the Boston judge entered a lengthy meeting with White House legal advisers.

Aides said an announcement could come as early as Saturday, but they insisted Clinton had not made a final decision as of Friday evening.

The president "met Breyer today for the first time. They had a good discussion and a good meeting," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said Friday. "He's just reflecting on it. ... I think he's just going to finish this on his own timetable."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that after the meeting, Clinton was still leaning toward the Boston jurist, a consensus-builder considered to hold moderate-to-liberal views on social issues.

Clinton is filling the seat retiring Justice Byron White will vacate in the next few weeks. White, an appointee of President Kennedy, is the last sitting justice appointed by a Democrat.

Breyer, 54, visited the White House exactly a week after being hit by a car while bicycling, an accident that left him with broken ribs and a punctured lung, and kept him hospitalized until Thursday.

Brothers nabbed in bank robbery

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A man called authorities, saying his brother had been accidentally shot in the head while they were target shooting, but both have now been charged with the failed heist of an Austin bank.

David Henley, 40, and Michael Henley, 31, both of San Antonio, were being held Saturday in Travis County Jail in Austin in lieu of $100,000 bond each.

They have been charged with attempted capital murder of a police officer who was working as a security guard at Frost Bank on East Anderson Lane in Austin on Monday. During the attempted bank robbery, Austin police officer Earl White exchanged gunfire with the masked robbers. White apparently wounded both robbers, and one of the gunmen shot and wounded a customer, police said.

The gunmen escaped from the bank, and Austin police notified hospitals from San Antonio to Waco to be alert for a gunshot victim.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Fred Rogers once said that society seems to want to constrict childhood more and more. Perhaps it has to do with not wanting to be caregivers anymore because we're too busy being fearful. Society wants kids to grow up more quickly. It offers them rewards for being more and more adultlike in their behavior rather than childlike. Children need someone to reassure them that play—their own, unique, imaginative play—is something to be valued. Children need to be valued for who they are, where they are, and not for something in the future.

In preparing HJH campus for the '93-'94 school year where our students can learn, play, and plan for their future, maintenance personnel are taking pride in the usual waxing, polishing and repairing. In addition, some rooms will receive fresh coats of paint.

Teachers will be at school off and on during the summer to work on materials and classrooms for the soon-to-be new year.

Due to the success of teaming in the eighth grade this past school year, more eighth grade classes and several seventh grade classes will use this same method of learning. Groups of students will have the same teachers throughout the day in math, English, science and social studies and in some of the elective courses. In case we've aroused your interest, more information on this subject will be forthcoming!

Junior Historians will be collecting recipes for their cookbook to be produced in the early fall.

Opportunities for our youth this summer include two two-day Summer Dare Camps at WTSU; volleyball, basketball and golf camps and the Summer Reading Program at the Deaf Smith County Library.

The Dare Camps will be led by Hereford teachers and Dare officers and will give students the opportunity to review the junior high Dare curriculum which is a follow-up of the grade school program. For further information about the athletic camps, contact Danny Haney at 363-7626 or Brenda Reeh at 363-7633.

Children have more need of models than of critics, so let's practice being good models for them.

riding, calf roping, ribbon roping, steer undecorating, team roping, occasionally barrel racing, and even pony chariot racing when it was offered, shying away only from the goat tying.

Having honed her skills by winning everything there was to win in the regional associations, Jan moved on up the ladder to join the pros. Since then, Jan has qualified for and competed in every Women's World Finals but one. That was 1984, and she had a very good reason, since her eighth child was born just two weeks after the finals.

In the bareback riding, Jan won the WPRA World Championship in 1981 and again in 1987 at the age of 43. She was runner-up to the world champion in the event in both 1975 and 1992. That year she was 48 and led the WPRA standings throughout the year, only to forfeit the crown by bucking off one bronc in the Finals.

Jan's rodeoing grandmother is happy doing what she's doing and shows no signs of changing her ways. Jan said, "I want to keep on riding until I can't get up on a horse. Then I'll probably just dry up and blow away."

1993 WESTERN HERITAGE HONOREE

GERTRUDE MAXWELL

"There's so much bad in the best of us and so much good in the worst of us that it behooves any of us to talk about the rest of us." That statement sums up some of the wisdom Gertrude Maxwell's collected during almost 85 years of life in the remote, picturesque area of Idaho where she was born.

Gertrude's parents reared her to be self-sufficient. She stood on a stool and practiced tying packs from the time she was 2 or 3 years old and, at the age of 5, went on her first hunting trip. Not long after, she was sent alone to trout streams some 18 miles from home to help stock the winter larder. She would stay out four days, sleeping in the shelter of a tree Gertrude discovered not fear but peace, "the peace of the forest and of the river...God was there, the same God that Mother read about from the Bible. I stretched out at night and felt secure."

Gertrude graduated from high school in 1928 at the age of 17 and received a Life Certificate to teach elementary education. She later graduated from Lewiston State Normal and the University of Idaho. Most of Gertrude's teaching was done in one- or two-room schoolhouses where she always got along well with her students.

In 1942, Gertrude came back to the ranch where she tended the stock, hayed, mended fence and, "to make ends meet," packed for hunters and guided them in search of elk. Her wisdom regarding game animals is: "If you don't need it for food, don't shoot it. Don't tame it either, as you're only upsetting the balance of nature."

Gertrude has also found time to be involved in civic and social activities, serving in many organizations in which she trained young cowpokes and gave hope and direction to many cattlemen.

Gertrude wrote a book about her life, titled My Yesterdays in Elk City. "This book might be the only heritage I leave to my fellow man." She's also authored many poems which are included in the book. She has had articles published and, as a result, frequently has writers and historians calling on her.

Gertrude now owns only two horses. Failing eyesight limits her outdoor activities and she says, "When my short day is done, I should like to find a resting place not far from the music of its mountain streams and the soothing of the pines."

has always been 13, symbolizing the original 13 colonies.

Because the number of state has grown to 50, the number and arrangement of stars has changed each time a new state was added.

The American flag has the distinction of being the only flag that has had a national anthem written about it. Its title is "The Star Spangled Banner."

Francis Scott Key, the composer, was inspired to write the song when he saw our flag amid bombs and flames during our second war with Britain on Sept. 14, 1814.

The Pledge of Allegiance to the flag received official recognition by Congress in an act on June 22, 1942. However, the pledge was first published in 1892 in the Youth's Companion magazine in Boston, Mass., to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America.

Operation Rescue head gets prison

NEW YORK (AP) - A federal judge sentenced Operation Rescue founder Randall Terry to prison for five months for having a follower present a fetus to Bill Clinton during the Democratic National Convention.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert J. Ward rejected Terry's argument that he was following God's laws during last July's convention.

"Unfortunately, when the defendant spoke, he demonstrated no remorse, no contrition, no respect for the law," Ward said Friday as he imposed the sentence.

Last July, Clinton was presented with the fetus by a man who pretended to be an autograph seeker. Prosecutors said Terry was behind the encounter as part of a campaign by Operation Rescue to draw attention to its cause during the convention.

"It is the laws of the country that have become disrespectful of the law, the Mosaic law," Terry told the judge.

Beef for Father's Day

Mayor Bob Josserand proclaims "Beef for Father's Day" as his granddaughters, Lauren Josserand, two, and Andee Josserand, one, and their mother, Sandy Josserand, look on. Sandy Josserand is chairman of Hereford Cattlewomen's Beef for Father's Day promoting beef certificates as gifts for fathers on their special day, June 20.

11 Democratic senators threaten to oppose bill if middle class hit

WASHINGTON (AP) - Eleven liberal Democratic senators are threatening to oppose President Clinton's deficit-reduction tax bill if conservatives succeed in shifting parts of the measure's burden from the rich to the middle class.

In a letter to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, the lawmakers said they feared changes "that run counter to progressive Democratic principles."

The warning represents the latest bump in Clinton's already rocky road toward pushing his deficit-reduction plan through Congress. Because of a Republican gain of a Senate seat in Texas, Senate Democrats will hold only a 56-44 edge next week. GOP senators are likely to oppose the bill en masse.

The House narrowly approved $340 billion in tax increases and spending cuts last month. But the more conservative Democrats on the Finance Committee are rejiggering the plan to diminish its tax increases and add spending cuts.

"We believe that the package must ... (protect) those who took the brunt of failed Republican trickle-down policies over the past 12 years," wrote the liberals, none of whom is on the committee.

The 11 senators, led by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said they would oppose cuts in Medicare and Medicaid aimed at recipients, reduced taxes on the rich and added levies on the middle class.

Those steps are being considered by Democrats on Moynihan's committee, who are reworking Clinton's deficit-reduction plan. They plan to meet again Tuesday.

Joining Harkin in signing the letter were: Daniel Akaka and Daniel Inouye of Hawaii; Russell Feingold, Wisconsin; Carl Levin, Michigan;

Howard Metzenbaum, Ohio; Barbara Mikulski, Maryland; Carol Moseley-Braun and Paul Simon of Illinois; Patty Murray, Washington; and Paul Wellstone, Minnesota.

Clinton's House-approved plan to raise some of the money with a broad-based tax on energy is all but dead in the Senate, where conservatives have complained it is too expensive.

It probably will be replaced, in part, by a new levy of about 7 cents per gallon, perhaps less, on fuels used by cars, planes and other means of transportation.

"The transportation tax remains a viable piece of the plan," said Sen. Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., a Finance Committee member.

But another panel member, Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., said the fuel levy would penalize Western states because of the vast distances drivers there cover.

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSERAND

Mayor, City of Hereford

One of the most important factors in effective city growth is communication. Too many times we expect people to know about city activities when there is no way to know unless you attend each City Commission meeting. (By the way, we certainly encourage your attendance at each commission meeting.)

I am going to try, on a regular basis, to bring some of the opportunities, or problems if you wish, to your attention through the newspaper. (Thanks, Speedy.) Perhaps, then, we can all be informed of the reasons behind decisions made by your City Commission or the opportunities facing us.

Chester Nolen, our city manager, will also be reporting on City activities, but he will deal more with the day-to-day situations which arise and I will try to write more about future opportunities.

As an example, let's talk about Oct. 8, 1993, and its implications to each of us in Hereford and Deaf Smith County. You ask, "What happens Oct. 8th?" That is the date we must have our Class One landfill closed or face considerable financial expense. Many of you have expressed real concerns about the closure of the landfill, so let me give you some background.

First of all, this was brought about by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency with something they call "Subtitle D." These regulations are designed for areas of high rainfall or shallow water tables, with no regard for areas—such as ours—with limited moisture and deep water tables. No matter: we must all comply even if it doesn't make sense. For awhile, it appeared we might have a way around these requirements with something called "The West Texas Exemption." But several environmental groups in Washington went to a liberal Federal judge and got a permanent injunction against the West Texas exemption. So much for that.

Regardless, we will still keep a Class 4 landfill for use of the City. This will allow the dumping of construction materials, tree limbs, grass clippings and other inert materials.

In our next "Focus" report, we will discuss costs of various solid waste options and the reason your City Commission has chosen to haul our waste to an approved landfill site. After you see the figures, I hope you will agree that we have made the right choice.

I hope this column will be meaningful to you and I would welcome suggestions about its subject matter or topics you would like to see discussed. Please contact me at 364-8871, or write to me at Box 390, Hereford.

Yours for a better Hereford,
Bob

Retaliatory strike against Somali warlord carried out

By The Associated Press
U.S. and United Nations forces struck back before dawn Saturday at the forces of Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid, retaliating for last week's ambush that killed 23 Pakistani troops and crippled relief efforts.

In a statement released at the Pentagon, Defense Secretary Les Aspin said U.N. forces and members of the 1,200-person U.S. Quick Reaction Force launched "a military action against those responsible for armed attacks against U.N. Forces in Mogadishu on June 5."

At least two high-flying U.S. AC-130 gunships slowly circled Mogadishu, the capital, firing at will against positions held by Aidid's fighters, who were armed with little more than machine guns.

The United Nations said, in a statement from New York, that the operation was authorized by Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali in support of a Security Council resolution.

The retaliatory strike began about 4 a.m. (9 p.m. Friday EDT).

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the operation targeted at least five specific sites including Aidid's radio station, his command quarters and several weapons caches.

A second phase of the operation involved ground units ordered to move in to secure certain areas of the city and search for additional weapons caches. The official declined to specify exactly how many troops might participate in the ground operation.

Aidid on Friday denied responsibility for last Saturday's simultaneous attacks on Pakistani troops - part of the U.N.-directed operation - in two locations in southern Mogadishu, which he controls.

That attack was an open challenge to the U.N. force left behind after the departure of the large, mainly U.S. Army and Marine force that had kept peace in the Horn of Africa country since last December.

U.N. staff and relief workers have been evacuated by the hundreds to Nairobi, Kenya. The 13 foreign aid workers who remain were moved into two compounds. The few remaining U.N. staff were relocated to the headquarters compound.

On Friday, the United States dispatched a 4,200-man Navy and Marine assault force that was participating in exercises in Kuwait to the lower Persian Gulf for possible intervention in Somalia.

Of the 18,000 foreign troops in Somalia, some 10,000 to 11,000 are in Mogadishu. Four French armored personnel carriers arrived in Mogadishu from Baidoa earlier this week.

Mogadishu's main airport was closed Friday night until further notice.

The streets, always noticeably emptier on Friday, the Muslim sabbath, seemed deserted, with only a few kids and even fewer adults outside.

Even the crowd in the market that sells khat, the mildly narcotic leaf widely chewed here, was a fraction of its usual size.

At night, helicopters noisily buzz low over neighborhoods, using powerful lights to search for potential troublemakers. Some people have fled to the countryside.

By contrast, the former U.S. Embassy compound that the United Nations now uses as a base was a virtual beehive.

Bulldozers cleared trees in case of an assault by militiamen. Sandbags and dirt provided protection around the electricity generators. Double strands of barbed wire ensured that the compound wall, already topped by broken glass, would be even more difficult to breach.

Similar preparations were under way at the airport and seaport.

At a news conference Friday, Aidid portrayed himself as a peacemaker. He said he wants "those responsible to be dealt with severely."

"Those who initiated the problems are now pointing fingers," he said.

Aidid alternated between criticizing the United Nations and saying the country still needs its help in rebounding from a year in which an estimated 350,000 people died from civil war, famine and disease.

Aidid, whose voice was occasionally drowned out by helicopters, accused the U.N. of raising the tension level in the city and claimed he has been working to calm the situation.

Honor the Flag

BY PHIL GRAMM
U.S. Senator

Throughout the nation Sunday and Monday, there will be parades, speeches, celebrations, and patriotic ceremonies—each planned for the purpose of honoring America's flag. These will be humble attempts to pay tribute to the history and the mission of the nation proudly represented by red, white and blue of "Old Glory."

America's flag is more than simple cloth fashioned into a bold and impressive design. The "Stars and Stripes" serve as the hope of freedom for all the world's oppressed and the silent guarantor of individual opportunity to the fortunate few identified as Americans.

It should be remembered that "Old Glory" has majestically flown over the land of the free and brave during days of peace and war, both in prosperous and depressed times. Through it all, our flag has for more than two centuries inspired untold numbers of men and women to willingly set aside their personal ambitions and dreams in defense of liberty.

I remind you of the words included in President Woodrow Wilson's 1917 Flag Day message: "This flag, which we honor and under which we serve, is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation...though silent, it speaks to us--speaks to us of the past, of the men and women who went before us, and of the records they wrote upon it."

The time-honored tradition of Flag Day is an effective reminder that upon each occasion we view our nation's flag, we should thank God for the blessing of living free from tyranny, free from oppression, free from the rule of dictators, in a land where our opportunity is limited only by the magnitude of our dream.

Former topless dancer loses $7 M suit against implant maker

DENVER (AP) - A former topless dancer who blames her crippling fatigue and joint pain on leaking silicone-gel breast implants lost a $7 million lawsuit against manufacturer Dow Corning.

Two jurors said they were offended by the way the woman lives her life. The foreman, 30-year-old law student Chuck Vandevander, said the jury didn't believe the implants caused her health problems.

The woman, who received the implants in 1987, said Friday she will appeal.

