Clinton OKs defense bill

President decries AIDS provision

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton signed the $265 billion defense bill into law today while condemning as "blatantly discriminatory" its requirement that service members living with the AIDS virus be discharged.

Administration officials say, however, that if the provision is not repealed by Congress or thrown out by the Supreme Court by the time it takes effect in six months, the Pentagon will have no choice but to enforce it.

But Clinton said he strongly supports efforts in Congress "to repeal this provision before a single service member is discharged from the service."

"This provision is blatantly discriminatory and highly punitive to service members and their families," the president said in a statement.

"People living with HIV (the virus that causes AIDS) can and do lead full and productive lives, provide for their families, and contribute to the well being of our nation," Clinton said.

"The men and women affected by this provision are ready, willing and able to serve their country with honor and should be allowed to continue to do so."

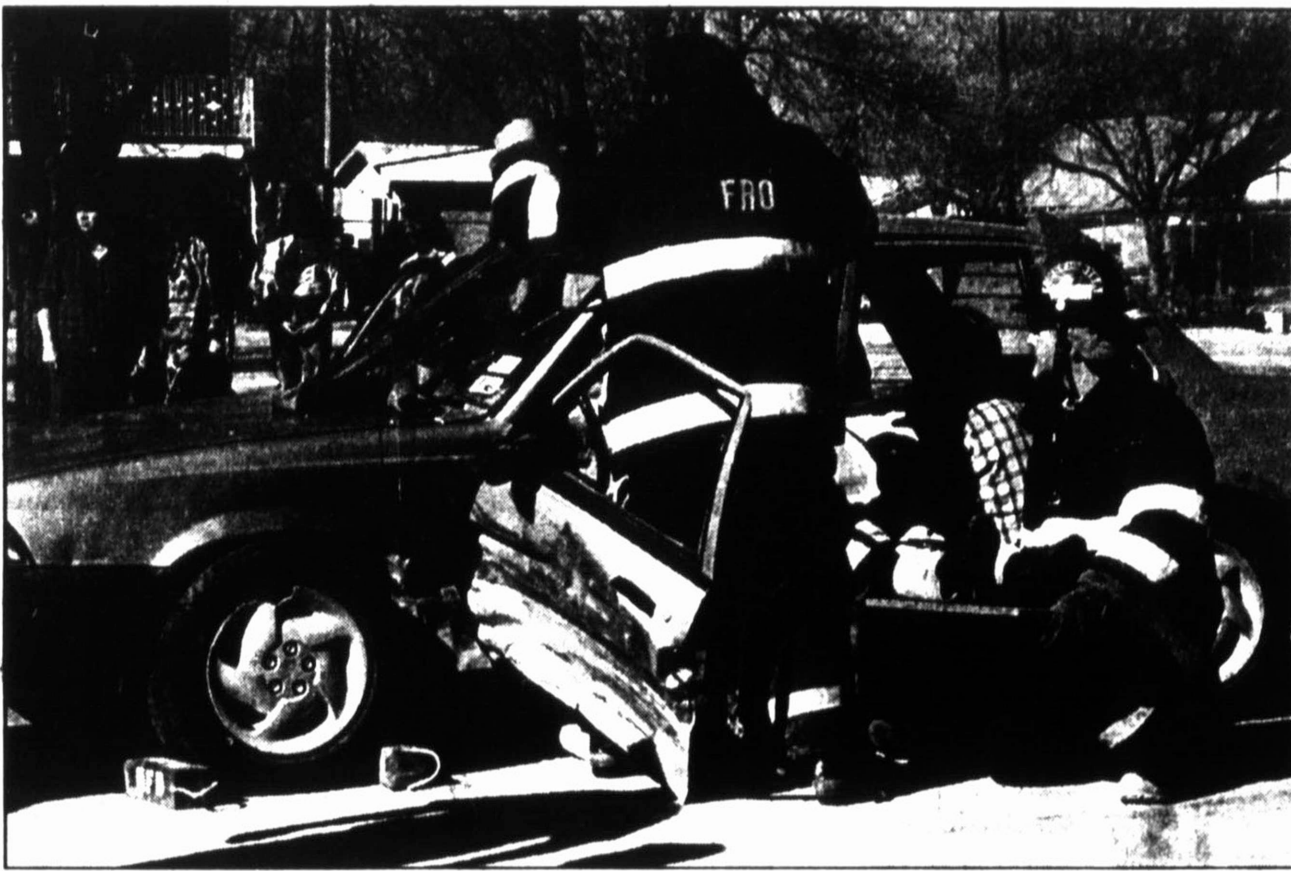

Briefing reporters on Friday, White House counsel Jack Quinn said: "This provision, in the president's judgment, is mean-spirited and serves no purpose other than to punish people who deserve the government's help, not its hatred."

Clinton believes the AIDS provision, placed in the bill by Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., is unconstitutional and discriminatory, Quinn said.

Acting on that belief, Clinton instructed Attorney General Janet Reno not to defend the AIDS provision as constitutional in any court test.

Nonetheless, the administration made clear that if the AIDS language is neither repealed nor found unconstitutional by the courts, the Accident scene

Hereford volunteer firefighters help paramedics remove Mary Lucero Villarreal, 39, of Bovina, from her 1992 Chevrolet Cavalier after it was involved in a two-vehicle accident here on Friday. The wreck occurred at about 11:30 a.m. at Fifth Street and U.S. 385. According to reports, Villarreal was traveling west on Fifth and attempted to turn south on U.S. 385, cutting in front of a 1989 Cavalier driven by Lydia Zapata Castro, 24, of Hereford. Both drivers and a passenger in the Castro car, Ruby Castro, 1-1/2, of Hereford, were taken by ambulance to Hereford Regional Medical Center where they were all treated and released. Villarreal was cited to failure to yield right of way at stop sign.

FCC facing 80 rules for telecom law

WASHINGTON (AP) - Over the next year, federal regulators will write the rules that are supposed to bring about a new era of communications in the United States.

The Federal Communications Commission is considering how to implement the Telecommunications Act signed by President Clinton on Thursday, which overhauls 62 years of communications policy.

On Friday, the president met with a group of parents to tell them about a computer chip, dubbed the v-chip, that would allow them to block violent and other shows they deem objectionable from their TV screens. The FCC would help make this technology available.

On Saturday, Clinton said the v-chip can help but is no panacea.

The v-chip, he said, gives parents a tool "so they can take greater responsibility for their children's lives and help them to kick the degrading influence of excessive television violence and other inappropriate programming out of their house."

But he cautioned: "We can give you the v-chip, but you have to use it."

"Government will continue to do its part," Clinton said in his weekly radio address. "But governments don't raise children; parents do, and no program can ever replace parents teaching their children right from wrong."

"So to every parent I say, 'Turn off the TV more.... Above all teach your child right from wrong,'" Clinton said.

The new law directs the agency to write more than 80 rules. The most difficult will be ones that deal with local Bell company entry into the long-distance business and such related subjects as making sure telephone service is available to all Americans, federal regulators say.

The law immediately freed Bell companies to provide long-distance service outside their local phone territories. But it requires the companies to meet certain conditions before they can offer long-distance service to their local customers.

'Build on the Dream' kickoff to start with ground-breaking Drive aiming for $40,000 to build park

By GEORGIA TYLER Staff Writer

When volunteers call on prospective donors for the Build on the Dream campaign, they have the luxury of pointing to the realization of part one of the dream.

The kickoff for the drive for $40,000 for improvements in the Hereford Aquatic Center Park will be held Monday. The drive will continue for only two weeks.

Volunteers will gather at the park at 9 a.m. for a ground-breaking ceremony before going out to solicit the community. Public participation in the ground-breaking is invited and encouraged by drive leaders.

Co-chairmen of the campaign, Bobby Owen and Jeff Torbert, believe the goal of $40,000 is reachable in the two weeks designated for the drive.

As a preliminary to the campaign, Hereford Aquatic Center will hold an open house Sunday, from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Guests will be treated to a close look at a public facility second to none in the Panhandle, if not all of West Texas.

While visiting the aquatic center, guests will be invited to inspect the park area, see improvements already made and learn about those still to come.

The aquatic center was the first part of a dream for Hereford, one that started on a modest note when the City Commission decided to abandon the old pool in Dameron Park and build a new facility. That decision was based in part on a lack of real estimates on costs to refurbish the 40-year-old pool in Dameron.

After obtaining a matching funds grant of $500,000 from Texas Parks and Wildlife and a grant of $250,000 from Amarillo Area Foundation and the Don and Sybil Harrington Foundation, the City Commission's dream of a new facility became attainable.

Then, the dream was expanded. Why not two pools, one of them covered for year-around use?

Assistance from Hereford Independent School District, Deaf Smith County Hospital District and Deaf Smith County provided the impetus to move ahead with the two-pool concept.

The city elected to employ a construction superintendent and serve as its own contractor, a step that saved a substantial amount of money.

With the opening last August of both pools, the first part of the dream was complete.

The advent of cool weather was the background for a new dimension in swimming in Hereford. An inflatable dome was erected over the larger of the two pools, allowing continuous use of the facility through winter months.

With the aquatic center up and running, attention turned to the surrounding park, an area of about 12 acres. Although landscaping for the area immediately adjacent to the pools was covered by grant money, the remainder of the park, including a fishing pond, was undeveloped.

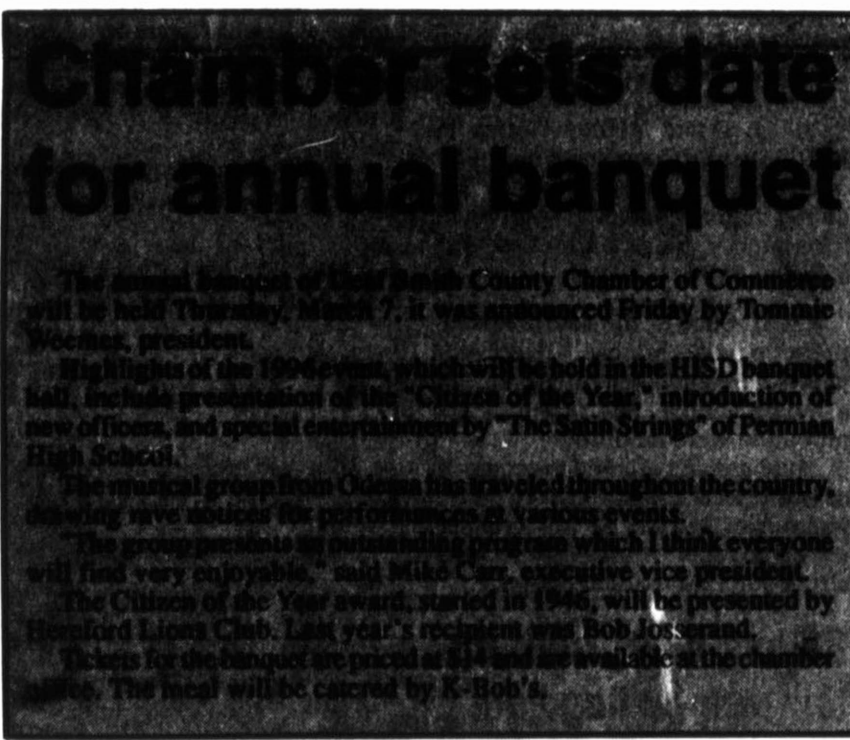

A fishing bridge, built by Poarch Bros., at the pond has been put in place.

Mayor Bob Josseland and City Commissioners Roger Eades, Scott Hall, Silvana Juarez, Wayne Winget, Nancy Griego and Carey Black showed they were serious about creating a park the community could be proud of.

Since the voluntary park fund, established several years ago for park improvements, was earmarked for projects all over town, the decision was made to involve the community in creating a park to complement the newest recreational facility in Hereford.

To provide a concentrated effort for improving the park, the City

'It's decision time' Dole tells voters as Iowa GOP caucuses draw near

By JOHN KING AP Political Writer

OSKALOOSA, Iowa (AP) - The Republicans looking to oust President Clinton from the White House are welcoming him to Iowa for a weekend of campaigning - and urging GOP voters to use the president's trip to focus on their choice to replace him.

"It's decision time," was how Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole put it Friday night as the campaigning for Monday's Iowa caucuses entered a critical final weekend.

Dole, trying to frame the debate in his favor, said he had the leadership abilities and experience to go up against Clinton in November and said caucus-goers should ask themselves: "Should I vote for someone who has no chance of being elected president of the United States?"

Dole insisted he was the best candidate, promoting a "longtime mainstream conservative record," including his opposition to abortion and support for voluntary prayer in school, a balanced budget and making English the nation's official language.

But he said his conservatism was tempered with compassion, promising that those who truly need help "are not going to be forgotten in a Dole administration."

Also welcoming Clinton was former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, who claimed momentum heading into the final weekend and predicted that having the president in Iowa would work in his favor.

Recalling Dole's official Republican response to Clinton's State of the Union address, which was widely criticized in GOP circles, Alexander said it was "a preview of what we are going to see next October if we are not careful."

Clinton was spending today and part of Sunday in the state, even though he is unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

The GOP race, on the other hand, was volatile to the end, and most of the candidates were crisscrossing Iowa today to make their case.

A Des Moines Register poll published today found that Dole had the backing of 28 percent of likely caucus-goers, to 16 percent for publishing heir Steve Forbes, 11 percent for commentator Pat Buchanan, 10 percent for Alexander and 8 percent for Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, with others trailing.

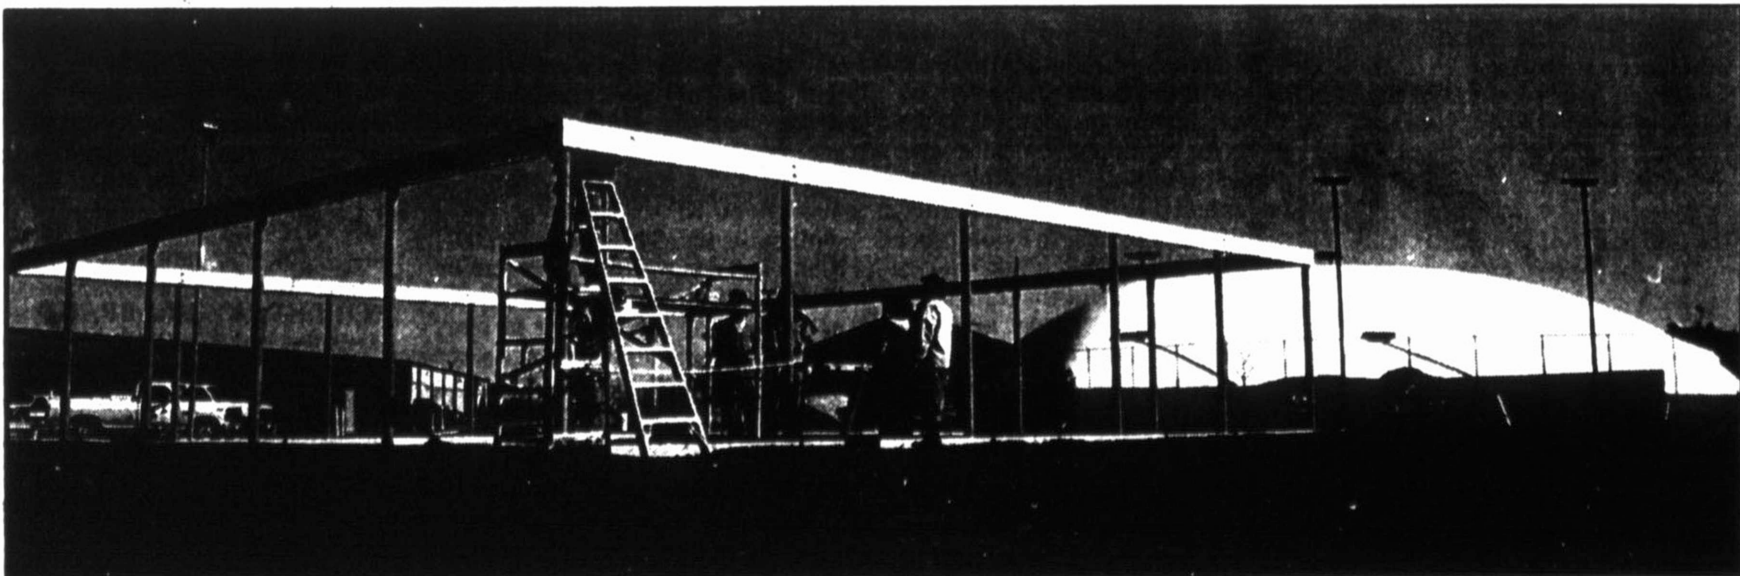

But the poll, which carried a margin of error of 3.9 percentage points, also showed 19 percent were undecided when questioned from Saturday through Thursday.

While Dole remained the favorite, he could be hard-pressed to match the 37 percent vote he got in winning the Iowa caucuses in 1988.

But a recent slide in the polls by Forbes has created an unpredictable race beyond that. Forbes stirred things further Friday by suggesting rival campaigns and the Christian Coalition were trying to undermine his candidacy.

Forbes said "some of my opponents" were engaging in anonymous phone calls against him, distorting his position on the flat tax, abortion, Social Security and gays in the military. Appearing agitated, he asserted that the Christian Coalition was involved in the "smears" and said the organization "does not speak for most Christians. It speaks only for its members."

Bill Dal Col, Forbes' campaign manager, speculated that Dole, Buchanan and the Christian Coalition were making the calls, but he could provide no evidence.

