Pregnant woman struck by pickup

A Hereford man is in jail and a local woman is fighting for her life in a Lubbock hospital following a vehicle-pedestrian accident on Avenue H last weekend.

Laura Olivia Flores, 26, of 612 Irving, who was nine months pregnant, was struck by a pickup just after 6 p.m. Saturday as she crossed Avenue H.

She was rushed to Hereford Regional Medical Center where doctors performed an emergency Caesarian section to deliver her child. The baby girl was delivered stillborn -- one day before the due date for normal birth.

Mrs. Flores was flown by Aero Care to Lubbock's University Medical Center, where she was listed in critical condition in the surgical intensive care unit this morning with multiple internal injuries.

Hereford Police Chief David Wagner said the incident is still under investigation, but that Raul Rivas, 24, of 908 Russell, has been charged with DWI and aggravated assault.

Paperwork on the case has not been submitted to the district attorney's office.

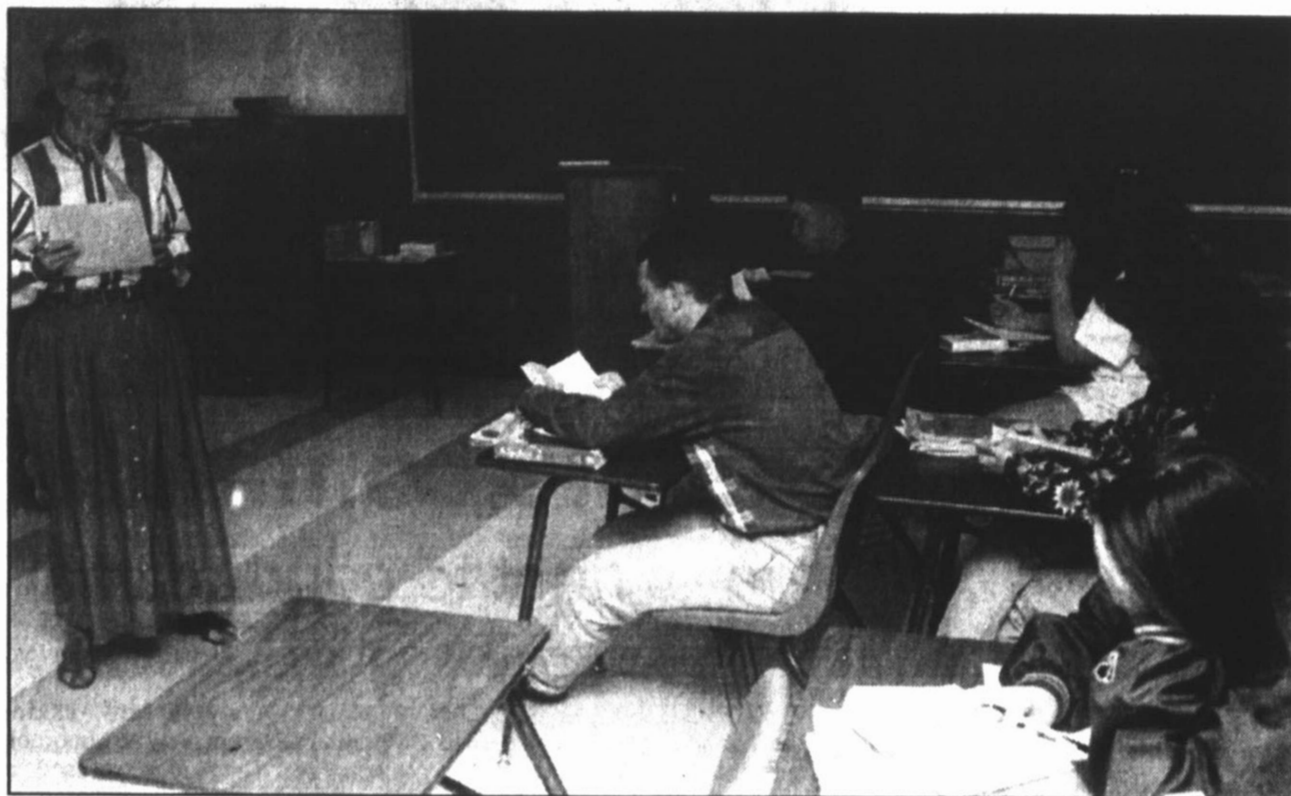

Rivas was arraigned Sunday by Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine, who set bond at $100,000. Rivas remained jailed in Deaf Smith County jail this morning.

According to police reports, Rivas was backing up Avenue H when he allegedly ran over Mrs. Flores, who was crossing the street at the time.

With Mrs. Flores at the time was a 10-year-old daughter. She was not injured in the accident.

Wagner said Rivas stopped about 23 feet from the spot where Mrs. Flores was struck.

Wagner said field sobriety tests were administered at the scene, but said a blood test was not administered.

Into the stretch run

Senior students in Colleen Billingsley's Advanced English 4 class at Hereford High School read an assignment on Monday, the first day back to school following Spring Break. This begins the final push for the Class of 1996, with only two school days off between now and graduation on May 24. Students will be dismissed on April 5 for Good Friday and on April 22 for a staff development day. Otherwise, it's five days of class per week for 10 more weeks.

Commission looks at infrastructure needs Panel receives report calling for $1.5 million in repairs to systems

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

An aging and deteriorating infrastructure -- streets, water and sewer lines -- of the City of Hereford is drawing attention of the City Commission after a report given Monday night.

City Manager Chester Nolen reviewed the street and sewer needs during a commission work session. A price tag of $1.5 million, or more, was mentioned for repairs to the systems.

A report on water lines is being prepared by Nolen and city staff for a commission work session next month.

After the work session, the commission's regular meeting agenda was directed to an explanation of an application for a Community Development block grant and to a proposal to join with other cities in seeking seal coating bids. A report on activities of Hereford Economic Development Corporation was given the commission by Mike Hatley, executive director.

Seven miles of city streets that should be repaired or replaced were listed by Nolen in his report.

Among the streets in the report are some that were paved more than 50 years ago with bricks, including portions of Main Street and Fourth Street.

Nolen gave the commission a rundown on his survey of streets, describing condition of the roadways and remedies. Portions of at least 12 streets, including those heavily-traveled, such as Avenue K, Plains Avenue, Moreman, West 15th and East 15th, 13th Street, Grand, Avenue F, and Sampson, are the subject of report.

The city manager estimated a cost of $9 per square yard for the street work. He told the commission that the estimated cost of $486,630 would rise with engineering expense and any increase in cost of materials.

Replacement of sewer lines was recommended in an older section of the city, generally bounded by U.S. 60 on the south, Park Avenue on the north extending east to U.S. 60, and U.S. 385 on the west.

He said eight and one-half miles of six-inch sewer line should be installed in the area, where the oldest lines exist. Replacement is complicated because the old lines must be kept open while new lines are laid, Nolen said.

"We're looking at $1 million, at least, for the sewer system," Nolen said. The commission will continue the study of infrastructure at a work session next month. Nolen will review findings on needs in the city's water system.

A resolution authorizing the submission of an application for a block grant was approved by the commission.

John Kiehl of Panhandle Regional Planning Commission explained that funding of projects through the block grant program is determined by a grading system. Hereford is eligible for a grant, based on income of residents of areas involved.