Thursday's verdict was the first victory for Dow Corning since the U.S. Food and Drug Administration last year banned the sale of silicone-gel breast implants for all but medical reasons. About 5,400 cases are pending against the company, which no longer markets the implants, and Dow Corning said it might set a precedent for other cases.

Jurors deliberated less than two hours before finding that Tammy Turner McCartney had failed to prove her case against Dow Corning and plastic surgeon Stephen Goldstein. Two of the six jurors in the five-week trial were women.

"I was hurt they didn't give me the consideration of looking at the evidence. They didn't give me anything," McCartney said. "I know I was right. I know I didn't do anything wrong."

Dow Corning's lawyers focused on McCartney's past, and some jurors said the tactic influenced their decision. McCartney, 30, had an abortion, gave a child up for adoption and is considering reconstructive surgery for her nose.

The Dow Corning attorneys also contended there was no scientifically established link between the release of silicone in women's breasts and symptoms of the autoimmune disorder McCartney says she suffers.

Dow Corning lawyer David Bernick said Friday the victory set a precedent because it was based on science, not hysteria. He said he hopes the verdict will discourage women from filing similar lawsuits and assuage fears of other women that the implants are unsafe.

But McCartney's lawyer, Jo Stone, contended Dow's case was tried on "character assassination, not facts."

Some lawyers said the verdict could give the company ammunition to fight other breast-implant lawsuits.

"Women and their lawyers will now realize these cases can be lost. You don't just walk into the courthouse and ring up the cash register," said Denver lawyer Doug Bragg, representing a dozen women who have silicone gel breast implants.

Others disagreed.

"Ms. McCartney's lifestyle was probably and unfortunately a major factor in this jury's decision," said Steve Cook, a Boulder lawyer who handles breast-implant and other product liability cases. "I think that by and large most of the women who will have been the victims of silicone-induced immune disorders are not topless dancers."

Last December, Bristol-Myers Squibb was ordered by a Texas jury to pay a woman $25 million. A year earlier, Dow Corning lost a $7.4 million case in San Francisco. In 1984 it lost another case for $1.7 million.

Jurors Gunda Nienke, 71, and Elizabeth Sturms, 76, said they were influenced by aspects of McCartney's past.

"She lied too much," said Nienke, who didn't believe leaking implants caused McCartney's disabling fatigue. "How can she go dancing for seven years and then want to do something about it?"

Young Americans show prejudices

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans between 18 and 30 are more likely to hold negative attitudes toward blacks than those between ages 30 to 49, according to a study released by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

But the study said Americans over 50 are more likely to hold anti-black views than any other age group.

"The finding concerning younger adults is disturbing and seems to reverse earlier findings that younger, more educated Americans were less likely to hold prejudiced views," said Abraham Foxman, the league's national director.

The study also found that Americans who hold the most negative attitudes toward Jews also are the most likely to harbor negative feelings about blacks, immigrants, illegal aliens, homosexuals and women.

UNDERSTANDING THE BUYERS PERSPECTIVE

Buyers who make low offers on property can have a number of reasons. Perhaps the property in question requires a substantial investment to make needed repairs. The low offer would permit the buyer to make the repairs from retained funds. Or, the low offer is all the buyer can afford. It is not unusual for people to fall in love with a property out of their price range. When the real estate market is slow, the buyer may be testing sellers to see who are willing to accept a lower price. If the property has been for sale for a long time, the buyer may feel the property is overpriced compared with the selling price of similar homes in the area. Buyers making low offers should understand the seller may be insulated and further negotiations on the property may be turned down even if the counter offer is more in line with the asking price. You can count on us, we are professionals and can negotiate through the personal situations.

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says many parents believe that babies are angels--whose wings grow shorter as their legs grow longer.

Would you say that the child of a Democratic mother and a Republican father is a bipartisan issue?

A little boy and his playmate were studying the family's bathroom scale.

"How do you work this thing?" asked the playmate. "I dunno," the boy replied. "All I know is you stand on it and it makes you mad!"

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

The U.S. flag will celebrate its 216th birthday Monday. In Hereford the day will be observed with a simple ceremony at the City Hall flagpole. Representatives of U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm will present a flag to Mayor Bob Josserrand. Citizens are invited to attend the 3 p.m. ceremony.

The Pledge to the Flag originated in 1892 when Francis Bellamy, an ordained minister, championed a patriotic campaign to institute the flying of the flag over schools and other public buildings. The original 23-word Pledge was worded: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

The Pledge had been modified three times since Bellamy penned his original words. In 1923, the words, "the flag of the United States" were substituted for "my flag." Even greater distinction was attained one year later when "of America" was added. In 1954, members of the National Fraternal Congress of America were instrumental in the addition of the phrase "under God."

President Woodrow Wilson issued a proclamation in 1916 setting aside June 14 as a special day to honor the flag.

"When we observe Flag Day, we help our children to better understand the principles of liberty and justice which make our nation great. We show the world that we are a nation of responsible citizens dedicated to preserving these precepts for future generations. Finally, as individuals, we renew our own belief in America and in freedom and justice for all." Despite Wilson's plea, it was not until 1949 that Congress made this day a permanent observance.

Today, the 50 stars of the U.S. flag are representative of the mighty Nation we have become. Many Americans see the flag as a living thing that calls to our spirit, reminding us of the greatness of our America. Either Sunday or Monday, we hope citizens will pause for the Pledge. Whether it be at home with family, at City Hall for the simple ceremony, or just a brief break in the day's activity, recite the Pledge to yourself or in unison with those around you, for an individual stimulating, patriotic experience.

James Roberts, in the Andrews County News, says Congress is again making one set of laws for us, yet living by another standard themselves.

"Doesn't it seem strange to you that the U.S. Senate spends $168,000 a year for a chaplain to give a morning prayer at the day's opening session...yet the same group has outlawed prayer in public schools, public arenas, and any display of religious figures?"

Just in case you missed it before the legislative session closed in Austin: According to seven legislators who called for a hiring freeze, the number of state employees has grown by 13 percent during the past two years.

That's an increase of 34,800 actual employees since Big Mama became governor. A one-year hiring freeze in all areas except public safety would save $300 million.

Just think, that's only $100 million short of what they propose to take away from the 109 "rich" school districts in the new school finance plan!

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

Hats off this week to the U.S. Supreme Court.

I know it's unusual to see me say that, since they are rapidly legislating against the family, against religious freedom and against the unborn child, but they actually did something good.

This past week the justices unanimously struck down a New York school district policy that excluded religious activities from a list of approved after-hour uses of public school property.

They also ruled that students may vote to pray at graduation ceremonies, even though a ruling last summer prohibited school districts from scheduling the prayers.

In a day when those of us in the religious ("Christian") community are seeing our rights diminished, it is refreshing to see a court side with us.

Essentially, the court's decision said that school districts may bar all groups from using its facilities after school, but may not discriminate against religious groups.

In the other case, the court said school districts -- being representatives of the "state" -- are prohibited from sponsoring prayer at graduation, on the assumption that it would be publicly sponsoring a particular religion.

On the other hand, the students -- as individual citizens -- are free to pray if they so choose and nobody can stop them.

I applaud both actions. Still, this slight reprieve is just that -- I have not seen any indication the Supreme Court is going to do anything else to restore previously-taken rights to the religious community.

That means schools cannot sponsor prayer in the classroom, may not teach from the Bible and, in many cases may not even teach secular programs such as Sex Respect or the creation viewpoint because they supposedly violate the "Separation of Church and State."

I think we also need to be aware that, sooner or later, the federal government is going to notice churches as a source of income, removing any remaining tax-exempt status from them as a way to raise money.

It hasn't been that long since ministers and pastors had to begin paying in Social Security.

Can taxation of churches on an equal par with retail businesses. Behind that would be prohibitions against speaking on topics contrary to "approved" government policy.

That would include criticism of the president, preaching against homosexuality and abortion, and endorsing political candidates from the pulpit.

How can we stop this? Probably the only way is to make our views known.

Let our Senators and Representatives know we will not stand for any more eroding of religious values in this nation, and will vote against them for supporting any measures like these.

On a related subject, do you know where the term "Separation of Church and State" came from?

You see, Congress bandies this around casually, claiming the Constitution forbids such interaction. Actually, the words "separation," "church" and "state" never appear in the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

To quote, the First Amendment says, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition Government for a redress of grievances."

This is what was ratified as the first part of the Bill of Rights and has been in effect since Dec. 15, 1791.

To understand why this amendment was so prominently placed and important in the minds of the Founding Fathers, we need to remember something.

The early Americans who came here from England lived under a government that had its own church -- the Church of England.

This was the official state religion of England and everyone had to be a part of it.

If you didn't believe what the Church of England taught, tough.

You still had to belong.

Therefore, when the Constitution of the United States was written, the Congress determined that religion would not be forced on anyone in the United States.

Thus the drafting of the First Amendment.

It was written, not to protect the government from the church, but to protect the church and give Christians (and others) the freedom to practice what they believe without fear of arrest and persecution by a government-sponsored church.

And while that religious freedom has, indeed, spawned such fruitcakes as David Koresh and Jim Jones, it has also allowed for the peaceful growth of a nation for two centuries.

Now, as to the phrase "Separation of Church and State," the best I understand is that Thomas Jefferson, our third president, was writing to a group of church women after he left the presidency.

In commenting on the First Amendment, Jefferson noted that it was his personal opinion that there should be a "wall of separation" between the church and the state.

Again, his intent in this letter was to shelter the church from governmental regulation and persecution, not the other way around.

As you can see, in recent years this interpretation has turned 180 degrees around and the government is now insulating itself, attacking anything religious as being "against the Constitution."

Hogwash. They deny there is a God out there and, because (they reason) there is no Higher Power, the church is nothing more than a club or meeting organization and should be treated the same as any other meeting group.

Well, I certainly didn't really intend to write so much, but, as you can see, I think it's important that people know the truth and pass it on to their legislators before we lose all our rights.

Anyway, that's all for this week. Have a good week and, remember, let's be careful out there.

Welfare reform

BY CONGRESSMAN LARRY COMBEST

A record five million families are on welfare. Food stamps now go to 27 million people. For some time, I have urged that we as a nation take another look at perpetuating a system that does little more than leave a welfare check as the only inheritance for each new generation. One of the goals that Bill Clinton set last year was "ending welfare as we know it." In developing his reform ideas, the president should work for support from Congress and consensus from the American people.

Many welfare families are headed by a divorced parent who is owed child support money, but whose ex-spouse escapes state court judgments by crossing state lines. States that cannot collect on behalf of spouses look to federal taxpayers to make up the difference; as much as $6 billion each year. Strict federal laws should make the deadbeats pay up and live up to their obligations. Collecting what is due single parents is also an important move toward restoring their dignity.

The president is moving in the right direction about breaking the generation-to-generation dependency on welfare by limiting the benefits to two years. Conservatives in Congress have already introduced welfare reform that requires welfare recipients to work their way off welfare in exchange for incentives. I believe government assistance should only be given to those who are willing to help themselves.

While welfare recipients must either work in the private sector or work in a job provided by the government--they must be working for the welfare check they receive. The cost could be as much as $3 billion over a five-year period, but they will be breaking a sweat instead of just collected a check. I believe most people on welfare would prefer independent jobs rather than the trap of a government check.

The current welfare trap reduces a recipient's lifeline of benefits with each step taken toward employment. As the welfare recipient reaches each $1,000 increment in pay, benefits are reduced--just as the effort is made to climb out of the hole. A typical benefits package (AFDC, Food Stamps and Medicaid) collects about $11,300 a year for each recipient. By comparison, a minimum wage job would pay about $8,800 a year.

Conservatives in Congress will hold President Clinton's feet to the fire to make sure he follows up on reforms in the current welfare system. The president will have our help with concrete suggestions and our prompting that he stay on course with the goal of welfare reform.

School finance issue

Austin American-Statesman on school finance:

Citizens shouldn't breathe a sigh of relief and state political leaders shouldn't crow just because the Legislature finally enacted a public school finance measure before adjourning... All that can be said with assurance about this plan is that it may keep the schools open another year, and that it doesn't solve the basic problem. That's not much to be proud of, especially after 25 years of trying.

Hutchison's victory

The Houston Post on Hutchison's Victory:

The devastating, humiliating defeat of Bob Krueger by Kay Bailey Hutchison in Saturday's runoff cannot simply be attributed to the self-acknowledged fact that "Krueger is a lousy politician."

First, Hutchison did better than expected in the first special election May 1. She raised twice as much money as Krueger. And even though outnumbered, the Texas GOP got out the vote.

In contrast, the Democrats presented a generally lackluster front. ... The overwhelming reason, however, was, in two words, Bill Clinton. He has never been very popular in Texas, getting only 37 percent of the vote last November. ... Though Krueger tried to distance himself from the president, many felt a vote for him was a vote for Clinton.

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

Recently my wife and I were fortunate in being invited by L.J. Clark, president, to attend the Hereford High School Class of 1943 reunion and Pioneer Day.

All of the events--including the pancake supper, lunch at the Bull Barn, and the class dinner were, in our opinion, extremely well organized, interesting, and most enjoyable. The dedication, combined efforts, and leadership of L.J. and his committees were very evident throughout all of the events. It was a memorable weekend!

Having coached the high school football and other teams at Hereford in 1940-41, and not having the opportunity to return in 53 years, the changes were rather dramatic. The school facilities, Senior Citizens Center, and other developments were most impressive and a credit to the Hereford community.

Having traveled all over the world, we remain convinced that it's hard to find any city where the people are as friendly as those found in Hereford, Texas.

It is always a pleasure to be associated with good people.

Yours truly,
Mac & Fenton Best
150 Four Bears Trail,
Kerrville, TX.

Dear Editor:

The Mid-Plains Pioneer celebration attracted 319 pioneers at the Bull Barn on May 29. The officers would like to thank Beverly Harder and the precious young people who saved everyone so many steps by carrying food and serving us.

Our thanks, also, to the Pilot Club and the Bud to Blossom Garden Club in helping make the celebration another great year!

The class of 1943 received special recognition at the luncheon, and--as reported in The Brand--Leta Kaul was presented the Pioneer of the Year award. The Texas Country Western Band furnished the entertainment by performing country and gospel songs. Our new mayor, Bob Josserrand, gave the welcoming address.

I'd like to report the new officers who were elected for the association. They are: Marjorie Thomas, president; Tina Reinauer, vice president; Betty Stephan, secretary-treasurer, and Virginia Curtisinger, reporter.

Dear Editor:

I am ashamed to live in a town where some one will come into your yard at night and steal the American flag from a lighted flag pole.

A reward for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons involved will be given.

You're damn right, I'm mad.

Dear Editor:

"The carnival is coming! The carnival is coming!"

These words have been echoed by generations of excited Hereford youngsters as the annual Lions Club Carnival rolled into town.

Beginning with the first carnival held in December, 1935, the Lions Carnival has continued for 58 years to furnish entertainment, fun, food, and frivolity for the entire family. The carnival is the largest fundraiser of the Lions' projects and the proceeds continue to fund the many services and charities of Hereford and the area.

Through the years the Lions have provided donations for the Jim Hill

Hotel in 1949, the high school bleachers, football lights, and an electric scoreboard in 1953 (the old field). Contributions were also given to the hospital to purchase various items--including an incubator in 1939, a flame spectrometer in 1954, and a large contribution in 1956 for the Children's Wing. When the Bull Barn was built, the Lions contributed more than $17,000 for the installation of plumbing, wiring, heating and air conditioning, rest rooms, and seating.

More recently, the Hereford Lions Club donated to such worthwhile projects as the YMCA building fund, the Senior Citizen building fund, the Hereford Satellite building fund, and the Hereford Community Center.

Annual gifts are presented to the following organizations: Boy's Ranch, Girlstown, Hereford Christmas Stocking Fund, United Way, High Plains Eye Bank, King's Manor, Lions Crippled Children's Camp, Muscular Dystrophy, D.S. County Library, and many more.

When needs are expressed, the Hereford Lions of yesteryear did their best to meet those needs. The Hereford Lions Club of today continues that proud tradition as we prepare for our largest project of the year--the carnival.

We, as Lions, enjoy bringing quality family entertainment to Hereford. We invite you to join us for an outstanding week of entertainment as the Ed Burlingame Pride of Texas Carnival comes to town Tuesday through Saturday at Sugarland Mall.