Construction proceeds in park

Work on a 50 by 50 pavillion in Hereford Aquatic Center Park proceeds with the domed swimming facility in the background. A community-wide fundraising drive will begin Monday for $40,000 for improvements in the park. An open house Sunday afternoon will offer residents an opportunity to inspect the facility and the park surrounding it.

School board meet postponed

The regular meeting of the Hereford ISD board of trustees that had been scheduled for 6 p.m. Monday has been postponed, Superintendent Charles W. Greenawalt has announced. The session -- which is the regular information/discussion meeting held on an HISD campus -- was put off because board president Jim Marsh will be out of town. The meeting will be held instead on Tuesday, Feb. 20. An announcement will be made later regarding time and location of the meeting.

Short agenda posted

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court's agenda for a regular meeting Monday includes a discussion of a jail contract, casting a ballot for an appraisal district board member and consideration of closing a street in Dawn. The meeting will begin at 9 a.m.

Separate fund set here for N.M. family

Donations sought to help former resident

A special fund has been set up in Utah for a former Hereford resident, Jay Smith, who recently underwent a bone marrow transplant, friends learned here this week.

Smith, grandson of Elizabeth and the late James Witherspoon, currently resides in American Fork, Utah. He was diagnosed with acute leukemia last September and remained in the hospital until Jan. 23.

After an initial six-week treatment was unsuccessful, it was determined that Smith had two different forms of leukemia. After radiation and chemotherapy, he received a bone marrow transplant on Dec. 7 from his brother, Davis Smith, of San Marcos. The transplant began to take hold after two weeks and it is hoped that his leukemia is in remission.

Medical expenses have surpassed $500,000 and, while insurance will pick up much of the cost, the family continues to have tremendous expenses. Family, neighbors, friends and Jay's co-workers have been supportive in helping with meals, child care, Christmas presents, and moral support. The area chamber of commerce in Utah has held several blood drives for Smith.

Smith and his family need an apartment in Salt Lake City in order to be near the hospital for daily checkups for three months. Jay requires someone to be with him 24 hours a day in case of signs of bone marrow rejection.

Smith and his wife, Katherine, have three pre-school children, ages 4, 2 and 9 months. Smith is in management with Sam's Club in Provo, Utah. He lived in Hereford in 1978-80 and spend some summers here with his grandparents.

To help with expenses, a Jay Smith Transplant Fund has been set up at First Security Bank, 140 W. 800 North, Orem, Utah 84057.

A medical fund has been set up at Hereford State Bank to benefit the Arnold Cross Family of Bellview, N.M.

The family lost its home and suffered the death of one child in a fire recently.

At least one family member is being treated at University Medical Center in Lubbock.

State jail term set for woman

A state jail sentence of two years, probated five years, was imposed Friday on a defendant charged with forgery by making.

Judge David Wesley Gulley in 222nd District Court heard the guilty plea by Elena Gamez Hernandez, 36, on the forgery charge. In addition to the sentence, Judge Gulley assessed a fine of $500.

On a motion by the state to revoke probation of Michael Hubbard, previously convicted of burglary of a motor vehicle, the terms of his probation were modified.

Hubbard was ordered to enter and complete an alcoholic recovery center program of 90 days. He will be under intensive supervision for six months after completion of the program.

Ballots being sent for toll-free calling vote

Telephone customers with 364 and 363 prefixes will receive mail ballots by Thursday to mark their approval or disapproval of expanded toll-free local calling to Amarillo through Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The expanded toll-free service will cost customers a line charge of $3.50 monthly, in addition to regular fees. The business line fee is $7.

The Public Utility Commission directed the balloting on a petition from SWBTC customers in the Hereford exchanges.

Crime Stoppers

The Hereford Police Department is seeking clues into the Dec. 27, 1995, burglary of a home in the 100 block of East Gracey.

Numerous tools valued at nearly $1,000 were taken. Among the items stolen were: a power roller, power painter, full case of caulking, two battery-operated drills, a grinder, 4-foot and 6-foot ladders, six wooden window screens, a tool holder-type bucket, wrenches and pliers and a heat gun.

Anyone having information which leads to the arrest and indictment in the Crime of the Week can receive a reward of up to $1,000 that is offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers.

Anyone having information about the Crime of the Week or any other criminal activity is urged to call the Clue Line at 364-CLUE.

All callers may remain anonymous by using a code name or number.

Fugitive of the Week

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers Inc. will pay a $100 cash reward for information leading to the arrest of the Fugitive of the Week.

This week's Fugitive of the Week is Elias Tovar, 20, an Hispanic man described as 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing 175 pounds. He usually wears a mustache and goatee.

As of Friday there were two felony warrants outstanding for violation of probation and burglary of a building. All warrants must be confirmed before an arrest is made.

If you have information on the location of this fugitive, please call the Crimestoppers Clue Line at 364-CLUE.

Any fugitive should be considered armed and dangerous and callers are urged not to try to arrest or apprehend a fugitive.

Instead, information should be given to Crimestoppers.

You do not have to give your name and your information could earn you a $100 cash reward.

Building a table

Workers pour concrete into a mold to build a picnic table to be placed in Hereford Aquatic Center Park. The "homemade" tables, built from forms devised by Poarch Bros., will cost approximately $300 less per unit than commercially-built tables and benches. Plans call for a dozen to be placed on concrete pads in the park.

CLINTON

Defense Department will discharge service members testing positive for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Those known to be HIV-positive now number 1,049 in an active-duty force of some 1.5 million. All have been deemed healthy and fit for service.

Quinn said the Pentagon will wait "until the last possible moment" before actually removing anybody from the military.

The president also ordered the Defense and Veterans Affairs departments to "take all steps" to ensure full benefits to any military personnel discharged for having the infection.

Only the Supreme Court has final authority to declare laws unconstitutional, thereby invalidating them. But Quinn said Clinton hopes that setting the discharge process in motion will lead to an early court test of its constitutionality.

The president also endorsed bipartisan repeal efforts in Congress.

Supporters of repeal counted 71 co-sponsors of their legislation in the House and 34 in the Senate. The Senate version is sponsored chiefly by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and William Cohen, R-Maine; House sponsors include Reps. Connie Morella, R-Md., and Ron Dellums, D-Calif.

But Dornan, the provision's sponsor, predicted that "Clinton's allies will lose in court and they will lose in Congress."

"Bill Clinton continues to ignore the needs and requirements of the military while deferring to the wishes of a vocal minority who donate heavily to his presidential campaign," Dornan, a Republican presidential candidate, said in a statement.

But Mark Barnes, executive director of the AIDS Action Council, said Clinton did not need to "sign into law a bill codifying such a blatantly discriminatory and un-American provision."

The overall bill authorizes spending by the armed forces through the 1996 fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, and gives service members a 2.4 percent pay raise.

Rodeo club set to solicit advertising

A sponsor of the Hereford High School Rodeo Club has announced that group members will be soliciting advertising for a rodeo program during the next two months.

Ashley Henderson said local business people need to be aware that the students may call on them to purchase advertising for the program for the HHS Rodeo Club Rodeo, set April 13 and 14 here.

Henderson said club members will identify themselves as being with the group. As further identification, all sales people are to be carrying with them a copy of last year's rodeo program.

Ads will be sold around town through April 1, Henderson said.

If anyone has questions about the solicitation or authorized sales people they may call Henderson at 276-5355.

Focus on Your City

By BOB JOSSEERAND Mayor, City of Hereford

Once again, we see in Hereford what it means to be a resident of Deaf Smith County. A few weeks ago, your City Commission made the decision to get to moving on the Aquatic Center Park.

We asked about 20 citizens to help us out on a fund drive for the park. You can't believe the enthusiasm, the ready acceptance of responsibility and the attitude of "let's make a difference," as exhibited by these citizens. It really makes me proud to live in Hereford, this true sense of pulling together for the good of all.

Many of you already know the details of the Build on the Dream campaign to raise private funds for planting trees, putting up a picnic pavilion, installing picnic tables and placing barbecue grills in specified locations, so I won't spend a lot of time on this.

However, one of the things that I really urge you to do is to take advantage of the Aquatic Center open house this Sunday from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. It's a chance for you to see what a real difference you have already made for the quality of life in Hereford.

Before I move on to other matters, I just want to share with you my experience in contacting three of our major employers in Deaf Smith County. I don't mind naming these three folks I contacted and I hope they don't mind my mentioning them.

I went by to see Holly Sugar, Hereford Bi-Products and Caviness Packing Company. In all three

DRIVE

Commission designated one parks department employee to fulltime work at HAC park.

Construction projects at HAC park and other city facilities were placed on high priority with employment of a city construction superintendent, Don Kundert, for at least a year. Kundert was in charge of construction on the aquatic center.

A concrete walking path, concrete pads for picnic tables, a children's play area and a sprinkler system have been installed. Lighting and park benches at intervals around the walking path also are in place. At the appropriate time, grass seed will be sowed.

A landscaping plan -- said to be only a start for the park -- has been prepared for placement of 100 trees of three to four inches in caliper each. Average cost is $280 for each tree and planting. Among varieties being considered for planting in the park are shademaster locust, Arizona Ash, red oak, golden rain New Mexico pinon, Austrian pine and redbud.

A 50 by 50 covered pavilion is under construction. Expected cost of the pavilion is $9,500.

A substantial cost saving will be effected on picnic facilities. Forms for concrete tables and benches were built by Poarch Brothers, allowing the city to build the items instead of ordering from manufacturers.

Estimated cost for each unit is $75. The savings, compared with purchase of the units from manufacturers, will be about $300 each as well as shipping costs. Sites have been selected for 12 picnic tables.

Scattered through the park, also, will be six barbecue grills, at costing $250 each.

Although the fundraising committee has set a goal of $40,000, volunteers are quick to point out that the drive doesn't end if the goal is reached before the time runs out.

Over and above contributions will be added to the development fund for HAC Park.

Individuals and businesses who are not contacted by the committee members are urged to turn in donations at FirstBank Southwest, Hereford State Bank or City Hall.

Appropriate recognition will be provided donors to the fund. A large sign in the park will list contributors of $50 or more. Lesser amounts will be recognized in files.

Members of the park campaign committee, in addition to Owen and Torbert, are Janie Alejandre, Terry Bromlow, Don Cumpton, Wade Easley, Carmen Flood, Chip Formby, Mike Foster, Jan Furr, Grace Gamez, Dave Hopper, Mauri Montgomery, Janie Nino, Celia Serrano, Tom Simons, Bob Sims, Betty Taylor, Daniel Villarreal, Tommy Weemes and Raymond White.

Transportation Dept. cites law about signs

AUSTIN -- With the completion of filing for statewide public office has come the 1996 campaign season in Texas.

To avoid a deluge of illegally-placed campaign signs, the Texas Department of Transportation is reminding candidates and supporters of laws regarding signs along highways.

Information has been mailed to statewide candidates and is also available through the department's 25 district offices.

Under Texas law it is a Class C misdemeanor to place any sign on highway right of way without a license and permit. The fine for violating this law can be up to $500 per sign.

It also is illegal to place a sign, even off state right of way, along most major highways in the state without a license and permit. Violation of this Class B misdemeanor is punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 per sign.

Within city limits, the placement of signs along roadways may be regulated as well by local ordinances.

"These laws are designed to keep roadways clean and uncluttered so that official traffic control signs are clearly visible for the safety of the traveling public," said Bill Burnett, department executive director. "We ask candidates to remind their workers about sign laws to save themselves a lot of time and money."

SPS protests PUC ruling

Southwestern Public Service Co. has declared that a ruling this past week by the Public Utility Commission of Texas not to grant a waiver of SPS's fuel-cost rules jeopardizes a fuel-cost reduction for customers.

The waiver was requested as in SPS's proposed purchase of TUCO Inc., which owns the coal inventory at the two SPS coal-fueled power plants and administers contracts with coal mines, railroads and the coal-handling operator.

According to an SPS news release, the waiver would have allowed the company to save an average of more than $6 million per year through lower fuel costs by eliminating a middle step in the fuel-supply process.

Last year, the company said, it spent $375 million on fuel.

"We're extremely disappointed in this decision," said Kenneth Ladd,

SPS senior vice president. "This was an excellent opportunity for our customers and our company. The waiver was supported by the commission's own staff and general counsel, along with the Texas Industrial Energy Consumers and the City of Amarillo. These groups all agreed that the proposal was in the public interest and would have benefitted customers."

Ladd said SPS may seek reconsideration of the waiver.

instances, they said, "We certainly want our employees to be a part of this park development and we definitely want to be a part, also."

You just can't describe how wonderful it is to talk with people and to see their attitude on this project. Truly, truly, a sense of "We can make a difference."

I hope each of you in Hereford, from the kids in school to the civic clubs to each and every citizen, takes a part in this fund drive and realizes that this is a chance to really make a beauty spot in Deaf Smith County.

Now, moving to more mundane subjects: at our last Commission meeting, we received a report from the chief of police about his department's activities in 1995. I'm sure you have already seen a detailed report in the Hereford Brand or heard it on KPAN, so I won't deal with statistics. The one item that I didn't feel received enough attention in the reporting of the department's activities was the number of stray animals we are having to put to sleep here in Hereford.

More than 1,300 animals were euthanized in 1995 and I still don't know if we're gaining on the strays here in Hereford. Folks, we certainly need your help in controlling the pet population. Any of our fine veterinarians can help us eliminate some of this problem. As a responsible citizen, if you have a pet, please give us your assistance.

Just a quick mention of some of the items we're going to consider in our planning sessions in the next few months. In February, we'll talk about the possibility of a city-sponsored parks and recreation program. If you have thoughts about this, we'd welcome your input, either prior to the meeting on Feb. 19, or by attending the meeting, which begins at 5 p.m.

Then, in March and April our planning discussions will center upon a longer-range outlook into our city infrastructure. As we get closer to these meetings, I'll try to let you know exactly which topics we'll discuss at which meeting so those who have thoughts and ideas may take part in discussions.

As always, we welcome your opinions and comments. Please let us hear from you, and remember: Together we can be a might force for the good of our community.

Notion that people do not have enough time is just not accurate

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) - Many of our popular notions just aren't true, but that doesn't mean they'll become any less popular.

For example: The work demands of modern life, including commuting, leave little free time for activities such as education, reading, sports, hobbies, watching TV, reading and the like.

A scientific examination, based on diaries kept by people of working age, showed that in 1985, American men had 41 hours of free time each week, and women 40 hours, and that more workers were gaining free time than losing it.

Part of the explanation, says John Robinson, University of Maryland sociologist, is that out of an hour of reduced work time, only 60 percent gets used for free-time activities. The rest is absorbed by such things as sleeping.

Robinson is a scholar, one of more than 50 contributing to "The State of Humanity," a compilation of studies challenging pessimism about the quality of life and the future of the planet.

The issue is a lot more complex than described, and to suggest it isn't is to demean the scholarly nature of the study. But the point is made: There's a lot more free time for you than there was 20 or 30 years ago.

And more than there was a century ago. Julian Snyder, also of Maryland and editor of the volume, attributes to Winston Churchill the observation that the further backward you look, the further forward you can see.

Or to make the point another way, many of us focus near-sightedly on the immediate situation without a proper reference point, and in addition let our psychological perceptions intrude on objective analysis. Go back far enough in years, these writers suggest, and you can see the trends, most of which are improving: health, wealth, nutrition, housing, productivity, natural resource substitutes, recreation, air quality.

Consider poverty, which is said to be rising in the United States. Robert Rector sidesteps the usual (and skewed) dollar measurements, and measures poverty on the basis of food consumption, property ownership and housing.

Concluding that living standards of the poor are improving and are quite high by historic standards, he comments:

"Many if not most of today's poor

Americans have a material standard that would have been considered middle class or better by Americans earlier in the century."

And in many respects, he adds after examining living standards in other countries, "they compare favorably to the current general population of Western Europe and would be considered affluent in most parts of the globe."

Many events that people tend at first to consider bad have on reflection more good than bad about them. If we act on that first negative reaction, says Snyder, "we risk making unsound social decisions."

It happens all the time, and is especially obvious in the media, he says.

spinning dozens of plates on bamboo poles, jar juggling, twirling umbrellas and rugs with the feet and swinging water meteors.

A feature of the performance is the Chinese Lion Dance with contortionists and antics by acrobats.

Members of the acrobat company performed in the 1992-1993 tour of Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey Circus. Several acrobats appeared as guest artists with Canada's Cirque du Soleil in early 1993 in Japan.

During 1994, 14 members of the troupe toured to more than 50 cities in the U.S. and Canada. In 1995, the troupe performed from February to November in Germany, Denmark and Luxembourg.

Chen Xue Wen, assistant director of the Imperial Chinese Acrobats, joined the Kunming group in 1959 as an acrobat, then became a coach and leader in 1980. His coaching of jar juggling earned a silver medal for the troupe at the 1993 Hope Road Acrobatic Competition in Belgium. He was promoted in 1994 to "State Two-Degree Actor."

Yao Jin Fen and Qin Ming Xiao are considered two of China's foremost magicians. They have been members of the China Acrobatic Troupe for some 25 years.

"Snowflakes are one of life's most fragile things, but look what happens when they stick together."--A quote from Hillary Clinton's new book.

Congressman Larry Combest says tax reform is one of the front-burner issues in this country, but it's not likely to move forward in the midst of the current budget battle between Congress and the White House.