The city is seeking approximately $150,000 to replace a sewer main north of George Street. Approximately 30 residences would be served. Another part of the grant would be used to install a sewer main and small lift station on Catalpa Street to serve five or more residences.

Total cost of the project is estimated at $175,612. The city would provide 20 percent, or $29,272, toward the work.

The City Commission approved a proposal by Nolen that Hereford join with other cities in the area in street seal coat bidding. He said last year Hereford paid 57.5 cents per square yard for seal coating, compared with a cost of 54.5 cents paid by cities taking part in the joint project.

Nolen estimated the city will seal coat 128,400 square yards of streets this year.

Hatley's report to the commission on HEDC activities included an update on a movie theatre project. He also said efforts will be directed toward encouraging dairy interests here. Materials for distribution at conferences and to send to prospective business and industry are being prepared, Hatley said.

Clinton sends $1.64 trillion budget to Congress; would give tax relief

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton today sent Congress a $1.64 trillion election-year budget that would provide modest tax relief to the middle class while reaffirming his commitment to balancing the budget "the right way."

The proposed spending in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 is 4 percent higher than the estimated $1.57 trillion the government will spend this year.

The president's proposals, outlined in six volumes totaling 2,196 pages, provide the first program-by-program look at a budget plan he has been pushing since January.

The formal submission of the budget is six weeks late this year due to the protracted deadlock with the Republican-controlled Congress, a dispute that has twice shut down major portions of the government. The current fiscal year is half gone without resolution of spending disputes for many agencies.

Republicans have already dismissed the fiscal 1997 proposal as doing too little to curb the government's expensive benefit programs such as Medicare and providing too little in tax relief.

Clinton signaled that he planned to use his detailed proposals as a major campaign document, hoping to paint the Republicans as too extreme in their proposed government cutbacks.

In his budget message, Clinton called on Congress to "balance the budget the right way" by cutting unnecessary programs while protecting "senior citizens, working families, children and other vulnerable Americans."

He challenged Republicans to return to the negotiating table and quickly complete work toward reaching a balanced budget by 2002. The president is scheduled to meet Wednesday with Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

"In our negotiations with congressional leaders, we have made great progress toward reaching an agreement," the president said. "We have simply come too far to let this opportunity slip away."

Dole, Clinton's Republican rival for the presidency, said on the campaign stump Monday in Illinois that he and Clinton should do what is right for the American people and reach an agreement on a balanced budget.

In his budget message, Clinton signaled that he would continue to resist what he considers GOP efforts to cut back too sharply on the growth in Medicare, the huge health care program for the elderly, and Medicaid, the federal-state program that provides health services to the poor.

The goal, he said, should be "a government that is leaner, but not meaner."

slow-moving efforts to complete work on agency budgets for fiscal 1996. The budgets for nine Cabinet departments and scores of other federal agencies remain mired in partisan disputes.

Clinton's budget today restated his "Middle Class Bill of Rights" tax cut proposals he first outlined in December 1994 after Republicans captured control of both houses of Congress for the first time in 40 years.

The president would cut taxes by $100 billion over seven years by offering, when fully phased in, a $500 tax credit for each child younger than 13. He also would allow deductions of up to $10,000 per family for college expenses and expand the availability of Individual Retirement Accounts.

Constrained by the need to eliminate massive deficits, Clinton's proposals for new government spending were modest, certainly in comparison to the packages put together in election years by previous presidents.

D.S. County suffering drought-like conditions; wheat crop in danger

From Staff, Wire Reports
Wheat, the state's fourth-largest cash crop, is withering under a months-long Texas drought and other unusual weather including temperature extremes.

Some farmers estimate the wheat crop yield could be cut in half or more after wide areas of Texas have been left with less than 75 percent of their average rainfall.

Stephen Amosson, regional economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Amarillo, said that the question now is how bad the disaster is going to be.

According to Ted Peabody, Farm Service Agency director, the Deaf Smith County area is also suffering from drought-like conditions and will probably have a decrease in acres when farmers begin to disaster their crops.

"It is really too soon to tell what farmers will do in Deaf Smith County," he said. "But, if we don't see some precipitation soon they (farmers) will be losing a lot of acres."

Preliminary forecasts show that the wheat crop has already sustained sizeable losses, with more damage expected if adequate rainfall does not develop.

A founding director of the Texas Wheat Production Board in Amarillo, W.R. Moore Jr., said the harvest this year is likely to plunge 50 to 60 percent below the annual average of about 100 million bushels in recent years.

Typically, Texas ranks fourth or fifth among wheat-producing states but sometimes falls to seventh. Winter wheat in the Lone Star State generated from $226 to $411 million in annual revenues during the 1990s. A cool front's passage through the state Saturday carried little hope for long-term relief from the dry, windy conditions that have also triggered grass fires around the state.

The Texas Agricultural Statistics Service's survey of field conditions early this month showed wheat at 40 percent of normal, down from 64 percent last year.

The crop forecasting service said more than 60 percent of the wheat was in poor to very poor condition, with 31 percent rating fair and 8 percent good.

Officials said losses of potential wheat sales will top $100 million in Texas' leading wheat growing area, which comprises the 41 counties of the Panhandle and South Plains.

John Spearman Sr., a Pampa area farmer, said nonirrigated wheat could be a disaster if soaking rains do not come within three weeks.

Irrigating wheat

Wheat, the state's fourth-largest cash crop, is suffering from months of drought and temperature extremes. This field of wheat located north of Hereford will benefit from the irrigation water, however, nonirrigated wheat could be a disaster if soaking rains do not come within three weeks.

Student is nominated for Air Force academy

Nathan Diller of Hereford has been nominated for an appointment to the U.S. Air Force Academy, it was announced Monday by U.S. Rep. Larry Combest.

A senior at Hereford High School, Nathan served as a congressional page for Congressman Combest in Washington, D.C. during the summer of 1995. He is the son of Ralph and Shelly Diller of Hereford.

An aspiring pilot, Nathan has been involved throughout high school with the National Honor Society, Forensic League and student council. He is listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Rep. Combest nominated 26 students for appointment to the service academies for 1996-97. "These students who receive nominations are the best and brightest that the 19th District has to offer, and it is an honor to present them with the opportunity to represent their country," said Combest. To ensure fairness and competition, Combest submits qualified applicants for nomination, but defers to the academies to make the competitive choice.

Service academy nominations are made by members of Congress or by the vice president and are considered one of the most prestigious opportunities for higher learning.

The congressman is now accepting applications for bright and dedicated high school juniors interested in appointments to the service academies.

"Students who wish to attend a U.S. Service Academy must go through a very competitive and challenging selection process in order to get an appointment," said Combest.

Eligible candidates begin the academy application process in the spring of their junior year by contacting Rep. Combest and the academy they are interested in attending. Applicants must be a U.S. citizen, a legal resident of the 19th District of Texas, unmarried with no children and be at least 17 years of age.

Each applicant must take the SAT or ACT exam, and have their scores submitted to Congressman Combest's office. Upon receipt of an application, the congressman's office opens a file in the student's name containing a completed application, an official high school transcript, a brief essay summarizing the student's wishes to attend a service academy, and a wallet-size photograph. Letters of recommendation are not necessary,

Debate continues on soldier's plight

Army's right to court martial over U.N. insignia questioned

By MICHELLE MITTELSTADT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The military has no right to hand out a bad conduct discharge to an Army medic court-martialed for his refusal to wear United Nations' insignia on a peacekeeping mission to the former Yugoslavia, his attorneys contend.