DeGarmo ordered to remain in prison until second trial held

HOUSTON (AP) - A federal judge ruled Friday that former death row inmate Roger Leroy "Animal" DeGarmo must remain in jail while he awaits a second trial for the 1979 kidnapping and shooting of a Houston woman.

DeGarmo's attorney asked U.S. District Judge John Rainey to free DeGarmo because he wasn't given a retrial within 120 days of another federal judge's Aug. 6 order to do so.

Rainey said at a court session Friday that the state delayed too long in complying with DeGarmo's order.

"The record in this case leaves little doubt that the state's action subsequent to Judge DeGarmo's order has been irresponsible," Rainey said.

However, the judge said he had to balance DeGarmo's rights with the danger to the public if he was released and the likelihood that he will be convicted again. DeGarmo was reindicted in Fort Bend County on the same charge last week.

A Fort Bend County jury convicted DeGarmo, 39, in the January 1979 kidnapping and shooting of 20-year-old medical technician Kimberly Ann Strickler. She was taken to Fort Bend County and shot.

After his conviction, DeGarmo told jurors that he had committed the crime and that if they didn't give him the death penalty he would return to kill them. DeGarmo recanted confessions in last week's hearing.

Retired U.S. District Judge James DeAnda overturned DeGarmo's conviction last year based on undisclosed deals prosecutors had made with his accomplice, Helen Leydalia Mejia, 35, now serving time for her part in the killing.

Bill Zapalac, assistant attorney general, testified last week that a federal courthouse employee mistakenly told him that the 120-day order had been stayed, and he relayed the information to Fort Bend County. Gladden contended the state was making excuses.

A retrial was set for July 6, but the judge ordered it delayed until 30 days after DeGarmo's attorney, Greg Gladden, completes another trial.

Gladden said he will appeal Rainey's ruling.

"My reaction is disappointment. The 5th Circuit was real clear that they were remanding the case for one reason, and one reason was to release the petitioner. That didn't happen, so I guess I'll have to go complain to them about Judge Rainey not following their directions," Gladden said.

"I don't feel like he's dangerous," the attorney said of DeGarmo.

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Waves of leather, denim and chrome rolled through the city Friday with the bone-shaking rumble of thousands of "hogs." Motorcyclists from all walks of life had come to pay homage at the temple of Harley-Davidson.

About 20,000 motorcyclists and many others with just an interest in the Harley phenomenon were expected in Milwaukee for this weekend's Harley-Davidson 90th anniversary bash. Police reported only minor traffic snarls Friday.

Harley enthusiast Jay Leno was to be the emcee of a birthday ceremony Saturday night.

Looking around the city Friday, it was easy to understand the company's claim that it sells a lifestyle as much as a product.

Riders ranged from corporate executives to the unemployed, sharing a love of the open road and humming engines.

"It's freedom," said Lucy Zartman, a U.S. Census Bureau statistical clerk in Louisville, Ky. She abandoned her office attire in favor of dangling Harley earrings, a T-shirt and jeans.

"You smell things on a motorcycle," Zartman said. "You smell the earth, hear the birds. It's not like anything else I've ever done."

Harley Owners Group members proudly displayed their motorcycles, many of them custom-painted to resemble everything from cows to globes.

The Hog Wash launched a brisk business, carefully polishing the pampered machines for $2.

America's only major motorcycle maker got its start in Milwaukee in 1903, when three boyhood friends collaborated in a shed. Today, Harley-Davidson owns a 60 percent share of the domestic motorcycle market.

At the House of Harley-Davidson, owner Jerry Renner said hundreds of bikers had dropped by this week for oil changes, new tires and souvenirs.

"They're mostly coming in for T-shirts," Renner said. "They want a T-shirt that says Milwaukee on the back. That's what Harley people love to do. A true rider would not have a T-shirt sent to him. He must have ridden to the place and bought it."

Furry helmets, Harley tattoos and black leather were standard attire at State Fair Park, which was opened for camping.

But the riders bristled at the outlaw biker image often attached to motorcyclists.

"We're enthusiasts," said Linda Nobile, 29, a state motorcycle safety instructor in Baltimore. "That's instead of 'bikers.' We pawn that off on the guys who pedal and give them a bad name."

Mary Monson of Paonia, Colo., said she had no problem being called a "motorcycle mama."

Payment of support would save millions in military, study says

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government could slash its welfare costs by tens of millions of dollars if more absent parents in the military could be tracked down and ordered to pay child support, federal investigators say.

In a report released Friday, the inspector general's office at the Department of Health and Human Services found that states are not collecting child support payments in more than half of the military cases surveyed.

The investigators estimate that if court orders for child support were established and enforced in such cases nationwide, the government could save $54 million in welfare and Medicaid costs.

A 1989 study by the HHS inspector general found that 42,000 military personnel were in arrears on child support payments totaling more than $176 million. About two-thirds of those cases involved households that collect welfare under Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Friday's report focused on the barriers to collecting child support from absent parents in the military. Army regulations require soldiers to provide financial support to family members and obey court orders on child custody. The Navy, Air Force and Marines have similar regulations.

Locating absent parents in the military is the greatest barrier to collecting child support, said the investigators. Their report was based on a survey of cases in eight states: Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Nevada, Oklahoma and South Dakota.

"The transient nature of military assignments and the fact that military personnel are often stationed at installations for short periods of time often complicates the location of absent parents," the report said.

Military officials told the investigators many of the orders they receive to withhold wages from sailors and soldiers are returned to child support enforcement agencies because they lack the proper documents or information.

Sharp says lottery has paid out $1 B in one year

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Lottery, operating for just over a year, has paid out more than $1 billion in prizes, Comptroller John Sharp said Friday.

One of those to claim a share was Jean Oliver, 42, a Greenville restaurant owner, who won the $10 million Lotto jackpot offered in Wednesday night's drawing.

Mrs. Oliver, who said she plans to sell her cafe, became the first player to match the six winning numbers using a new "quick pick" computer selection process, said lottery spokeswoman Carmen Luevanos.

Mrs. Oliver said she was too tired to stay up for the drawing, so she picked up the newspaper Thursday morning while drinking coffee with some regular customers at her Market Cafe.

"I told them if I ever won the lottery, I'd never pour a cup of coffee again," said Mrs. Oliver, who is married and has six children.

The Texas Lottery began selling scratch-card, instant-win tickets May 29, 1992, and the big money lotto game began in November.

Sharp said Friday it was impossible to say exactly when the prize payouts hit the $1 billion mark.

"Numbers with nine zeros behind the commas are nearly impossible to place in perspective," Sharp said. "But this is not Monopoly money."

As of May 1, $581 million in lottery proceeds had been deposited in the state's main bank account, the General Revenue Fund. Another $17 million went to pay for lottery administration; $84 million was paid in commissioner to ticket sellers, and $111 million was paid for products and contractors.

Instant game prizes awarded through June 5 totaled nearly $660 million, while $256 million was paid to lotto winners, Sharp said.

Winners from the Houston area accounted for the most prizes claimed, $262 million. North Texas ran second, with $215 million, the lottery said.

GETAWAY MONEY

Sometimes just finding a way to get to that remote vacation retreat is an obstacle in itself.

ABOUT DIABETES AND THE EYES

Most of us think of diabetes as a sugar/insulin imbalance, an illness to be managed with diet and drugs where needed. What few people realize is that the diabetes affects the entire body, and in particular, the eyes.

A diabetic needs to take extra care of eyesight. Most basically, of course, blood sugar levels must be checked regularly and general diabetic diet and drug regimens followed. Eyes should be examined on a set schedule, every three months to every year, depending on need.

The optometrist will pay special attention to the diabetic's special eye concerns. Because there is a possibility of retinal changes to occur that will permanently affect vision, the eye doctor will check the retina often, even if the patient does not report vision changes.

Blurred vision may be a problem for diabetics, usually caused by a temporary blood sugar imbalance. This generally clears when blood sugar levels return to normal, if treatment is given promptly.

Clark looks back on long umpiring career

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

L.J. Clark, who hung up his umpire's mask last summer after 35 years of making the calls, can look back proudly on a career as a fair umpire.

"I wanted both teams to have the same opportunity," he said of why he started umpiring in 1957. "When they got through with the ballgame, they had had the same opportunity to win the ballgame.

"As far as I was concerned, I was completely impartial. Even teams with men I'd played with all my life--they had the same chance to win as the other team."

Clark played a lot of ball when he was younger. He described himself as an average, decent player who could hit the ball out of the park now and then. He found umpiring to be a natural change when his body couldn't keep up with his love for the game.

"I've played ball ever since I was big enough to hold a bat--hardball and fast-pitch softball," he said. "I played fastpitch before World War II with a team from Summerfield. I played hardball with the Irrigation Belt League after I got out of the service. I quit playing in 1957."

That's the year Clark got into umpiring. He umpired games for the Irrigation Belt League and for the Catholic League. He was in charge of umpires for Little League in Hereford for 10 years until Little League was disbanded in 1970.

He called Hereford High School games when the program first started, "until they started paying the umpires," he said. "Then they didn't have any trouble finding anyone."

As adults started to choose softball over baseball, the baseball leagues phased out and softball leagues sprung up. Clark kept up with the times. About 10 years ago he formed a softball umpire's association in Hereford, and he headed it until last year.

Being an umpire is a tough job. Most calls can go either way, but the umpire's got to pick one. Sometimes, some people will disagree, and they'll be LOUD. An umpire has to be good to keep the experts in the stands happy. Good, and quick.

"You have one split second to make up your mind what the call's going to be," he said. "You better call it right then. When you wait around to call it, that's when you create problems."

The key to good umpiring, like good real estate, is location.

"The umpire's got to be in position, no matter which direction the ball's coming in," he said. "You've got to be in position to make the call."

Clark tried to keep spectators happy by being quick and right. He tried to keep players in line by being firm.

"If they got mad and threw their glove on the ground they were automatically gone," he said. "They knew that. And I taught all my umpires to do that. That's not part of baseball."

Clark told a story of when he was asked to work a baseball game among adults in Friona. The man that asked him to call the game said that games between Friona and Farwell never got past the fifth inning because they always ended in fights.

During the game Clark called, he noticed that Farwell runners would try to disrupt a double play throw not by sliding but by standing in the basepath and waving their arms. That's against the rules of baseball as well as the rules of sportsmanship.

Clark told the Farwell men that if they did that again, they wouldn't be around to finish the game. Everyone was around to finish the game, and there were no fights. Clark was asked back the next summer.

Clark said firmness and fairness helped him keep mostly good relationships with players.

"As far as I'm concerned, my relationship with all players was good," he said. "We never had any confrontations, regardless of race, color or creed.

"My relationship with all players--in softball or hardball--was no trouble with anybody. We were on speaking terms. If they were mad when they left the field, I didn't know about it. Each and every man who stepped on the field knew I wasn't going to play favorites with anybody. I wasn't going to let favoritism come into my umpiring. I always felt I had a good relationship with the players.

He especially enjoyed his relationships with the younger players.

"I've enjoyed playing, I've enjoyed being an umpire and I've enjoyed helping kids become individuals," he said. "I wasn't out there just to be something, I was out there to help the kids.

He told a story about a young catcher who was having trouble catching. He caught the pitches that came right at him, but he'd miss balls that were just a little to the side.

"I told his father maybe he ought to get his eyes checked," Clark said. "The next week, I saw him, and he had a pair of glasses on."

Clark called his last game last summer, when he umpired the final game of the Kids Inc. girls' softball league. Rain threatened to postpone his retirement, but they played through it.

"I didn't want to go back," he said.

L.J. Clark, a baseball and softball umpire in Hereford since 1957, called it quits last year.

Bulls do what it takes in second win on road

PHOENIX (AP) - The Chicago Bulls do whatever they want.

They score when they need a basket. They make big defensive plays down the stretch. They stroll fearlessly into the lair of the team with the NBA's best record and win two games.

They are relaxed but resolved.

Now they want one more thing, and by Wednesday night they very well may have it - a sweep of the Phoenix Suns and their third consecutive championship.

The shootout of the superstars Friday night ended in a draw with Michael Jordan and Charles Barkley scoring 42 points each. But Jordan had more help -- particularly Scottie Pippen's triple-double -- and the Bulls beat the Suns 111-108 for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-7 finals.

"At some point in the ballgame, I didn't think there was any way we were going to lose, regardless of what happened," Chicago coach Phil Jackson said. "Every time the momentum seemed to swing in their direction, it would eventually swing back to us."

So the Bulls flew home early this morning confident they would not be coming back to Phoenix.

Starting Sunday night, the next three games are scheduled for Chicago Stadium. Game 4 is Wednesday. Although Phoenix had the NBA's best road record and won in Chicago this season, Suns point guard Kevin Johnson knows the chances of stopping the Bulls are slim.

"I don't know if it's the end of the world, but it's pretty close," he said.

The Bulls are vying to become the third club - and the first since the 1966 Boston Celtics ended a run of eight straight titles - to win three in a row.

"They're doing what they have to do. They're getting the second, the third effort," Suns forward Tom Chambers said. "We get a good first effort, but the second and third is what gets it (done) for us, and I don't think our people are consistently doing that."

Nor are they giving their star the support the Bulls' star gets.

Johnson had his second straight

McCarty takes advantage of his chance with Twins

By JAIME ARON
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Last September, a few weeks after David McCarty's minor league season ended for Minnesota's Class AAA team, he and a few friends went to a Twins-A's game in Oakland.

Sitting in the stands, McCarty couldn't help but think he should be on the field. He likely would've been, too, except the Twins were protecting him from the expansion draft by not calling him up when rosters were expanded.

"I was just sitting there thinking, 'Gosh, next year I might be playing there,'" he said.

Fast forward to May 25, back at Oakland-Alameda County Stadium. McCarty's friends again are in the stands, but this time they're watching him.

"It was just kind of weird," McCarty said Wednesday night in the Arlington Stadium locker room, following a rained out Rangers-Twins game. "I used to go see games there when I was in college. I thought back to that and said, 'Wow!'"

The reaction shocked him. He had been calm a week earlier making his major league debut, but McCarty felt the jitters once he returned to Oakland to play in front of friends and his wife's family.

By game time, his nerves were calm and the blend of confidence and talent he's displayed throughout his rapid rise to the majors took over. He went 1-for-4 and began a 13-game hitting streak that ended Tuesday.

Looking at the early stages of his career, it's understandable McCarty felt comfortable in the majors. He even admits that when Minnesota made him the No. 3 pick of the 1991 amateur draft he expected to be a Twin by early this season.

In spring training, however, it didn't look like McCarty would get his chance. Not because of numbers - they were fantastic - but because the Twins were loaded at first base (his best position), outfield and designated hitter.

"I knew I didn't have much of a shot, but I still went in there with the goal of making the team," he said. "I felt that I put up good numbers. There wasn't any doubt that I could play there. Not in my mind and I don't think in the team's mind either."

The packed roster forced the Twins to demote the 22-year-old star prospect to Class AAA just before opening day.

"I was upset at first, disappointed. But I just had to get over it," he said. He also realized he was better off playing every day in the minors than sitting on the major league bench behind the likes of Kirby Puckett, Dave Winfield, Shane Mack and Kent Hrbek.

In Portland, McCarty played like a major leaguer hitting minor league pitching - a .398 average and a .637 slugging percentage in 31 games.

Then Mack was injured and McCarty got the call - with a stipulation.

"They told me it was going to be for 15 days while Shane's injured," he said. "So there wasn't any pressure on me. It just worked out that I happened to get hot at the right time."

He also stayed hot, prompting the Twins to keep him in the lineup after Mack returned.

Through Wednesday, McCarty had started all 19 games since being called up and had hits in 17 of them. He was batting .346 with six doubles, a triple and a home run. His hitting streak, which ended Tuesday, is the second-longest of the year in the American League.

"I know that I've got the skills to succeed at this level, but I certainly don't expect to be hitting .350, or whatever I'm hitting, at the end of the year," he said.

The most important aspect of McCarty's success has been convincing manager Tom Kelly to continue writing his name in the starting lineup.

"He's been a tough out," Kelly said. "He's battling in every at-bat. He's made his share of mistakes, like any other player, but he's doing just fine."

