Erasing exemptions on sales, business taxes being studied

AUSTIN (AP) - After weeks of considering the elimination of many exemptions to the state's sales and business taxes, a House committee is ready to hear why they shouldn't. The House Select Committee on Revenue and Public Education is looking for ways to increase the state's share of funding for public schools.

That would lower the amount local school districts pay, allowing the state to force local school districts to lower and keep down their property tax rates. To pay for a higher state share of the cost, committee members are considering the elimination of billions of dollars in exemptions to the current sales tax and the current business franchise tax.

The committee is scheduled to hear public testimony from people who benefit from the exemptions on Monday and Tuesday. "If they don't like the removal of their exemptions, they should be ready to give us alternative revenues," said Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, and chairman of the committee.

"There might be those people who show up and say this is why we're doing this (exemption), and it's a good reason, so we'll take it off" of the list of exemptions that could be eliminated, he said. Elimination of sales tax exemptions for health care services, food and medicine is not being considered.

funding of schools - and lower local school property taxes.

Bush this week said he considered many other options, but declined to say why he chose his proposal over eliminating tax exemptions.

House committee members have said they want to find another way to raise the money - and maybe more - without creating a new business tax.

But they agree with the governor that everyone should be paying some share of the cost to educate Texas students and that all businesses, regardless of how they are structured, should pay, as well.

An informal plan being considered by the committee would lower residential property taxes to 50 cents per $100 value and lower business property taxes to $1 per $100 of value. The state would collect the business property taxes and divide it in some way among schools.

The committee also is considering a plan for changing the way the state distributes the money it contributes to education. Public testimony on that will likely come before the end of the month.

Advancing to state
Hereford Junior High School seventh-grader Dusty Clark has advanced to the state level of the National Geography Bee. The contest will be April 4 at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. Clark is the son of Robert and Darla Clark.

Dusty prepares for State Geography Bee

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer
Seventh-grader Dusty Clark is cracking the books in preparation for the state-level competition of the National Geography Bee. Clark will participate in the State Geography Bee April 4 at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. Clark is the son of Robert and Darla Clark. His sponsor is Carolyn Waters, an HJH history teacher. He was the top participant in the school-level Geography Bee, where students answered oral questions on geography. Also placing were Michelle Bernhardt, second; and Aaron Brock, third. Kody Lewis was the student coach. The school-level bee was the first round of the ninth annual National Geography Bee. Clark then took a written test. He was one of the top 100 scorers in the state and territory. So, he will advance to the state Geography Bee. One winner from each state and territory will advance to the national competition, which will be May 27-28 at the National Geographic Society headquarters in Washington, D.C. The National Geographic Society will provide an all-expenses-paid trip (See GEOGRAPHY, Page 2A)

Auction proceeds will buy ventilator

The Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation board this week made plans for a Celebrity Auction and announced that proceeds of the fundraiser will be used to purchase a state-of-the-art ventilator for use by EMS and Hereford Regional Medical Center. The foundation will also use the proceeds to continue its scholarship program, according to Dr. Nadir Khuri, board president. The auction, the second to be sponsored by DSHCF, is scheduled May 10 in the HISD administration building. At the event, dinner will be served and participants will be able to view items and make bids on "silent auction" items. Dinner will be served, followed by the live auction. Dr. Khuri pointed out that the ventilator is a portable life-saving device which can be used in the EMS ambulance, as well as a backup for use in the hospital. Joe Hamby, EMS director, said the ventilator would be a vital and welcome addition to the emergency medical system. "The unit frees up one or two paramedics to perform other duties," said Hamby. He said the units were very compact and weigh only 13 pounds. It can easily be moved into the hospital's emergency room or elsewhere in the hospital, Hamby pointed out. It can be used on neonatal as well as adult patients. The foundation has been presenting four $500 scholarships each year - two to hospital personnel pursuing additional medical training, and two to high school students who have been accepted into an ancillary medical program. The awards are for such fields as lab technician, X-ray, respiratory therapy, physical therapy and nursing. Students must display a strong commitment to returning to work in the community after completion of studies. Applications for high school students may be obtained from the counselor. Others should write the DSHCF at Box 1858, or call 364-2141 and ask for the health care foundation (See VENTILATOR, Page 2A)

'Vial of Life' program can save time, patients' lives

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher
Members of Hereford's Emergency Medical System don't just sit around twiddling their thumbs while waiting for an ambulance call. Hereford Regional Medical Center and the EMS is now updating the Vial of Life program, and it can be a time saver - as well as a life saver for patients with chronic health problems. The vial is a brown bottle where a patient's medical history and other information can be stored, then placed in the refrigerator. In case of an emergency call, whether it's the police or EMS, the vial of life can help to identify the patient's medical history, medications being taken, and allergies. If the person in trouble can't remember information, or they are unconscious, the emergency crew will look for the vial in the refrigerator. Some people are already signed up for the program, and they have been sent letters with response cards asking for updated information. Information in the plastic vial can include the person's name, Social Security number, date of birth, name of the family physician, medications, chronic medical conditions, and - if desired - a Do Not Resuscitate directive. The Vial of Life program is sponsored by and financed by three local physicians - Doctors Gerald Payne, Duffy McBrayer and Howard Johnson. It is free of charge to those who wish to participate. HRMC and EMS recently announced plans for the Out of Hospital: Do Not Resuscitate order. Forms are now available from local doctors. The DNR provides terminally ill persons with the option of declining some processes of resuscitation, when the person is unable to speak for themselves. EMS also works with the WorkSmart program, the hospital's home health care department, the school district, and the police and fire departments. "EMS has come a long way in Hereford," said Joe Hamby, director. "We are one of the few EMS departments in the Panhandle, and other rural areas, that have a Mobile Intensive Care Unit (MICU)," said Hamby. He said a MICU ensures that a paramedic will be on every ambulance call. "We have a true MICU program and we stay busy, probably ranking second only to Amarillo in the Panhandle." He said the EMS was able to start a paramedic course here because of a grant provided by the Texas Health Department, as well as contributions from the Deaf Smith Health Care Foundation and individuals. Hamby said the local EMS has grown in the past year. They now have about 20 people and others are in training. He thinks 95 percent of the system's crew will be paramedics by the end of summer. Besides the other projects, EMS also works with ENCARE (Emergency Nurses Cancel Alcohol Related Emergencies). Rosemary Barrett is the regional coordinator of the nationally-recognized program. "We put in a lot of hours, said Hamby, but the work in helping save lives is so rewarding that I always think, 'Gee, I'm getting paid for this.'"

Tree o' green
The Festival of Trees lasts year-round at Shirley Intermediate School. Students decorated a Christmas tree, which was sold in the Festival of Trees in December. Then, the tree was donated to the school. Students decorate the tree according to the different holiday seasons. Here, from left, music teacher Jane Gulley, Mariza Crox, Kristin Paetzold and Hope Fowler decorate the tree for St. Patrick's Day.

HISD posts agenda

The Hereford Independent School District trustees will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the HISD board room. Trustees will take action on the election of ESC board of directors, an instruction policy and the Aikman Primary School construction project. Trustees will discuss resolution on the hiring of personnel. The Lady Whiteface volleyball team and the Dyslexia Spelling Bee state participants will be recognized at the meeting.

Hospital board to meet

Directors of Deaf Smith County Hospital District will hold a regular board meeting Tuesday at Hereford Regional Medical Center. The meeting, which starts at 6:30 p.m., includes the following agenda subjects: Summary of the Joint Conference Committee meeting by President Mal Manchec; information on a board training session; a presentation from Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce; insurance committee update; a managed care summary from Administrator Jim Robinson; and the usual operations and financial reports. A closed session is scheduled to discuss acquisition of property.

Leta Kaul, longtime teacher, dies Saturday

Leta A. Kaul, 92, longtime Hereford resident, 128 Ave. J., and retired school teacher, died at 12:28 a.m. Saturday. She had been at Hereford Care Center several days.

Funeral services are scheduled Tuesday at 10 a.m., site pending, with Rev. Dorman Duggan, pastor of Community Church, and Rev. Morris Means, former pastor, officiating. Burial will be in West Park Cemetery under direction of Gililand-Watson Funeral Home.

Mrs. Kaul came to Deaf Smith County in 1934, two days after her marriage to Merlin C. Kaul in Sabetha, Kan. She was a teacher and returned to the classroom in 1945, spending the next 47 years in education. She attended Emporia State College and UCLA before earning a degree at West Texas State.

She and her husband and two sons experienced the introduction of electricity, irrigation, a mail route, and telephone service. Prior to World War II, she wrote a column for The Hereford Brand called "Here and There." She was here and there, because she had no phone and collected her news by driving house to house.

She compiled a scrapbook of events in the Westway community and later donated them to Deaf Smith County Library. She played the piano for church and community events.

She was a member of Hereford Study Club, the Extension Club, Church Women United, Daughters of the American Revolution, the Business and Professional Women's Club, and she served as president of almost every organization of which she was a member.

She was recognized as KPAN's Pioneer of the Year in 1993.

Survivors include two sons, Walter "Bussy" Kaul of Hereford and Larry Kaul of Miami; two brothers, Harold Stoner of Sabetha, Kan., and Oren Stoner of Coffeyville, Kan.; three grandsons and four great-grandsons.

The family requests memorials be to the Harrington Cancer Center or Hereford Senior Citizens.

Domingo Garza, 67, of Olton, died Friday. His sister, Isabel Cervantez resides in Hereford.

Rosary was recited at 7:30 p.m. Friday in St. Mary Magdalene Catholic Church in Earth. Services were at 2 p.m. Saturday in St. Mary Magdalene Catholic Church with the Rev. Joe Augustine officiating. Burial was in Earth Memorial Cemetery by Parsons-Ellis Funeral Home of Earth. Mr. Garza was born in Runge. He had been a resident of Olton since 1953, moving from Runge. He was a farmer and a Catholic.

Survivors include two sisters, Isabel Cervantez of Hereford and Julia Garza of Runge; and a brother, Hilario Garza of Springlake.

Three directors will be elected at WTRT annual meet Tuesday

West Texas Rural Telephone Cooperative members will elect a Deaf Smith County director and two directors from Parmer County during their 43rd annual meeting Tuesday at the Hereford Bull Barn.

The annual meeting will begin with registration and serving of a buffet-style barbecue supper at 6 p.m. Drawings for door prizes valued at more than $1,000 will be held. Grand prize will be a beef certificate for $200.

Thomas Hyer, WTRT manager, will report on the financial status of the co-op during a business session set to begin at 7 p.m.

Parmer County board candidates are Charles Myers, incumbent who is unopposed for the Hub exchange seat, and incumbent Floyd Schueler and John Mars for the Parmer exchange seat.

Incumbent Dick Fellers and Lawrence Brorman are director candidates for the Dawn exchange seat.

Myers, a grain and cotton farmer in Parmer County, has represented the Hub exchange on the WTRT board since 1973. He has held the board offices of president, vice president and secretary-treasurer. During his board tenure, Myers has served on and chaired the Program Planning Committee of the National Telephone Co-Op Association, and has also served on the Economic Development and Finance committees of the NTCA. He has also served on the board of the Parmer County Farm Bureau.

Schueler has served the Parmer exchange as director since 1985 and is a past secretary-treasurer. A Parmer County native, he is engaged in farming near Friona. He has also served as a member and officer of the Rhea/Hollene Volunteer Fire Department.

Mars, 48, is a Parmer County grain, cotton and livestock farmer. He grew up near the Black community and is a graduate of Hereford High School. He earned a degree in agriculture business from West Texas State. He and his wife, Evelyn, who is employed by Parmer County Implement Co., have two daughters and a son, and two grandchildren.

Mars is a member of the Friona Chamber of Commerce Ambassadors, and has served as Friona Chamber president. He is active in the American Heart Association and has served as Master of the Masonic Lodge in Friona. The Mars are members of the Friona United Methodist Church, where he serves on the administrative board, the board of trustees, and the finance committee.

Fellers, a grain, sugar beet and livestock farmer in association with his wife, Pam, and sons - Randy and Will - first joined the board as Dawn director in 1984. He has held board offices including president, vice president and secretary. Fellers has served as a board member of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers and is a member of the board at First State Bank of Happy.

Brorman, 44, a crop and livestock farmer northeast of Hereford, is a longtime WTRT member on the Dawn exchange. A 1970 graduate of Hereford High School, he and his wife, Jaime, are the parents of two sons, Gary, 6, and Jens, 3.

The Brormans are members of St. Anthony's Church in Hereford. Lawrence is a past Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus in Hereford and has chaired fundraising events. He has also worked in fund raisers for St. Anthony's Church.

GTECH, Linares reportedly agree to mediation

DALLAS (AP) - GTECH Corp. and ousted lottery director Nora Linares have reportedly agreed to mediation in order to settle a dispute.

Linares' lawyers blame GTECH, the state's prime lottery contractor, for her dismissal in January and have said they are prepared to sue the company for damages.

People familiar with the negotiations told The Dallas Morning News that both parties were headed for mediation. Buck Wood, one of Ms. Linares' lawyers, confirmed the reports.

"As you know, we stated that we intended to file a lawsuit," he said. "This has resulted in mediation."

He would not provide further details.

GTECH spokesman Bob Rendine wouldn't confirm or deny that the company had agreed to mediation. Ms. Linares was fired by the Texas Lottery Commission in January.

Attorneys for Ms. Linares say GTECH compromised her when they hired her boyfriend, Mike Moeller, as a $6,000-a-month consultant in New Mexico in 1992 without her knowledge.

Moeller, a former agriculture commissioner, was under federal indictment at the time.

Ms. Linares, who earned $82,687-a-year in her position with the Texas

Lottery, said she didn't know Moeller worked for GTECH until last November when she was questioned by reporters about his GTECH job.