Lawyers for Spec. Michael New argued before a federal judge Monday that the 22-year-old from Conroe, Texas, no longer should be under the jurisdiction of the military justice system. New was involuntarily returned to civilian status when given an unlawful order by his commanders, his three-man defense team told U.S. District Judge Paul L. Friedman.

"Michael New is not the one who asked for divorce," said lawyer Michael Farris, arguing that actions by the government, not New, changed the soldier's status.

But a government lawyer said New, who remains on duty in Germany as a file clerk pending disposition of the court-martial, didn't "magically" lose his military status. New retains several avenues of appeal within the military courts, said Justice Department lawyer Robert L. Shapiro.

New's lawyers are asking Friedman to grant New an honorable discharge. The judge refused in January to step in at the last moment and halt New's court-martial on charges he disobeyed a lawful order.

New is the first American serviceman court-martialed for refusing to accept foreign command on a U.N. operation.

He refused to supplement his U.S. battle dress uniform with a U.N. patch and headgear when ordered to do so in advance of a peacekeeping mission to Macedonia last October. In refusing the order, New said he had sworn allegiance to the U.S. Constitution, not the U.N. charter.

"The issue here is simple: Can a man serve two masters?" New's lead attorney, retired Col. Ronald Ray, said before the hearing. "Michael New takes his oath very seriously as an oath of exclusive allegiance."

New's case has become a flashpoint for conservatives troubled by the Clinton administration's use of U.S. troops in U.N. peacekeeping operations.

Seeking to prove that the order New disobeyed wasn't lawful, his defense team essentially is putting the administration on trial. The attorneys contend the deployment of U.S. soldiers to Macedonia was unlawful because the administration failed to obtain congressional approval.

The issue turns on the delicate question of whether the U.N. mission falls under Chapter 6 or Chapter 7 of the U.N. Charter. The administration contends it's a Chapter 6 mission, which doesn't require congressional approval. New's lawyers argue that the Macedonia mission in fact meets the Chapter 7 criteria. Without congressional approval, the mission is unlawful. Hence, the order to deploy to Macedonia under U.N. insignia is unlawful, they contend.

"We have an affirmative duty to question and disobey unlawful orders," Ray told the judge.

Shapiro said the Chapter 6 versus Chapter 7 debate is irrelevant, adding that Friedman is "poorly equipped" to decide that question.

The sole issue before Friedman is whether New's military status changed, he said. The government contends New never was asked to shift his allegiance to the U.N. "He is still subject to the regular (U.S. military) chain of command," Shapiro said.

Before deciding the honorable discharge question, Friedman said he must determine whether he has jurisdiction. "The issues presented here are obviously important," he said. "The questions are hard questions."

Friedman promised a decision by the end of the month.

New's case has drawn a frenzy of interest on conservative radio shows, fax networks and Internet sites. Several supporters appeared outside the courthouse Monday, waving signs saying "Mike New American Hero" and "Free Michael New."

Supporters in Congress are circulating a resolution urging President Clinton to overturn New's discharge. Separately, more than 95 members of Congress, including Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, have endorsed legislation that would bar orders requiring American troops to wear U.N. insignia.

Combest alert targets Clinton budget items

WASHINGTON--U.S. Rep. Larry Combest (R-Tx.) alerted taxpayers that $8 billion in presidential budget demands include taxpayer funds to spend for massage schools, measuring rainwater overseas and half a billion for volunteers.

Combest highlighted the latest budget demands from President Clinton Monday. Combest particularly focused on the cost overruns of the Clinton paid volunteer program, Americorps, which the president wants funded at $470 million.

"Americorps is government paying folks to do volunteer work and not even keeping track of the program's wild spending habits," said Combest. "The president figured volunteers would cost taxpayers $17,000, but government investigators peg the cost at more than $26,000."

"The Arizona-New Mexico Americorps just by itself blew almost $200,000 on big salaries, entertainment and travel, and tax penalties without the government knowing it. For a paid volunteer organization, it would be nice if they'd hire at least one accountant," said Combest.

The U.S. Government's Office of Inspector General audit found Americorps grants paid for personal expenses such as car maintenance and flower purchases, travel and entertainment, fines and penalties for late tax payments and traffic tickets, and the costs of a lawsuit by one of its managers.

In addition, Combest noted the salary of an executive director was nearly double that of his predecessors. Instead of most funds coming from private donors, as the president promised, the Inspector General found that the government covers 79 percent of the costs for Americorps.

Combest said in addition to more Americorps spending, the newest Clinton budget demands include making more direct federal student loans available for massage, beauty and barber schools.

Another Clinton budget demand includes $2 million for a crime information council whose only product has been one glossy magazine and a $300-a-day salary for the wife of Leon Panetta, White House Chief of Staff.

Instead of penalizing misuse of school safety and drug education funds that paid for dances, step aerobics and trips to resorts, the president demands $266 million more for the program. Students in foreign countries would receive $8 million to learn how to measure rainfall, under what the president considers needed federal programs, Combest concluded.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been married to "Nick" for 10 years. We have three beautiful children. Six months ago, I found out that Nick has had one affair after another. I also learned that he has a child with one of the women. The child is now 4.

Nick has admitted to a couple of affairs but insists the rest are lies. He also wants nothing to do with his illegitimate child, which is okay because the mother of that child doesn't want Nick around either.

Nick has cried and begged me to forgive him. He swears that he is a changed man and he will be a model husband if I will take him back. The truth is, I can't decide how I feel about him. Some days, I miss him like crazy and want him back, and other days, I remember what a bad temper he has and how physically and verbally abusive he can be. He apologizes after every fight and promises he'll treat me better if I give him one more chance.

I don't know what to do, Ann. I am Catholic, and I don't want to be divorced. I'm also afraid the children will suffer if I break up our home. He is great with the kids, and they love him. You always advise women to ask themselves, "Would I be better off with him or without him?" I honestly don't know the answer to that question, and it's driving me crazy. Do I have spaghetti where my brains belong? -- Confused in Groton, N.Y.

DEAR GROTON: No woman is better off with a man who hits her. I recommend a separation during which time Nick gets some serious counseling.

From what you have written, Nick sounds like a poor bet. There is, however, a chance that he may shape up if his counseling is effective and you make it clear that this is his last chance. I wish him luck for the children's sake.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband refuses to give up his cigarettes. Because of our business and social life, we attend many dinners and banquets. I would prefer it if my husband could wait until after dinner to have a cigarette, but he either goes to the bar or outside for a puff several times during the meal.

I could handle his disappearing for four or five minutes, but he invariably finds another smoker to chat with and sometimes leaves me alone for as long as 20 minutes. The disapproval of the others at our table makes me uncomfortable and often keeps the waitress from serving the next course. One man asked if my husband had had his prostate checked lately. He wrongly assumed that my husband was getting up to use the men's room.

I have told my husband I feel uncomfortable during his absences -- especially if it is a banquet and I am sitting by a stranger. I have even contemplated leaving the event and letting him know what it feels like to have an empty chair next to him.

Can you make some suggestions or expound on any new smoking etiquette which may have developed over the past few years? -- On the Spot in Stockton

DEAR STOCKTON: Get over the notion that you are responsible for your husband's conduct. If anything, you are a victim. Make no apologies and no excuses for his frequent absences from the table. The poor fellow is hostage to an addiction worse than cocaine. He may pay for it with his life.