Combest, our U.S. Representative from the 19th Congressional District, stopped by our office for a visit Thursday. He had made appearances in Perryton, Dalhart and Dumas and was on his way back to Lubbock.

"People want to see tax reform but some of the problems under the current tax system would not be eliminated by a flat tax plan," said Combest. He is still studying the issue and is leaning toward a consumption-based tax, similar to a national sales tax.

The most appealing factor of the consumption tax would be that it eliminates the income tax and the Internal Revenue Service. U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, a Houston Republican who serves as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has espoused this tax. But he doesn't plan to push it now because President Clinton would probably veto it.

Archer sees a two-year window of opportunity following the next election, says Combest. If a Republican president is elected and the Congress remains under GOP control, he sees the chance to pass massive tax reform that could be signed into law.

And, as Combest has stated previously about the budget battle, this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to change the direction of government in our nation.

Did you notice a man in Arlington, Va., is using a magazine for selling his name and address without his permission? At first glance, it sounds like another petty law suit but the man is drawing support from fellow sufferers across the country who receive unwanted junk mail.

Ram Avrahami, a 33-year-old former marketing manager for a phone company, is suing U.S. News & World Report, arguing that if a company can buy and sell his name, he ought to get a share of the profits. "It is unfair to me. Actually it is unfair to me twice," says Avrahami. "The magazine sells my name without asking me, and then I receive the junk mail for which I really have no use."

The suit is not the first to challenge direct-mail marketing, but it apparently is the first to target the mailing-list seller. Avrahami is seeking $1,100--the 8 cents the magazine is believed to have gotten for his name--and the rest for aggravation. He has already spent more than that in legal bills.

Representatives of the direct marketing industry say the lawsuit is unfounded, and they fear devastating consequences if Avrahami prevails. The man's lawsuit cites a Virginia law protecting unauthorized use of a person's name for commercial purposes.

The marketing industry claims a man's name on a list is not something he owns and that the law was meant to protect celebrities and other public figures. The Direct Marketing Association notes that people who don't want junk mail can register with the association, which will then ask its 3,600 members not to solicit their business.

Avrahami claims he did that and more and still got unwanted mail nearly every day. He may not win his case, but a lot of folks would be happy if he does.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Nothing makes me long for summer more than winter.

Cold weather is a pain, literally and figuratively. In the really olden days -- pioneer times -- heating and cooking were usually accomplished with wood or coal.

On the plains where trees were few and far between, coal was a welcome commodity. Another common fuel was picked up in the pastures.

The first time I ever heard my mother talk about gathering cow patties for fuel I was stunned. "You what?" I queried.

As time went on, natural gas and central heating replaced other means of warming the house. Then, in a throwback to earlier days, homeowners began to have fireplaces built in, not necessarily for heat but for effect.

Now, for an old lady, keeping a fireplace can be almost as big a pain as the cold. But, in the recent frigid weather, I decided a fire would be welcome. So at risk of a sore back, I lugged huge logs from a pile to the patio.

All the while I was doing this, I was cursing the guys who sold me the load of wood. It looked as though they picked out every big log in their collection and dumped it on me. Since last winter was fairly mild, I used almost none of the wood. It was too heavy to mess with.

During the transfer from the woodpile to the patio, I almost ruined one of my Christmas gloves before I realized how rough those logs were. After searching for and finding another pair of gloves, I trudged back and forth until I had a substantial pile at the backdoor.

Blessed with a gas line to the fireplace, I got a roaring fire, in no time at all. Of course, that I was slow inserting the match and the fire flashed toward me was some concern.

But, soon I was retracting my ugly thoughts about the wood-sellers. That wood created a bonfire in the fireplace. Everytime a new log was placed on the stack, the fire got better.

For hours, I was snuggled down next to the fireplace, for once not even regretful about the cold and snow in the frozen out-of-doors.

If only I had known what I learned later, I might not have been so smug.

In those zero temperatures, water lines sometimes get mushy with ice and even freeze solid. Anyone can guess what the next line is: the water line to my washer was frozen and not usable for hours and hours.

For illumination, let me say that other water lines in my place of residence had been dripping for days to prevent just what happened to the washer line. Now I ask you, how do you drip a water line to a washer?

The answer, obviously, is, there's no way. After it happened, I was told an electric heater plugged in next to the washer might have prevented the freeze-up. That's all hindsight, though, and I took my dirty clothes to the nearest do-it-yourself laundry.

During the cold spell, that old pile of logs was noticeably depleted. Still on the ground are some that I just don't think are worth the risk of a slipped disc.

But while it lasted, the fire I built was nothing short of wonderful. It was warming, friendly and colorful.

Now comes the complaint: I've got a real job facing me. Scooping up and hauling out bagsful of ashes.

Oh well, it was worth it.

The attack of the Reagan wannabes

Ironic isn't it that while we are celebrating the 85th birthday of former President Ronald Reagan, a whole gaggle of Reagan wannabe's are stumping for votes in the ever-too-long GOP Primary Season.

I mean, here are all these men chatting with farmers, kissing babies, shaking hands, playing checkers, eating school lunches and doing who-knows-what-else, all to get the most votes in caucuses, straw polls, or primary elections.

To one extent or another, many--if not all--of the candidates have declared themselves to be the reincarnation of Ronald Reagan, who ushered in the conservatism of today when he defeated President Jimmy Carter in 1980.

Ronald Reagan did some amazing things during his eight years in the Oval Office.

When he took office, America had been held hostage for 444 days by a bunch of religious fanatics in Iran.

National morale was at an all-time low; interest rates were high and so was unemployment; America was laughed at internationally because of its failure to stand up to the Ayatollah; the military was being gutted by a pacifist president.

In his years, President Reagan revitalized our national pride, made us a world power to be reckoned with, helped oversee the (temporary, I believe) collapse of Communism and the fall of the Berlin wall and after the administrations of Nixon, Ford and Carter, brought the lustre back to the American presidency.

He had a passion for America, he

Out of the Blue

By Garry Wesner

saw the need for a strong military, he despised Communism and other totalitarian governments, he labored to make this the greatest nation in the world and he gave his all to that nation for eight long years -- despite an assassination attempt, cancer and advancing age.

But look at what we have this year trying to take his place:

BOB DOLE
The other day I heard Dole say on TV, "If you want me to be Ronald Reagan, I'll be Ronald Reagan."

I'm sure he meant it well, but it sounds to me like someone who will call himself anything to get elected, but we never really know if he means anything he says.

I see Dole's main problem is he is a Washington insider, having been there for years. He is perceived to be part of the problem, not part of the solution.

PHIL GRAMM
Gramm, who is running under the LBJ Law that lets him seek the presidency and U.S. Senate at the same time, once proclaimed he was "for" Texas all the way.

Big money sure makes you popular. Forbes' rise in the polls has left him open for attention from voters and opponents alike, who are finding out he's more of a social moderate than a lot of Republicans want.

While Forbes is getting attention from his flat tax proposal, many voters want to hear his stand on gays in the military, abortion, social programs and the like.

If Forbes doesn't give the answers conservatives want to hear, he may learn that money may buy popularity, but it can't buy the nomination.

PAT ROBERTSON
Why not someone from the media as president? After all, we often think we know how to do it better than anyone, so why not let one of "us" try?

Robertson says the things Christian conservatives like -- ban abortion, put prayer back in schools, quit trying to be police to the world and the like.

But he doesn't have Reagan's foreign policy experience. He also doesn't have any political experience other than running for president (although neither did George Washington), something that may handicap him in the eyes of some voters.

Iowa and New Hampshire I think will show whether or not Robertson's Arkansas win was a fluke.

My biggest worry in this year's campaign is that the mudslinging to get the nomination will leave the Republican Party so battered that Bill Clinton will be allowed to waltz back into office, or else the fighting will leave voters open to embrace a third-party candidate, splitting the GOP vote and giving the White House back to the Clintons.

Guest editorial Bigger can be better

HRMC Administrator, CEO

Sometimes bigger is better. In the case of the merger of Methodist Hospital and St. Mary's Hospital in Lubbock, the new bigger organization will bring many benefits to the people of the area, including the residents of Deaf Smith County.

Remember that Hereford Regional Medical Center is funded by the taxpayers of Deaf Smith County and governed by a local board of directors elected by the people. As administrator and chief executive officer, I serve at the pleasure of the board, which also controls all the fiscal operations of the hospital.

Since 1992, HRMC has been affiliated with Methodist Hospital to provide management support. The affiliation has proved profitable for our community. For example, we were able to save more than $200,000 just last year on the purchase of a CT Scanner because of our ties with Methodist.

Other purchasing contracts that save us money, as well as training seminars ranging from marketing to quality assurance, have given HRMC an edge over other hospitals that continue to struggle on their own.

However, people are concerned when there is change, and rumors seem to materialize out of nothing. Let me assure you that all the changes we see on the horizon are positive. Rumors of HRMC closing, employees losing their jobs, or hospital profits going to Lubbock are untrue, with no basis in fact.

The merger of these two major entities will merely enhance the benefits to HRMC. The officials of the new organization have said that the merger will stabilize jobs and enable both organizations to provide quality, cost effective and accessible health care to the people in their service area. As the merger moves forward, and the Methodist/St. Mary Health System continues to grow, we look for more benefits for HRMC and the people of our area.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:
I would like to take this opportunity to thank the leaders of Hereford for their foresight when they planned and built the new city pool. What a wonderful facility we--the people of Hereford--have.

For those of you who did not take advantage of the Winter Camp that was held at the pool, you don't know what you missed.

Our seven-year-old attended camp for the entire two weeks and loved it. He made new friends, improved his swimming ability, had a great time and was with a group of young adults who really knew what they were doing. Hopefully, they will have another camp during spring break and again this summer.

The people of Hereford have complained for years that there is nothing to do here. We now have a wonderful year-around pool that very few utilize. We went one Saturday during family swim time and there were two families there.

We had more fun than you can imagine. In the past we have gone to Amarillo and stayed in a hotel just to swim. Now we no longer have to do that. We have the best place around. But people are going to have to use it.

Let's show the city leaders how proud we are of them for building this wonderful facility. Let's all make a New Year's resolution to use the pool more. After all, we no longer can say

"there's nothing to do in Hereford."
Sincerely,
Lisa Formby

Mr. Nieman, Brand staff:
I am a member of the Deaf Smith County 4-H Clubs and the Showmanship Club. As a 4-H member, I want to thank each one of you for all the time you spend publicizing the 4-H Clubs in Deaf Smith County.

I especially want to let you know how much we appreciate all the publicity you gave the 1996 Hereford Young Farmers' Livestock Show and Sale. We really like the fact that you have given so much coverage to the efforts of the young people in this town who are working to make this a better community.

Thank you for your positive support of all our efforts!

Edison speaks through long-forgotten phonograph cylinder

Inventor's voice young, vibrant on nearly-100-year-old wax recording

EDITOR'S NOTE - From moldy archives comes ... a voice! Thomas Edison recorded himself a century ago on his favorite brand-new invention, the phonograph. Though it would be no surprise to the Wizard, the long lost wax cylinder still works.

By TED ANTHONY
Associated Press Writer
WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) - Through the scratchy crackle of a decaying wax cylinder comes a muffled yet vigorous voice - an ethereal message left by the inventor whose genius allowed history's sounds to endure.

He talks of global adventures, of trips on boats and trains to far-flung lands, of technologies barely thought possible.

Thomas A. Edison, whose phonograph let astonished men and women speak to posterity for the first time, has managed to reach from the 19th century and surprise people with his creation yet again.

A previously unknown 1888 cylinder found at the museum that was once his laboratory contains the oldest rendering of his voice known to exist. It reveals an Edison far different from later, more familiar recordings.

This is not the aging businessman-legend speaking, but the vibrant, freshly famous "Wizard of Menlo Park." Edison was 41 years old, flush with the excitement of new inventions, on the cusp of changing society.

"He sounds like a man taking on the world," says Jerry Fabris, sound curator at the Edison National Historic Site. Fabris listened to the 154-second recording when it was first played in August 1995.

In it, Edison addresses a "Mr. Blaine," apparently James Gillespie Blaine, a congressman, 1884 presidential candidate and secretary of state. Edison sounds jaunty, whimsical, aware of his once-in-an-epoch mix of pragmatism and technical genius.

"Mr. Blaine, as you've been nearly 'round the world, I'll take you 'round the world on the phonograph. I'll not charge you anything." Edison's voice is high-pitched, laced with an unidentifiable brogue.

He goes on to describe a journey that starts with a steamer trip across the Atlantic Ocean to Liverpool and winds through Europe, northern Africa and Asia before returning by train across the United States to New York.

Until now, the earliest known recording of Edison's voice was from 1906, when he was 59. The newly found one was recorded shortly after Edison moved to West Orange in 1887 from his workshop in Menlo Park, N.J. (now called Edison, N.J.).

The new discovery is a cream-colored, 4-inch-long wax cylinder, about the size and shape of an empty toilet paper roll. It had been on the grounds all along, but when Edison died in 1931 nobody had the wherewithal to go through all his materials. He left 5 million documents, 25,000 flat records, 10,000 cylinders, 65,000 photographs and 500,000 miscellaneous items. All of it went into storage.

A cataloging project began in 1993. But preservation took precedence, and Fabris spent the past two years putting the material into archival-quality storage so it wouldn't decay further. He began rerecording cylinders only recently.

A 1953 inventory labeled the recording of Edison only vaguely. Some early recordings had been transferred to reel-to-reel tape in the 1950s using an "Ediphone" - a cylinder-playing dictation device - but the tape disappeared.

"No one outside the few people who inventoried this in 1953 knew it existed. Word never got out," Fabris says.

"The question was, if this is a recording of Thomas Edison in 1888, at the peak of his creative years, why didn't we know about it?" he says. "We weren't sure whether we had what we had until we heard it."

On Aug. 28, Fabris took the cylinder to the Rodgers & Hammerstein Sound Archives in New York City and played it on a modern machine that exerts less pressure upon fragile cylinders.

He expected a few disjointed words to emerge from the static of decay. Instead, out came Edison - clear and uninterrupted.

"We'd never heard anything like this before," Fabris says. "This is Edison at the peak of his creative years. You hear a very energetic person, a very bold person talking about sending his ideas around the world. On the later ones, he sounds usually very weak."

The poet is a man who lives at last by watching his moods. An old poet comes at last to watch his moods as narrowly as a cat does a mouse.

—Thoreau

They're greetings - saying hello to the country or 'Merry Christmas,' things like that."

Edison first recorded sound in 1877, using a foil cylinder. But he spent the next decade on the light bulb before returning to the phonograph, his favorite invention, and perfecting a wax-cylinder model in June 1888. Fabris believes the newly found recording, one of the earliest in existence, was made months afterward.

The early cylinders were copied onto tape and taken back to Fabris' archives. There the temperature is 70 degrees, the humidity 40 percent. And there, too, the extent of what Edison's invention begat is starkly apparent.

On a shelf sits a hand-cranked, spring-powered Triumph Model Edison Cylinder Phonograph, circa 1908, its walnut finish a charming anachronism amid the chrome and black steel of modern audio. Wires connect the antique to its direct descendant - something called a Tascam DA-30 Digital Deck and a Sony X222ES High-Density Linear Converter with Direct Digital Sync.

The old recording conveys Edison's confidence and humor. At one point, he says: "We'll go to Munich. Or Munchen. I believe they call it Munchen. But that's not a very nice name for me. I, ah, I like to call it Munich."

And later: From "Rome we'll go across the Mediterranean Sea - I don't know but what I'm a little out of my geography - we'll go to Alexandria. Alexandria to, through the Suez Canal to the Red Sea, into the Bay of Bengal. And then to, uh, Bombay. Bombay we'll probably get the, uh, curry, and stay at the hospital two, three months and have lots of fun."

"He had a wicked sense of humor, a wonderful way with words," says Madeleine Edison Sloane, 47, Edison's great-granddaughter. Ms. Sloane, named after Edison's daughter, worked at the museum for two summers during college and now is a lawyer in California.

"Finding this kind of thing can help people remember his curiosity and his work ethic," she says. "He represents passion for what he did. And that's the force of his creativity. You don't see that too often today."

At the museum, Fabris drew a crowd when he first played the recording for the staff.

They listened, enchanted, to Edison's verbal world trip. Then America's best-known inventor signed off, ending a moment in time that sat in waxen limbo for generations before its curtain call.

"Now, Mr. Blaine," Edison concludes, "won't you say a few words on another cylinder so my young man can bring it over to the laboratory. I want to put it through a process to get, uh, several hundred duplicate cylinders so other people can hear what you say. "Uh, goodbye. Edison."

Herd golfers near top in Big Spring tourney

The Hereford golf teams finished Friday near the top of the Big Spring Tournament standings. The Herd girls stood in fourth place and the boys were seventh, coach Stacey Bixler said Friday.

The fields consisted of 22 boys' teams playing at Comanche Trails municipal course and 22 girls' teams playing at the country club. They were to switch courses for the conclusion of the two-day tournament Saturday.

Hereford's girls totaled 374, Bixler said, while Abilene High led the pack at 345. Stephanie Bixler led Hereford, shooting 90, while Jamie Bell and Amy Killingsworth both shot rounds of 91. Krista Beville and Katie Bone both shot 102.

The Herd boys totaled 324, coach Bixler said, not far off the pace of leader and District 1-4A rival Borger at 304. Justin Griffith led Hereford with a 78, followed closely by the rest of the team: Tom Munoz, 81; Jeremiah Baros, 82; David Sims, 83; and Keith Kiley, 83.