GTECH officials have said Moeller was hired without their knowledge by an "errant" employee, J. David Smith, former national sales manager.

Last October, Smith was convicted by a Newark, NJ federal jury of taking kickbacks from political consultants he hired to assist GTECH in New Jersey.

Ms. Linares initially sued lottery commissioners after she was fired, saying she was dismissed for political reasons.

GEOGRAPHY

Toxic waste, or treasure? Andrews County bets the latter as waste dump site opens

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

ANDREWS, Texas (AP) - Pumpjacks, tanker trucks and "poison gas" warning signs are fixtures on the desolate landscape of western Andrews County, where people understand that a healthy economy isn't always pretty.

Drawing oil and gas from beneath the loam doesn't pay what it used to, so residents seem virtually unanimous in using their once profitable geology in another way: storage of hazardous and radioactive wastes.

"It seems to have a good future here," said Ronny Alaniz, a deputy who recently joined a few hundred other residents at a barbecue thrown at Waste Control Specialists' new facility near the New Mexico line. "This is not a temporary setup. It's going to be here forever."

Since wildcatters first descended upon West Texas in the 1920s, Andrews County has been the nation's most prolific oil producing county at more than 3 billion total barrels. Despite the boom times, oil's unpredictability has sent officials looking to diversify for more than a quarter century.

Pasadena-based WCS answered the call.

The plant began accepting hazardous waste last month from manufacturers in the United States and Mexico. The 1,333-acre facility will process the waste into a dry material, then bury it in four planned pits.

The dirt-like end product is less toxic than much of what lies in an average city dump, customer service manager Gary Grissom said.

WCS handles toxic materials such as contaminated soils related to petroleum production. The company also has applied to the U.S. Department of Energy to treat and dispose of low-level radioactive waste produced by about 90 public sites, including the nation's nuclear weapons complex.

Jerry Kirkwood, who works at the government's Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in Carlsbad, N.M., had a new job on his mind as he and his family ate barbecue and listened to country music at WCS's February open house.

"Red-light bells go off when you talk about radioactive waste," he said. "They've got to educate people that they're not going to glow in the dark."

While WCS officials and politicians mingled with locals inside, a lonely sheriff's deputy kept an eye out for trouble at the gate. Unlike the emotional protests at a similar proposed site in Hudspeth County, 175 miles to the west, not a peep has been heard here.

Most of the county's 14,000 citizens live in Andrews, about 20 miles east of the site. During the state permitting process, not one person said anything negative through two different six-week public comment periods.

WCS's popularity and quick approval enticed Utah-based Envirocare to buy 888 acres nearby and apply for a permit to treat - not store - low-level radioactive waste. Envirocare operates the Salt Lake City-area site where the DOE currently sends 97 percent of such residue.

"The plan is to bring waste in, treat it at the facility and return it to a licensed facility," said Craig Thorley, Envirocare's regional affairs manager. The state health department and Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission must approve Envirocare's permits before it begins construction.

Back in Utah, Envirocare is embroiled in a controversy in which that state's top regulator accepted $600,000 in cash, gold coins and real estate from Khosrow Semnani, the company's owner. If regulators neuter Envirocare, which is under an FBI investigation, then WCS's Andrews County site might become the country's main resting place for federal radioactive waste.

"We've proposed that the DOE look at the facility and do a thorough analysis, and at the same time have an analysis done by (a third-party) oversight team led by Texas Tech," WCS spokesman John Kyte said from his Washington, D.C. office. "We'd hope that at the end of those activities the DOE would then say the site would pass muster and is appropriate for DOE waste."

"We're not seeking to be the only place those wastes go to. We're seeking to have the opportunity to bid for those waste contracts."

Don't bet against WCS's federal application. Every New Mexico and Texas congressman remotely related to the area has backed it vociferously. Former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance is the board chairman and owns an option to buy 25 percent of the company.

If the permitting goes through, West Texas could become the Grand Central Station of nuclear waste. The Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority wants to dump commercial power plant waste near Sierra Blanca, while it appears likely that the Amarillo-area Pantex Plant is destined to store thousands of plutonium cores from dismantled nuclear bombs.

While Sierra Blanca and Pantex have been flashpoints for anti-nuke protests, the only fighting here has been between WCS and Envirocare, who have accused one another of backstabbing and name-calling.

Thorley on WCS's eagerness to store radioactive waste without state regulation: "It's a good policy to give a comfort level to citizens of the state. We're one of the most carefully regulated companies in the state of Utah. I don't know what the (nuclear regulatory) qualifications are at Texas Tech."

Kyte on Envirocare's unannounced land purchase last fall: "If you look at the way in which Envirocare came into Texas, they came in and bought site unseen a piece of land, never met or talked to people in Andrews, then filed an application with TNRCC."

WCS has hired 45 full-time employees here and says it could employ up to 1,000 if its plans for four huge pits, radioactive waste treatment and a research "campus" materialize. Envirocare has done little here except acquire land. Thorley knows his company's low profile here has led people to think that Envirocare arrived simply to make trouble for WCS.

"Our reception has not been quite as warm, but they (WCS) have been talking to those folks for a few years, and we're the new kids on the block and there are rumors we're not really serious," Thorley said. "We are serious, and the only way to overcome those rumors is the passage of time."

Envirocare will begin building its plant as soon as the TDH and TNRCC approve its permits, which Thorley anticipates will be sometime this year. WCS expects to get OK'd by the U.S. Energy Department in May, which would allow it to bid for federal radioactive waste disposal in a few months.

"We have the best site in Texas and perhaps the best site in America," Kyte said. "We're that confident in our judgement."

BIBLE BAPTIST CHURCH

Is there such a thing as the unpardonable sin? Look at Mat 12:31-32. Notice the "world to come" is described throughout both Testaments as the coming Millennial reign of Christ, on the earth (Matt 13:39, 49; Mark 10:30) not Heaven or Hell. Secondly, in Mark 3:30, it is saying that Jesus Christ has an unclean spirit. Mat 26:69-75 is proof that denying Jesus as the Messiah is not the "unpardonable sin." "The unpardonable sin" occurs when Christ was on earth showing His credentials. The only way a person commits the unpardonable sin is not receiving Jesus Christ before they die. (1 John 5:11-12) And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. The roots of our success reach deep into the families of Hereford.

Hereford State Bank grew up here in Hereford, just as many of our customers did.

Perhaps that's why we know so well what you and the Hereford community want and need from a bank — dedication to hard work, the friendly openness that Hereford people expect from a close neighbor, and commitment to our community.

And as novel as it may seem, especially when compared to most banking situations these days, you'll even find a group of businessmen sitting in our boardroom who still have strong local ties to the Hereford business community.

They bring a unique local perspective to our bank — a perspective which has helped Hereford State Bank provide your family, your business and your community with the banking services you need and want.

Yes, it's true. There's no place like home. And here in Hereford, there's no bank like Hereford State Bank.

Pamphlet focuses on freeway driving

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Freeway driving is stressful enough without having another driver cut you off, flash you with bright lights or salute you with a raised middle finger.

The anger these gestures can trigger is called "road rage," according to Whittier psychologist Arnold Nerenberg.

People are literally driving themselves crazy, said the 55-year-old Nerenberg, who wrote about the phenomenon.

"When you talk to people about it, they realize it's a very serious problem," he said. "It distracts the person from driving safely and it endangers the subject, the victim and the innocent bystander."

His pamphlet, "Overcoming Road Rage: The 10-Step Compassion Program," describes how to overcome the anger.

Nerenberg breaks the disorder into two stages.

First, "road annoyance," when drivers react angrily and become frustrated with traffic conditions. They don't act out their anger by screaming or seeking revenge on the road. Their anger simmers inside, waiting to reach the boiling point.

The second stage, "road rage," is triggered when someone is pushed to make an obscene gesture, often tailgating a slower motorist or becoming obsessed with another fast driver.

Nerenberg goes for rides with some of his angrier patients, watching them as they drive and interact with other motorists, counseling them as their hostility escalates.

He said the secret to soothing "road rage" is for motorists to apologize to each other. This is not as easy as it sounds.

"If you get out of your car, the other person might think you are going to attack, and might attack you back or even shoot you," he said.

He is proposing that state motor vehicle departments officially recommend a universal hand sign that means "I'm sorry," much like the left-turn and right-turn signs that are taught in rules-of-the-road guides.

"I think the sign should be placing the palm of the hand upon the forehead," Nerenberg said. "The unspoken meaning would be: 'Ah! I'm sorry!' If drivers would be taught to put their palms to their foreheads after every angry incident on the highway, it would make the roads much safer places."

He said he expects to hear soon whether the American Psychological Association will recognize "road rage" as a psychological disorder.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says you are only young once, but you can be childish all your life.

The Chamber Banquet here Thursday night was a great success, according to all remarks we've heard. The idea of holding a reception immediately after the event to give folks an opportunity to meet with the award winners and speaker was well received.

Congratulations to Lester Wagner on being named as Citizen of the Year. It was a well-deserved honor for a truly unassuming Christian man. Everyone got a chuckle out of Don Cumpton's introduction of guest speaker Josh Davis. He related that Davis was being shown the feedyards here and was worried about all those cows. Where he comes from, cows are out in the pasture eating green forage, so he was worried the cows might be starving.

The decoration of table by local businesses, which started last year, seems to be a big hit. Many people came to the banquet early to pick out their favorite table at which to sit.

Lou Serrano, chief juvenile probation officer for Deaf Smith County gave a scary report to Hereford Lions Club Wednesday on drug use by local juveniles.

He said he was concerned about the increased use of methamphetamines among Hereford youth, adding that three young girls almost lost their lives to the drugs last week. He also reported that inhalant abuse is still prevalent among junior high-age youngsters.

Introduced by County Judge Tom Simons as "the best juvenile probation officer in the world," Serrano puts some of the blame for drug abuse problems on parents. "Too many times, a law enforcement official or a teacher knows before the parents when a kid is headed for trouble."

Serrano held an inhalant abuse program Thursday in the county library, with six juveniles - ages 11 to 15 - telling about their problems with inhalants. "Maybe it'll make an impression," said Serrano.

Simons says the Juvenile Youth Home, a pet project by Serrano, has made a real impact. The juvenile officer said residents of the home are "about 80 percent Hispanic males." Many of them do community service work as part of their sentence.

In answer to a question from a Lion member, Serrano said he thinks the juvenile curfew has paid dividends. "Quite a few are still being ticketed, but it has got a lot of the right kids off the streets."

He said a bright spot in his work is the fact that juvenile felony offenses have decreased. Simons used that statement to remind Lions that most of Hereford's juveniles are great youngsters who are making the honor roll and winning awards, not breaking the law.

We probably shouldn't have reported Serrano's comments. It may attract an editorial from the Amarillo Globe-News on what we should do about the problem.

For those who missed it, the editorial took the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce to task for suggesting that an "unrealistic" plan was being presented to local taxing entities on requiring employees to reside in the county.

We don't know the editorial writer's name, or whether he/she resides in Potter County, but read this statement:

"It's hard enough for rural school districts to attract quality educators...requiring new employees to relocate simply is not realistic."

If I were a Hereford teacher residing in Deaf Smith County, I'd wonder if he/she was insinuating that I'm not a quality educator. Do you have to live in the big city of Amarillo or the university town of Canyon to be a quality educator?

Here is the Globe-News solution: "Some public employees should live in the communities which they work for. Emergency personnel, for example, sometimes need to be quickly summoned. Those who set the laws for a community, such as county and city commissioners, need to live where they are under the same laws they pass. Non-emergency and those who set no laws, however, shouldn't be under this restriction."

Well, thanks for looking down your nose at us rural hicks and explaining the situation!

There are situations, I'm sure, when the best candidate does live nearby and doesn't want to move because of their spouse's work. Perhaps the policy could define a hardship clause for such employees. However, it is difficult for me to imagine the school district reaching a point where they felt they had to hire 75 employees who were not willing to relocate.

This subject was presented to former Supt. Charles Greenawalt a couple of years ago. The request to hire employees who would live here resulted in an increase, not decrease, of out-of-county employees.

The chamber, or no one else we know of, is asking the school district to compromise its priority of hiring the best possible candidates. The Amarillo editorial concludes that local taxing entities, "while thanking Cumpton for his civic pride and enthusiasm, should understand the plan is not feasible."

Not only should they thank Cumpton, but these entities should strive to change a problem which is hurting the economic potential of the community.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I accidentally left my purse on the back of my car last Sunday. It fell off on Park Avenue and was found by a man and his son, who took it - undisturbed - to the police station. I don't know their names, but I do thank them very much.

Virginia Garner

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank all of my relatives and friends, the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department, and the ambulance crew and sheriff's deputy for all the nice things they have done for me since my house and personal belongings were lost in a fire.

Oneta Rudd

Dear Editor:

First, I want this absolutely clear - I am not opposed to any of our teachers and I think we have a fine school system. I have no children in school, but as a taxpayer I think I have a right to express an opinion.

I would like to relate a personal experience I had in Hereford. I was standing in line at one of our local merchant's going-out-of-business sale. I didn't know the woman in line behind me and we introduced ourselves and chatted to pass the time.

She was a school teacher who commuted from Canyon. She said that she'd been teaching here two years but this was the first time she'd been in a Hereford business. And, if it was not a 50-percent-off sale, she wouldn't have spent her time there.

She admitted her loyalty went to Canyon and she didn't even buy gas or eat out in Hereford. She got here just in time for school and left soon as possible after school.

It's very hard for me to accept this philosophy, since my heart, time and loyalty are in Hereford. I realize all teachers who live out of town are not like the woman I met. She may have been a great teacher, but we also have a lot of excellent teachers who live in Hereford. I support Don Cumpton and the chamber's proposal to at least try harder to hire teachers who will reside here.

With Cumpton becoming chamber manager and bringing with him all his enthusiasm and hard work, I believe we should strive to support him and the chamber.

