Griego, Michael recognized as United Way volunteers of year

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

Two Hereford residents touched by agencies funded by the United Way were honored Thursday as Volunteers of the Year by the United Way of Deaf Smith County at its annual banquet.

Throughout the fund drive, Pat Michael and Nancy Griego took time from their regular jobs to speak to residents about how their lives have been affected by the United Way and its agencies.

In recognition of their contribution, they were hailed as the top volunteers of the year for the local United Way organization.

Rodney Ruthart, president of the United Way of Deaf Smith County board, said the Volunteer of the Year is a person who "goes beyond the call of duty for the campaign," something he said was true of both Michael and Griego.

Between them, Ruthart said, the two handled speaking duties at half of the 50 employee campaigns held.

Griego, who is serving in the military overseas after her U.S. Army Reserve unit was placed on active duty, was represented at the banquet by her son, Jeremiah Beltran.

"She'd be very grateful and thank you all," Beltran said in accepting the award.

Michael, after honoring City Manager Chester Nolen and Police Chief David Wagner for their support of him and allowing him to take time off work to speak, said he never expected to be named Volunteer of the Year.

"I remember sitting at the banquet and watching the Volunteer of the Year accept his award," Michael said, "and thinking, 'Wow, this person must be one step away from sainthood.'"

Michael said he was very proud to receive the award, noting, "This means very much to me."

Another volunteer, Commerce Division Chair Lajeane Henry, received the Volunteer of the Year-Division Head.

Ruthart praised Henry for her work with the division, telling the audience that Commerce Division volunteers in 1994 raised $4,700 by working 40 percent of the cards available. This year, however, under Henry's leadership, the division raised $9,700 and worked 90 percent of its cards.

Henry in turn hailed the work of volunteers from the 12 United Way agencies, noting that they were all assigned to the Commerce Division this year.

"The part I had anything to do with was so minimal," she said. "The agencies are the ones who did the work."

This year's banquet, held in the Hereford Community Center, served as a celebration of the successful completion of the 1995 fund-raising drive, in which the goal of $130,000 was surpassed.

Ruthart said he asked executive director Karen Sherrord several times what the final total was, but was

Gingrich says he's willing to cut proposed tax cut; GOP on defensive in budget battle

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Thrown on the defensive in the budget fight with President Clinton, House Speaker Newt Gingrich says he would consider shrinking the proposed Republican tax cut and shortening its duration.

The GOP also moved on two fronts Thursday to shield itself politically in its debt-limit battle with Clinton, another arena where Republicans have been bruised of late.

Republican leaders wrote Clinton pledging they would not allow an unprecedented default to occur and would send him legislation "acceptable to both you and the Congress."

The letter underlined previous verbal promises by GOP leaders not to provoke a veto-fight with Clinton by adding provisions he opposed to the bill.

In addition, Congress unanimously approved legislation ensuring that Social Security recipients would get their benefits, even in the event of a federal default. With Republicans planning to vote to extend the debt ceiling in late February after a winter break, they feared Clinton would spend the month warning that without that extension, the Treasury might not be able to mail March Social Security checks.

"The potential for the administration to deliberately manipulate the system... is so enormous that we did not want to take any risk that they would hurt senior citizens just to make a point," Gingrich, R-Ga., told reporters.

These developments occurred as most House members went back to their home districts until Feb. 26 - but not without a tussle with Senate Democrats, who blocked the Senate from letting the House go into a formal recess. They argued that lawmakers should first extend the government's lapsed borrowing authority.

In response, the House voted to return to session with a skeleton crew next Tuesday, when the Senate - which will be at work - might reconsider. The Senate's break will begin later.

review from fellow Republicans, however.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., back from a campaign trip, said, "I didn't see that. I've been floating around New Hampshire."

And House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, told a reporter, "Newt's big on trial balloons."

Shrinking the duration of their proposed tax cut could give Republicans the best of both worlds.

'Winfrey' show with Turner set for Friday

A Hereford woman's appearance on a nationally-syndicated television show will be aired Friday.

Darlene Turner, who flew to Chicago Tuesday and was a guest on the Oprah Winfrey Show at a Wednesday taping, said the segment will be shown at 4 p.m. on KAMR-TV, Channel Four.

Turner said she and a half-brother, Brit Rowland, whom she had never met, were on the show briefly. The two have the same father.

"We answered some questions and sat in the audience for about five minutes," she reported. Rowland apparently did not know Turner would be there, she said.

"He was to meet a sister from his mother's side and didn't know I was coming," said Turner.

The Hereford woman, a dispatcher for the Deaf Smith Sheriff's Department, was placed for adoption as an infant.

She learned in 1994 that her mother had 10 children, including her, and her father had four. She met her mother, older sister and two brothers in Florida last March, but had not met any siblings from her father's side until Wednesday.

Frigid weather takes toll on new-born calves

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - If sometime this summer you see a calf missing its tail, or an ear, or both, chances will be good the animal was born sometime this week.

That's how cold it has been on Midwestern farms. The ears and tails of newborn cattle are at risk of freezing solid and breaking off in temperatures well below zero.

"Digging out to get to the livestock... getting them water, getting them feed, keeping the newborns alive - it all goes into it," Frank Felton, who runs a purchased cow-calf operation in Maryville, said Thursday.

Across Missouri, the major topics among cattle farmers have been keeping water available as pipes and ponds freeze, and feeding the herds enough to keep their weight up, said professor Fred Martz, superintendent of the University of Missouri's Forage Systems Research Center in Linneus.

As for the arctic cold, the younger cattle are the most threatened, livestock experts said. The height of calving season is still some time away so it's not a major worry - except for a farmer whose cow has just given birth out in the cold.

"And certainly if they don't die, those ear tips and that tail could be frozen off," said Eldon Cole, livestock specialist at the University of Missouri's Extension Service office in Mount Vernon. "If you see a bob-eared calf or one with its tail fallen off this summer, you'll know it was born around the first of February."

The forecast calls for continued chances of snow through Saturday, with bitter cold temperatures tonight and Saturday.

Gramm posts worst record in Senate

Voting attendance affected by Presidential campaigning

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Phil Gramm compiled the worst voting attendance record in the Senate in 1995 after he began running for president, but there's one debate the Texan refused to miss - Senate consideration of the farm bill.

In just the last two months, he's missed votes relating to the balanced budget, averting a third partial government shutdown, national defense and appropriations bills.

But he cut short a campaign trek through Iowa Thursday to rush back to Washington to cast votes during the Senate's consideration of new agriculture policy.

The trip may have been for naught. After an early vote made it clear the original Republican farm bill wouldn't pass, Senate leaders put off until next week any further votes on agriculture policy. The move buys them time to craft a bipartisan compromise.

A Gramm spokesman said votes in farm-rich Iowa - whose bellwether GOP caucus is a week and a half away - had nothing to do with the senator's decision to return to town.

"The farm bill vote is very important for Texas farmers who are desperately in need of guidance in the farm program," said Gramm's Senate press secretary, Larry Neal. "Texas farmers are making decisions today on how to plant, what loans they are going to need. The fundamental decisions that will govern what they do in the spring and summer are being made now, and in effect their government has failed them because President Clinton vetoed legislation which included the farm program."

Producers have been in limbo because Congress has failed to enact a new farm bill, technically making the 1949 permanent farm law the only legislation on the books. Without passage of a new farm bill, the 1949 bill would prove costly to taxpayers, mandating billions of dollars in new payments.

