Takes job seriously

Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine is responsible for determining penalties for students who fail to attend school regularly. Although not the biggest part of her job, the attendance responsibilities are a serious matter to her.

JP takes time to uphold school attendance law

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

Children age 17 and under are required by state law to go to school, and Deaf Smith County Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine intends to uphold that law when called upon.

Through her office doors this year have passed 90, or more, young people whose poor attendance in school has caused them and their parents to be summoned to court. The numbers vary from year to year but the scenarios are very similar.

While Judge Turrentine doesn't think her involvement in school attendance is her most important function, she has very strong concerns, even emotions, about the youngsters who appear before her.

"This is very close to my heart," declared Judge Turrentine. "I know if these kids don't finish school, they'll never make it."

She can cite cases of young people who were in her court, failed to live up to their responsibilities and finally dropped out of school.

"I see them all the time in the jail," she said, sadly.

Some justices of the peace don't spend the time and effort she does in this area of her job. One reason, she said, is, "There's lots of paperwork involved."

Basically, there are four steps to bring children and parents to her court for attendance difficulties.

First, parents are notified by the school that charges may be filed in justice court when three unexcused absences have been recorded.

Next, the school files an affidavit of "probable cause" to file, and then a complaint, with attendance sheet, is filed in the court.

Judge Turrentine sends a summons to child and parents to appear in court at a time and day.

The summons also advises the parents to bring $77 to pay a fine and court costs, observed Judge Turrentine.

Excuses she's heard from children and/or parents are many and varied, she said.

"One man learned when I questioned them that his child had been forging his name to excuses," she pointed out. "Another time, a child told her mother, in my presence, that she wanted to go to school but the mother wouldn't get her up in time in the morning."

Judge Turrentine knows full well that sometimes the parent is doing everything possible but the child is flaunting authority.

"Parents may take the kid to school but the youngster goes out the back door as fast as he went in the front," she said.

The justice of the peace is at a loss to understand the casual attitude some parents have about their children going to school.

And, she can make it hard on parents, especially in their pocketbook, if they don't follow her instructions.

"By law, I can fine from $100 to $500 per day for missing school," Judge Turrentine said.

Both parents and children can be penalized for school absenteeism.

"In lieu of a fine, I can send the parents to school four days with the child," she explained.

"They have to go everywhere -- to class, to the cafeteria, to the restroom, to the playground -- those four days," she continued.

A program of community service also is provided for parents and children instead of paying the $77.

"Fifteen and a half hours will pay off the $77," she said. When small children are involved, she assesses the community service to the parent. Older children perform their own community service, on her instruction.

Judge Turrentine also has the authority to send child and parent to counseling and parents to parenting classes.

"If the child has a driver's license, I can suspend it, too," she said.

During the recent school spring vacation, Judge Turrentine had several youngsters performing their community service at the Deaf Smith County courthouse. Generally, the courthouse and schools are sites for community service hours to be worked off.

When parents and children appear in her court, Judge Turrentine makes certain they understand that very serious business is to be taken care of.

"I tell them it's a court, there will be no loud or argumentative talk, they won't wear hats and I'll make the decisions," she said.

She reminds them, too, that she won't "accept gestures, they must verbalize. I tell them I don't know what they mean when they shrug or roll their eyes."

At times, parents and children have tried to pull the wool over her eyes, Judge Turrentine admitted, and "sometimes they succeed, but not very often."

And, she remembers a case in which the mother insisted she was calling long distance to explain that her child was not absent from a Hereford school but had been enrolled in a school in

Stopgap spending bill averts shutdown again

Social Security provision raises limit on earnings

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Clinton and Congress used emergency legislation to yet again avert a partial federal shutdown as the two sides remain divided over what dozens of domestic programs should look like this year.

Clinton also helped clear the legislative decks Friday by signing a separate measure extending the government's ability to borrow money and allowing working Social Security recipients to earn more before losing part of their benefits.

With numerous differences remaining—including environmental issues, law enforcement spending and the proposed dismissal of HIV-infected troops—and a midnight Friday deadline looming, lawmakers set aside efforts to complete a $160 billion spending to cover the rest of the current budget year, which ends Sept. 30.

Instead, Congress on Friday passed, and Clinton quickly signed, a 12th stopgap spending bill that will keep agencies without their own approved budgets functioning through April 24. Approval came by voice vote in the House and by a 64-24 roll call tally in the Senate.

That allowed lawmakers to begin a two-week recess Friday night, giving them nine days afterward in which to continue bargaining with the White House.

"I hope this will be the final continuing resolution for fiscal 1996, and I intend to continue working with Congress to see that it is," the president said in a statement.

He said the long uncertainty over the budget this year has delayed environmental cleanups, and has left states, local governments and contractors uncertain if they will the money they need for vital projects.

"We will produce a bill that the president will endorse. That is our goal," said Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.

Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, senior Democrat on the House Appropriations Committee, said Clinton still had "grave concerns" about several outstanding issues that prevented passage of a more comprehensive bill good through Sept. 30.

"We're heading there, but it's two steps forward and one step back," Obey said.

No one was more eager to finish the budget battle than Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, the certain Republican presidential nominee, who wants this Congress to build a record of GOP achievements.

Instead, lawmakers will return in mid-April facing unresolved spending questions about this year, and having to start work on the 1997 budget.

Working in a windowless basement room in the Capitol, legislators struggling through the 1996 spending measure had narrowed differences over education, the environment, housing and Clinton's prized national service program.

But unresolved problems in the long-term legislation included administration opposition to Republican provisions easing commercial use of federal forests, wetlands and California's Mojave Desert and requiring the discharge of service men and women with the AIDS virus.

The White House also wanted more money for several areas, (See STOPGAP, Page 2A)

Senate Demos say health insurance bill has no chance

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate's Democratic leader says the health insurance bill that came out of the House stands no chance of being passed by the Senate or signed by President Clinton.

"It is not going anywhere are as long as they (House Republicans) insist on adding extraneous, extremely controversial pieces of legislation on to it," Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said Friday.

The narrow focus of the Senate bill would guarantee that workers get health insurance when they change or lose their jobs, even if they have a pre-existing health problem.

While the House version also would accomplish that goal, it includes provisions that would limit medical malpractice awards and provide for tax-exempt medical savings accounts people would use for routine medical expenses.

Daschle said the Senate will pass its simpler bill, sponsored by Sens. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., when it comes to floor in mid-April.

Kassebaum has praised the House for acting so quickly on health insurance, but said she is opposed to adding the House provisions.

"She hopes we are able to work out some sort of accommodation in the conference," said spokesman Mike Horak, referring to the committee that will meld the House and Senate bills after the Senate votes.

Daschle said many of the House provisions are too controversial to hold the broad coalition that supports the bill's central purpose: portability of health insurance.

"Everyone who has been at odds on health reform are together for the first time," he told reporters. "But if you load it up, the coalition dissipates."

House Speaker Newt Gingrich acknowledged as much in his speech on the floor before the House passed the bill late Thursday. He said the House would not risk a veto over medical savings account or malpractice awards limits.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry reaffirmed on Friday the president's desire for the simpler Kassebaum-Kennedy bill.

Efforts to expand health insurance picked up speed immediately after Clinton in his State of the Union address endorsed the Kassebaum-Kennedy bill.

The two senators gathered support from dozens of business, labor, medical and other associations. They got 55 other senators from both parties to sign on as co-sponsors. In speech after speech, Clinton spoke well of their bill, which backers say would ensure insurance coverage for about 30 million people.

House Republicans said they added to the Kassebaum-Kennedy bill provisions that would make it more affordable.

Operations of King's Manor to change April 1

King's Manor will apparently revert to management by its own board of directors on April 1.

The Sears Panhandle Retirement Corporation, current operator of the home, notified suppliers this week that it will not be responsible for liabilities incurred by King's Manor Methodist Home after March 31, 1996.

The letter reports the new owner will be King's Manor Methodist Retirement System, Inc. The new board is chaired by Kathy Moore.

"We cannot comment on the change until all the legal work is completed," Mrs. Moore said Friday. "King's Manor will operate as usual, and we hope to have an announcement concerning the change Monday or Tuesday."

Candidates' forum slated here April 11

A "Meet the Candidate Forum" has been scheduled for Thursday, April 11, at the HISD administration building beginning at 7 p.m., it was announced Friday by the co-sponsors—Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and the Hereford Educators Association.

The forum will provide local voters an opportunity to meet all the candidates in the city, school and hospital board elections. All the candidates will be invited to attend.

The forum will allow candidates time for opening remarks and a question-and-answer period will follow. Prior to the close of the meeting, each candidate will be allowed time for closing remarks.

The public is also invited to submit questions for the candidates. Questions can be taken to the chamber office or mailed to "Meet the Candidate," P.O. Box 192, Hereford 79045.

For additional information, interested persons may call the chamber office(364-3333) or Terry Zimmerman, HEA president(363-7630).

Early voting starts Monday for primary runoff elections

Primary runoff elections aren't expected to attract much attention in Deaf Smith County, or the state, but voters may cast early ballots if they don't want to go to the polls on April 9.

Early voting will begin Monday in the office of County Clerk David Ruland in the courthouse and continue through Thursday. There will be no voting on Friday because of the county's Good Friday holiday.

There are no Deaf Smith County races on either Democratic or Republican ballots.

Statewide, the interest is focused on the runoff between U.S. Congressman John Bryant and a schoolteacher, Victor Morales, for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator.

The winner of that contest will oppose Senator Phil Gramm in the November general election. Gramm was an easy winner of the GOP nomination in the March primary. In addition to the Senate race on the Democratic ticket, voters will decide on the candidate for the state Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2. Candidates are Charles Holcomb and Gary Taylor.

In the Republican primary runoff, voters will choose candidates for three places on the Court of Criminal Appeals. Sue Holland and James (Daniel) Boone are seeking Place 1; Paul Womack and Pat Barber, Place 2, and Cheryl A. Johnson and Tom Price, Place 3.

Ruland's office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for early voting.

A change has been made for voting on election day, Ruland has announced.

"All precincts of both parties will vote at the courthouse on April 9," he said. Combining precincts and locations is a cost-saving step, Ruland added.

City Commission to meet

Former members of city boards will be recognized during the regular meeting of the Hereford City Commission at 7:30 p.m. Monday. The commission will consider terms of a lease for city farm property and award a bid for seal coating of city streets this summer. An appointment to the board of electrical examiners also will be made.

Hospital board sets special meeting

A special meeting of the board of directors of Deaf Smith County Hospital District has been called for Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center. The topic of discussion for the meeting will be contractual relationships with other health care providers.

Shuttle landing delayed one day

SPACECENTER, Houston (AP)--Low clouds near Florida's Kennedy Space Center forced NASA to call off Atlantis' return from a Russian docking flight Saturday, keeping the five shuttle astronauts aloft until Sunday.

Flight managers, extra cautious because of a leaky shuttle hydraulic system, were waiting for near-perfect weather before allowing Atlantis to land.

NASA passed on its first chance to land early Saturday because of low clouds. The skies cleared for a short time, but another bank of low clouds developed near the runway just before the second and final try.

Mission Control ordered Atlantis commander Kevin Chilton to remain in orbit until Sunday, when the spacecraft will have the option of landing at Kennedy or at the backup site, Edwards Air Force Base in California. Edwards was not considered Saturday.

The shuttle crew was returning from a successful mission during which they dropped off American astronaut Shannon Lucid at Russia's Mir space station for a five-month stay.

NASA had shortened the flight by one day, opting for a landing Saturday instead of Sunday because of the hydraulic system problem that appeared during the March 22 launch.

The leak didn't affect operations while in orbit, but the space agency wanted to be sure the landing took place in the best possible weather, and the forecast for Sunday looked unfavorable.

Atlantis sprang the leak in one of three identical hydraulic systems, which control the landing gear, rudder and wing flaps.

Typically, the shuttle needs only two of the hydraulic systems to land safely; in near-perfect weather, it could do it with just one system, although that's never been tried.

The astronauts accomplished all their objectives during a busy week in space. They dropped off Lucid, hauled 4,800 pounds of water, experiment equipment and other supplies to Mir and transferred 1,200 pounds of cargo from Mir to the shuttle.

In addition, astronauts Linda Godwin and Michael "Rich" Clifford conducted a six-hour spacewalk to attach four suitcase-shaped experiment cases to the station and try out some new tools.

Lucid, a 53-year-old biochemist, is the first American woman to live on Mir, and she will hold the U.S. space endurance record by the time Atlantis returns to pick her up in August.

Her visit is also supposed to mark the start of continuous U.S. presence in space well into the next century.

Five more NASA astronauts will take turns living on Mir until mid-1998. By then, U.S.-Russian crews should be occupying a newly built international space station.

Oklahoma bombing suspects transferred

DENVER (AP)--Oklahoma City bombing suspects Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols were transferred early Saturday from Oklahoma to a federal prison outside Denver, where their trial is to be held later this year.

The pair were escorted by U.S. marshals, according to a statement released by the U.S. Justice Department and signed by W.A. Perrill, warden of the federal prison in the Denver suburb of Englewood, and U.S. Marshal Tina Lewis Rowe of Denver.

The statement did not say how the inmates were transported from the federal prison in El Reno, Okla., to Denver or specifically where they were taken upon their arrival. But preparations for their arrival had been under way at the minimum-security Federal Correctional Institute. "No Parking" signs went up outside the sprawling facility earlier this week.

Calls to the prison early today were referred to the Justice Department A spokesman in Washington was unable to furnish additional details.

McVeigh and Nichols were scheduled to appear at a motions hearing April 9 before U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch, who moved the trial to Denver after determining the suspects could not receive a fair trial in Oklahoma.

McVeigh and Nichols face the death penalty if convicted of federal murder and conspiracy charges in the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which killed 169 people and injured more than 500.

The Federal Correctional Institute houses about 1,000 men, most serving sentences for drug offenses or robbery.

Inmates live in 6-by-10-foot cells and most are assigned work details that include gardening, painting, cleaning and cooking.

Clinton case can proceed

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - An appellate court refused to rehear a decision that will allow President Clinton to be tried on a sexual harassment complaint while in office.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis made the decision Thursday. A three-judge panel of the 8th Circuit decided Jan. 9 on a 2-1 vote that the case could proceed.

The case was brought by Paula Jones, a former state employee, who alleges that Clinton sexually harassed her during an encounter in a Little Rock hotel suite in 1991. She has said she rejected Clinton's suggestion that they engage in sex.

The president has denied her allegation. Clinton's attorneys have 90 days to file an appeal the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the high court agrees to take the case, there's virtually no chance a trial would start before this year's election. The Supreme Court would not hear arguments until October at the earliest, and a decision would not be expected until sometime next year.

Parking lot practice

The Hereford Aquatic Center parking lot was the perfect place for, from left, Dustin Brooks, 14, Brandon McBride, 13, and Brody McBride to ride their skateboards and homemade scooter

Thursday afternoon. Brody watched as his brother and Dustin took turns attempting trick jumps over the parking bumpers on the East 15th Street lot.

Planned Parenthood steps up plan for drug-induced abortions

NEW YORK (AP)--Abortion providers are stepping up the push to get doctors around the country trained to perform drug-induced abortions, a method Planned Parenthood expects to begin using within months.

"We anticipate that some time this year ... it will be made available," Jane Johnson, president of the Planned Parenthood Federation, said Friday of the two-drug technique to end pregnancies.

Planned Parenthood of New York hopes by June to begin offering nonsurgical abortions, said Alexander Sanger, who heads the affiliate.

The two-drug method involves a single injection of methotrexate, which the Food and Drug Administration has not approved for abortions but which has long been approved for treating arthritis, cancer and other conditions. Methotrexate, which interferes with cell division, kills the fetus. A second drug, misoprostol, brings on uterine contractions and causes the fetus to be expelled, usually within a day.

Methotrexate was developed as a cancer fighter and misoprostol as an ulcer medicine. The two-drug combination, designed for ending pregnancies before the ninth week, induces abortion over several days and requires three visits to a doctor.

Several days after the methotrexate injection, the woman is given misoprostol tablets, to be inserted into her vagina. A third visit to the doctor is required to confirm that the abortion was complete.

Anti-abortion groups oppose all methods of abortion, including this drug treatment and the French abortion pill RU-486, which has gone through clinical trials but is far from formal approval in this country.

"This new drug cocktail can cause serious complications for the mother and kills a child with a beating heart," said Olivia Gans, who directs an outreach program for the National Right to Life Committee.

Nationwide, Planned Parenthood clinics performed 134,000--or nearly 10 percent--of the estimated 1.5 million abortions that were performed in the United States in 1994.

Abortion rights advocates welcomed the drug-induced procedure as one that could defuse the violence that has plagued abortion clinics, because the method can be performed in any doctor's office and without special equipment.

Growing numbers of doctors have been using the drugs to end pregnancies, since studies that have been conducted since 1994 have found the substances to be safe and effective.

The National Abortion Federation, a Washington-based group made up of providers of about half the nation's abortions, is planning to present members with information on the procedure at its annual meeting this weekend in San Francisco.

Sanger said Planned Parenthood's New York clinics would provide information to doctors in private practice who want to offer nonsurgical abortions.

Emergency Services

IRVINE BURDINE

March 30, 1996

Irvine Burdine, 85, died Saturday morning. He was a resident at Hereford Care Center.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Rix Funeral Directors.

ANITA MORALES

March 28, 1996

MORTON--Anita Morales, 70, died Thursday. Services were to be at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in St. Ann Catholic Church with the Rev. Ricardo Salditos officiating. Burial was to be in Morton Cemetery by Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Morales was born in Rockport and moved to Morton in 1943 from Victoria. She married Alfredo Cullera Morales in 1978 at Morton.

She is survived by five sons, including Arnold Morales of Hereford; four daughters; one brother; 27 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren.

PATTERSON, Mo. (AP)--Some parents who sent their problem teen-agers away to a strict Bible school say it was their salvation. As a tale of death and rivalry emerged, another called the place a "chamber of horrors."

Will Futrelle, 16, of Boca Raton, Fla., was found dead Monday in the woods at Mountain Park Baptist Academy, an Ozarks school for troubled youngsters. He had been clubbed to death and beaten with a brick, his throat slashed with a pocket knife.

Police said three classmates killed him.

The three had hoped to get on the national news by taking over their boarding school at gunpoint, and killed because they thought Will would stand in their way, said Sgt. L.W. Plunkett of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

"They would hold (the school) until police arrived or have a standoff so they could make the national news," Plunkett said Friday in the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Sun-Sentinel.

"They were afraid Will wouldn't go along with the plan," Plunkett said. The boy "had no idea what was going on."

Anthony Gene Rutherford, 18, of Siloam Springs, Ark., was charged with murder and jailed without bail. Two 15-year-old boys from California were arrested as juveniles.

Rutherford had been plotting for weeks to take over the school and recruited the 15-year-olds by telling them the incident would make them famous, Plunkett said.

Repeated telephone calls to the school Friday night by The Associated Press were met with a busy signal. Some parents of former students at the school were quick to defend it, crediting the academy with straightening out their children.

Richard Zimmer, also of Boca Raton, said he enrolled his 14-year-old daughter there in April 1994 as a last resort.

"She is a human being again," Zimmer said in the Sun-Sentinel. "There is no more rebellion. ... She shares her faith with other teenagers."

But Patty Milbrandt of Springfield, Mo., said the school was "really a chamber of horrors" for her granddaughter. Milbrandt pulled the girl out of school after four months.

"It is terrible. I tried to start an investigation to get them shut down, but the Baptist organizations just say they will check into it and I don't hear anything more. I don't have enough money to hire a lawyer and do it that way," she said.

Students at the academy must abide by strict rules, and parents must agree to keep their child at the academy for at least one year.

Youngsters can't have visitors for the first three months, and are allowed only 17 days of visits for the year. Breaking is the punishment for rule-breakers who ignore two warnings.

another city, out of Texas.

"I didn't think it sounded like a long distance call, so I just picked up the phone, called that city and was told emphatically, 'We don't even have a school by that name,' which settled my problem," she explained.

Judge Turrentine said school attendance offenders fall generally into one of two categories.

"There are those whose parents just don't make the effort to get the kids to school and there are parents who take the youngsters but the kids skip out," she said.

The short-term measure approved Friday includes $200 million to help war-torn Bosnia rebuild public services, and the remaining $220 million of the annual federal payment to the District of Columbia.

The borrowing legislation Clinton signed raises the federal debt ceiling to $5.5 trillion--up from $4.9 trillion and enough to let the government pay its bills well into 1997.

For months, Republicans had used the borrowing legislation as a political weapon, refusing to send it to Clinton unless he acceded to their demands for a seven-year balanced budget plan.

But after talks between the two sides failed and Republicans bore most public blame for forcing two partial federal shutdowns, GOP leaders eased their combative tactics.

Instead, they placed two provisions on the debt-limit legislation that both they and Clinton favored: one boosting Social Security benefits for Federal agents track down hacker through on-line tap

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Using the first court-ordered wiretap on an Internet computer, federal agents tracked down a university student in Argentina and charged him with hacking into U.S. military computers. He gained access to sensitive data on satellites, radiation and engineering.

Julio Cesar Ardita, a 22-year-old computer science student and son of a former Argentine military officer, was charged with conducting illegal computer entries from Buenos Aires where he lives, Attorney General Janet Reno told her weekly news conference Friday.

The entries occurred between July 12 and Dec. 28, 1995, when Ardita's computer and files were seized by order of Argentine Federal Judge Wilma Lopez. She told The Associated Press in Buenos Aires that she is investigating criminal charges brought against Ardita by Telecom Argentina, whose telephone lines he used to reach the worldwide Internet.

Ardita remains free, but Lopez plans to question him further.

U.S. investigators would arrest him if he came to this country, but the three U.S. felony charges, all related to illegal computer entry, are not extraditable offenses under U.S.-Argentine treaties.

Reno and Donald K. Stern, U.S. attorney in Boston, declined to ascribe a motive to Ardita while the U.S. investigation continues.

They emphasized that Ardita got access to confidential and sensitive government information but not classified national security files. "It's not a national security leak," Stern said.

Last November and December, a court-ordered wiretap was placed on the computer run by Harvard University's Faculty of Arts and Sciences on the Internet.

Authorities said Ardita broke into that computer first last summer, stole passwords from some of its 16,500 legitimate users and used the Harvard computer as a platform to penetrate military, NASA and other university computers on the Internet.

"This marks the first time that a person making criminal misuse of a computer has been tracked down using a court-ordered wiretap on the computer network," Reno said.

In previous arrests of computer criminals, government agents were invited to monitor computer networks by their operators. The warrant was obtained because the Harvard computer - unlike those in previous cases - does not regularly warn users of possible monitoring.

"This is a case of cybersleuthing, a glimpse of what computer crime-fighting will look like in the coming years," Stern said.

Police typically try to learn a criminal's appearance and methods. "Here we asked the same kind of questions, except we put them into a computer program," Stern said. "We found out what passwords he was using, ... what patterns of speech he was using, ... the names of the programs he was using. We even took a look at what his hangouts were, where he was choosing to enter."

A government computer program called Eyewatch searched all communications on the Harvard computer for Ardita's telltale trademarks so investigators could pick them out to read, Stern said.

Ardita regularly referred to himself as "el griton," Spanish for "the screamer," and ran a computer bulletin board in Argentina under that name, according to an affidavit by Peter Garza, a Naval Criminal Investigative Service agent.

Ardita hacked into computers that "contain files relating to research on state-of-the-art satellites, radiation and energy-related engineering," Garza wrote. This access "potentially gave him the ability to steal and transfer these results and files," but investigators have not determined whether he downloaded any files.