Furthermore, I don't appreciate the Amarillo Globe News advising us on what's good for Hereford.

Thanks for reading my view,
Lavon Nieman

Dear Editor:

I am glad the City of Hereford has decided to clean up the old Packard Mill property on South Main. This has been both a hazard and an eyesore for many years.

I appreciate our city for cleaning up property like this all over town. There has been a red fox family living at the old mill site recently, so I suppose they have relocated now.

During the Depression, my dad raised a good wheat crop but rather than sell it all so cheap, he made a trade with the mill owner, Frank Gyles, to mill a truckload of wheat into flour at no charge.

We three boys delivered a sack of "Packard's Best" flour to every widow in town.

Thanks,

Benny Womble

Dear Editor:

With the end of school approaching rapidly, maybe we as parents need to remind our kids of how tragic drinking and driving can be. Proms, banquets and end-of-school parties are all excuses for drinking, and we as adults should also be good examples of not drinking and driving.

Parents of kids involved in extracurricular activities (such as PAL, NHS) have to sign substance abuse policies. Sometimes I think our kids show more commitment to this than we parents. So with stronger examples from all of us in the future, we might save the lives of friends.

The poem below was forwarded to us on the computer and it was an eye-opener to me. I hope it will be to all who read it. This letter is not meant to point a finger at anyone, because - as the saying goes - there's three fingers pointing back at you.

Shelly Diller

I went to a party, Mom; I remembered what you said. You told me not to drink, Mom, so I drank soda instead.

I really felt proud inside, Mom, the way you said I would. I didn't drink and drive, Mom, even though others said I should.

I know I did the right thing, Mom; I know you were always right. The party is finally ending, Mom; as everyone is driving out of sight.

As I got into my car, Mom, I knew I'd get home in one piece. Because of the way you raised me, so responsible and sweet.

I started to drive away, Mom, but as I pulled out into the road; the other car didn't see me, Mom, and it me like a load.

As I lay there on the pavement, Mom, I her the policeman say, the other guy is drunk, Mom, and now I'm the one who will pay.

I'm lying here dying, Mom; I wish you'd get here soon. How could this happen to me, Mom? My life burst like a balloon.

There is blood all around me, Mom, and most of it is mine. I head the medic say, Mom, I'll die in a short time.

I just wanted to tell you, Mom, I swear I didn't drink. It was the others, Mom; the others didn't think.

He was probably at the same party as I, Mom, the only difference is he drank and I will die.

Why do people drink, Mom? It can ruin your whole life. I'm feeling sharp pains now; pains just like a knife.

The guy who hit me is walking, and I don't think it's fair. I'm lying here dying and all he can do is stare.

Tell my brother not to cry, Mom; tell Daddy to be brave. And when I go to heaven, Mom, put "Daddy's Girl" on my grave.

Someone should have him, Mom, not to drink and drive. If only they had told him, Mom, I would still be alive.

My breath is getting shorter, Mom; I'm becoming very scared. Please don't cry for me, Mom, when I needed you, you were there.

I have one last question, Mom, before I say goodbye. I didn't drink and drive, so why am I the one to die?

An AP News analysis

As Clinton defends fund-raising habits, answer not much, too late

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - In Watergate, the question that wouldn't go away was what did the president know and when did he know it. As President Clinton defends White House fund-raising habits, his own answer is not much, and too late.

He's said he was livid to learn that the Democratic National Committee was not checking out big money donors before taking their checks, about $3 million now returned as improper. He said he assumed, incorrectly, that there was a system in place for screening White House visitors to keep out those who shouldn't have been there. Like the Chinese arms dealer invited to one of the more than 100 White House coffees for Democratic donors.

Still, the pressure began at the top. The cut corners and strained propriety followed. It is not the first time a president has ordered results without worrying about methods.

The push for funds sounds now almost like a bazaar, given the lineup of events, invitations, calls. The latest offshoot over the alleged China connection, who the FBI told, and what they were instructed to do about it, is bizarre instead.

In that situation, what the president knew was nothing, for more than six months after two men who were supposed to be advising him on matters involving national security were briefed by the FBI on possible Chinese attempts to gain influence with political contributions. That's illegal, and the Chinese government denies it happened.

What is, or was, in dispute is whether the FBI officials instructed the National Security Council staffers not to tell their bosses about it. The White House spokesman said initially that the NSC aides were adamant that's what they had been told at the briefing last June 3. That produced an extraordinary public denial by the FBI, effectively saying that the president was wrong.

A day later, on Tuesday, the White House said the NSC men had the impression they weren't supposed to report to their superiors. By Wednesday, everybody had backed off to calling it a misunderstanding, with the FBI suggesting that the message had been that the information was sensitive and that its sources could not be compromised.

All of which misses what ought to be the point. The National Security Council exists to advise the president on security-related issues. The U.S. Government Manual spells out the mission: "The Council advises and assists the president in integrating all aspects of national security policy ... domestic, foreign, military, intelligence and economic ..."

A suspected attempt by China to influence U.S. elections, which earlier had prompted FBI warnings to at least six members of Congress, surely fits the NSC mandate. But the president can hardly be advised or assisted with information withheld from him, on anybody's say-so.

Clinton said he got absolutely no word on any of it, until it became public this winter. Had he known, Clinton said, he would have ordered the allegations which, as he noted, Birthdays, special days, a year-around remembrance? Send them The Hereford Brand, a gift that reminds the recipient of your love and concern about 255 times a year!

have not been conclusively proved, weighed to determine what ought to be done, "what we should be alert to."

"So it would have provoked, at least to that extent, a red flag on my part," he said Monday.

Belatedly, though. A fund-raiser with Chinese business connections already had arranged $366,000 in Democratic Party donations and was showing up at the White House frequently, 51 visits inside three years.

The Democrats are giving the money back.

Clinton, who said no one was angrier than he when he learned the Democrats weren't properly checking out their donors, has seemed oddly tractable about the failure of people on his own staff roster to tell him what the FBI told them.

So has Anthony Lake, the former national security adviser and NSC chief, now trying to overcome Republican resistance and win confirmation as director of the Central Intelligence Agency. Saying at his Senate confirmation hearing that he and Clinton should have been advised, Lake nonetheless praised as fine officers the two NSC staff members who didn't tell them.

Clinton said the matter is being investigated, recommendations to follow. But there's not much to be accomplished retroactively, unless it is to remind the staff that part of the job is to tell the boss.

Even that would have to be done gingerly. The Justice Department and the FBI are simultaneously investigating Democratic and White House fund-raising conduct, and Clinton can't risk anything that even looks like an intrusion.

Christian comics practice humor to keep spirits high "Christianity has died many times and risen again, for it has a God who knows the way out of the grave." — English writer G.K. Chesterton.

By DAVID BRIGGS
AP Religion Writer

You can't keep a good faith down. That is the motto of a group of Christian comics who have turned to Easter humor to keep spirits high in the pews during the Lenten season when some church leaders focus almost exclusively on the pain and suffering of Jesus.

The Fellowship of Merry Christians, in its latest Joyful Noiseletter and in a new book from Thomas Nelson Publishers, delivers an impassioned defense of the resurrection and a plea to the faithful to take joy in their religion.

"I guess our theme is Christ is risen: Smile," said Cal Samra, president of the Portage, Mich.-based group. "They've taken Christ out of Christmas. I don't think we ought to let them take Christ out of Easter."

There is plenty of biblical evidence for a joyful attitude toward faith, say Samra and his wife, Rose, in "More Holy Humor," the second collection of religious humor published by the fellowship.

A post-resurrection account in the Gospel of John says that when his followers saw Jesus, "The disciples were filled with joy."

Try and find a portrait of a smiling Jesus after the resurrection. The few that exist are overwhelmed by hundreds of more somber portrayals of Jesus on the cross.

"If we really have a joyful Christ, we really have to make a little effort to imitate him," Samra said.

That does not mean downplaying the crucifixion, according to the fellowship.

"Good Friday is a very important day, a holy day," Samra said. "But I guess we see Jesus is the door to joy ... and that joy can be found on both sides of the cross."

In the book and the fellowship's upcoming April "Resurrection

Extra," members offer one-liners for the faithful:

"Eat drink and be merry in Christ, for tomorrow we live forever."

"What can you say about a society that says God is dead and Elvis is alive?"

"We certainly believe in the resurrection at our church. If you doubt it, just visit our offices sometime and watch our staff come back to life at quitting time."

If they are going to stop being so serious all the time, religious folk first have to learn to laugh at themselves, many fellowship members say. Much of the holy humor material is devoted to the foibles of the faithful.

In one cartoon, a minister in shorts waves goodbye as a bus departs. The caption reads: "Sure, it cost more, but Pastor Lou enjoyed staying home while sending his congregation on vacation."

Asked once why so many Christians seem less than perfect, the writer C.S. Lewis responded, "You should have seen them before they were Christians."

Autistic child shows aptitude for drawing, designs, construction

ZENA, Okla. (AP) - How the world is seen by a 12-year-old is as individual and unique as the child living in it, but William VanNess sees things a little differently.

William can draw detailed maps, city blocks, shopping malls, buildings and more, all freehand by memory.

"In my spare time I like to draw, make maps, buildings and towns, it's fun," he said.

William draws in three dimension and usually can whip out a picture in under five minutes.

"He's so detailed in everything he draws. Wherever we go he remembers street signs, businesses, everything and he can come back home and draw it all," said his mother, Brenda VanNess.

William enjoys reading all types of maps and he has an ample collection of them.

"He got the love of maps from his father. His father travels a lot and he will pick maps up for William," Ms. VanNess said.

Along with the love of maps, William enjoys creating his own city.

In the third grade, William began the founding of his town, designed from building blocks.

"I started it about four years ago, but when I was in the fifth grade, I just started going nuts about it and I added on like crazy," he said.

Layouts, designs and construction aren't the only things William likes to learn about.

He has a great fascination with the weather, also.

He watches The Weather Channel and reads many books regarding types of weather.

He is well versed in weather knowledge and enjoys sharing any information he has learned.

William is also fond of business trivia.

He looks up types of businesses in different phone books and finds more information about them.

For instance, he knows how and when the "Best Western Motels" began and how many there are and in what foreign countries they are located.

William's parents started noticing something different about their child when he was very young.

"At two years old we noticed his movements were unusual. His eyes were moving, he was always looking around, restless-like. That's when he was diagnosed at the low end of autism," Ms. VanNess said.

William didn't let any medical diagnosis deter him from enjoying life, though he faced some difficult odds.

"Kindergarten and the first few years of elementary he had trouble communicating with the other kids, but after awhile he got used to them and they got used to him.

"This year he entered middle school, an entirely different setting, and he adjusted just fine. He's doing great," Ms. VanNess said.

One of William's favorite classes is art.

"William's visual perception is unique in that he can arrange and put together a tremendous amount of objects in a small space. His composition is unique," said his Grove Middle School art teacher, David Duff.

Not only does William enjoy school, he knows his school very well, in fact, probably like no other student.

"I know where all the additions and renovations of the school have been in detail," he said.

Upon request William can draw the structure of the entire school layout or hone in on the renovated areas.

One of William's drawings is in Joplin, Mo., at Garfield's restaurant in Northpark Mall.

"William drew a certain block in Joplin we had drove on, on the corner of the tablecloth (Garfield's provides paper table cloths and crayons for sketching) and the waiter stood there in amazement as he drew it and then he had William sign it. We heard later it was hanging up on one of their walls," said Ms. VanNess.

William gets great support for his drawings from his parents and art teacher.

About Video Games

Many parents wonder if TV video games are dangerous for their children's eyes. Generally there is no need to worry, as long as parents insist on the same sensible rules as for regular TV watching. Good TV habits include sitting upright to watch, keeping other lights on in the room while the TV is on, and not sitting any closer to the screen than necessary. A good guideline is to sit no closer than three times the diagonal width of the screen.

As long as these precautions are followed, TV video games can actually be quite beneficial in improving hand-eye coordination. And any parents who try to keep up with their children will discover how quick the eyes and hands must be. The swift and constant action the games demand provides helpful exercises in visual coordination — the kind of exercises that the youngsters don't mind repeating again and again. Indeed, some eye professionals are using the games as tools in vision training.

Major upsets spark NCAA basketball tourney

By The Associated Press
Coppin State and Tennessee-Chattanooga pulled off major upsets in the NCAA tournament, while Temple put on a record-setting defensive show. Coppin State, which had never won an NCAA tournament game, stunned South Carolina 78-65 in the opening round of the East Regional on Friday night. It was only the third time a No. 15 seed has defeated a No. 2 seed.

"We didn't even know it was South Carolina out there," said Reggie Welch, who had 15 rebounds for Coppin State. "We kept on getting confidence, and before you knew it, we were up."

Tennessee-Chattanooga, the No. 14 seed in the Southeast Regional, scored the first 15 points against third-seeded Georgia, then held on for a 73-70 victory.

Willie Young scored 24 points for Chattanooga, which gave the Southern Conference only its second NCAA tournament win in 15 seasons.

Temple shut down Mississippi with its matchup zone defense and beat the Rebels 62-40. Ole Miss' point total was the lowest ever in the Midwest Regional.

"I know what to do with it, but my players don't," Mississippi coach Rob Evans said of Temple's confusing zone.

Mark Jackson scored 24 points and Rasheed Brokenbaker added 20 for Temple, which forced Ole Miss into 18 turnovers. The Rebels shot only 36 percent from the field and missed seven of 10 free throws.

Elsewhere in the Midwest Regional, Clemson beat Miami of Ohio 68-56, Tulsa routed Boston University 81-52, and Minnesota manhandled Southwest Texas State 78-46.

In the East, Texas defeated Wisconsin 71-58, New Mexico edged Old Dominion 59-55, and Louisville beat Massachusetts 65-57.