The right-handed hitting McCarty is a dead-ringer for former Atlanta Braves slugger Dale Murphy. His 6-foot-5, 220-pound frame seems rigid, with his long legs and thin arms almost squared over the plate.

McCarty's hitting has been his trademark since breaking on the scene as a sophomore at Houston Sharpstown. He made all-state his junior and senior years, but wasn't drafted by the pros.

Not that it mattered. He was bound for Stanford where he could mature as a player in a top college program and get his degree.

Though his grades may have suffered by playing baseball, McCarty is proud to have earned an economics degree in just over three years.

His baseball accomplishments there also are impressive. He hit .336 as a sophomore when the Cardinal finished third at the College World Series, then followed it with a junior year that included a .490 average, a 26-game hitting streak and was capped by being named the 1991 player of the year by Baseball America.

College football playoff gains support

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - College coaches used to quail at the thought of a national football playoff as if somebody had just splashed hot tar on their new sports car.

"Why have just one winner when you have 18 winners of bowl games every year?" was always the question posed by former LSU coach Charley McClendon.

Bowls were a nice security blanket for coaches. Win a bowl game and the alumni are happy for another season. Cigars and raises are passed around and the kids get new bicycles.

However, the times are changing and the coaches know it. Title IX and gender equity are demanding and making financial inroads on the athletic department budget. And football, that athletic department golden goose, needs to produce even more revenue.

"We've got to find a way to have our cake and eat it to," was the way Baylor athletic director Grant Teaff put it at the recent College Football Association convention.

"This (gender equity) is the most difficult issue we've ever faced and I'm concerned for college football," said LSU athletic director Joe Dean.

There is a simple solution: The college football playoff.

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum, relaxing at a party during the convention, said Nike, the shoe company, did a study on what an NCAA Division I-A playoff would mean to the 106 schools playing football.

"Nike said it would mean about $1 million per school," Slocum said. "You can't turn away from that kind of money."

Slocum used to be among the cadre of coaches against the playoff but no more.

"Schools are getting into financial binds," Slocum said. "A playoff, if done the right way, would be a tremendous boost for college football and athletic department budgets. I think we have to do it."

Iowa coach Hayden Fry agrees. "The bowls have been good to college football and we wouldn't turn our backs on them," said Fry, currently the president of the American Football Coaches Association. "We could work out a playoff within the framework of the bowls."

Pittsburgh coach Johnny Majors said the bowls would have to be protected.

"They've done too much for college football to turn our backs on them," Majors said. "I'd like to see a 16-team playoff using the bowl games as some of the playoff sites."

Playoff formulas are numerous. The Freeman Formula would require only three weeks to crown a champion without using a bye.

Take the top eight teams in the nation, chosen by their position in the polls, and have them play in four New Year's Day bowls, the Cotton, Rose, Orange and Sugar.

Pair them one versus eight, two versus seven, three versus four, and five versus six. Rotate the pairings assignment yearly between the bowls.

To avoid the NFL playoffs in the semifinals, you pair the survivors on Friday at predetermined designated sites that can be rotated like the Rose Bowl in Pasadena or the Cotton Bowl. You could stagger the kickoffs, one in the afternoon and the second game at night.

The championship game, again to avoid the NFL playoffs, would be played on a Friday night in a domed stadium. This would limit the game to places like New Orleans but the prime time exposure would be vital to the college game getting every buck it could out of the sponsors. It would assure good weather at a bad time of the year and give the game every chance to be a dramatic one.

It's time for college presidents to put down their pipes, take off their smoking jackets and act to crown a true national football champion. It's the only NCAA sport that doesn't do that.

Gender equity isn't going away. Nor is the bill collector.

Pricetag on Orioles set at $141.3 M

BALTIMORE (AP) - The sale price on the Baltimore Orioles has been set - a whopping $141.3 million. Now it's up to a bankruptcy judge to weigh bids from groups who plan to up the ante.

An agreement to sell the Orioles to a group of Cincinnati businessmen headed by William O. DeWitt Jr. was filed Friday by attorneys for owner Eli Jacobs in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York. The price tag represents the largest sum ever paid for a baseball team, topping the $125 million paid last year for the Seattle Mariners.

The bid must be approved by Judge Cornelius Blackshear, who can reject the terms or turn to other bidders in an effort to best suit the needs of Jacobs' creditors.

Four other groups have expressed an interest in buying the team. They have until July 15 to file a bid.

"Not only are we prepared to match it, but prepared to beat it," said Peter Angelos, a Baltimore attorney who heads a group of investors that includes author Tom Clancy and moviemaker Barry Levinson.

The figure of nearly $141.3 million in cash comes before calculating interest and other costs, which should have the effect of increasing the final sale price to as much as $150 million.

According to terms of the 58-page contract, DeWitt's group would receive between $750,000 and $3.25 million if his deal fails to go through. Therefore, it was expected the court would only consider higher offers by third parties that exceed the adjusted sale price by at least $2 million.

Jacobs filed for personal bankruptcy on April 19. The Orioles transaction is part of an overall restructuring agreement reached between Jacobs and the Official Unsecured Creditors' Committee.

The other groups interested in the team are:

- The owners of the New Jersey consumer electronic store chain, Nobody Beats the Wiz Inc., who reportedly are willing to bid $150 million.
- Jeffrey Loria, a New York art dealer.
- A group led by Jean Fugett Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of New York-based TLC Beatrice International Holdings Inc., an international food conglomerate.

poor game with four points, four turnovers and six assists in 32 minutes. Dan Majerle missed all six of his first-half shots.

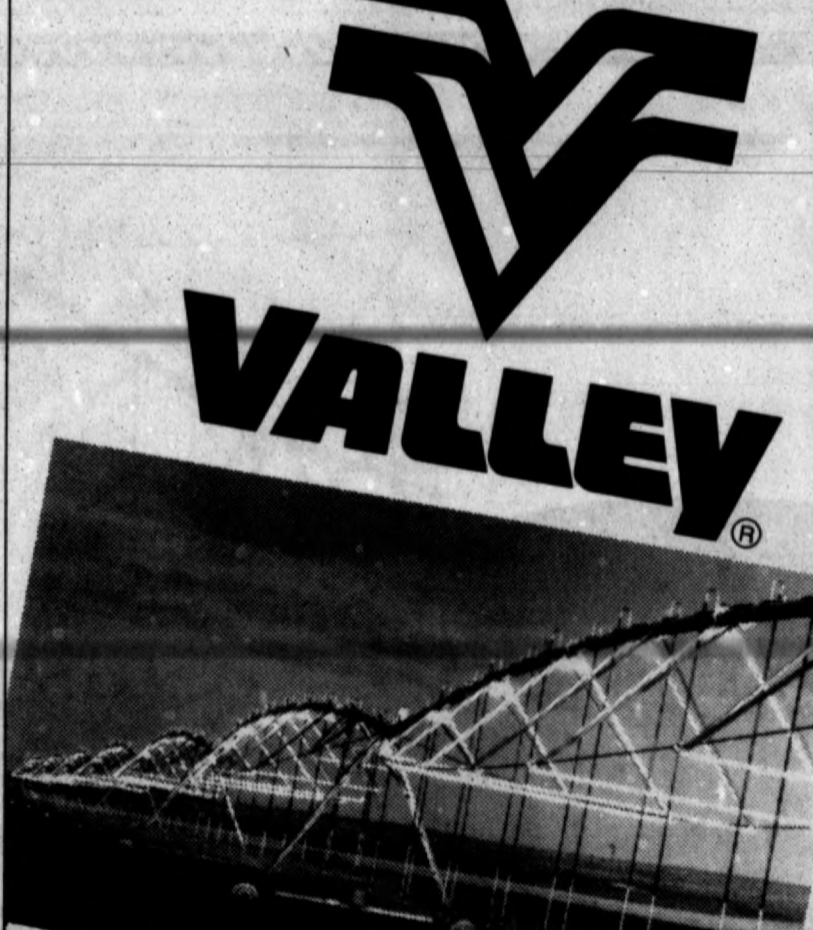

Jordan had plenty of help. Pippen had 15 points, 12 rebounds and 12 assists. Horace Grant had a playoff career-high 24 points. B.J. Armstrong's defense shackled Johnson.

John Paxson's 3-pointer broke the final tie and gave Chicago the lead for good, 96-93 with 7:57 left. But the Suns stayed close and had a chance to tie in the final minute.

Danny Ainge had hit a 3-pointer and a layup to slice a 106-98 deficit to 106-103 with 58 seconds to go. Chambers then rebounded Pippen's miss, and Ainge set up for another 3-pointer that would have tied the game.

But Pippen got a piece of the shot, retrieved the ball and was fouled. His two shots gave Chicago a five-point lead with 17 seconds remaining.

Texas still has no Class 1 horseracing track

By RANDY MOSS

The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) - Five years ago, Tony Chamblin of the Association of Racing Commissioners International advised members of the newly formed Texas Racing Commission to adopt an old journalistic credo: get it first, but first get it right. Chamblin told them to be cautious in every move they made.

The commission may have taken Chamblin's advice to the extreme. Almost six years since parimutuel wagering was legalized in Texas, the state still doesn't have an operating Class I racetrack, although three have been licensed.

The TRC is charged with regulating the budding thoroughbred, quarter-horse and greyhound parimutuel racing industries in the state. Thus, it has become a lightning rod for the numerous controversies generated by the process.

Some legislators who promised constituents a parimutuel tax windfall in 1987 still are angry that no Class I tracks have been built. They accuse the commission of footdragging and are in no mood to forgive its $10.5 million public debt as the commission requested in February.

When G. Rollie White Downs in Brady, the first Texas parimutuel track to open after the 1987 legislation, went bankrupt before completing its first season in 1989, even then-commission chairman Hugh Fitzsimons said it never should have been licensed in the first place.

Former Pimlico Race Course general manager Chick Lang once sat through a license hearing and called the commission "worse than incompetent."

"Obviously, people around the country said they just couldn't wait for Texas, how it would be the biggest thing outside of California and New York," said Dave Freeman, executive secretary of the TRC. "We'd love to see those Class I racetracks flourishing, but clearly the timing couldn't be worse."

"People want to blame somebody, and it's easy to point the finger at the commission because it is a singular entity. That is understandable, but it's a bit misguided. The commission is fulfilling a legislative mandate. It cannot fund, construct or operate racetracks. But I think the commissioners have shown remarkable flexibility, patience and a terrific willingness to do whatever it takes to assist all of these racetracks."

When the legislature drew up racing laws for Texas, it wanted to ensure a governing body that would put premiums on safety for patrons and horses and revenue to the state. The TRC consists of six politically appointed voting members, split into horse racing and greyhound racing sections. One member must be a large-animal veterinarian and another a small-animal veterinarian. The Comptroller of Public Accounts has an ex-officio vote, as does the chairman of the Department of Public Safety.

Aside from Freeman's executive secretary position, the commission also has a director of racing, an investigator, an attorney and 54 full-time employees, counting clerical help at each state racetrack.

The commission salaries and expenditures are paid for by annual license fees collected from racetracks, daily license fees that tracks pay based on wagering, a percentage of uncashed betting tickets and occupational license fees paid by trainers, jockeys, grooms, etc.

Commissioners, who are appointed by each state's governor, are not required to be knowledgeable about racing. The positions often are awarded strictly as rewards for campaign contributions or other political favors, with no consideration given to background in the sport.

Horsemen find it maddening that crucial decisions affecting the future of racing frequently are made by people whose job descriptions have nothing to do with climbing onto a saddle, worrying about the right hay to feed or operating a racetrack.

In this respect, however, the commission has a leg up on most other racing states.

Commissioner Anne Dunigan Wilson is a thoroughbred owner and breeder who operates the Abilene-based Bacacita Farm. It was Bacacita Farm that gave Eclipse Award-winning Shug McGaughey his start as a trainer in the late 1970s.

Fitzsimons, a San Antonio rancher and former commission chairman, has traveled to dozens of racetracks in other states and countries at personal expense to learn as much as possible about racing. Fitzsimons' tenure on the commission officially expired Feb. 1, but he has been asked to stay on indefinitely.

Veterinarian Dr. Glenn Blodgett has an extensive racing background and has worked long hours to formulate a medication policy enabling tightly controlled use of bleeder-medication Lasix.

They make up the commission's horse racing section and are assisted by Freeman, whose expertise has been invaluable. His grandfather was a trainer, his father was a racetrack mutuel manager and consultant, and Freeman himself has held horse racing positions in nine states, Canada and Colombia.

Freeman organized the dramatic hearings for the Dallas-Fort Worth Class I racing license, with legal guidance from commissioner-appointed hearing examiner Dudley McCalla and commission legal counsel Paula Cochran Carter. Wilson, Fitzsimons and Blodgett voted on the four license applications along with comptroller John Sharp and then-DPS chair Robert Holt.

After lengthy background investigations, McCalla-conducted depositions and a culminating tense daylong hearing last October, Lone Star Jockey Club was voted the license over R.D. Hubbard-backed Midpointe Racing, Trinity Meadows and Dallas-based Pinnacle Park.

"I didn't sleep for two nights (before the hearing) and three nights afterward," Blodgett said.

In most racing states, commissions perform mundane tasks such as rubber-stamping stewards' ruling and suspensions, while only occasionally stepping over the line into controversy.

But because of the unique nature of Texas' late entrance into the horse racing arena - and the accompanying expectations - the TRC frequently has made headlines.

The commission rejected two Houston Class I applicants before approving Sam Houston Race Park in August 1991. It supported the reduction of the state's share of the parimutuel tax and approved the expansion of interstate simulcasting. It also held Trinity Meadows officials accountable during frequent periods of organizational mayhem at the Class 2 track in Willow Park or when they balked at fulfilling promises to upgrade the facility.

"Certainly, they've been in a fishbowl," Chamblin said of the Texas commissioners. "People can always argue whether they've been successful."

"But they've been building a model, so to speak, rather than taking over an existing product and working with it. It's been a pressure-packed situation, and I think they've done a generally excellent job."

Freeman believes the commission

Martin's Catch

NEW YORK (AP) - Billy Martin, a star ballplayer and later a manager for the Yankees, was at his best under pressure.

In the seventh game of the 1952 World Series against the Dodgers, Martin came up with the big play of the game for New York. The Yanks led, 4-2, in the bottom of the seventh inning. Brooklyn had filled the bases with two out and Jackie Robinson batting against Bob Kuzava.

Swinging at a 3-2 pitch, Robinson lifted a high pop fly directly over the mound. Pitcher Kuzava froze. First baseman Joe Collins couldn't find the ball. At the last split second, Martin, running hard from second base, made a lunging knee-high catch for the third out. The Yanks went on to win the game and the series.

In a 1924 game, Jim Bottomley of the St. Louis Cardinals drove in 12 runs.

In 1968, Don Drysdale of the Los Angeles Dodgers pitched six consecutive shutouts.

is ready to take the next step, which is to assume a lower profile.

"It's easy to stand on the outside and throw rocks, but this is a tough business whether you've been around 100 years like the Fair Grounds (in New Orleans) or three years, like Trinity Meadows," he said.

"I think we'd love to see the day when we're off the front page. And maybe to the front page of the sports page."

AUTHENTIC COUNTRY HOME INDEED

Plan Designed For A Hideaway Or Permanent Home

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

Remember the days of an actual front porch that extended the full width of a home? This one has the wood hand rail and wood posts too. By way of the front porch you enter into a vast front room and the country kitchen and dining room merge. Alongside is the convenience of an old fashioned back porch.

Two bedrooms and one bath are located on the first floor and the designer has added a modern laundry area for those that can't revert too far into days gone by. Additional bedrooms are included in the attic area under the portion of roof that has full head room. An additional bath is upstairs too.

The garage is included in the basement and this, along with the unfinished basement, are accessible by the stair nestled under the stair to the second floor.

The country exterior is constructed of vertical wood siding and the steep gable roof beyond the shed roof porch incorporates two dormer windows.

The plan is Number 692 and includes only 1,678 square feet of heated space. It is a computer generated plan. All W. D. Farmer plans are furnished with construction details for energy efficiency and are designed in conformance with FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc., P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Rudolph-Wilson vows read at Amarillo

MRS. CODY WAYNE WILSON
...nee Karen Christina Rudolph

Amid the soft glow of candlelights, Karen Christina Rudolph and Cody Layne Wilson, both of College Station, exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon, June 5, at the First Christian Church in Amarillo.