Judge Lopez said Ardita studies computer science and communications at the Universidad Argentina John F. Kennedy in Buenos Aires. He could not be reached for comment at his residence. His father, Julio Rafael Ardita, is a consultant to the Argentine Congress, records show.

Garza said that last summer the government first detected an illegal entry, now believed to be Ardita's work, at the Naval Command, Control and Ocean Surveillance Center in San Diego. Later, he broke into computers at the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., NASA's Ames Research Center at Moffett Field, Calif., and Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, Garza said.

Ardita failed 90 times to enter the Army Research Laboratory computer at Aberdeen, Md., Garza added, but he successfully broke into computers at the California Institute of Technology, the University of Massachusetts, Northeastern University, and in Korea, Mexico, Taiwan, Chile and Brazil.

Assessing the damage, Stephen P. Heymann, a federal prosecutor in Boston, said it cost more than $100,000 just to investigate the intrusions at NASA's computers and to reconfigure them to block future penetrations.

New FDA rules to speed up availability of cancer drugs

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Cancer patients will get quicker access to promising new drugs, such as AIDS patients already do, under a program announced Friday by President Clinton.

The Food and Drug Administration program could shave one to three years off the time some 100 cancer drugs now in development will be tested.

It also could cut in half the 12 months the FDA typically spends deciding a cancer drug is ready for sale - and allow dying Americans special access to cancer therapies approved in Australia, Canada or Europe but not yet on the market here.

"The waiting is over," said Clinton, who lost his mother and stepfather to cancer. "We cannot guarantee miracles but at least now new hope is on the way."

About 1.3 million Americans get cancer annually, and one in three people will develop it over a lifetime. Caught early, many cancers are treatable - some 7 million Americans are considered cured. Still, 1,500 cancer victims die every day.

Since 1991, the FDA has offered special "accelerated approval" to drugs promising hope for any life-threatening disease. Instead of proving a drug prolonged life in hundreds of patients, medicines could be sold when small studies showed they helped a vital symptom.

Eleven drugs have won fast approval under the program, including seven for AIDS - one of which was approved in a record 42 days - and a breakthrough for multiple sclerosis.

Only one cancer drug is in the group, Zeneca Pharmaceuticals' Casodex for advanced prostate cancer. Most makers of cancer drugs were afraid to try accelerated approval without specific FDA guidelines on what's acceptable, said Eli Lilly Vice President Homer Pearce.

So the FDA on Friday provided guidelines: Simply show in Phase II trials that the medicine makes a tumor shrink. Expensive, final testing in many more patients still prove the drug's long-term effect, but those Phase III studies can run while the drug is being sold.

Fast approval is risky because final testing might show patients wasted their time taking a drug that didn't work, warned FDA Commissioner David Kessler. The FDA would ban such drugs.

"But the patients, we believe, are willing to take these risks," he said.

AGRICULTURE

American agriculture is our nation's bedrock. It is the key to our continued strength. Without a strong agriculture, we cannot have a strong America.

FACT: American agriculture employs 21 million people or 18.5 percent of the labor force in:

FACT: One-fourth of the world's beef and nearly one-fifth of the world's grain, milk and eggs are produced in the U.S.

FACT: A family of four eats about 5,000 pounds of food each year.

We will celebrate the production miracle of Hereford's food and agriculture system April 13th, 1996 as we invite farmers, ranchers and agri-business to a hamburger cookout at Hereford State Bank.

Watch for details.

Montana siege will end 'worse than Waco' claims cult leader

JORDAN, Mont. (AP)--As the Freemen's standoff with government agents dragged into a sixth day, a cloud of doom hung over the siege: One of the clan's jailed leaders said it will end "worse than Waco."

A federal judge in Billings refused Friday to release LeRoy Schweitzer, 57, and Daniel Petersen, 53, on bond.

The two were arrested by federal agents Monday and are among 12 anti-government Freemen named in indictments. At least some of the others are believed to be holed up near here, on a sprawling wheat and sheep farm serving as their compound.

As Schweitzer and Petersen were being led from the courtroom in chains, both began speaking out. Their comments did not carry, but a sketch artist for The Billings Gazette quoted Petersen as saying:

"You watch folks, when it goes down, it's going to be worse than Waco," a reference to the deadly April 1993 Texas standoff involving the Branch Davidians.

Schweitzer told the court: "In the eyes of almighty Yahweh, we shall prevail."

Eighty-one cult members died three years ago when federal agents moved in to end the Davidians' 51-day siege near Waco. Their compound burst into flames as agents punched holes in the walls of its buildings.

The FBI refused to comment Friday about the standoff on the windswept plains of eastern Montana. The arrests of Schweitzer and Petersen sparked the siege.

In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno said the government would continue to try to resolve the stalemate peacefully.

Meanwhile, two rifle-toting Oregon men who attempted to reach the besieged Freemen compound Friday were turned back by the FBI.

The sheriff's office said it knew of no other incidents of Freemen sympathizers from outside the area having reached the Jordan area or trying to reach the compound.

The Militia of Montana called on "all patriots to remain in their own areas and stay alert to the situation" and co-founder David Trochmann urged both sides to enter into emergency arbitration "to avert a possible tragedy."

The Freemen believe they are above any established authority and believe they are the chosen people, independent of any established authority. They formed their own shadow government and refuse to pay taxes.

Schweitzer, Petersen and others face federal charges of writing millions of dollars in bogus checks and money orders, and threatening to kidnap and murder the federal judge who was involved in the foreclosure of the property where the Freemen have taken refuge. They also face state charges of criminal syndicalism, or advocating violence for political aims.

Schweitzer and Petersen have refused to enter pleas to the federal charges, and a judge has entered innocent pleas for them.

They say their civil rights are being violated and objected to Friday's proceedings.

"We are from the foreign country of Montana, not a state," Schweitzer said. "We are nonresident aliens without the U.S."

Schweitzer is on a hunger strike and has refused to bathe since his arrest, said Yellowstone County Sheriff Chuck Maxwell.

"He apparently believes that if he eats, drinks or showers, or does anything that that is somehow a signal that he accepts the jurisdiction of what's going on here," Maxwell said.

A doctor examined Schweitzer Thursday night and found him in good health, the sheriff said.

Neither Petersen nor Schweitzer has been talking to jailers, except to complain about their rights being violated.

Cattle roam highway after truck turns over

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) - A tractor-trailer rig loaded with more than 140 head of cattle overturned at a busy freeway interchange Friday, snarling traffic as dozens of the animals were released.

More than a dozen of the Florida-bound cattle were killed in the accident at the U.S. 80 interchange on Interstate 635 in the Dallas suburb.

Sheriff's officers used ropes to lasso strays, and participants in the Mesquite Rodeo scheduled for this weekend were asked to help.

Officers said some vehicles on busy Interstate 635 struck strays before they could be rounded up.

The driver, Garland Van Sickle, said the rig toppled when the cattle shifted in the triple-decker trailer while rounding a tight turn on an exit ramp, causing him to lose control.

"When the cattle shifted, I corrected. When I corrected, it just laid over. That's it," Van Sickle said. "Then I crawled out."

Cows that survived the accident wandered across traffic lanes and even ventured toward a large shopping mall nearby. Confused shoppers at Town East Mall saw cattle being herded.

Authorities said the truck may have been traveling too fast when Van Sickle tried to turn westbound from U.S. 80 onto Interstate 635's northbound lanes.

Sheriff's deputies warned motorists not to attempt to corral the stray cattle.

"If people would just stay away from them and don't mess with them until the proper authorities come out there - just call the sheriff's department and let us know where the cattle are at and we'll have members of the posse come out and capture them," said sheriff's Sgt. Harry Johnson.

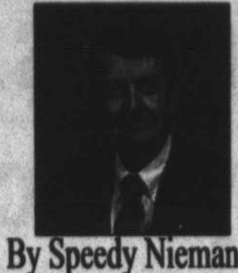

But some motorists tried their hand at being cowboys.

"I grew up out in the country and stuff. I drive on those roads all the time and never run into a cow," said Doug Guinn of rural Forney, whose Cadillac was struck. "You come to the city and you run into a cow coming down the freeway."

Human nature, in general, is a humorous study.

For example, when the other person gets angry, he is ill-tempered. But when it happens to us, it's a matter of getting on our nerves.

When the other guy dislikes someone, he's prejudiced. We, on the other hand, happen to be a good judge of character.

When others compliment, it's called brown-nosing. We, however, are merely offering encouragement.

When others take too long to do a job, they are procrastinating. We, on the other hand, are paying attention to details.

When others go through their money, they are spendthrifts. We do the same but are merely generous and helping to stimulate the economy.

When they sleep in, they are lazy. When we stay in bed a little longer, we're merely catching up after working so hard.

Other people are strange...

My thanks and appreciation to those who offered congratulations on my induction into the Panhandle Press Hall of Fame. It was a great honor, even though I realize that seniority was one of the factors! And, to those who kidded me about getting a lot of publicity when you own the newspaper, I admit my staff overdid the story while I was away!

However, I do want to brag on The Brand staff. They reaped some very deserving awards at the convention, and I am proud of their dedication and professionalism in producing this newspaper five times a week.

While commenting on awards, we were pleased to learn The Brand will receive another School Bell award from the Texas State Teachers Association. With seven School Bells to the newspaper's credit, I've learned it takes two vital elements to win. First, your paper has to do a good job covering school news. Secondly, you have to have someone like Carolyn Waters sending in the nomination.

A number of newspapers probably do a good job on school news but don't get an award. Someone has to take the time to prepare a scrapbook and send in the nominating letter.

All of this reminds me of a quote by author Alex Haley after he received an honor: "If you see a turtle sitting on a fence post, you know he had to have some help from his friends to reach that position."

Are you the husband/wife of his/her dreams?

OK folks, for this week's column, the men and the women will have to read different parts (at least the first time through, then you can swap with your spouse and compare notes.)

Recently my wife and I purchased a pair of books that I think contain information that would be of interest to all of you.

One is titled "How to be the Man of Your Wife's Dreams ... and not her worst nightmare." The other one (logically) is "How to be the Woman of Your Husband's Dreams ... and not his worst nightmare."

These books, published by Trade Life Books, offer page upon page of quotes dealing with relationships. They are laid out with the "dream" on one page and the "nightmare" on the facing page.

I thought what I'd do is go through some of these and share them with you for your edification.

Please remember that I picked these at random and do not necessarily apply to people I know.

These are things the author is saying and not my words. I don't want you jumping all over me if the book says to do something you don't want to!

Dream: Surprise him Saturday

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

A few days ago I heard a friend remark, "It's not ever going to rain." He's a farmer whose personality leans toward the negative, anyhow, but it set me to thinking.

The last real drought I remember occurred in the 1950s. It was a seven-year dry spell that left lots of agriculture-related businesses as well as producers in deep trouble. The best I can recall, the rush to irrigate farm fields began during that period.

As the days, months and years rolled by without enough moisture to keep the grass alive, my family decided to begin selling off cattle. Fortunately for me, some calves given my sister and me years earlier had become the nucleus of a little herd that brought in some cash.

Why fortunately? Well, as everyone knows, college expenses have a way of cropping up at the beginning of each semester. Dipping into the calf till kept me alive and, eventually, graduated from college.

Hoping to prevent overgrazing the pastures, my family disposed of all but a few cows, thinking that any day the drought would end, the grass rejuvenate and all would be well.

Just as my friend said the other day, it didn't rain, at least not in quantity to bring an end to the siege of dry weather.

The rush to irrigate fields was slowed by the cost of digging wells, installing pumps and other equipment. In a word, things were bad all over.

Meanwhile, with my college degree clutched in my hand, I went to the big city to begin a career in journalism. Even though the pay was meagre, the fun was voluminous and there wasn't the every-day worry about when the rain would come.

Or so I thought...

The drought had extended south to Fort Worth and Dallas, city water supplies were being depleted at an alarming rate and the newspaper's publisher became obsessed with moisture, especially in the watershed.

Everytime it sprinkled at Bridgeport or Jacksboro, or anywhere in the vicinity, it was big news. The regional staff was on the phone constantly, calling stringers to ask about rainfall amounts.

One night a staffer called a correspondent in Mineral Wells and asked about a rain report. There was silence on one end when the stringer said the gauge showed .25 of an inch but "take some off because there is a fly swimming around" in the gauge. How much should be deducted for the fly? Forget it, said the regional editor.

In those days, we'd take rain any way we could get it. There were suggestions for cloud-seeding and other artificial means of stirring up the clouds.

Trouble was, there just weren't many clouds to stir.

During that period, too, summertime heat sometimes was nearly unbearable. Day after day saw the mercury climb to 105, 106, 107 degrees. And, remember, most cars were not airconditioned and apartments had only minimal cooling.

The solution for some workers, especially those who finished their day in mid-to-late afternoon, was to head for the nearest movie theatre. We knew there was refreshing cool inside. Never mind what the picture was.

As might be expected, one springtime the drought finally broke and the rains came. Day after day, it seemed. At least once a day, I went to the roof to check the rainfall amounts, often under cover of an umbrella.

There was talk around the city room of building an ark and there was plenty of conversation about what the weather would be like on my wedding day, coming up in June.

Seems to me there was an office pool on whether the rain would let up for that occasion. Whoever said it would rain was the winner. A big black cloud appeared just an hour before the appointed time and 30 minutes later, the bottom dropped out. That was the last rain for several weeks, I later learned. There were those who suggested that I come back to town so the rains would start again.

That smacked of witchcraft, though, and I declined. What my former colleagues didn't know was I was trying to work my rain magic in El Paso. To no avail.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

With the 1996 Hereford Beef Capital of the World Tournament successfully behind us, the Hereford High School coaches and players would sincerely like to thank the following people and organizations for their continued support of the tennis program:

--The Hereford School Board and Administration for our fabulous new facilities. The new courts have been wonderful, and the dressing facility is well underway.

--All of our sponsors who continually support our tennis program.

--Coach Cumpton and the maintenance people for their continued efforts to make us look good.

--The Hereford Country Club for letting us use their additional facilities and for helping us provide the "beef" to the participating teams.

Your support is graciously appreciated! Thank you for another successful tournament!

Ed Coplen, Mike King, Kristen Goldston, HHS tennis players

Dear Editor:

I just want to add one more letter to the many you receive about how great it is to live in this community. We at Northwest Primary School, as you know, have begun a project that has required the support and encouragement of a large portion of our community.

I am referring to our "Sparkler Dreams" project of becoming the recycling center for our community and of building a playcenter that will be an exciting addition to our city. When children dream, we deal with a very fragile commodity--their faith, trust and growth in seeing their dreams become reality.

I do not know whether or not the people involved in supporting our dreams have realized the tremendous opportunity for growth and understanding this has provided our students, but whether they have or not, the support has been tremendous.

We have just completed Phase 1 of our playground construction and are in the process of beginning construction of an attractive and useful recycling facility. Both of these projects are designed to be utilized by the entire community and, hopefully, will be real assets to the city of Hereford.

Neither of these beginnings would have been possible without the support, encouragement and efforts of many people. I want to thank our principal, Alice Lockmiller, for being willing to create an environment in our school where dreaming is encouraged and supported.

I would like to thank Supt. Charles Greenawalt for having the time to visit with us, help solve those unforeseen little things that always seem to pop up, and being willing to create a progressive school district that is on the cutting edge of doing not only what is best, but what is superior for our children.

Pat Reily has been a tremendous resource for us, both in making himself available to us at any time. The Hereford Beautification Alliance has been a source of encouragement and financial support.

Chester Nolen, our city manager, has been a great help in supplying information, manpower and "know-how." The Hereford City Commission has also been very supportive, as well as Mike Hatley, who helped us continue when things looked dim.

I also thank Mauri Montgomery, Garry Wesner and Chip Formby for publicizing our project. They were among the first persons contacted and were enthusiastic and willing to help any way they could.

Additionally, I want to thank all of the community members who have brought their recyclables to our center. We have made very little money so far, but we like to think we are making a small difference in protecting our environment.

Finally, I want to thank our parents who have helped us in so many ways. We appreciate you more than you know. This is quit lengthy, however, I felt everyone should be aware of the support we have received in our "dreams." This reaffirms or faith in our community and the wonderful people who make it a fantastic place to live!

Elaine Calkins, Odyssey teacher, Northwest Primary School

Dear Editor:

Everytime I listen to the news or read a newspaper I'm smart enough to know it is only covering one side of the story and all facts are not presented in actuality. I heard many comments about the actions of the school board, administration, and teachers that I have been attending meetings to hear both sides.

Remarks made were "Tooley called off his dogs" to "where there is smoke, there is fire." I have seen our school board members take some "personal cuts" that were very unnecessary. Statements made that were not accurate due to misinformation or misinterpretation. These same misunderstandings were there when Jesus was crucified. I think it is time for us to each ask for forgiveness, then look and plan for the future.

I'm thankful for and give praise to see so many personnel interested in our children with the expectation of less drop-outs and grades improved. So many teachers are excellent employees interested in giving their "all" for their students.

Lets all join together to support and pray for God's guidance for each school board member, administration, and teachers for a better Hereford.

'Mad cow' panic sweeps Europe in about a week

By RAF CASERT
Associated Press Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - Faster than any animal epidemic, fear of British beef is spreading through Europe, spawning sweeping measures to protect the continent from "mad cow" panic.

Barely a week after a possible link was established between a lethal human brain disease and its animal equivalent in British cattle, consumers across Europe are increasingly shunning beef - with devastating consequences for the industry.

In Norway, Campbells oxtail soup, which contains British beef, was withdrawn from stores by the importer. In Athens' central market, demand for beef Thursday was down 50 percent to 60 percent.

In Italy, Simmenthal, a brand of canned beef used for making sauces, sandwiches and salad, took out full-page newspaper ads to stress its meat comes from South America.

At France's largest food-distribution center outside Paris, prices slid 50 percent from the day before, French radio reported.

The European continent was swept up by "a wave of irrational psychosis" that had lost touch with scientific evidence, said the French agriculture minister, Philippe Vasseur.

"We must return to a more rational way of doing things," Vasseur pleaded as he called for an emergency meeting on Monday of the 15 European Union agriculture ministers to discuss mad cow disease in Britain.

But there was no stopping mad cow fever - even at a summit of the European Union, which on Wednesday ordered Britain to stop exporting beef and beef products worldwide.

The 15 EU leaders scheduled their meeting today in Turin, Italy, to discuss institutional reform and EU expansion.

"If we didn't discuss (mad cow disease), it will be very strange," Prime Minister Goran Persson of Sweden said on the eve of the talks.

European farmers would not let them avoid the issue. Meeting in Turin to discuss the crisis, leaders of EU farm associations planned to appeal to the government leaders for help to win back the good name of Europe's beef.

"As soon as something happens in one corner of the European Union, we all feel it," said Noel Devisch, head of the Belgian Farmers Federation.

He said he was encouraged farmers in other parts of the EU were not trying to take advantage of Britain's plight.

"It was a little bit of a shining light that we actually managed to get all the other guys onto our side," Devisch said.

Governments have not been so warm-hearted.

The consumer panic devastated the Britain's $6-billion-a-year beef industry and now many other nations are trying to protect their industries.

France is labeling its beef home-grown.

Spanish agriculture officials said the disease presented a golden opportunity for Spain's cattle farmers to fill the void caused by various embargoes against Britain beef.

But it seems the disease is dragging all European nations into a downward spiral.

The German farmers' association announced a slide of 30 percent to 35 percent in consumer demand for beef, while plunges were reported of up to 60 percent in Greece, 40 percent in Portugal, 25 percent in Italy and 30 percent in Spain.

In a related development today, Australia banned the importation of British beef products and ordered that products already in the country be taken off supermarket shelves.

Sheriff of Nottingham fuming that residents want Robin Hood out of marketing of town

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
NOTTINGHAM, England (AP) - Like the gentry of old Nottingham, business and some civic leaders have had quite enough of Robin Hood.

They want a new image for this city identified with the swashbuckling hero of medieval myth and modern movies. For them, a hero who steals from the rich and gives to the poor doesn't strike the right tone.

Traditionalists are fuming at the prospect of the famed outlaw being sidelined for some ad agency line about investment opportunities.

Just go a few blocks past the Robin Hood theme center on Maid Marian Way to city hall, and ask the Sheriff of Nottingham.

"People don't come to look at Nottingham's business world - they know nothing about it," says Sheriff Roy Greensmith, a retired rail man, city council member and current holder of the now ceremonial title.

"Visitors come because of the connection between the Sheriff and the legend of Robin Hood." After 17 years of Conservative government, unease has grown in Nottingham about the town's link to an outlaw and a band of Merry Men armed with bows and arrows.

Two years ago, the city council, business and volunteer groups got together and commissioned a London firm to find out how people on the outside see this city of 280,000 residents on the edge of Sherwood Forest.

The answer was simple: They see Robin Hood. And not much else.

Now it's decision time. Four advertising agencies charged with finding something short and snappy - along the lines of "I Love New York" - make their presentations in a couple of weeks.

"Imagine a city as a brand," says Simon Wilkinson, chief executive of Nottingham First, a group of lawyers, accountants and other professionals pushing for change. "Then you want an image, an ad-like jingle."

"Saying 'The Robin Hood City' is saying it's a nice little place to go for a look-round, a bit of history, but it doesn't say much else."

Besides, he says, "I could say stealing from the rich and giving to the poor is a novel way of running professional business."

City officials advocate compromise - something new without ditching Robin. Labor veterans like Sheriff Greensmith have gone along with the search for a new image, but they don't see what's wrong with Robin Hood in the first place.

"There is a need in this country today for a social conscience," says Greensmith, his rail union badge pinned alongside his formal chain of office. "And if Robin Hood is not the personification of social conscience, I don't know what is."

Business leaders point out that with 11-percent unemployment the city should be more concerned about attracting Japanese computer chip plants and German electronics companies than with keeping the legend of Robin Hood alive.

Not so, says Ian Walker, manager of Tales of Robin Hood, a privately owned, $2.3-million theme center with 45 staff members.

"This is what they are trying to destroy, all this folklore and history," he says, showing a visitor shelves of Robin Hood dish towels, little arrows and Sherwood Forest T-shirts.

As Walker's promotional literature acknowledges, there's no proof that Robin Hood actually existed. His grave has never been found.

Many scholars say the yeoman and archer was born the son of a miller in the 12th or 13th century.

Ill-treated by the Sheriff of Nottingham, the monarch's chief law officer and tax collector, Robin defied royal authority, robbed rich travelers and distributed the booty among the poor.

The romantic interest of Maid Marian was invented a few centuries later, and the Victorians turned Robin into a nobleman.

For centuries it hasn't really mattered: Robin's a survivor, first in ballads, then poems, operas, plays and films. The most recent box office success, Kevin Costner's "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" premiered four years ago.

"If it wasn't for Robin Hood," Walker says, "no one would have heard of Nottingham."

Police probing story of boy saved by dogs

By KAREN TESTA
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - Police are investigating discrepancies in the story of a 10-year-old boy with Down syndrome who allegedly survived three days in the woods with the help of stray dogs.

Barry County Prosecutor David Cole has questioned several aspects of Josh Carlisle's ordeal, such as why he got frostbite only on his toes after being subjected to subzero weather each night and why his stepfather didn't return immediately from work in North Carolina when he heard he was missing.

Josh was reported missing by his mother March 6. He was found 70 hours later in a dry river bed by a Springfield man on a horse who had joined hundreds of other volunteers.

Two strays were credited with saving him by keeping him warm.

Josh's parents, who have reached a deal with a movie producer for rights to the story, were outraged Friday by the investigation, and accused Cole of making a ploy for publicity.

"It's unbelievable, the rumors," Josh's mother, Johnny Coffey, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from their home in Cassville, 50 miles southwest of Springfield. "I think the prosecuting attorney here in Barry County is just trying to get his name in the paper."