Lady Whitefaces finish third

Herd girls must be satisfied with 22-5 mark

By JAY PEDEN
 Sports Editor
 The 1995-96 girls' basketball season has a bittersweet taste for Hereford.

While the Lady Whitefaces proved to be one of the best teams in Hereford cage history with a 22-5 record, their season stopped at the end of the regular season.

"It's been a great turnaround," Herd coach Eddie Fortenberry said.

1996 girls' team doesn't eclipse '81 team's mark

The 1995-96 Lady Whitefaces basketball team was one of the best in the program's history, but not the best.

The Hereford ISD athletic department's official records for the girls' basketball program are incomplete. Without proof otherwise, it was thought that this season's 22-5 record may have been the best ever for the Lady Whitefaces.

However, the Brand contacted former girls' basketball coach Larry Sowers at the advice of Martha Emerson, current Herd girls' track coach and former basketball assistant. Sowers revealed that his 1980-81 team finished 24-5, proving that at least one team in Hereford history was better.

A check of back issues of the Brand confirmed Sowers' comments. That team went 24-5, losing non-district games to Amarillo High and Canyon. Hereford lost three games in District 4-5A: one to Plainview and two to Lubbock Monterey, the eventual state champions.

Like the current Lady Whitefaces, the 1980-81 team didn't make the playoffs. In those days, only the district champions made the playoffs. Hereford's losses to Monterey were by scores of 54-49 in Hereford and 75-70 in Lubbock.

"We had the same situation as (the current Lady Whitefaces) have: the people in the district were so good you couldn't get out," Sowers said.

Hereford got some revenge for an earlier loss to Plainview with a 54-46 overtime win over the Lady Bulldogs in the season finale. That Hereford win spoiled Plainview's playoff hopes. Plainview had split the season series with Monterey, and a win over Hereford would have forced a district playoff between Plainview and Monterey.

Standouts on the 1980-81 Hereford team included Joyce High, Louise Mays, Lori Albracht, Amy Schumacher and Terri Harkins.

Sowers, who now lives in Lubbock, coached the Hereford girls for eight seasons. He started in 1979-80, when his team went 16-11, he said. His 1981-82 team went 20-5, he said.

"We were 54-19 this year in ninth grade, junior varsity and varsity. (Three) years ago, it might have been 19-54."

The program has come a long way from the 3-22 season of 1992-93. Fortenberry took over the next season and went 11-17, then went 18-11 last season.

"It's a credit to these kids," he said. "They've been the biggest part of turning it around."

The Lady Whitefaces were ranked as high as 11th in Class 4A by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, Fortenberry said. That was after the 1-27 Tournament, where Hereford got its only non-district loss from Nazareth, the No. 1 team in Class 1A. Hereford recently was ranked 18th, Fortenberry said.

(The Brand receives the TABC's Top 10 lists from The Associated Press, but coaches have access to the Top 20.)

Maybe the Lady Whitefaces just had bad timing. Next season, the University Interscholastic League will begin letting three teams from each 4A district into the playoffs - a system that Class 5A currently uses.

"That helps everybody in the district," Fortenberry said. "We're good enough to be in the playoffs. We certainly wouldn't be a disgrace to the system. We're proof that the (three-team) playoff system works. A lot of people are worried about three teams watering down the playoffs. Not in West Texas."

There's proof of that in other districts in West Texas' Region I. District 5-4A includes Levelland and Frenship, while District 6-4A includes Cleburne and Granbury. All four have been ranked in the Top 10. This means that two of the best teams in Texas will lose in bi-district no matter what happens.

Canyon, the champion of 1-4A, was ranked No. 1 all year. Canyon easily handled Hereford and district runner-up Randall.

"I'll be shocked if Canyon doesn't win state," Fortenberry said.

Randall has been in and out of the Top 10, although Fortenberry said Randall should have stayed in.

"In the final rankings, three in our district are in the top 20. We can finish in the top 20 but not in the top 60," he lamented.

The future still is bright for the girls' basketball program despite the loss of five seniors - Tarabeth Holmes, Mindi Davis, Heather Hodges, Brittney Binder and Crystal Mercer - who take 13 letters in basketball with them.

Kari Barrett, a junior, will be back, as will the sophomore trio of Julie Rampley, Misti Davis and Katie Betzen. There are more where they came from; the girls' JV was 19-8 this season.

Herd boys to visit Pampa

Win there 'sets stakes' for Randall game

The Hereford boys' basketball team faces probably its toughest game of the season Tuesday in Pampa.

Pampa clinched the District 1-4A title by beating Caprock, 103-64, Friday night. It was the third straight time Pampa has topped 100 points. The Harvesters are ranked third in Class 4A by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches. They beat Hereford 72-63 Jan. 19 in Hereford, and now the Herd has to take them on in Pampa.

"We've got to do a better job of handling the pressure their guards put on our guards," Herd coach Randy Dean said. "We had some chances to get the ball to our post men in the first game, and we let their pressure bother us to the point where we didn't execute."

The Whitefaces, who were off Friday, stand 8-2 in district play and 19-9 overall. Randall visits Hereford Friday for the regular season finale. The Raiders moved into a tie for second in the district at 8-2 after defeating Borger, 81-67, Friday night.

Randall, now 18-13 overall, hosts Caprock Tuesday. If Randall beats Caprock - the Longhorns are 4-6 and 9-20 - that sets up two scenarios for Friday's game:

1) If Hereford loses to Pampa, the Herd goes into Friday's game at 8-3, one game behind Randall at 9-2. A Hereford win Friday would force a district playoff, much like Hereford had with Canyon last season.

2) If Hereford beats Pampa, both Hereford and Randall go into Friday's game at 9-2. The winner moves on; the loser stays home.

"We know that the Pampa game sets the stakes for the Randall game," Dean said. "If we win against Pampa, it would make it winner-take-all Friday night. And the game Tuesday is important to us because we feel like we're supposed to be playing at that level."

All-Star sideshows nearly overshadow game

By WENDY E. LANE
AP Basketball Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Time was when the NBA All-Star game was just that, a game.

In the early days, players got a television set for participating, and the first couple of games were held in Boston, the only town where fans could be counted on to show up.

The event the league is putting on here this weekend is nothing short of an extravaganza, a three-day festival of stars, promotions, shows and basketball. Michael Jordan, Shaquille O'Neal and Hakeem Olajuwon will be there, but they'll be sharing the spotlight with rap stars, Hollywood stars and even a couple of baseball stars.

The story of how the annual game to showcase pro basketball became the All-Star Weekend is just one example how the NBA has blurred the line between sports and entertainment, making itself into a global attraction and its players into pop culture superstars.

In the early 1980s, the NBA was in decline, plagued by drug scandals and suffering from acute lack of fan and sponsor interest. "We ranked down there with tractor pulls and professional wrestling," said Rick Welts, NBA executive vice president and chief marketing officer. "It just wasn't considered a good association or investment."

In late 1983, it was Welts' job to find corporate sponsors for the slumping league, which was about to get a new commissioner to replace the retiring Larry O'Brien. Denver was to host that season's All-Star Game, O'Brien's final event before handing the reins to David Stern.

While having drinks with Welts at New York's Waldorf-Astoria hotel, Carl Scheer, then general manager of the Nuggets, suggested the NBA steal an idea from the old, gimmick-loving ABA and have a slam-dunk competition before the All-Star Game.

Welts then appropriated another idea from another sport, believing the NBA could put on an old-timers game, just like baseball did with its Cracker Jack Old-Timers game. The notion served two purposes at once, he said.

"Stern was stressing getting in better touch with the history of the game," he said. "The NBA had turned its back on the people that had contributed to its growth."

Plus, baseball's old-timers game provided excellent exposure for the sponsor.

Welts was able to line up sponsors for both a slam dunk and an old-timers game on the Saturday before the 1984 All-Star Game. Tickets were $3, and ESPN even taped the event for later broadcast.

Both events were resounding successes, with greats like Oscar Robertson coming back to play, and Julius Erving, winner of the ABA's first dunk contest back in 1976, dazzling the NBA with his above-the-rim acrobatics.

"It was fun in a way the All-Star Game hadn't been fun in the past," Welts said. "What happened that day was magical. It was a vehicle to remind how people thought about the NBA, including our players and owners."

The '84 event attracted 355 media members, almost all from the United States. This weekend, about 1,600 reporters and broadcasters from around the world will be covering the event, including at least 15 foreign broadcast crews. The game will be seen on television in 200 million homes around the world.

And before that game comes a barrage of activities, shows and gimmicks, including All-Star Saturday, now in its 12th year and bigger than ever. Now tickets cost $30, the event is broadcast live and even the last-place finisher in the slam dunk and 3-point contests takes home a cool grand for participating.

Another offshoot is the NBA Jam Session, a huge basketball theme park so that families priced out of the main event can get a taste of All-Star Weekend for just a few bucks and have their pictures taken next to cardboard cutouts of their favorite NBA stars. Close to 100,000 people are expected to pass through the exhibits and play dozens of games that test basketball skills.

There's also a round of invitation-only parties and a youth celebration starring Boyz II Men during which NBA players encourage kids to stay in school. Almost all the events have a sponsor's name attached.

That's because these days, Welts has no trouble selling companies on the league.

"The NBA was chosen primarily because we think that the sport is at the forefront of what's exciting and fast," said Frank Arthofer, president of Nestle, the new sponsor of the slam dunk competition. "It has a broad appeal. It's very grassroots."

Sometimes, the promotional events are just as popular than the ones featuring the NBA's own players. A notable case in point is a 3-point shot worth $1 million.

Dreamed up by folks at the NBA and the Foot Locker athletic footwear chain, the contest was designed to promote the All-Star fan ballooning held at its stores. Last year, a 16-year-old boy from Ohio was selected to take the shot during halftime of the Schick Rookie Game on Saturday.

So compelling was the buildup that TNT's ratings jumped half a percent during halftime as people tuned in to watch Michael Hoban put up an airball amidst a swarm of cameras, then dissolve into tears in the arms of his family.

"It was the event of the night," said Jerry Canning, Foot Locker's vice president of sports marketing. "Everybody was on the edge of their seats."

It was definitely more exciting than the slam dunk competition, which has lost some of its luster since the days when Dr. J and Jordan participated.

Has the team mascot dunk contests, stay-in-school rallies and million-dollar 3-point shots overshadowed the game itself? Is Hakeem vs. Shaq and Jordan's first All-Star Game since 1993 getting buried underneath a heap of hype and corporate sponsored sideshows?

"There isn't any danger it's going to overshadow the best 24 basketball players in the world," Welts said.

Some purists think the game should be allowed to stand on its own, but the NBA believes bigger is better.

"I think those purists wouldn't have had a basketball league to watch if we had followed that path," Welts said. "Our fans want and expect entertainment value at our games. If that begins to detract from play on the court, we should stop it."

"That's the test - if in any way detracts from the basketball court, then it's a bad idea. I don't care how much money it makes."

Mavs struggle in early part of season

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Mavericks were going to make the playoffs this year according to everyone but coach Dick Motta. It looks like the grizzled veteran was right.

After living up to the hype by opening the season with a franchise-best 4-0 start, things unraveled quickly.

Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn had a tiff, Mashburn got hurt and Dallas had a stretch of 21 losses in 24 games. Now, Mashburn is out for the season with a knee injury following surgery next week.

Did somebody say lottery? "Let's face it," Motta said this past week following Dallas' third loss of the season to Minnesota and the second in three days. "We're not very good."

Let us count the ways: -The Mavericks have lost four overtime games that they could have won in regulation, but missed very makeable last-second shots. It happened on consecutive nights, with different players each blowing layups on the same designed play.

-The lack of an inside game is destroying Dallas. Although built like a pipe-cleaner, Lorenzo Williams was a shot-blocking presence until he got a finger in his eye, broke a bone and has missed the last month.

Top pick Cherokee Parks hasn't earned many minutes (he's averaging the fewest points of all first-round selections) and fellow first-rounder Loren Meyer has been a pleasant surprise, although he's a foul-magnet.

-The Mavericks often are better off shooting bombs than jumpers. Many nights, their 3-point shooting percentage tops their overall field-goal percentage. Again, that can be linked to having no one inside who can sink in those little high-percentage shots.

-Other than an amazing play this past week where Popeye Jones won a tip-off at the free-throw line and punched the ball into the basket as the first quarter expired, Dallas has had no luck.

A recent loss to Milwaukee could be partially blamed on the clock not starting when a pass was in-bounded in the final seconds. Dallas hurried a shot, then with extra time added the Bucks scored the winning basket.

"I thought we had lost every way imaginable," Jason Kidd said. "But that's a new one."

Other oddities the first half of this season include a spoiled chicken dinner on the team plane that left several players with food poisoning; guard Tony Dumas being arrested after concocting a ridiculous scheme about having been carjacked when he really abandoned his car after an accident; and Motta being thrown out of a recent game just 50 seconds after the tipoff.

There have been injury problems, the worst being Mashburn's. Also, Jim Jackson has been slow to recover from the severe ankle sprain that ended his season last year, plus new ones to emerging guard Lucious Harris and Williams.

Despite all those reasons/excuses for the poor first half, Dallas has shown flashes of still being a team on the rise. The Mavs have defeated top teams such as Orlando, Seattle (twice), San Antonio and Houston, and one of their overtime losses was to Chicago.

Plus, they're not far off last year's pace when they finished just a few games out of the final playoff spot.

The best reason of all to have any hope for the Mavericks is Kidd.

Make that, All-Star starter Jason Kidd.

Kidd - the first Maverick to start an All-Star Game in the team's 16-year history and the first Dallas player on the squad since 1990 - has been asserting himself as a floor leader and go-to guy more and more recently.

"There were a couple of days when we were on the verge of saying, 'The hell with it,'" said Kidd, who sparked the team's recent surge with a stretch of three triple-doubles in six games.

"But we didn't fold when we could've. That's not this team's character. In April, I'll be surprised if you don't hear us talking about the playoffs again."

Rockets sputtering along according to plan

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - Rudy Tomjanovich can't understand why others don't understand the nature of the Houston Rockets.

He thinks everyone should know them now: they sputter-spurt through the season, facing crises that would destroy most teams and go into the NBA playoffs sucking wind.

Then they win the championship. The Rockets have done it two years in a row now and Tomjanovich hopes it works again because he has problems - again.

"It's the same every year with the Rockets," Tomjanovich said. "There are always problems. One year they started 14-0, 22-1 and then struggled. With 10 games left in the season we weren't even in first place."

But they came alive in the playoffs and won the first of their back-to-back championships.

The Rockets didn't wait until the end of the season to fall out of first place this year. They made it into third place before this weekend's All-Star break.

Although the Rockets started strong, injuries and slumps have the Rockets reeling once again.

Mario Elie, the inspirational role player off the bench, went on the injury list with a broken right wrist on Jan. 20 and won't be back until early April.

Point guard Kenny Smith, who quarterbacked the Rockets to two championships, is suffering through one of the worst shooting slumps of his career, forcing Tomjanovich to start Eldridge Recasner, who played last season in the Continental Basketball Association.

Robert Horry, a superstar in the playoffs, has returned to the inconsistency that has often plagued him in regular season. Clyde Drexler has recovered after missing nine games with knee and shin injuries.

The Rockets made the big move a year ago, trading Otis Thorpe to Portland for Drexler. The trade was enough to get the Rockets into the playoffs and moving toward their second title.

Tomjanovich doesn't think a trade is as critical this year to get the Rockets rolling.

"I was the guy who made the deal (last year)," Tomjanovich said. "I said we weren't going to win it and that's why we made the trade. This year, we have some assets that we didn't have in the past."

Recasner could be the surprise new ingredient. It was a surprise when Tomjanovich elevated Recasner to the starting lineup instead of Sam Cassell. But Tomjanovich likes the chemistry of Cassell off the bench.

It was a surprise for Recasner too. He didn't feel comfortable telling superstar Olajuwon and Drexler where to go while directing the offense.

Now he accepts the challenge. "If they (coaches) didn't want me out there, I wouldn't be out there," Recasner said. "Now I'm feeling more comfortable telling those guys where to go."

"I'm beginning to feel I belong whereas at first I really didn't. That's the biggest thing now, just feeling comfortable and playing my game and not worrying who I'm playing with or against."

Chucky Brown came in from the CBA last season and gave the Rockets a playoffs push and now Recasner and Henry James bring their CBA backgrounds to the NBA.

"He's been (Recasner) our most consistent outside shooter here for awhile," Tomjanovich said. "I'm seeing a lot of good signs, especially his competitiveness and willing to go in and put his nose in and grab the tough NBA rebounds."

Tomjanovich is just trying to hold the ship together until the playoffs and the post-All-Star break should help. Houston plays 13 of its last 19 games at home.

"We've talked to the guys about feeling good about our team," Tomjanovich said. "Things aren't going good right now but we're going to hang in there and look at the positives. We have the second half of the year and we have some practice and we have to admit that we have to get better."

"Then, let's do it again."

Spurs in 1st place at All-Star break

By KELLEY SHANNON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Spurs coach Bob Hill blames his team's January slump on injuries and a nonstop schedule. After finding time to rest and heal, the Spurs are back to winning more games than they lose.

San Antonio won 14 of 16 games before dropping four of five games from Jan. 18-24. During the losing stretch, Sean Elliott suffered with a sprained right foot and J.R. Reid with a sprained left ankle. Also, the Spurs had played nine games in 14 days, culminating in the losses.