In the Southeast, Illinois topped Southern Cal 90-77, Providence beat Marquette 81-59, and Duke edged Murray State 71-68.

In the West, North Carolina Charlotte beat Georgetown 79-67, Utah defeated Navy 75-61, Wake Forest downed St. Mary's 68-46, and Stanford beat Oklahoma 80-67.

The second round started today with North Carolina-Corolla and California-Villanova in the East, Kansas-Purdue and College of Charleston-Arizona in the Southeast, Cincinnati-Iowa State and UCLA-Xavier in the Midwest, and Boston College-St. Joseph's and Kentucky-Iowa in the West.

East

Texas 71, Wisconsin 58
PITTSBURGH (AP) - Reggie Freeman broke out of his shooting slump with 31 points and Texas raced to a 12-point lead over Wisconsin in the opening four minutes en route to a 71-58 victory today in the NCAA Eastern Regional.

Texas (17-11), the first at-large team chosen for the tournament with only 16 victories, will meet the winner of today's game between No. 2 seed South Carolina and 15th-seeded Coppin State on Sunday.

Freeman, who had made only 29-of-105 shots (27.6 percent) as Texas had lost four of six, finished 11-of-19 as Texas' superior quickness and outside shooting wore down Wisconsin's half-court defense.

Freeman scored 18 points in the second half as the Longhorns, now 8-1 in first-round games under coach Tom Penders, made 17-of-19 free throws to prevent any attempt by the deliberate Badgers to rally.

The Badgers (18-10), whose 18 regular-season wins were their most in 70 years, never got within eight points after 7-foot center Paul Grant drew his fourth foul with 11:56 remaining and Texas ahead 48-38.

Grant finished with 16 points before fouling out with 3:14 remaining. Sam Okey led Wisconsin with 17 points.

The Longhorns, coming out running just as Penders wanted them to, got 3-pointers from Freeman and Kris Clack while bolting to a lead of 15-3. Wisconsin never got any closer than seven points after that despite Texas' poor 5-of-25 3-point shooting.

New Mexico 59, Old Dominion 55

Kenny Thomas scored 15 points and New Mexico shut down high-scoring Odell Hodge to defeat Old Dominion. Hodge was held to seven points, 11 below his average.

Louisville 65, Massachusetts 57
Freshman Nate Johnson scored 21 points and DeJuan Wheat added 16 despite a painful bout of shoulder tendinitis to lead Louisville over UMass.

Southeast

Illinois 90, Southern Cal 77
At Charlotte, Kivane Garris hit 16 of 17 foul shots and scored 27 points for Illinois, which shot a season-high 59.6 percent from the field.

Providence 81, Marquette 59
Austin Croshere scored a career-high 39 points, hitting a 70-foot shot just before the end of the first half, as Providence got its first NCAA tournament victory in 10 years.

Duke 71, Murray St. 68
Jeff Capel scored 25 points as Duke held on to beat Murray State, which lost its fifth straight NCAA tournament game.

Midwest

Clemson 68, Miami of Ohio 56
At Kansas City, Greg Buckner scored 22 points as Clemson, which had lost five of its previous seven games, rebounded to beat Miami of Ohio.

Tulsa 81, Boston U. 52
Shea Seals became Tulsa's career scoring leader, scoring 17 points despite spending much of the second half on the bench.

Minnesota 78, SW Texas St. 46

Minnesota opened the game with a 13-0 run and overpowered Southwest Texas State.

West

North Carolina Charlotte 79

Georgetown 67
At Tucson, Sean Colson scored 24 points and Charlotte handled Georgetown's press with ease.

Utah 75, Navy 61

Keith Van Horn had 16 points and 11 rebounds as Utah won its 12th straight game. Van Horn passed Danny Ainge to become the WAC's career scoring leader with 2,475 points.

Wake Forest 68, St. Mary's, Calif. 46

Tim Duncan outplayed 7-foot-3, 345-pound Brad Millard and Wake Forest wore down St. Mary's. Duncan had 22 points and 22 rebounds, while Millard finished with 16 points and six rebounds.

Stanford 80, Oklahoma 67

Kris Weems scored 20 points and Brevin Knight added 18 for Stanford, which handed Oklahoma its third straight opening-round defeat.

Herd golf teams fare well at weekend tournaments

Hereford's boys' and girls' golf teams were in tournament over the weekend. The girls were in second place after the opening round of the Dumas Invitational, and the B team was in sixth place.

The Whiteface boys' team was in seventh place in the Amarillo Relays Golf Tournament after recording a team total of 333. Second round play in both tournaments was continuing Saturday.

Hereford's girls' team carded a total of 366 at Dumas. The team was 20 shots behind first-place Pampa and just one shot ahead of Borger.

Jacque Bezner led Hereford with an 84. Other scores on the A team were Katie Bone and Lindsey Ward, both with 93; Amy Killingsworth 96, and Jennifer Phipps 97.

Scores for the B team were Stephanie Bixler 95, Michelle Bixler 102, Kristen Cole 105, Lisa Coneway 117, and Sheena Stokes 129.

Greg Reinart led the Hereford boys at Amarillo as he carded an 80. Jeremy Baros and Heath Henderson each shot an 83; Keith Riley had an 87 and Randy Mason shot a 92.

Cold weather delayed the start of the tourney. The group at Tascosa Country Club had a 3 1/2 hour delay, since the club does not allow play when the temperature is below freezing.

Amarillo High was leading the tourney with a 312 total. Close behind were Lubbock High, 313; Pampa, 316; Andrews, 318; Borger, 327; Monterey, 331; and then Hereford.

Johnson wins Sullivan Award

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - Michael Johnson, the man with the golden shoes who dominated track and field last year and won two Olympic gold medals, was chosen Friday winner of the Sullivan Award for best amateur athlete of 1996.

Johnson of Dallas, a three-time finalist for the award, became the 37th track and field athlete to win the award.

His 200-meter time of 19.32 seconds at Atlanta smashed his own world record of 19.66 and his 400-meter time of 43.49 was an Olympic record, breaking the mark of 43.50 set by Quincy Watts at the 1992 games.

"1996 was indeed a career year for me in winning two Olympic gold medals," Johnson said. "Winning this award is a great acknowledgement of these achievements."

Johnson stretched his eight-year winning streak in the 400 last year to 57.

In 1995, Johnson became the first man this century to win the 200-400 double at the U.S. Championships and the first man ever to do the same at the World Championships.

That convinced world track officials to change the Atlanta Olympic schedule for Johnson, making it possible for him to run both races.

Johnson entered the Atlanta Olympics as the overwhelming favorite at both distances. And he justified that faith, winning both races in his golden shoes.

The winner of the Sullivan Award is selected by a nationwide vote of 1,000 members of the Amateur Athletic Union, who judge the nominees on leadership, character, sportsmanship and the ideals of amateurism.

Yankees work on trade demand by Fielder

By The Associated Press

Cecil Fielder may get an extension from the New York Yankees, although it's not exactly the kind he wants.

Fielder is facing a midnight EST Saturday deadline for choosing whether to withdraw his trade demand or become a free agent and walk away from a $7.2 million salary.

The slugger's agents and the Yankees talked Friday, and moved close to working out a deal that would delay the decision until Tuesday.

The discussions centered on adding an option year for 1998 and maybe even 1999 to his existing contract, then giving the team until Tuesday to decide whether to exercise it.

Francisco manager Dusty Baker said Friday. "He says the swelling in his eye has gone down. He can open his eye about three-quarters. The doctor examined him again and a lot of the double vision has subsided."

Snow is out indefinitely. Club officials already have said Snow likely will miss the April 1 opener against Pittsburgh.

"No comment. I'm not talking about it," Fielder said before Friday night's exhibition game against the Chicago White Sox. "Tomorrow night at midnight, I'll comment."

Fielder, who hit 39 home runs with 117 RBIs for Detroit and New York last year, filed a trade demand in November, prompted by concerns that he would merely platoon at designated hitter with Darryl Strawberry.

Fielder is seeking a contract extension, and there were recent reports that owner George Steinbrenner would accommodate him, either with a three-year deal for $21 million or a two-year deal at $14 million, a fastball from Seattle's Randy Johnson, has been resting at his Scottsdale residence since he was released from a hospital Wednesday.

HHS baseball team defeated by Westerners

The Hereford Whiteface baseball team is having a difficult time racking up hits in the Crown of Texas Baseball Tournament in Amarillo.

Hereford had only two hits - one a double by Ramirez - in a 12-1 loss to Lubbock High Friday in the consolation bracket of the tourney. The game ended after five innings on the 10-run rule.

Artho and Hill gave up nine hits to the Westerners and four errors helped Lubbock tally a dozen runs. Artho took the loss.

Hereford had lost in the first two rounds to Amarillo High and Borger, managing just five hits and committing 13 errors in those two losses.

The Herd was to play Palo Duro Saturday to wind up action in the tournament.

Make it nine losses for the Chicago Bulls, the latest of which included an even bigger rarity - an air-ball by Michael Jordan in the final seconds.

Jordan hit nothing but air on a fallaway 15-footer with six seconds left, and Xavier McDaniel followed with two clinching free throws to give the New Jersey Nets a 99-98 upset of the best team in the NBA.

The Bulls are now one loss shy of their total from last year, when they finished 72-10 for the best record in NBA history. Chicago would have to finish the season 18-0 to break the record.

For the Nets, it was just the third win of the season against a team with a winning record and their first over a Jordan-led Bulls team since 1991.

In other NBA games, the Los Angeles Clippers surprised the Lakers 97-95, Portland stomped Cleveland 96-73, Utah beat Indiana 105-96, Seattle downed Atlanta 97-91, Miami defeated Vancouver 88-82, Orlando beat Charlotte 86-81, Washington crushed Milwaukee 105-86, San Antonio beat Boston 103-92 and Philadelphia topped Minnesota 109-95.

The Bulls tied their game at 95-all by scoring seven straight points, the final two on free throws by Scottie Pippen with 1:20 to go.

Each team failed to convert on its next two possessions.

Steve Kerr missed a 3-pointer with 19 seconds to go and McDaniel got the rebound. He held the ball over his head and Pippen fouled him trying to make a steal with 16 seconds left. McDaniel made both shots, the second hitting the front of the rim and bouncing up and in.

Spurs 103, Celtics 92

At San Antonio, Cory Alexander had career-highs of 22 points and 10 rebounds for San Antonio, which nearly blew a 21-point, third-quarter lead before holding on.

Union workers at GM's truck plant go on strike

Workers walk off line over staffing, health, safety issues

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) - Union workers at a General Motors Corp. truck assembly plant went on strike Friday, walking out over staffing, health and safety issues.

UAW Local 2209 president Joe Burkhamer said about 1,200 day shift members walked off the lines at 10 a.m., although he said management shut down the assembly line at some point before the strike deadline.

"We just walked them out," he said, minutes after the strike began.

"They're out on strike officially," Burkhamer said picket lines are being set up, and that about 70 union members will be on the lines for four-hour shifts.

Tom Beamon, a spokesman for GM's Truck Group in Detroit, said talks had continued right up to the deadline and would resume at 9 a.m. Saturday.

"GM will continue to bargain at that time in good faith toward an agreement that serves the needs of our employees and recognizes the need for GM to operate competitively in the global marketplace," he said.

The factory southwest of Fort Wayne employs about 2,700 union members who produce about 25 percent of GM's full-size C-K series pickups, the automaker's best-selling vehicles.

Since it is assembly plant, not a parts plant, the walkout likely would not have any immediate impact on other GM plants in Indiana or other states.

Beamon declined to comment on the strike's effect on supplier plants and said he did not know how many of those factories serviced the Fort Wayne plant.

Workers reported for the day shift at 6 a.m., not knowing whether a strike would be called.

"The mood is, if we're going to do it, we ought to do it," said Frank Macomber, a 27-year GM veteran who sets cabs onto frames of the pickups assembled at the plant.

Negotiations on the local contract began nearly eight months ago.

Burkhamer said the union's demand for more workers at the plant was at the top of a list of more than 100 demands. The union contends workers are putting in too much forced overtime when the company should hire more people.

Hundreds turn out to see 'Selena' film

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Family members and hundreds of crying, cheering fans turned out Friday night to see a Hollywood-style screening of the film "Selena."

The movie, which will be released nationally at theaters March 21, also attracted stars, musicians and the city's elite.

A parade of actors in the film - including Jennifer Lopez and Edward James Olmos - stepped from stretch limousines in formal black tuxedos and long dresses.

Lopez, who plays Selena in the film, dazzled the crowd in an embroidered mauve and sage Valentino gown. Stopping along a gauntlet of cameras and microphone-wielding reporters, she said she was happy to be a part of such an important film.

"I don't think I'll ever have a role like this again where I get to play such a beautiful person," said Lopez.

"It's hard to be somebody else, somebody who is so beloved. I knew I'd be under a lot of scrutiny. I tried to focus more on the person that I had to portray and all the wonderful things she was."

Selena's father, Abraham Quintanilla Jr., with his wife, Marcella, on his arm walked quickly passed the media without comment. The red-haired Marcella Quintanilla wore an elegant purple beaded suit. Selena's husband, Perez, told the media he would be seeing the film for the first time that night.

The movie traces the life of Selena Quintanilla-Perez from her childhood spent singing with the family's band to her ascent as a Grammy-winning Tejano star and her preparations to cross over to the American pop charts.

It also depicts her death at age 23 at the hand of her former fan club president, Yolanda Saldivar. Ms. Saldivar is serving a life prison sentence for fatally shooting the singer on March 31, 1995, at a Corpus Christi motel.

Corpus Christi was one of 13 cities nationwide selected to have a screening of the movie, which was filmed in the San Antonio area and in Corpus Christi.