Cole did not return several calls from the AP for comment.

Barry County Sheriff Ralph Hendrix, who organized the search for Josh and interviewed his family extensively during the days he was missing, said he didn't believe there was any foul play.

"I'm confident in (my investigation) as of right now," he said. "It's a miracle that we found him alive."

The Missouri State Highway Patrol, which is conducting the investigation, referred questions to Cole's office.

In the interview, the Coffeys addressed the discrepancies Cole cited and disputed any suggestion they were trying to make money off Josh's story.

For starters, Mrs. Coffey said, Josh's injuries were more extensive than frostbite.

"That was not all," she said. "We didn't feel it was anybody's business. The doctors' report does show a severe rash around Joshua's private parts. Now does the public want to know that?"

Josh's lips were swollen and there were signs of long-term exposure to the sun, his mother said. He moved his legs with great difficulty and pain.

"In our view it was a miracle this child survived," Mrs. Coffey said.

Mrs. Coffey said she told her husband, Lynn Coffey, not to come home from his trucking job right away because about 150 volunteers had shown up at the house, and she was confident Josh would be found. When it became clear that wasn't the case, Coffey changed his plans.

"He was going through hell trying to get home," Mrs. Coffey said.

Lynn Coffey has quit his job, and Mrs. Coffey is not working. Money is very tight, in spite of rumors to the contrary, they said.

They have received no money for a movie, said their producer, Larry Garrison, president of Silver Creek Entertainment in Agoura Hills, Calif.

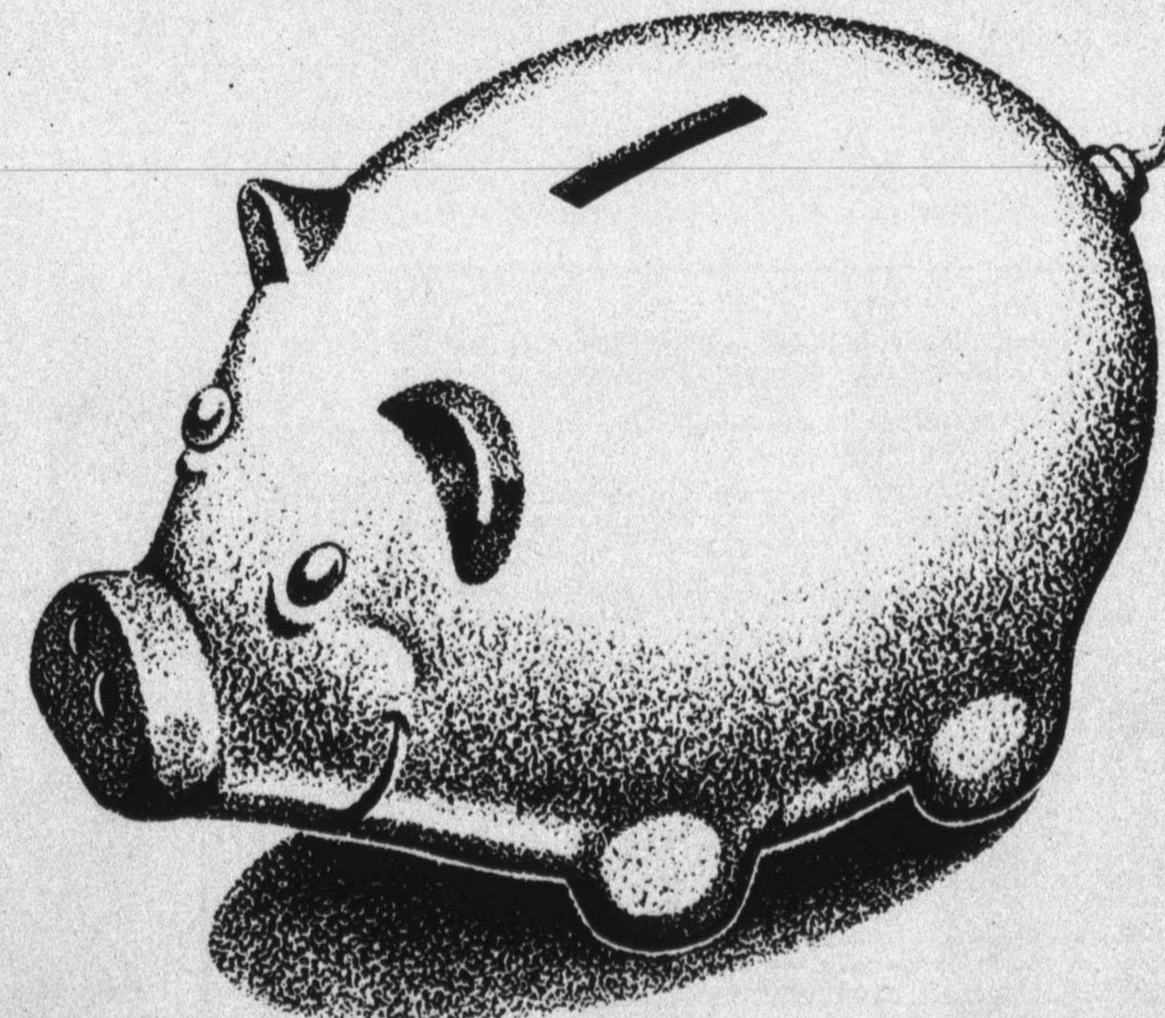

"Here people think we are making this million bucks, making money off our son," Mrs. Coffey said. "That's just not true."

Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court, was sworn in as an associate justice in 1981.

American commander in Bosnia talks of mission

Texan brigadier general heads operations from former hotel near Sarajevo

By GREGORY KATZ
The Dallas Morning News
Brig. Gen. John Sylvester of Brownsville, Texas, is the senior American officer working at NATO headquarters in the suburb of Ilidza just outside of Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital.

He is in charge of directing daily operations from a heated but Spartan office located in an old hotel converted for military use. From this command post, he is in daily telephone and radio contact with dozens of field officers trying to implement the Dayton Peace Accord. The headquarters building, surrounded by barbed wire, has been attacked by sniper fire and rocket propelled grenades, and Sylvester's men have come under sporadic fire on their rounds in Ilidza and Sarajevo.

Sylvester, 49, is married and has one daughter. He served as a platoon leader in Vietnam and has since been stationed in the Pacific and the United States. He is now in his 13th year of service in Europe. In 1994, he became deputy chief of staff of the Allied Command Europe Rapid Reaction Force, based in Germany.

Following are excerpts from a recent interview with The Dallas Morning News:

Q: How would you assess the land mine situation now that NATO has been on the ground in Bosnia for several months? Is it worse than you thought?

A: We had been told long ago to expect some three to six million mines. We have been preparing for this operation in some mode for two and a half years. We've worked very, very hard on mine awareness with the United Nations. We've got more than 50,000 troops on the ground, and they have come up with a list of 7,268 minefield data cards since we've been here, with between 20 and 200 mines, with as much detail as we can get.

We've had about 45 soldiers and civilians from the former warring factions wounded in some ways by mines, and eight or nine soldiers killed since we've been here, and every one of them was associated with mines or unexploded ordnance.

So yeah, we think about it, we are alert about it, we train for it. We train soldiers to keep away from them, and we're looking for ways to keep civilians away.

Q: Is it NATO's responsibility to prevent civilians from being hurt or killed this way?

A: Lots of this stuff is our job. The peace agreement doesn't tell us to do it, but it's implied that we warn civilians of dangers of occupying territory we don't know anything about.

Q: Have the former warring parties been destroying the mines they remove from the ground, or are they storing them for possible use in the future?

A: They are storing the mines, and that's a concern. We want to destroy them, but there's nothing in the peace agreement that says that they have to be destroyed. We are contemplating asking them to do it voluntarily as a confidence building measure. We are recording the mines they take away, so we know what they've got, but there's nothing in the peace agreement that says they can't do it.

Q: What is the hardest part of this mission?

A: Making a multinational operation work is extraordinarily difficult. We've been training at NATO for a long time but this is the first NATO operation to go down - other than training operations - in NATO's history, and it's happening in an extraordinarily difficult place - the mine pollution is everywhere, you have three different warring factions, you don't have governmental structures operating in concert with one another. It's very difficult. The point I would like to make is that these kids are making this operation work, as difficult as it is.

Q: What is being done to prevent sniping against soldiers and civilians?

A: The first thing you do is put people in flak jackets and helmets, and have people travel under armor. That demonstrates a heavy force profile, that's part of force protection, that's number one. Number two, keep soldiers out of vulnerable areas, keep them in a secure base camp to sleep and eat and maintain equipment. When you put them on the road, keep them as protected as you can. In the U.S. area, there is a four-vehicle minimum rule. We've got roving patrols and anti-sniping teams and guys with night vision goggles sitting on roofs. We just don't run around here polyannaish and make good targets of ourselves.

Q: Don't you sacrifice something in terms of positive contact with the locals by keeping all the troops on base and heavily armored? Wasn't it important in World War II when U.S. troops were so welcomed by the Europeans after the war?

A: The operative words you used were "after the war." We may be in a period of peace, but this is not like Europe after World War II. We may be at peace, but this is still an armed and very belligerent society. They may be coming to grips with their level of arms and their belligerence, but there are still those out there who are armed and belligerent, so you protect yourself all the time.

I think a soldier can be dressed in flak jacket and helmet and still smile and be a friend and be perceived as that. There are some silly things we didn't do well for a while, like having our guys with weapons at the ready but pointed at the crowd of locals. Not a good idea. You keep the weapons at the ready, but in a safe position, not pointed at the crowd. We've worked our way through that.

Q: Are military intelligence units searching for snipers threatening this facility, and threatening civilians in Sarajevo?

A: Absolutely. We have very active intelligence and surveillance units.

Q: Are people under civilian cover trying to get intelligence on the street?

A: In every theater of conflict, there are people of every stripe working intelligence.

Q: Is this the start of a permanent peace, or will the war start again when NATO leaves after a year?

A: I run hot and cold. If I didn't believe there's a chance, I'm not sure how much I would put up with this stuff, other than the fact that I'm ordered to do so. I have to think positively about it. I am not naive.

The economic revitalization of this place is going to be tough. The democratization of a society that has never known democracy will be tough. The physical rebuilding of this absolutely trashed, formerly beautiful place will be tough. But these people had a taste of a pretty well-developed society not too many years ago. They hosted the Winter Olympics here. They were selling Yugo cars to Americans. They then had four years of bludgeoning themselves to death.

We have now been able to ensure a reasonable peace here for several months - after nine more months maybe enough of that population will turn around and make these difficult things work? I've got to think positively. And they may throw it all away, in which case it will be over.

Q: What does the success or failure of the NATO mission mean to the future security of Europe?

A: We came in here with two strategic objectives. The first was to help ensure regional stability, the other had to do with the survival of NATO as an entity capable of protecting Europe. So I would say that we must think this operation key to stability up the road in Europe. But the Balkans are a crossroads for much more than just Europe, and I think the region is very key and we ought to be making a substantial effort. We've got 50,000 troops going up to 60,000 troops here. The world is spending an inordinate amount of time and energy and its precious resources in terms of dollars and more precious in terms of people in this place, so I think you must believe it is pretty key.

Ibuprofen products may reduce some risk of Alzheimer's disease

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Some pain relievers that people can buy without a prescription - including Advil, Motrin and Nuprin - may reduce their risk of developing Alzheimer's disease by as much as 60 percent, researchers said.

But a 14-year Johns Hopkins University study of 2,065 older people cautions that it is too early for consumers to rush out and stock up on the remedies, which contain ibuprofen.

The study didn't establish dosage levels and clinical trials will be needed before the study can be used to dictate treatments, said co-author Walter Stewart, an epidemiologist at Johns Hopkins.

Ibuprofen and other non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs - known as NSAIDs - also can cause gastric bleeding and other serious side effects, the researchers warned.

The findings, Stewart said, "are promising, offering some signs of hope."

The study released Thursday is the latest and one of the largest suggesting such drugs help the brain fight the negative effects of amyloid protein deposits linked to Alzheimer's, the degenerative brain disorder.

The researchers found that ibuprofen and other non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs can reduce the risk of developing Alzheimer's by 30 to 60 percent. The longer the use, the better the results, they said.

Ibuprofen, the most common NSAID, is marketed under numerous brand names including Advil, Motrin and Nuprin.

But other popular pain relievers, including aspirin and acetaminophen - the main ingredient in Tylenol - appeared to have no effect on preventing Alzheimer's, according to the research, which tracked the participants from 1980 to 1994.

Stewart said the researchers were not certain why aspirin, which also is an anti-inflammatory drug, did not show the same results.

The study was discussed at the 48th annual conference of the American Academy of Neurology in San Francisco.

The Alzheimer's Association said the Johns Hopkins findings bolster a 1994 Duke University study by Dr. John Breitner on 50 pairs of elderly twins. It found that the twin using anti-inflammatory drugs often prescribed for arthritis was 10 times less likely to develop Alzheimer's than the twin who did not take the pain remedy.

Both reports fit current theories on the cause of the disease, which afflicts 4 million Americans and costs an estimated $100 billion a year, said Zaven Khachaturian, director of the association's Ronald and Nancy Reagan Research Institute.

"The results are quite compelling," Khachaturian said. "They will encourage people to go to a large-scale clinical trial."

Khachaturian said it appears medicine may be getting ready to turn the corner on Alzheimer's.

"Only 10 years ago, Alzheimer's was considered a hopeless disease," he said. "Now, the near future looks very bright. The prospects for development of new treatments are better and better."

Book matches were invented by Joshua Pusey, a Philadelphia patent lawyer, in 1892.

Selena's popularity growing a year after her death

Slain Tejano star has become cross-over star since being shot

By PAULINE ARRILLAGA
Associated Press Writer
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Selena's death tore through the heart of the Tejano recording industry but simultaneously inspired a new awareness about the music genre. The question now is: Will it last? "What she contributed to the Tejano music industry this past year probably would have taken us three to four years to achieve that same type of public awareness," said Rudy Trevino, executive director of the Texas Talent Musicians Association and co-founder of the Tejano Music Awards. Selena was the undisputed queen of Tejano, a mixture of traditional Mexican music and accordion-based polkas. Her added influences of pop, R&B, the Colombian-rooted

"cumbia" and love ballads made her popular among all age groups, from children to grandmothers. "Her messages are pretty universal, and her songs are universal. That resulted in a tremendous cross-generational commitment to her," said Joseph Kotarba, a University of Houston sociology professor specializing in pop culture. When her life and career were cut short at age 23, Selena already was a superstar. At age 15, she was named female vocalist and entertainer of the year at the Tejano Music Awards, the first of a string of such honors. Seven years later, she won a Grammy Award for best Mexican-American performance for her "Selena Live" album.

Her popularity, however, was restricted mostly to the Latino community. It wasn't until right before her death that Selena began recording her first English album, with the hope that it would propel her into the pop mainstream. Ironically, her death on March 31, 1995, helped her dream come true. Three months later, "Dreaming of You" was released. The album, comprising four songs intended for her unfinished English record and some earlier Tejano hits, debuted at No. 1 on Billboard's album chart, making it the fastest-selling album by a female artist. Suddenly, Selena and her music were everywhere. Magazines with her face on the cover sold out immediately. Television networks that aired specials about the slain star saw ratings skyrocket. Request lines at Tejano and English radio stations were swamped with callers requesting her songs. A year after her death, her popularity seems only to be gaining strength. As the anniversary approached, "Dreaming of You" remained No. 1 on the Billboard Latin 50 album chart for its 31st consecutive week. To date, it has sold about 5 million copies, according to Selena's father and former manager. Another of her albums, "Amor Prohibido," remained No. 8 on the Billboard Latin chart for the 100th consecutive week. "Our local record sales have continued to increase more so than when she was alive, not to mention the merchandise," said Robin Flores, program director for Tejano radio station KRIO-FM in San Antonio. "All these things just show signs of her getting more and more popular, ala Elvis and Marilyn." In addition to her own success, Selena's death also contributed to the achievements of other Tejano artists in the past year, Trevino said. "Once the public became aware of this particular kind of music, there was a lot of interest to find out what other artists sounded like," he said. One beneficiary of the increased interest was Tejano singer Emilio Navaira, who released his first English album in September. "Life is Good" debuted at No. 13 on Billboard's country chart and has sold more than 250,000 copies. The first single off the album, "It's Not the End of the World," was released in both English and Spanish and hit the top 20 on both charts, according to his publicist.

At last weekend's Tejano Music Awards, for which ticket sales increased by about 10,000 in the past year, Selena and Emilio captured the most honors with six awards each. "Three or four years ago, Tejano artists were selling 35,000 albums on average. Now those same artists are doing about 50,000 as soon as they come out of the box," Trevino said. But others said that while Selena's death contributed to the growing popularity of Tejano, the music genre already had taken off.

Selena chronology

By The Associated Press

Key events in the life of Tejano music star Selena Quintanilla Perez:

- April 16, 1971 - Selena Quintanilla is born in Lake Jackson, Texas, the youngest child of Marcella and Abraham Quintanilla, a Dow Chemical worker.
- 1980 - Selena's father opens a Tex-Mex restaurant, at which his children perform as a band for customers.
- 1982 - Abraham Quintanilla moves the family from Lake Jackson to Corpus Christi after the restaurant fails. The children's band is named Selena y Los Dinos, slang for Selena and The Boys.
- 1983 - Selena y Los Dinos release their first singles under Freddie Records in Corpus Christi.
- March 1987 - Selena wins female vocalist and performer of the year awards at the Tejano Music Awards.
- 1988 - Guitarist Chris Perez of San Antonio joins Los Dinos. The band releases two albums: "Preciosa" and "Dulce Amor."
- 1989 - Selena signs with EMI Latin.
- 1990 - The album "Selena y Los Dinos" is released under the new label.
- 1991 - Yolanda Saldivar, a registered nurse from San Antonio, contacts Selena and offers to start a fan club.
- April 2, 1992 - Selena and Perez marry.
- January 1994 - Selena opens her first clothing boutique - Selena Etc. - in Corpus Christi, followed by a second store in San Antonio. Saldivar quits her nursing job later this year to help oversee the businesses.
- February 1994 - Selena wins Grammy Award for best Mexican-American performance for her "Selena Live" album.
- January 1995 - Selena's "Amor Prohibido" album goes platinum, selling more than 500,000 copies. Albums by Latin American artists are considered platinum once they sell 100,000 copies.
- February 1995 - A concert by Selena and fellow Tejano star Emilio during the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo draws 61,000 fans, an Astrodome attendance record.
- March 31, 1995 - Selena, 23, is gunned down by Saldivar after meeting her at a Corpus Christi motel to discuss the financial management of her boutiques. She dies of extensive bleeding at 1:05 p.m. After a 9-1/2-hour standoff, Saldivar surrenders to police.
- April 3, 1995 - Selena is buried in Corpus Christi.
- June 7, 1995 - Selena is inducted into the Latin Music Hall of Fame.
- July 18, 1995 - Selena's "Dreaming of You" album is released, featuring her first English songs, and debuts at No. 1 on the Billboard chart.
- Oct. 23, 1995 - Saldivar is convicted of murdering Selena. She later is sentenced to life in prison.
- March 23, 1996 - Selena y Los Dinos win six Tejano Music Awards.
- March 31, 1996 - First anniversary of Selena's death.

Girls' golf team stands 2nd in Dumas

The Hereford girls' golf team stands second at the Dumas Invitational while the Herd boys are fourth at the Amarillo Relays.

Both events are two-day events that were to be completed Saturday.

The girls totaled 339 Friday at Dumas Country Club to finish the first day five strokes behind Borger at 334. Pampa is third at 364, and the Dumas hosts are fourth at 369, ahead of four other teams.

Jami Bell led Hereford by shooting a round of 81, which was second in the medalist standings behind Dumas' Jamie McInturff at 71.

For Hereford, Jacque Bezner shot 83, which was the fifth-best round of the day, and Katie Bone shot 85, which was seventh. Stephanie Bixler and Amy Killingsworth both shot rounds of 90 for Hereford.

In Amarillo, the Herd boys totaled 328, good for fourth behind Amarillo High at 316, Lubbock Coronado at 323 and Borger at 327. Canyon, at 330, was close behind Hereford, followed by 11 other teams.

Keith Riley led Hereford by shooting 79, followed by a trio at 83: Tom Munoz, David Sims and Justin Griffith. Jeremiah Baros shot 86.

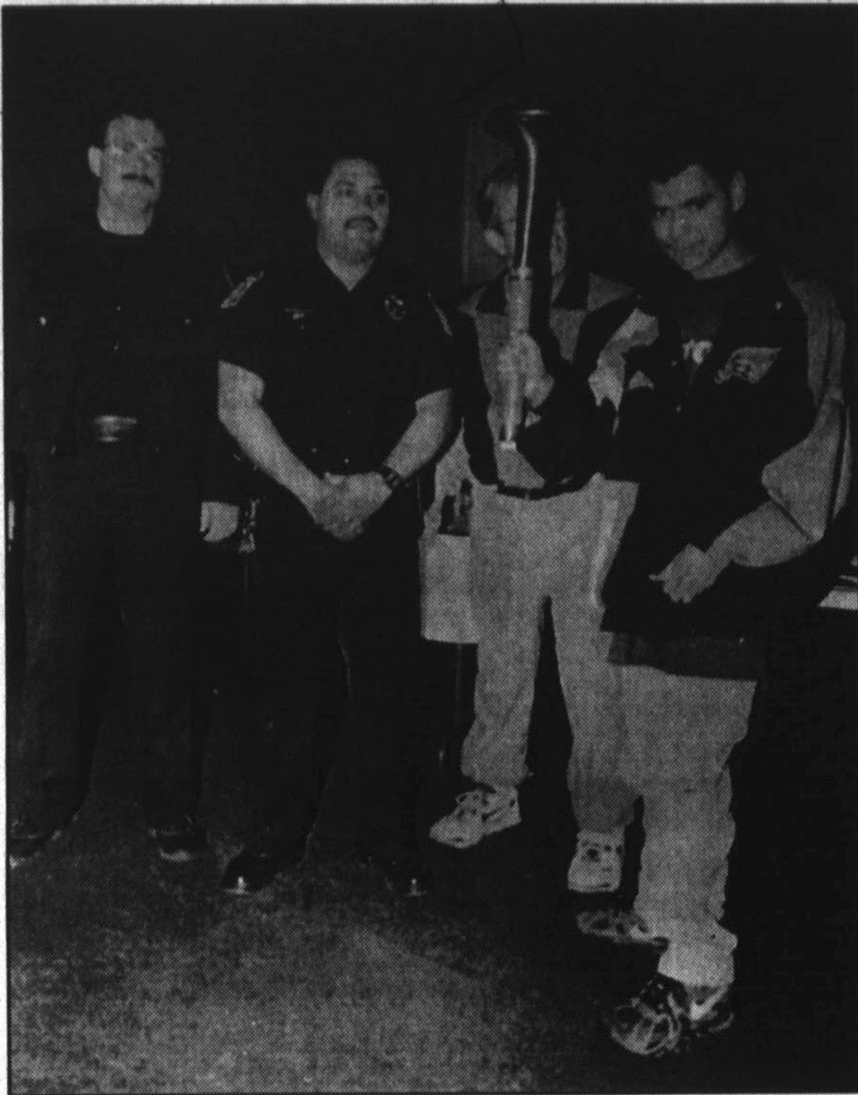

On Thursday, Hereford junior varsity boys took third place in the Borger Invitational at Huber Golf Course. Hereford shot 332, while Borger won the one-day tournament at 332. Perryton was second at 325.

Daniel Edwards shot 80 to lead the Hereford team, while David Farr and Greg Reinart both shot 82. Cody Sargent shot 88 and Heath Henderson shot 92.