Asked why Gramm - whose presidential campaign boasts a laser-like focus on reining in government and achieving a balanced budget - would miss spending votes yet make a farm bill vote, Neal said: "I can only say to you that we are struggling to overcome the effects of the Clinton veto here."

And, he added: "We are looking ... at a series of very close votes in which one vote may well make a difference."

Of course, Clinton also vetoed the Republicans' blueprint to achieving a balanced budget in seven years, sparking the battles that resulted in two partial government shutdowns.

Congressional Quarterly, in its annual examination of lawmakers' voting habits, found that Gramm had the worst attendance in the Senate last year. Out of 611 roll call votes cast, Gramm made only 89 percent of them.

His fellow GOP presidential hopefuls posted far better attendance records. Sen. Bob Dole, who as Senate majority leader controls the floor schedule, missed only two votes. Sen. Dick Lugar, R-Ind., scored 96 percent; Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., 93 percent; and Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who suspended his campaign in November, 98 percent.

Dole has jabbed at Gramm for missing so many votes while off on the campaign trail. During last month's Iowa debate, when Gramm accused the Kansan of cutting a secret budget deal with President Clinton, Dole retorted: "Next time you're in town, look me up."

Congressman leads fundraising in run for U.S. Senate nomination

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman reported raising $481,725 for his Democratic U.S. Senate race, including some of his own money and a transfer from his congressional campaign.

Chapman, of Sulphur Springs, is seeking the Democratic nomination along with U.S. Rep. John Bryant, Houston lawyer John Odam and Mesquite teacher Victor Morales to challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

Bryant, of Dallas, reported raising $174,708, including a transfer of $92,457 from his congressional campaign. Morales said his one-man Senate show missed the deadline for filing his finance report.

Odam reported Wednesday that he had raised $706,000 for his race, with $546,000 of that his own money.

The figures were contained in a campaign finance report covering the last half of 1995.

Chapman's $481,725 total includes $141,000 in transfers from his congressional campaign and $200,000 of his own money as well as $140,654 in other contributions. Chapman's campaign said it had $391,281 on hand for the March 12 primary.

"Jim Chapman's message of putting Texas first has helped build a solid network of financial and organizational support," said campaign spokesman Tom Stewart.

Bryant, who was late to enter the Senate primary, has $140,362 currently on hand. His campaign discounted the fund-raising lead that his opponents - Chapman and Odam - have built.

"Our report represents roughly one week of fund-raising," said Bryant campaign spokesman Gray McBride. "The others' reports represent three months of fund-raising. And it looks like when they had the field all to themselves, they raised their own money."

With loans to himself making up the bulk of his contributions, Odam's campaign said that it had $530,700 cash on hand for the primary.

"We can put John Odam's message of reforming Washington out on the road," said Odam campaign spokeswoman Elyse Gilmore Yates. "This gives us the opportunity to take his platform to TV."

Morales said Thursday he forgot to file his campaign finance report, which was due by Wednesday.

Kelly Huff of the Federal Election Commission in Washington said if Morales files his report quickly he won't face a penalty, even though it's late.

Morales, a Mesquite high school teacher, blamed his missing the deadline on the trouble of running what's essentially a one-man campaign with no paid staff.

Unlike other candidates, Morales said, he is his own speechwriter, publicist and finance chairman. "I'm doing all of that," he said. "I would think it's quite natural if I forget a deadline here or a deadline there."

Morales estimated that he has raised roughly $15,000, about $8,000 of that his own money.

Gramm reported a $3.46 million cash balance in his Senate campaign. Gramm's Senate campaign raised $236,082 in contributions and $79,045 in interest during the last six months of 1995. The campaign spent $100,769 during the same period.

Gramm moved about $5 million from his Senate account to his presidential campaign fund last February, said Larry Neal, Gramm's press secretary.

STORM

about 30 percent of operations there - while its regional carrier, American Eagle, canceled 75 flights, or 27 percent, spokesman Tim Smith said.

American expected to cancel about 130 flights today and American Eagle about 70 flights, Smith said.

Delta Airlines scrubbed about a quarter of its late Thursday afternoon arrivals and departures, amounting to perhaps 10 or 20 flights. Otherwise, the airline was operating normally, spokesman Clay McConnell said.

TU Electric officials said the weather hadn't affected its service much as of late Thursday.

TU spokesman Jesse Lancaster said some of the utility's plants had switched over to burning fuel oil instead of natural gas in anticipation of a shortage from the cold snap.

The National Weather Service predicted that the freezing rain would end in the Dallas-Fort Worth area by dawn today.

"I think the bad stuff will end by morning, and then people in Dallas will just be cold," said Alan Moller, a meteorologist in the weather service's Fort Worth office.

WeatherData Inc. issued a more pessimistic forecast, predicting that a chance of freezing rain mixed with snow would remain in the area through Friday and into early Saturday.

"Don't forget that the storm center is still in New Mexico. It hasn't moved out of your area yet. You won't be out of danger until it's east of Dallas," said Harry Woolford, a WeatherData meteorologist.

UNITED WAY

informed he would be told along with everyone else at the banquet.

To announce the total, Sherrod planned a surprise, hiding a separate banner under the welcome sign behind the head table.

Ruthart and board member Bobby Boyd pulled the cover sign away and the audience gave a rousing standing ovation as the final total of $131,394.94 was revealed.

"As a board member I'm very proud to say we've met our goal," Ruthart said.

He said several goals set last year were met and announced two goals for the coming year -- work on strategic planning so the board knows where it is going and build on the success with volunteers, with a goal of increasing the 85 volunteers used in the 1995 campaign by 30 percent for the 1996 campaign.

At the banquet it was announced that Ruthart will serve a second year as president of the board, with County Judge Tom Simons serving as vice president and campaign chairman. Jeff Torbert will serve a second term as treasurer.

Joining the board this year are: Marilyn Leasure and John Stagner for one-year terms; and Angie Alonzo and Eddie Aguilar for three-year terms.

Also announced at the banquet were the recipients of several new United Way awards, designed to honor businesses and employee groups for their giving.

Those awards and recipients are:
 -- Champion of the High Plains Award. Called the highest honor given by the local United Way, it recognizes the employees of the company that exhibits the ideal in commitment to the well-being of the community through the United Way. This year's recipient was First Bank Southwest, which gave $3,000 in a corporate gift, while employees pledged another $6,681.

-- Longhorn Award. Presented to the employees of a company that is not only new to United Way giving, but also shows "pronounced generosity." This year's winner was Caviness Packing, which raised $1,532 in its first employee campaign.

-- Whiteface Awards. Awarded to Hereford schools for their creativity and energy in supporting the United Way. There were two recipients, Hereford Junior High School, which hosted a talent show to raise $353 and Tierra Blanca Primary School, which opened a general store to raise money to match the $100 pledge the students made.

-- Mustang Award. The award is given to a small business of 10 employees or fewer that shows consistent support for United Way. This year's winner was Plains Insurance, which had 100 percent giving support by its employees.

-- Hustler 100 Award. It is presented to companies that have 100 percent participation in their employee campaigns. This year's winners were Plains Insurance and First Bank Southwest.

 It is very foolish to insist on being the only one who is right.

Basketball games to go on tonight Openers for Hereford tennis, girls' golf teams canceled

The District 1-4A basketball doubleheader scheduled tonight between Hereford and Borger will go on. However this week's winter weather will force cancellations of several other sports events.

The Herd tennis team and girls' golf team were to begin their spring seasons this weekend, but now they won't. The San Angelo Invitational Golf Tournament was canceled, as was a gathering of four tennis teams planned for Saturday in Hereford.