"We have struggled to make shots and free throws," Hill said. "That's fatigue, that's injury."

After their little slide, the Spurs won four of five games, defeating Portland, the Los Angeles Clippers and Minnesota before losing to Orlando and beating Charlotte.

"We needed a little time just to rest and get some bodies healed up," David Robinson said.

Now that they have, the Spurs, who were 30-12 after Tuesday's victory, are battling for the lead in the Western Conference.

"We're in a dogfight with Utah, Seattle and Houston for the best record in the West," Robinson said. "We don't want to lose any games."

Hill took advantage of a couple of non-game days last week to hold rigorous practices, something the Spurs hadn't been doing during their hectic January schedule.

"We needed some good hard practices and that's what we had," Robinson said. "I think that's going to pay off for us."

The Spurs this season are without the rebounding of Dennis Rodman, who was traded to Chicago during the offseason. San Antonio posted a 62-20 record last season - the league's best - and advanced to the Western Conference finals before losing to the Houston Rockets.

Hill said his team isn't used to many regular-season losses, noting the Spurs have won about 75 percent of the time since he took over as coach in August 1994.

"We've won since I've been here. This (January slump) is really the first time we've run into losing four games in five, whatever it was," Hill said. "So we've enjoyed a great deal of success."

The coach said he learned from the losing streak.

"You always learn a lot about a lot of people when you lose. You don't learn much about people when you win," he said. "As long as the team manages this little slide that we've had then everything will work out."

Managing it means avoiding finger-pointing and second-guessing and concentrating on the games to come, he said.

"When the team loses and we've been on a slide then it's everyone's responsibility to accept some of that on their own shoulders and remedy it as a team," Hill said.

The Spurs are hoping they've done just that.

Unhappy with Alamodome, Spurs consider move north

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - The Spurs likely will decide by the end of this season whether to move out of the Alamodome and into a privately financed arena north of the city, the team's chairman says.

The franchise is considering moving into a privately funded arena between San Antonio and Austin along the Interstate 35 corridor, Spurs chairman Robert McDevitt said Thursday.

"If you move towards Austin, there are more businesses up there than there are here, more big businesses," McDevitt said, citing Austin's expanding high-tech corporate community.

The San Antonio Express-News reported in a copyright story Thursday the team may move into a privately financed arena. The newspaper also reported Mayor Bill Thornton is a odds with top NBA officials over a new arena.

The Spurs are not happy playing in the city-owned Alamodome, which team executives say is too huge for basketball and does not have suitable luxury suites or box seats - big revenue sources for an NBA team.

On Wednesday, NBA Commissioner David Stern and Deputy Commissioner Russ Granik suggested the Spurs' continued success rests with the team eventually playing in a new venue.

"The Alamodome is not a state-of-the-art basketball facility. It has to do with luxury suites and the suites being in places suitable for corporate ownership and for their entertainment purposes," Granik said in the Express-News.

Thornton has opposed spending public money on a new Spurs arena. He responded to the NBA officials' remarks Wednesday bluntly.

"I do not believe the city should build an arena," he told the Express-News. "That's a short sentence, with small words that are clear."

The case that Thornton is hearing being made for a new arena is exclusivity, intimacy and luxury suites, and that, to me, is just not a motivation to take government dollars and build such a facility," Thornton said.

To qualify for the honor, a candidate must have performed an heroic act of human-livesaving within Texas during 1995. Preferably, it should be related to farming and ranching.

The 1995 winner was Felipe Ortiz of Hamilton who is credited with saving the life of J.K. Wilhelm.

A letter of nomination should include a written account of the incident and the names, addresses and telephone numbers of all persons involved. Newspaper clippings and photos should also accompany when available.

Feedlot employees take part in WTAMU management program

Area feedlot employees are participating in a first-ever feedyard management certificate program offered by West Texas A&M University.

The College of Business and the area's cattle-feeding industry have teamed together to provide a way for feedlot employees to gain management training.

Dr. Jerry Miller, dean of the T. Boone Pickens College of Business, said that the largest concentration of fed cattle in the nation is right here in the Texas Panhandle.

Miller said that the industry has a responsibility to prepare local residents for management positions in the cattle-feeding industry.

The students meet in the Hereford High School once a week from 4 - 10 p.m. on Tuesdays for English 101 and CIS 105, taught by WTAMU faculty members Kathleen Ebell and Dr. Terri Giddens.

Many of the students are in managerial positions and the classes are aimed to improve their skills.

Miller is planning to offer similar courses in Dumas beginning in the fall of 1996.

Hereford's Mike Browning, manager, and Tommy Davis, cattle manager, at Bartlett Cattle Co. II; Hope Chavarria, cattle clerk, and Charles Estep, head doctor, at Cattle Town Inc.; Tye Killingsworth, cowboy at Hereford Feed Yard; Pat Provence, bookkeeper/office manger at Schumacher Feedyard Inc.; Gilbert Mendoza, mill manager, and Joe Stefanotos, assistant cattle manager, at Southwest Feedyard; and Kevin Smith, cowboy at Sugarland Feed Yard, Inc., were among those selected for the program.

Participants were selected based on employer recommendation, management potential and interest, and compliance with the University's academic admission standards.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag
I hope that all of you enjoyed the warm open weather that we experienced this past week. It sure beats those near zero temperatures that we had early last week and the week before. Most of us could have tolerated the temperature much better if we had gotten some good moisture out of the system that passed through our area.

I guess we should be thankful for the amount that we did receive, but like I heard one farmer say recently, "It just seems like it has forgotten how to rain on Deaf Smith County". One thing about being involved in agriculture, you have to keep your sense of humor and always be optimistic about what lies ahead. Just remember, things will eventually get better. Please note that I said eventually, to most producers that seems like forever.

While waiting for things to get better, it is most important that both livestock and crop producers do their very best at managing their enterprises. This time of year, as land is being prepared for spring planting, take time to carefully look at your operation.

Analyze your management practices and your ways of doing things. Sometimes self examination is difficult, but it must be done to keep on the right track.

We in the Texas Agricultural Extension Service have a tool that will allow producers to analyze their operations and examine their impact before implementation. The tool is a computer program called "BudPro".

This program is a budget program that allows producers to vary income, expenses, farming and ranching practices and inputs to determine what the potential outcome might be in relation to potential income.

The program is very fast and efficient way to put in many different variables and give producers the opportunity to see what might work for them.

For you crop producers, now is an excellent time to have soil tests run for your spring and summer planted crops. It is recommended that fields be tested at a very minimum of every three years, with yearly sampling an even better choice.

Soil sample kits are available at the extension office. Samples may be sent to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service Soil Testing Laboratory in College Station. You might want to contact your local fertilizer dealer as many of them will sample your fields for you.

Soil testing can save you money by using the nutrients that are already in the soil and not applying excess fertilizer that your crop might not need.

Producers needing more information can contact the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573. See you next week.

There was a time when we expected nothing of children but obedience as opposed to the present when we expect everything of them but obedience.

Several Deaf Smith County 4-H members have excelled at the Ft. Worth, El Paso, and San Antonio Livestock Shows. Midway through the Spring Show season the Deaf Smith county youth have done extremely well with several placing animals at each of these shows.

Placings for the Fort Worth and El Paso Shows were listed in the Tuesday edition of The Herford Brand.

The Deaf Smith County Livestock Judging Team members were also in competition in El Paso.

The team consisting of Truett Schlabs, Ted Peabody III, Courtney Crawford, Amanda Sims and Jory

McKibben placed third in the overall competition. Truett Schlabs placed third in the sheep division, eighth in beef, and was the fourth high individual in the contest. The team also placed in the Sheep and Beef divisions.

In the breeding show at San Antonio Rusty Dutton exhibited the first-place Hampshire gilts in classes 16 and 17 of the Junior Gilt Show. He was named Champion Hampshire Gilt and Supreme Champion Overall. He received a $6,000 scholarship for his efforts.

Deaf Smith County will have additional 4-H members at San Antonio in the Market Show throughout the week of Feb. 12 - 17. Later in the month they will travel to Houston to exhibit their projects.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Meats labeled Choice and Select may never be the same.

Starting July 1, the Agriculture Department will revise rules for grades of carcass beef and slaughter cattle.

The department's Agricultural Marketing Service said carcasses 30 to 42 months of age - known as "B" maturity - with small or slight marbling degrees will be removed from Choice and Select grades and included in the Standard grade.

Lon Hatamiya, administrator of the marketing service, said the change is being made at the request of the National Cattlemen's Association.

"The 'B' maturity carcasses often vary in palatability, which contributes significantly to inconsistency of eating quality of beef in the Choice and Select grades," the service said in an announcement.

Washington making sugar beet producers wary

By JENNIFER LOVEN
Associated Press Writer

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) - Sugar beets used to be known as the mortgage-payer, a reliable crop that could be counted on to bring good prices when other crops on the farm weren't doing so well.

But these days, there's some wariness among sugar beet farmers in Michigan's Saginaw Valley region and in 13 other beet-producing states.

While the growing, harvesting and processing of sugar beets nears the end of its annual course, lawmakers in Washington are contemplating changes that could dramatically alter this $6.1 billion-a-year industry.

No one is sure yet of the details or the exact impact the changes could have. Nonetheless, sugar beet growers and company executives are resigned that changes are coming and are preparing to adapt with the times.

"We have to live with it," said Ray Van Driessche, president of the Monitor Sugarbeet Growers Inc. and the owner of a 1,100-acre farm near Bay City. "But it's going to take some time to change our practices in the meantime."

Several factors in the last two to three years had already combined to make growing sugar beets a less attractive option. Sugar beet prices fell, the cost of fertilizer and weed control rose, yields got smaller, new varieties turned out to be less hardy and weather conditions have been unfavorable.

Then came the Republican majority in Congress and its commitments to reform and shrink government.

The industry has overcome - for now - attempts to eliminate Washington's complex program of loans, quotas and price supports to guarantee sugar beet and sugarcane farmers a minimum return. But with elimination still an option and changes to federal sugar policy in the works, many farmers and companies are on edge.

A farm bill is on hold in the U.S. House while that chamber takes a three-week recess, and began moving through the Senate this week.

Some of the changes, which had been negotiated as part of the massive budget reconciliation package and seem likely to remain intact in the new farm bill, include:

- Ending domestic production quotas that in high-yield years help to keep sugar from flooding the market and depressing prices.

- Lowering the government's support price for cane and beet sugar by 1 cent per pound.

- Changing the terms of government loans when sugar imports are under a certain level to require companies repay in cash, instead of in sugar as they could before when prices fell too low to sell profitably. However, if more than 1.5 million tons of sugar are imported, the government would continue to take sugar as repayment. (The government says between 1990 and 1994, imports averaged 2.1 million tons a year.)

- Increasing a special deficit-reducing tax that sugar producers pay the government by 25 percent.

Large commercial sugar users, who fought to dismantle the sugar program, complain that it ensures U.S. sugar prices are higher than on the world market and drives up the cost of their products.

But the growers and companies say that is untrue. They argue the world price is artificially deflated and American sugar actually is 28 percent cheaper than in other developed nations.

They say they need the sugar program because they cannot otherwise compete against heavily subsidized imported sugar. They also contend the sugar program costs American taxpayers nothing because of the deficit-reducing tax and the fact there are so few loan forfeitures - just three in 10 years.

Ronald Helmreich and his son farm sugar beets, along with corn, dry beans, soybeans and wheat, on 2,700 acres between Bay City and Midland. He, and other Michigan growers, say the sugar program is the only way they have survived in the hard times of the last few years.

"We're at a minimum profit level right now," Helmreich said.

Though most growers like Helmreich say the proposed changes to the sugar program are less than perfect, they can accept them because the basic program is intact.

That's especially true in Michigan, where many say growers and companies are better positioned to prosper under the changes because it's one of the highest producing states with nearly the lowest costs.

"If it goes through as we expect, I can see us weathering the storm," Helmreich said.

Van Driessche agreed. He believes the farmers most likely to stop growing sugar beets or lose their farms entirely are those who are in deep trouble already.

"We're going to have two to three, maybe four, years of some pretty tough times," Van Driessche said. "But once the industry adjusts, then it will be a stronger market."

Unlike the growers, who are basically in agreement, Michigan's two sugar companies take opposite views.

David Roche, president of Saginaw-based Michigan Sugar Co., the much larger of the two companies, calls the changes "too harsh." He fears an erosion of the sugar program's protections may cause his company to eventually lose its steady sugar beet supply.

"Where is the farm bill going to take us? We don't know. It's uncharted waters," Roche said.

Bob Hetzler, president of Monitor Sugar Co. in Bay City, thinks the deal being cut in Congress is exactly what the industry - especially in Michigan - needs.

He says he is happiest about the provisions eliminating domestic quotas. He feels that is an unneeded government intrusion that unfairly affects Michigan's highly efficient growers and processors.

He acknowledges that part of the reason he can afford to lose the safety net that others feel they need is his company's unique marketing position. One of the smallest sugar companies in the country, Monitor's customer base is mostly in Michigan, meaning cheaper freight costs.

But despite his optimistic outlook, Hetzler's company still is taking steps to prepare for heavier competition by continuing to invest in modern equipment and looking for ways to keep costs down.

And Hetzler also is personally meeting with all Monitor's contracted growers to encourage them to stick with sugar beets.

Those preparations may not be enough, as the industry's battle to retain the sugar program is far from over.

Jim Johnson, vice president of the United States Beet Sugar Association, which lobbies for the processors, is certain that Congress will vote this year on whether to kill the sugar program. A vote could come as soon as this month, if such an amendment were offered when the farm bills come to the floor of the House or Senate.

Johnson believes the reforms already negotiated are the industry's best protection against elimination. "If we spent last year stonewalling and opposing any changes, I think we would have lost," he said.

Most companies and growers, as well as their lobbyists in Washington, paint a dire picture of the future, should the program be eliminated.

They predict many growers would be forced out of the sugar beet business by a precipitous drop in prices.

Beef oversupply a trend not likely to continue

By KATIE FAIRBANK
AP Business Writer

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Texas ranchers' stake in steaks is worth less this year because of a cattle glut. An oversupply of beef has caused cattle prices to drop by 35 percent in the last three years from a peak of $1.03 a pound in 1993 to 68 cents a pound at the end of 1995, according to the National Cattlemen's Association in Colorado.

A big drop for ranchers, but just a slight drop for beef eaters who saw store prices fall to about $2.60 a pound in 1995, with advertised specials going lower. The U.S. Agriculture Department expects another 2 percent drop in beef consumer costs this year.

The beef oversupply is good news for hamburger lovers, but bad news for cattlemen and for Texas, which had $5.9 billion in sales within the beef industry in 1995.

Still, it's fortunate that the trend is unlikely to stay.

"When you go back and take a historical look at the beef cattle industry in Texas it's been a cyclical market," said Rick Perry, state agriculture commissioner. "We've known for some time that this market was going to cycle down. But it's come and we're dealing with it."

Chuck Lambert, an economist for the cattlemen's association, said prices increased steadily from 1989 to 1993, prompting ranchers to overproduce. Prices then crashed in June of 1994 and the decline has continued and is expected to go at least through the third quarter of 1997.

"That's the nature of the cattle cycle," Lambert said.

Cattle herd sizes go in 10-year waves and 1996 is expected to be part of the phase where cows are sold off as ranchers respond to the increase in supply and drop in price, according to The Beef Brief, a news publication on the issues and trends in the cattle industry.

That means there will probably be even more beef on the market and possibly lower prices.

"Three years ago the feed yards were the first to experience difficulty," said Murray Edwards of Abilene Cattle Feeders, the largest cattle feed lot in the region. "They were losing money - just bleeding like a sieve. It's now gone down to the cow-calf guy."

Aside from the natural cycle, ranchers' headaches have been increased by high corn prices, the result of a poor 1995 crop. With costs up, cattle feeders are bidding less for cattle to fatten and ranchers will liquidate their herds even more quickly, analysts say.

Texas ranchers aren't alone with their woes. Mexico has been impacted even harder.

Not only did the peso drop in 1994, but Mexico ranchers also had to contend with drought. The result was many ranchers in Mexico sold their cattle within the same period, once again increasing the beef on the market.

"It's kind of like the pig being swallowed by the python," Edwards said explaining that the worst of Mexico's herd liquidation is over.

Mexico is further along in the cycle than Texas, so ranchers there may soon be looking to replace cattle.

"Should the drought be broken and range conditions improve in Mexico, we should expect Mexican ranchers to purchase herd replacements from us," Ernest E. Davis, an economist at Texas A&M wrote for Texas Farmer-Stockman. "This would assist us in reducing our own herd size and take potential beef off our market."

Poor moisture conditions in the fall of last year in Texas meant poor winter grazing pastures. Again, the result was a reduced price for calves.

"We're seeing the roll of the dice with the weather," Edwards said.

But historically what goes around, comes around in the cattle business.

"I think it's a little premature to be panicked about the cycle for next year," Edwards said.

Astronomer calls for trip to asteroid

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) - Mars too far? How about a jaunt to an asteroid?

A trip to one of Earth's nearest neighbors beyond the moon is being proposed as a scientifically important and doable next step to get humans back into space exploration.

Astronomer Eugene S. Shoemaker of the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz., said Friday that there are 50 to 100 mini-planets roughly 10 million miles away that astronauts could visit in a six-month round trip.