Officiating at the ceremony was Roy Shave, minister of Central Church of Christ in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. Diana Rudolph and Larry Smith of Amarillo and Dr. and Mrs. Charles J. Rudolph II of Gladstone, Mo. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mickey Wilson of Hereford.

The church was decorated with two arched candelabras which were flanked by tree candelabras holding long white tapers and accented with a variety of greenery and baby's breath. Also, adorning the setting were two large brass urns filled with mixed bouquets of gladiolus, mauve enchantment lilies, alstromera lilies, dutch irises, miniature pixie peach carnations, stocks, and spider mums. The white unity candle, enhanced with baby's breath and greenery was placed in the center of the altar.

Laura Higginbottom, cousin of the bride, of Las Vegas, Nevada, was matron of honor. Bridal attendants were Dana Suntuilli, cousin of the bride, of Kansas City, Missouri, Michelle Sawyer of College Station, Shambryn Wilson, sister of the bridegroom, Hereford, Texas, and Vicki Rudolph, sister of the bride, of Gladstone, Mo.

Brady Wilson of College Station served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Stuart Mitts of Dallas, Texas, Jon Bishop of College Station, Charles J. Rudolph III, brother of the bride, Gladstone, Mo. and Andrew Gee of Hereford, Texas.

Guests were escorted by Scott Simons of Austin, Mark Scott of Waco, and Zack Smith of Freeport.

The bridegroom's twin cousins, Morgan and Logan Baize, sons of Kelly and Myrna Hill of Amarillo served as ring bearers.

Kathy Jones, soloist, of Gladstone was accompanied by organist Judy Sell of Amarillo as she vocalized "All I Ask of You," "Trumpet Voluntary" was played for the processional by James MacLaskey of Hereford and the organist. Other musical selections included Bach's Chorale Prelude and Pachelbel Canon in D.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a romantic formal length gown of silk shantung. It was fashioned with Renaissance sleeves, a sweetheart neckline and a fitted bodice heavily beaded with bridal pearls and iridescent. The elongated waist was emphasized at the back with a large designer's bow from which the cathedral train edged in ornate scalloped lace and featuring pearls and iridescent flowed.

A large designer's bow accented with pearls gathered the floor length silk illusion bridal veil.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of casa blanche lilies, pink roses, English ivy and baby's breath. An antique handkerchief belonging to the bride's grandmother, Marge Rudolph, was carried representing something old and something borrowed. Completing tradition, the bride wore a blue garter which was worn by the bridegroom's mother at her wedding. For something new the bride wore pearl earrings, a gift from the groom.

Bridal attendants wore soft aqua moire floor length gowns fashioned in like design of the bride's gown. Attendants carried small nose gays of pink roses, alstromera lilies, lavender feesha, miniature pixie peach carnations, and baby's breath.

Katie Bugbee, cousin of the bride, of Mesquite, invited guest to register at the wedding and at the reception held at the church.

Tany Chapman and Cara Johnston, both of Amarillo, served the bride's cake. Kristina Burch of Lubbock and Laura Kerr of Abilene served the groom's cake.

The three tiered white bride's cake was embellished and topped with pink roses, casa blanca lilies, alstromera lilies, and miniature pixie peach carnations. The bride's table was further enhanced with silver accessories. The groom's chocolate cake was topped with the Texas A&M University seal. The groom's table was accented with a brass candelabra and brass punch bowl. Completing the reception area was a gift table covered with a family heirloom cloth made by the groom's grandmother, Bobbie Wilson.

Leaving for a cruise to the Caribbean the bride wore a white two piece short suit featuring battenbury lace accents. Upon returning, the couple will be at home in College Station.

The bride is a senior bio-medical science major at Texas A&M University. She works for Texas A&M Small Animal Clinic. The groom graduated in May from Texas A&M University with a bachelor's degree in biochemistry. He will be entering a graduate program in Toxicology at A&M in the fall. He works for Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine.

Special guests were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rudolph I of Dallas, groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E.G. Phipps of Friona, and Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Wilson of Hereford.

Out of town guests attending the wedding were from Dallas, Hereford, Friona, Bovina, Austin, Lubbock, Abilene, Killgore, Waco, Freeport, Kansas City, Kansas, Gladstone, Mo.

Holyoke, Colorado & Las Cruces, N.M.

The bride couple was honored with numerous pre-nuptial events including showers in Amarillo, Hereford, College Station, Dallas and Gladstone, Mo.

Mr. & Mrs. Danny Black of Friona, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burdett and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Donaway of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Campbell of Hereford and aunts of the groom, Judy Phipps and Deloris Phipps hosted the rehearsal dinner in the atrium area of the Central Church of Christ in Amarillo on Friday evening following the rehearsal. The bride and her attendants were honored with a bridesmaid luncheon on Saturday by the bride's grandmother, Marge Rudolph at the Amarillo Club in Amarillo.

Special pins presented at local VFW Auxiliary meeting

The Ladies Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars, Roy Wederbrook Post 4818, met in regular session June 7 with Linda Dutton presiding.

Betty Boggs was presented with her 20-year membership pin, while department pins were given to Linda Dutton, president; Betty Boggs, membership chairman; and Terry Rhyne, treasurer, for reaching 100 percent membership for the year.

Dutton reported that all projects had been completed for the current year and all reports sent to state. The next meeting will be July 5, at which time secret pals will be revealed.

Tentative plans were made to have a salad supper July 12 at 7 p.m. for the purpose of meeting and securing new members for the auxiliary. Any lady 16 years of age or older who is a daughter, granddaughter, grandmother, mother, wife, widow or sister of a veteran who is eligible for the VFW, is welcome to attend.

Supper was served prior to the meeting. Those present included Robert Kubacek, new VFW post commander; Betty Boggs, Doris Coffin, Linda Dutton, Marie and Tom Goheen, Dora Lee Howell, Essie Martin, Erma Murphey, Terry Rhyne, Ruth Stethem and Doris Wilson.

Hammock going to National Young Leaders Conference

A high school student from Deaf Smith County will be a participant in the National Young Leaders Conference in Washington, D.C., June 15 through June 20.

Jennifer Hammock, whose parents are Bobby and Kathy Hammock, will be a senior in high school in Grady, N.M., next fall. The Hammock family lives in the Bootleg community of Deaf Smith County.

The 17-year-old student is a member of the National Honor Society and the school's annual staff. She also is a varsity cheerleader.

The Washington conference will introduce participants to government issues. Youth also will meet senators and representatives from their home states. Sponsored by the Congressional Youth Leadership Council, the conference is designed to inspire young persons to reach their leadership potential.

A highlight of the six-day event will be a "Mock Congress" which allows students to assume roles of U.S. representatives in debate and vote on proposed youth service legislation.

Did you know that..

-Over three million Americans stutter.

-Stuttering affects four times as many males as females.

-People who stutter are as intelligent and well-adjusted as non-stutters.

-Despite decades of research, there are no clear-cut answers to the causes of stuttering, but much has been learned about factors which contribute to its development.

-As a result, tremendous progress has been made in the prevention of stuttering in young children.

-People who stutter are self-conscious about their stuttering and often let the disability determine the vocation they choose.

-There are no instant miracle cures for stuttering. Therapy is not an overnight process.

-Some 25 percent of all children go through a stage of development during which they stutter. Some four percent may stutter for six months or more.

-Stuttering becomes an increasingly formidable problem in the teen years as dating and social interaction begin.

-A qualified clinician can help not only children but also teenagers, young adults and even older adults make significant progress toward fluency.

-Winston Churchill, Marilyn Monroe, Carly Simon, James Earl Jones, Ken Venturi, Bob Love, John Updike, Lewis Carroll, and King George VI-all stuttered and overcame their problem.

-The Stuttering Foundation of America maintains a toll-free Stuttering Hotline (1-800-992-9392). Call for free informative brochures and a nationwide resource list of licensed speech-language pathologists who specialize in the treatment of stuttering.

-The Stuttering Foundation is the first non-profit, charitable organization in the world to concern itself with the prevention of stuttering in children and the improvement of treatment for adults who stutter.

Thomason, Evers married in Spur

In a Saturday afternoon ceremony in Spur, Miss Annette Marie Thomason became the bride of Russell Allen Evers. Bob Brandon of the Merkel Church of Christ read the exchange of vows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Thomason of Spur. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Evers of Hereford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of white bridal satin with a lace-covered bodice which dropped to a point in front. Pearls and sequins accented floral designed lace on the bodice and puffed sleeves. A large satin bow accented the waist in the back.

The gown's skirt was accented with lace and pearl appliques in the same design as those on the bodice. The skirt was edged with scalloped lace and featured a chapel-length train.

The bride wore a waist-length tulle veil, attached to a headpiece covered with satin. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses accented with her chosen colors.

The gown and veil were designed by the bride.

The bride wore pearls belonging to her grandmother, Myrtle Starcher, and a bracelet belonging to the groom's grandmother, Emma Moser of Summerfield.

The bride's matron of honor was June Hood. Best man was Jimmy Hood.

Also attending the couple were bridesmaids, Rachele Carswell of Baton Rouge, La., niece of the bride; Shanna Hamilton of Abilene and Vicki Nelson of Pueblo, Colo.

Groomsmen were Jayson Thomason of Spur, nephew of the bride; John Starcher of Joshua, brother of the bride, and Kenny Rhoades of Lubbock. Ushers were Terry Qualls of Round Rock, brother of the bride, and Jeff Lee of Graford.

Flower girl was Janet Starcher, niece of the bride and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Starcher of Gresham, Ore. Ring bearer was Sam Caskey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Caskey of Lubbock.

Candles were lit by James Starcher of Gresham, nephew of the bride, and Randy Evers of Hereford, brother of the groom.

The church was decorated with a golden archway in front of the pulpit which was covered with roses and greenery. A heart-shaped candelabra and two spiral candelabras complemented the heart-shaped pew markers in the bride's colors of pinks and purples.

A reception in the church fellowship hall honored the couple after the wedding. The bride's table featured a white layer cake, surrounded by smaller cakes. Traditional serving pieces of silver and crystal were used. The table was covered with an off-white cloth accented in lace and with lavender and green accents.

The groom's cake was a representation of a sports car, placed on a mirror. A bird cage holding two small doves, belonging to his grandmother, Anna Evers of Umbarger, was a table decoration. The decoration also was used at weddings of his brothers and sisters. The table cover was an off-white cloth of lace and brocade.

After a wedding trip to Colorado, the couple will live in Lubbock. The bride attended Spur High School, Abilene Christian University, Austin Community College and South Plains College. She is employed by Dr. Samuel Campbell.

The groom is a graduate of Hereford High School and is employed at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock. He plans to attend Texas Tech in the fall.

Courtesies honoring the couple before the wedding included a lingerie shower Friday night in the home of Mrs. J.W. Thomason of Spur; a miscellaneous shower on June 5 in Spur, and a tool-handy-do shower for the groom at the home of the bride's brother, Jay Lyle Thomason, in Spur.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted at noon Saturday by the groom's parents.

How to increase job security, satisfaction

Ted and Ken both work for the sanitation department of a large city. Each morning at 4 a.m. they board a large garbage truck. Ted thinks his job is to empty garbage cans into the back of the truck. Ken thinks he is responsible to help keep the city looking clean and neat. Can you guess which one was promoted?

According to Jerry Mason, an associate professor of family financial planning at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, job satisfaction and job security often go hand in hand. He tells how you can work to increase both job security and satisfaction in the March, 1993 issue of The Ensign, a magazine published by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

"If you want to remain with your present employer," says Mason, "examine the contributions you are making by asking yourself the following questions."

1. How well am I performing in my present job?
2. What can I do to make myself more valuable to my employer?
3. What can I do to increase the sense of satisfaction I receive from my work?

"Identify your main responsibilities at work," Mason counsels. "Then make a list of the areas in which you excel. Ask yourself what you must do to improve the job you are now doing."

Mason says it is a rare and valuable person who is both effective and efficient and most employees could increase their value to the firm by making improvement in one or both areas.

Mason suggests maybe all you need to do to be both more efficient and more effective is to become better organized. "Ask yourself if you would benefit by taking a course in time management," he advises.

"Some employees are effective; they know exactly what needs to be done. However, many effective people don't know how to be efficient, and it takes them much longer than it should to complete a task."

"On the other hand, some employees are efficient, but they don't focus on their primary responsibilities and are therefore not effective," he notes.

"Education used to end at graduation," he says. "That is not the case any more. Now employees need to continue their education indefinitely."

Mason says continuing education has two benefits: 1) it increases your value in your present position, and 2) it can be especially important if you're considering changing jobs or careers.

Modern companies often spend a great deal of money to provide quality in-house training and education. Mason says it's smart to take advantage of any educational opportunities your company provides.

Diabetic seminar set Wednesday at DSGH

The High Plains Baptist Hospital diabetic education team will present a seminar at Deaf Smith General Hospital Wednesday for anyone interested in learning more about diabetes.

The seminar, "Diabetes: You're in Control," will be presented from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the hospital dining room. There will be a one-hour break for lunch.

Speaking at the seminar will be Ethel Perez, RN; Diane Ernstes, registered dietitian; Luain Packard, registered pharmacist, and Sarah Frey, RN. Topics include diabetes overview, complications and health tips, medications and eating out.

The seminar is being sponsored by Deaf Smith General Hospital. "We're pleased to have this opportunity to work with the team from High Plains," said Ron Rives, hospital CEO. "Their expertise will be beneficial to our community. We urge those who would like to know more about diabetes to attend this program," added Rives.

For reservations or more information, call Renee Hammock at DSGH(364-2141).

Lots of kids have been coming in to get enrolled in the Summer Reading Club. If you haven't it's not too late--registration will continue for several more weeks. Monday we start giving out prizes, and our first program, the movie The Incredible Journey, will be on Tuesday. Those whose last name begins with A-M are scheduled to see the 10:00 showing, and N-Zs should come at 2:00. (I've heard scuttlebutt that some kids have already read the amount required to get ALL the prizes. C'mon, guys...I'm in favor of you reading, but get some exercise and sunshine, too!)

We have another display to tell you about. One of my favorite patrons, Cody Hunt is displaying his collection of toy cars and trucks. He has been collecting for about ten years, and his favorite is the Dr. Pepper semi. Cody is the son of Mike and Teresa Richardson, and will be in the sixth grade at Shirley. He lives near the library, so he is frequently seen here with his cousins. His favorite type of reading material? books about cars and trucks, naturally!

YOU are our other display this month. Funny thing about libraries--people get so absorbed in what they're doing that they forget things...like car keys, cards, calculators, coats. We decided to take our accumulation and make a rather intriguing display.

Speaking of intriguing, that's the word that comes to mind when I see the new book by Charlotte MacLeod (writing as Alisa Craig). The jacket notes for The Grub-and Stakers House A Haunt are so weird that it's difficult to describe the book. It has something to do with the ghost of a murdered mule driver and a cache of gold. The character names should give some clue as to the "unusual" nature of the book: Hiram Jellyby, Arethusa Monk, Hedrick Snarf.

Harold Coyle fans will be glad to know his new book is out. The Ten Thousand finds Europe in flames on the heels of revolution, Germany once again the dominant power, and an American army drawn into a real shooting war.

Monday is Flag Day, and what better time to brush up on the history of Old Glory? Stars & Stripes Forever is a brief, but colorful and informative history of the American flag.

For God, Country, and Coca-Cola tells you everything you ever wanted to know about Coke. Subtitled "The Unauthorized History of the Great American Soft Drink and the company that makes it," the book starts at the very beginning, quoting facts, myths, and folklore that surround the "pause that refreshes."

My wife was visiting this week with a friend whose husband is hoping to find a job "someplace where there are trees." We (my wife and I) discussed again how much we love this part of the country. After living elsewhere for a number of years, it was good to return, and I can't help but believe that folks that don't like it here simply haven't looked for the beauty. All that to introduce A Sense of Place: Listening to Americans. In dozens of stories, author David Lamb captures the genuine affection rural Americans have for their "place."