A few basketball games were canceled, boys athletic director Danny Haney said. The sophomore boys game between Hereford and Borger set for today was called off, as was the freshmen boys and girls games with Caprock planned for Saturday.

Tonight's varsity and junior varsity games in Hereford will be played at their originally scheduled times. The varsity girls will play at 6 p.m. in Whiteface Gym, and the boys will follow at about 7:30. The JV games will be played in the junior high gym: girls at 6, boys at 7:30.

The Hereford girls are 6-4 in District 1-4A play and 20-5 overall, while Borger is 3-6 and 14-17. Hereford won a close one over the Lady Bulldogs, 52-46, in their first meeting Jan. 9 in Borger.

The Hereford boys are 6-2 and 17-9, while the Bulldogs are 1-6 and 9-19. Hereford won the first meeting 67-46.

Senior members of the Lady Whiteface basketball team will be playing their last game at home, and one will be presented as Basketball Queen.

The six senior Lady Whitefaces are Brittney Binder, Julie Cole, Mindi Davis, Heather Hodges, Tarabeth Holmes and Crystal Mercer. One of them will be crowned Basketball Queen at a pep rally earlier at the high school.

The Basketball King will be chosen from the five seniors on the boys' team: Todd Dudley, Michael High, Nicholas Tarr, Brian Torres and Ronald Torres.

The King and Queen will be presented at tonight's games. It will also be Parents Night for the members of the girls' team.

The Herd boys have one more home game after Friday, an important district matchup against Randall Feb. 16.

Seahawks intend to abandon Seattle for Southern California

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) - Owner Ken Behring intends to move the Seattle Seahawks to Southern California, where they would become the fifth NFL franchise to change cities in the past year.

Despite threats by King County to sue Behring if he tries to move the Seahawks, the millionaire land developer from Danville, Calif., is expected to play the 1996 season in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

County officials scrambled late Thursday to see if there was a way to delay a move and find a local buyer, reports said. It looked like a longshot, Behring has said repeatedly he will not sell the team.

"I don't see anything that would change his (Behring's) mind. The intention is to move," a team source told The Associated Press Thursday night.

"I'm really depressed," said former team owner John Nordstrom, who has led a business community effort to negotiate a Kingdome renovation package with Behring.

"We worked so hard to bring the team here," Nordstrom told the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. "I've tried to work with Ken Behring and be a friend and not an adversary. We worked hard to get Ken on the same page, but it was all uphill. I couldn't catch up."

Behring and county officials emerged from Thursday's meeting grim-faced and saying little, but did agree to meet again today.

"We're still talking, and that's always a good sign," King County Executive Gary Locke said.

King County councilman Pete von Reichbauer, who heads the committee that oversees the Kingdome, told The News Tribune of Tacoma he planned to ask Behring for 30 days to put together a purchase offer from "regional, local owners."

County officials refused to confirm or deny reports Behring has already decided to take the Seahawks out of Seattle, where they have played since 1976.

Behring refused comment. Seahawks coaches were told Wednesday to be ready to move to Pasadena, according to KIRO.

Team employees at suburban Kirkland headquarters were told Thursday afternoon to return Friday for one last day of work, sources told The AP.

The Seahawks would fill the void left vacant by the departure of the Raiders and Rams from Los Angeles last year.

In addition, the Cleveland Browns have announced they will play next season in Baltimore and the Houston Oilers will move to Tennessee.

Al Moses, president of the Rose Bowl Operating Co., said Thursday the Rose Bowl had had no conversations with the Seahawks. But he said the stadium could be temporarily available to an NFL team.

"It's clear the league as well as the owners have known for some period of time that the Rose Bowl would be available to host what we call a transition team," Moses said. "That's a team that would play in the Rose Bowl two to five or six years until a new stadium is built - if one is built."

City officials in Anaheim announced several weeks ago plans for a new Sportstown USA complex surrounding the current Anaheim Stadium. It would include a new football facility.

Aikman to have surgery

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman will undergo arthroscopic surgery on his right elbow next week to relieve pain caused by degenerative arthritis and other problems with his passing arm.

New tests performed on Wednesday discovered the degenerative arthritis and deteriorating cartilage, the player said Thursday.

It will be Aikman's fifth surgery and the second on the elbow. Aikman underwent a similar procedure in 1990 and hopes for an identical result - a pain-free season, at least in terms of his passing arm.

"They're going to clean out cartilage and bone chips," Aikman told the Dallas Morning News. "I don't anticipate problems for next season. What I anticipate is it feeling much better and being pain-free."

Aikman said he anticipates full recovery before the start of Cowboys training camp in July. He started every game for the Cowboys in the season just ended for only the second time of his career.

"At this time, it doesn't appear this is too severe. But they really won't know the damage until the surgery," Aikman said.

"It bothered me some during the season. I had some definite problems, and it has been like this for a while because I have degenerative arthritis, which basically means there has been an excessive amount of wear and tear."

Dr. James Andrews, who also did the 1990 surgery on Aikman's elbow, will perform next week's surgery in Birmingham.

Lions' Glover excited about getting to play in Pro Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) - Practicing with Detroit Lions teammates Barry Sanders, Lomas Brown and Herman Moore on an everyday basis is exciting. Appearing in the Pro Bowl with other NFL notables is an absolute thrill for Kevin Glover.

"Those guys I play with every day," the Lions center said. "But to be with guys like Reggie White, Steve Young, Michael Irvin - it means something to be put in that kind of group and share time with them this week."

Even though he's an 11-year veteran, Glover was wide-eyed as he mingled with his new, albeit, short-term teammates.

"This is absolutely a great feeling for me, just because this is my 11th year in the league and the first time in the Pro Bowl," he said.

"I've thought before that I had years when I could have come, but it didn't work out. Now, it's great to get a chance."

Another first-timer, Denver kicker Jason Elam, who played at the University of Hawaii, reacted like a fan.

"It's still hard for me to believe that I was named to the Pro Bowl team," he said. "I'm honored to be here. It's exciting to think that I'll be spending a week with the best players in the NFL."

"I don't consider myself to be an All-Pro like these guys. I'm like a little kid. I might ask for an autograph or two."

There are Pro Bowl rookie lessons to be learned, too. Indianapolis quarterback Jim Harbaugh learned one on the first day of workouts.

"Most of the guys brought a lot of gear to trade," he said. "Everybody is trading their gear. I didn't bring any, so I guess that's a rookie mistake."

"I'm having a lot of fun. I'm learning a lot from these guys here, really, and just in kind of awe at all the talent here."

Perhaps, Glover, Elam and Harbaugh can learn a trick or two about "stylin'" from the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys.

"We're definitely doing the stretch limo, baby," Nate Newton said of his mode of transportation during his Pro Bowl stay in Hawaii.

Fellow guard Larry Allen is learning fast.

"I might have to," Allen said of using a limousine service. "This is my first time here."

One Cowboy who doesn't care either way was wide receiver Michael Irvin, who said he was still trying to recover from celebrations marking the Cowboys' 27-17 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We had quite a night," he said in recounting the post-game parties.

"As you can tell, my voice is still hoarse from all the yelling," he said. "Right now, I just need to get some rest after a win like that. After what we went through this season, this Super Bowl win was sweet."

And now that the NFC has extended its Super Bowl winning streak to 12, Newton fears it will be payback time for the AFC in the Pro Bowl.

"The AFC is going to be a little upset this weekend because they haven't won a Super Bowl in 12 years," he said. "The Pro Bowl is get-back time for them."