The screening was followed by a private reception at the Town Club. Proceeds benefited the Selena Foundation. More than 500 attended the $100-a-ticket screening, among them elite and prominent members of the Hispanic community, Tejano musicians, local politicians and the family of slain Tejano singer Selena Quintanilla-Perez.

Jackie Guerra, who plays Selena's sister, Suzette Arriaga, and Jon Seda, who plays Selena's husband, Chris Perez, apologized for fatigue from late-night parties thrown in their honor at a star-studded screening in Los Angeles on Thursday.

The stars praised Corpus Christi and thanked the town for hosting them during making of the film.

"This is Selena's hometown," said Seda, who was wearing a dark suit, hoop earrings and a prominent silver cross around his neck.

"She's just a magical flower that blooms on stage," he said of Selena.

The bearer does not have to be present to win. The proceeds from the ticket sales will be used to continue doing projects to improve our community and defer expenses for the square dance club.

Panhandle center strives for awareness during Nat'l. Poison Prevention Week

AMARILLO - National Poison Prevention Week is March 16-22. The Panhandle Poison Center in Amarillo is taking this opportunity to raise awareness of the dangers of accidental poisonings.

Every year there are nearly 1,000 deaths in Texas due to poisonings and thousands more causing injuries. Of the poison exposure calls that come through the Texas Poison Center Network, 65 percent involve children under 6 years-of-age.

Sources of unintentional and intentional poisonings range from prescription and over-the-counter drugs, household cleaning agents and pesticides, to plants and flowers and animal and insect bites.

By dialing 1-800-POISON-1 (1-800-764-7661) anywhere in Texas a caller is automatically connected to the Center serving their region for prompt, professional assistance.

The Network offers this hotline to assist the general public, health care professionals, law enforcement and government officials, veterinarians and businesses with questions regarding exposures to potentially hazardous substances, 24 hours a day, 364 days per year.

After reading this article, check your home and drug cabinets to protect you and your loved ones from an unnecessary poisoning accident.

Call 1-800-764-7661 for a free brochure, phone sticker, magnet and home safety checklist.

HRMC designs special event in observance of coming week

Hereford pre-school children are invited to a special Teddy Bear Clinic and hospital tour March 18 and 20 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

The special event is designed as an observance of Children and Hospitals Week, according to Donna Kemp, RN, BSN, director of nursing, HRMC.

"We hope parents will bring their pre-schoolers to the Emergency Room with a favorite stuffed toy," Ms. Kemp said. "Our goal is to help children learn a little about the emergency room, so when they have to come on an emergency they are not quite so terrified."

She explained that children and their parents will register the toy, then go back to an examining room in the ER where a nurse will check the toy's "vitals."

"As we weigh and measure, check blood pressure and heart rate of the toy, we'll explain to the child what we are doing," Kemp said.

Following the "examination," each child and his or her toy will be given a surgical mask to wear, and then taken with their parent on a short tour of the hospital. "The kids like the masks, and they also serve to protect our patients and out little visitors from any stray germs," Kemp added.

Barn Church speaker makes 'connection'

Jerry and Andrea Martin of Cowboy Connections Ministries will be featured speakers when Barn Church meets at 7 p.m. Thursday in B-S Arena.

Connecting cowboys and cowgirls with Jesus is the purpose of the Martin's Cowboy Connection Ministries.

Their purpose and desire is to edify and be an encouragement to all those with whom they come in contact and to disciple them in their commitment to serving Jesus.

The Martins provide church services at rodeos, horse shows, sale barns, rodeo Bible camps and Bible studies wherever they travel.

Martin is a current competing member of the PRCA and ropes at rodeos where he ministers whenever possible.

He grew up in a large (16 kids) family and accepted Jesus at the age of 10. He had always dreamed of becoming a professional athlete and decided to focus his efforts on calf roping.

He met Andrea through mutual friends and they were married in January 1991.

The Lord has given Jerry a burden for cowboys, and placed a desire in his heart to encourage and edify those around him.

"I want to be available for God to use -- with the rodeo cowboy, my neighbor, or whatever; and to be used wherever -- preferably in rodeo, but that's not always what God wants," said Martin.

Following the tour, the children and their parents will be treated to punch and cookies by the volunteers in the cafeteria.

"Although we all hope that a child never has to be hospitalized, realistically we know that some children will. The examination and tour will help the child understand what goes on at the hospital," she said. "Even if a child is never hospitalized, other members of the family may be. By visiting the hospital under very stress-free circumstances, we can help the child feel comfortable in the setting."

Ms. Kemp said that day care centers who are interested in bringing small groups of children on those days should call ahead. "Of course, if we have an emergency, our personnel will treat the emergency and all toy examinations and tours will be suspended," she said. "We hope everyone with small children will take advantage of this special opportunity to see the hospital."

Those who plan to attend must call 364-2141, ext. 317 to register in advance for the tours.

BRENDA KAY DOTSON, BRIAN WADE BARRETT

Couple sets July 12 wedding in Hereford

Kevin and Darethia Dotson of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Brenda Kay, to Brian Wade Barrett of Hereford.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Robert and Susan Barrett of Hereford.

The wedding date has been set for July 12 in Christ's Church Fellowship in Hereford.

The bride-elect is a 1996 graduate of Hereford High School and is currently attending West Texas A&M University in Canyon majoring in elementary education. She is employed as a caregiver at King's Manor Day Care.

Barrett is a 1996 Hereford High graduate. He is employed by Slash O Cattle Feeders.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"Success is getting up just one more time than you fall down." Sandra Saul and Margie Pena attended a HOSTS conference in Dallas last week. They joined 13 more HISD HOSTS "people" for a very informative meeting and sharing of ideas with teachers across the state.

The Title I parent meeting on Tuesday night was successful. Of course, we would have been pleased had more parents attended. We do appreciate those who did attend and/or called to receive information. We do need the survey, that parents received, returned as soon as possible.

Junior Historians Courthouse Committee has completed all phases of the Adopt-A-Building project but will continue work on "The Peoples' Court." They are now involved in in-depth research and are "uncovering" some very interesting information. In fact, some of their finding may prove to be very surprising to area citizens who are interested in the county's history.

Thanks to Bill Brady, Judge Tom Simons, Tami Charest and Beverly Martin for their help in videoing our courthouse "movie." Thanks, also, to Corky Lockmiller for helping us make two videos into one!

HJH seventh graders will have a presentation during science class this week on registering for their eighth grade year. Each student will receive a green form, a course description packet and a letter to parents. Student will be asked to return the registration form by Friday, March 21. If parents have questions, they should feel free to call HJH with their concerns.

Seventh graders are studying the cattle kingdom of early-day Texas - much of which happened right here in the Panhandle. They are having a good review of how many of our western terms are derived from the Spanish language. Many of the students will be watching old westerns on TV or video this week to add point to their grade. This might develop into some family viewing. Get out the popcorn, Mom!

Spring break begins Friday afternoon, March 21, and will continue through March 30, Easter Sunday.

"The most unfortunate thing that happens to a person who fears failure is that he limits himself by becoming afraid to try anything new."

The Successful Family

Sometimes parents can't provide the right care because they are in trouble themselves...depression, drug abuse, alcohol abuse.

If an adult in your family is in this kind of trouble, the kids may not be safe. Your family needs help. Protect your family by finding help.

If you cause injury to your child, you are breaking the law and doing permanent harm to the emotional well-being of your child.

Never use any object to hit a child. No boards, belts, sticks or switches. Never hit or slap a child's face or head.

Never shake a child. This may cause brain damage, blindness or death to a child.

Each Tuesday evening from 5:30 to 8 at the HISD Administration Building family activities are being held that will help families cope with today's pressures and stress. To be a part of these exciting sessions or for more information on how to discipline your children or get the help your family needs to be THE SUCCESSFUL FAMILY, please contact Tilli Boozer, counselor/facilitator at 806-363-7668.

United in marriage

Jackie Davidson and James Reynolds were married in a private ceremony Feb. 14. The bride is the daughter of James and Betty Hodge of Hereford. Parents of the groom are Bobby and Zora Reynolds of Muleshoe. The couple plans to reside in Hereford. She is office manager for Kelley Electric. He is a truck driver for Caviness Packing Co.

LINNY LOU SIMS

Sims is speaker at Post 192 meet

Members of Hereford American Legion Post 192 are celebrating American Legion's 79th birthday at 7 p.m. Tuesday evening in the banquet room of the Hereford Community Center.

All veterans and families, Junior Historians and parents, students of American history and their families, and the public are cordially invited to attend this observance.

Argen Draper will introduce the speaker, Linny Lou Sims of Wellington, daughter of Major John S. Coleman, Retired.

Mrs. Sims will present an historical program on the many experiences of Major Coleman when he served in the Infantry and Air Corps in World War II. Captured by the Japanese in April 1942, he was released from the notorious Roko Roshi Prisoner-of-War Camp in September 1945.

Based on a shorthand diary, which he kept at great risk, throughout his imprisonment, his book Bataan and Beyond, detailed the ground combat on Bataan, the horrors of the infamous "death march" and the desperate conditions that were faced by the POW's during the next 3-1/2 years.

Mrs. Sims, a civic volunteer at local, area, regional and state levels, serves on West Texas A&M University Board of Regents, the State Bar of Texas Board of Directors as a public member and serves as a speaker in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Refreshments will be served by the Ladies Auxiliary to American Legion Post 192.

If you desire additional information, contact Jess L. Robinson, Commander.

More than 900,000 copies of The Hereford Brand were distributed in 1995. If your advertising message was not included in many of these issues, you need to call Mauri Montgomery or Julius Bodner, 364-2030, and let them put together an advertising schedule to fit your budget.

ELISA WILLIAMS, CHRISTOPHER OGLESBY

Engagement is announced

Philip and LuAnn Williams of Morrison, Colo., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Elisa Ann Williams, to Christopher Scott Oglesby. He is the son of Melvin Ray and Patricia Oglesby of Dumas, and the grandson of Cecil and Ella Oglesby of Hereford.

The couple is planning a May 17 wedding to be held at Bacon Heights Baptist Church in Lubbock.

The bride-elect graduated in 1993 from Henderson High School in West Chester, Pa. She plans to graduate from Texas Tech University in 1998 with a degree in art education.

The prospective groom is a 1992 graduate of Dumas High School. He is a senior science major at Texas Tech and is employed with New Deal Independent School District.

Black elected school editor

Colby Angus Black, a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School, has recently been elected editor for 1997-1998 of The Daily Texan, the student newspaper of the University of Texas-Austin.

Black has held the position of associate editor since August 1996.

The senior journalism/government major is the son of Chubby and Nita Black and the grandson of Vida Cash, all of Hereford.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: After reading your column in The Philadelphia Inquirer about the woman who said she became pregnant without having intercourse, I knew I had to write.

In 1964, when I was serving on the bench of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, I had a similar case. Because there was no credible evidence of any other man being involved, I made a finding of paternity against the defendant. He then filed an appeal, and I embarked on some intensive research to determine if such a phenomenon was really possible.

I wrote to the gynecology department heads of all five medical schools in the Philadelphia area and asked whether it was possible for a pregnancy to occur in these circumstances. Each replied that not only was it possible, but it occurs with greater frequency than the public realizes.

I felt good knowing that there was a medical basis for my decision but was very disappointed when, after researching the law in every state, I could find no legal precedent. Quite by happenstance, however, within a few days, I ran across some English cases that involved the same phenomenon. Faced with this additional evidence, the defendant in my case withdrew his appeal.

I am not seeking publicity. During the 37 years I have been on the bench, where I am still sitting as a senior judge of the Court of Common Pleas, I have received my share of it. Sincerely yours -- Juanita Kidd Stout

Dear Judge Juanita Kidd Stout: Thank you for your good letter. You might be interested in the letter that follows.

Dear Ann Landers: Like the woman who signed herself "Mystified," I became pregnant without actual intercourse. I was in a hot, bubbling, chlorinated Jacuzzi with my boyfriend, and we began to fool around. There was no actual penetration. When I insisted he stop, he respected my wishes.

Six weeks later, I knew I was pregnant and told him. He did not believe me because "we never really had sex." He then assumed I had had sex with someone else and left me to deal with the situation alone. Of course, I was mortified. Please, Ann, tell your teen-age readers to be careful. I'm embarrassed to tell you I was 25 when it happened to me. -- Honolulu

Dear Honolulu: Thanks for your wisdom born of experience. I hope somebody listens. And now for the last word:

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is in response to the woman who said she got pregnant even though she did not have sex.

You should have told her to look for the rising star in the East because the last time that happened, three wise men appeared bearing frankincense and myrrh. -- Chuckling in Flint, Mich.

Dear Flint: I hate to interfere with your chuckling, but the two letters above yours pretty much set the record straight. But thank you for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been dead for two years, but he gets more mail now than when he was living. My mailbox is jammed with junk, and I need help -- or am I stuck for life? -- Ocala, Fla.

Dear Ocala: You are not stuck for life. Write to: Mail Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association, Box 9008, Farmingdale, N.Y. 11735. Be sure to type your husband's full name, address and zip code.

Gem of the Day (Credit Joe E. Lewis in The Prairie Rambler): Show me a man who has both feet on the ground, and I will show you a man who can't put his pants on.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.55.)

Buyers Guide to Beef Roasts

Have you ever passed up a good sale on beef roast because you didn't know what to do with that particular cut? Or do you live off frozen entrees and not know what kind of beef roast to buy for that special dinner for guests?

In either case, some elementary knowledge of retail cuts will take the mystery out of shopping for a beef roast.

A simple rule of thumb is to remember that cuts from the less-used muscles along the back of the animal -- the rib and loin sections -- will always be more tender than those from the active muscles such as the shoulder, flank and round.

The most tender cuts are also in greatest demand, so they will typically sell for a higher price.

Meat that carries a USDA Prime label will be the most tender, followed by USDA Choice and USDA Select grades. Some stores use their own grading system rather than USDA grades.