Gem of the Day: If you think you have gotten something for nothing, you just haven't received the bill yet.

Is alcohol ruining your life or the life of a loved one? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" can turn things around. Names in the News

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - If only John Lennon had not been so spectacularly successful as a musician, his pen-and-ink art might have gotten more notice, Yoko Ono says.

"Fame was very bad for John as an artist," Ono said. "Being a Beatle made it difficult for him to get gallery shows. There is a lot of narrow-mindedness in the art world."

Ono's traveling exhibit of Lennon's drawings is on display in this coastal city this weekend.

Lennon, who was gunned down by a deranged fan 15 years ago, was an art student in Liverpool before becoming a Beatle.

"John's was an animation style," Ono said. "The way he created his work is very much the way he created his songs. His work has a kind of a musical rhythm to it."

Lennon's work includes sketches of the couple's everyday life, including one titled "Baby Grand," in which Lennon sits smiling at the white piano in their New York apartment.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: My boss has asked me to help him find a large but frangible genealogical family-tree chart.

I don't know where to start looking. Can you help with this? -- Nancy Schmittou, Plano, Texas

I'm going to try my hardest to help you out. We checked first with the local library and they had family sheets that you could copy but not the family-tree chart. They did, however, suggest a bookstore in our area that carries genealogical supplies.

Or, you can check the telephone book (Yellow Pages) in your area to see if there is a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon). They have the genealogy paperwork but not the family-tree chart, but, again, they may be able to recommend a bookstore in your area that has genealogy supplies.

Or, you may want to call several bookstores in your area to see if any of them carry genealogical supplies or if they can order charts for you.

Good luck! -- Heloise

QUILT TEMPLATES
Dear Heloise: Another way to keep and recycle our garbage: I've found that cereal boxes make great templates in my quilting projects.

Use the cardboard for the templates and the plastic the cereal is packed in to store them in for future use. Write on the plastic with a large permanent-ink pen so you can tell at a glance what is inside. -- LaVerne Passion, Billings, Mont.

STUCK-ON FOOD
Dear Heloise: Soak or simmer stuck-on food in 2 cups of water and 1/2 cup of vinegar. The food will soften and lift off in a few minutes. -- Mary Loud Hay, Houston

WHICH WAY IS UP?
Dear Heloise: To end up/down confusion when using plain legal-pad covers, planners and briefcases, put a small dot of typewriter correction fluid on a corner of the front of the planner, notebook or top of the briefcase.

That way, the dot will easily indicate which way is up yet won't be a highly noticeable mark on the cover. -- Peter Lour, Hudson, Ohio

That is — if you can get her to slow down long enough!

In her dual role as administrative coordinator/marketing manager for Hereford Care Center, she's either perpetuating the nursing center's primary emphasis of offering care, love, hugs and kisses to clients residing in this relatively new retirement home, or she's on the road between Dumas and Lubbock telling folks what they're missing at the "best nursing home in the Panhandle."

"I could never sell anything I don't believe in, and I believe in the care we offer here," she said. "My cellular phone is a necessity — not only for business on the road, but personally for medical reasons too."

Herd boys' golf team takes 2nd in Hereford tourney

Sinking the putt

Hereford's David Sims putts the ball toward the cup on hole No. 1 at Pitman Municipal Golf Course during Saturday's Hereford Invitational golf tournament.

Herd starts district play after 16-7 loss

Hereford was flogged 16-7 by Sanford-Fritch in the Herd's fourth game of the Canyon ISD Classic IV baseball tournament Saturday. It was Hereford's third loss of the tournament.

Randall reached the championship game and narrowly lost, 3-1, to perennial Class 5A power Lubbock Monterey.

Hereford (4-9) opens District 1-4A play at 4:30 p.m. today against the Raiders (9-7) at Randall High School. Strangely, recent history offers no guarantee of the outcome of this game.

Last year, Hereford totaled six hits in three games - all losses - in the Canyon tourney, while Randall won the tournament. When the teams opened district play three days later, Hereford beat Randall 12-11.

"It's a new season," Herd coach Pete Rodriguez said. "Everyone starts off 0-0. We start off with supposedly the top team in district - Randall - at their home park. They've just come off playing Monterey in the championship game, so they're going to have a lot of confidence."

On the other hand, the blowout loss to Sanford-Fritch, in which Hereford committed 11 errors, wasn't a confidence builder.

"But we beat (Randall) the last two years," Rodriguez said. "We're going to go out and give it our best."

Volleyball tourney set Saturday

An Adult Co-Ed Volleyball Tournament is scheduled for Saturday from 1 to 9 p.m. in the Hereford Varsity Gym.

Admission to the tourney will only be $1. Sponsored by the Hereford Medical Explorer Post, benefits of the tourney will go towards the Explorer Post's trip to the National Leadership Convention in Flagstaff, Az.

To make a donation, or for more information, contact Elizabeth Hayes at the hospital, 364-2141, extension 177.

The champion will play the Radio Z-93 team from Amarillo Saturday night to conclude the tourney.

Floyd Patterson was the first man ever to regain the heavyweight crown after losing it. He lost it to Ingemar Johansson in 1959 and regained it in 1960.

There wasn't much for Rodriguez to say about Saturday's game. "11 errors. That sums it up," he said. "Every error pretty much cost us a run."

Sanford-Fritch took control early by putting six runs on the board in the second inning for a 7-2 lead. The Eagles got three hits, and the Herd gave them four errors in the inning. The damage was pretty much the same in the rest of the game: Sanford-Fritch scored three in the fourth, two in the fifth, three in the sixth and one in the seventh. Hereford committed significant errors in the fourth and seventh innings and two in the sixth.

Hereford took a 2-1 lead after the first inning. Ronald Torres walked and stole second, and Wade McPherson singled him home. McPherson came around on a balk, a stolen base and a throwing error on the catcher.

Hereford added one in the third when Tanner Murphey singled and eventually scored on Sonny Perez' groundout.

Hereford closed the deficit to 15-6 with a three run rally in the sixth inning. McPherson, Anthony Cervantez and John Marty Galan all drew walks, setting up Joseph Artho for a two-run single.

The Herd got one more run in the seventh. Dustin Hill walked, advanced on Murphey's single and scored on a passed ball.

Hereford took second on the boys' competition and third in the girls' competition in the Hereford Invitational golf tournament, held Friday and Saturday at Pitman Municipal Golf Course.

The Herd boys totaled 320 on a windy Saturday, giving them a two-day total of 637. That was enough to pass Andrews, which went from a tie for first to third at 638 after shooting 326 Saturday.

Clovis held off Hereford by shooting a 313 Saturday for a total of 625, giving the New Mexicans the championship by 12 strokes.

In the girls' field, Hereford was in third after shooting 353 Friday, and they stayed in third with a 366 Saturday for a two-day total of 719.

Andrews ran away with the championship by going 335-347-682. Andrews beat runner-up Borger by 31 strokes, as the Lady Bulldogs went 352-361-713.

"I thought we did all right," Herd coach Stacey Bixler said of his teams' performances. "It was a tough day (Saturday) to play for anybody. The scores went up today. We had quite a difference in wind and weather in a couple of days. I'm glad they got some experience at that, because that's what it'll be like in district."