Hereford football team to play 9-game schedule next season

The Hereford High School football team will play only nine games next season, boys' athletic director Danny Haney said.

Dropping a game from the normal 10-game schedule was made necessary by a collision of circumstances.

The biennial realignment of districts by the University Interscholastic League (UIL) kept seven schools in Hereford's District 1-4A. The UIL also increased the number of occupied districts to 32, meaning the 1-4A schools no longer have a bye in the first round of the playoffs.

Instead of having 11 weeks to play 10 games, starting next fall Hereford has 10 weeks to play 10 games, plus they have an odd number of teams in the district, meaning an open week in the district schedule.

That week next year is Nov. 1, Haney said, and it won't be filled. Haney cannot release the full schedule until Feb. 22, when the UIL realignment becomes official. Haney did say that Frenship will be lost because Plainview, moving down from Class 5A, will be added to Frenship District 2-4A schedule.

While the nine game schedule is an unfortunate situation, Haney said, it's one with which the Herd will have to live.

"If your open date falls late in district, you'd rather not play someone that's not in your district," Haney said.

Haney added that some schools from District 3-5A have had nine-game schedules, including Amarillo High the last two years.

Memphis nips DePaul for ninth straight loss

By The Associated Press
DePaul did everything it could to avoid a school-record ninth straight loss. Everything, that is, except put the ball in the basket in the last second.

Bryant Bowden missed a short shot and Brian Currie missed a tip at the buzzer Thursday night, and No. 11 Memphis held off DePaul 83-82 in overtime.

Memphis led by 15 at halftime and was ahead by 10 with five minutes left in regulation, but the host Blue Demons forced overtime on Jermaine Watts' 3-pointer with 4.9 seconds left.

"We took that first-half lead pretty lightly. I could feel it at halftime when they all came in smiling. I knew this would happen. You can't let up like that," Memphis coach Larry Finch said.

DePaul was down 83-82 when Watts missed a jumper with a half-minute left. Memphis missed a foul shot, giving the Blue Demons another chance, but Bowden and Currie missed.

"I had the perfect shot I wanted. I had been hitting it all night. They all don't go down," Bowden said. Holds On. In other college games involving ranked teams, No. 1 Massachusetts topped Temple 59-35. No. 7 Utah downed Texas-El Paso 77-62, Washington stopped No. 14 Arizona 80-79 in overtime, No. 18 Syracuse beat Miami 72-51, No. 19 UCLA beat Oregon 85-78 and Providence upended No. 21 Boston College 76-75.

Bowden had 23 points and 10 rebounds and Currie had 20 points and 11 rebounds for DePaul (7-12, 0-8 Conference USA).

Mingo Johnson, who had three free throws and a 3-pointer in the overtime, scored 21 points for Memphis (16-3, 7-1), and Lorenzen Wright had 17 points and 12 rebounds.

DePaul lost eight in a row in 1970-71, when it finished 8-17 under Ray Meyer in its last losing season. Meyer's son, Joey, now coaching the Blue Demons, was the captain of that team.

No. 1 Massachusetts 59, Temple 35

Massachusetts made sure Temple did not knock off another top team, holding the Owls to their lowest point total since an 11-6 loss to Tennessee in the 1973-74 season.

The Minutemen (20-0, 8-0 Atlantic 10), the nation's only unbeaten team, limited Temple (11-8, 7-1) to its lowest total in the 191 games it has played at McGonigle Hall. The Owls scored just two points in the last 13 minutes of the first half and trailed 30-12 at the break.

Marcus Camby had 15 points, five rebounds and nine blocked shots for Massachusetts. Temple, 0-for-16 on 3-pointers, earlier this season toppled then-No. 1 Kansas and then-No. 2 Villanova.

No. 7 Utah 77, Texas-El Paso 62

Brandon Jessie and Keith Van Horn each scored 17 points as Utah won at Salt Lake City.

The Utes (17-3, 9-1 Western Athletic Conference) outrebounded UTEP 47-19. Miners reserve guard Mark Ingles scored 23 points and tied a team record with seven 3-pointers.

Washington 80, No. 14 Arizona 79, OT

Jason Hartman made up for a late miss in regulation by hitting a free throw with 1.1 seconds left in overtime, and Washington held on for its first win at Arizona in 12 years.

Hartman, who scored 18 points, missed a 3-pointer at the end of regulation, leaving it tied at 73. After his go-ahead foul shot, he missed a free throw and Arizona called timeout.

The Wildcats (15-4, 5-3 Pac-10) threw the inbounds pass the length of the court and hit the backboard, and the ball bounced back to Corey Williams, who missed a 16-footer.

No. 18 Syracuse 72, Miami 51

Syracuse reversed a loss this season at Miami, winning at the Carrier Dome behind John Wallace's 19 points and Otis Hill's 17.

The Orangemen (15-6, 6-5 Big East) held the Hurricanes to 30 percent shooting. Syracuse led 38-25 at halftime despite taking 11 fewer shots than Miami (10-8, 4-6 Big East).

No. 19 UCLA 85, Oregon 78

Toby Bailey bounced back from his worst game of the season, scoring 25 points as UCLA won at home.

Bailey, who had a career-high 26 points in last season's NCAA championship game victory, keyed a decisive 14-2 run in the second half. Last Saturday, Bailey had nine points and four turnovers in a close loss to Louisville.

Providence 76, No. 21 Boston College 75

Austin Croshere hit Providence's 14th 3-point shot of the game, putting the Friars ahead for good with 1:10 left.

Derrick Brown scored 23 points and Michael Brown 20 as Providence (11-7, 4-6 Big East) beat a ranked team for the first time in four tries this season.

Boston College (12-5, 5-4) lost at home despite making its last 27 free throws, finishing 28-for-29 from the foul line.

Kidd backs up All-Star voters

By The Associated Press
Jason Kidd didn't talk about it. He just did it.

Seattle guard Gary Payton, who questioned whether Kidd should have won the fan voting for a starting berth in this month's NBA All-Star game, guarded Kidd for most of Thursday night's game at Dallas.

Kidd scored a season-high 36 points and had nine rebounds and eight assists to lead the Mavericks over the SuperSonics 103-100.

"I'm not going to get into any wars in the newspapers," Kidd said after going 14-for-22 from the field, 5-of-8 from 3-point range and adding four steals. "I just let my game speak for me."

Shawn Kemp led the Sonics with 22 points, while Payton scored 20. Even with the loss, Seattle has a 32-12 record, the best in the Western Conference. But the lowly Mavericks have beaten the Sonics in two of their three meetings this season.

Kidd was just three points shy of a career-high in scoring.

"They just gave me a lot of wide-open shots, and I was able to make them," Kidd said. "The ball was falling for me."

George McCloud had 23 points, Jim Jackson 15 and Popeye Jones 14 points and 14 rebounds for the Mavericks, who tied a club record with 14 3-pointers.

Jones hit four free throws in the final minute to give Dallas a 101-98 lead with 32 seconds remaining. After Kemp's layup pulled the Sonics to 101-100, McCloud hit two free throws with 9.3 seconds remaining.

"If Popeye and George don't make their free throws, we'd be hanging our heads talking about what might have been," Kidd said.

Bulls 105, Kings 85

Michael Jordan had his second straight off night, but finished with 27 points as visiting Chicago won its 17th straight. The Bulls improved to 40-3, an NBA record for most wins with just three losses; the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers were 39-3.