Capt. William Kidd was hanged in London in 1701 after he was convicted of piracy and murder.

The marriage of England's King Henry VIII to Catherine of Aragon was declared null and void in 1533.

Sincerest Appreciation

Friendship House is built with love, and I feel so fortunate to have received all of your expressions of love after my recent accident. Friends have poured out such bountiful cards, visits, messages, flowers and other caring concern. My sincerest appreciation to everyone who has shown me how truly wonderful being loved is. May God bless each of you as you have blessed me.

If mealtime is constant war zone, a finicky preschooler may be around

By MIA B. MOODY
Waco Tribune-Herald
WACO, Texas (AP) - In households where mealtime is a constant war zone, you can almost bet there is a finicky preschooler who is responsible.

Food fights and unclean plates are almost enough to drive parents crazy, but they can be avoided, according to nutritionists who generally agree that parents should not worry too much if their child skips a meal or two.

Mealtime during the second year is often the hardest for children because they are beginning to eat alone and they are trying different types of food.

One of the most common problems among preschoolers is their refusal to eat. Some use it to assert their independence and others just don't like to try new things.

Food jags, or a child's insistence on eating the same thing, is common in children. For some, it is a reflection of their personalities. These are often the same children who may insist on wearing the same favorite shirt or socks for a week at a time.

"They may eat only peanut butter and crackers for several weeks, but it is best to avoid making an issue out of it because it probably will not last long," said Esther Thomas, a McLennan County extension agent. "If your child starts losing weight, though, it's a good idea to give your pediatrician a call."

Jodie McMillan of Woodway, the mother of two children, has learned not to make a big deal out of unclean plates at her house because she knows her 2-year-old eventually will eat.

"We don't force Natalie to eat because hunger takes care of that," she said. "We offer her regular meals and snack time and if she refuses a healthy meal, she gets the same thing offered at the next meal."

McMillan said parents can use mealtime to teach children how to make their own decisions. Choosing what to eat is a child's first attempt to gain independence.

"Hopefully, she (Natalie) will learn to choose healthy foods for herself at an early age," she said. "We don't make a big issue out of it because she needs to learn how to make her own choices."

Thomas, who specializes in family life and resources, said children should not be forced, bribed or punished for not eating. Omitting a meal occasionally will not harm a healthy child.

"When a child does not like a certain food, do not make an issue out of it," she said. "After offering the food for a reasonable length of time, remove it and try serving it a different way on another day."

While children need a balanced diet, that balance need not be present within each meal, as long as things balance out every few days or even weeks, Thomas said. Parents can set a good example by eating foods from each category of the Food Guide Pyramid, she said.

Bernadette Haschke, a Baylor University associate professor and director of the Child Development Laboratory in the home economics department, said some of the old tactics that were used to get children to eat should be eliminated.

For example, parents should not make dessert a reward for eating, she said. If a cookie is a part of dinner, then it should not be used for a reward.

"If a guest came to your house, you would not offer them a cookie for a reward," she said. "We don't treat adults that way, so we shouldn't treat children like that."

She said parents should work on making desserts more nutritious for children. Sugary pies and cakes can be replaced with healthy pudding, fruits other than treats that are lower in sugar than traditional desserts.

Haschke said it is important for parents not to give their children preconceived notions about how something will taste. They may say, "If dad doesn't like it, then I probably won't like it," she said.

One of the most important things for parents to remember is that children are just like adults: They want meals that are attractive and tasty, she said.

"Give them a variety of color, texture and temperature so it looks nice and pleasing to the palate," she said.

MR. AND MRS. DAN VANDER ZEE

Ex-Hereford man wed at Lake Tahoe

Kathy Ann Neu and Richard Daniel Vander Zee, both of DeSoto, exchanged wedding vows May 14 in the Harvey Wedding Chapel at Lake Tahoe, Nev.

Dan, a former resident of Hereford, is the son of Donna and Harlan Vander Zee, now of San Antonio, and the grandson of Dick and Zuleika O'Daniel of Tulia. The bride is the daughter of Carol Manning of DeSoto and Roy Neu of Farmers Branch.

The bride chose an Alfred Angelo gown of slipper satin and embroidery schiffili lace. The fitted bodice of chantilly lace featured a basque waist and sweetheart neckline. The high/low full skirt was finished with beaded schiffili lace. For her head piece, Kathy wore a pearl embellished satin bow.

Kathy graduated from DeSoto High School in 1980. She is presently attending Dallas Baptist College. She works in the magnet division as a procurement assistant for the Superconducting Super Collider.

Dan graduated from Hereford High School in 1974 and from Texas Tech University in 1979. He had been a builder in the Dallas/Fort Worth area for the past 11 years and is the owner of Dynasty Custom Homes.

The couple spent their honeymoon in Lake Tahoe and San Francisco.

Tips to make eating a good experience

WACO, Texas (AP) - Making a pleasant experience out of eating can boost the eating habits a finicky child. County extension agent Esther Thomas offers these tips:

-- Children may lose interest after the first pangs of hunger are satisfied. If they learn that this will make a scene at the table, they may use this as a way of getting attention.

-- Give children a chance to quiet down before mealtime. They cannot enjoy the meal if they are tired or excited.

-- Use child-size dishes and utensils the child can handle. They will enjoy feeding themselves.

-- Allow children some freedom in the choice of food served. This enables them to develop independence and feel grown up like other family members.

-- Give small servings. A plate heaped with food is discouraging to a child. It is better to serve seconds than to have food left on the plate.

-- Do not force-feed children. If they are not hungry, do not make a fuss over it.

-- Serve attractive and colorful foods.

-- Serve foods in a form that children can handle and chew easily.

-- Serve meals at regular times.

-- Allow children to eat by themselves. They will spill food and finger food with their hands, but this is how they learn the feel and texture of foods.

-- Introduce new foods in small amounts along with favorite foods.

-- Have a positive attitude about food. If a child does not like the food, do not make an issue of it. Serve it again in a different way.

-- Don't let the child load up on snacks between mealtimes.

Snyder wedding announced

Tara Dawn Greene and David Wesley Trevey, both of Snyder, were wed June 5 in the First Baptist Church of Snyder. Tara is the daughter of Jack and Charlotte Greene, and David is the son of Ralph and Virginia Trevey, all of Snyder. Tara is the granddaughter of O.G. and Frances Hill, and the late Pat Hill, and the great-granddaughter of the late Bessie Foster Hill, all of Hereford.

Ex-slaves formed Fort Worth church

By JIM JONES
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Fort Worth was a cattle center and outpost on the Chisholm Trail in 1868 when a small group of former slaves began meeting in homes and formed the Morning Chapel Christian Methodist Episcopal Church.
 Many of the African-Americans who formed the congregation, known as the "Old Rock Church on the Corner," are thought to have been cowboys and drovers involved in the cattle business, said Gertrude Johnson, who has delved into her church's history.
 "An estimated one-third of the 35,000 men who drove cattle along the Shawnee, Chisholm, Western and other trails in 1867 were blacks who had learned roping and branding as slaves," she says in a history of the church.
 Other African-Americans were drawn to frontier Fort Worth as they sought new opportunities, Johnson said.
 The pioneer church recently observed its 125th anniversary.
 With limited funds the congregation first purchased property for a frame structure at Sixth and Crump streets. It was replaced by a rock building in 1884, Johnson said.
 But when the Cotton Belt Railroad came through in 1907, the line bought the church's original site. The building was dismantled and rebuilt at the church's present site at Third Street and Crump, Johnson said.
 Norville Stewart, 80, has attended the church since his infancy.
 "It was back in the horse and buggy days that I first remember coming here to church," Stewart said. "There were no cars. My father drove us to church in a buggy from the South Side."
 The Rev. W.E. Stone, pastor for 14 years, said Morning Chapel, which has about 500 members, spawned five other Fort Worth congregations and also set up one of the first schools for African-American children inside its walls.
 Businesses and residential areas surrounded the church.
 "That area was the center of black Fort Worth at one time," Stone said, noting that some members are attempting to designate it as a historical district.
 The Christian Methodist Episcopal

Church, which has 1 million members in the United States, Africa, the Caribbean and elsewhere, was created out of the old, predominantly white Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1870, Stone said.
 Before slaves were freed, blacks who were part of the Methodist Episcopal Church South worshiped with their masters in segregated services. African-American were required to sit in balconies or other sections apart from white worshippers, Stone said.
 "We petitioned to get out of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1866, a year after slavery ended, so we could have some freedom of religious expression," the pastor said. Now the denomination, originally called Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, operated five colleges, including Texas College in Tyler.
 Throughout its history, the denomination, like other predominantly African-American religious groups, has been active in civil-rights efforts.
 As a student at the Interdenominational Theological Center in Atlanta, Ga., Stone marched with civil-rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr. in the Georgia capital; and in Albany, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala.; and other locations.
 Much emphasis is placed on education. The Morning Chapel congregation has a free citywide tutoring program each Saturday, Stone said.
 The congregation was a part of the early history of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church. In fact, the Fort Worth church was created two years before the denomination was officially established in 1870, Stone said.
 It was host for some of the first denomination conference meetings that helped spawn churches in many of the western states, the pastor said. The late Bishop Elias Prophetic Murchinson Jr., the 29th bishop consecrated by the denomination, was born in Fort Worth, and was baptized as a child at Morning Chapel, according to the church history.

Engagement announced

Engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Charlotte Wieck of Amarillo and Chad Strafuss of Hereford have been announced.
 The couple will exchange wedding vows in a ceremony in St. Thomas the Apostle Catholic Church in Amarillo on Sept. 3.
 The bride-elect is the daughter of Jim and Carolyn Wieck of Hartley. The prospective bridegroom's parents are Carl and Joan Strafuss, north of Hereford.
 Miss Wieck earned a degree in finance from West Texas A&M University and is employed by Citizens State Bank.
 Strafuss is engaged in farming and ranching. He attended WTA&MU.

Home delivery of milk stops

By WES REEVES
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Wrigley Field has lights, they've discontinued the Sears catalog and "Cheers" is going off the air. But wait, there's more.

Plains Creamery no longer delivers milk door-to-door in Amarillo. Yes, it's true.

Delivery man Bob Patton cited declining sales brought on by competition from convenience stores and changing lifestyles as reasons for the demise of home delivery and yet another cultural icon - the milkman.

And in the days of computer programmers and consultants of all kinds, the very title of "milkman" is about to join "lamplighter" and other archaic occupations of a bygone era.

"It is something of the past that I believe will be part of our history," said milkman Patton, said to the last of his vocation between Denver and Dallas.

"Unfortunately, we've been the subject of many, many vulgar jokes," he added.

It's hard to understand why, until you stop to think about who it was a milkman used to come into contact to at every stop - the lonely housewife (another word you don't hear so much of anymore).

People and their imaginations. Go figure.

Times have changed, however, and it's doubtful whatever milkmen are left would see anybody but a cat or a dog on their routes.

"In 1964, in 90 percent of the homes in Amarillo, the lady of the house was just a housewife," Patton explained. "Now, in more than 95 percent of the homes, the lady has to work."

Women are mobile now. They're not tied down at the house, and even if they don't work, most have a car of their own in which to go buy milk, said Plains General Sales Manager Frank Jones.

And the fact that a convenience store selling cheap milk is just around every corner nowadays, the need for home milk delivery seems to have evaporated.

But of course, members of some of 300 families along Patton's now-defunct route would argue over that.

Frances Coffey Dement, a regular on the route, said she told Patton on his last milk run in May that "I am nearly 72 years old, and I can't remember when I didn't have a milkman."

So has she ever gone to the store to buy milk?

"In my life, never," Dement said. "That's the truth if I ever told it."

"I'll have to teach myself a new thing," she added.

And so will Patton, who has worked in the milk business off and on since 1964.

For now he will help out at the Plains plant, collecting the last bit of money owed him and the company. After that, he said, it's up to God to show him and his wife, Connie, what to do next.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor
REGAINING RESPONSIBILITY

Recently, on a three-hop flight across Texas, I had an opportunity to read one of my favorite books again. The book is titled, "Seeds of Greatness." The author is Denis Waitley. As I reread Chapter 3, I realized there was a column topic worth writing about.

For some time now I've been concerned about how we Americans fail to take responsibility for our own actions. If we are illiterate, we blame the educational system. If we are poor, we blame the government for not providing wealth for us. If we are lazy, we blame business for failing to provide easy jobs. If we engage in crime, we blame the establishment when we're caught and punished. If we smoke and develop lung cancer, we blame the tobacco company.

It is never our own fault. There is always a reason for our shortcomings or failures. We have forgotten Galatians 6:7, which says that we reap exactly what we sow. We become the sum of our own actions. If we plant seeds of hard work, integrity, perseverance and faith, we will reap a life of prosperity and happiness. If we fail to be responsible, we lose our self-confidence and motivation and become more dependent on others.

Becoming self-reliant

In "Seeds of Greatness," Waitley references a University of California at Berkeley study on self-reliance. The study indicated that the happiest, most well-adjusted individuals were those who believe they have a strong measure of control over their own lives. They are doers who take responsibility for their own actions.

These self-reliant types do not look for someone else to blame for their own troubles. Instead, they analyze and learn from past mistakes. They are people of action. They constantly look for ways to better their situations, rather than looking for someone to blame for them.

They continually set higher standards for their own personal and professional behavior. They are willing to exchange hard work for freedom of choice.

An important characteristic of self-reliant persons is their willingness to postpone ecstasy. They pose self control. They do not jeopardize their credit to drive an exotic new car or to own a home on "mortgage row." They don't buy groceries with their credit cards because they spent their paychecks on lottery tickets.

Waitley's seven c's

Waitley lists what he calls "The Seven C's of Self Control" on pages 90 and 91 of his book. Here is a brief synopsis.

- 1) We control the clock. Waitley says that we can use our time any way we choose. He suggests that as we begin any activity we ask, "Is this the best use of my time?"
- 2) We control concepts. We control our thoughts and creative imaginations. Waitley says that what we think about we become.
- 3) We control our contracts. We determine who we will spend our time with. Waitley suggests finding successful people to use as role models to learn from and share with.
- 4) We control our conversations. Waitley points out that we are in control of what we say and how we say it. He adds a reminder that we can benefit greatly from learning to listen.
- 5) We control our commitments. Waitley says that we are in charge of setting our own pace by what we agree to do for ourselves and others.
- 6) We control our causes. Our goals become our causes, Waitley says. We can gain confidence and courage by striving toward worthy goals.
- 7) We control our concerns. Waitley points out that we can build a self-reliant character by becoming concerned about constructive issues. We should be concerned, but not worried.

If you haven't read "Seeds of Greatness," you will find it helpful. It recently reminded me that I alone am responsible for my own actions. You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," PO Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Reporter shares experience of living with dying husband

EDITOR'S NOTE - The debate over the right-to-die issue has been fueled by activists such as Dr. Jack Kevorkian, the "suicide doctor," and Derek Humphry, author of "Final Exit," a suicide handbook for the terminally ill. Polls show that a majority of Americans favor having some control over how they die. The experience of one reporter and her dying husband shows what they have to fear.

By SHEILA NORMAN-CULP
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Christmas Day, 1990: There was a standoff on the phone as my dying husband grimaced in pain. He needed more morphine.

Still, I would have to break the law to get it.

I called the hospital, but everyone I knew was off for the holiday. The doctor in charge was reluctant.

"How much is he getting now?" he asked. I could hear him thumbing through Paul's hospital charts.

I told him. There was silence on the line.

"That's a lethal dose," he said. My reply was unprintable. Paul had been on that dose for two days.

In the movies, bad guys die violently, good guys die peacefully in their sleep. Real life is not so kind.

It took 10 days for Paul to die at home after his doctors discharged him, finally admitting what they had denied for months: They had failed to stop the cancer that began in his esophagus and spread to his stomach.

Ten days of vomiting up bloody bile into a cleaning bucket hour after hour. Ten days of sitting propped up on a bed, unable to lie down, unable to eat, wrapped in diapers. Ten days of waiting for the next hit of morphine.

Ten days - an eternity - of seeing the pain of his impending death reflected in our eyes.