Shoemaker, best known for discovering the comet that slammed into Jupiter's atmosphere in 1994, made his case for an asteroid trip at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Asteroids are already on the exploration agenda. NASA will launch an unmanned probe next week to Eros, a nearby asteroid.

But Shoemaker contends humans should take a look in person.

"I can give you scientific reasons to be excited, but the real reason is getting back out into space," he said. "I don't think I will live long enough to see us get to Mars."

He said the larger asteroids, which are roughly a half-mile across, are an ideal spot for geologists to study one of the mysteries of the solar system - how dust clumped together to form the planets.

These rocks are left over from that period. Some are planetesimals, the chunks of stuff that came together to build the Earth.

While unable to guess how much such a trip might cost, Shoemaker said it would be far less than a trip to Mars, which some estimate could reach $500 billion.

Reaction to the idea was mixed. Louis Friedman of the Planetary Society thought it made sense. "These are steppingstones into human exploration of the solar system," he said. "There will be tremendously exciting adventures there."

However, NASA Administrator Daniel S. Goldin discounted the idea, at least for now.

"I love what he's talking about, but you've got to get into a new think," Goldin said. "You don't just warm up the blood by having a multibillion-dollar mission. You have to have a focused approach. You have to answer fundamental questions. You have to overcome barriers."

One of these barriers - which Goldin called "shameful" - is that NASA does not have a launch vehicle that could carry astronauts on such a mission.

However, Shoemaker countered that NASA already is working on a new type of reusable spaceship that could help humans get there.

Former astronaut Gary E. Payton is in charge of a project to create a spacecraft that, like an airplane, could be quickly serviced and fueled between flights. The space shuttle, in contrast, must be laboriously taken apart between missions.

Instead of costing $10,000 to launch a pound of payload into orbit, this one should be able to do it for $1,000. NASA will decide this summer what the new craft will look like. A prototype, the X33, should be in the air in 1999.

Shoemaker said this launch vehicle could lift spaceship parts into Earth orbit. There they could be assembled into a people-carrying asteroid explorer. All of this should be possible in about 15 years, when all of the nearby asteroids have been mapped, he said.

Survivor of three open heart surgeries is in 'rare category'

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

A man who has survived three open heart surgeries is certainly speaking from experience when he says, "Don't ignore the symptoms that might be warning signs of a heart condition."

Jimmy McDonald was born on April 14, 1956, with the same heart problem that claimed the life of his twin sister only 93 days later.

But through her death, doctors were able to diagnose McDonald's problem.

The original diagnosis was aortic stenosis, pulmonary defect/congestive heart failure. And doctors through the years have continued to confirm that diagnosis.

McDonald's first open heart surgery was one of six such operations performed in the United States during the last week of February 1962.

Of those six, he is the only one still alive.

That first operation was performed by a team of military doctors in William Beaumont General Hospital in El Paso.

"They repaired the enlarged aortic valve. They trimmed it to the thickness of a cigarette paper. (Now they compare it to the thickness of a contact lens). They remade the valve in an operation that lasted 14 hours and 52 minutes," said June Crooks, McDonald's mother, of Hereford.

This procedure was very new and not many doctors were trained to do it.

"As a matter of fact, the operation was delayed because the doctors who were scheduled to do it were on the rescue ship waiting for John Glenn to return from his space flight," said McDonald.

Following the operation, McDonald was in a coma for four days.

"Doctors were afraid he would be brain damaged because his body temperature had been lowered for the operation and was kept that way for so long," said Mrs. Crooks.

McDonald did not have any brain damage, however. He had a slow recovery, but he did recover and was able to live a normal life.

"I made up my mind after the first surgery that I would not let my condition keep me from leading a normal life," said McDonald.

He did most things his five brothers and one sister did until the repairs on the aortic valve began to wear out and he started experiencing symptoms that alerted him of the recurring problem.

McDonald's doctor regularly kept a close watch on his heart condition from 1974 until 1981, when it was determined the valve that had been repaired would have to be replaced.

Even though there had been many advances in this field, it still was no simple task to find a qualified surgeon to replace the failing valve.

The search took two years before a doctor was found who would agree to do the operation.

Dr. John Baay had only been in Amarillo a few days when he examined McDonald early in September 1983, and said he would do the surgery "when it was time."

That time arrived sooner than the doctor anticipated.

McDonald suffered a stroke shortly after the examination and spent 10 days on medication to thin his blood.

Two days later, on Sept. 23, Dr. Baay performed the surgery to replace the damaged aortic valve with a prosthetic heart valve.

Once again, McDonald's surgery was successful--but this time it was followed by a rapid recovery.

"Anyone with a heart condition has to keep a positive attitude," said McDonald.

He believes his positive attitude has helped him live as normal a life as possible, which is what he continued to do following the second open heart surgery.

McDonald suffered two strokes last year and after tests in November, it was determined that the aortic valve--once again--needed to be replaced.

McDonald began seeing his doctor on a weekly basis and was put on blood thinners again in preparation for the operation.

On Jan. 19, 1996, McDonald received a new mechanical heart valve in an operation that took a three-man team about five hours to complete.

"He is definitely in the rare category," said Dr. Masoud Alzeerah, a member of the team. "There are probably others who have had three successful open heart surgeries, but I don't know of any."

McDonald's mother believes it is "important to keep at it--keep after it and do it" if you have, or suspect you have, any kind of heart condition.

"See a doctor, do what he says and if you don't get better, see the doctor again," said Mrs. Crooks.

"It is important to be able to recognize the symptoms, such as tightness in the chest, shortness of breath and chest pains, that indicate you may have heart problems.

Do something then. It's better to be safe than to wait until it's too late and nothing can be done," said McDonald.

Then and now

At right, Jimmy McDonald proudly displayed six fingers to indicate he had reached his sixth birthday following his first open heart surgery in 1962. Above, a recuperating McDonald is pictured after his third successful open heart operation.

The couple plan to exchange wedding vows May 11, in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Hereford High School and is presently employed by Frito-Lay, Inc. of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom is also a HHS graduate and is currently attending West Texas A&M University pursuing an Agricultural Business and Economics degree. He is presently employed by Deaf Smith Electric Co-op.

HRMC announces plans for rehabilitation week

The Hereford Regional Medical Center is observing National Cardiac Rehabilitation Week Feb. 11-17.

Jim Robinson, hospital administrator, said that the program has brought great benefit to the patients of Hereford.

Instead of driving to Lubbock or Amarillo for rehabilitation (receiving from a heart attack or coronary artery bypass graft) they can access the service right here in Hereford," he said.

Scott Modersitzki has established a successful program that is still a pioneer among rural hospitals.

Modersitzki said that establishing the cardiac rehabilitation program required a major commitment from the administrator and the board, but it has paid off with achieving a healthier quality of life for patients.

Modersitzki works with the personal physician of patients who have been referred to the program. His role is to establish a safe exercise prescription and then implement and supervise the exercise program.

In the program each patient receives a health appraisal, risk assessment, and safety instructions on exercise standards, along with physical fitness testing procedures.

The rehabilitation is divided into three phases. During Phase I, while the patient is still in the hospital, the patient and family learn about cardiovascular disease and begin simple exercises.

Phase II consists of an exercise test to determine a safe level of exercise, and an exercise program on an outpatient basis.

The patient moves to a more self-directed atmosphere during Phase III. The patient learns to monitor pulse rate and adjust exercise intensity to maintain a safe home exercise program.

All participants in the program must be referred by their physicians for all phases of the program.

Any interested persons should call their physician or Scott Modersitzki at 364-2141, ext. 315 for more information.

Los Ciboleros Chapter DAR announces winners of American history essay contest

Los Ciboleros Chapter National Society Daughters of the American Revolution is pleased to announce the winners of the 1996 American History Essay Contest.

The contest is sponsored each year by the Chapter and is open to all students in public, private or parochial schools grades 5 through 8.

From West Central, Heather Calkins was the fifth grade first place winner. Heather is a student in Mrs. Hatley's social studies class.

Stewart Carr, fifth grade, received second. He is a student in Mrs. Bigham's class.

Sixth grade first place goes to Joanna Olson, a student of Mrs. Esqueda and second place goes to Brandon Bigham, a student of Mr. Stokes.

Hereford Junior High winner was Kara Landrum, first place/best over all essay. Carolyn Waters is Kara's Social Studies teacher.

Librarian, Karen Solomon, will join DAR representatives to select the American History book to be presented to the school library.

The topic for this year's essays was "Explorers of America." Students chose an individual or group of people who explored a geographic area that later became part of the United States of America.

The essays were judged on historical accuracy, adherence to topic, organization of material, interest, originality, spelling, grammar, punctuation, and neatness.

Essays are read by a panel composed of DAR members and at least one non-DAR representative.

The essays of the first place winners were sent to State Society of NSDAR for judging.

One essay from each grade level will be selected as a state winner.

Awards to state winners are given at the State Conference each year.

The state selection is sent to National Headquarters and a national winner is selected and presented at the Continental Congress in Washington, D.C. in April and will be published in the DAR Magazine.

An Honors Tea will be given on April 14 to recognize the winners of the Hereford schools.

The students their families, teachers and school administrators will be the invited guests of Los Ciboleros Chapter.

The Bronze medals and Certificates of Merit will be presented to the students during the honors assembly at the schools at the close of the school year.

Thank You

Bob and June Crooks and family would like to thank their many friends and neighbors, for the prayers, visits, flowers and gifts for their son Jimmy, during his recent surgery and hospital stay.

A special thanks to the Sparkman Family, the Beavers Family, and the KPAN Radio Staff for the prayer chain that continued for so many days. Also to A2 Cattle Co. and Canoler Feeders for being so understanding for the time off of our jobs.

Red Cross Update

Rain and melting snow have caused extensive flooding in Oregon and Washington state in the North-western part of the country. Rivers have not yet crested. At least 43 American Red Cross shelters are open and experienced Disaster Services workers are being mobilized. The Red Cross is concentrating on providing shelter, food, and first aid to those evacuated from affected areas. At least 13 emergency response vehicles are in route or committed to these relief efforts.

The Disaster Staffing Center is currently recruiting volunteers to staff relief operations in the Pacific Northwest.

This information was transmitted to our Chapter by FAX from the American Red Cross Information Bulletin. This transmission was made possible by West Texas Rural Telephone whose staff hooked up our lines and Tonya and Dale Kleuskens whose financial donation made the lines possible.

Special thanks to Tonya and Dale Kleuskens and Jerry Walker of West Texas Rural Telephone.

Donations are being accepted for Disaster Relief efforts in the Northwest where the Red Cross has committed $10 million to help victims. Donations are also being accepted for The Earthquake Relief Effort in China. The American Red Cross is working with other Red Cross Societies to provide humanitarian assistance to the victims of the earthquake.

To send a donation for any of these disaster relief efforts, call 1-800-HELP-NOW to use your credit card or mail your donation to P.O. Box 1371, Hereford, TX. 79045 or bring it to the office at 224 South Main in Hereford.

Ann Landers

Anniversary observed

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Artho will celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary on Feb. 13. Joe Artho and Theresa Batenhorst were married in St. Mary's Catholic Church in Umbarger on Feb. 13, 1956. Mr. Artho is manager of Hereford Grain. The couple was honored recently with a reception hosted by their children, David Artho of Lubbock, Mike Artho of Dumas, Stephen Artho of Amarillo, Mark Artho of Dallas, and Dennis and Joseph Artho of Hereford.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For the past 10 years, my husband and I have been harassed by the Census Bureau. Every other year, we have been contacted to take part in a 45-minute survey about our home. Do we have indoor plumbing? Do we have rats? Exposed electrical wiring? How many bedrooms? Some questions are personal: How much do we earn? Do we own stocks? Bonds? How much did our house cost? What time does my husband leave for work? What school do my children attend?

The same questions are asked each time. The first two times, someone came to our house. The other times, we spoke to someone on the phone.

When we received a letter this year informing us of the upcoming survey, we decided not to participate. I called our lawyer and a citizens group and was told by both that it's strictly voluntary. When the Census Bureau phoned, I told the man, "No, thanks." Then, a woman came to our home. My husband refused to let her in, so she screamed her questions through the door. The next day, she called twice. I'm ashamed to admit I gave in and answered her questions.

After 10 years of participating, why don't they answer some of OUR questions? What is this information used for? Who has access to it? Why do they keep contacting us instead of someone new? Why weren't we told up-front that we'd be on their list for 10 years? Can you help us get off the list, so they will leave us alone?--Pestered Citizen told by your lawyer that you are under no obligation to talk to a census taker. That should settle it.

The Census Bureau conducts a variety of surveys. No outsider has access to the information. It is protected by law for 72 years. Your address has been showing up on the Census Bureau computers for 10 years because you have been a willing participant for that length of time. Unless you move, the only way you will get off the list is to put it in writing. Send a letter to the Bureau of the Census, giving the details of the survey, and tell them you no longer wish to be a participant.

Another word of caution: Make certain the person who claims to be a census taker is legitimate. Ask for credentials. The world is now a dangerous and untidy place. As my father used to say, "Trust everybody, but cut the cards."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for "Going Strong in Boise," that 70-year-old driver who thinks his need to get to the store is somehow related to his ability to drive. He backs up this assumption with the statement that teens have more accidents than elders. Who cares? Is there a contest going on?

If you live long enough, it's only a matter of time before you lose your ability to drive safely. "Boise" asks, "What am I supposed to do? Dry up?" No. You are supposed to take a bus or move closer to town so you can walk. What you are NOT supposed to do is kill or maim the rest of us because you have been driving for 40 years and never had an accident.

A good clue to impaired driving ability is when you are no longer able to drive up to the speed limit. So if your reflexes are waning, your eyes are failing or you can no longer turn your head from side to side, do yourself and everybody else a favor--sell your car.--Catherine M.

DEAR CATHERINE: Good advice. You really laid it on the line.

Thank you, from all of us.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Between the Covers

By JOE WEAVER

Happy Birthday tomorrow, Charlene! What is it now--45? Something like that, I think!

Two new displays for February! Daniel English is showing off his Legos. He's been amassing them for most of his six years, and he's got quite a collection. (His favorite is the tow truck.) The son of Jim and Mary English, Daniel is in the first grade at Aikman, and enjoys K'nex, model trains, and T-ball. He is active at First Assembly of God Church where he is a Royal Ranger.

We enjoy all of our displays, but every now and then, someone comes along with something really different. Brandi Martinez has a collection of theater masks, reminiscent of Greek drama. She is only displaying a few of the 75 or so she has, but there is a lot of variety evident in those few. She started collecting about 11 years ago when her mother bought her one because of her interest in clowns. She has collected them from different sources and even painted some herself.

CORRECTION!! In last week's column, the wrong date was reported for the Friends of the Library Open House with author Jodi Thomas. The correct date is Thursday, Feb. 29.

And speaking of Jodi Thomas, her book To Tame a Texan's Heart is going out this week. It's the sequel to The Texan and the Lady.

I don't recall a book raising such a stir in all quarters as has Primary Colors, a supposedly thinly-veiled and not too favorable look behind the scenes at Bill Clinton's 1992

Presidential race. Obviously written by an insider (former or current), the author, rather than hide his/her identity under a pen name, has chosen the less orthodox means of using "Anonymous." (It's selling more books than a pen name, too--you can count on that!). Speculations about the author run the gamut from Jennifer Flowers to the Pres himself, in an attempt to raise money for legal fees. The book, by the way, will be on the new shelf this week.

I've never been a devotee of Ladies' Home Journal, but if I happen to be in some doctor's waiting room, and it's the only thing to read, I turn to the "Can This Marriage Be Saved?" column. Sometimes I learn something there, if it's only to be thankful for my own wife (or to think how grateful she should be for me!). Now there's a book--a collection of real-life cases from the column titled, appropriately enough, Can This Marriage Be Saved? I scanned one before writing this column...it could, so I stopped there.

Oops--I almost forgot! The Family

Film is this week--Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Heritage Room. Free admission and cheap popcorn, as usual. The feature is On Our Own, an "exciting, humorous, and touching" story about four kids who strike out "on their own" when their mom dies and dad hits the road. Come join us!

Ruth Knox talks with David Moody, horticulturist, following his presentation on trees best suited to the Hereford climate. The program was sponsored by the Master Gardeners of Deaf Smith County recently in the county library.

Program for gardeners will be held in library

David Moody, a horticulturist from the Amarillo Parks and Recreation Department, presented a program to interested gardeners about using trees best suited for the Hereford climate.

The program was the first of three programs sponsored by the Master Gardeners of Deaf Smith County to help educate the community on the subject of horticulture.

The series is designed to help residents plan beautiful landscapes without spending a vast amount of time.

Subsequent programs will be held

On Feb. 26, Jan Furr, Carmen Flood, and Ella Marie Viegel will present a program on perennial flowers acclimated to the Hereford area.

Each of the series will be held at the Deaf Smith County Library beginning at 7 p.m. There will be a $5 charge per session. Everyone is welcome to attend.

The dinner will be held from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the Dawn Community Center.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have high blood pressure and have for many years. I take medication for it. My doctor did a 24-hour urine test. It showed my "creatinine clearance" was low. How serious is this? Can anything be done about it? The doctor blames my high blood pressure. I need answers on the test. I am a senior citizen, female. — B.H.

ANSWER: Creatinine (kree-AT-uh-nee) is a waste product from muscle breakdown. The kidney filters creatinine into the urine.

The clearance test provides a handy guide to how well the kidneys are doing that basic chore.

Older people might show lower-than-normal clearance.