"A lot of its mental," Bixler continued. "It's hard to be consistent when the weather's like that. You've got to be mentally tough and not let one shot get you down."

Dumas' Jamie McInturff, the three-time District 1-4A champion, walked off with the girls first-place medal with an 88-77-165 showing. There was a four-way tie for fourth at 169 - including Hereford's Jami Bell - forcing a playoff.

Jaime Chapman of Tulia won the playoff with a birdy on No. 1, while the other three girls shot par and continued. Andrews' Jennifer Bristow fell out on No. 2 and settled for fifth place. Andrews' Misty Cathey beat Bell on No. 3.

The other girls on the Hereford A team were: Krista Beville, 85-94-179; Amy Killingsworth, 90-92-182; Stephanie Bixler, 95-96-191; and Jacque Bezner, 93-104-197.

Boys start district in 3rd

The Hereford boys' golf team started the District 1-4A race off in third place after the first district round was played Monday at Canyon Country Club.

Led by Justin Griffith's round of 76, Hereford totaled 325. That trailed only Borger at 310 and Canyon, which shot 324 at its own course. Pampa totaled 329 to start close behind Hereford.

Monday's round was the first of four district rounds. The girls will play their first district round today at Canyon.

Griffith's 76 was the second-best round shot Monday. Borger's Shane Westbrook fired a 75, while Les Phillips, also of Borger, matched Griffith's 76.

Hudek wears rib around neck

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) - Major-league players are known to wear garish gold chains and flashy pendants during games. John Hudek has taken that custom to a new level.

The Houston Astros reliever, who had a rib removed last year to allow better circulation in his pitching arm, has fashioned a necklace out of the detached bone. The rib, about three inches long, hangs on a chain.

"I've had two sides of opinion," Hudek said. "One side says, 'That's the most disgusting thing I've ever seen,' and the other side thinks it's kind of cool. I like it and I plan on wearing it."

Hudek has shown an unusual attachment to the bone since it was surgically removed last July 18. At first, he carried it around in a jar. Later, he decided to keep it even closer.

Hudek has been doing the unexpected since taking over as the Astros' closer in 1994, when he became the fifth player in major-league history to make the All-Star team in the same season he was promoted from the minors.

SFA hosts tough region, including two top Techs

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
AP Sports Writer

Stephen F. Austin should feel right at home after winning two road games in the NCAA women's basketball tournament, even though the Ladyjacks have never advanced this far before.

Because that's exactly where they're going to play next - at home. Stephen F. Austin, a No. 11 seed, earned a trip to the Midwest Regional semifinals on its own court in Nacogdoches, Texas, with an upset at third-seeded Clemson on Monday night.

Trailing by four points with a minute left in regulation, Stephen F. Austin rallied to win 93-88 in overtime.

This is Stephen F. Austin's 11th appearance in the NCAA tournament, but the first time it has won more than one game.

"When we took the job, we wanted to take it as high as we possibly could," second-year coach Royce Chadwick said. "We're just excited about the opportunities in front of us."

Those opportunities will be quite a challenge. Stephen F. Austin (27-3) plays second-seeded Georgia (25-4) next Saturday. Georgia advanced with an 83-55 victory over Oklahoma State on Sunday.

It's arguably the toughest regional because the other half of the bracket has top-seeded Louisiana Tech (30-1), ranked No. 1, against fourth-seeded Texas Tech (27-4).

Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore has complained about being in the same regional as Georgia, which was the only team other than Tech to be ranked No. 1 once the season started. But Barmore wasn't in the mood to discuss Georgia after his team walloped Southern Mississippi 84-46 Monday night.

"I don't want any sports writer asking me about Georgia," Barmore said. "We've got to worry about Texas Tech, one of the best teams in America. I didn't say they had the greatest athletes. Georgia has all of them."

"But Texas Tech is playing as well as any team in the country right now, and that's enough to worry about."

Thirteen of the top 16 seeds in the tournament made it to round of 16. The lowest seed to advance was No. 12 San Francisco in the Midwest. The Lady Dons won at fourth-seeded Duke 64-60 Monday. Sixth-seeded Auburn advanced with a 68-61 overtime victory at third-seeded Colorado on Sunday night.

All regional semifinal games are Saturday, and the finals are Monday night.

The East Regional at Charlottesville, Va., has top-seeded Tennessee (28-4) against fourth-seeded Kansas (22-9) and second-seeded Old Dominion (29-2) against third-seeded Virginia (25-6). In the Midwest at Rosemont, Ill., outside Chicago, it's top-seeded Connecticut (32-3) against San Francisco (24-7) and second-seeded Iowa (27-3) against third-seeded Vanderbilt (22-7). And in the West at Seattle, top-seeded Stanford (24-7) and Auburn (22-8) meets second-seeded Penn State (27-6).

In the other games Monday night, Tennessee beat Ohio State 97-65, Kansas downed Texas 77-70, Old Dominion defeated Toledo 72-66, Connecticut beat Michigan State 88-68 and Stanford rolled over Colorado State 94-63.

Stephen F. Austin, which trailed 82-78 in the final minute of regulation, beat Clemson (23-8) by staying cool.

"When we get down, we don't get riled," said LaTosha Lewis, who scored 18 points. "We say we're still in it, keep each other going and keep each other positive."

With the tournament entering its next round, the Southeastern Conference remains the dominant league - just as it was in the national rankings during the season. Seven SEC teams made the NCAA tournament and five are still playing: Tennessee, Georgia, Vanderbilt, Alabama and Auburn. The Big Ten, with Iowa and Penn State, is the only other league with more than one school still alive.

At Lawrence, Kan.

Kansas 77, Texas 70
Kansas, reaching the round of 16 for the first time, held on after leading 66-52 with 5:10 left. Angie Halbleib and Charisse Sampson hit pressure free throws in the final minute to keep the Jayhawks on top.

Tamecka Dixon led Kansas with 18 points, while Sampson and Halbleib each scored 14. Kim Lummus led Texas (21-9) with 13 points.

Ham's shattering slam earns Tech national respect

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - With one monster slam dunk, Texas Tech's Darwin Ham captured the national attention and respect that the Red Raiders had sought all season.

Ham's destruction of a Richmond Coliseum backboard during Sunday's 92-73 victory over North Carolina in a second-round NCAA East Regional contest has been featured by virtually every sports media outlet in the country.

Enlarged photos of the shattered backboard, shards of glass covering the court, graced the sports pages and front pages of numerous newspapers.

"It was a heckuva play to go up and dunk over two guys who are, like, 6-foot-10," Ham said. "But I wonder what would have happened had the backboard not shattered. If the backboard didn't shatter, no exposure."

"It just makes me want to do something else exciting, but I don't know if I can top that. Maybe I'll have to make the ball explode."

Ham and the Red Raiders are guaranteed a marquee spot in the 1996 Men's NCAA Division I Championship highlight reel, regardless of what happens from here on out.

But for Ham, who pushed his school-record dunk total to 115 with four "Ham Slams" against the Tar Heels, it was only one of many.

"People are really excited," Ham said Monday as he gathered for practice in Lubbock. "I'm excited, too, but to me it's just another dunk."

"I know it will go down in the history of the tournament because of the setting, North Carolina, getting into the Sweet 16 and all that. But I'm not too excited. The season's not over, yet."