Jordan was only 7-of-16 from the field, but added 13 free throws.

Chicago's Dennis Rodman tied his season high with 21 rebounds.

Sacramento was led by Mitch Richmond with 30 points.

Knicks 110, Magic 102

Patrick Ewing missed all 15 shots he took in the second half, yet New York still won its fourth straight, defeating visiting Orlando.

Ewing scored all 23 of his points in the first half, but Anthony Mason took up the slack with 13 of his 21 points in the second half, including a tip-in and layup that ended the Magic's final threat.

Nick Anderson paced Orlando with 30 points, but All-Stars Penny Hardaway and Shaquille O'Neal managed just six and 18, respectively.

Heat 124, 76ers 104

Rex Chapman scored 23 points and host Miami rallied with a barrage of 3-pointers in the fourth quarter to beat Philadelphia.

Reserve guard Voshon Lenard, a rookie who finished with 15 points, hit a pair of 3-pointers as the Heat stretched an 85-80 lead to 102-87 at the start of the fourth period.

Alonzo Mourning scored 20 points for Miami, while Trevor Ruffin had 28 points for the Sixers, who have lost 10 of 11 games.

Rockets 116, Hornets 111

Houston won at Charlotte as Sam Cassell scored all 22 of his points in the final 14:43. Hakeem Olajuwon added 32 points and 11 rebounds as the Rockets ran their record against the Hornets to 17-2.

Charlotte got 24 points each from Matt Geiger and Kenny Anderson. Geiger's total was one point higher than the fourth-year center's previous career high.

Pistons 87, Pacers 70

In Auburn Hills, Mich., Detroit stopped Indiana's winning streak at seven, one short of the team's NBA franchise record.

Otis Thorpe scored 23 points to lead the Pistons, who played without their leading scorer, Grant Hill. Detroit also got 21 points from Allan Houston.

The Pacers, held to their lowest point total of the season, were led by Rik Smits with 21. He was the only Indiana player in double figures.

Mark West ended an unusual streak midway through the first period when he picked up his first assist of the season.

Bucks 108, Nuggets 102

Vin Baker scored 11 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and host Milwaukee hung on to defeat Denver in a game marred by three players being ejected.

Milwaukee's Sherman Douglas and Denver's Jalen Rose were thrown out of the game in the third quarter after exchanging blows and LaPhonso Ellis got tossed in the fourth period for pushing Milwaukee's Marty Conlon.

Johnny Newman had a season-high 21 and Glenn Robinson added 20 as the Bucks snapped a four-game losing streak, including the last three at home.

Denver's Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 15 of his 25 points in the fourth period.

Spurs look into moving to New Orleans

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - The San Antonio Spurs, unhappy with the Alamodome, are eyeing New Orleans and a new sports arena to be built there as a possible new home, a television station has reported.

KENS-TV cited unidentified sources Thursday as saying top Spurs officials have contacted New Orleans officials about moving the team to an $84 million sports arena to be constructed in that city.

But Spurs president Jack Diller denied a move to Louisiana is in the works and said the franchise is only trying to keep informed about sports arenas in other cities.

"It's not true other than to say we try to keep aware of what is going on in every market. New Orleans is only one of probably 25 markets around the United States and Canada that are in the process of building new sports facilities," Diller told KENS.

"We try to keep apprised of what is going on every where so that we are up to date in terms of what's happening and what might be something that we might want to look to in the future," he said.

Construction on the 18,500-seat arena in New Orleans is to begin in June. The facility will be equipped with 40 luxury suites, compared with only 11 that the Spurs have at the Alamodome.

Diller has said because the $186 million Alamodome was designed for football, luxury suites and box seats - big revenue sources for sports teams - are located too high and far away from the basketball court.

The Spurs moved into the Alamodome before the 1993-94 season with a 10-year lease shortly after the stadium opened in May 1993.

For months, the Spurs' future in San Antonio has been in question.

Last summer, Spurs chairman Robert McDermott stirred citywide controversy when he said the team needed a new arena better suited for basketball, or it might leave San Antonio.

Later, at the urging of mayor Bill Thornton, the team began holding private talks with San Antonio city officials to try to find ways to make the Alamodome more suitable for the Spurs. Those discussions are continuing.

Rangers plan to retire Ryan's famous No. 34

By MELISSA WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Nolan Ryan, who saw the No. 30 he wore with the California Angels retired in 1992, will become only the fifth player in major league history to have his number retired by two different teams.

The Texas Rangers announced Thursday that they will retire Ryan's No. 34 in September, making him the first player in team history to receive that distinction.

"I'm honored to be the first one," said Ryan, his famous hands jammed into his trenchcoat pockets during a brief news conference at The Ballpark in Arlington. "These are the kind of honors it's hard to describe how it makes you feel."

The other players who have had two numbers retired are Hank Aaron (Atlanta Braves and Milwaukee Brewers), Rod Carew (Minnesota Twins and California Angels), Rollie Fingers (Oakland A's and Brewers) and Casey Stengel (New York Yankees and New York Mets).

Ryan, who turned 49 on Wednesday, ended his 27-year major league career in 1993 after five seasons with the Rangers.

In that time, he enjoyed several of his most famous moments, including his 5,000th strikeout and seventh no-hitter.

That makes the Rangers' honor special, Ryan said, "because they both happened here, because of the electricity in the air and the way the fans have supported me."

"He was the greatest player that ever played for the franchise and I think it's entirely appropriate that we do this for him," team president Tom Schieffer said.

The Rangers also announced plans to unveil a life-size statue of Ryan in Vandergriff Plaza at The Ballpark in Arlington in September. A sculptor has not been chosen.

Ryan broke into the big leagues with the New York Mets, playing for them in 1968-1971. After being with the Angels in 1972-79, he spent eight years with the Houston Astros, then signed with the Rangers in 1988.

During his career, the right-hander went 324-292 with a 3.19 ERA. He is the majors' all-time leader with 5,714 strikeouts, and his seven no-hitters are three more than anyone else.

Ryan, a shoo-in for the Hall of Fame, also ranks among the all-time leaders in starts, innings, shutouts and wins. He holds or shares more than 50 major league, American League and National League records.

One of Ryan's most famous non-record moments came Aug. 4, 1993, during a game against the Chicago White Sox when he hit Robin Ventura with a pitch. Ventura, 20 years Ryan's junior, charged the mound and took a pummeling from the then-46-year-old pitcher.

Ryan left another memorable image on Sept. 8, 1990, when a line drive off Bo Jackson's bat missed his glove and caromed off his chin, slicing his lower lip with a two-inch gash that soaked two jerseys with blood.

Ryan alluded to both incidents Thursday when asked how he'd pose for the statue.

"It seems the Robin Ventura pose is remembered more than the Bo Jackson pose," Ryan quipped.

A committee of civic leaders will kick off a community fund-raising campaign, "Build on the Dream", February 12-26, which will benefit further improvements to the Hereford Aquatic Park site. A campaign goal of $40,000 has been set. All proceeds of this campaign will be directed to this park only, for the purchase of 100 large trees and the material expense for construction of a covered picnic pavillion, concrete picnic tables, benches and barbecue grills.

If you would like to share in this park improvement campaign by making an individual donation, please fill out the form provided below. All donations are tax deductible. The City of Hereford will provide a tax exempt receipt for all donations upon request.

U.S. SENATOR

world. From now on, legislation that regulates the workplace — the Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA), the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), the Family and Medical Leave Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act, to name a few — will apply to congressional offices without exception.