Hereford's freshmen team went to Friona for a varsity tournament there and finished 10th. Hereford totaled 388; Morton's varsity won with a 314 total.

Cory Marsh led the Herd freshmen with an 88, followed by Cal Wallace, 95; Kent Reinen, 99; John McWhorter, 106; and Mitch Wagner, 106.

Lady Vols face Georgia for women's title

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
AP Sports Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - It didn't turn out to be an all-Southeastern Conference Final Four. But it will be an all-SEC final.

Longtime SEC powers Tennessee and Georgia will meet Sunday to decide the national championship in women's basketball, a fitting end to a season in which teams from that league dominated the national rankings.

As many as eight SEC teams were in The Associated Press poll at one time, seven got into the NCAA tournament and one played in each of the four regional finals.

Now two are left and they're used to playing each other in big games, just not this one.

"Tremendous emotion pours into this game from both ends of the floor," Georgia coach Andy Landers said. "We've played for conference championships. We've played for bragging rights. We've played for conference tournament championships. We've played for No. 1 seedings.

"We've played for a lot of things. It's about time we played for the national championship. We're excited about that."

Tennessee made it by dashing the repeat hopes of defending NCAA champion Connecticut with an 88-83 overtime victory in one semifinal game Friday night. All-American Saudia Roundtree led Georgia to an 86-76 victory over Stanford in the other.

So it'll be a pair of familiar foes going at it for basketball's biggest prize. Georgia beat Tennessee 77-71 on Jan. 8 in their only meeting this season.

Tennessee (31-4), in the Final Four for the ninth time, will play in its sixth championship game and try for its fourth title. Georgia (28-4), making its fourth Final Four trip; has played in the finals only once, losing to Old Dominion in 1985.

The victory over Connecticut was especially gratifying for Tennessee because the Lady Vols had lost to the Huskies three straight times, including last year's title game. And it came about after UConn's Nykesha Sales hit a 3-pointer from the top of the key with 4.2 seconds left to tie the score at 75, giving the Huskies momentum heading into the overtime.

"When we came to the bench, I thought we looked like we had lost the game," Tennessee coach Pat Summitt said. "The first thing I told them was that the mentally solid basketball team wins the next five minutes and I don't like the looks on your faces."

"I told them the first three minutes of overtime belong to us. We've got to win the tip and go from there."

After three ties, Tennessee took the lead for good on a free throw by Michelle Marciniak with 1:43 left and the Lady Vols ended up making seven of eight free throws the rest of the way.

Trailing 86-83, Connecticut had a chance to tie with another dramatic shot. But Tiffani Johnson got a piece of the ball on Jennifer Rizzotti's 3-point shot from the right wing and Latina Davis made two free throws to wrap it up.

Marciniak led Tennessee with 21 points. Davis scored 16, Johnson and Chamique Holdscraw 13 each and Abby Conklin 11.

Connecticut (34-4), which went 35-0 in winning last year's title, played the overtime without 6-foot-7 All-American Kara Wolters, who fouled out with 1:19 left in regulation. Sales led the Huskies with 28 points and Rizzotti scored 17.

Grizzlies lose NBA record 21st straight

By TOM WITHERS
AP Sports Writer

As first-year NBA fodder, Vancouver may have an excuse for losing 21 straight games. The Milwaukee Bucks, however, can't point fingers anywhere but at their chests.

The expansion Grizzlies rewrote the NBA record book Friday night with their 21st consecutive loss, 105-91 at Utah. Vancouver broke the previous record of 20 consecutive losses in a single season, shared by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers and the 1993-94 Dallas Mavericks. The Grizzlies' last win was over the Sacramento Kings on Feb. 14.

"I don't care, it doesn't mean anything," said Vancouver's Blue Edwards, who led the Grizzlies with 26 points. "It's a losing streak and it gets frustrating and it hurts. I think we've gone out and done the best we can do. It takes a lot of pride to come out here and put on this uniform night in and night out, knowing you're probably not going to win."

Karl Malone scored 21 points and David Benoit added 18 for the Jazz, who with their 50th win also set a franchise record with their 19th straight home win.

Byron Scott added 17 points and Bryant Reeves scored 12 for the Grizzlies, who made just 31-of-78 field-goal attempts, and were outrebounded 58-40.

Utah coach Jerry Sloan knows first-hand what the Grizzlies are going through.

"I played on an expansion team, but I was very fortunate and we won 33 games," said Sloan, who played for the Chicago Bulls in their inaugural season in 1966. "But it's tough on the coaches. Some players don't want to be there. But he (Winters) does a really good job with that team. They're missing shots, but they are executing almost every play."

The same cannot be said for the Bucks.

Milwaukee dropped its 14th straight, 108-85 at Phoenix. Despite having a roster which includes All-Star forward Vin Baker and Dream Team III member Glenn Robinson, the Bucks have lost 19 of their last 20.

"We can't play our type of game - it is long gone," said Baker, who had only six points in 31 minutes. "We're just showing up at the basketball court right now."

"The Suns are a team tuned up for going to the playoffs. We're a team tuned up for going home."

Charles Barkley scored 23 points as the Suns defeated Milwaukee for the 11th consecutive time, including nine straight at home. Kevin Johnson had 11 points and 15 assists, and Michael Finley and Danny Manning had 16 points apiece for Phoenix.

Astros' chances depend on pitching

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) - Gerry Hunsicker has done his job. Now it's up to manager Terry Collins and the Houston Astros' players to do theirs. Hunsicker, who became general manager last November, set his priorities quickly and has accomplished most of them. He wanted an everyday third baseman and he got Sean Berry. He wanted to keep Craig Biggio and Hunsicker got that done too, with a little help from Biggio, who re-signed $22.36 million over four years, less than he could have gotten elsewhere. "All a general manager can do is put a team on the field that has a chance to win," Hunsicker said. "I certainly feel this club is capable of winning the Central Division. I'll be disappointed if we're not in contention all year." The Astros should score enough runs. Their chances of winning depend on the starting rotation turning around after a spotty performance last season. Big bucks starters Doug Drabek and Greg Swindell, both 10-9 last season, are in the final years of their contracts and have not pitched well consistently. Darryl Kile has a no-hitter and All-Star appearance, but also was 4-12 last year, the worst season of his career. Closer John Hudek missed much of last season after surgery to remove a rib that was constricting blood circulation to his pitching arm. He'll start the season on the disabled list because of a pulled chest muscle on his left side that apparently is not related to his previous injury. "It's obvious that pitching is going to be the key," Swindell said. "Doug and I haven't pulled our load. At times we have, but we need to be consistent throughout the whole year." Swindell had a 4.47 ERA last season and spent part of the season in the bullpen. Drabek's ERA was 4.77, the highest of his career. "History has shown this team is capable of scoring runs," Kile said. "We have a great offensive team and great defense so as a pitching staff we have to go out the pitch the way we're capable of doing." "We've got a Cy Young guy (Drabek) and a guy who won 100 games (Swindell), young guys in Shane Reynolds and Mike Hampton, and me, so we're capable of winning." With Bagwell and Biggio on the right side of the infield, Berry will open at third and Orlando Miller at shortstop. There'll be a lefty-righty platoon of James Mouton and Derrick May in left field, Brian Hunter in center and Derek Bell in right. The Astros also are hoping technology will get Bagwell through a complete season without another broken bone in his hand. Bagwell has been sidelined for three years with broken bones from being hit by pitches. He's now wearing a shock-absorbent brace over his left hand, and he says it will keep him in the lineup this season. "I really do have confidence that it will help me," Bagwell said. "In my mind, I'll be all right if I do get hit again. The first year we didn't do anything, the next year we did something and this year we really researched it." Bagwell took a hit on the brace late last season. The brace went flying, but Bagwell was unscathed. "That helped the confidence," Bagwell said. "I know it works." Biggio and Bagwell have vowed to be more vocal this season in the clubhouse. But they plan for everyone to be vocal. "If anyone feels at any time that somebody isn't pulling his weight or going about business the right way, anybody can say anything to anybody," Biggio said. "Jeff and I won't hesitate to say something and Derek Bell won't either."

Injury problems plague Rangers again

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) - The Texas Rangers kept the team doctors busy last season and vowed it wouldn't happen again. They came to spring training determined to put their injury-prone past behind them. But they couldn't even get out of spring training healthy. Shortstop Benji Gil is out six-to-eight weeks following back surgery. No. 2 starter Roger Pavlik has a sore elbow. Juan Gonzalez had an excellent spring but has a nagging groin injury. "We almost made it home," general manager Doug Melvin said. "But we're leaving camp with more positives than negatives. We've basically got our everyday lineup intact except for Benji." The Rangers could be forgiven if they panic at the hint of a repeat of last year's casualty list, which included power hitters Gonzalez and Dean Palmer. Gonzalez missed several games last week because of the groin injury. Melvin is building his hopes around Gonzalez being the everyday right fielder. "Our club will revolve around our big guys and their performance," Melvin said. "Juan, Will (Clark), Palmer and Mickey Tetleton need to go have big years." Gonzalez played in 90 games last season, 83 as the designated hitter because of a back injury. "He's played extremely well in right field and that's where we need him," Melvin said. "He's thrown out three or four runners and has really made the adjustment." Palmer tore a bicep last season and played in only 36 games, but hitting coach Rudy Jaramillo is convinced he's ready for a full season. "He started real strong last season and had a good two-strike approach," Jaramillo said. "He's stronger now than before and he's got great bat speed. He's in the best shape he's ever been." Tetleton has had a spotty spring, but Melvin expects another solid season from Tetleton as the DH. Tetleton hit 32 homers last season. "That's Mickey, he's a streak hitter," Melvin said. "He's a productive hitter. When he's not hitting, he still gets on base because he's got good plate discipline. A lot of guys don't hit for a week and also don't walk." Darryl Hamilton replaces Otis Nixon in center field. Melvin doesn't expect Hamilton to match Nixon's 50 stolen bases. "Darryl is a good on-base guy but I don't see a lot of steals, maybe 25," Melvin said. "He's not flashy, just fundamentally sound." The Rangers signed Ken Hill in the offseason after Kenny Rogers signed with the New York Yankees. He's expected to head a rotation that also includes Pavlik, Kevin Gross and Bobby Witt. "People keep talking about our pitching last year but the reason we didn't win was offense, we were 11th in the league in offense and runs scored," Melvin said. "Our biggest improvement was in pitching. We still have to improve our pitching but there is a perception that when we lose it's because of our pitching." Kevin Elster would be Gil's replacement at shortstop, joining Palmer at third, Mark McLemore at second and Clark at first. Gold Glove Ivan Rodriguez returns at catcher. Gonzalez is moving from left to right field, and Rusty Greer takes over in left. "We've got a good solid club right now," Clark said. "The main thing wrong with the Rangers the past few years is staying healthy. If we can stay healthy, we will be all right. Injuries are a part of baseball but we really had a rash of injuries last season."

Aluminum bats hurt college baseball

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Baseballs were disappearing into the distance like Titebits the other day when the Texas Longhorns were beating up on Oral Roberts. Not far down the road in Waco, Texas Tech scored 24 runs in a game against Baylor. The Texas A&M-Houston doubleheader at College Station was Cape Canaveral on a busy day with a total of 30 runs scored and balls flying into orbit. Southwest Conference baseball games these days are definitely not a one sack-lunch deal. You need at least a Col. Sanders 12-piece bucket, a box of Oreos and a dozen or so cokes to get you through the four-hour ordeal. It's difficult to be a fan of college baseball unless you like to watch constant batting practice where a handle hit can travel 300-feet or a ball on the end of the metal stick can find the gap for a double before the outfielder can move out of his tracks.

At least in batting practice the lucky pitcher gets to duck behind a wire screen after he throws the ball. For college pitchers, you have to be ready for life-threatening hotshots back through the middle on every pitch to the plate. Baseball was never made for aluminum bats. And once colleges switched to them as a cost cutting measure, it changed the game dramatically and from this corner's opinion for the worst. Games with slow-pitch softball scores aren't my cup of tea. By the way, has anybody started counting the number of lost baseballs struck the next county over by the aluminum bats? That must cost a pretty penny. Great pitching performances are as rare as a Honus Wagner baseball card. Which is why SWC fans were almost dumbstruck the other day when Baylor's Kris Lambert weaved a magical two-hit shutout against the metal-wielding Red Raider hitting machine from Lubbock.

They should have taken the ball from the last out and sent it to Cooperstown. Low-hit, solid defense, low-scoring games that last two hours are the way college baseball should be but rarely sighted. There were some interesting comments from the coaches going into the SWC's First-Pitch tournament several weeks ago. "I don't think things are going well for anybody's pitching staffs," said Tech coach Larry Hays. Most league teams have shaky pitching staffs. First of all, if a kid out of high school is any good, the major league teams are trying to sign him. Borderline players who aren't signed by the pros and develop in college are usually gone after their sophomore seasons. Even old Cliff Gustafson down at Texas, which has one of the richest traditions you will find in college baseball, has a hard time getting pitchers. "It's tough keeping a pitching staff together," Gustafson said. "That's why offense dominates." Just look at the figures from last year's SWC conference race and you can see how high-scoring league games can be. The overall earned run average was 6.25. The overall hitting average was over .300. Luckily, there were no reports of any pitchers getting seriously injured by the missiles being delivered from the batting box. Fans have to be alert, too. Don't snooze after that Sanders 12-pack if you're at an SWC game in the outfield bleachers. Incoming.

At Miami, Alonzo Mourning scored 21 of his career-high 50 points in the first quarter. Mourning, who added 12 rebounds, made 17 of 24 shots from the field and 16 of 17 free throws. His opening period effort was a franchise record and was one point less than Washington's team total.
The Bulls were paced by Juwan Howard's 20 points.
Magic 126, Raptors 86
At Toronto, Shaquille O'Neal scored 24 points as the Magic avenged an embarrassing loss to the Raptors earlier this season by handing Toronto its worst loss this season. O'Neal scored 21 points in the first half as Orlando wasted no time showing Toronto that its 110-93 win over the Magic in December was a fluke.

Lakers 102, Hawks 89
At Atlanta, Magic Johnson had 16 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists as the Lakers won their third straight. Anthony Peeler scored 11 of his 25 points and Johnson scored 10 during a decisive second-half run that erased an 11-point deficit.
"I'm having a blast," Johnson said. "It was beautiful watching our passes, particularly in the fourth quarter. We're a team on the rise. It's nice to see everybody on the same track."

NFL teams going crazy for free agents

By MIKE FISHER

Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas - An NFL coach was in a car on a scouting trip when he heard the news: Ron Stone had signed a $10 million contract to move from the Cowboys to the New York Giants.

"I figured it was some outfielder who was playing for the San Francisco Giants," the coach said. "I couldn't believe it was the football player Ron Stone."

And so it goes in NFL free agency: It's the sort of meat market where chicken is purchased at filet mignon prices, where the sport's financial support of mediocrity rivals that of baseball's, where the unproven Stone can demand $2 million a year from the Giants because other teams were offering only $1.9 million.

Carolina Panthers general manager Bill Polian called NFL free-agent spending "ludicrous to the extreme. If you stopped and thought about it before you signed a deal," he added, "your hand would just get paralyzed."

Nevertheless, most teams' hands keep writing the checks this off-season, with the Stone case being only typically outrageous.

Stone, 24, has started two games in his four-year NFL career. He is best remembered for a game he didn't appear in: A hobbled Larry Allen played right tackle essentially on one leg in the 1994 NFC Championship Game in San Francisco while a healthy Stone remained on the bench. Coaches said that while Stone had prepared that week to be a substitute at guard, he was not ready to fill in at tackle. Giants coaches are convinced that Stone, a defensive lineman during most of his career at Boston College, has untapped potential as a blocker.

But does he have $10 million worth of untapped potential?

Stone's contract pays him $1.8 million upfront, with base salaries of $1.3 million in '96, $1.5 million in '97, $1.6 million in '98, $1.8 million in '99 and $2 million in 2000, by which time it is presumed that he'll have learned to play tackle.

"Is he overpriced?" asked Cowboys assistant Joe Avezzano. "All any salesman needs is one customer willing to pay the price. So is he overpriced? Not to the Giants."

This is the third year of NFL free agency, and such cases - pedestrian backups being given 10 times their previous salaries - can no longer be considered an aberration. Team X, which scoffed yesterday when Team Y paid millions to steal a player from Team X, will do the same tomorrow for a player from Team Y, at which time Team Y will scoff before continuing the cycle.

"You find yourself in these bidding situations where you see the price rising," Minnesota Vikings coach Dennis Green said. "And then you convince yourself that if you've got to have him, you've got to have him, no matter the cost."

Like most representatives of NFL teams, Denver coach Mike Shanahan sees a problem, but doesn't see his Broncos as part of that problem.

"Some teams are spending outrageous amounts of money," Shanahan said. "But they're the teams that have money to spend."

In fact, judging by how few teams appear to be scared off by sticker shock, everybody must have money to spend under the $40.8 million cap. Some explanations for the phenomenon of Free Agents Who Are Anything But Free:

Blame it on expansionists

"Because we're young and new," Jacksonville executive Michael Huyghue said, "people think anything we do is a mistake due to inexperience. We get the blame for bad trends, like overspending."

It is easy to rip expansion newcomers Carolina and Jacksonville for the cost problems. After all, it's 28 against two.

"The fact they are coming in along with the advent of free agency has put the two new teams in a position to drive up the price of free agency," complained Giants general manager George Young.

Responded Huyghue: "Maybe we do look like we're spending like wild banshees. But are we really spending more wildly than others?"

The evidence would suggest not.

At tackle: Jacksonville's deal for Pittsburgh's Leon Searcy includes a $5 million bonus; Atlanta's deal for tackle Bob Whitfield includes a $6.5 million bonus.

At linebacker: Quentin Coryatt's offer from Jacksonville (matched by the Indianapolis Colts) averages $3.5 million; Coryatt's linebacking elders, Cornelius Bennett ($3.4 million average with Atlanta), Bryan Cox ($3.3 million average with Chicago) and Hardy Nickerson ($3.2 million average in Tampa) all received similar contracts.

"Our deals have been right with the market, and we're not just trying to drive the prices up," Huyghue said. "But (the NFL's reaction) shows again how we are on the low end of respectability in all areas."

But in the area of overspending, Carolina and Jacksonville are not down there alone.

'Big Splash' Theory

"You do sense that some of these signings are efforts to make a big splash, done for the publicity," said Steelers personnel boss Tom Donahoe. "And that's not just expansion teams. Some of these signings seem designed to sell tickets and keep fan interest up, especially if management knows the team isn't going to win many games."

This is where the "Cowboy Factor" comes into play. The Redskins, for instance, have more ex-Cowboys on their roster than they have victories. But regardless of their on-field performance, grabbing Cowboys means grabbing headlines.

A classic case may be ex-Cowboys linebacker Dixon Edwards, a solid player who rarely makes mistakes or big plays. He fielded a number of $2.5 million-a-year offers, eventually taking the Vikings' offer.

"And there's the problem," one NFL executive said. "Dixon Edwards is worth $2.5 million? Put 11 Dixon Edwards types on the field, would you win games? The cost of doing business is going up, and for no good reason."

Countered the Vikings' Green: "You pay for a winner. Dixon has been through Super Bowls. I'll admit he wasn't a high-profile guy in Dallas. But he's what we needed."

Sometimes, the desire to create a big splash necessitates only the price of a plane ride.

Said one NFC East scout: "You bring in guys on visits, it looks like you're really working. The owner doesn't even have to sign the guy. Bring players in to work out, and at least the owner can tell the fan he's putting out effort."

'Desperate Times, Desperate Men' Theory

"No question about it, a team identifies a need and then sets out to fill that need to the point of desperation," Cowboys vice president Stephen Jones said. "With every one of these signings, the team has felt some pressure to fill a void."

This surely affected the Giants, who in one week watched San Francisco offer the Giants' runner, Rodney Hampton, a six-year, $16.5 million deal, then watched Giants tackle Jumbo Elliott jump to the Jets, who also signed tackle David Williams (Oilers) and quarterback Neil O'Donnell.

Day after day, the papers in New York focused on the Jets' approach and contrasted it to the plodding style of the Giants, who under general manager Young have seemed to spend more time pining for the old days and not enough adapting the new ways.

"Where does it end?" wailed Young, a few days before the "end" was pushed farther away by his own absurd signing of Stone.

Agent Jordan Woy raised some eyebrows himself recently when he engineered a five-year, $10.1 million agreement between the St. Louis Rams and ex-Cowboys middle linebacker Robert Jones. Even Woy can see how some sanity might be helpful.

"It is going in the direction of baseball," Woy said. "And while that's good for some individuals, the solid player gets hurt by it. He gets squeezed out. And because of that, maybe the sport gets hurt, too."

'Street & Smith' Theory

Bennett was shocked when he reviewed the $13 million proposal he received from the Falcons.

"Only a crazy man would pass on that," Bennett said, failing to add that maybe only a crazy man would offer that.

Did the Falcons scout Bennett thoroughly enough to be certain he's a $13 million difference-maker? Did the Giants do enough research on Stone to realize that there might be some tangible shortcoming that kept him on the Cowboys' bench? Did the Rams watch tape of Jones more than occasionally failing to fill the correct gaps?

The New York Jets paid $14 million in bonuses alone to three players, offensive tackles Elliott and Williams and quarterback O'Donnell. Time will tell whether the money is justified, but at least the Jets studied the problem: A dozen employees were assigned to assess the club's weaknesses and to evaluate free agency's worthiness.

But other teams do not do that sort of homework. Said one AFC personnel director: "We've got one team in our division that I swear does its scouting based on what's written in the newspapers. The paper, or a 'Street & Smith' (magazine) says a kid is 6-foot-4, so the team assumes he's 6-4. That's not scouting. That's reading."

Critics label ultimate fighting as barbaric

By BILL JONES

The Arizona Republic
PHOENIX (AP) - John Perretti, a former world champion kick boxer from Las Vegas, is enumerating the rules of a controversial, bare-knuckle sport called ultimate fighting.

"Fishhooking?" Perretti asks rhetorically. "That's where you place your thumb inside your opponent's cheek and pull away so his head turns. You can't do that."

But in ultimate fighting, anything else goes: low blows, head butts, chokes, knee and elbow strikes. There are no time limits on the bouts, and, in some cases, no height or weight restrictions on the fighters.

Ultimate fighting, the latest craze in contact sports, goes by other names. Depending on the promoter or the country, it may be called extreme fighting, grappling or "vale tudo."

Critics of the sport, the most vocal of whom is Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., have their own names for it: barbaric; a throwback to Roman gladiators; pit fighting; human cockfighting.

Supporters, such as Dan Severn, a former Arizona State University wrestling star, say that, despite its bloody reputation, ultimate fighting is a safe contact sport.

On the surface, ultimate fighting looks like professional wrestling. The difference, Perretti said, is that there's no fakery. The combatants are kicking and punching each other. The blood is real.

Perretti, who now serves as a matchmaker and ringside commentator for Battleground's Extreme Fighting, a rival of Ultimate Fighting Championships, or UFC, says the sport is flourishing in spite of efforts by McCain and others to choke it out.

In two years, the sport's viewership on pay-per-view television, Ultimate Fighting's principal venue, has risen to 350,000 homes from 80,000. An event staged last December in Denver cost each household $24.95 and drew a near-sellout crowd to the arena. Videotapes of the fights can be bought or rented. The sport has become a burgeoning rival to boxing and pro wrestling.

Besides Colorado, UFC matches also have been staged in Wyoming, New York and Puerto Rico. Extreme Fighting staged fights last year in North Carolina after being banned in New York. Extreme's next fight is scheduled for April in Montreal.