Ham signed a portion of the shattered backboard that reportedly will be placed in the Richmond Coliseum trophy case. Dickey said he was told the ill-fated rim - which has seen its last shot - will be sent to Tech as a memento of the occasion.

The next obstacle for the eighth-ranked and third-seeded Raiders (30-1 overall) is second-seeded Big East power Georgetown (28-7) at 7:40 p.m. EST Thursday at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta.

The winner will face the winner of the other regional semifinal, between Massachusetts (33-1) and Arkansas (20-12), at 6 p.m. EST Saturday for a berth in the Final Four.

"Obviously, the past weekend was great for our program," Tech head coach James Dickey said. "I'm proud for our players. After Friday (and a 74-73 squeaker over Northern Illinois), we talked to a lot of players and coaches who had been in the NCAA Tournament, and one thing they all agreed on is the first game is always the most difficult to win. We were happy to get by with a one-point win."

"Sunday, the players went in with tremendous confidence. They were just playing the team on the court. They did not get all caught up in playing a team like North Carolina. That was very important. Now it's on to the Sweet 16. This is a great opportunity for our ball club."

The Raiders, riding the country's longest winning streak at 23 straight, already have advanced farther than they ever have since the tournament field was expanded to 64 teams in 1985. Tech, in fact, never before had won more than one game during a single NCAA Tourney.

But to keep the dream alive, the Raiders must fell one of the tournament's true Goliaths. The Hoyas are led by sophomore all-American guard Allen Iverson, who poured through a total of 56 points in two games at Richmond, and a collection of massive inside players led by 6-foot-9, 235-pound Othella Harrington, 6-foot-9, 240-pound Jahidi White and 6-foot-9, 206-pound Jerome Williams.

"With Iverson ... you just hope he misses a few shots," Dickey said. "You just try to contain him as best you can. He's a terrific scorer. He puts it up, and they just go get it when he misses. They're really aggressive on the boards."

"They start Othella Harrington, and then they bring in Jahidi White off the bench. That's two pretty big people to have to push around all night."

The Raiders will counter beefy Georgetown with the rather spindly Tony Battie, Jason Sasser, Gionet Cooper and, of course, Ham, who's strength is now a matter of record.

Bulls squeak by 76ers without Rodman there

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

Toni Kukoc kept his jersey on the whole game, and Luc Longley left the coolers alone. Steve Kerr and Jud Buechler shared high fives, not head butts. Michael Jordan was the only one on the Chicago Bulls who acted like Dennis Rodman, grabbing 11 rebounds.

In all, the Bulls had fewer tattoos, but another win.

Chicago, playing its first game without the suspended Rodman, struggled with lowly Philadelphia before making big plays in the final minute for a 98-94 win over the 76ers on Monday night at the Spectrum.

Rodman, slapped with a six-game suspension and fined $20,000 for head-butting a referee and obscenity-filled tantrum in New Jersey over the weekend, wasn't there to see the Bulls play without him. He stayed back in the team's hotel.

He missed Jordan scoring 14 of his 38 points in the fourth quarter as Chicago, also without Scottie Pippen, won its 10th straight over the 76ers and continued their climb toward 70 wins.

Kukoc added 21 points and 11 assists for the Bulls, who won their fourth straight and improved to 58-7.

"It would have been a lot easier with those two guys here," Kukoc said. "We're playing well, though, and we've won four in a row without Scottie."

The Bulls are attempting to become the first team in NBA history with 70 regular-season victories, and with Pippen out, the timing of Rodman's suspension couldn't be worse.

Jerry Stackhouse scored 31 points and Vernon Maxwell 18 for the 76ers, while Clarence Weatherspoon had 14 points and 13 rebounds.

Elsewhere in the NBA on Monday night, Denver beat Toronto 122-114, Utah defeated Milwaukee 107-90, San Antonio beat Golden State 104-98 and Seattle rallied past the Los Angeles Clippers 104-101.

Spurs 104, Warriors 98

At San Antonio, David Robinson had 32 points and 14 rebounds as the Spurs won their 10th straight. San Antonio, which leads Utah by 1-1/2 games in the Midwest Division, has won 15 of its last 17.

Avery Johnson had a season-high 17 assists for the Spurs, who placed five players in double figures.

Rony Seiklay scored 18 points for the Warriors, who went scoreless for a 6:18 stretch of the fourth quarter.

Japanese designer known for feminine style

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) - She looks like Madame Butterfly, not unlike her glorious logo. But Hanae Mori is also that rarest of Japanese designers, a true couturiere in the Western sense of the word: a dressmaker who knows everything about putting clothes together with tailored perfection.

Because a wave of Japanese creators invaded Paris and its fashion shows in the 1980s, one tends to think of them as quirky iconoclasts like Rei Kawakubo at Comme des Garçons, or the ultimate fabric artist, Issey Miyake.

But here is Mrs. Mori, turning out perfectly beautiful and fitted suits for ladies who lunch at the Ritz - or maybe at her superb French-oriented restaurant in Tokyo, the Orangerie in the Hanae Mori building.

Her styles are never startling or avant-garde. "I believe that women want to look pretty," says this most attractive and feminine of women.

She is a phenomenon in a country used to women bowing out in a secondary role. Mrs. Mori has forged out a powerful career for herself in a family business that includes both her husband and her two sons.

"But mother calls the shots," says Kei Mori, who runs the European operation from her shop on the Avenue Montaigne.

"I believe you can't sit still and stop evolving," said Mrs. Mori, beautifully clad in one of her black trouser outfits with cropped, lean pants, during a brief trip to Paris.

She doesn't like to discuss the recurring strikes there, since she's become a multimillionaire through her own and her family's dogged hard work, without state perks or automatic pay raises.

Her son Kei estimates overall $400 million as a rough figure for the Hanae Mori annual group turnover.

Just a couple of years ago, Mrs. Mori branched out from her couture and exclusive ready-to-wear fashions to start a casual, less expensive line called Weekend and Cashmere. It has become wildly popular, with its high-quality separates selling very well out of a new shop on the Place de l'Alma, with a view of the Eiffel Tower, and at dozens of outlets in Japan and around the world.

"And don't forget the perfume," said Kei Mori, noting her newest venture, launched with the fall haute couture collection. The whole family likes the fresh, flowery scent with notes of red fruit, white flowers and sandalwood in its rectangular bottle that has a glass top sculpted to look like a butterfly with folded wings.

"This perfect design is an extraordinary thing to achieve," says Claude Saujet, manager of Hanae Mori's perfume. Saujet was lured away from Sanofi, which makes Yves Saint Laurent perfumes.

"We've scrapped expensive boxing for a really beautiful, classic bottle - and a discreet, sensual perfume." For its retail price, (about $50 for a spray eau de parfum), it is a real bargain.

"I did think of the spring fields, the butterflies, the odors of my childhood in helping plan this perfume," says Mrs. Mori.

This is no social butterfly; she works hard, all the time. But she's hardly a rags-to-riches-through-rags designer, either.

Her father was a surgeon and a very cultivated man, well-versed in all the arts. Her mother was equally erudite, very interested in fashions from Tokyo or Osaka, in the hometown province of Shimane.

"We were the only ones in my little town who dressed Western-style," Mrs. Mori recalls of the pre-World War II days. "It was embarrassing to me as a child to be different, but I guess we were rather envied, too."

She remembers the war as a stressful time when she hid out from the bomb raids, reading Gone with the Wind, trying to forget about the war.