One of the reasons I feel so strongly about this long-overdue sea change in government is that I, too, have owned my own small business. I, too, have felt the smothering effect of too many federal regulations. It is high time Congress experience the consequences of the laws it passes. From January 23 forward, congressional staff will work under the same set of rules that applies to the private workplace.

Given the irregular and long working hours involved in committee work and floor debate, this isn't going to be easy. But it hasn't been easy for private employers.

That's the whole point of the exercise. Whether rules are good or bad, tough to implement or not, they should be applied across-the-board. If a law or regulation is good for the country as a whole, surely it should apply to government as well as the private sector. Hands-on experience with rules and regulations can be expected to make the rulemakers think twice.

Many of our laws and regulations have cut into this country's productivity, distorting the free market and eroding our competitiveness. Over-regulation has made it more difficult for American manufacturers to export their products, and flooded our court system with lawsuits in the process.

I am optimistic that the long-term impact of the Congressional Accountability Act will be to reduce, drastically, the number of unnecessary and unworkable laws we pass in the future.

Above all, it should bring common sense to the rulemaking process.

Poll shows only 25 percent think First Lady truthful on Whitewater

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Only 25 percent of Americans think Hillary Rodham Clinton is telling the whole truth about Whitewater, according to an Associated Press poll taken after she testified before a grand jury.

Twice as many Americans, 52 percent, believe Mrs. Clinton is hiding something, and most of those people are not brushing it off as trivial, the poll found. The distrust is hurting Mrs. Clinton's image, and only four in 10 hold a favorable opinion of the first lady.

At the same time, a substantial minority is withholding judgment. And Americans are split almost evenly on the potential political impact of Mrs. Clinton's legal situation, with 43 percent seeing a serious, long-term effect on President Clinton's future, and 47 percent expecting no such effect.

The poll of 1,017 randomly selected adults was taken by phone last Friday night through Wednesday. Mrs. Clinton had just gone to a federal courthouse to answer the Whitewater prosecutor's questions about last month's mysterious appearance at the White House of her long-sought legal billing records.

The grand jury subpoena of a first lady was unprecedented; and there was no way for the public to know what was said in the secret session. Nearly three in 10 were left unable to rate their opinion of the first lady.

The opinions of the rest are: 17 percent very favorable, 22 percent somewhat favorable, 15 percent somewhat unfavorable and 17 percent very unfavorable.

Mrs. Clinton's ratings are more positive among women than among men, and she also did better with older Americans, registered voters and, of course, Democrats. But even stronger than party affiliation as a predictor of her rating is whether people believe she is telling the truth about Whitewater or related matters.

Of those who say she is hiding something, 47 percent consider it very important for investigators to learn about, and an additional 27 percent say it's somewhat important.

Results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points in the poll by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants.

Past polling has shown a consistent majority of Americans convinced that the Clintons probably did something wrong with regard to their Whitewater real estate venture and other dealings with the owner of a failed Arkansas savings and loan.

In the current poll, two-thirds think Mrs. Clinton's own political influence is spurring the investigation.

Holding Congress Accountable

For decades, Congress deliberately avoided any firsthand experience with the consequences of its own rulemaking.

Congress carefully exempted itself from a long list of government requirements that every other workplace in the country was expected to meet. Laws and regulations that applied to American businesses and individuals were kept at arm's length by those who set the rules.

Not surprisingly, the American people gradually came to feel that those who governed were distanced from their needs — and from reality. So last year one of the first acts of the new 104th Congress was to change the ground rules. It passed the Congressional Accountability Act, a measure requiring the Senate and the House of Representatives to comply with the same mandates they have imposed on the rest of the country.

This legislation went into effect January 23, 1996. Congress no longer grants itself special treatment — and has ceased to set itself above the law. This, I believe, is the first act in an ongoing drama: Congress meets the real

SOUNDER OF CYMBALS!

ASAPH, WITH HEMAN AND ETHAN, WERE LEVITES APPOINTED TO SOUND THE CYMBALS, MARCHING BEFORE THE ARK DURING ITS REMOVAL FROM THE HOUSE OF OBED-EDOM TO THE CITY OF DAVID (I CHRON. 15:16-19). AFTER THAT, ASAPH WAS ASSIGNED THE PERMANENT OFFICE OF SOUNDING CYMBALS AT ALL SERVICES (I CHRON. 16:4,5,7) AND WHEN THE SERVICE WAS FINALLY AND FULLY ARRANGED, ASAPH'S FAMILY, WITH HIM AT ITS HEAD, WAS ONE OF THE THREE FAMILIES PERMANENTLY GIVEN CHARGE OF THE MUSIC AND SONG AND TO BE INSTRUCTORS OF THIS ART (I CHRON. 25:1-9). THIS IMPORTANT POST WAS SERVED BY THE FAMILY FOR GENERATION AFTER GENERATION EVEN AFTER THE CAPTIVITY IN BABYLON. A HUNDRED AND TWENTY EIGHT, ALL OF THEM SINGERS, CAME TO JERUSALEM (EZRA 2:41) TO CONDUCT IN THE TEMPLE THE PSALMODY WHEN THE FOUNDATIONS WERE LAID! BUT IN DAVID'S TIME, COUNTING THE FAMILIES OF ASAPH AND HEMAN AND JEDUTHUN (ETHAN) THERE WERE 288 MEN TO PLAY THEIR INSTRUMENTS AND SING THE PSALMS FOR THE SERVICES.

Jordan interview shows glimpse of '60s politics

By TONY CANTU
Denton Record-Chronicle
DENTON, Texas - There is no smoking gun in the nearly 30-year-old transcript of a conversation between Barbara Jordan and a University of North Texas historian, but the interview provides a fascinating glimpse into Texas politics of that day. Her comments on such politically sensitive topics as the white-male dominated power structure and the Black Panthers, as well as her thoughts on some of her contemporaries provide hints as to why she stipulated the transcript not be released until after her death.

transcript after Ms. Jordan's death a common one granted to people being interviewed by UNT historians is in the interest of achieving an interview, without reserve.

"It was a way to encourage them to be candid," Marcello said, sitting in his office surrounded by volumes of such interviews with other prominent Texans. On the shelves, he noted other interview subjects granted the same stipulation, indicated by black jackets sealing the binder, sporadically appearing among the sea of green binders for public perusal.

Interviews with former state Sen. Oscar Mauzy, U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, and Congressman Ralph Hall also are on file, similarly enclosed in black.

The 63-page interview yields interesting and candid insights from the late congresswoman, one of the first two blacks elected to Congress from the South since Reconstruction.

"How did you cope in a white man's world?" Marcello asked early in the interview.

"Well, I tried to learn his rules, you know," Ms. Jordan responded. "The Man," as many of our young people call him, writes the books and knows the rules and makes the decisions.

"And so I decided in order to cope with the world as it is and not as we would like for it to be - in order to cope with the world as it is - it was necessary to find the door for getting inside just a little bit to find out what 'The Man' is doing, and how he acts, and how he thinks, and how he reaches his decisions - and then try to get a little corner at the decision-making table where you can hang on and maybe get a word in here, or a sentence, or a dot, you know."

While much of the interview dealt with her immediate work as a member of the 61st Texas Legislature, some comments were drawn from her own personal experience.

Among them:

- On the Black Panthers, a U.S. black revolutionary party founded in 1966: "The Black Panthers as a group help with a definition of person; help with black identity; help with consideration of the feelings of black awareness.

"I think that the Panthers are the target of somebody, and I don't pretend to say what department or group or agency, but I think they are the target of somebody because of the rhetoric they have adopted.