Ultimate fighting incorporates judo, taekwon do, boxing, and freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling, Perretti said, adding that fans want to see which martial or grappling art will prevail. Usually, it's wrestling.

"Once a wrestler gets ahead of you, he has a tremendous advantage over, say, the kick boxer or the judo guys," Perretti says.

Ultimate fighting is educational, said Severn, who is scheduled to take on world shootfighting champion Ken Wayne Shamrock in Detroit on May 17.

"You look at these movies, and you see these long, drawn-out fight scenes, with these leaping, spinning back-kicks, fights that go on for 15 minutes," he said. "In this sport, you learn it isn't like that in reality."

After watching an ultimate fight, novices will never look at a martial-arts movie or video game the same way, he said.

McCain's view of ultimate fighting is less charitable. He thinks it appeals to the dregs of society and profits only a few unscrupulous promoters.

"The bottom line is money," McCain said. "Not the money coming from people in the stands, but the money coming from pay-per-view television."

"Three hundred thousand people paid to watch one of these fights. They gave the fighters $100,000, paid a couple of promoters $100,000 to put on the show and cleared $2.5 million."

McCain has written the nation's governors, exhorting them to ban the sport because it poses "an unacceptable risk to the lives and health of the contestants."

"We don't allow it outside the ring; I don't know why we allow it inside," he said.

But there are those who believe the senator's crusade against ultimate fighting is tainted by a personal bias: McCain boxed in high school and at the U.S. Naval Academy.

"The worst injury we've ever had is three stitches," Perretti says of Extreme Fighting. "The worst injury the Ultimate ever had is one tooth."

Cesar Gracie, a Brazilian fighter-trainer whose surname is renowned in ultimate-fighting circles, admits he once broke an opponent's arm in the ring, but insisted that most injuries "are caused by guys who are not qualified in the sport."

Gracie says he has never been hurt in a "vale tudo" - which means "everything goes" - fight on pay-per-view, but has pulled a shoulder muscle during training matches. Gracie, whose grandfather, Carlos, originated "vale tudo" and started a jujitsu academy in Brazil, says he and his undefeated brothers, Rickson, Royce, Ralph and Renco, occasionally spar with one another, but never punch unless they have gloves on.

Gracie and other advocates of ultimate fighting say that there have been no deaths in the sport since it was introduced to the United States two years ago, or during the 70 years it has been sanctioned in Brazil, Japan and other countries.

Severn, 37, known in the ring as "The Beast," lost his first UFC match to Royce Gracie but has won every match since.

"It's not a bloodfest," he said. "You've got people out there who are skilled athletes. I believe there's an unwritten code of conduct. (The fighters) are not out there looking in the crowd to see whether the thumb is up or down, like in the old Colosseum days."

Severn's wife, Terry, says the worst injury her husband sustained since joining the UFC in 1994 is a black eye. The bloodiest match for "The Beast" was with a Russian named Oleg Taktarov. But the spilled blood was Taktarov's.

Fungus in Houston bins halts U.S. wheat exports

HOUSTON (AP) - Results of a test for wheat fungus in a Port of Houston grain elevator bin are expected in a few days, an official says.

A total of three Port of Houston bins were tested by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for the disease, which has virtually halted U.S. wheat exports.

Two bins came back negative for Karnal bunt, a disease of wheat, durum wheat and triticale, which is a hybrid of wheat and rye.

Federal farm officials ordered testing of bins containing wheat from Arizona, which had the first outbreak of the fungal disease.

Port of Houston officials downplayed the effects of Karnal bunt and government wheat testing on their operations.

"It's business as usual," said Bill Mullins, manager of bulk facilities at the Port of Houston.

"We want it real clear to everyone that this is not an isolated incident to our elevator. Many of the elevators on the Texas Gulf have probably shipped durum wheat through the past year in some quantities."

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman came to Houston Wednesday to try to allay fears about Karnal bunt and its effect on exports of U.S. wheat. The United States, the world's leading wheat exporter, accounts for one-third of all wheat exports, with sales last year totaling $4.9 billion.

"While this is a serious problem, we're going to make sure this is contained," Glickman said.

Glickman signed an emergency declaration authorizing funds to finance a program aimed at identifying, controlling and eradicating Karnal bunt.

The disease, first identified in Arizona earlier this month, isn't life-threatening, but it gives wheat a "fishy" odor, diminishing its value for use and export. The recent outbreak was in durum wheat, which is used in pizza crusts and pasta. The disease also reduces yields and hurts the quality of the grain itself.

The fungus spreads through the soil or through windblown spores, settling on wheat flowers. It can become embedded in the seed and eventually become part of the seed's genetic makeup.

The outbreak has caused federal farm officials to announce a quarantine in El Paso and Hudspeth counties in Texas, the state of Arizona and four counties in New Mexico.

The quarantine restricts interstate movement not only of wheat but also trucks or railroad cars used to move the grain, plus grain elevator equipment, milling products or wheat byproducts.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag

The most asked question among Deaf Smith County farmers these days is "What in the world is wrong with this wheat?". After checking several fields this past week, I must say that I have no pat answer to the question.

I found some fields that look pretty good, especially in the area of Deaf Smith County near the Palo Duro location of Hereford Grain Corporation. Some fields that had been recently fertilized and irrigated really looked horrible (that is the best description I can give).

Why does it look so bad when all of the right cultural practices have been followed? The cattle were pulled off early (if the wheat had been grazed), the fields had been top dressed with nitrogen fertilizer, the green bugs and aphids had been controlled and new infestations were none existent or very low, and the fields had been adequately irrigated. After all of this they still looked horrible.

After analyzing the situation, I think the wheat in those fields that I checked is much like a heavy weight boxer that is in round seven of ten round bout, has been knocked down twice in each round and has a referee without a heart. When you stop and think what our wheat crop has been through this year with the drought, the extremes in temperature, infestations of insects due to the warm temperatures in January and February, and the extremely high winds and blowing dirt, it is a wonder that any of it is even left.

The wheat plant, just like any other living organism, needs the right conditions to flourish and produce. As we stop and think, ever time wheat was irrigated, we had something bad happen just following. We either had extremely cold temperatures or we had tremendously high winds that caused leaf burn on the plant.

Those of us that deal with crops regularly know that wheat is one of the toughest plants there is. But when blowing sand and dust driven by 40 and 50 mile per hour winds can pit the windshield on your car or pickup, or blow away your barns, or blow aluminum pipe and stock tanks around, just try to imagine what it is doing to the tender new growth on a wheat plant.

The same happened with the temperature extremes. About the time we started to get some new leaves that would aid in the development of the wheat plant, we would get one of those nights where temperatures were in the single digits or lower teens that would again destroy or damage the new tender leaves.

As the plants were injured and growth was retarded, then other things such as insects and diseases simply moved in and the plants had little left with which to defend themselves, much like the fighter I used as an analogy.

I really believe that the irrigated wheat will recover and eventually produce more than most producers think at this time. We all know that a good soaking rain would be the best solution for the situation. However,

I would urged producers not to give up on the wheat crop just yet. It is like I heard one older producer say this past week, "I've seen wheat make 50 bushels when all you could see was bare ground in March". This might be a little exaggerated somewhat, but it also holds true to some extent.

The main thing that I would say to producers, is watch for insect build up as the weather warms. Check your fields regularly and don't think that because you applied insecticide with your top dress fertilizer or sprayed earlier that your troubles are over. Insect infestations on stressed wheat can be extremely detrimental.

We have insect control recommendations and guidelines available in the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. For copies please call or come by and pick up your copy. Think Rain. See you next week.

Deaf Smith County to start commodity marketing club

Agricultural producers in Deaf Smith and surrounding counties that are interested in learning more about how to market agricultural commodities are invited to attend an organizational meeting of the Deaf Smith County Marketing Club on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Banquet Room of the Hereford Community Center.

Weddel competes on equestrian team

Chasaidy Weddel of Hereford was among members of the West Texas A&M University Horseman's Equestrian Team which competed in three competitions during the spring semester and earned the regional championship.

WTAMU's ranking gave team members an automatic invitation to the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association National Championship Show May 3-5 in Los Angeles.

Overall the team earned first place at WTAMU, second place at Sul Ross University and first place at Texas A&M University.

Miss Weddel is a junior life/earth science major.

Speaker for the meeting will be Dr. Steve Amosson, Texas Agricultural Extension Service Economist. Dr. Amosson will discuss the steps necessary to form and maintain a marketing club.

The club is being formed as a result of three Deaf Smith County producers participating in the Panhandle Master Marketer Program. Jim Cavin, Mickey Wilson and Ray Schlabs Jr. all participated in the program and will provide coordination for the new club when formed with assistance from the county extension agent staff.

All producers interested in improving their marketing skills are encouraged to attend.

Deaf Smith County 4-H members that are planning to participate in livestock judging contest are urged to attend a meeting of the group on Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the conference room of the Deaf Smith County Extension Office. All youngsters are eligible to participate in livestock judging.

The contest provides youth with an excellent opportunity to learn about the selection of livestock while developing reasoning skills and speaking ability.

The 4-H members will be preparing for the Panhandle District Livestock Judging contest scheduled for April 20 at West Texas A&M University in Canyon.

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Beef production neared a record in the first quarter of the year but was expected to end the January-March period shy of the record $6.49 billion set in 1976.

The 1996 projection was set even though 18 percent fewer cattle were slaughtered than in 1976.

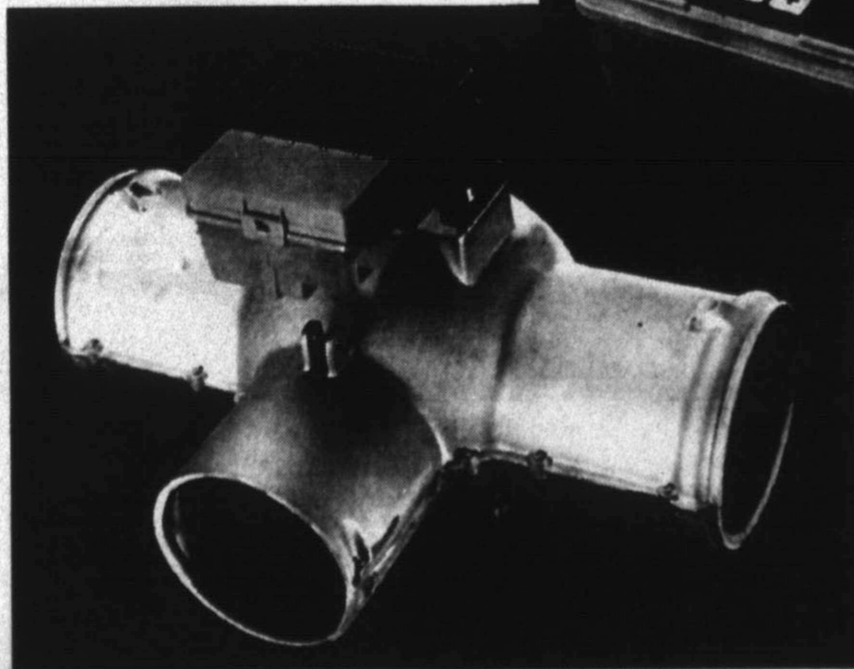

First-quarter choice steer prices averaged about $8 below the 1995 level of $73.11 per 100 pounds. Prices could drop again in late summer with seasonal increases in production.

"Favorable forage conditions and lower grain prices could hold the herd to near last year's level, while poor weather conditions would lead to increased cow slaughter and herd liquidation," says USDA's Economic Research Service.

No excuse for notes from parents to teachers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My son sent the enclosed to me recently, thinking I would get a kick out of it. These are actual notes from parents to teachers. I hope you will run them in your column. A good laugh is worth a lot these days. -- Mildred in Coconut Creek, Fla.

DEAR MILDRED: How right you are. I laughed out loud at some of those excuses, and I hope my readers will enjoy them as much as I did. Thank you for sending them on.

Dear Teacher: Please excuse Lisa for being absent. She was sick, and I had her shot.

Dear School: I hope you will excuse John for being absent on Jan. 28, 29, 30, 31, 32 and also 33.

Dear Miss Larson: Jack didn't go to school yesterday because he had two teeth taken out of his face.

Mrs. Smith: Please excuse Tommy for being absent yesterday. He had diarrhea, and his boots leak.

Dear Teacher: Please excuse Jimmy for being. It was his father's fault.

Dear Mr. Brown: Please excuse Jason for being absent yesterday. He had a cold and could not breed well.

To Mary's Teacher: Please excuse Mary for being absent yesterday. She was in bed with gramps.

Dear Mr. Anderson: Maryann was absent yesterday because she had a fever and upset stomach. Her sister was also sick, and her brother had a fever. I wasn't too well, either. There must be something going around. Her father even got hot last night.

Dear Mr. Thomas: Jennifer missed school yesterday for a good reason. We forgot to get the Sunday paper off the porch, and when we found it Monday, we thought it was Sunday.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've enjoyed your column for years, and now I want to comment on two topics that you dealt with recently.

"Upset in Ida Grove, Iowa," a woman in her 80s, wants child-size portions at half price when she dines out. You advised her to go to restaurants that serve half portions and offer senior citizen discounts.

My dear, Ida Grove is not New York or Chicago. It's not even Sioux City. Her restaurant of choice, in all probability, will not have these options. She should ask the waitress to put half of her meal in a take-home container to be frozen for later. This is a much more practical solution.

This next suggestion is for females who write to complain about husbands, sons and fathers who leave the toilet seat up, which often results in an unexpected "midnight dip." If wouldn't take falling in more than once for me to form the habit of touching the lid to check before I sat down. Ladies: If the seat is up, lower it. It is just as much the woman's responsibility to adjust the seat as it is the man's. -- K.C., Md.

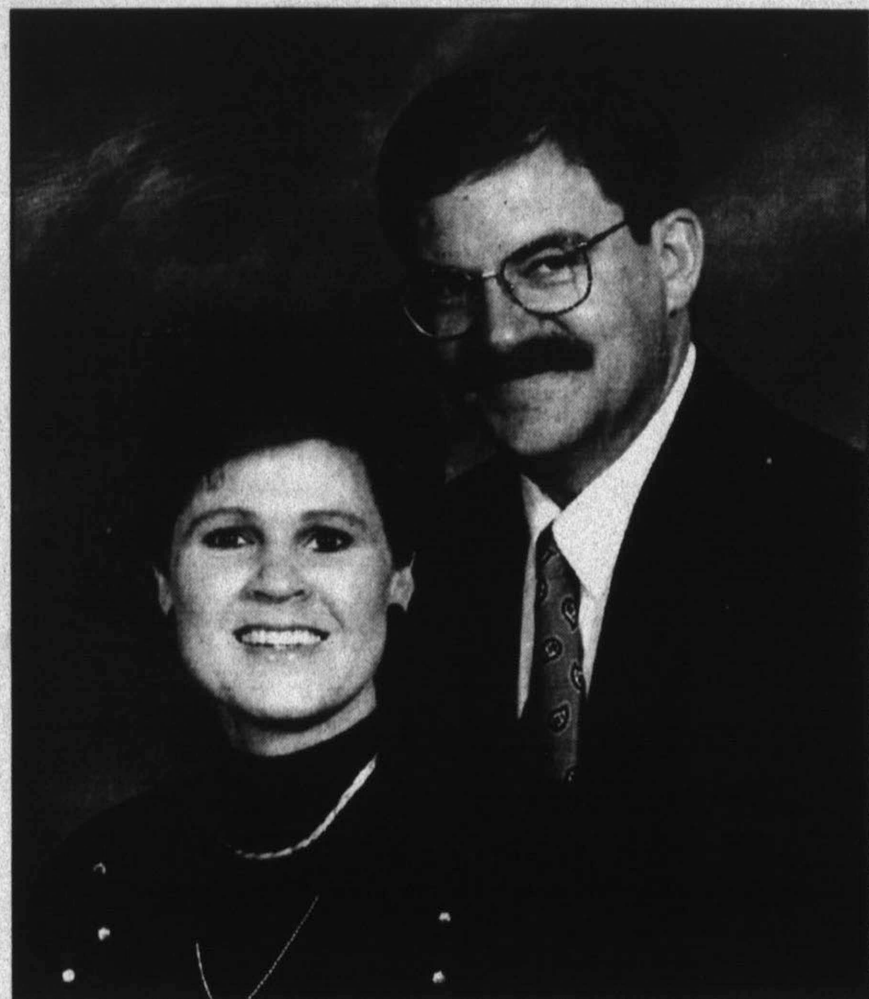

DEAR K.C.: Thanks. Your suggestions were right on target, although it seems to me that a toilet seat, when not in use, should have a lid on it.

Gem of the Day: One nice thing about telling a clean joke is there's a good chance that no one has heard it before.

Lonesome? Take charge of your life and turn it around. Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

There is one fault that I must find with the twentieth century, and I'll put it in a couple of words: Too adventury. What I'd like would be some nice dull monpotony if anyone's gotony.

—Ogden Nash.

MR. AND MRS. MARK BANNER

Banners will celebrate anniversary with mass

Mark and Janie Banner of Hereford will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary Sunday with a special marriage blessing at 11 a.m. mass in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

Mark Banner and Janie Reinart, both reared in Hereford, were married April 1, 1971.

The couple lived in Amarillo and Lubbock and returned to Hereford 12 years ago. They have four children, Angela Strafus and Marcus Banner both of Hereford, Renee Banner of Canyon and Melani Banner of Valley Ranch. They have one granddaughter.

Banner is employed by Kendrick Oil in Friona and Janie is employed by St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

Three local schools are jump rope participants

Students and faculty have been jumping rope at Tierra Blanca Primary School, Aikman Primary School and West Central Intermediate School to help the American Heart Association in the fight against heart disease.

Jump Rope For Heart is an event that involves students in promoting physical fitness and raising money for the American Heart Association. Jump Rope For Heart provides curriculum and jump ropes for the school and promotes the importance of exercise.

Jumping rope is beneficial to the heart and also improves rhythm, agility and coordination. Funds raised will support cardiovascular research and local AHA education and community programs such as CPR and Schoolsite Curriculum kits that are provided to all schools in Texas grades K-12.

The Tierra Blanca Primary Jump Rope for Heart event was coordinated by Charlie Kerr. At Aikman Primary, Holly Bixler was coordinator. Maria Nelson coordinated the event at West Central Intermediate. All three are physical education teachers.

The local Jump Rope For Heart events were held in March.

Hereford High graduate receives Carr Scholarship from Angelo

John D. Emerson, a Hereford High School graduate, has been awarded the Carr Academic Scholarship from Angelo State University for 1996-97.

Students must rank in the top 15 percent of their high school class and present either a combined math and verbal score of 1140 on the SAT I or a composite score of 25 on the ACT. Supported by a growing multi-million dollar trust established by the late Robert G. and Noná K. Carr of San Angelo, the undergraduate scholarships may be renewed annually by the University for students who maintain the required academic record.

Program for La Madre Mia features two local students

La Madre Mia Study Club was entertained Thursday night with presentations from two Hereford High School students of Lana Hall, speech and theater arts teacher.

Rebecca Gutierrez, a junior, recited her prose contest entry, "With My Eyes Closed." Torrac Hayes, a freshman, recited "Freedom's Plow."

They were introduced by club member Linda Cumpton, home economics teacher at Hereford High School.

The meeting was held in the home of Lucy Rogers in Yucca Hills. Kay Hall served as co-hostess.

After refreshments were served, members toured the Rogers' remodeled home.

Roll call was "A Stage Experience" which revealed some humorous memories.

A letter of appreciation was read from Mayor Bob Josseland for the donation the club made to the Aquatic Center Park fund, "Build on a Dream."

Attending the meeting were Carolyn Baxter, Black, Francyne Bromlow, Cindy Cassels, Merle

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

Tomorrow's memories are being made today....

Students who wrote essays for the VFW sponsored essay contest, "My American Hero", wrote about a few sports stars such as Cal Ripkin, Michael Jordan and Kristi Yamaguchi; Sam Houston, Dwight Eisenhower; parents, siblings and local heroes, including wrestling coach Rip Evers and HHS student leader Danielle Cornelius. Finalists in the contest include Shantell Bass, Kendra Walker, Kara Landrum, Tanner Dearing, Joseph Valdez, Maria Solis, Nathan Horrell, Jimmy Gilliam, Cassidy Hicks and Carey Lyles, (HHS student). Winners will be announced soon.

HJH Career Day was held on Thursday. Activities included a presentation to both seventh and eighth graders by Sue Leibert from NASA and then the eighth graders were given opportunities to hear from various career presenters. Seventh graders viewed career videos during the afternoon. The Career Day activities concluded with an Open House for seventh and eighth graders and their parents. All classroom teachers were on hand to answer questions and to give an overview of courses taught.

Sixth graders and their parents will be given the opportunity to get a first hand view of HJH at a special Open House on Tuesday night, which will begin with orientation in the varsity gym. After this meeting, parents and students may tour the building and get acquainted with teachers and the various programs and opportunities offered at HJH.

The last holiday for this school year will be April 5, Good Friday. Thursday, the 4th, will conclude the fifth six weeks period. All students should strive to complete all assignments, make-up work and/or anything that will enhance their grade. Too many of our students have the "fifth six weeks slump" and have allowed their grades to falter. Parents, help us out with this problem!

If you would like to attend a Real Live Chicken Auction, make your plans now for this unusual activity which will take place in mid-May. We will keep you up-to-date, so clear your calendar, set aside some money and plan to be here. The chickens are feathering out and will be completely "spoiled" with so much love and care being provided by our students, many of whom have watched this project from the egg up!

Eddie Trotter, our lone History Day competitor, has been very busy improving his project by re-mounting his work for the project board, lengthening his bibliography and receiving much free advice from other students! Eddie will compete in Austin April 19-20.

The recent USDA Food Consumption Survey said that the "average diet" was too high in fat and sodium, too low in fiber and not adequately varied to supply the needed nutrients, and that people were eating only half of the recommended two to four servings of fruit.

Actual barriers which account for the gaps between how people think they are doing and how they are actually doing are lack of awareness about calcium, iron and saturated

Culp is speaker for Fellowship

Hereford Flame Fellowship will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Community Center.

Guest speaker will be Niles Culp of Hereford. Culp is an advisor for Flame Fellowship and a member of Community Church.

Culp was born in Plainview and moved to Hereford in 1951. He is an employee of the City of Hereford.

Culp and his wife, Joan, have been married 36 years. They have one son, Mike, of Amarillo and two daughters, Melanie and Julie of Hereford, and eight grandchildren.

The public is welcome to attend.

Indian lore topic of L'Allegra Club

L'Allegra Study Club met in the home of Jan Weishaar with Carmen Flood serving as co-hostess.

Gary Billingsly gave a program titled "Tierra Blanca Lore." The program concentrated on the history and native inhabitants of the area. He also provided his collection of Indian artifacts collected from the Creek area to be viewed by those present.

Suzanne Smith presided over the business meeting.

The annual Spring Geranium Sale will be held April 18-19 in the Hereford Community Center. Proceeds will benefit the Hereford Aquatic Center Park.

L'Allegra Study Club will celebrate its 50th anniversary this year and members will have a special meeting on April 11 in observance of the occasion.

fatty acids and their impact on certain diseases; lack of motivation; confusion (good versus bad advice); and lack of knowledge.

Fruits -- a natural sweet that's low in fat and sodium and high in certain vitamins such as C and A and minerals -- fit right into the meals -- dietary guidelines style. Naturally sweet, they make especially satisfying desserts and snacks. While fruits are good fiber sources they provide few calories.

Another great advantage is their variety in flavor, bright color, and texture to perk up vegetables and salads and to flavor or garish simply prepared meats and poultry.