Her father wanted her to be a doctor, but Mrs. Mori already loved the arts as a young girl and was interested in costumes.

Hanae Mori already knew she wanted to be a creator when she met the textile factory owner who would become her husband.

She studied design, set up shop, and had a real breakthrough designing and sewing for a New Wave of filmmakers already influencing Japan.

"Those were the hard days," she recalls. "I had no space and sometimes was sewing in a toilet!"

By 1960, she was successful but fed up and decided to "retire" and travel. Her visit to Paris took her, as a client, to Coco Chanel.

"You must wear orange with your lovely black hair," Chanel told her. "No way," said Mrs. Mori, used to dressing in black. But a compromise was reached: a black suit with orange braid.

"That meeting was fateful," she recalls. "I was back in the couture mood again and wanted to set up shop in Paris."

Her dream came true in 1977 when she started three shops in exclusive fashion districts in Paris. By this time she was already known in U.S. fashion circles.

"I was helped greatly by Princess Grace of Monaco, who championed my cause in shops like Neiman Marcus," recalls Mrs. Mori. Another early fashionable supporter was Nancy Reagan, whose husband, Ronald Reagan, was then governor of California.

She became the only Japanese ever to be welcomed as a full-fledged haute couturiere by Paris's professional governing body, the Chambre Syndicale de la Haute Couture.

From then on, Hanae Mori's business became a worldwide enterprise. She has nearly 200 outlets around the world, about 100 boutiques in Japan, and is proud of her beautiful five-story flagship building in Tokyo, designed by Kenzo Tange on Omote Sando Avenue - the Champs Elysees of Tokyo.

"Now I spend my life shuttling back and forth," says Mrs. Mori, who often visits New York and London as well.

Her star clients include many high-society Japanese women, film stars like Sophie Marceau and Sharon Stone, and American opera diva Jessye Norman.

"The important thing," she says, "is to feel just right in your clothes, in your perfume."

Certain foods are associated with the Easter season. Pretzels were originally a Lenten food. Their twisted shapes suggested arms crossed in prayer. Hot cross buns, which have a cross made of icing on the top were first baked in England to be served on Good Friday but are now eaten through the Easter season.

Denim purses to make

Recycle an old pair of jeans and make a trendy pocket purse with a shoulder strap that your preteen daughter can use this spring.

If she is having a sleepover party, pull the supplies together and let the girls create and design their own purse to keep. It's a make-and-take project everyone will remember.

To get started, cut out the back pocket from a pair of old jeans (the heavier the denim fabric the better), cutting along the outside of the pocket. Cut very close to the pocket's top stitching without cutting the pocket. Don't limit yourself to blue jeans. For our purses, we used pockets from pairs of black and yellow jeans we picked up for under a dollar at a garage sale.

For a shoulder strap, determine the length of cording or ribbon that suits the child's height and handstitch the ends to the top side edges of the pocket opening. Old woven sashes or cotton belts (with buckles cut off) also work well.

Scout around the house for interesting items to decorate the pocket purse. Attach the items with fabric glue or assist children with a glue gun. Here are some ideas for different styles:

Jazzy - Glue a fringe trim to the side and bottom edges. Glue big rhinestones to the front of the purse for an eye-catching accent.

Romantic - Glue a square of lace to the front. Add items from old costume jewelry such as pearls, beads, silk flowers and a tiny brooch.

Artsy - Use fabric paints to paint a picture or abstract design. Embellish with glued-on buttons, coins or charms.

Research shows lifestyle changes can reverse coronary heart disease

By ART CHAPMAN
FORT WORTH Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas -- Someone, I think it was Julia Child, once said food isn't medicine. Dr. Dean Ornish obviously disagrees.

Ornish, president and director of the Preventative Medicine Research Institute has, for almost 20 years, directed clinical research that indicates comprehensive lifestyle changes can actually reverse coronary heart disease without cholesterol-lowering drugs or coronary bypass surgery.

Chief among the lifestyle changes is low-fat cooking.

It should be noted, however, that Ornish's idea of low-fat cooking is a relatively severe one. Most nutritionists recommend that we take in no more than 30 percent of our daily calories from fat, but Ornish says it should be 10 percent.

This month, he has a new book on the market to demonstrate his favorite recipes. "Everyday Cooking With Dr. Dean Ornish: 150 Easy Low-Fat, High-Flavor Recipes," (HarperCollins, $23), is a handsomely designed guide that is really much more than a cookbook.

It is loaded with helpful hints on cutting back the fat in our daily lives. It gives lengthy descriptions of various grains, beans and pastas. It offers instructive cooking techniques.

As far as the recipes are concerned; they are vegetarian for the most part and probably more restrictive than most people will like. Ornish's regimen isn't for everyone; not everyone needs it.

But his book does offer information of value to almost any cook.

You don't have to be a confirmed vegetarian to enjoy many of the recipes. Most of us enjoy potato salad, so why not make it low-fat as long as you can maintain the rich taste?

Following is his version.

OLD-FASHIONED POTATO SALAD

Serves 8
3 pounds red-skinned potatoes
1 cup diced celery
1 cup diced red onion
1/4 cup cider vinegar
1-1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons sweet pickle relish
3 hard-boiled egg whites, chopped
3/4 cup nonfat mayonnaise
1 tablespoon minced parsley

In a covered steamer, steam the potatoes over boiling water, until tender when pierced, 30 to 40 minutes. When cool enough to handle, peel, then cut into 1/2- to 3/4-inch dice.

In a large bowl, stir together potatoes, celery, onion, vinegar, salt and pepper. Add relish, egg whites, and mayonnaise and stir gently to combine. Taste and adjust seasoning with salt and pepper. Transfer to a serving bowl and sprinkle with parsley.

Tip: You can make this salad a day ahead and refrigerate it. Before serving, taste and adjust seasoning with salt, pepper or vinegar.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My problem is lateral epicondylitis, for which I have been treated with periodic steroid shots. It's been a year and a half. The pain goes away for a while, then comes back worse than ever. I have tried resting the arm and putting on hot packs, which help some, but I still get pain, even just shifting the car. It's in my dominant arm. The doctor now says surgery. I don't want that. Does this problem ever last this long? — M.M.

ANSWER: Lateral epicondylitis — tennis elbow — is a common injury. It happens to carpenters, mechanics and anyone whose activity demands a twisting of the arm. Overuse and misuse play obvious roles.

I have heard of cases that just will not go away. A year and a half is a long time, but I'd want a second opinion about surgery. About five cases in a hundred require surgery.

The source of pain is a small tearing of ligament attachments from forearm muscles to the elbow. Rest becomes important. The patient needs to stop further tendon irritation.

Anti-inflammatory drugs such as aspirin, ibuprofen or indomethacin should help. Steroid shots are pretty strong medicine, steroids being the most potent anti-inflammatories of all. The shots bring temporary relief, but there are stringent limits to their use.

Most patients eventually get rid of pain sufficiently to begin muscle strengthening exercises. But 18 months of unremitting pain does not bode well.

At the very least you need another examination and some comprehensive emphasis on tendon healing. If surgery then remains the only option, I'd go along with it.

How did you develop your tennis elbow?

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

To most men, experience is like the stern lights of a ship, which illumine only the track it has passed.