The degree of insufficiency guides treatment. Your high blood pressure might be of interest, since any kidney damage it might be causing shows up early in the test. Such damage would lead to less-efficient clearance. In that event, the doctor would want to review your pressure-control program.

There are other causes of low creatinine clearance beyond blood-pressure problems. If need be, the doctor can obtain a sample of kidney tissue for microscopic examination.

I don't want to jump the gun and sound uncertain fears. Let your doctor reach a considered decision based on test numbers, your general health and other factors.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 62 and have been cancer-prone, so my doctor says I should have my colon checked. I do not have any history of cancer in my family. Is this test necessary? Is it painful? Expensive? Accurate? Painful? Does it have side effects?

ANSWER: Cancer authorities recommend that everyone older than 50 have a colon test. Since you are in a cancer-prone category, checking the colon — a common cancer site — makes even more sense.

The doctor would choose one of two basic forms of the test. In one, the doctor uses a sigmoidoscope to view the lower part of the colon — where most cancer appears. The second test is done with a colonoscope, which provides a broader view of the entire colon. Colonoscopy is more expensive than sigmoidoscopy, and provides lots more information.

Either test is pretty patient-friendly. Pain is not a significant feature. Side effects are not routinely anticipated. Once in a while, there is a small piercing of the colon wall by the instrument used. Such rare complications are readily corrected.

Sigmoidoscopy repeats are recommended every three to five years. The colonoscopy retest need is not a settled matter.

For more information on the colon, see my colitis report. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue, Box 5349, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a woman, 57, who recently had an echogram that showed calcium on the aorta valve. Is this serious? Do I now cut down on my calcium intake? I now take a calcium tablet each day. The diagnosis frightens me. — H.Z.

ANSWER: A little calcium on the aortic valve is not uncommon and usually is insignificant.

Calcium deposition is how nature protects injured tissue. The aorta, the main artery leaving the heart, takes a pounding, and some damage is noted in almost all of us at some point.

If the calcium is not weakening or narrowing the valve, then it can be accepted.

Your doctor would have told you if you needed to take precautions. You don't have to cut calcium intake. The kind of calcium seen on the valve is not the dietary kind.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My feet

get extremely numb and tingle. I don't know what to do. It is driving me insane. What is the best kind of doctor to see for this? — T.S.

ANSWER: Start with a family doctor, who can tell if you are dealing with a nerve problem or a blood-circulation disorder.

From what you describe in your note, you seem to have more of a nerve problem. If so, the answer would be more complex. The unanswered question would be, Why are the nerves acting this way?

If a cause is found, appropriate treatment often is helpful. Please go see your doctor. . . .

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

SOMETHING TO SHOP ABOUT

Never miss an important phone call again!

Juggling wedding plans and a career can make life pretty hectic. That's why Shannon Hacker is never very far away from her cellular phone, and why she depends on XIT Cellular so much!

As office manager for Foster Electronics of Hereford, she oversees a very demanding schedule generated by the local computer company's growing clientele.

And since she will soon join the married ranks, she also freely admits that her need for a cellular phone isn't always business related.

"I'd say I use my cellular phone 50-50 between business and personal calls," she said. "Lately though, I think my personal calls have increased, and more calls have been made on the road than in town."

"I've been an XIT Cellular customer for about two years, and they've been fabulous to me," she said. "XIT recently offered a FREE phone-cleaning clinic, and besides cleaning my phone, they found and repaired a defective battery. They are very customer-oriented and I'm very impressed!"

We're making life a little less hectic for people like Shannon Hacker!

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS
Last week's article focused on the need for a personal inventory. This article will give a step by step approach to conducting the inventory.

Conducting your personal inventory will take time, but will be worth the effort if you ever suffer a loss. There are several methods to use--making a written list, taking photographs, making a videotape, and combining a written list with photographs or a videotape.

1. Written list. While making a written list of possessions is time consuming, it can provide valuable information. When making a written list include a description of the item, the purchase price and date, the model and serial numbers, if any, and an approximate cash value. You may also want to include what it would cost to replace the item.

You can make your list using forms and booklets available from bookstores, stationary stores, Extension Publication 1330-Setting Your Household in Order, or by using loose leaf notebook paper in a notebook. During this process would be a good time to mark all possessions with engraving.

Conduct your inventory one room at a time. Start at one spot in the room, perhaps along one wall, and move around the room until you have listed every item. Don't forget pictures hanging on walls, rugs on the floor, special light fixtures or blinds covering skylights, and items in closets. Make sure you open drawers and doors in furniture and inventory items stored. The most important thing is to have a complete list of your property with good descriptions of items.

Descriptions are helpful for all items but particularly for unusual, valuable, or hard to find items. Descriptions should include pattern names, manufacturer names, serial and model numbers, etc.

To make a written inventory manageable, consider tackling one room at a time. Perhaps one weekend you begin with the living room. Break the job into smaller pieces. Spend as much time as you need listing and describing items and including model and serial numbers. When you have finished listing and describing items go back and fill in the remaining information--when it was purchased, the purchase price, etc. This part of the job will take a bit of time--maybe a few hours every night for the rest of the week. You probably have some things you bought many years ago. If you can't remember exact dates or prices, estimate.

When you have the living room finished, move on to another room and repeat the process. It may be several weeks before you have inventoried every room in your house. Now that you have the house inventoried, don't forget the garage, basement, attic, outside buildings like barns or storage sheds, mobile homes, campers, boats, etc. Inventory anywhere you have property stored.

Attach to your written inventory any receipts for items, particularly large ticket items like appliances and furniture. Also attach copies of any professional appraisals you may have.

To keep your inventory current, it is important to update it on a regular basis. Add new items as purchases are made. This is a good strategy to follow so that you can attach the receipts at the same time before they are lost. Delete items as you dispose of them or give things away.

2. Photographs. If making a complete written list is something you know you will never do, consider doing a photographic inventory. In the event of a loss, you would use the photographs to identify items lost or destroyed. You will need to take a picture of everything you own. Again, start at one spot in each room taking as many pictures as necessary to include everything. Open drawers and doors. Some items will need to be removed in order to see them properly, particularly china, crystal and silver. Take closeup shots of items that are small or heavily patterned. Place a ruler in front of items to show size. After you have had your pictures developed, write on the back of each any important information about the items in the picture, such as model and serial numbers, pattern names, etc.

3. Videotape. Another option is to videotape your possessions. You would proceed in the same manner as the photographic inventory except that you are using a video camera instead. As you are videotaping, you can record you or another family member reading model and serial numbers, pattern names, and other important information. Take closeup shots of small items with your video camera as well.

4. Combination. Using a combination of these three methods would provide a more comprehensive personal property inventory than any one method alone. Developing a written inventory and taking photographs or a video of unusual or valuable items would be a good strategy.

Next week's article will provide places to store inventories and some unique ways to use inventory lists other than in case of losses.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"When we are young and health is good and we have not yet encountered disease, disappointment and sorrow, it is easy to believe that life will always be rather carefree and happy." - Dr. James Dobson

Blue Team American history classes, taught by Mrs. Drake, have taken a change of pace and are involved in a new study, "We The People." The students have "left their texts in their lockers" and are using lessons designed to provide an understanding of the background, creation and history of the unique system of government which created our constitution. What is a government and why do we need governments are two questions the students confronted in the early lessons. Mrs. Drake believes the students will be better prepared for the TAAS this spring after completing this unit of study.

Mrs. Williams, choir director, will furnish results of the UIL solo contest for next week's column. Several HJH students participated in this activity on Saturday. The choir classes are busy with sight reading and part singing to prepare for the selection of a spring musical.

Advanced woodworking classes are starting the production of mini-grandfather clocks. Each student will have a clock of their own when this project is completed. Construction class is working on "Dream House" plans which includes floor plans and sketches. Woods I classes are starting their first project, "Super Clips", which are giant clothes pins which they will complete in one week.

Junior Historians presented a program for the local Daughters of the American Revolution, (DAR), on Thursday. They reported on chapter activities of the past and those planned for the future. On-going activities include remembering veterans during the year, flag service at HJH and studying local history. Participating in the program were Kara Landrum, Bethany Williams, Krista Warren, Nathan Horrell, Justin Landrum, Heath Henderson, Mark Williamson, Mark Shakocius, Isaac Mancha, Jerry Baird, Gus Guseman and Tan Nguyen. Sponsors Diedra Drake and I assisted the students with the program.

Although Junior Historians are not planning to attend the annual meeting this year, they will send their scrapbook with the annual report. Hopefully, the chapter will be awarded a trophy for their work and activities. Nathan Horrell, Jimmy Gilliam, Mark Shakocius and Mark Williamson are working on completing the project.

It would be wise to remember that the best way to have a healthy mind is to learn to accept those things that cannot change.

Names in the news

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) - William Cohen is leaving one institution, the Senate, for another - marriage.

He and TV personality Janet Langhart plan a Valentine's Day wedding in the U.S. Capitol.

"I feel so lucky," Langhart said. "I've been married to Bill in my heart for a long, long time."

The wedding follows a five-year courtship and comes weeks after the Maine Republican announced he will retire from Congress after 24 years.

This is the second marriage for each. While there are no immediate honeymoon plans, Langhart said:

"Being with Bill is sort of a honeymoon. I've been everywhere. I'd be happy with a weekend in Camden."

Langhart is known in New England as a former co-host of the now-defunct talk show "Good Day." She is now a host of "On Capitol Hill with Janet Langhart," a weekly segment on Black Entertainment Television.

Women's Health

Having a healthy baby is the primary concern for most pregnant women. To ensure that a baby is healthy, physicians advise women to practice healthy lifestyles even before they become pregnant. This includes avoiding drugs that may harm the developing fetus.

It is estimated that one in ten babies may be exposed to illegal drugs during pregnancy, yet an even higher number may be exposed to legal substances such as alcohol, tobacco, and some prescription medications. The effects of drugs on your child can have serious consequences -- from birth defects to death. During the early stages of pregnancy, while body systems are forming, drugs can cause developmental damage. During the last 12 weeks of pregnancy, drugs can stunt fetal growth and cause preterm labor.

Illegal drugs -- such as cocaine, marijuana, amphetamines, and narcotics -- should never be used and especially not during pregnancy. For example, cocaine can cause high blood pressure in the mother, as well as stroke, heart attack, and sudden death.

You should not take any medication -- even "over-the-counter" pain medications like aspirin -- without your doctor's knowledge. Some prescription drugs can cause birth defects. These include isotretinoin (Accutane) for acne, which increases the risk of miscarriage and fetal defects; androgens for endometriosis, which cause growth restriction and mental retardation; and diethylstilbestrol (DES) for menstruation or menopause problems, which causes abnormalities of the cervix and uterus in a female fetus, and possible infertility in both male and female offspring. Other drugs that can harm the fetus include lithium; the antibiotics streptomycin and tetracycline; anti-coagulants used to treat blood clotting; antithyroid drugs used to treat an overactive thyroid gland; and anti-convulsants used for seizure disorders.

One word of caution: Don't stop taking any medication prescribed by a doctor without talking to him or her first.

Lifestyles Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local readers, clubs and organizations. Because this is a daily newspaper, we must have guidelines on timely submission of news items.

*General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication and by 9 a.m. Friday for the Sunday edition. Club reports should be submitted the day following the meeting, and no later than three days. Late contributions are subject to considerable editing.

*Listings for club meetings and special events in the "Calendar of Events" should be submitted by Wednesday of each week.

*Photos of new club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made by appointment at The Brand office Monday through Friday after 2 p.m. We do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries or showers; however, loaner cameras are available and should be reserved 24 hours in advance. The Brand has forms available, upon request, for preparing engagement announcements, wedding stories and bridal showers. These are usually too lengthy to take over the phone.

*Engagements should be announced at least a month before the wedding, if both an engagement and wedding photo are desired. Photos should be in black and white; some color photos may be approved if contrast is suitable for reproduction. Wedding and anniversary writeups should be submitted at least five days before publication.

*The Brand will take on-location photos for special events. Call at least two days before the event to see if arrangements can be made.

*Notices of birthday celebrations will be written for Hereford residents 80 years of age and up. The Brand advertising department will quote prices and prepare all other birthday greetings or announcements, including Quinceneras.

*Notices of new arrivals are obtained from Hereford Regional Medical Center. Information on local babies born elsewhere, or with grandparents in Hereford, should be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Brief items of interest about college students, or former residents, are welcome concerning degrees, academic honors, career promotions, etc. Please submit as soon as possible to ensure timeliness.

To submit an article or obtain more information, call Becky Camp or Shelly Schilling at 364-2030 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. After 5 p.m., information may be placed in the night drop at our front door.

YOUR EYES

It's Still Sunglasses Season

Just because it isn't summer doesn't mean you don't need sunglasses. Bright glare is just as likely to reflect off snow, and skiers have special needs. The optometrist can provide the special blue-light filtration and wide spectrum ultraviolet protection that help at high altitudes.

Lots of people go south on vacation now—south to the sun, sand and water that act like mirrors, reflecting ultraviolet light into the eyes. Too much exposure can cause permanent damage to both the retina and the eye's lens. See the optometrist for dependable and effective sunglasses that block harmful rays.

Fact is, everyone needs protection from the sun's rays year-round. Little children need sunglasses because their natural lenses are less effective at filtering out UV rays. Their grandparents need sunglasses if they've had cataract surgery to remove the natural lens. The optometrist can help them all.

Hints from Heloise

CLEAN WINDOWS
Dear Heloise: There is a cute golden retriever young dog and a tiny poodle that live in my neighborhood. They always escape from their yard, and even though fences are mended and holes are filled they still get out.

Today, I noticed trash strewn around the yard and the young retriever about 10 feet away. I thought, boy, is he going to get into trouble, when out walked the little poodle from the tipped trash can carrying a plastic foam takeout container bigger than her.

I bet when the owners see the mess they would never think it could be that tiny, darling little poodle that tore the trash apart. She looks so innocent. — A Reader, San Antonio

Even though it must have been funny to see that little dog, it certainly is dangerous for dogs to run freely.

Too many accidents involving cars, poisons etc. happen every day to animals that are roaming free, plus the mess they make on other people's property.

There must be some way to escape-proof their back yard. If anyone has any ideas besides tying a dog, please let us know. — Heloise

CLEAN WINDOWS
Dear Heloise: Since I'm a single woman, I don't have someone to tell me where I missed a spot when I clean windows in my car or home. I've discovered a solution.

When I clean the inside, I wipe back and forth. When I clean outside I wipe up and down.

Now, I always know if the streak is inside or outside. — Teri Sonnenberg, Lancaster, Calif.

PLASTIC TRASH BAGS
Dear Heloise: I find it very irritating when the plastic liner bag I put in the trash can slips inside when I throw something in it.

Problem easily solved by using an elastic cord around the outside of the can but over the part of the bag that is folded to the outside. — Marion Rich, Anaheim, Calif.

PLASTIC SIX-PACK RINGS
Dear Heloise: Here's an idea on another use for those plastic six-pack rings.

They can be used for hair accessories, bows, barrettes, ribbons and combs, and even hairpins can be snapped on them.

Hang them from the back of the bathroom door. You'll never have to hunt in drawers for your hair accessories, and they won't get crushed or wrinkled. — Mrs. C. Nicholson, Prince George, British Columbia, Canada

FAST FACTS
Packing hints for traveling: Here's how to utilize all the space in a suitcase and protect garments from wrinkles, leaks and spills.

- Place each garment inside a plastic dry-cleaning bag.
- Fold skirts and slacks in half vertically. Button a few buttons on blouses and shirts and fold the sleeves in. Do the same with jackets and sweaters.

- Beginning at the top of the garment, roll it and the plastic together tightly, forming a cylinder. Each garment should be completely covered with plastic.
- Once rolled, place the garments close together in the suitcase in nice, neat, layered rows. — Heloise

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Bet on the Boomers

The first baby boomers turned 50 about six weeks ago. Unless you've been living in a cave, you've undoubtedly heard about this big group of Americans born between 1946 and 1964.

According to the Census Bureau, there are nearly 77 million baby boomers in America - nearly one third of the total population. I am an early boomer. I'll turn 50 in June.

This group will undoubtedly reshape the mid-life and retirement years' norms, as they changed life in every decade they came through. In the late 40s and early 50s, boomers exploded the baby furniture and baby products industries. In the 50s, 60s and 70s they pushed the walls out of every school system in the country. Boomers drove the markets for muscle cars, bell-bottom jeans and college degrees.

They roared into the job market in the 60s and 70s and swelled the working ranks with MBAs in the 80s. Though they are the best educated group in history, they are catching the brunt of the layoffs in the downsizing of corporate America.

If you're in business, you can bet on the boomers. They will control - or by a major influence in - many important markets for the next 25 years. Meet their needs and they'll grow your market share. Ignore them and they'll put you out of business.

To market to the boomer generation, you'll need to understand their motivations and buying habits. The demographics of this group are interesting, but it's the psychographics (the study of lifestyles and behavior) that may help you grow your business.

Understanding the boomers

Here are a few observations to consider before you jump on the "marketing to boomers" bandwagon.

- Boomers want value. They are actually self-interested, and while they have money to spend, they want a good exchange for their money. Boomers are the best educated consumer group yet. Because of this, the boomer often knows more about the product than the salesperson selling it. If they feel that you're not respecting their knowledge or intellect, they'll walk away.

- Boomers buy better. This generation will buy top-of-the-line items. They like to spend, and you can use your product knowledge to move the boomer up to the best.