Paul died this way because I did not have the heart to smother him, a gun to give him or sleeping pills that he could keep down. I had nothing to help me help him die, and I was afraid of being charged with murder or losing custody of my 2½-year-old daughter.

Despite being raised a Catholic, I believed in mercy killing and had felt that Karen Ann Quinlan's family had the right to take her off life support systems. My mother, a health care lawyer, had helped us write up a living will for Paul that instructed doctors not to needlessly prolong his life.

But that was all in theory. Few 32-year-olds think hard about death.

Frantic on that Christmas Day, I called a nurse who had given me her home phone number. Risking her job, she helped me break the computer code on the home-care pump that regulated the flow of morphine into Paul's body. We raised the dosage more than 30 percent.

Relief flooded Paul's features. His last 24 hours were now bearable.

The doctor called back later to permit a lower dosage.

Past the pain, we still faced the home stretch. Like thousands of others before us, we had traveled through the five stages of death so aptly defined by Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross: denial, anger, bargaining, depression, acceptance. To her list we would add another: exhaustion. Paul was exhausted with living, and I was exhausted with the crisis of his death.

It didn't start out this way. Nine months earlier, when doctors found a little lump in Paul's esophagus, they told us to think of it as "a nuisance." They promised he would be back to work by September.

Only 39 and a former world-class rower, Paul was seen as a perfect candidate to beat the rap, to show off their latest cancer-fighting techniques.

We viewed his treatment as a summer off, a chance to play in the sun with our child, a solution to his recent susceptibility to the flu. We walked into a nightmare like we were going to be a picnic.

We ended up deeply angry at the medical community for not even mentioning the most likely scenario, that Paul might have a year or less to live.

But the journey that bruised us also brought us grace. It's impossible to ignore the power of love when you are tested so harshly.

The first inkling I had that our lives had spun out of control was in early November, when I handed the living will to doctors on Paul's hospital floor.

One shook, and tried not to cry. When I pressed, he said Paul, with his strong heart and lungs, could possibly live 30 years or more on life support. He was shaking with relief that I had done the right thing.

After nearly three months in the hospital, Paul's brother and I bought him home in an ambulance on Monday, Dec. 17, 1990.

The week before had been traumatic. I heard from the nurses, not the doctors, that Paul was being released. Our one-bedroom apartment in Hoboken, N.J., had to be readied, a hospital bed ordered, furniture moved out. Medical supply trucks arrived daily, filling the refrigerator with bags of morphine and intravenous liquid nutrition.

The living room overflowed with boxes of needles, syringes and plastic tubing. Friends sent over inflatable mattresses for visiting relatives to sleep on.

Paul was happy to be home but frightened by a new routine, glad to see loved ones but horrified by the realization that this time the goodbyes would be permanent.

Hardest of all was sending our daughter away.

"Remember, Daddy loves you," Paul said softly as he kissed our Kelly goodbye. Eager for Christmas, she skipped off to the taxi holding her grandmother's hand.

A home nurse came. She was kind, she was quiet, but she knew nothing of the liquid nutrition that Paul depended on each day, and having a stranger in our tiny apartment was too much for me. We asked her not to come back.

A routine of sorts developed, aided by Paul's relatives and mine. Then the next plague struck. Paul's legs, swelled to elephantine proportions by kidney failure, began leaking fluid. Sweat dripped from every pore in his legs. By Christmas Day it turned into a torrent.

No laundromats were open that day in Hoboken, and friends who had washing machines were out of town. After an hour, the sheets and bedding were soaked and Paul shivered from the cold.

We cranked up the heat and changed the bedding.

First he went through four sets of sheets. Then the blankets. Then the towels. Then anything - like sweat shirts - that resembled a towel. Then cotton T-shirts. A pile of laundry - sodden and smelling of decay - bloomed in the corner.

I lost it in the kitchen.

"I can't take this anymore!" I railed at my younger brother. "I don't want him to die but I can't take this anymore!"

My brother stood mute. To this day we have not spoken of that time.

My parents called Christmas night. Mom wanted to know how things were. Dad was full of a new proposal: We should fly to their house in Rochester, N.Y., where he would hire a nurse and we could all be together.

Paul had been stricken in the prime of his life, and they worried that his death could take months.

It would not.

As we sat together that night, Paul asked if the doctors had given me a pill for him. I said no. He wished out-loud for the handgun he had bought illegally in Chinatown for a friend last year. I said I could not take the sight of him that way.

"Don't worry, Ducky," he promised. "It will be tonight. I know it."

We talked about me smothering him with a pillow. But we rejected it, as we had years before when his mother was dying from cancer. Paul was afraid of punching me in panic as he scrambled for air.

I was afraid of the law. An autopsy was planned to determine whether Paul's cancer was genetic or related to work he did as a graduate physics student at a nuclear plant. Smothering could easily be found out and mercy killers were being vigorously prosecuted.

It was time for bed, time for me to hook Paul up to the bag of liquid food that kept him alive.

New procedure allows autistic teen to have 'normal' lifestyle

By BRIDGET KNIGHT
Wichita Falls
Times-Record-News

WINDTHORST, Texas (AP) - Bugging his parents, surfing through the television dial - "normal kid stuff" is slowly entering Dan Conrady's life.

A year ago, "normal" was the last thing imaginable to his parents, Ted and Deedy Conrady of Windthorst.

Since birth, Dan, now 13, had exhibited many of the behaviors associated with autism, an ill-defined malady affecting 4.5 out of every 10,000 people in the United States.

The condition had left Danny unable to speak or communicate with his family, and aggressive toward himself. And there was another problem they had noticed, one that no one seemed to know what to do about.

"Certain sounds - certain frequencies - really bothered him, especially the baby calves bellowing. This is a child who has a very high threshold of pain and baby calves make him cry. It's a physical pain. And here we are on a dairy. Every time you walk out the door you hear that sound," said Deedy Conrady.

But the Conradys weren't the only ones who had noticed the strange hearing problems of people like Dan, as well as a percentage of those afflicted by a form of dyslexia and a host of other attention disorders.

Dr. Guy Berard, a French physician, had stumbled upon an incredibly simple, yet revolutionary system to "retrain" the hearing of autistics using filtered and modulated music. He called the procedure Auditory Integration Training, a system whose results last year caught the attention of producers of the ABC television show "20/20."

"Ted and I were in different rooms, both watching the program, and he walked into the kitchen and said, 'We're going to Portland,' where they were doing it," she said.

Instead, Mrs. Conrady made a telephone call to the Autism Research Institute, hoping that "maybe there'd be someone in Dallas or Oklahoma City."

As luck would have it, they didn't even have to go that far. One of the 150 people trained to administer the treatment - speech pathologist Ron Bender - was sitting right in Wichita Falls.

Bender explained that promising results are coming from the 10-day treatment, even though no one is sure why or how it works. Patients first have a special hearing test, which charts their sensitivity to a range of sound frequencies. Hypersensitivity shows up as peaks on the graph.

That information is then fed into the Audiokintron Ears Education and Retraining System, a device developed by Bernard. The machine modulates the volume of music while filtering out those frequencies that cause pain. After 10 days of twice-daily, half-hour listening sessions, the hypersensitivity disappears in a large number of patients.

"After the procedure, you have kind of leveled the hearing to where everything that comes in is perceived on the same level. ... What some people have theorized is that the ears get used to hearing sound that is not painful, so it relaxes, but we really don't know what is happening," he said.

While the procedure is certainly not a cure, said Bender, it has shown amazing results, even in those who had not previously been known to have hearing hypersensitivity. In some cases, he said, patients released from a thundering world seem to "wake up" to their surroundings. Aggressive behaviors and distractibility decrease markedly. Some are able to walk for the first time, or as in Danny's case, make their first attempts at speech.

"Dan just seems to be a happier child," said his mother. "Really subtle differences, but important ones. The calves don't bother him now, so he wants to go with his dad to feed or do work around the dairy. And he's verbalizing a lot more - trying to say more and more words."

At school, Dan now is far less aggressive and rarely gets upset. And his father's television channel surfing, which once sent him dashing from the room, is now one of his favorite pastimes.

Bender looks at Dan Conrady as only the beginning. Researchers are now pondering not only why the procedure gets results, but whether its principles might be used to treat hypersensitivity in smell, sight or other senses.

"I feel like we're definitely on the ground floor of something very exciting. It's not a cure - emphasize that - but it's opening doors. We're bringing a lot of these people back toward normal. It's a very important discovery."

Some Of The Best Recovery Rooms Aren't Located In Any Hospital.

Simply put, there's no place like home. And increasingly, health care professionals are recognizing the unique advantages afforded by home health care.

In-home covered services include everything from Nursing and Physical Therapy to Medical Social Services, offering the best in both worlds. The comfort, convenience and familiarity of a home setting are irreplaceable in the recovery process. At the same time, these experienced professionals can provide a range of medical services which were previously restricted to a clinical setting. Best of all, a typical home health visit costs one-tenth the price of an average day in the hospital, making it an invaluable asset.

14-year-old struggles to overcome anorexia nervosa

By JENNY STRASBURG
San Angelo Standard-Times
SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) - Without exception, 14-year-old Nicole begins her morning routine by stepping on the bathroom scale.

She hopes the number will be higher than the day before - even if just a few ounces - not because she really wants to gain pounds but because she knows her survival depends on it.

Nicole (not her real name) was diagnosed with anorexia nervosa about five months ago, when she joined an estimated 8 million Americans, mostly women, who suffer from eating disorders.

But in hindsight, Nicole traces the disorder back several years.

Nicole is an "A" student who would spend her days on the back of a horse if she could. She says she'll overcome anorexia because the alternative is so grim.

The teen looks taller than her 5 feet. That's because at 73 pounds, she's still a solid 30 pounds under the recognized "normal" weight for females her height.

Height-weight norms commonly are used by the insurance industry. According to MetLife Insurance Company, for example, Nicole should weigh at least 104 pounds.

To this pensive eighth-grader, 104 seems like a lifetime away. Her goal for the coming months is 90 pounds.

One pound at a time. "I don't eat a whole lot. I don't eat enough to keep me alive. I eat a real small amount."

Nicole enumerates her downfalls with clinical objectiveness. If convincing herself to eat were as easy as talking about it, she'd be well on her way to recovery.

"Like I've told my friends, I've always been underweight," Nicole says.

She remembers her turning point: moving from Albuquerque, N.M., to San Angelo about three years ago.

"I loved it there and didn't want to leave. I wasn't expecting the news and all the sudden found out I was moving, which didn't make me very happy. I got really depressed."

Nicole had a difficult time making friends because she dwelled on the people she had left behind in New Mexico.

That's when she began to scrutinize the details of her body. Looking in the mirror, Nicole envisioned pounds that didn't exist.

"I didn't worry about feeling fat until I got closer to my teen-age years," she explains. "When I started worrying about it, I started seeing myself as fat."

She became repulsed by food and ate less and less as a result. Her caloric intake plummeted to dangerous levels, and she grew indifferent to meals, even those that used to be her favorites.

"I never felt hungry," she says. "My stomach just continued to shrink, and I didn't have much of an appetite at all."

"I'd eat about a half of a half of a sandwich for lunch, not much for dinner, and I was lucky if you got a waffle down me for breakfast."

Nicole's mother says her daughter was "sick all of the time." Her white blood count - a key indication of the body's ability to fight disease - was half of what it should have been.

Nicole remembers feeling weak but says she didn't realize how drained she was until she started eating again. She hasn't regained her childhood appetite by any stretch of the imagination, but she's doing better.

"Even though I still am (weak) now, I'm not as fatigued as I was," she says.

Nicole insists her primary motivation for self-starvation wasn't weight loss. She says, rather, that she honestly believed she was eating enough.

But she also admits that societal pressures to be thin were - and continue to be - a factor in her illness.

"Some of it comes from within me, but some of it also comes from hearing about and seeing all these thin models and girls around school. It seems like there's a real push to be thin."

Nicole tries, but fails, to see herself that way.

"I feel that parts of my body are fat. That's my perception and that's the perception of a lot of people with anorexia. My thighs still look fat to me."

"I look at myself, I look in the mirror, and I see that my thighs are huge."

Nicole, sitting on the couch in her living room, folds her hands on her lap. It's a meager lap by most standards, and her legs are gaunt.

She talks openly - when she doesn't feel threatened - about her anorexia. She has told a handful of friends so that they will be aware of her struggles and help her when she needs strength.

"It was getting to be a mess to have to step around (the topic)," she explains. "I knew (my friends) wouldn't tell (other people) and would give me support."

"It was no big deal." What Nicole seems to want most of all is to see the 14-year-old everybody else sees.

"Everybody can tell me (otherwise), but I'll still see my thighs the same. It's the same thing with what I eat. I think I'm eating a lot and I'm really not."

She speaks with measured pride about school and the high grades she consistently earns. She aspires to a career as a genetic engineer.

Nicole wishes she could control her appetite the way she controls the outcome of her eighth-grade science and math tests - with self-discipline and realism.

"A lot of times (doctors) have told me that I'm subconsciously trying to lose weight," she says, frustrated. "They tell me something inside of me is making me lose the weight."

"I don't necessarily agree," Nicole adds. "I'm not trying to lose weight."

Recently, Nicole completed several weeks of inpatient treatment at a Dallas psychiatric hospital. While she was away, her parents visited her on the weekends.

She and her mother speak gratefully of the hospital's program and the atmosphere of acceptance there. It wasn't until she got away from her family, in fact, that Nicole fully admitted to being sick.

She would demand that her parents quit insisting she had a problem.

"I'm still living. Don't worry about me. Why is everybody so worried about me, but me?"

Even in the hospital, Nicole didn't gain weight for at least two weeks. When she left, she was 10 pounds closer to her goal.

"I had a lot of friends there, even though I missed home," she says. "I kind of felt like I had a family there, so that was when I started getting better."

But she lost five of those hard-earned 10 pounds her first week back in San Angelo. Nicole says she'd do a lot better in San Angelo if she could find a support group like the one in Dallas.

Nicole has a heart condition - a valve prolapse - that occasionally allows blood to enter her heart when it shouldn't. Her mother says the condition is not serious right now but can be complicated by other health problems resulting from anorexia.

Fortunately, Nicole has no bulimic tendencies. A person with bulimia nervosa repeatedly binges and purges through self-induced vomiting.

Nicole says she has never been tempted to make herself throw up to lose weight.

But every day, Nicole goes to the dinner table knowing how much she must eat to avoid being disappointed when she steps on the bathroom scale the next morning. She loves sweets but has to limit her intake of "fake weight."

"I know I need a certain amount of weight to live," she says. "I get mad at myself for not finishing" a meal.

She can't afford to get much exercise, which burns calories more quickly than she can replace them.

"Right now, I'm just doing P.E. (at school) and walking around my school every day," she explains.

The disease is an ongoing series of ups and downs.

"I know I don't want to get fat, but I worry about getting fat," she says.

Besides her weight, Nicole's confidence and self-esteem also fluctuate regularly.

"I guess you could say I'm consciously watching myself. With every pound I gain, I'm worrying: 'Omigosh, I'm blimping out.'"

Nicole pauses, re-adjusts her eyeglasses and searches for words to describe what's happening to her.

Smiling faintly, she explains where her energy to keep trying comes from. "I have to, because I have death staring me in the face. That's basically what keeps me going."

"If I don't keep going with this program, if I don't keep gaining weight, I'm going to die."

NBC bets on property values of 'South Beach'

NBC's new Tuesday series "South Beach" stars (clockwise from top) Yancy Butler, John Glover, Patti D'Arbanville and Eagle Eye Cherry as fashion plates involved with the dealings of a mysterious government agency in the glamorous South Beach section of Miami.

BY DAN RICE

NBC's new Tuesday companion series for its revamped "Route 66" promises a return of sorts to the glamorous haunts known to devotees of "Miami Vice," with a more feminine twist.

"South Beach" stars Yancy Butler (the robotic policewoman of last year's "Mann & Machine") as Kate Patrick, a con artist living by her wits in the trendy South Beach section of Miami. A new degree of trouble enters her life when she is contacted by Roberts (John Glover), an operative for a mysterious federal agency. He tells Kate that her brother, Andy (Rob Knepper), has been working under cover for him and has pocketed a cache of diamonds stolen from the Russian government. Roberts has a file on Kate's criminal activities, and he gives her the option of retrieving the gems or going to jail.