Some of the ways you can add fruits in your meals is to include them as part of breakfast, snacks, lunch and dinner:

- * Add dried apricots, bananas, blueberries, or apples to add extra fiber, variety and flavor to muffins, pancakes or quick breads.

- * Choose whole fruit in place of juice for extra fiber.

- * Have fresh fruits or dried fruit available for snacking.

- * Use a lightly sweetened fruit sauce in place of frosting on cake.

- * Pack an apple, banana or orange in your lunch bag.

- * For an unusual appetizer, try a fruit soup -- hot or cold -- at dinner.

- * Bake or broil fruits for dessert, garnish or appetizer. Try baked pears, bananas, apples, or a broiled peach or grapefruit half with a sprinkle of cinnamon or nutmeg.

- * Add crushed pineapple to cole slaw.

- * Squeeze a lime or lemon wedge over a fruit salad in place of salad dressing.

- * For a dessert, alternate layers of fresh fruit with plain lowfat yogurt in a parfait glass.

The old adage "an apple a day keeps the doctor away" may hold some truth, but many other foods contribute the same nutrients. An apple is a source of both types of fiber necessary in the diet -- insoluble fiber (peeling) and soluble fiber (pectin of the apple). Insoluble fiber helps prevent constipation. Soluble fiber helps to tie up some nutrients such as cholesterol and glucose in foods.

Also, most people have heard that eating a banana a day replaces any potassium losses -- especially for those who take diuretics. The real truth is that many foods provide some potassium. Fruit along with vegetables, milk and yogurt are some of the best sources. Also meat, fish and poultry are good sources.

Six Hereford students were finalists in the annual Academic Language Therapist's Association Spelling Bee in Dallas recently. This spelling bee emphasizes the phonetic approach to spelling, concentrating on the structural rules of the English language. Wally Walker, a sixth grade student from Bluebonnet, earned a finalist certificate in his division. Mayra Garcia, a sixth grader from West Central, Josh Langford, a fifth grader from West Central, and Cody Scott, a fifth grader from Bluebonnet, earned medals for perfect scores in their respective divisions.

MISH seminar focuses on sex education in 90s

"Sexuality Education and Sexually Transmitted Disease in the 1990s" is the title of a seminar to be hosted by the Amarillo Area Crisis Pregnancy Center in association with High Plains Baptist Hospital, St. Anthony's Hospital, Northwest Hospital and the Amarillo Independent School District.

The one-day seminar will be held from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. on April 20 in the Ambassador Hotel in Amarillo. The cost of the seminar is $50 and limited scholarships are available.

This offering has been approved by the Texas Nurses Association for 7.0 contact hours. Education credits are available for social workers and educators.

The organization conducting the seminar is The Medical Institute for Sexual Health (MISH). Dr. Joe McIlhane established this non-profit medical organization in 1992. It provides incisive, research-based sexual health information to young people, parents, and to leaders in health care, government, education and media in order to facilitate healthy and life-affirming sexual choices and to promote a cultural revolution of deeply satisfying human sexuality.

Guest speaker, Mrs. Pat Socia, is a nationally known expert on abstinence based sexuality education. Dr. Glen C. Griffin will present an investigation of some of the health consequences of various sexually transmitted disease.

Executive director Tom Smith and Richard Tompkins, Ph.D., will discuss "The Case for Character Based Sex Education."

Registration fee is due prior to ***

April 15 and includes continental breakfast, lunch, and seminar packet. Registrations made after April 15 will be $60 per person.

Educators, physicians, counselors, nurses and youth pastors are encouraged to attend the seminar.

For additional information, call Jenny Dixon with the Amarillo Crisis pregnancy Center at 806-354-2288.

Robinson will be honored on 90th birthday

The children and grandchildren of Flora Robinson will honor her with a public reception on the occasion of her 90th birthday on April 6 from 2 p.m.-4 p.m. in her home at 123 Avenue I.

Flora Runton was born in Indian Territory on April 17, 1906, one of eight children. She came to Hereford in 1917.

In June 1924, she married Ervin Robinson. He was a painter and paper hanger in Hereford until his death in 1973.

Mrs. Robinson is a homemaker. The reception will be hosted by her children Betty Sue and Ervin Robinson Jr. and Seletta Gholson, all of Hereford, and her grandchildren.

As National Nutrition Month draws to a close, members of the American, Texas and Panhandle Dietetic Associations, and Charlotte R. Clark, RD/LD local Registered

Dietitian, hope the EAT RIGHT AMERICA campaign has challenged Americans to take charge of their food and nutrition habits. Clark, as a registered dietitian, hold memberships with the American Dietetic Association, state and local dietetic associations and is a License Dietitian with the State of Texas.

Clark holds membership in the American Diabetes Association along with several practice groups within the American Dietetic Association organization.

She is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of science in foods and nutrition and a graduate of Ohio State University with a masters degree in nutrition. She completed an internship in hospital dietetics at the University Hospital, Ohio State University.

Clark provides consulting services at Hereford Regional Medical Center, nutritional services for Hereford Senior Citizens, and serves as a consultant for Grassland, as well as for Hereford Home Health Care.

Clark stated that in her years of practice as a dietitian, she has never seen the interest, excitement and challenges present in the field of nutrition as are encountered today.

The public has a thirst for information and knowledge concerning nutrition that will enable them to lead a more healthy life as we approach the 21st century.

Cowboy speaker will tell experiences at meetings

As his body appeared to be hopelessly broken and mangled, Randy Byrd mumbled through wired jaws, "I'm not dead yet."

So began a new life for an athletic rodeo cowboy who had to learn to live without the use of his legs in a world made for people who take walking for granted.

Randy Byrd's story is compelling. He conveys from his own experiences the consequences of drinking and driving, the limitless bounds of parental devotion and the impact which decisions made as a teenager can have on an entire life.

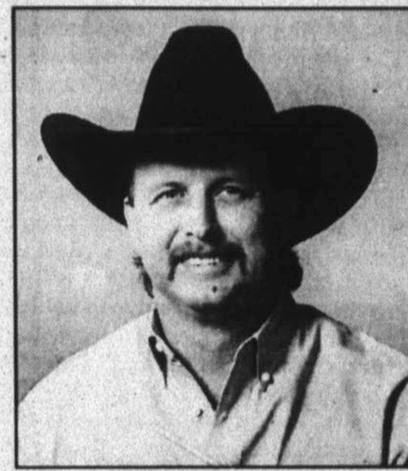

Bryd will share his entire story on Easter Sunday night at 6 p.m. in the Hereford Church of the Nazarene.

While in Hereford, he will also speak at Blue Water Gardens on Saturday at 6 p.m.

On Easter Sunday morning he will hold a cowboy service at 9 a.m. at Keeling Cattle Feeders.

MR. AND MRS. EARL LANCE

Anniversary celebrated with family dinner party

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lance Jr. of Hereford celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a family dinner party recently.

Hosts for the evening were the children and grandchildren of the couple.

Lance, a retired farmer, married the former Nadine Peacock of Woodson on March 26, 1946 in Clovis. The couple previously resided in Woodson and Grandfalls. They have resided in Hereford for 38 years.

The couple are members of The First Baptist Church and The American Legion and Ladies Auxiliary.

Children of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Lance, Michelle Lance and Shawn Lance are their grandchildren.

Red Cross Update

The Board of Directors will meet Wednesday at noon in the office. This is a called meeting.

The Disaster Drill gave us some ideas about things that we need to work on in order to effectively respond to disasters. Some of the things we will be working on are communications, more training, more volunteers and providing information to volunteers. Call the office if you would like to help us be better prepared to meet the needs of victims.

The next time disaster strikes, you may not have much time to act. Prepare now for a sudden emergency. Learn how to protect yourself and cope with disaster by planning ahead. Contact our office for planning guides to help you prepare a plan. We have a video you may borrow to help with your planning. We have a video and booklet on Home Chemical Safety and Emergency procedures available for home viewing. Call or come by the office for more information.

A First Aid section will be taught Tuesday beginning at 7 p.m. in the office. This class is open to anyone with a current Adult or Community CPR certificate.

Special thanks to everyone that helped with the garage sale. We really appreciate everyone that worked and donated things for the sale.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) - "Good Morning America" hostess Joan Lunden blames the media for the abrupt end of her budding romance with Kevin Costner.

"I think Kevin and I would have dated longer had it not been for the unbelievable press focus on us," Lunden said in the March 30 TV Guide.

The attention, combined with the demands of Costner's "Waterworld" promotional tour, were enough to douse any romantic sparks last summer.

"All the press made me very self-protective in subsequent dating," Lunden said. "I became very concerned about every move I made for fear that it would be reported."

Lunden says Costner went all out for their first date.

"He got this yacht and we sailed around New York Harbor and had dinner," said Lunden, a divorced mother of three.

"It was quite romantic and quite beautiful," she said. "When he first walked on the boat and smiled at me as only he can smile and said, 'Boy, I've waited so long to meet you,' I almost fell over."

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: If I craved starch and cardboard, you would say I lacked something or other in my system that made me crave those things. But if I said I would kill for a chocolate-chip cookie you probably would give me sensible diet advice. Why isn't my craving for sweets looked upon as a similar lack of something in my body? Why is my craving explained only as lack of self-control? — Mrs. E.M.

ANSWER: Why does cardboard differ from a chocolate-chip cookie? You have to answer that as food, chocolate is a natural choice, cardboard an aberration, which we call "pica."

Nature apparently programs our dietary health from infancy. Given a choice between drinking from a bottle of sugared water and a bottle of plain water the infant quickly turns to the sweetened water without prompting.

We now know that cravings for ice, starch, clay or cardboard can for unclear reasons indicate anemia. Occasionally a theory arises similarly explaining more natural cravings, for chocolate and other sweets. Some suggest, for example, that we favor chocolate because it contains a substance that can improve an individual's mood.

No matter the origin of a diet quirk, it raises basic health concerns.

There's nothing inherently wrong with sweets, but they can impose penalties, including dental cavities.

When we satisfy single food cravings we deny ourselves a healthful range of nutrients. More than mere cultural habit might decree reserving the last dining course for dessert. The familiar admonishment for moderation applies.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: You have written several times on the subject of chronic fatigue syndrome. I am more than casually interested in the subject, because I suffer from it. My doctor has put me on a high-salt diet for it. The diet is something you have never mentioned. It sounded strange to me, but I must say it is working. Is it something new? — Mrs. W.K.

ANSWER: Some chronic fatigue syndrome patients have a drop in blood pressure when exercising or whenever they become overheated. The blood pressure often responds to increased intake of sodium. It's the reverse of the idea of a low-salt diet lowering high blood pressure.

Not everyone with chronic fatigue syndrome responds to the salt therapy. A test that helps determine who might benefit is performed on a tilt table. The technician straps the patient on the table, then tilts it vertically. If a drop in blood pressure ensues, you can conclude that a high-salt diet might help the patient.

Yes, the idea is new. I would like to know how you fare in the next month or so.

For more on chronic fatigue syndrome, see my report on the subject. Readers can order a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 46, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

CONFIDENTIAL FOR H.L.: Sclerotherapy can be used to eradicate veins of varying size, not just the spider type. In the procedure, an irritant is injected into the vein. The vein responds by closing and in time harmlessly drying up. I am sure you can find a doctor who performs the well-known procedure. If you wish, you can get a list of such physicians from the local medical society.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Running makes the bottoms of my feet sore. If I stop for a week they feel OK, but as soon as I start again, the same thing happens. What do you think is wrong? — H.L.

ANSWER: Sore feet are the nemesis of runners, especially beginners. Most overcome it as the feet adapt to new stresses. Still, so many things can go wrong with feet that you should never dismiss what they are telling you.

Let me suggest you rest your feet until they do not hurt. Then you can start afresh with a different running technique.

Many neophyte runners let the heel strike the ground first — which imposes too narrow a burden. It's better to distribute the burden across the whole foot.

Practice landing on the heel and sole of the fleshy forefoot more or less simultaneously. A way to get the hang of it is to run backward.

My suggestion might not be the total or even partial answer to your problem, but it is worth trying.

Another possibility to consider is your running shoes. Ask for advice at an athletic footwear store. Take your shoes in with you for comparison.

Don't be quick to dismiss the soreness as entirely technique- or shoe-related. If new shoes and a new running style don't pay off, have a doctor look at your feet.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am, for all practical purposes, a vegetarian, mainly because I watch what I eat. I exercise daily. For a month, I haven't been feeling myself. I saw my doctor. Imagine my surprise to learn that I had iron-deficiency anemia! I wish you'd comment, especially with regard to diet. I'm a 21-year-old woman. — Mrs. H.K.

ANSWER: Many young women teeter on the brink of iron deficiency.

For some, both diet and exercise can contribute to the anemia. Another prominent factor is the blood loss through menstruation.

Add the iron lost in the period and what's missing in a meatless diet to the rigors of a moderately intensive exercise program and you can understand how anemia might occur.

It should not take long to build up your iron and your red-cell count. I think you can go on with your lifestyle.

Meat is the chief source of iron in our diet. If you decide to remain a vegetarian, you should find alternative sources of dietary iron, such as enriched cereals.

For more on anemia, readers can order the Health Letter report on the topic. Send $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope to: Dr. Donohue — SR152, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Congratulations. You are one of the few physicians interested in us weekend (and non-weekend) jocks. I'm into weightlifting. Problem is I have turned stale. Can I get off this plateau? — R.L.

ANSWER: Take a tip from the Russian athletes, who have popularized something called "periodization."

Specifically, the athlete changes the number of lifts, the number of sets, the amount of weight and the timing of rest breaks.

You can stagger such factors over a week — one program for Monday, one for Tuesday, etc. One day you might decrease the weight for more reps; the next, increase weight with fewer reps.

Or, you can stagger weeks, staying with one program for seven days, then another for the next seven days. You get the idea.

You probably will find periodization remarkably flexible and fun.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

The new book selection this week includes a remarkable debut, Nathan's Run by John Gilstrap. While working as a fire fighter, EMT and volunteer worker among troubled teens, John came upon the idea for this book that features 12-year-old Nathan Bailey.

The story begins with a savage killing in a Virginia juvenile detention center, and Nathan is accused of murder and branded a copy killer. The target of a nationwide manhunt, the orphaned Nathan is alone with no one to turn to for help.

Nathan, stalked by a vicious hit man, knows he must depend on his agility, natural cleverness, and honesty if he is to survive. He calls a national radio talk show and pleads his case on the air.

Ultimately it is a heart-scarred cop who reaches out to Nathan in an attempt to clear his name and dodge the hit men that may appear just around the next corner.

What the Deaf-Mute Heard by

G.D. Geraino is the story of 10-year-old Sammy Ayers. Sammy boarded the bus with his mother not knowing their destination.

The next morning the bus reached the end of its route and Sammy awakens to find that he is all alone, a lost child in a small Georgia town in the 1940s. When the people at the bus depot begin to bombard Sammy with questions, he pretends not to hear them. He just remains silent.

Sammy feels safe behind this wall of silence and intends to remain silent until he know everything about the citizens of Barrington. Station master Jenkins becomes the father figure for Sammy and assumes the responsibility for his car.

Everyone in town knows him as a deaf mute, and no one feels the need to guard their speech when Sammy is around, revealing their most intimate and darkest secrets.

Barrington isn't the only one with a secret. Sammy spends 15 years guarding a secret of his own.

The Dark Room by Minette Walters is a psychological tale of horror and suspense. Millionaire Adam Kingsley's only daughter Jinx is found unconscious among the wreckage of a mysterious car accident. The police suspect a murder attempt. Blood samples taken at the accident site reveal a high blood-alcohol level.

The day before the accident authorities were called by Jinx's neighbors when she was found unconscious in her car parked in her garage with the motor running.

Matters look fairly bleak when police discover Jinx's fiancée has run off with her best friend. Dazed, confused and suffering from "post traumatic amnesia" Jinx is placed in a private clinic where she works with Dr. Alan Protheroe in an attempt to regain her memory.

At first Jinx can recall nothing, but with the doctor's help memories begin to surface. They are troubled memories of depression and fear. What is it that could cause such feelings of terror?

Laurence Sanders' McNally's Puzzle is a story in which investigator Archy McNally must solve a case before pet store owner Hiram Gottschalk is killed.

Hiram becomes convinced he is in danger when a photo of him and his deceased wife is found slashed; a mass card is found taped to the inside of the closet door; and his pet myna is found strangled to death.

In an attempt to find the person responsible for these pranks, McNally places his friend Binky Watrous inside the pet store "Parrot's Unlimited" posing as a salesman and cage cleaner. Archy feels that life will soon return to the old order.

Thea Hiram is murdered in his sleep, stabbed through the eyes. Later two clerks from "Parrot's Unlimited" are abducted and their bodies discovered in the Everglades, not.

McNally must piece the puzzle together while staying just one step ahead of the killer, or he will become the next victim.

For the reader that finds history and particularly American History to your liking we have Undaunted Courage by Stephen E. Ambrose which is about Meriwether Lewis, Thomas Jefferson and the opening of the American West.

In 1803 President Jefferson sent his personal secretary Captain Lewis on a voyage up the Mississippi River to the Rockies, over the mountains down the Columbia River all the way to the Pacific Ocean.

Captain William Clark also assigned to the expedition was to map the journey. Their mission was to find an all-water route to the Pacific with a short hop over the Rockies. Lewis discovered there was no such passage.

Lewis discovered the Great Plains to be too dry for faring, there was no river flowing from Canada to the Missouri and the Plains Indians hostile to newcomers. Even though Lewis returned to Washington a hero, Lewis felt the expedition was a failure.

Dr. Mudd and the Lincoln Assassination: The Case Reopened edited by John Paul Jones is an attempt to resolve once and for all the question of Dr. Mudd's guilt or innocence.

On February 12, 1993, the University of Richmond School of Law convened a distinguished group of Civil War historians to thoroughly present both sides of the Samuel Mudd case.

The attorneys involved were F. Lee Bailey, Candida Ewing, Staempfli Steel, John Jay Douglas and Admiral John S. Jenkins. This book is the complete record of those proceedings.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: If I would have known this years ago, I don't think I'd have as much gray hair.

As a dog breeder I want to save as much money as possible. A friend told me she used a child's small hard plastic swimming pool and lined it with towels, wood chips or unprinted paper as bedding for the litters. The pool can be moved around easily. No mess or fuss, just clean, happy puppies.

My house will never again be upside down with chew toys, puppies underfoot and potty spots. — Suzie Zimmerman, Anaconda, Mont.

Good idea! I'm sure that would work for small dogs. My secretary's Rottweiler had 13 puppies, so she would have needed a full-size pool for that bunch!

I have compiled a pamphlet full of ideas and hints for all dog lovers, especially first-time dog owners.

If anyone would like to order one, please send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) envelope to: Heloise/Dogs, PO Box 795001, San Antonio TX 78279-5001. — Heloise

GAS GLOVE

Dear Heloise: All too often when pumping gas at the gas station, I get back in my car to find my hand reeking of gasoline because the pump wasn't clean. This is very frustrating, since soap and water alone do not rid my hand of the awful smell.

So, I now keep a thick work glove wrapped in a plastic bag in my trunk.

Every time I fill up my car, I put the glove on first to protect my hands. No more gasoline smell! — Valerie Slater, Topeka, Kan.

SHOWER CURTAIN

Dear Heloise: After suffering for years with mold in my shower curtains that wouldn't come out, I realized what really caused it: the hems in the curtains retaining water and soap.

Now, all I ever purchase are nylon curtains. Once I get them home and unpackaged I immediately cut off the hems right above the stitching line with a pair of pinking shears to prevent them from unraveling.

Being nylon and with no hem to stop and hold the moisture, the curtains dry almost immediately. Nylon shower curtains don't cling like plastic and are a fast, easy and colorful way to change the appearance of a bathroom. — Pat Dougherty, Independence, Ky.

Good idea! Nylon curtains come in so many different colors and designs; they make lovely shower curtains.

Also, for anyone who wants to keep plastic shower curtains, just cut off the hem to prevent mildew and mold from forming there. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: Please tell me how to wash a clear vinyl shower curtain that has a beautiful jungle print. I soaked it in bleach, but it still shows water and soap scum. Thank you. — Mrs. Kate M. Zielinski, Phoenix

The easiest way to clean soap scum and mildew off a shower curtain is to wash it in your washing machine. Use hot water and the correct amount of detergent and chlorine bleach. The important step that you missed is to add two or three white towels to the machine along with the curtain. The towels lend an abrasive action, which helps remove the scum and mildew.

You can either dry the curtain in the dryer for a few minutes on low or just hang it back up.

Hope this clears up your cloudy pattern. — Heloise

HOSPITAL GREETINGS

Dear Heloise: I've seen several ways to send cards to people in hospitals. I do mine this way: I send the card to the person's home address and let someone picking up their mail deliver it to the hospital.

People in ICU cannot get mail and people stay shorter periods of time in hospitals. By the time it goes through the hospital and back home, they are OK. — E. Marion Patterson, Columbia, S.C.

LABELING LEFTOVERS

Dear Heloise: I learned this handy hint from my mother-in-law, so she gets the credit.

When saving leftovers, to be able to identify the contents of plastic containers, use a strip of masking tape. Write on it with a permanent marker what it contains and the date made and then place it on the top of the lid.

This kills two birds with one stone: what's inside and how old it is. — JoAnn Polomsky, Tempe, Ariz.

CLEANING TIP

Dear Heloise: I try to clean two or three drawers a week to stay ahead of the junk accumulation.

I also keep a certain place on the kitchen counter where I slip (by date) items that need attention, like bills, tickets to plays, etc. — Dorothy Hamilton, La Marque, Texas

Ames named national award winner in business education

Lyndsi Ames, daughter of Lloyd Ames and Scott and Robbi Hudgens all of Hereford, was recently named a United States National Award winner in business education by the United States Achievement Academy.

citizenship, attitude and cooperative spirit and recommendation from a teacher or director.

Lyndsi attends Hereford High School and was nominated for the national award by Amy Cole.

The Academy selects USAA winners upon the exclusive recommendation of teachers, coaches, counselors, and other qualified sponsors and upon the Standards of Selection set forth by the Academy.

The criteria for selection are a student's academic performance, interest and aptitude, leadership qualities, responsibility, enthusiasm, motivation to learn and improve.

95-year-old woman still able to serve her church

By ROY A. JONES II
Abilene Reporter-News
ABILENE, Texas - Emma Perry has a shocking theory about why she's still able to serve as a church elder at age 95.

"Sometimes I wonder if I have done something that the Lord has left me here to repent for," the spry saint admitted, her characteristic laugh suddenly missing.

Although she has been a widow for nearly 32 years it's as if she sometimes feels she is still laboring in the bigger-than-life shadow of her husband, L.S. "Litt" Perry, whose name is synonymous with lay leadership in First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) here and throughout Texas.

Perry had retired from the day-to-day operation of a lucrative dental laboratory at age 53 in order to direct First Christian's Hispanic mission and serve full-time as a lay minister - all as a volunteer. A longtime Mason, he was also serving as Grand Commander of Knights Templar of Texas at the time of his sudden death five years later.

"I think Litt was such a good Christian that the Lord had something he wanted him to do up there," Mrs. Perry explained. "Maybe I haven't accomplished what I should do here on earth yet."

Friends say Mrs. Perry is too hard on herself. They can't imagine anyone possibly accomplishing more for the Lord than her - and at an age that puts to shame people 60 and 70 years her junior.

"I can think of no individual I have ever known that embodies the Christian lifestyle as much as Emma Perry," said her pastor, the Rev. Jim Zug. "The greatest gift that one can give to another is the gift of oneself. Emma does that on a daily basis, and brings honor and dignity to the position of elder."