Here is a guide to selecting the standard cuts of beef roasts:

Rib Roast - This cut is unexcelled for tenderness of flavor, ease of preparation, carving and serving. It's a favorite for company dinners and can be oven-roasted.

Rib-Eye Roast - This is the meaty, boneless center of the standing rib roast. The cut has excellent flavor and is superbly tender in the higher grades. It can be oven-roasted.

Rump Roast - The rump roast is a very flavorful cut, but it's less tender than the rib and it contains a considerable amount of bone. In Prime grade, it can be oven roasted; in Choice or Select grades, it can be pot roasted. The rump roast is often sold boned and rolled for easier carving.

Sirloin Tip Roast - This roast is boneless with very little waste. Despite its name, the cut is not as tender as sirloin steak. It has good flavor and is tender enough to be oven-roasted. The cut is also frequently called loin tip or round tip.

Eye-of-Round Roast - A lean, meaty, less-tender cut, this roast still has good flavor. It may be oven or pot roasted.

Heel of Round Roast - Heel of round is a boneless, less-tender roast from the round. This cut contains several muscles of varying tenderness. It should be pot roasted regardless of grade.

Blade Chuck Roast - Blade chuck makes an excellent economical pot roast.

Shoulder Arm Roast - Shoulder arm roast contains less bone than the blade chuck, but this cut is less tender. It should be used for pot roast.

Shoulder Clod - This is a meaty cut from the outside of the chuck. It has a well-developed flavor and no bone. A fairly tender cut, it may be oven roasted or used as pot roast.

Lifestyles Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local readers, clubs and organizations. Because this is a daily newspaper, we must have guidelines on timely submission of news items.

*General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication and by 9 a.m. Friday for the Sunday edition. Club reports should be submitted the day following the meeting, and no later than three days. Late contributions are subject to considerable editing.

*Listings for club meetings and special events in the "Calendar of Events" should be submitted by Wednesday of each week.

*Photos of new club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made by appointment at The Brand office Monday through Friday after 2 p.m. We do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries or showers; however, loaner cameras are available and should be reserved 24 hours in advance. The Brand has forms available, upon request, for preparing engagement announcements, wedding stories, anniversary celebrations and bridal showers. These are usually too lengthy to take over the phone.

*Engagements should be announced at least a month before the wedding, if both an engagement and wedding photo are desired. Photos should be in black and white; some color photos may be approved if contrast is suitable for reproduction. Wedding and anniversary writeups should be submitted at least five days before publication.

*The Brand will take on-location photos for special events. Call at least two days before the event to see if arrangements can be made.

*Notices of birthday celebrations will be written for Hereford residents 80 years of age and up. The Brand advertising department will quote prices and prepare all other birthday greetings or announcements, including Quinceaneras.

*Notices of new arrivals born in Hereford Regional Medical Center, information on local babies born elsewhere, or with grandparents in Hereford, should be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Brief items of interest about college students, or former residents, are welcome concerning degrees, academic honors, career promotions, etc. Please submit as soon as possible to ensure timeliness.

To submit an article or obtain more information, call Becky Campbell at 364-2030 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. After 5 p.m., information may be placed in the night drop at our front door.

Parents can make fitness fun activity for children

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD

Do your children spend more time inside the house watching television or playing computer games than they spend playing outside?

Do you know that motivating your children to be active not only improves their health and well-being now, but may benefit their health later in life?

Inactivity is becoming an epidemic among children. Children today are less active than they were just a few years ago because of many factors, including less participation in daily physical education classes at school.

KIDS NEED TO BE ACTIVE!

We ask the question - Why?

*Lack of exercise is a major reason for the growing rate of obesity among children.

1. Watching TV for even as few as two to five hours per week is linked to being overweight.

2. The number of children who watch TV five or more hours per day has increased dramatically in recent years.

3. Encourage children to spend time each day in play that requires them to be physically active.

4. Health professionals agree that physical activity is essential to helping children not only reach, but more importantly maintain, a healthy weight.

*Exercise can strengthen children's bones now as well as later in life.

1. Children who participate in weight-bearing, impact sports such as running, gymnastics, tumbling and dance have higher bone density than children who are not active or children whose major activity is a non-weight-bearing exercise such as swimming.

2. Building strong bones in childhood helps to maintain bone health later in life.

*Active children may increase their chance of becoming healthy adults.

1. Children who enjoy exercise may develop a lifelong, healthy habit of being physically active.

2. Active adults shall enjoy better health and may live longer than their less active peers.

3. Physical activity can decrease the risk of obesity, cancer, diabetes, high blood pressure, stroke and heart disease among adults.

4. People who remain active on a regular basis tend to live longer than people who are not regularly active.

*Children need to consume healthy diet and plenty of fluids for active play.

1. Children need to consume adequate calories to provide them with the energy they need to be active.

2. Foods provide children with the energy and nutrients they need to grow and the energy they need for active play.

3. Active children also need to drink plenty of fluids before, during and after exercise.

4. Professionals recommend children and adolescents participate in 30 minutes or more of moderate-intensity, physical activity on most, if not all, days of the week.

Motivate your kids to move for the fun of it!

The key word to motivating kids to be active is "fun." According to experts, children participate in physical activity for enjoyment. Take one step at a time. Encourage your child to swim, bike or play ball with friends, or take a 10-minute activity break while doing homework, watching TV, or playing computer games. Motivate your child to participate in school-organized sports and physical education classes.

Become a role model. Get the whole family involved in games, bicycling or other active play. If you're involved, your child is more likely to get involved. Participating in physical activities together may also increase the amount of quality time you spend with your child.

Couple to wed in Austin at First United Methodist

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Calkins of Hereford announce the engagement of their daughter, Kristin Elise, to Randy Wayne Mutscher of Austin.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. and Mrs. Glenn Mutscher of Giddings.

The couple will be wed in an evening ceremony June 14 in the First United Methodist Church in Austin.

The bride-elect is a 1995 graduate of Hereford High School. She attended the University of Texas, San Antonio, and is currently a student at Austin Community College. She will enter the University of Texas, Austin, in the fall pursuing a degree in psychology. Miss Calkins is employed by Dillard's.

Mr. Mutscher is a 1993 graduate of Giddings High School. He attended Blinn College in Brenham and is currently attending Austin Community College. He is employed by Mutscher Incorporated.

The couple was honored at an engagement party March 8 in the home of the bride's parents.

MRS. SHAUN DALE DESHONG
...nee Michelle Leann Meyer

Vows exchanged in candlelight ceremony

Michelle Leann Meyer of Hereford and Shaun Dale DeShong of Amarillo were united in marriage March 8 in an evening ceremony in Paramount Terrace Christian Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of J.W. and Patricia Meyer of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Murphy and Judy DeShong of Amarillo.

Rev. Lance Love, cousin of the bride of DeSoto, officiated at the candlelight ceremony.

Church decorations consisted of candelabra and aisle candles decorated with white roses, stephanotis and ivy with spring bouquets placed in the front of the church.

Maid of honor was Misty Meyer, sister of the bride of Hereford. Best man was the groom's father, Murphy DeShong.

Bridesmaid were Mandy Keeling and Tammy Gohlston of Canyon, and Melissa Meyer, sister of the bride of Hereford.

Serving as groomsmen were R.C. Cutrell of Amarillo, grandfather of the groom; Richie Wilkinson of Amarillo; and Cory McCarley, cousin of the groom of Happy.

Ushers were Michael McCarley and Chip Cress, cousins of the groom and Kevin Coleman, all of Amarillo.

Flower girls were Ashley Love, daughter of Lance and Michele Love of DeSoto, and Sterling Love, daughter of Glen and Tammy Love of Sonora.

Darren Thurman, cousin of the bride and son of Darrell and Vicky Thurman of Spearman, was the ring bearer.

Wedding music was provided by Martha Broman of Vega at the organ and piano.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white regal satin featuring a Victorian neckline and crowned with a cutout heart-shaped front. The bodice was accented with sequins and pearl jewels encrusted with fine work pearls. The princess waistline was adorned with pearl swirls.

The skirt was full and flowing satin. Her gown plunged to a low back centered with a designer bow and decorated with pearl diamond strands across the bare back.

The full length satin queens court cathedral train was decorated with European lace cutouts.

She carried a cascading bouquet of rubrum lilies, lilac, white roses, tulips, stephanotis and ivy.

Bridal attendants wore floor length, shimmering hunter green dresses and carried hurricane lanterns decorated with white roses, stephanotis and ivy. Flower girls wore ankle length hunter green satin dresses and carried white wreaths.

The couple was honored with a reception in the church activity center.

Servers were Stacy Rodriguez and Shanta McElroy of Amarillo. Sharon Cutrell of Borger, aunt of the groom, presided at the guest register. Others assisting were Margaret Murdock, aunt of the groom and Kimmie Valentine of Vega.

The three-tiered wedding cake, made by Tanya McCarley, aunt of the groom, was placed atop a water fountain, decorated with fresh flowers and accented by two satellite cakes.

The heart-shaped groom's cake was strawberry with white icing.

After a wedding trip to Colorado Springs the couple will be at home in Amarillo.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of Vega High School. She attended Clarendon College where she was a member of the Lady Bulldogs basketball team. She is currently attending West Texas A&M University, majoring in special education.

The groom graduated from Amarillo High School in 1991. He received an associates degree in auto and diesel technology in 1993 from Universal Technical Institute in Phoenix. He is employed by Cutrell Trucking in Amarillo.

Special guests were grandparents of the bride, Eva Gaydon of Lubbock and Lucille Meyer of Shattuck, Okla. and grandparents of the groom, R.C. and Betty Cutrell of Amarillo.

Red Cross Update

Tri County Chapter will offer three classes for people who are interested in volunteering to help victims of disasters. Disaster like the recent flooding and wind storms have affected and are affecting Texas residents along the Trinity River and on the Gulf Coast. Each day, the local Red Cross office receives requests from national headquarters for volunteer workers to relieve the already tired and understaffed teams who are laboring to feed and shelter temporarily homeless families. Neighbors in other states need help, too.

If you would like to train to be part of the team, you can begin now. Classes will begin Wednesday with "Introduction to Disaster Services." "Damage Assessment" will be offered on Thursday and "Introduction to Mass Care" will be offered on Friday. All classes will be held at 7 p.m. in the Red Cross building. Please call the Red Cross office to have your name included on the class roster. The number is 364-3761.

The families affected by recent disaster numbered more than 17,513. As of March 7, 141,000 meals have been served to victims and workers in the affected areas. Red Cross employed 60 Emergency Response Vehicles and sheltered 3,949 people in 105 shelters at a cost of $6.2 million dollars.

Last year, the American Red Cross...

*Provided nearly half of the nation's vitally needed blood supply.

*Assisted our neighbors, one-by-one, in more than 63,000 disaster and reached more than 14.5 million people with family disaster preparedness information.

*Contacted military families with their loved ones, serving far away, by relaying more than 4,000 emergency communications every day.

*Fed and cared for men, women and children in disaster and conflict areas around the world; and

*Saved countless lives by training nearly 13 million people in health and safety courses, including CPR, first aid, life guarding, swimming, HIV/AIDS, and care giving.

Top Ten Reasons to believe in your American Red Cross:

1. We help you save lives.
2. We're there when you need us.
3. We do things you care about.
4. We help you protect your family.
5. We're in your neighborhood every day.
6. We're volunteers.
7. We keep people in touch during emergencies.

8. We use your money wisely.
9. We're neutral and independent - not a government agency.
10. We're YOUR American Red Cross.

All Red Cross disaster assistance is free, made possible by voluntary gifts of time and money from American people. The Red Cross is not a government agency. To help victims of these and other disasters, call 806-364-3761, or 1-800-Help Now (800-435-7669), or 800-257-7575 (Spanish). You may also contribute to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund by sending a check to your local Red Cross chapter or to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013. It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs - and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real estate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examines the latest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.

Resident's grandson marries in Plainview

Trina Gail Mogg and Terry Lee Mitchell exchanged wedding vows March 1 at Faith Baptist Church in Plainview with the Rev. Joseph Johnson, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Patricia Mogg and Mrs. Rex Mogg of Plainview and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Dunn of Littlefield and Ruth Mogg of Kerrville.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mitchell of Amarillo and the grandson of Jessie Matthews of Hereford.

Amy Cate of Plainview was maid of honor. Billy Ray Mitchell of Amarillo, brother of the groom, was best man.

Bridesmaid was Mary Ann Hamlin of Plainview and groomsman was Mark D. Wood of Amarillo. Jason Jack and Dennis Harkins Jr. of Plainview were ushers.

Kayla Alvis was flower girl and Johnathan Langston was ring bearer.

Musical selections were presented by Melissa Alvis, pianist, and Mrs. Shawn Riley, vocalist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white baroque satin gown designed with puff sleeves on a fitted bodice accented with pearls at the neckline and waist. The skirt extended to a train.

Her tiered finger tip veil was held by a satin and pear headband with satin and organza rose blossoms and pearl loops.

She carried a bouquet of white roses, carnations, orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath.

After a wedding trip to Lubbock, the couple will reside in Amarillo. The bride is a 1994 graduate of Plainview High School and assistant manager of Kirkland's.

The groom is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School. He is employed by Canyon Drive Lumber in Amarillo.

Student receives scholar award

Michael Calaway, son of Mr. and Mrs. Randel Calaway of Gothenburg, Neb., and formerly of Hereford and grandson of Bonnie Calaway of Hereford, was the seventh grade

MICHAEL CALAWAY

Gothenburg Public School nominee for the Swede Scholar Award.

The Swede Scholar Award recognizes student excellence in one or more of a variety of areas: academics, extra-curricular activities, relationship/leadership with peers and/or service to the community.