Opinions differ regarding non-professional winner Schoolteacher won spot in April runoff election

By KEN HERMAN
Austin American-Statesman
CRANDALL, Texas - And now, speaking for all who think it's good when an unfunded, unknown underdog bites the established guys at the ballot box, the Honorable Terry Joe Hedrick, mayor of Crandall, Texas:
"Isn't it a hoot?" said the mayor, delighted.
The day brightener for the mayor was the triumph of his friend and fellow City Council member Victor Morales, the schoolteacher who ran first in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary to win a spot in the April 9 runoff.

Morales' win also was a civic pick-me-up for his 10th-grade students, the guy who keeps his now-legendary pickup running and even a Republican who won't vote for him. Not so happy was a mom who, recounting her son's experiences in Morales' classroom, thinks Morales is a racist idiot.

That nay-saying aside, Morales' first-place finish served as about the best news around Crandall, southeast of Dallas, since the new golf course opened last year. He faces U.S. Rep. John Bryant of Dallas in the runoff for a chance to take on Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm.

"Bless his heart," said Hedrick, the mayor, whose real job is head maintenance guy at the golf course. "He has gone through every penny he has ever saved in his life."

Hedrick recalled the council meeting about a year ago when Morales disclosed his grandiose plan to unseat Gramm.

"Honestly, I didn't think he had a chance," he said, then searched for the right word. "No, not crazy. I admired him because he had the drive to go out and try something like that."

In the past few weeks, Morales' infectious enthusiasm had Hedrick convinced his friend could make the runoff.

Debbie Beaver, a teacher whom Morales persuaded to seek a council seat with him in 1994, also got the fever - but not until Morales first detailed his plan.

"I'm thinking he's crazy," she recalled, confiding: "I'm almost kind of jealous. I just don't have the guts to do that."

But she also knew Morales well enough to know he was serious about his candidacy. And now she is, too.

"People are tired of professional politicians," said Beaver, who, like Morales, is a government teacher and knows that big money talks in big-time politics.

"I always kid him about 'Senor Morales Goes to Washington,'" she said. "This still is the United States of America. Maybe a common person can go up there and make a difference."

At a local cotton-gin-turned-restaurant, even Republican businessman Jack Zehr from nearby Seagoville found Morales' strong showing positive.

"It's common people doing uncommon things that gets things done," said Zehr, who supports Gramm's re-election effort.

Across U.S. 175, mechanic Robert Poston proudly proclaims his role in Morales' drive for the Senate: The candidate's Nissan pickup - campaign central.

"I feel like Victor is going to talk for me," Poston said.

"The professional politicians in office are just walking robots controlled by big-money people. That may never change. But we've got a chance of making it change if Victor can get in."

That would be a change for the worse, says a parent at Mesquite's Potecet High School, where Morales taught before he took a leave.

As she sat in a Suburban and waited for the Potecet softball team to return from a spring-break game, Karen Owens let her opinion fly when asked about Morales, who had taught her son several years ago.

"He is a big racist, and he is an idiot," she said, adding that Morales used the classroom to push a political philosophy with which she does not agree.

Owens said Morales, a Vietnam vet, told students that the United States failed in Vietnam because "we weren't allowed to win the war because of people like us."

"He was also extremely racist," said

Owens, who voted for Bryant. "he told them it was very much a society that catered only to white males, which, of course, is what happens in America for the most part. But to bring that into the classroom with a lot of kids and voice your opinion and always putting things down like that bothers me very, very much."

In the same Suburban, Tricia Cannon, a Plano teacher, said her son loved Morales.

"I really think he instilled in my son a positive attitude about what his one vote can do," Cannon said. "I really think he motivated students."

He still does, says Erica Ray, a Potecet junior who was in Morales' class this year.

"He is an awesome teacher," she said. "He knows everything there is to know about government."

Ethics of revealing identity of juvenile offenders being questioned

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - When Judge Eric Andell's syndicated television program went on the air in 1993, it flew in the face of longstanding traditions dedicated to keeping the adjudication of children behind closed doors.

By allowing cameras to tape his court proceedings, Andell took what had been relatively low-key proceedings and beamed them coast-to-coast.

"We're the extreme. There's no confidentiality once the child, parent, and lawyer sign off," Andell said.

As the spotlight continues to shine on crimes committed by and against juveniles, the media are reevaluating the treatment of youngsters charged with or convicted of noteworthy misdeeds.

Most journalists generally follow an unwritten code by which they don't identify youths processed in the juvenile system.

"Our policy is pretty clear. We don't use (juveniles') names unless they're certified as adults," said Gilbert Bailon, deputy managing editor for The Dallas Morning News.

The once-steadfast standard has blurred in recent years as juveniles increasingly are linked with violent crimes. As the judicial system begins to treat children more like adults, some feel the media should follow suit.

"I do think that as a matter of public awareness police should be given flexibility to release information (about juveniles)," said Tony Pederson, Houston Chronicle managing editor, of the law that forbids police from releasing virtually any information on young suspects.

"You have kids 13 or 14 years old that have been in and out of cop shops. There might be a compelling interest in identifying these kids."

KXAS-TV in Dallas-Fort Worth basically adheres to the tradition of withholding names, but News Director Dave Overton recognizes that press mores might be changing.

"For whatever reason (journalists) have just accepted this on faith," Overton said. "The idea is that identifying them ruins the rest of their lives, and we've always kind of bought into that."

Torn on the issue is state Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston.

"I am concerned that for smaller publications to increase readership and support there might be less of a tendency to shield identity," Ellis said.

Someone who doesn't believe exposure damages a child is Andell, now a justice on the state's 1st Appeals Court. The names and faces of many juveniles in his state district court were televised nationally in 1993 and 1994.

He said about half of the youngsters appearing before him agreed to appear on "Juvenile Justice," which aired in most major U.S. television markets.

"I was a little surprised by the number that agreed to go on TV, but in this age of openness I think the barriers are coming down," he said.

The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution gives journalists free reign to use the names of defendants in the juvenile system, though Overton said he still runs across journalists who think the law forbids the practice.

Editors and juvenile officials agree that the media must carefully weigh the rights of the public to be aware of information against the privacy of a juvenile who could become permanently labeled as a criminal.

"When you get into serious personal injury matters, even as a defense lawyer I recognize the public's right to have protection," said Dallas attorney John Lubben III, who handles many juvenile criminal cases. "If (the suspect is) 13 or 14 and he's my next-door neighbor, you're cotton-picking right I want to know about him."

Pederson agrees.

"I consider this to be a very strong ethical matter to maintain a certain respect for privacy as well as dignity for families," he said. "We take it on a case by case basis. I want experienced editors making responsible decisions rather than having a blanket policy."

A closed juvenile system is a myth in Texas. While police are prohibited from discussing cases involving children not certified as adults, court records and proceedings generally are accessible to the public.

"We conduct open proceedings, and the press is entitled to use whatever it wants," said state District Judge Hal Gaither, a 20-year veteran of the juvenile system. In 1992, Gaither authorized Dallas police to release the name and photograph of a 15-year-old suspect in the slaying of an officer.

"It's the first time we've ever done it," said police spokesman Sgt. Jim Chandler, who said he expects the next Legislature will give authorities more leeway in publicizing the names of juvenile suspects.

If lawmakers continue to emphasize juvenile crime in the next session, Andell believes Chandler might get his wish.

"I have to say it's moving toward open disclosure," he said.