An interview had to be cut short because Mrs. Perry needed to bake a couple of dozen cookies and help decorate the church for a women's meeting the next day. Then she would visit church members in Abilene hospitals and take some flowers and cookies to brighten the day of members in nursing homes - the majority of them younger than her.

She's been cooking a complete turkey and dressing meal for her husband's former Sunday School class every Thanksgiving and Christmas since the early 1960s. The young adults class, which the Perrys started with eight couples, had grown to 125 members by the time Perry died. Members subsequently named the class in his memory.

In her "spare" time, she sews. "I sew for love, not for money," she said. She just finished a maternity outfit for one of her seven grandchildren. She also works two newspaper crossword puzzles a day, in ink.

"They help me keep my vocabulary up to date, and help me keep up with what's going on in the world," she said. "I don't want to go stale."

"If you just sit there you're gonna just dry up and get old. If you want to stay young you've got to know what's going on," she said. "I listen to the news instead of soap operas."

She also plays bridge every Friday. She's the only charter member left of a club begun 60 years ago.

Mrs. Perry drives herself everywhere she goes, of course - at least in town. At age 90 she finally acquiesced to her grandchildren's demands that she quit driving to visit them in places like Dallas and Houston. After she made several trips by bus the relatives asked her to please, please fly from now on.

She's willing to do that for their sakes, but protested good naturedly. "They're more worried about me than I am. I've driven in Chicago, San Francisco, San Diego, Houston, Fort Worth and Dallas. I can take care of myself."

"They said it's not me; it's the other people they are worried about," she said, laughing.

In 75 years of driving she's had only one accident, a minor fender-bender, and has received just one traffic ticket.

"I went to (defensive driving) school and took my lesson so there wasn't a mark against me," she said, laughing again.

Whatever job comes up at the church, Mrs. Perry is first to volunteer.

"If the door opens and I'm able to be here, I'm going to be here," she said. "It is my duty. It is also my pleasure. I don't know what I would do if I didn't have this church."

Mrs. Perry also makes it a point to attend every funeral involving a member of her extended church family. She knows all too painfully well what it means to have the support of fellow Christians during such a time of bereavement.

During a one-year period beginning in 1989 she suffered the loss of both of her children and three brothers.

Did she feel like Job?

"No, I don't know how I felt," she said. "I was just numb. But I know I couldn't have made it without this church and without my many other Christian friends in the community."

Her son, prominent Abilene attorney W.S. "Bill" Perry, 53, was a murder victim, shot to death in July 1989 on an oil lease in Jones County. The crime has never been solved. Just like his father, Bill Perry was serving as chairman of First Christian's board of elders at the time of his death.

Five months later, Mrs. Perry's daughter, LaZelle Moore, 57, suffered a blood clot and died before she could get medical attention while she and her husband were serving a two-year term as International Executive Service Corps volunteers in Barbados.

Mrs. Perry doesn't expect her son's murder to ever be solved, and she's come to terms with the grief.

"We don't want to find out (who committed the crime). If we do we'll just hate somebody and we'll have to go through all this all over again," she said. "We would rather leave it like it is. It's not my part to punish."

Health providers targeting Hispanic residents and their unique problems

By ALVARO RODRIGUEZ
The Monitor (McAllen)
EDINBURG, Texas - Hispanic health issues are not always the same health concerns of other populations.

The Rio Grande Valley and South Texas have become areas for study by medical research organizations investigating high incidence rates of everything from diabetes to cancer.

Health education remains of vital importance in the region, and local, state and national health and environmental agencies have had to provide necessary information to a largely bilingual community.

This month, the National Osteoporosis Foundation announced it had published the first Spanish-language consumer education materials on osteoporosis. While osteoporosis is more prevalent among white, post-menopausal women, Hispanic women also are at significant risk for developing the bone-thinning disease, the foundation reports.

A new brochure, "(Tiene sus huesos sanos? Lo que la mujer Latina debe saber sobre la osteoporosis)" (Do you have healthy bones? What every Latina woman should know about osteoporosis), is now available, free of charge to the public, through the foundation.

Meeting the health education needs of the Hispanic community in Spanish is essential in improving health and preventing disease, local health officials said.

"It's extremely important. There's no question about it," said Susan McElroy, of Uniting Nations in Drug Abuse Defense, a bi-national substance abuse prevention coalition in Weslaco. "The vast majority of people, although they may be bilingual, prefer information in Spanish."

McElroy, who also is executive director of the Rio Grande Valley Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, said the council stocks numerous Spanish-language substance abuse brochures and information packets.

"We go after anything that's Spanish-language," McElroy said. "In fact, we find ourselves receiving requests from other parts of the state for what we have in Spanish, so they don't have to have (their English information) interpreted."

In order to meet the needs of the Spanish-speaking public, some local organizations are translating English brochures into Spanish.

The Rio Grande Valley Five-A-Day Coalition is the local branch of a national nutrition awareness campaign promoting the importance of eating fruits and vegetables. A Spanish-language version of an English educational brochure was done to better reach the Hispanic community, said Doreen Garza, assistant director of the University of Texas System Texas-Mexico Border Health Coordination Office in Edinburg.

In 1995, TMBHCO organized "Salud Sin Fronteras: Health Without Borders," a U.S.-Mexico border conference on women's health, to share information in both English and Spanish on mental health, cancer, violence against women, reproductive health and diabetes.

In the area of reproductive and family health, Planned Parenthood of Hidalgo County distributes various brochures and informational materials in Spanish, said Kathryn Verser Hearn, public affairs director.

— YOUR EYES —

Your Eye-Checkup Schedule

How often should your eyes be examined? The answer depends on your age, to some extent, though there are other factors.

A child's eyes should be checked at age three or four, certainly before the start of school. If vision correction is needed, it's wise to arrange this before the child needs to see the blackboard and learn to read.

Many adults may not need regular eye exams unless vision changes or eye problems prompt a visit to the optometrist. Those who wear glasses or contacts may want to make sure that their corrective lenses are keeping up with their needs. And by age 40, a need for reading glasses will bring most adults to the eye doctor.

Older adults should be screened regularly for glaucoma. Most at risk are those over 65, African Americans, diabetics, the severely nearsighted and those with a family history of glaucoma.

WORDS OF WISDOM XV

Often when I speak publicly, I find the words of others more fully and clearly express a thought or concept I struggle to articulate. A relevant, topical quote can punch up a presentation and wake up an audience.

To find that perfect thought for such an occasion, I often refer to books of quotations. My favorites are those that divide their words of wisdom into categories and list names of authors, as well.

Two of my books have become somewhat dogeared and worn. They are my first choices for seeking out those just-right phrases. They are thorough references, with thousands of choice quotations.

For this column I'm going to thumb through those dogeared pages one more time. I'll try to find some special thoughts and words of wisdom I've not included in this column before.

Words on words

- He can compress the most words into the smallest idea of any man I ever met. - Abraham Lincoln
- I never write metropolis for seven cents because I can get the same money for cop. - Mark Twain
- We have too many high sounding words, and too few actions that correspond with them. - Abigail Adams
- Colors fade, temples crumble, empires fall, but wise words endure. - Edward Thorndike
- The thoughtless are rarely wordless. - Howard W. Newton
- Words without actions are the assassins of idealism. - Herbert Hoover
- Eating words has never given me indigestion. - Winston Churchill
- The most valuable of all talents is that of never using two words when one will do. - Thomas Jefferson
- It is with words as with sunbeams-the more they are condensed, the deeper they burn. - Robert Southey
- Suit the action to the word, the word to the action. William Shakespeare
- Words fascinate me. They always have. For me, browsing in a dictionary is like being turned loose in a bank. Eddie Cantor
- The safest words are always those which bring us most directly to facts. Charles H. Parkhurst
- Words are, of course, the most powerful drug used by mankind. - Rudyard Kipling

Thoughts on personal success

- The word stands aside to let anyone pass who knows where he is going. - David Starr Jordan
- Happiness is enjoying what we have instead of fretting over what we don't have. - Unknown
- The quality of an individual is reflected in the standards they set for themselves. - Ray Kroc
- Whenever you are to do a thing, though it can never be known but to yourself, ask yourself how you would act were all the world looking at you, and act accordingly. - Thomas Jefferson
- I use not only the brains I have, but all that I can borrow. - Woodrow Wilson
- When you make a mistake, don't look back at it too long. Take the reason of the thing in your mind, and then look forward. Mistakes are lessons of wisdom. The past cannot be changed. The future is yet in your power. - Unknown
- Few wishes come true by themselves. - June Smith
- It is happy talent to know how to play. - Ralph Waldo Emerson
- The hardest problem a business person faces daily comes about 5 p.m., when he has to decide if he is tired or lazy. - Unknown
- Quality is not an act. It is a habit. - Aristotle

Theatrical producer turns offbeat play into big business

By CHERYL HALL
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS - Charles Duggan never wanted to go to Tuna, Texas. After he got there, he couldn't escape. For more than a decade, he's been caught in a Twilight Zone with Aunt Pearl, Stanley Bumiller, Vera Carp and The Reverend Spikes. You might even say he owns the town.

The 42-year-old theatrical producer has turned an offbeat play about the quirky inhabitants of Texas' third-smallest town - where the Lion's Club is too liberal and Patsy Cline never dies - into a multimillion-dollar Tuna industry. His Austin-based production company, Charles H. Duggan Presents, owns the rights to all things Tuna, which bring in about $5 million in annual revenue. His company contracts with theaters, pays the actors and crews, sets up traveling logistics and decides when it's time for the final curtain call.

A year ago this month, "Greater Tuna" moved into the Wyndham Anatole Hotel - the first time a play has set up permanent residence in Dallas and managed to make a stay of it.

The bare-necessity set at the Little Tuna Theater is the original off-Broadway picket barn, where two male actors speed-dress into 20 different townsfolk wigs and costumes.

Each night except Mondays, assorted eccentrics - from cheerleader wannabe Charlene to town drunk and UFO spotter R.R. Snavelly - say lines that many in the audience can lip-sync.

"Hamlet doesn't change," says Duggan. "Why should Tuna?" Duggan says the 300-seat theater is profitable. "If I were to close right now, we would be at break-even running the show and would have recouped the $150,000 we put into creating this theater. I'm at ground zero after a year."

That, he says, is OK by him. The Dallas outpost is part of a sprawling business that spreads the gospel according to Tuna through national and regional tours, books, videos and memorabilia.

All bankrolled by a San Francisco-born Austin transplant whose career took a major detour after his first reluctant Tuna experience. Thirteen years ago, a 29-year-old attorney-trained Duggan was a "checkbook producer," paying money to bring other people's plays to his theaters in San Francisco and Palo Alto, Calif.

He'd been to New York three times that season to scout shows, successfully skirting "Greater Tuna."

"I resisted because I thought, 'What is that?'" Duggan says. "By the fourth, I'd seen absolutely everything else, so I went. The next morning, I was in the producer's office, saying, 'We gotta bring this to San Francisco.'"

And thus he became ensnared in the Tuna net.

When creators/actors Joe Sears and Jaston Williams had a falling out with the original producer, who had "somehow neglected to pay royalties," both sides asked Duggan to take the show over.

It wasn't a snap decision. "Greater Tuna" ran a year and a half in New York but never made money for the investors.

"But it was something I identified with, and I could see how the audiences reacted to it, so I said, 'Yes.'" So in 1985, the rights fell into his lap. "Without sounding immodest, that's when the Tuna phenomenon began."

He created a theater for "Greater Tuna" in San Francisco, where the show would run for the next seven nonstop years.

"San Francisco thinks it's a San Francisco show," he says, adding that many in the audience can still there.

"It's an 800 number, and we train those people to answer with Texas accents," he says. "When Tuna fans call, they want to talk. We've got people to sit and talk to them and pretend they're in Texas."

Also back in 1985, Duggan started a touring production. Its first stop: Austin, where the homecoming was so successful it paid for the rest of the tour.

The two coasts and the Sunbelt have become the national Tuna circuit, with the Texas capital considered home turf.

"We've played 'Greater Tuna' 11 times at the Paramount Theatre, and 'A Tuna Christmas' nine times," he says. "When the bank accounts get low, I take the show back to Austin.

Bless their hearts, they keep coming out."

First came "Greater Tuna," then "A Tuna Christmas." Around the bend are a Tuna movie and another theatrical play, "Red, White and Tuna," slowly coming from the Sears-Williams collaborative team.

"Charles, always the good producer, keeps asking 'When's it going to be finished?'" says Sears. "And we answer him like Charlton Heston in 'The Agony and the Ecstasy': 'When it's done.'"

"We can't be rushed on these things," he says with a slight defiance reminiscent of Aunt Pearl after she's poisoned a dog with her bitter pill. "Our fans expect us to be very clever."

Sears and Williams are currently in Washington rehearsing a '90s version of "The Fantasticks," another Duggan production scheduled to reach Fort Worth's Casa Manana in July and the Majestic in Dallas come September.

"It's an unusual relationship that we have with Charles," says Williams in typical Vera Carp understatement. "It's one that many writers would envy. Frankly, because of Charles, we're able to stay in Texas and haven't had to relocate to New York or L.A."

"We feel confident that the man is ready to produce us when we have something."

The Paul Massons of West Texas will sell no Tuna before it's time.

And it's that rare understanding that has meshed the business and creative sides of Tuna, et al.

"A lot of producers are out strictly for the money," says Sears. "Charles is out for the arts end."

Duggan, who sports degrees from Stanford University and Georgetown University's law school, is known for protecting author's rights and his stick-with-it nature - rare traits among theatrical financiers. That's earned him the nickname, "The Friendly Producer."

For example, it took three years before he got his hands on the first script for "A Tuna Christmas."

It took another five years and thousands of miles to get the play from Austin to Broadway, as it followed the tried-and-true Greater Tuna circuit working out kinks.

Halfway through its trial by road, "A Tuna Christmas" derailed in Boston. The theater critic for the Globe complained that the performance was too long and needed a smaller venue. The rest of the review went on to say that the play was incredibly funny. But apparently no one read that far.

Audiences evaporated. "Charles hung in there," says Sears. "Instead of closing the show, he kept it running so we would get the chance to study it. That cost him some money."

"The result of Boston" says Duggan, "was serious cutting that we'd been toying around with for some time."

For the next two years, the team of three continued to tour, test and tinker.

Perseverance paid off. "A Tuna Christmas" - which Williams says is "like a busload of schizophrenics going over a cliff. It's a truly crazy experience" - opened to New York raves in 1994.

"Had we not gone through those rough spots," recalls Sears, "that never would have happened. I admire that in a producer."

Duggan does not live on Tuna alone, producing a variety of other shows that have experienced the full range of financial success and failure. His biggest bomb, "Private Lives," occurred in the midst of developing "A Tuna Christmas" and was nearly his undoing.

He'd thought that Joan Collins in an English comedy was a sure sell. But the combination of "Alexis Colby" in a Noel Coward play was anything but. Duggan wound up personally losing a million bucks.

Despite a mountain of advice suggesting he seek bankruptcy protection, Duggan worked out deals with all of his creditors, moved to Austin where the living was cheaper and paid people back.

In real need of cold cash, Duggan sold the rights to a third of "A Tuna Christmas" to investors for $330,000, setting a real-market million-dollar value for the play.

"I wouldn't sell it for that now," he says. "Those investors have been very happy. They made their money back within a year and continue to make very good returns."

The "Private Lives" episode would hold him in good stead.

"I did a play called the 'Twilight of the Golds,'" Duggan says of the Broadway show that discovers a "gay" gene. "The minute I announced that show, all of the creditors from 'Private Lives' called to say they wanted to be involved."

He tries to be upfront about the enormous risk in theater: "I say, 'You can either give me the money or light a match to it.' The odds of ever seeing it again are about equal. If they still give it to you, you feel all right about it."

As Drew Dennett, an investor with Duggan over the years, puts it: "His word is as good as gold. That's a rare thing in business, where you can make deals on cocktail napkins."

The New York telephone executive is a grateful "Tuna Christmas" investor. He has high hopes that the show has "a lot of juice left" in terms of television interest, amateur-and-stock royalties and video sales.

There's already a movie spinoff afoot. The screenplay expands the basic plot by waylaying a busload of country-western stars on their way to Branson, Mo. They break down in Tuna on Christmas Eve and have to deal with the town's bittersweet view of the holiday.

Thank You Hereford!

The students and staff of Northwest Primary School would like to say thank you to all of you who have supported our recycling and playground project so enthusiastically! As you may have noticed, our playground phase one is now in place and almost ready to be utilized. The final step is the installation of a safe surface of pea gravel. We want to especially thank our wonderful parents who have volunteered their time and effort to help our Sparkler Dreams become a reality. We also appreciate Mr. Chester Nolan, our city manager, for his willingness to provide support both in man-power and encouragement.

Recycling Update...

We would like to give you an update on the status of our recycling center. Mrs. Lockmiller, our principal, appeared at the last meeting of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to complete the application process for a grant.

This grant would substantially aid in funding our recycling center. We feel very good about our chances to receive our grant and are now in the process of visiting with a company that will help us contract for the sale and collection of our recyclables.

We appreciate your support of our recycling project and your understanding of this momentary delay in the project. In this part of the world, recycling is still in its infancy and, therefore, we have a bit more difficulty finding reputable companies to contract with for the disposal of our recyclable materials. We hope to have everything in place very soon so that we can continue our Sparkler Dream to make a big difference in our community and our world by recycling as much of our 'trash' as possible.

Again, a huge thank you to all of you who have supported us in our dream for a better Hereford and a better world!

The Mark of Excellence is Worth Striving For!

Ask Jennifer Phipps about her cellular service!

But please wait until she gets home from school

It's hard for most of us to comprehend the pace at which new technology is reaching into our daily lives, or how fast young people adapt to it.

Jennifer Phipps is like many other teenagers these days. The attractive Hereford High School sophomore student splits her time between regular school work, playing golf for the school golf team and earning spending money as a baby-sitter.

She also packs an XIT Cellular FLIP PHONE as an important part of her daily accessories. And she says her phone is really "no-big-deal" in the scheme of her hectic teenage life.

"A few other students have cellular phones, and I don't think anyone thinks it's that special - the other students don't give us a hard time about having one," she said. "I got the phone about the same time I got my car, and it helps me a lot when I'm baby-sitting or out of town on a golf trip. I can stay in touch with my parents."

Our customers embrace technology as a practicality

Texas native is ambassador for growing cowboy culture

By ART CHAPMAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
 AZLE, Texas - At 19 years old, Russell Don Steagall had a couple of problems. His hair had turned a rusty hue and his buddies were calling him Red. "I threw rocks at them when they called me that," he says. "My name was Russell and that's what I wanted to be called."

And then there was his mother, who hoped he'd be a musician when he grew up. But the Texas native wanted to be a cowboy.

He ended up Red Steagall, cowboy musician.

After his first hit song in 1969, Steagall placed 26 records in a row on the national charts. For 15 years, he worked his way through county fairs, bars and smoky nightclubs to reach the pinnacle in country music.

Now, he is in the throes of a career change, opting out of the country music mainstream to focus instead on pure cowboy songs and poetry.

"I discovered an art form called cowboy poetry," Steagall says. "I realized there was another career for me. I didn't know how big it was going to be. I still don't know how big it can be."

Well, pretty big. At 57, Steagall has become the poet laureate and ambassador for a growing cowboy culture.

At the National Cowboy Hall of Fame two weeks ago, he received a Western Heritage Award for original music on his latest album, "Faith and Values." He won the same award in 1993 for his "Born to this Land."

He and his band, the Coleman County Cowboys, tour internationally for the State Department. Closer to home, Steagall has enthralled thousands at the Stock Show Rodeo with his songs and narration of Fort Worth's past.

In the narrow niche of cowboy poetry and music, he is among the elite.

"There are a few other people doing it, but I would put Red right up there at the top," says Buck Reams, a longtime friend and member of Steagall's part-time band. "Don Edwards and Michael Martin Murphy bring back the old songs, but Red writes new songs for today. He does his own material. You can only do 'Little Joe the Wrangler' and 'Strawberry Roan' so many times."

Reams says Steagall's strength is his writing.

"He has a way of making people experience what he's saying, or singing. I've heard him do some poetry that didn't leave a dry eye in the house."

Steagall's music and poetry are of cattle drives and chuck wagons, good guys and bad. They are the language of his youth. "I think Mother would tell you that I started reading about cowboys and Indians as soon as I learned to read," he says. "I don't know that there's been more than five days in my entire life that I didn't read something about them."

There was never really any chance he would avoid a cowboy lifestyle. His family lived in Forestburg in Montague County when he was born in 1938, but by the time he was 3, they had moved to Sanford in the Texas Panhandle.

"All of us who grew up there thought we were cowboys," Steagall says. "There were always horses to ride. We didn't have any saddles but there were horses to ride. I remember three of us saved well over a year for $14 to buy an army surplus McClellan saddle - the most uncomfortable thing you can ride - but we tore it up. We rode it until there wasn't anything left."

At his mother's insistence, he tried to learn the piano, but it didn't work. Guitar seemed a good compromise, but he accidentally smashed the guitar while wrestling with his brother, and those lessons ended as well.

An unfortunate twist of fate would bring them back.

"When I was 15, I was the starting left end for the Phillips Black Hawks, the state champion team," he says proudly. "But on the morning before the first game, I went to the hospital with polio."

He lost the use of his left arm and hand. There was no strength, no way to grip a ball or grasp a saddle horn. It was a frightening time. He had no idea how to deal with it, but his mother did.

"Mother made a deal with Mrs. Harry Miller, who lived about three miles away, for me to take mandolin lessons," Steagall says. "She paid $10 for it, and paid it out $1 a month. I would either ride a bicycle or walk that three miles each way to take lessons from Mrs. Miller."

Strength slowly returned to his fingers as he worked, sometimes for days at a time, just to get one finger up and off the mandolin strings. In six months he could play a few chords and was ready to move to the guitar.

Steagall's recovery was rapid and the experience forged his personality, says his younger brother, Carroll.

"He was pretty much a driving force for all of us," he says of Steagall's influence on his four brothers and one sister. "After he had polio, nothing slowed him down. If he set a goal, or saw something he wanted to do, he went after it."

Throughout high school, Steagall played his guitar and wrote songs and poetry, primarily to entertain himself.

"When I went off to college at West Texas State University in Canyon, I put a little band together and made a little spending money," he says. "I remember the first date we played was at the VFW hall outside Canyon for the rodeo club. We made $5. Not apiece, but $5 for the whole band. And we thought there would never be another poor day."

After graduation, Steagall went on to play in small clubs, picking up as much as $25 a night to supplement his $100 a week salary at Shamrock Oil. His music was cowboy music, campfire songs that he had heard as a youngster, and of course, country swing.

"It was Bob Wills, Hank Thompson and Spade Cooley," he says. "I've told a million people that I was 25 years old before I knew there was anything other than mesquite trees, buffalo grass, Phillips gasoline, barbed wire and Bob Wills."

In 1965, Steagall hooked a U-Haul trailer to his Impala Super Sport and headed to California for a career in entertainment. He and a friend wrote a song called "Here We Go Again."

"Ray Charles recorded it and my whole life changed," Steagall says.

He worked a while for United Artists, had his own publishing company, but found it wasn't enough. He wanted to record. "Party Dolls and Wine," "Beer Drinking Music" and a country swing version of "Somewhere My Love" put him on the charts and, eventually, on the road.

"We'd play all night at those honky-tonks," says James Wood, a steel guitar player who was the first musician Steagall hired. "Then you'd wake up in the middle of the night on that bus and you wouldn't know where you were or where you had been. It really got to be a grind."

In 1986, Steagall sold his buses and released his band. Then came the poetry.

"It has been the most rewarding time of my life, I think," he says. "It is not an art form palatable to the masses, but its market is fairly substantial."