Calaway was nominated by three of his teachers, Mrs. Christensen, Mrs. Teply and Mr. Scherer, who stated he is an enthusiastic student who actively participates in class discussion, group work and conscientiously completes his daily assignments.

Mrs. Christensen said, "Michael displays a lot of southern hospitality in his respectfulness to teachers and other students."

Calaway lists his hobbies as playing basketball, fishing, working with animals, listening and playing music.

TAES office sponsors training for volunteers

California bound

El Hormiguero Project, a rural community outreach geared toward Hispanic small landowners, sent a group of nine persons on a six-day exchange trip to California. The trip is sponsored by the Promised Land Network. While in California, the Deaf Smith County residents will have an opportunity to exchange ideas and interact with farmers. Pictured, from left, are Lydia Villanueva, Diana Covarrubia, Ofelia Soto, Inez Reyna, Elias Reyna, Florencio Zamora, Anatacio Rojas and Mela Rojas.

The Deaf Smith, Potter and Randall County offices of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are sponsoring a volunteer training program for those interested in the agriculture and food industry and having a desire to share that information with consumers and urban neighbors.

The program called the Texas Agrifood Masters Program will provide volunteers with 32 hours of intense training from some of the nation's premier authorities on various subjects including the environment, food industry and agricultural issues.

The first program session will be on March 17 at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center, located at 6500 Amarillo Blvd., in Amarillo.

The speaker for the first meeting will be Dr. Rudy Tarpley from Texas Tech University. He will discuss "Ag Literacy--What does the Public Know about our Food and Fiber System."

Session two will be March 18 at the Potter County Extension Office meeting room, located at 3301 E. 10th Street near the entrance to the Tri-State Fairgrounds.

Speakers for that evening Dr. Sanford Miller, University of Texas Health Science Center, San Antonio, and Dr. Russell Cross, Director of the Institute of Food Science at TAMU in College Station.

Sessions will be held on each Monday until April 28 from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the TAMU Center. Other speakers will be Dr. John Mullett, Department of Bio-Chemistry and Bio-Physics, TAMU; Dr. Floy Lilly, and Dr. Margaret Maxey, both with the Murchison Chair of Free Enterprise, UT in Austin.

Sessions will be conducted by the Texas Farm Bureau on relations with the media activist groups, The Texas Beef Industry Council, Texas Wheat Producers Board and Texas Corn Producers Board will have sessions dealing with their commodities.

On April 14, the group will tour the IBP Beef Cattle Slaughter and Fabrication Plant in Amarillo. Graduation ceremonies will be on April 28.

Upon completion of the training, individuals will join other Agrifood Master volunteers to assist with projects including speaking opportunities, school outreach programs, industry and media relations, ag fairs, career days and other outreach efforts.

The goal of the Agrifood Master Program is to provide accurate, unbiased, scientific information to consumer audiences in order that they may stay informed about agriculture, natural resources, food and environmental issues. Thus making wise decisions about food and fiber production and marketing systems.

Participants will have the opportunity to interact with people from all walks of life, various social backgrounds and various vocations.

Past participants have come from the city and farm. They have had vocations representing the agriculture industry, health fields, business, homemakers, lawyers, advertising, teaching and media.

All will have the common interest of telling the true story about agricultural production and food issues.

Cost of the course is $35. There are only a few spots left in this coming class. Any persons interested in participating are asked the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573.

Registration can be completed and fees paid at the first session. If interested, please call Monday morning, March 17.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent-AG
It is always interesting to look at the Hereford Economic Indicators that are prepared by the Hereford Economic Development Corporation, and periodically published in The Brand.

As I studied the information in the March issue of the paper, I put my brain to work (not much else on my body is working lately), and just tried to realize the impact of each of the items listed on our local economy. Being the agricultural type that I am, my eyes immediately went to the agricultural portion of the table.

Usually, we think of the economic activity as those things created by local business.

Even in a town that is so dependent on agriculture for its livelihood, many people tend to forget what an impact changes in agriculture can have on our economy.

Take the difference in the price of the grains that we produce. The table listed the price of the at this time in 1996 at $7.01 per hundredweight. The price for corn in 1997 on the same date was $5.28.

This would mean a difference in price in one year of $1.73. Using the last three year's average production, this price differential could cost local corn producers $3.83 million.

Wheat was $5.30 per bushel at this time in 1996. On March 11, 1997, it was $4.03. A difference of $1.27.

Again, using the last three year's averages production, this decrease in price could cost local wheat producers $3.16 million.

Grain sorghum was $6.40 per hundredweight in 1996 on March 11. In 1997, it was $4.50. A difference of $1.90. Using the three year average production, this decrease could cost sorghum growers $3.15 million.

Grain producers in Deaf Smith County alone could lose $10.14 million in 1997 just to decreases in the price of their commodities.

Using the old economic indicator that the local dollar spent turns over seven times, this decrease in price could have an impact of $70.98 million on the local economy.

In this case, to the detriment of the local and area economy.

Your probably saying, what does all of this mean number crunching, multipliers and talk of the lost revenue mean?

Very easily, it simply means that those producers will not have the buying power to purchase new cars, equipment, improve housing, purchase durable goods, etc.

On the brighter side, as we look at the cattle prices moving from $62.96 in 1996 to $68.67 per hundredweight in 1997.

This increase of $5.71 per hundredweight multiplied by the average number of fat cattle marketed in Deaf Smith County yearly, will yield an increase to cattle producers of about $40 million.

This increase in cattle income will help offset the losses in grain production as far as the total economy is concerned.

The problems will still remain with those individual producers that see those sharp decreases in price.

I think that many times when we talk about economic development, we tend to just think of getting that new business started that will employ a certain number of people and produce that big payroll.

Folks, $10 million in grain production and $40 million in cattle sales are pretty big payrolls.

My dad, whose opinion on agriculture I admire very much, was the manager of a farmers cooperative cotton gin for about 35 years.

He was involved in the cotton industry on the South Plains for many years, while serving as the President of the Texas Cotton Ginners Association.

He presented testimony to a congressional committee while they were discussing economic development incentives for rural areas, that showed increasing the price of cotton by five cents per pound over the vast cotton producing area around Lubbock would produce more economic activity than all of the new businesses that were started in that area in five years during the late seventies and early eighties.

Folks, agriculture in Deaf Smith County and the Panhandle-South

Plains Area is Big Business. I hope we never lose sight of that fact.

Let me make it clear to all concerned that I am all for the economic development in our area of any kind and hardly support all of the efforts of the Hereford Economic Development Corporation, the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce and all other groups and organizations that are out there fighting the battle to keep rural America competitive with the urban centers of our nation.

But, let's not forget the contribution that can be made by keeping our producers on the land and keeping them producing those commodities that are needed by our nation and our world.

It's nice to be back. Thanks to all of you who came by, sent cards or get well greetings. See you next week. Think rain!

Ranchers enroll in AHIR program

Groteguts, Olsons sign up

Chris and Josef Grotegut of Grotegut Farm and Ranch, and Steve Olson of Olson Cattle Company, all of Hereford, have been enrolled in the Angus Herd Improvement Records program of the American Angus Association, reports Richard Spader, executive vice president of the national breed registry organization in St. Joseph, Miss.

Angus Herd Improvement (AHIR) is a comprehensive evaluation program used by registered Angus breeders to help them keep records of reproduction and growth rate on individual animals. Each year hundreds of Angus breeders use AHIR records to produce more profitable, efficient Angus seedstock. By weighing calves at 205 days of age and again at a year of age, breeders not only identify the cattle that grow the fastest and most efficiently, they also identify cows that regularly produce above average calves and bulls that sire outstanding calves.

The American Angus Association in 1957 was the first beef breed organization to offer its members a production records program.

Since that date, the AHIR program has grown to the point that breeders report more than a half million birth, weaning and yearling weights each year.

This mountain of information is processed by the Association's modern computerized data processing systems.

Precipitation enhancement program set for Thursday

Armstrong, Deaf Smith, Potter and Randall County residents are invited to hear information and express their opinions about a proposed regional precipitation enhancement program during a public meeting to be held at 3 p.m. March 20 in the Hereford Community Center.

Informational meetings, such as this, will be held in March within the five District Directors' Precincts of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.

George Bomar with the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission in Austin will be the guest speaker.

Bomar has been involved with precipitation enhancement programs since 1975.

Precipitation enhancement is an attempt to encourage clouds to generate more rainfall than they would otherwise through the introduction of seeding agents, such as silver iodide.

It is also known as cloud seeding. He oversees the permitting of all weather modification activities in the state of Texas.

Bomar will discuss the theory of cloud seeding for precipitation enhancement, the benefits of additional rainfall to regional surface and ground water supplies, the operation of the Water District's proposed precipitation enhancement program, and how precipitation enhancement differs from hail suppression programs.

"These meetings will allow the public to learn more about precipitation enhancement and how both agricultural producers and homeowners can benefit from additional rainfall.

"In addition, the meetings will give our five-member Board of Directors an opportunity for feedback from the public as to whether or not the Water District should implement a precipitation enhancement program this spring and summer," A. Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 said.

Robert Meyer of Hereford is the District Director representing Armstrong, Deaf Smith Potter and Randall Counties.

The Armstrong County Committee members are Bruce Blake of Bushland, secretary; James Watson and Larry Stevens, both of Happy; and Buddy Heisler, Tom Ferris and James Stockett, all of Wayside.

The HPUWD's Deaf Smith County Committee members are B.F. Cain of Hereford, secretary; Sid Shaw, Harvey Milton, Sammy Gonzales, Troy Sublett and L.J. Clark, all of Hereford.

The Potter County Committee members are Bruce Blake of Bushland, secretary; Marshall Cutwright Jr. and J.R. Gill, both of Amarillo; Frank Bezner, Randall B. Fletcher and Ronnie Williams, all of Bushland.

The HPUWD's Randall County Committee members are Patricia Rusler of Canyon, secretary; Pat Wilhelm, Happy, Lane Mason, Wildorado, and Michael Paul Wiecek, Jack Brandt and David Winters, all of Canyon.

Heavy rains please some Texas farmers

DONNA, Texas (AP) - Heavy rains that wreaked havoc this week on flood-prone neighborhoods in the Rio Grande Valley have left drought-stricken farmers rejoicing over the unusually wet weather.

"It's fantastic," said Rod Santa Ana, a spokesman for the Texas A&M Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Weslaco. "It's alleviating the demand at the reservoirs and providing more water."

March is usually one of the driest months of the year in deep South Texas, and the rain had moved out by Thursday. But showers soaked the region three times earlier in the week, dumping several inches of rain on most Valley cities.

In the last two days, Donna received as much as eight inches of rain. The nearby farming community of Monte Alto received more than nine inches, The (McAllen) Monitor reported Thursday.

"Overall, it's been great for canes and citrus," said Andy Scott, director of research at Rio Farms in Monte Alto.

Scott noted that the rain could damage some crops, including recently planted cotton, soy beans and corn. However, he said it would do more good than harm.

"It's more toward the positive side because we've been without rain for so long," he said. "It helps the soil quality, and we don't need to irrigate for about a month."

The rains also have helped replenish the two drought-depleted reservoirs that supply water to the region.

Agriculture Briefs

SALISBURY, Md. (AP) - Farmers on Maryland's Eastern Shore are frustrated with their poor yields of sorghum grain, a crop they were encouraged to grow by Perdue Farms Inc., the poultry giant.

After a poor showing in 1995 when sorghum harvests on the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia Peninsula reached an all-time low, farmers are decreasing the number of planted acres.

Sorghum, also known as milo, attracted the interest of Perdue and farmers because it can be used as an alternative to corn in chicken feed and acts as an antidote to the parasites that attack soybeans.

"Grain sorghum can be very profitable if everything goes well," said Wayne Shaff, the Wicomico County extension director.

But not everything has gone well for milo growers. Two years ago, drought-like conditions slowed growth. Last year, too much rain washed the nutrients out of the soil.

"A lot of people are getting a little disgruntled with it," Shaff said.

Perdue created a market for milo on the Eastern Shore. The crop is more drought-resistant than corn, which helps when there is a nationwide corn shortage, such as the one experienced last year.

Milo also adapts more easily to the sometimes sandy soil of the Lower Shore.

Milo is important because farmers on the Eastern Shore can't produce enough corn to meet the needs of the local poultry industry, said Fred Diem, an extension officer in Virginia.

Ralph H. Arcum, a Hebron, Md., farmer, said Perdue's commitment to milo also helps his soybean crops. Soybean cyst nematodes, a type of parasite, have plagued soybean crops on the Eastern Shore for years. Rotating milo crops in the soil where soybeans are grown helps clear out the nematodes.

Instead of leaving his soil fallow for a year when the nematodes take over, Arcum grows 100 acres of milo and makes more than $2.25 a bushel.

Perdue gets 65 percent to 70 percent of its corn locally and the rest from the West, said Keith Rinehart, a vice president. It buys an average of 2 1/2 million to 3 million bushels of milo a year, he said.

Acreage has quadrupled since 1989, when Perdue began pushing farmers to plant milo.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) - In 1981, Americans consumed an average of 81 pounds of their potatoes fresh and 9 pounds of them frozen. Last year the figure was 49 pounds fresh, 59 pounds frozen.

But domestic demand for fresh potatoes has been trending ever so slightly upward since 1990.

Idaho shipped 33.2 million 100-pound sacks of fresh potatoes from the 1995 crop.

Clover mite may cause homeowners problems

AMARILLO--Some insects prefer winter's cooler temperatures. One such species in the spider mite family, the clover mite, chooses to move around even if temperatures tell us winter is still here.

These small, red-green mites will come into homes from surrounding lawns and other areas of vegetation. According to Carl Patrick, an entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the clover mite's behavior is unlike most other species of spider mites that damage plants in the summer.

"Although the mites are small, they will be quite obvious when large numbers appear on your windowsill," Patrick said.