"They haven't really done anything that anybody can point to and say, you know, they blew up this or tore down this. But it's just the way they talk, the way they sound that gets people upset. And so I think they are the target for some action to repress their activities."

- On former Gov. Preston Smith, who two years after the interview would be swept out of office in the wake of a bank scandal: "He believes in literal interpretation of the constitution of the state and the Constitution of the nation. And I think you could expect that a man, 56, 57 years old with that many years in Texas politics would be very reluctant to make change, major change."

- On then-Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, a young man at the time who was considered by many to be a rising star in politics: "Ben Barnes, on the other hand, is another generation. You know, 31, 32 however old he is now - a man on the move with his eye someplace. I don't know just how far, and wanting to be innovative and be resourceful, and wanting to be, I think, the most powerful figure in state government, is engaged in this kind of life-and-death struggle which I think is quite real and is still real."

Expanding on Barnes, Ms. Jordan believed he was sometimes distant, and getting to know the former lieutenant governor was difficult. Ms. Jordan said, "He has the danger of burning himself out. When you start so young so fast, there is that danger that you can move too fast and really wear yourself out, and wear the people out. It seems as if he always has an eye on the next political campaign.

"And it's difficult to stop and say, 'Well, what is this man substantively?' I don't know where Ben Barnes is philosophically. Maybe there are some people who engage in long and quiet conversation with him who can discern what it is that he is about."

After leaving state government, Barnes, who was the youngest speaker of the house and served as lieutenant governor, formed a business partnership with former Gov. John Connally. Barnes-Connally Investments, founded in July 1981, was a big player in the state's real estate market. When the market crashed in the late 1980s, the men's company went bankrupt. They reorganized their financial affairs and stayed in business together until former Gov. Connally's death a few years ago.

A young legislator at the time, Ms. Jordan was careful not to step on contemporaries' toes, thus her candid comments are a unique glimpse into her views at the time, Marcello noted.

"She was very careful," Marcello recalled. "Politicians can be circumspect when being interviewed and she was quite savvy."

Man anonymously erects memorials for fallen officers

By PAUL POWELL
The Victoria Advocate
EDNA, Texas - One of eight children, Richard Metcalf, 42, of Lago Vista, grew up in the shadows of the big ships his father serviced at the Port of Houston for over 30 years.

A bear of a man at 6 feet, 7 inches, weighing well over 300 pounds, Metcalf's stature belies his gentle spirit.

Metcalf has crisscrossed Texas, anonymously erecting memorials on lonely stretches of highway where state troopers have fallen in the line of duty.

In late December 1995, Metcalf slipped into Jackson County without fanfare and put up a granite memorial at the El Toro weigh station on U.S. Highway 59 to honor Trooper Bill Davidson, who was fatally shot during a traffic stop there in April 1992.

Erection of the marker caught local law enforcement, Department of Public Safety and Highway Department officials completely off guard.

Edna state trooper David Johnson, a license and weights trooper stationed in Jackson County and Davidson's partner at the time of his death, was pleasantly surprised by the marker.

"One day there was nothing there and the next day I pulled up to find a granite memorial to Bill," he said. "It really brought back a flood of memories."

The tribute on Davidson's marker reads: "We the People of the State of Texas acknowledge and thank Trooper Bill Davidson for the great sacrifice he made to keep the public safe. His efforts will stand the test of time. May God bless his soul. April 14, 1992."

Metcalf's unusual quest was born of a kindness shown to him by a trooper. A kindness that he was never personally able to repay.

In 1991, he was returning home from work and was speeding. He was stopped by a young state trooper near Bastrop.

"I knew I was guilty and wasn't going to be able to talk my way out of a ticket but this guy was just real kind to me and sent me on my way," he said. "He was just the kind of guy anyone would want as a friend."

Metcalf was devastated to learn that the trooper was killed trying to foil a kidnapping at a roadside park south of Austin just a few weeks after their encounter.

Although divorced in 1993 after 23 years of marriage and living on a monthly disability stipend with chronic heart, lung and kidney problems, Metcalf's yearning to honor the trooper never wavered.

Late last year, he said, the Lord showed him a way to pay tribute to that trooper by putting him in touch with a monument dealer who agreed to supply him inscribed granite markers at cost.

Metcalf immediately bought a marker for the young trooper and placed it at the roadside park outside of Austin where he was killed.

"I couldn't really afford the marker but the blessing I got erecting it gave me more joy and satisfaction than anything I've ever done in my life," he said.

However, rather than peace, Metcalf found himself pulled to the conclusion that every trooper killed in the line of duty was just as deserving of recognition.

Acting on a growing conviction, he contacted the Department of Public Safety in Austin and was given the names of every state trooper killed in this state in this century. He said the list includes 72 names.

Metcalf has since erected five markers, ordered seven more and has paid for all but one out of his own pocket. His current orders will bestow a tribute to every trooper slain in this state since 1982.

"These people have given their lives as strangers for strangers and they deserve far better than that," Metcalf said.

Anyone wanting to help Metcalf in his quest may send a donation in care of We The People of The State of Texas, First National Bank, P.O. Drawer F, Bastrop, Texas 78602.

All disbursements from the memorial account are countersigned by a bank vice-president to ensure the funds are spent for their intended purpose.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best. You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day. And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message. People believe it when they read it in the paper. Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.

Telecommunications industry due massive overhaul

President Clinton expected to sign bill transforming TV, telephone, computer services

By JEANNINE AVERSA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans can expect to see a dramatic transformation of television, telephone and computer services, now that a historic overhaul of the nation's telecommunications laws has sailed through Congress.
But how soon?
"I think you'll see companies reacting fairly quickly," Vice President Al Gore said in a telephone interview Thursday.
President Clinton is likely to sign the bill within a week, Gore said.
The massive overhaul of the 1934 Communications Act would allow head-to-head competition between cable TV and local and long-distance telephone companies, deregulate cable rates and allow media companies to more easily expand their holdings. It also would restrict smutty.
Even though companies have been preparing for this new era of telecommunications competition, material on computer networks and television.

"You're not going to have people in the field tomorrow constructing new (telephone) lines and throwing a switch," said Rep. Jack Fields, R-Texas, one of the architects of the bill.
"It's just not going to happen that quickly," he said.
The bill - saluted by Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., as a telecommunications "road map" into the new century - flew through the House on Thursday, 414-16, and then the Senate, 91-5.
Clinton hailed the measure, saying in a statement, "consumers will receive the benefits of lower prices, better quality and greater choices in their telephone and cable services, and they will continue to benefit from a diversity of voices and viewpoints in radio, television and the print media."
For instance, cable companies say they'll speed up delivery of high-speed modems that connect customers to the Internet, other computer services and transmit lots of data cheaply. Telephone companies say they'll accelerate movies on demand and interactive television.

And broadcasters say once they switch over to digital technology, they may offer multiple channels of programs, home shopping and transmit sport scores to laptop computers.
Supporters say the measure would boost jobs, expand consumer choices and potentially lower prices for cable, telephone and other communications services.
But opponents say that more jobs will be lost than gained through consolidation, that choices will be limited and that cable and telephone rates are likely to go up considerably because the level of competition envisioned by supporters will not emerge.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who voted against the bill, said he was concerned about deregulating cable, saying, "I don't want to see a repeat of skyrocketing cable rates on passage of this law."
Long-distance companies and cable companies say it could take anywhere from six months to four years to begin providing local phone service - depending upon the market.
David Dorman, president of Pacific Bell, predicted residential telephone customers in New York, Illinois and California will be among the first to have choices of local phone providers.
Some Bell companies expect to provide long-distance service outside their local phone territories as soon as Clinton signs the bill.