The market surprisingly includes the business world as well as the barbecue crowd.

"I do a lot of corporate parties where I use my poetry as a corporate message of honesty and loyalty and hard work and work ethic and the things that are important in corporate America," Steagall says. "I didn't set out to write all those things in my poetry; it's just that my background dictated that's the way they should go."

Steagall and his wife, Gail, spend more time now at their ranch near Azle where he works on his weekly radio show, "Cowboy Corner." The program airs on nearly 140 stations nationwide.

in which they feel most comfortable," Hearn said. "It makes good health sense that you educate people in the language they're accustomed to."

Planned Parenthood's "Entre Nosotros" program, a peer education project, actively distributes health information in a neighbor-to-neighbor approach.

"We have a very large population we reach through volunteers through our 'promotora' program," Hearn said. "Rather than using educational videos, we use flip charts and visual aids, because it can be done much easier in English or Spanish. We can present the information in the language best for that group."

Subtle differences in various dialects of Spanish - Cuban, Puerto Rican, Tejano - mean information must be geared toward a specific community.

"The problem is not just having information in Spanish, but whose Spanish," Hearn said. "One Spanish does not fit all."

Garza agreed.

"Naturally, it is very important that we have Spanish language health information, but it has to be appropriate to the area," Garza said.

The publication of even more Spanish-language health education materials is on the horizon.

The Surgeon General's National Hispanic/Latino Health Initiative program, called TODOS, "Todos Organizados Diligentemente Ofreciendo Solidaridad," is aimed at creating strategies to better serve the health education needs of the Hispanic community.

In a compendium of priority recommendations, the TODOS program outlined the need to "include culturally sensitive and competent Spanish-language components in all health education campaigns" sponsored by the Department of Health and Human Services.

Additionally, TODOS affirmed the need to integrate community health workers into health education programming, and establish a mentorship program for community interventions.

The additional information may save lives, and local agencies are willing to provide it, they say.

"One of the things we try to do is make our services fit the community, rather than have the community fit our services," McElroy said. "When they feel more comfortable with information in Spanish, then it becomes our job to get it done."

Bonnie brings freshness to stale sitcom lineup

Bonnie Hunt (right) stars as Bonnie Kelly, a small-town reporter struggling to make it in a busy Chicago television station, and Holly Wortell portrays her best friend and the newsroom's hair and makeup person in Bonnie. This CBS sitcom airs Sundays.

By Amy Hibbert
eTVData Features Syndicate

CBS brings a breath of fresh air to a stale television schedule filled with coffee shops, couches and twentysomethings.

And the network has managed to do this with one Sunday show: Bonnie.

The sitcom, which debuted last fall, does have a coffee man who sells the hot liquid to the staff in the Chicago newsroom where the show is based. And Bonnie Kelly (Bonnie Hunt), the reporter around whom the show revolves, has a couch in her apartment. But that's where the similarities end.

This show about a reporter and the people in her life is filmed from start to finish in real time with no cuts or edits. It's like a play, only viewers don't have to pay $65 a ticket.

"We do it very much like The Honeymooners and The Dick Van Dyke Show," Hunt says. "We do each episode straight in an hour, without any retakes, in front of the audience as if we were live. So all the mistakes stay in."

Hunt says the technique gives the feeling of a theatrical performance.

"You can't replace that momentum, that joy, of a live performance."

The format also highlights the actors' improvisational talents if someone forgets a line or a door sticks. Hunt, who likes to ad lib, gets to do it each week when her character literally takes to the streets to cover a story.

"We get the newspapers from Chicago sent to us here in L.A. We look at what's happening, or we think of things we'd like to see on the news," Hunt explains. "Then I hit the streets and see what happens."

Those interviewed are real people, and none of the responses are scripted. This often produces hilarious results, the kind that have proved successful for shows like Real People and Candid Camera.

Any laughs Hunt's show produces are actual audience responses, since she doesn't believe in using laugh tracks, which many sitcoms use today.

"I think if a joke earns a laugh, fine, and if it doesn't, it didn't. If you look at The Honeymooners or The Dick Van Dyke Show, these had live audiences responding to the show. You'll see entire scenes without a laugh that are entertaining and funny, but the people are listening.

"I have microphones in the audience that record the actual response of the audience, and we don't change it an ounce before it hits the air."

Hunt believes the cast and crew's teamwork makes the jokes successful.

"Everybody's creative investment in the show is equal," Hunt says. "You're only as good as the people around you, and these people make me look good every week."

An alumna of the Second City comedy troupe, Hunt is joined in this series by Holly Wortell, Tom Virtue and Don Lake. Janet Carroll and Mark Derwin also star.

One name Hunt wishes was on the cast list is the late Audrey Meadows.

"In my heart, I wanted Audrey Meadows to play my mother. She played my mother on Davis Rules, and I never met a classier, funnier, more talented person in all my life."

Though the show struggled last fall, Hunt says it has a fighting chance in its new time slot after Cybill.

And if it doesn't succeed, she is still happy with the program that has been created.

"I'm proud of this show, whether it does well or not. I've been very fortunate and I've stood by what I really wanted to do. And in failure, there's still a little bit of success."

TRIVIA

Duke Ellington's hit "Things Ain't What They Used to Be" was written by his son, Mercer, at the last minute before a recording session.

Shelly Fabares (Coach) and her aunt, Nanette Fabray, were both regulars for several seasons on One Day at a Time.

NBC's hit Friends could have been titled The Out-of-Towners, of the ensemble cast, only David Schwimmer is a native New Yorker.

Christine Lahti, who plays Dr. Kate Austin on CBS' medical drama Chicago Hope, is the daughter of a surgeon.

The Israelites' Exodus from Egypt, described in the Bible, occurred fewer than 60 years before Troy fell to the Greeks in 1193 B.C.

Television chef Jacques Pepin was the personal chef to three French heads of state. He was hired away by the Howard Johnson Company.

More than 9,000 kilometers long, Australia's "dingofence" is the world's longest man-made structure. It was built to aid sheep ranchers.

The three highest-rated series of the 1990s are all comedies: Cheers (1990-91), Roseanne (1992) and Home Improvement (1993-94).

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS
MARCH 31	Al Gore, 45th vice-president
APRIL 1	Lon Chaney, Actor
APRIL 2	Marvin Gaye, Singer/composer
APRIL 3	Marlon Brando, Actor
APRIL 4	Muddy Waters, Singer/guitarist
APRIL 5	Gregory Peck, Actor
APRIL 6	Merle Haggard, Country Performer

ARIES -- March 21/April 20
A short and sweet visit from family brightens the week — and makes for some interesting moments, too. Keep opinions to yourself if you see conflict between loved ones. Take the advice of an older and wiser friend on Thursday. A new challenge piques your interest on Friday.

TAURUS -- April 21/May 21
Learn to delegate responsibility or you could find yourself overworked and underappreciated. Take the time to share your skill and expertise with someone who wants to grow and learn. Although it may take some time and patience at first, it will prove to be a very worthwhile investment.

GEMINI -- May 22/June 21
A subtle reminder of the past will put things into perspective on Tuesday. If you're a parent, you'll find that motivation — rather than punishment — is a positive tool for discipline. A writing project will get your creative juices flowing. Don't be afraid to fully express yourself. Think positively.

CANCER -- June 22/July 22
A bit of good luck plus your natural-born talents will lead you to a very exciting opportunity this week. You'll have reason to feel good about your future. If you're thinking of taking a summer vacation, now may be the time to start planning. Remember, the early planner catches the bargains!

LEO -- July 23/August 23
If you've been feeling disillusioned about your current situation, it may be time to step back and take a look at the big picture. You may find that you're better off than you realized. A weekend getaway may be all that you need to recharge your batteries. Don't be afraid to splurge a little.

VIRGO -- Aug 24/Sept 22
Put your perfectionistic side on the back burner and have some fun for a change. Let loose and allow the care-free you take over. A loved one wants your attention, so be sure to give some extra tender-loving care. Do something special to show your affection. A friend asks a favor.

LIBRA -- Sept 23/Oct 23
Being truly fair is one of Libra's greatest attributes, but this week you may be forced to take sides. Let the saying "blood is thicker than water," or "family comes first," be your guide. On Wednesday, something for which you've been waiting a long time will finally arrive. Keep fitness at the top of your priority list this week.

SCORPIO -- Oct 24/Nov 22
Flirting with an old flame could be like playing with fire — especially if you've been burned by this person before. Remember, all actions have consequences. A new friend will be the source of inspiration. You'll realize that your potential is only as limited as you choose it to be.

SAGITTARIUS -- Nov 23/Dec 21
A problem won't disappear by simply wishing it away. You'll have to take some action. Think it through and make moves toward positive change. Being realistic may not be much fun, but it's how you make progress. Try it. You may actually like your serious side.

CAPRICORN -- Dec 22/Jan 20
Before you have to get your feet surgically removed from your mouth, think before you speak. Offending others comes easily to the blunt Capricorn, but this time you may go too far. Your sharp wit is hysterical to some people, but many others just don't understand the humor.

AQUARIUS -- Jan 21/Feb 18
Learn to say "no." Aquarius, or you will put yourself in an uncomfortable position later on. You're a do-gooder, but you don't have to keep up that angelic reputation. It's okay to be selfish once in a while. Why not treat yourself to something special for a change. Live it up!

PISCES -- Feb 19/March 20
Staying focused on the job at hand is of utmost importance. Although social activities may be a great temptation, the rewards of hard work will certainly make up for lost playtime. You'll have plenty of opportunities to let loose later on in the month. A weird coincidence occurs Wednesday.

George Gershwin Remembered profiles the well-known composer who created such hit songs as "Someone to Watch Over Me" and "Embraceable You." It premieres Saturday on A&E Network.

HIGHLIGHTS

Pat O'Brien is the studio host for CBS' coverage of college basketball's men's NCAA Tournament Championship, airing Monday. The women's final airs Sunday on ESPN.

CBS, ESPN cover Final Two and Two

By Suzanne Gill
eTVData Features Syndicate

After more than three weeks of competition, it all comes down to this: the NCAA men's and women's basketball championship games.

From the original fields of 64 qualifying teams, to the Sweet Sixteens and the Final Fours, the men's and women's tournaments hold fans' attention for four weekends in March, as winter melts into spring and favorites evaporate right along with also-rans.

Being college students, these NCAA athletes are no doubt familiar with the literary climax and denouement. But it's more likely they learned them on the basketball court than by reading Jane Austen. For three weeks, hundreds of them have been up close and personal with the highs and lows of college basketball's elimination sweepstakes, and four teams - two men's and two women's - are still standing.

On Sunday, March 31, in Charlotte, N.C., for the women, and Monday, April 1 at The Meadowlands in New Jersey for the men, the game clocks begin counting down the end to another electrifying season. The women's game airs on ESPN, the men's on CBS.

Mark Pope, a Kentucky Wildcat whose talented team was defeated in regional championship games in 1993 and 1995, sums it up: "Your past performance has nothing to do with the game at hand. You can throw it down the drain in 40 minutes."

The year of sweat and agony, along with many college dreams of glory, comes down to 40 minutes on the clock. A new national champion has less than an hour to emerge, and the losing team has the remaining college semester to recover.

For those experiencing March Madness withdrawal, CBS presents the TV movie Never Give Up: The Jimmy V Story, Tuesday, April 2. Anthony LaPaglia stars as Jim Valvano, coach of the North Carolina State Wolfpack.

Valvano's team upset the 1983 Houston Cougars to win the NCAA crown, but cancer and an NCAA investigation hit him hard in 1990. Ashley Crow co-stars as Valvano's wife, Pam.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
eTVData Features Syndicate

Q: Please give me some biographical information on Colin Firth from the A&E Network miniseries Pride and Prejudice. What are some other films I can see him in? -S.R., Honolulu, Hawaii.

Colin Firth

A: A&E had scant information on Firth and his radiant co-star, Jennifer Ehle, who both live in London.

Firth, who generally shuns publicity, was born in England on Sept. 10, 1960. Long recognized by critics for his work, he is prominently featured in Valmont (the same story as Dangerous Liaisons), Apartment Zero, Hostages, Playmaker, the 1988 TV remake of The Secret Garden and the 1995 sleeper hit Circle of Friends.

For others who asked, Ehle (pronounced "eely") is best known for stage work in her native England, but the newly converted may want to seek out a video of the 1993 Beatles bio Backbeat, in which she has a featured role. She also played the Empress Zita in a 1992 episode of The Young Indiana Jones Chronicles.

She is the daughter of former Oscar nominee Rosemary Harris (Tom & Viv) and novelist John Ehle.

Q: Please clear this up: My friends say Dame Edna Everage on Bravo is a male impersonator. I say, "No way!" Who is right? -H. Jones, Kelowna, British Columbia, Canada.

A: If they said "male impersonator," then you have them on a technicality. But yes, possums, Dame Edna is a cross-dressing creation of the Australian comic Barry Humphries. If you haven't read "her" autobiography, My Gorgeous Life, look for it. It's a stitch.

Q: What show was Drew Carey in before his current ABC sitcom? I know his character was in an office with another man. -Patricia Robertson, Whitehouse, Ohio.

A: Carey co-starred with fellow stand-up comic John Caponera in the 1994 NBC sitcom The Good Life.

Q: Why did Scott Baio leave Diagnosis Murder? And is the actress playing Amanda pregnant in real life? -J.B. Cash, Cerritos, Calif.

A: Baio simply wanted to move on to other offers (you may have seen him recently as a guest on Can't Hurry Love). Victoria Rowell, who plays Amanda, recently had a baby.

Q: We miss Buck on Married... With Children. What happened to him? -Jennifer Small, Jackson, Mich.

A: Buck, who recently was featured in the TBS special Hollywood's Amazing Animal Actors, turns 13 on April 27 - and his trainer, Steven Ritt, says the average longevity for his breed, the French briard, is 10-12 years. The senior citizen lives the canine life of Riley these days on a five-acre mountaintop ranch in California with Ritt and his Married... successor, Lucky.

The Jungle Book ★★★ (1942) Sabu, Joseph Calleia. A boy raised by wolves in the jungles of India calls upon his animal friends to fend off greedy fortune hunters. 2:00. April 2 4am.

K
The Kidnapping of Baby John Doe ★★½ (1986) Jayne Eastwood, Geoffrey Bowes. A nurse and a surgeon take action when a critically ill baby's parents decide against a possible life-saving operation. 2:00. April 4 8pm.

King David ★★½ (1985) Richard Gere, Alice Krige. Bruce Beresford's saga of the trials and tribulations of the warrior who became the second King of Israel. 2:00. April 5 12am.

L
The Legend of Alfred Packer ★★½ (1980) Patrick Dray, Ron Haines. Based on the true story of a man's struggle to survive a bitter blizzard in the Rocky Mountains. 2:00. April 2 2am.

The Legend of Billie Jean ★★ (1985) Helen Slater, Peter Coyote. Circumstances surrounding an accidental shooting turn a teen-ager and her friends into fugitives and media heroes. 2:00. April 6 2am.

Lightning in a Bottle (1994) Lynda Carter, Dee Wallace Stone. A woman investigates a tragic auto accident that caused her amnesia and left a man and child dead. 2:00. March 31 5pm.

The Little Princess ★★½ (1939) Shirley Temple, Richard Greene. A small girl escapes the clutches of a cruel boarding school mistress to search for her soldier father. 2:00. April 6 8am.

Betsy Brantley and Daniel Hugh Kelly star as parents who dream of a house as big as an ark to hold their eight adopted children and numerous pets in Second Noah, airing Mondays on ABC.

HIGHLIGHTS

Drama based on historical fact keeps viewers tuned in

Louis Gossett, Jr., Rachael Crawford, Kate Nelligan and Michael Jai White in "Captive Heart: The James Mink Story"

Oscar and Emmy winner Louis Gossett, Jr. plays the title role in the CBS presentation of "Captive Heart: The James Mink Story," airing Sunday, April 14 at 8:00 pm.

Gossett on 'Captive Heart' -- "I would like for the viewers to be entertained. I'd like what happened to me when I first read this script to happen to them when they watch it. I sat there, and as I read the words I found myself saying over and over again -- 'Wow!'"

"I would also want them to take some sense of hope from it. Even when things look just horrible, you shouldn't give up. If you have inner strength -- and believe that, ultimately, decency will prevail -- then you're going to be alright," Gossett adds.

James Mink (Louis Gossett, Jr) is the very picture of propriety and prosperity in 1852 Toronto. He owns and operates a highly successful hotel and livery service. Local politicians are urging the millionaire businessman to run for office. He's married to the beautiful Elizabeth (Kate Nelligan) a mail-order bride from Ireland. Their 17-year-old daughter Mary (Rachel Crawford) would be a real "catch" for the most eligible (and rich) of Toronto's bachelors.

What's unusual about this picture? James Mink is black.

Mary wants to go to college, and become a teacher. Her father is concerned about her "liability" (color), he wants her to get married -- the sooner the better. Through a newspaper advertisement, he offers $10,000 dowry to the successful candidate for a husband.

James believes he's found the perfect mate for his daughter -- William Johnson (Peter Outerbridge) he's handsome, sophisticated and rich, even Mary is taken with him and decides to abandon her college.

But William is not all what he seems. In discovering the awful truth that her beloved William is a brutal slave trader, Mary is sold to a Virginia plantation owner, and meets Elroi (Michael Jai White) the son of Indigo (Ruby Dee) both who have lived on the plantation as slaves their entire lives.

Mary eventually gets word to her parents up north. Shocked, they set out on a hazardous journey to attempt a daring rescue. As "cover," while traveling through the South, James Mink plays the humiliating role of slave to his white wife.

According to Louis Gossett, Jr., "For an actor, James Mink is what we call a steak and potatoes role. It's great for an actor to have a role that features internal conflict -- and James Mink is the living embodiment of internal conflict."

Gossett adds, "Even if this story wasn't based on historical fact, I think that it would be unforgettable."

Gossett continues, "This movie reminds us -- and occasionally we do need to be reminded -- what a sick and sorry institution slavery was. But it also reminds us how something so terribly negative has reversed itself. Out of slavery came an enormous number of wonderful people, descendants of slaves and slaveholders."

He adds, "As Americans of African descent, we've gotten stronger -- and the descendents of the slaveholders are now our next-door neighbors."

"Of course, there are still problems. There's still friction. And people continue to have to fight -- but the battlefields are the schoolroom and the workplace, where persons of color are trying to learn and trying to achieve equality of opportunity." Gossett concludes, "But if we keep moving forward, if we keep the positive impetus, we'll be alright." -- I think of what Martin Luther King said: 'Either we'll survive in this world as brothers and sisters, or we'll die as fools.'

"Captive Heart: The James Mink Story," airs on Sunday, April 14 at 8:00 pm on CBS.

April brings showers of new programs to FAM

Dean Martin and Raquel Welch in "Bandolero!" on The Family Channel

The Family Channel is one of the nation's largest advertiser-supported, basic cable television networks, reaching more than 67 percent of all television households.

Starting in April FAM has many great shows to choose from to suit even the most selective of viewers.

A new two-hour talk show offers some positive answers to dilemmas facing today's families. "Home & Family," a live, interactive talk show with Cristina Ferrare (ABC-TV's "The Home Show"), debuts April 1 on FAM. Broadcast live from Universal Studios in Hollywood, the show airs Monday - Friday, 12:00 noon to 2:00 pm, and has in-depth segments in areas such as relationships and behavior; health and nutrition; finance; home maintenance; and cooking. To maintain an up-to-date dialogue with its viewers and understand their needs, the show is fully interactive with viewer call-ins, faxes and a web page.

Lions and tigers and bears...as well as elephants, chimpanzees, dogs, clowns and acrobats...perform and entertain for the young and the young at heart. Comedy legend Dick Van Dyke and renowned animal trainer Gunther Gebel-Williams host two special editions of "The Greatest Show on Earth," airing April 2 and 3 at 5:00 pm.

Audiences whose viewing experiences began after the 1960s will have the opportunity to experience the magic of Audrey Hepburn, the screen icon who mesmerized earlier generations, when two of her best films are aired on FAM for the first time. Starting April 14 at 1:00 pm, Hepburn's first television movie, "Love Among Thieves," where she steals priceless Faberge eggs as ransom for her kidnapped fiance. Then, in "Two for the Road" on April 28 at 4:00 pm, she shares the screen with a dashing Albert Finney as the two reminisce about their 12-year marriage during an intercontinental road trip.

Named the fastest growing form of popular music by the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal in 1995, Christian music has experienced a metamorphosis to include an array of music styles including...heavy metal/hard rock, alternative, rap/hip hop, pop, rock, and urban contemporary, as well as inspirational, country and traditional gospel. The Family Channel celebrates a new generation of Christian and gospel musicians on April 25 at 8:00 pm when "The 27th Annual Dove Awards" premieres to the largest potential audience in the show's history. Grammy and Dove Award-winner Michael W. Smith hosts the ceremony live from the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, TN.

Tune in to James Stewart and Dean Martin, two of Hollywood's best-loved actors, as outlaws who kidnap a woman, Raquel Welch, and flee to Mexico in "Bandolero," airing April 20, at 7:00 pm.

More FAM movies worth tuning in to are... "American Dreamer," starring JoBeth Williams, as a housewife who wins a trip to Paris and comes to believe she's the heroine of a series of adventure thrillers.

And based on the hit Broadway musical, "Annie," starring Carol Burnett and Albert Finney.

"A Bridge Too Far," with Sean Connery, Robert Redford and James Cann, in a recreation of the most disastrous battles of WWII.

Hallmark's "A Season of Hope," starring JoBeth Williams and Ralph Waite. On a picture-perfect lemon farm in the rolling hills of America, the Hackett family is on the verge of falling apart...until the grandfather unexpectedly arrives at the farm.

Some movie classics to catch are "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," starring Dick Van Dyke, "A Farewell to Arms," with Rock Hudson, "The Great Escape," starring James Garner, and "Follow That Dream," with Elvis Presley.

Alleen Quirn stars in the Broadway hit, "Annie" comin in April on FAM

SOAP TALK

AW theme song as popular as ever

By Candace Havens
eTVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: My mom and I love the theme song of Another World. Could you please tell us who sings it and where we can find it? --The Mitchells in South Carolina.

Dear Reader: It's amazing how many letters I've received about the show's theme song. Ironically, there are plans to change the show's opening tune in the near future.

The Another World theme is sung by country stars Crystal Gayle and Gary Morris.

It is available on a variety of albums: Gary Morris' Greatest Hits, Soaps' Greatest Love Themes Volume 2 and Favorite Country Duets.

Dear Candace: I'm confused about the parentage of Sami (Alison Sweeney) and Carrie (Christie Clark) on Days of Our Lives.

Is Marlana (Deidre Hall) their mother? Is Roman (Wayne Northrop) their father? --Pat in Oklahoma.

Dear Reader: Marlana and Roman are the parents of Sami and her twin, Eric. Roman and Anna Dimera (Leann Hunley) are the parents of Carrie. Marlana is Carrie's stepmother.

Marlana has another daughter, Beile, by John Black (Drake Hogestyn).

Dear Candace: The actor who plays Scott on As the World Turns looks familiar. I'm sure I've seen him on other soap operas or nighttime television shows. Where can I write to him? --R.S. in Lufkin, Texas.

Dear Reader: The talented Doug Wert has been on several shows, so it is no wonder his face seems familiar to you.

Wert spent a good portion of the late 1980s as Wade Coleman on One Life to Live. He did a three-month stint as Jeff Reeves on The Young and the Restless.

He has appeared many times in guest roles on prime time series. His films include The Assassination Game and Dracula Rising.

You can write to Wert c/o As the World Turns, CBS-TV, 51 West 52nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10019.