- Boomers are quick decision makers. Early habits are hard to change. Remember, this is the "let's-do-it" generation. Once this group has the facts, they act quickly. They won't delay the buying process if they are comfortable and convinced of value.

- Boomers are nontraditional buyers. This generation is filled with risk takers. They dare to be different in their approach to life, and this carries over to their buying patterns. They buy imported goods, and are often early buyers when firms introduce new products.

- Boomers are aging physically, not mentally. They may be pushing 50, but most of them are still thinking 30. They are more health conscious than earlier generations, will live longer and will be more active in their senior years. While this characteristic has both positive and negative impact, you can use it to your marketing advantage.

- Boomers are sensitive buyers. This generation, though known as a group who "tells-it-like-it-is," is a sensitive bunch. They want to be recognized as important, intelligent and caring. Though the realities of earning a living, raising family and securing their future are weighing heavily on them, they still care about their image.

To grow your business, analyze products and services that boomers will need as they age. If you can help them secure their future, save them time, lower their hassle factor or improve their quality of life, you'll reap the profits that boomers will throw off as they carry our economy into the 21st century.

Murder and mystery in medical thriller...Terminal

Nia Peeples (Courthouse) and Doug Savant (Melrose Place) star as a nurse and doctor caught up in mystery and intrigue in Robin Cook's Terminal, airing Monday on NBC. The two become targets after they uncover the diabolical truth hidden within a cancer research institute where wealthy patients are cured.

BY ROBERTA C. NELSON

If the hospital set in Terminal looks genuine, that's because it is.

The actors, director and stage crew working on the latest Robin Cook medical thriller transported their scripts and equipment to a real hospital.

"There's no question; the authenticity you get in a real hospital is just at a level you can't otherwise get," says Robert M. Sertner, executive producer of the movie.

Terminal, starring Doug Savant (Melrose Place) and Nia Peeples (Courthouse), is the fifth Robin Cook medical mystery adapted for film. The two-hour movie airs Monday, Feb. 12, on NBC.

Coming so close to the line between life and death energized the cast and crew in ways not possible on a stage set, Sertner says.

"I was standing, looking at the set, making sure everything was OK, and I spotted a guy on a gurney," he says. "Then I realized, 'This is a real patient.'"

The fictional patients in Terminal are wealthy people with cancer. After they are cured at the research hospital, they donate large sums of money out of gratitude.

But after some mysterious murders and the strange death of a young patient, a doctor (Savant) and nurse (Peeples) begin to investigate.

What they discover is a diabolical moneymaking scheme.

The hospital's doctors have intentionally given the patients cancer. After they have been cured, the patients generously endow the research center's work.

Cook, who holds a medical degree from Columbia University, says his idea for the novel came from looking at the country's biomedical research establishment - the world's largest.

"These are very large organizations, and they have groups of people whose sole responsibility is to keep them afloat," Cook says.

"They truly believe in what they are doing, and they believe that this is something that is best for the country, best for the world, best for mankind.

"When you have that kind of circumstance, it's not very difficult for people to understand that people could make the kinds of decisions in which the ends then justify the means. And that's the scary circumstance."

Sertner says Terminal and other Cook films he has produced - Virus and Outbreak - are believable because they involve moral choices.

"It's the same thing that works in science fiction, like Star Trek, where they bring the characters to extreme emotional levels," he says.

"Robin asks those same kind of questions that force people to make choices. In this case, there is so much money sitting on the line."

Savant, who plays cancer researcher Sean Murphy, says he was disturbed by the film's plot.

"There are always debates about ethics and morality in medicine," Savant says.

"It is scary but possible that someone might actually do something as heinous as this in the name of a 'greater good.' Certainly there are people who think if they have an altruistic agenda, they can shape the truth to their liking."

Cook says the researchers in his fictional work aren't evil; they just go too far in carrying out their goals.

"It is amazing what people can justify in the short run, especially if they're separated from it in a certain sense, immune from actually seeing the day-to-day horror of it, and think that the final result is worth the risk."

Avoid getting involved in loved ones' quarrels. If asked for your opinion, just plead the Fifth. A friend who's going through a hard time may need a shoulder to cry on. A little sensitivity will go a long way. A realistic look at finances could make you rethink a major purchase.

Accept a last-minute invitation—especially if it is somewhat unusual. A little spontaneity is what you need to put the spark back in your fire. A Libra in your life may have something serious to talk about. Listen with an open ear and put that Taurean stubbornness to the side.

GEMINI -- May 22/June 21

If you're not careful, indecision could make you miss an opportunity. Instead of carefully weighing the pros and cons, let your gut instinct lead the way. In matters of love, you could be in for an emotional barrier later in the week—especially if you're involved with a Scorpio.

CANCER -- June 22/July 22

Take advantage of free time by doing what you love to do—relaxing! Any financial worries will be relieved as an unexpected windfall is likely to come your way. A love relationship will bring warm feelings—especially if you are involved with a Libra. A trip down the slopes is in the stars!

LEO -- July 23/August 23

A feeling of contentment in where you are and what you're doing will make you more productive and effective in your daily life. Loving what you do is a sure way to make Leo the Lion yell out a hearty roar. A troubled friendship could lead to permanently severed ties if you're not careful.

VIRGO -- Aug 24/Sept 22

Something good will come out of a bad, ongoing situation. You'll realize that everything has a way of balancing out. An upcoming social event gives you a lot to look forward to. A little planning will make things extra special. Conflict in the workplace could lead to aggravation.

LIBRA -- Sept 23/Oct 23

A pleasant surprise comes from a loved one in an exceptionally good mood. Enjoy! Depend on no one but yourself when it comes to important work projects. Remember, not everyone is as reliable as you are. An old friend will be in touch and may even pay a surprise visit towards the week's end. Keep fitness a priority.

SCORPIO -- Oct 24/Nov 22

A surprise phone call from an old flame will weigh heavily on your mind this week—but try not to let it interfere with your current love relationship. Living in the past is no way to get ahead. Sever past ties and move on. Money matters will be an issue later in the week.

SAGITTARIUS -- Nov 23/Dec 21

There are two sides to every story and it's time you looked at both. You pride yourself on being fair, but it's not always the case. Take a step back and see what the big picture really is. You may be in for a big surprise. Remember, your way is not the only way.

CAPRICORN -- Dec 22/Jan 20

Accept last-minute invitations and you could be in for a pleasant surprise. Single? If so, this could be a lucky week. There could be a sexy Scorpio waiting in the wings. Be careful, though. Wear your heart on your sleeve, and you could feel the pain of Scorpio's sting.

AQUARIUS -- Jan 21/Feb 18

You may feel taken advantage of by a selfish family member. Remember, not everyone is as giving as you are. If you're in the business world, this could be a time for advancement. Be your own advocate and you're sure to get noticed. Luck will be on your side later in the week.

PISCES -- Feb 19/March 20

Don't be surprised if you get the cold shoulder from a friend. Your enigmatic personality may be too much to keep up with. If you're hot one moment and cold the next, how will people know how to read you? If you want more understanding friends, seek out a fellow fish.

HIGHLIGHTS

Casablanca, starring Ingrid Bergman and Humphrey Bogart, is a perfect film for Valentine's Day, according to Patricia Richardson (Home Improvement) and Jonathan Silverman (The Single Guy).

TV stars offer favorites for Valentine's Day viewing

BY MARGIE BARRON

A great romantic movie can stir passions and emotions more than a shot from Cupid's arrow, and watching one is a good way to spend Valentine's Day, Wednesday, Feb. 14.

Some popular TV stars had this to say about their favorite romantic films: "Love should be fun," says Tim Allen (Home Improvement). His favorite film is Roxanne, with Steve Martin as a modern-day Cyrano de Bergerac.

Patricia Richardson (Home Improvement) thinks the chemistry between Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman "makes Casablanca the ultimate love story." Jonathan Silverman (The Single Guy) adds, "I love films that tug at your emotions, and Casablanca has never failed to make me cry."

Hector Elizondo (Chicago Hope) states: "I saw Pretty Woman as a great romantic fairy tale. For my current favorite, I'd have to pick Il Postino/The Postman."

His castmate Christine Lahti loves Gone With the Wind, "even though Scarlett and Rhett don't wind up together. Love can be cruel that way."

Scott Wolf (Party of Five) is a fan of Breakfast at Tiffany's: "It's just a beautiful movie that shows how crazy and wonderful and unpredictable love can be."

Dick Clark says, "I see some irony in my choice being a film set in Shangri-La, a place of eternal youth. But I'm serious that my favorite romantic movie is the original Last Horizon, starring Ronald Colman."

Richard Chamberlain (The Thorn Birds: The Missing Years) says there are few grown-up love stories these days, but says, "I thought that The Bridges of Madison County was sensational."

Alan Thicke (Hope & Gloria) says, "Out of Africa is very close to my heart. It reminds me of how I fell in love with my wife, Gina, when we were on a trip in Africa. We played the music from the film at our wedding."

Daniel Hugh Kelly, who plays the father of eight in Second Noah, says, "My choice would have to be Cheaper by the Dozen, an old classic with Clifton Webb and Myrna Loy as the parents of 12 kids. You can't get much more romantic than that!"

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Is actress Mariska Hargitay (Can't Hurry Love) the daughter of Jayne Mansfield and Mickey Hargitay? --A reader in Grand Blanc, Mich.

A: Yes.

Q: I work at the Council for the Blind, and many of the blind workers would like to "see" the movie If You Could See What I Hear. I know it is on video, but we can't find it. Can you help? --Fred More, Ormond Beach, Fla.

A: The video company that handled this title no longer has it. A representative suggests you call Critic's Choice Video's Search Line. The number is (900) 370-6500. The average call costs $3.40. There's no obligation to buy.

Q: Did Jonathan Silverman (The Single Guy) play Melissa Steadman's boyfriend on thirtysomething? --Cindy B., Hendersonville, N.C.

A: Silverman's NBC bio, which is candid enough to include Gimme a Break! among his TV credits, makes no mention of thirtysomething. If, as I strongly suspect, you are thinking of the young painter with whom Melissa had a fling (along with much guilt over their age difference), that was Corey Parker.

Q: On Home Improvement, I saw William O'Leary playing Tim's brother, Marty. Now, I see the same actor on Strange Luck, but using the name D.B. Sweeney. What gives? --Robert E. Nelson, Gladstone, Ore.

A: Look more closely, Robert. Sweeney and O'Leary are two completely different actors.

Q: How long has Renegade been on TV? How are the ratings? --Gary L. Wyatt, Long Beach, Calif.

A: The Lorenzo Lamas series premiered in syndication in September 1992. Ratings to date are solid but unremarkable. Lamas bounced co-star

Mariska Hargitay

Kathleen Kinmont from the show recently, not long after he divorced her.

Q: Please settle an argument. My boyfriend insists Irene Ryan (Granny) was the same age as Donna Douglas (Elly May) on The Beverly Hillbillies, and Ryan was only playing a much older woman. I think not. Can you confirm? --Kelli Sweet, Commerce, Texas.

A: Born in 1903, Ryan was in her 60s during most of the run of Hillbillies. She died in 1973, at which time she had a featured role in the Broadway musical Pippin.

Q: My friend insists the young boy in Shane is not the same actor who co-starred in In Harm's Way with John Wayne. I say Brandon de Wilde was in both movies. Whatever happened to him, by the way? --Jerry Curl, Beaverton, Ore.

A: De Wilde was in both films, all right. The young actor died in a 1972 car accident.

Schneider and Sawa star in FAM's riveting action-driven drama, 'Night of the Twisters'

Devon Sawa and John Schneider star in "The Night of the Twisters" on The Family Channel

In the fictitious sleepy community of Blainsworth, Neb., an ominous cloud hangs overhead taking on an eerie greenish hue. A shrieking banshee wind blasts through town. Thunder rumbles and roars. Lightning scars the sky. In the distance, a gigantic storm anvil unleashes a black funnel cloud that pokes the earth like the devil's finger and begins an awesome zigzag path of destruction as if the forces of nature were stalking the town.

The Family Channel's riveting adaptation of Ivy Ruckman's award-winning, best-selling novel "Night of the Twisters," tells the compelling tale of a family that bonds while battling to survive a series of killer tornadoes.

John Schneider ("The Dukes of Hazzard") as "Jack Hatch" and Devon Sawa ("Casper," "Now and Then") as Jack's stepson "Dan" star in "Night of the Twisters," the gripping coming-of-age story of a boy who is constantly in conflict with his stepfather's high expectation of him until he must find the courage to face the brutal forces of nature and help save his family.

"What drew me to this role was that I could identify with my character as a happily married man with a couple of kids," says Schneider. "Even though my character has his faults as do most parents, this role is exciting for me because I don't have to play some weird stepfather who terrorizes his family with a hatchet."

"There really aren't enough high quality scripts out there that show how families react positively in the face of adversity. This story is ultimately about unconditional love and how we should love each other with our difference, not in spite of them," says Schneider.

To make the difficult transfer from book to film, the producers set their sights on director Tim Bond, whose work on "Star Trek - The Next Generation" and "Outer Limits" made him a prime candidate to direct "Night of the Twisters."

During the course of production, filmmakers had many challenges to overcome. More than once the crew had to battle sub-zero temperatures, snow flurries and working long nights. Not only was it physically demanding on both the cast and crew, but time was also limited due to the tight budget and time line.

"Basically, what we've been able to do here is create a television movie that is going to have the same look and feel as a major motion picture with a multi-million dollar budget," says Bond. "The research, preparation and technology that is being implemented here is staggering. When we saw the footage all layered together we realized we had done something very special. I believe it will be a new template that movies of this scope and size will have to live up to."

The meticulously crafted production design of Steve Roloff began with demands of the script and director Tim Bond's vision of heightened reality. To translate Bond's creative visuals into workable, yet complex sets, Roloff chose two key locations to build including Schomberg, Ontario which had a classic small-town American look and feel and Kleinberg Studios just 45 km north of Toronto.

"Tim works out the reality of the set," says Roloff. "We both realized that this type of tense action-filled story would work best against a backdrop of reality so the fantastic elements could stand out."

Among Roloff's many challenges was creating a believable aftermath of the tornado and construction matching interiors on sound stages which could be pulled apart as if a tornado had sucked it into the funnel. "Building these kinetic interiors and exteriors were tricky for several reasons," recalls Roloff. "Mostly, because we had to show the plumbing, electrical and insulation to make it totally authentic. You couldn't have a tornado hit a house without having a few gas explosions and pipes burst. Believe it or not, having to do this made construction and set decorating extremely labour intensive."

Emmy-award winning screen writer Chris Canaan, one of the television's leading screenwriters was brought on board to make numerous changes and deletions. "The book is excellent," says Canaan, "But even though it had the constant threat of the tornado bearing down on the town, scenes needed to be written to take in all of the opportunities for a multitude of outrageous special effects."

An expert assemblage of some of the motion picture industry's most accomplished special effects designers have joined together to recreate the night of terror with state of the art three-dimensional digital animation technology.

The whole process began several weeks before the actual production went underway. More than 20 different animated tornado shots and composites will be brought together to create various stages of wind, clouds, funnels and effects attributed to tornadoes.

"Night of the Twisters" represents The Family Channel's first clear identity piece of what the company has been able to put together from beginning to end. This project is an example of what great family-driven, action-adventure films for television can really be like. The new management team under CEO Tony Thomopoulos as well as Gus Lucas, head of programming, has taken The Family Channel in an exciting direction which promises viewer top-quality and exceptional programming.

John Schneider and Helen Hughes heading for shelter in "The Night of the Twisters"

"Night of the Twisters" will premiere on February 18, at 6:00 pm. Encore presentations will air on Saturday, February 24 at 9:00 pm and again on Sunday, March 3 at 4:00 pm.

SOAP WORLD

Burgi goes prime time in UPN's Sentinel

BY CANDACE HAVENS

Dear Cand : Can you tell me what happens to the actor who played Phillip (Richard Burgi) on Days of Our Lives? He was so handsome, and he was a good actor. I always thought he should have been in movies. Was he ever on any other soaps? Is he working on another soap? —Jenna in Denton, Texas.

Dear Reader: Burgi has been very busy since his stint on Days. He will soon star in The Sentinel, a new series premiering in March on UPN. His character is a detective who has heightened senses.

Since leaving Days, Burgi had roles on Viper and One West Waikiki. He has been a guest star on Seinfeld, Anything But Love, Matlock, Empty Nest and Nurses. He also did the feature film Paycheck.

Before joining Days, Burgi had a long career in daytime. He played Chad Rollo on Another World and Glenn Harrington on As the World Turns.

In other soap news: Kelley Menighan, who plays Emily on ATWT, is smiling a lot these days. The actress was recently engaged to former co-star

Jon Hensley (Holden).

Jill (Jess Walton) had better watch out on The Young and the Restless, because Dina (Marla Adams) is back and there will be fireworks.

Fans may remember Dina as John's (Jerry Douglas) first wife, who is also the mother of Jack (Peter Bergman), Ashley (Brenda Doumani) and Traci (Beth Maitland). Dina is going to give John a whole new reason for living.

Also returning to the soaps is veteran Lauren Koslow. The actress takes over the role of Kate on Days of Our Lives, which was vacated by Deborah Adair more than a year ago. Kate will return to get revenge on Vivian (Louise Sorel).

Kate must first make her way back to Salem. Ironically, Vivian has just now been able to get Victor (John Aniston) interested in her again, but Kate's return will put an end to that.