As for cable competition, phone company executives say the new law will accelerate their plans to sell cable services to their customers, but they wouldn't be more specific.
How long the telecommunications transformation takes also is affected by the Federal Communications Commission, which will be in charge of writing many of the rules under the new law.
The FCC already has begun the ground work for some of those rules and will move as quickly as it can, said FCC Chairman Reed Hundt.
In the end, "What Americans are going to get is a lot more choice, some initial confusion and ultimately very attractive new services at very fair prices," Hundt predicted.
Once the law takes effect, people would be fined or thrown in jail if they're caught transmitting smut and other indecent materials to minors over computer networks.
The Christian Coalition said this would help make the Internet, the global computer network, "child safe and family friendly."
But civil liberties and computer user groups vowed to fight the provision on constitutional grounds.
The bill also would give parents a powerful new tool - a computer chip in TV sets allowing them to keep violent, sexually oriented or other objectionable shows off their screens.
However, the TV industry has promised to fight V-chip provision in court.

Besides Leahy, also voting no were Sens. John McCain, R-Ariz.; Russell Feingold, D-Wis.; Paul Simon, D-Ill.; and Paul Wellstone, D-Minn.
Not voting were Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas; Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.; and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va. One Senate seat is vacant.

Why Advertising Works!
Maybe you figure other retailers in your line are going to cut back their advertising, so it's safe for you, too. Right? Wrong! You're in competition for the consumer's dollar with every other retailer in town, no matter what he sells. People have only so many dollars to spend, and if they don't spend them for what you sell, they'll spend them for something else.

Forbes attracting wide attention, criticism on proposal for flat tax

By MIKE GLOVER
Associated Press Writer
EARLHAM, Iowa (AP) - Steve Forbes beamed as he perched atop the bright red fire truck, glowing in the blaze his flat tax-based campaign has set under the Republican presidential race.
"Let me explain the flat tax, and I want to speak very slowly," said Forbes. "There are some people from Washington here today, and I want them to understand it."
Fresh evidence of Forbes' momentum brought a new round of attacks from rivals about the publisher's centerpiece campaign proposal - a 17 percent flat tax - but handed him the campaign spotlight for a day.
Reiterating his outsider theme and attacking defenders of "this monstrous status quo," Forbes responded with gusto.
To a remark by Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, who said a flat tax would hit the middle class and suggested, "There may be some snake oil here somewhere," Forbes said:
"It's a typical comment by a desperate politician who doesn't realize the American people want to move ahead." He launched into a vigorous defense of his proposal as he busied across frigid Iowa, where caucuses in less than two weeks launch the presidential election season.
At one campaign stop, Forbes suggested that his 17 percent tax would be only the beginning, and a lower rate was possible. "I see it going down more and more and more," Forbes said. "I don't want to stop at 17."
As his standing has risen in the polls, Forbes has come increasingly under attack from other Republicans. Emboldened by the polls, he joked readily about the heat he's getting, at one point saying he expected Iowa's sub-zero weather to be blamed on his flat tax plan.

Forbes was buoyed by a new survey that showed him gaining ground in New Hampshire. While he declined to make any predictions, he said surveys that show him gaining match his internal campaign polls.
In New Hampshire, which holds the nation's first primary on Feb. 20, "Our own surveys show it to be a dead heat," he said. In Iowa, with its Feb. 12 Republican caucuses, "Senator Dole is still ahead by about eight or 10 points, depending on the day."
"The trend is very clear," Forbes said. "The American people want to turn these problems into opportunities. They are responding positively to our message."
But the mood shifted at his final stop, where he was peppered with questions about gay rights and abortion.
On abortion, Forbes refuses to accept the "pro-choice" label, although he doesn't back harsh anti-abortion proposals such as a constitutional amendment banning the procedure.
He did suggest, however, that he would block development of an abortion-inducing pill. "I wish the pill wouldn't exist," Forbes said. "I would hope that we could stop it and have the approval of the American people."
Pressed to explain his position, Forbes said, "What I don't want is a repeat of Prohibition," which wasn't accepted by the public and was widely ignored. "I think we can bring them along step by step to the day where abortion is not done except in dire emergencies," he said.
Of same-sex couples, Forbes said, "If you want to live together, that's fine. If you want to have a life together, fine. All I can say is compassion is not approval."
For the most part, his campaign day in frozen small-town Iowa was upbeat. He stopped his bus caravan across western Iowa to drop in at the Embers restaurant in Avoca, where his visit clearly surprised farmer Jim Kardell. "Who'd have ever thought I'd meet ... What's your name again?" Kardell said.

In addition to Dole, other rivals were seeking attention, largely by bashing Forbes.
Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander warned in Iowa that Forbes' tax plan would depress property values, reducing property tax revenues that finance local schools. "It makes about as much sense as something out of the Wizard of Oz," said Alexander.
Commentator Pat Buchanan put on his analyst hat, predicting Dole would continue to slide and would be joined by Forbes as scrutiny was focused on the multimillionaire.
"I think the Forbes vote is basically a parking place for voters in New Hampshire who have yet to decide on who their nominee is going to be," said Buchanan.
With polls offering a conflicting and often confusing view of the race, Dole's backers were claiming they can reverse the hard times on which their candidate has fallen. They were clearly nervous about the suddenly chaotic race that has been stirred by Forbes.
"He's a new face and he's got a lot of money," said former New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gregg, a Dole backer. "That's a very powerful mix."

Call to ex-wife's home revealed by Simpson

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - Less than two hours before Nicole Brown Simpson was slashed to death, O.J. Simpson telephoned her and demanded to speak to her daughter, according to sources who recounted Simpson's deposition.
Simpson testified last week that he talked with his daughter Sydney about her dance recital earlier that evening and avoided talking to his ex-wife, sources told The Associated Press on Thursday.
The call from Simpson's mansion, never disclosed during his trial, was made between one and two hours before the time prosecutors contend Ms. Simpson and her friend were killed, according to the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.
Simpson testified that all he said to his ex-wife was, "Let me speak to Sydney." He said he was trying to avoid talking to Ms. Simpson because he - not she - had broken off their relationship a month earlier.
Simpson was acquitted Oct. 3 in the June 1994 killings of Ms. Simpson and Ron Goldman. The parents of the victims have filed a wrongful-death lawsuit against Simpson, forcing him to testify under oath about the case for the first time.
Lawyers for both sides have refused to comment on the details of the closed-door sessions, which are to resume later this month after the release of Simpson's mail-order video.

Simpson testified for five days, answering questions from lawyer Daniel Petrocelli, who represents Goldman's father.
Simpson's phone call shortly before the slayings was his second to Ms. Simpson that day. He had made an earlier call from his cellular phone, prosecutors have said, to make arrangements to attend the dance recital.
During his trial, Simpson house guest Brian "Kato" Kaelin testified that Simpson appeared upset when he arrived home from the recital because Ms. Simpson wouldn't let Simpson see their daughter at the event.
After giving conflicting testimony about the timing of the second call, Simpson settled on saying that it was probably placed before going to McDonald's with Kaelin about 9:10 p.m. that night, the sources said.
Prosecutors have suggested that the killings happened as early as 10:15 p.m. or 10:20 p.m., meaning that under their timeline Simpson's second call, if made before the McDonald's run, would have been made less than two hours before the slayings.