So begins Kate's reluctant exploits on the shady side of the law. Roberts arranges lodgings for her at the Red Sands Hotel, where she can be watched by its bohemian proprietor Roxanne (Patti D'Arbanville). Kate is also supplied a partner in her assignment, Vernon (Eagle Eye Cherry), a streetwise agent in dreadlocks. She follows Roberts' dictum in order to save her brother and maintain her freedom, but the methods she employs are entirely her own, often to the displeasure of her icy boss.

Speaking from the set where he is working on the series' sixth episode, Glover says the South Beach area, a showcase of art deco architecture, is an interesting setting for a dramatic series.

"The producers, Dick Wolf and his gang, feel that [the area has] a heterogeneous mix of Europeans, of South Americans, the Cuban influence, the fashion world and, of course, the retirees who are down here. So they felt that shooting the series here, plus the way the place looks, and the way the light and the climate is, it would be a very exciting place to look at and draw upon for a lot of different stories, because there's so many varied kinds of people here.

"The visual thing is very, very important. The woman who has done all the clothes is named Patricia Fields, who has a quite stunning line of women's clothes. And then there's a guy named Mark Harrington, who's done all the sets, and the cinematographer, Felix Alcalá, has got an eye to top all of theirs. So those three elements have made South Beach the other character in the piece. It's quite an amazing look that they've created for everything down here."

Glover says that in the second episode, airing Tuesday, June 15, Roberts sends Kate and another operative on a case involving political graft. "In the series, I

NEW YORK (AP) - The crew for the new TV series "Trailside: Make Your Own Adventure" is ready to film the show's host. Somebody shouts, "Bring in the AHB."

In walks John Viehman, 39, the "average human being."

The 13-part series, to be seen on PBS-TV stations, starts in July, with mountain biking in Utah. Later comes sea kayaking in Baja California, rock climbing in California's Joshua Tree National Monument, and wet-weather camping in El Yunque Rain Forest in Puerto Rico.

As the series moves through hiking, canoeing, snowshoeing, nature photography, and the rest, Viehman (pronounced VEE-man) and an expert perform the activity of the week. Viehman, in the role of viewers' friend, also queries the expert for how-to tips.

The series has a simple message, he says: "You can do it."

"The person who doesn't know anything about it is the person we're trying to address," Viehman says. "They're not going to learn everything they need to know in half an hour. What we're trying to do is motivate them."

"With the rock climbing show, you might think, 'With a little bit of practice I could be where the experts are,' or you might think, 'When I'm out hiking and want to try some of this, it's not that far out of my reach.'

"Getting you away from the TV set. Getting you outdoors. That's our goal."

Viehman has never worked in television before but has enjoyed outdoor activities since he was a Boy Scout in Owatonna, Minn.

"I don't pretend to be the best at any of these disciplines," he says.

In the first show, he had ride a nonmotorized mountain bike on old mining roads in canyon land, looking into the camera to talk instead of watching where he was going. His 5-year-old daughter commented, "You almost fell down."

"In climbing," he says, "I take a couple of wingers. That's climber talk for falling off the face of a rock. You fall 5 or 10 feet. You're on a rope. I'm not without a few slip-ups here and there."

"I'm the average human being." Viehman, who has a degree in journalism, has been executive editor of Backpacker magazine since 1988. He edited and published Canoe magazine for nine years.

In mid-May, Viehman was off to Puerto Rico to hike and camp in the rain, for the fourth "adventure."

"I wanted to make sure we had a show that dealt with how to stay comfortable in rain," Viehman says. "Rain turns a lot of people off. They go out, get cold or wet and may not go out again."

"Bad weather makes a trip more memorable sometimes. The best trip stories come out of ones when you had to deal with foul weather and twists of fate you didn't anticipate."

To make sure they'd have rain when they needed it, Viehman and crew went to a rain forest in Puerto Rico.

"A dwarf forest down there will be an interesting natural feature to talk about," he says. "And creepy-crawly things. You've got to be careful where you step."

There's only one adventure the AHB says he's leary about. That's exploring the Organ Caves in West Virginia.

"I haven't been in a deep cave," he says. "The idea of going down inside the bowels of the earth where it's wet and dark is not the most appealing idea."

Viehman and his wife went kayaking on their second date. "She liked kayaking and I liked her. The rest is a marriage."

They now live on a farm near Emmaus, Pa., with daughters ages 5 and 1.

"You can take infants camping, something my wife hasn't fully bought into," he says. "It's one of our 5-year-old's favorite things."

"The activity I like to do most with my daughter is river canoeing. It's less physically demanding than hiking for the child. There's nothing better than seeing your child doze as you paddle along. It's one of those warm, fuzzy things you don't forget as a parent."

"Trailside: Make Your Own Adventure" is produced by New Media in association with Backpacker magazine.

Viehman has edited two books in connection with the series, "Trailside's Hints and Tips for Outdoor Adventure" and "Trailside's Trail Food." He already has plans for next season, including backcountry trekking with llamas and hut-to-hut hiking in Europe.

For those who think there are already too many people tramping through the wilderness and it's wrong to encourage more, Viehman says, "On the show, we tell people how to keep their impact to a minimum. We tell how to clean dishes and about personal hygiene."

"We say, 'This is a place you don't make fires' and 'You don't walk on this kind of fragile soil.'" continually test her, I'm pushing and pushing and pushing, which I feel is my trying to strengthen her, because I was a criminal once myself, now I'm the head of this organization."

Glover, who previously has had memorable character roles in telefilms including "A Season of Giants" and "An Early Frost" and the feature films "Annie Hall" and "52 Pick-Up," finds that his two-day-a-week schedule on the series permits time for other pursuits, including volunteer work with local kindergartners, which was inspired by President Clinton's call for service to the community.

"It's also giving something back to me," Glover says. "I walk in the class, and in five minutes I understand why I'm there. It's amazing what I'm getting out of it myself."

'Angels' regain spritual values

NEW YORK (AP) - Here's a show that, like most things on TV, deals with winning and losing.

But on "In the Wings: Angels in America on Broadway," which airs Friday at 10 p.m. EDT on PBS, winners and losers co-exist in an unusual mix.

In the winner's column, first and foremost, is the play "Angels in America," Broadway's newest darling, on which this "Great Performances" documentary focuses.

Also among the winners is playwright Tony Kushner, who won this year's drama Pulitzer Prize and, Sunday, picked up the Tony Award for his epic of politics, sexuality and religion in the Reagan-Bush years.

Viewers, too, come out ahead. The hour serves as a crash course in what's hot on Broadway and in the arts. It gives a useful once-over as to what this mammoth play is about (only Part I, itself 3 1/2-hours long, has yet opened in New York; the second half arrives in the fall). And the program is an opportunity to think about, and re-think, the issues "Angels" explores.

Losing big, nobly and otherwise, are the victims of AIDS, whom the play examines with passion, insight and even brave humor. And don't forget the battered survivors of the '80s, a period the pleasant but plain-spoken Kushner brands "a benchmark of evil."

Filmmaker Tom Bywater's "Angels" documentary provides a glimpse at production meetings, rehearsals and scenes from the play. Also stirred in are interviews with Kushner, director George C. Wolfe, and the able cast, headed by Ron Leibman as the outrageous and loathsome attorney Roy Cohn.

Leibman, a veteran Broadway actor and star of two short-lived TV series, has emerged as another "Angels" winner: Millions of viewers saw him Sunday as he gratefully received the Best Actor Tony, then called down to his wife in the audience that "maybe we can get an apartment with a washer and drier now."

A few minutes later, Leibman reappeared on stage, in costume, to re-enact a portion of the scene in which the megabully Cohn learns he has lost life's upper hand to AIDS - and rabidly denies to his doctor that he is a homosexual.

"It was fast-moving. I'll tell you that, to get ready to do that scene," Leibman said the next day. "It was a complete mood change. I had to REALLY focus, 'cause I knew it was going out across America."

America gets another look at that scene on Friday's documentary:

"Homosexuals are men who know nobody and who nobody knows, who have zero clout!" Cohn screeches. "Does this sound like me?"

Despite its rage, "Angels" overall is a warm and uplifting work, something the documentary isn't totally successful in conveying with what are disjointed on-stage vignettes.

But comments from members of the well-spoken company drive home the notion that, more than an "AIDS play," "Angels" is about regaining spiritual values and bringing people together. All people.

"When we talk about AIDS, homophobia, repression, oppression of certain groups, it doesn't just affect the oppressed groups - we're all bound together," says Jeffrey Wright, who plays the gay nurse Belize. "We're all linked to each other's problems - and to each other's virtues as well."

HIGHLIGHTS

On Sunday, June 13, TNT unleashes its two-and-a-half-hour adaptation of Mary Shelley's immortal horror tale, "Frankenstein," starring Patrick Bergin as Dr. Victor Frankenstein, the scientist bent on creating life, and Randy Quaid as his monstrous invention. John Mills (pictured), appears as the blind man DeLacey, who shows the monster compassion. The film was written, produced and directed by David Wickes, whose previous efforts include the telefilm "Jekyll and Hyde" and the Emmy-winning miniseries "Jack the Ripper."

Magenta De Vine and Rajan Datar quell the wanderlust of the MTV generation in the hip British travel show "Rough Guides," which begins Monday on PBS. In the first episode, they visit the hot spots in Australia.

'Rough Guide' offers travel for a younger generation

BY SCOTT WHITE

There's a big, colorful world out there, and there are certainly more ways to enjoy it than from the decks of luxury liners and the balconies of posh hotels. There's also a middle ground of popular culture one doesn't see when hacking through the jungle with a machete in search of a lost tribe or a rare animal. PBS travel documentaries are notorious for exploring one extreme or the other, targeting the highest or lowest points of a country while ignoring the lifestyles of its residents. However, the loud voice of young progressives who want to see what's really unique or bizarre in the world has been heard. Beginning Monday, June 14, PBS presents eight episodes of "Rough Guide," a weekly alternative travel program from Britain. In faraway locales such as Indonesia, Zimbabwe and Taiwan, hosts Magenta De Vine and Rajan Datar examine subjects like ceremonial tooth filing, rap jumping (rappelling reversed); you really must see it to understand) and barber-shops that double as brothels. "We deal with lighthearted stuff," says

De Vine, "like how you can get your hair cut by a transvestite in Taiwan or how to castrate a poor sheep in Australia. We're also dealing with serious issues which most travelogues just wouldn't bother with." Indeed, "Rough Guide" delves into controversial subject matter with as much zeal as it does lighter fare. Tougher topics include Hawaii's drug problem, Mafia activity in Sicily and racial prejudice directed toward Greeks and aboriginal people in Australia. "I think it would have been irresponsible of us," says Datar, "to just cruise around ignoring the kind of inequities and colonialism that influenced most of the world. Obviously, each country has its own kind of racism or inequality. I don't think we're ashamed of being repetitive about that sort of thing." Unfortunately, the pacing of "Rough Guides" is just too brisk. Many of the topics are quite interesting and beg to be fleshed out. Apparently, the producers credit their target audience of 16- to 24-year-olds with the attention span of a distracted puppy.

TRIVIA QUIZ

A test for monster memory

BY STEVEN ALAN MCGAW

On Sunday, June 13, TNT unveils its new version of "Frankenstein," starring Randy Quaid. Test your Frankenstein IQ with these.

Questions:

1. Name the well-known inventor who filmed the first movie version of Mary Shelley's tale in 1910.
2. Bela Lugosi declined the role of the monster in the 1931 "Frankenstein." Name the other familiar performer who turned it down. (Hint: 30 years later, he also opted not to play Herman Munster.)
3. Who played the obsessive scientist in 1977's "Frankenstein: The True Story?"
4. This actor appeared in 1948's "Hamlet" and "Star Wars" in 1977. In between (1957, to be exact), he took the title role in "The Curse of Frankenstein." Name him.
5. Actor Glenn Strange played the monster three times between 1944 and 1948. On what long-running TV series did he later become a regular?

Answers:

1. Thomas Edison.
 2. John Carradine.
 3. David McCallum.
 4. Peter Cushing.
 5. In 1962, Strange signed on as Sam the bartender on "Gunsmoke."

MOVIES ON TV

'Stella Dallas,' 'Brides of Christ' shine in a sea of glum movies

BY SCOTT WHITE

"Face of a Stranger," on CBS Sunday, June 13, features Gena Rowlands as a sheltered socialite whose perspective is broadened by her encounter with a homeless woman, played by Tyne Daly. Randy Quaid lumbers through a tolerable reworking of "Frankenstein" on TNT; Patrick Bergen and John Mills co-star as the doctor and the compassionate blind man. Academy Award-winner Brenda Fricker plays Sister Agnes, an Australian nun struggling to cope with the sweeping reforms made in the Catholic Church of the early 1960s in "Brides of Christ" on A&E. This six-hour miniseries continues through Tuesday. Meredith Baxter-Birney plays a mother who continues her affair with a married doctor while her family falls apart in "Burning Bridges" on ABC.

On Monday, June 14, Jodie Foster stars as a suicidal free spirit in 1988's moving "Stealing Home" on ABC. Mark Harmon and Blair Brown co-star. A woman is stalked by her hus-

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Viewers loved her as Ashley on "The Young and the Restless" and Kelly on "Santa Barbara," and now they can see popular daytime actress Eileen Davidson as Kristen on "Days of Our Lives."

"It all happened out of the blue," says Davidson. "One Tuesday my agent called and said 'Days' wanted me to start on Thursday. There was no audition, no interview, it was great. The people here are wonderful."

Davidson's character interacts most closely with John Black, who's portrayed by Drake Hogestyn. The actress didn't have an opportunity to make a screen test with Hogestyn before her first day of work, but she says it didn't really matter. "I love Drake," Davidson says. "He's funny and very professional, and he knows everything about everything. It's like I'm getting an education every day. He knows all about science, animals, gardening and baseball. He has more stories ... every day is like a new adventure. He's amazing."

For her own part, Davidson surprised fans and fellow actors when she walked away from the popular role of Ashley on "Y&R," but she says it was something she had to do.

"I started on 'Y&R' when I was 22, and I was feeling stifled after six-and-a-half years," says the actress. "At the time I needed to do something different, even if it was nothing. I did worry that I might never work again."

"I needed to face certain things in my life about who I am and what really makes me happy. I've done that in the last four years, and it has been a learning experience that is priceless."

"Now I've done prime time and movies, and I'm more appreciative of the daytime [television scene]. A Martinez ['SB', 'L.A. Law'] and I have talked about this a lot, and you get so much more out of daytime than the other mediums."

"This character has so many levels, and there are more dimensions to her than what I've done in the past. Kristen is interesting and challenging. We'll have to see how things go."

TICK REPELLENT

Double Duty Protection

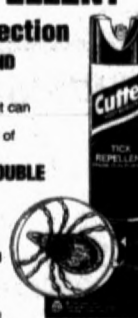

SURE PROFITS AGAINST SUMMER AND FALL'S BIGGEST HEALTH THREAT!

PROBLEM: Ixodes Dammini - A small tick that can inflict a big problem - Lyme Disease
SOLUTION: Use Cutter Tick Repellent as part of Protect and Check Program

CUTTER TICK REPELLENT OFFERS DOUBLE DUTY PROTECTION AGAINST TICKS

In recent months the national media has addressed a growing concern regarding the spread of Lyme Disease, a potentially serious and debilitating disease that is transmitted and spread by an incredible small woodlands and grasslands tick. Health officials and the Lyme Borreliosis Foundation recommend the use of repellents containing DEET in conjunction with other simple precautions to maximize protection against ticks. Cutter Tick Repellent contains the most effective tick-fighting ingredient you can wear and spray on both skin and clothing. CUTTER TICK REPELLENT is specially formulated to offer double duty protection against ticks.

ADAMS HARD-FACING CO.

ADAMS Wheatland Sweeps are manufactured from 1080 high carbon steel, heat-treated and oil quenched for extra wear and durability. All ADAMS Wheatland Sweeps have flanged shanks with the flange extending into the body to the sweep for additional strength to the sweep. Most Wheatland sweeps are offered in either "medium" or "low" crown, with the low crown sweep usually being requested where minimal soil movement is desired.