They have eight legs with front legs twice as long as the others. Infestations usually are confined to the sun-exposed south or west sides of buildings and are most severe during late winter and early spring, he said.

Adult female clover mites will lay small, round, red eggs in bark crevices at the bases of trees or in the cracks and crevices of buildings in the spring before temperatures reach 85 degrees Fahrenheit.

The eggs will stay dormant during the summer, and the adults die. Eggs hatch in the fall as temperatures drop below 85 degrees. The mites will feed and develop during the fall and the warm periods of winter, and as spring

It is at this time, when many of the mites inadvertently enter homes. Often described as "walking dust," they do not feed on anything in the home, but can leave a reddish-orange stain, if crushed.

Since clover mites enter homes through small cracks and crevices around doors and windows, sealing these areas will help prevent the entry.

According to Patrick, the most effective prevention is removing grass and weeds for 18 to 24 inches around the foundation of the house. This area does not have to remain bare, for a number of ornamental plantings that are not attractive to the mite could be used in beds next to the foundation.

Chemical controls, such as miticides can be applied to lower

River basin awaits re-evaluation of federal project

KINGSTON, Okla. (AP) - Dark salty waters of Lake Texoma hold a plentiful catch for anglers in search of strippers, black bass, crappie and catfish.

Sportsmen consider the salt a nutrient in the ecological chain at Texoma, home to rod-and-reel records and a $25 million fishing industry.

But others view the salt as a contaminant hindering non-recreational water supplies to needy municipalities, industries and agriculture.

The federal Red River Chloride Control Project aims to divert natural salts that flow into Lake Texoma and other points down the river. The project - authorized 40 years ago, with a current price tag of $310 million - was virtually placed on hold in 1994 amid complaints that desalination might jeopardize the land and wildlife.

A long-awaited re-evaluation by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was expected to be made public some time in March.

Environmental groups and lake businessmen around Kingston hope the corps recommends abandoning or altering its blueprints for a giant system of dams, brine reservoirs, pipelines and pumps on the West Texas prairie.

Marina owner Tom Wootton said boosters have made phony and overstated claims about the benefits for Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

"We're spending too much money doing too much damage for too little benefit," Wootton said.

Tinkering with the river's salt content would damage the fish population at Lake Texoma, Wootton said. Water levels would drop, he said, and so would tourism.

Wootton owns Buncombe Creek Resort Marina with cabins and a campground. His store sells packs of lures, bottles of boat wax, oars and trolling buckets. Visitors come from out of state for fishing tournaments and sailboat races at the 89,000-acre lake.

"I could see it being a real bad deal for us," Wootton said. "Maybe you won't kill this lake ... but if you make this lake a mediocre lake, are people going to drive 10 hours to get here?"

The Red River Chloride Control Project was designed to target 10 salt sources where deposits originated from a sea over the Texas Panhandle millions of years ago. Thousands of tons of salt flow every day into the river's tributaries, making the water too saline to drink or use for irrigation.

The corps already has spent about $85 million on two phases of the project: a dyke at Estelline Springs, and a deflatable dam and brine lagoon at Truscott. Eight other phases of the project are still on the drawing board.

The purpose is to collect and dispose of the saltiest water near the points of origin in West Texas.

"I have read the studies that have been done, and I can't see anything but an enhancement to our environment and our ecosystem," said Ron Glenn, general manager of the Red River Authority of Texas in Wichita Falls.

Glenn's agency works for water conservation and reclamation in 43 counties in the river basin. Texas cities such as Gainesville and Vernon need auxiliary supplies, he said.

The Wichita Falls City Council on March 4 unanimously called for continued construction of the project, "a viable solution to meet the future water resource needs and economic development for the entire region," according to the council's resolution.

Supporters say the chloride reduction would be gradual and monitored. They hope less-salty water would attract new industry to the Red River area.

And supporters contend that federal taxpayers should keep footing the bill, instead of local users, because the four states involved couldn't afford it or overcome the politics to carry it out.

Richard Brontoli, executive director of the Red River Valley Association in Shreveport, La., said environmental risks have been exaggerated. His lobbying group campaigns in favor of the project.

"Our contention is, parts have been done," Brontoli said. "We think there's a value to spend some more money to finish sections of it."

He said Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating is the only governor to publicly oppose the project. Keating cited economic and environmental reasons for his stance.

Other opponents include the Oklahoma Wildlife Federation, Oklahoma Department of Wildlife Conservation, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

U.S. Rep. Wes Watkins, a Republican who represents southeast Oklahoma, would not say how he would vote if the chloride project went before Congress. Lake silt build-up was a more immediate concern, he said.

"We've got to do something about the upstream flood controls that come into Lake Texoma to prevent the silting and the erosion going in," he said. "If not, we're not going to have anything but a mud puddle in 25-50 years."

Watkins said the federal government must prioritize its projects because "there's not going to be enough money to do everything."

Environmentalists find plenty of problems with the whole idea.

They warn that reducing the river's high salt content would make the water less clear and would inhibit photosynthesis. They expressed concerns about habitat changes, increased water withdrawal and encroachment of vegetation.

Opponents also fear that migratory birds would come into contact with toxic levels of selenium accumulating at the proposed brine lagoons.

"The RRCCP, as currently proposed, has inherent flaws and unmanageable limitations that prevent solutions to a broad range of environmental impacts and relegates protection of the Red River Basin's fish, wildlife and related recreational and economic values as secondary issues behind increased water supply," the Oklahoma wildlife department wrote in 1996.

The Corps of Engineers' chief of public affairs in Tulsa, Ross Adkins, said the agency's project review was sent to Assistant Secretary of the Army Martin Lancaster. Adkins refused to reveal what the corps recommends.

Meanwhile, people in Kingston and other places along the river basin are waiting.

Wootton said he and other marina owners wish a swift end to the project.

Project facts

Facts about the federal Red River Chloride Control Project:
PURPOSE: To collect and dispose of brine in the West Texas tributaries that feed the Red River.

COST: about $310 million, including $85 million spent since the project was authorized in 1957.

SUPPORTERS: Groups who say the project would improve the water's potential for municipal, industrial and agricultural use in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

OPPONENTS: Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating, environmental groups and Lake Texoma business owners who say the project costs too much, threatens wildlife and tampers with the water's ecological balance.

STATUS: A re-evaluation and recommendations by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers are pending.

Growers want to see for themselves who will benefit from corn varieties

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) - Mike Clark likes the idea of a corn plant genetically engineered to kill caterpillars that otherwise could munch away his profits.

But Clark and a lot of other corn growers say they want to see for themselves if they will benefit from the flood of new corn varieties carrying pest-fighting Bt genes.

This year, most major seed corn companies plan to offer limited quantities of the engineered corn, which kills the European corn borer thanks to genes from the Bacillus thuringiensis bacterium.

"I'm more curious than eager to try it, I guess," says Clark, who farms about 750 acres of corn in Illinois and Indiana. Clark said he plans to plant 120 to 150 acres of Bt corn side-by-side with similar varieties that lack the bacterial genes.

"There's a lot of interest out there, but there's still a lot of wait and see, too," Clark says. "The cost is about $12 more per acre, so with $3 (per bushel) corn you need at least five more bushels per acre to make it pay."

Seed companies are betting big bucks that farmers will want more of the high-tech corn. They have spent millions developing the Bt strains and are waging a cross-country legal battle over the technology.

"There's a lot at stake here," says

Kevin Aandahl, a spokesman for DeKalb Genetics Corp. The company is suing Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. and most other major seed companies, claiming they improperly used Bt technology patented by DeKalb.

"We've got a multimillion-dollar investment that we want to protect," Aandahl said. "With all this new technology, we've seen more changes in the last 18 months in the seed industry than we have in the last 25 years."

But the lawsuits will take months, if not years, to be resolved, meaning other companies will be free to sell their Bt corn seed this year. Only two companies - Ciba-Geigy and Mycogen - had their Bt varieties ready last year.

The Bt genes make the corn plants produce the same toxin the Bt bacteria use to kill corn borers. The corn-eating caterpillars reduce yields 5 percent to 7.5 percent each year by chewing through the plants' ears, leaves and stalks.

Farmers who used Bt corn in Illinois last year say it remained free of borer damage.

"We did get higher yields with the Bt corn, not in every case, but in a majority of cases," said McLean County farmer Brad Wade, who planted about 100 acres' worth of Ciba's Bt corn last year. "In all cases we had no corn borers, so it did work in that regard."

Wade says he plans to plant about 300 acres of various Bt corn varieties this year on the 3,800 acres he farms in central Illinois.

"With any new technology, things react differently in different years," Wade said. "Last year, it seemed to work fine. Next year might be a different story. I'm just experimenting with different varieties at this point."

The genetically engineered corn also cleared a major hurdle in December when the 15-nation European Union voted to allow imports of Bt corn. The EU's initial reluctance to approve Bt corn could have stopped most U.S. corn exports to Europe, because the Bt corn is mixed in with the rest of the harvest.

Chicken farm pit odor draws stink

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) - Some East Texas residents are raising a stink about the stench caused by a chicken farm pit used to dispose of hundreds of dead birds.

The Northeast Texas Municipal Water District has received dozens of complaints this month, alleging the pit is making them sick and polluting their water.

"A few years ago, East Texas was considered the place to retire, but now there are times at night when the odor literally makes you sick," said M.L. Alexander, who lives near the chicken farm in Daingerfield, about 35 miles north of Longview.

Billy Clement, another neighbor of the farm, said the odor is drawing flies.

"When they started burying (chickens) within 50 yards of the fence line, the fly infestation was incredible, and the smell was horrible," Clement said. "You don't open your windows around here. During the summer, it gets into your air conditioner, and it's pumped right into your house. You can't escape it."

But the pit does more than just offend the senses.

Eight neighbors of the farm say the pit has contaminated local water wells.

Writing Is Easy: It's editing that's hard

I'm often asked how I learned to be a professional writer. Actually, I'm not a professional writer. I am a professional speaker who happens to get paid a little for what I write.

However, to answer the question, I learned to write simple sentences in the first or second grade. I still write simple sentences. I find it the best way to get ideas from my pen to others' minds. No pompous phrases or polysyllabic prolixity will help you transmit ideas as easily as clear, simple sentences. Yes, I know, I just broke one of my rules for clear, concise writing.

Each of you can improve your writing skills. However, there are some prerequisites. First, you must want to write clearly. Second, you must be willing to put forth some effort. Third, you must learn the basic rules of grammar, punctuation and spelling. Finally, you must learn to edit and rewrite. You see the writing really is easy, the editing is hard.

Tips for better writing

I believe you can apply the following pointers to writing books, articles, letters, reports and speeches. Give them a try, and watch the quality of your writing improve.

• Before you begin, ask two questions: Who am I writing to? and, What do I want to tell them? This will help you focus on the critical issues.

• Next, outline your major points. This may seem too basic for some of you who have writing experience, but it works. Outlining saves writing and editing time and adds flexibility for changing, adding or deleting points. List the important points you want to cover and then organize them for smooth, logical flow.

• Use simple, familiar combinations of words. We often use big words to impress rather than express. Use short nouns and action verbs whenever possible. For example, don't use courtenance if you can use face. Don't write terminus if you can use end. Don't say squalid rodent if you mean dirty rat.

• Construct short sentences and paragraphs. One of the more common mistakes writers make is using long, run-on sentences. This often leads to long, confusing paragraphs. By contrast, the longest sentence in this column contains only 25 words. The longest paragraph has only seven short sentences.

• Learn to use basic writing tools. When I'm writing for money I'm never far away from a dictionary to check my spelling. I use a thesaurus to find better words. I turn to a style manual for grammar and punctuation, and I use a book of quotations to see if anyone already said it better. I still write each column and article in long hand, but we use a computer for editing.

And now the hard part

The key to good writing is rewriting, so edit until your hand cramps. I don't know anyone who produces letter perfect copy on the first draft. The best writers shorten, clarify, improve the flow, correct misspelled words and grammatical errors and add style and impact with every edit.

Here are five mini-tips for editing. First, allow some time to pass before you edit your work. Try to allow at least 24 hours to slip by between writing and editing.

Second, be ruthless in cleaning up poor writing. You may need to rearrange paragraphs, eliminate complete sentences and chop out unnecessary words.

Third, read what you've written aloud. This is a good way to catch missing or incorrect words.

Fourth, as yourself if the intended message is clear. Are your points arranged in logical order? Does point A make B easier to understand? Does point B then explain C, and so on.

Finally, know when you're done. When you've finished writing and editing, stop.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

On June 30, 1997, Hong Kong will pass from British control back to Communist China. I have heard this mentioned in passing on TV newscasts, etc. but the reality of it did not penetrate by Texas Panhandle existence until a longtime (I'll not call her old) friend related to me her adventures smuggling Bibles into Red China from Hong Kong.

She told me that in shops throughout Hong Kong clocks are counting down the seconds until Communist takeover. Many of Hong Kong's residents have left the island to escape the inevitable. However, most are not able financially to pack up their lives and start over somewhere else.

The border between Hong Kong and Red China is officially open to tourist travel, but not to Bibles. They must be smuggled by daring and courageous Christians, such as my friend Donna, who have a compassion for the people of this Communist country.

Flying into China from the Philippines was only the beginning of her adventure as the pilot set down the plane in the midst of unending skyscrapers. Hong Kong is a beautiful, modern, but very crowded city with very little wide open space to accommodate a runway.

The passage from Hong Kong to Communist China was accomplished amid Red Chinese guards who excitedly chattered in her face in a language my friend did not understand. They constantly tried to get her to stop to let them inspect the tote bag billed with 12 Bibles that she carried on her right shoulder to shield it from the guards on her left.

Those who volunteered for this mission were instructed to act nonchalant (no problem, those ar just loaded guns they're waving at us!) and keep moving no matter what, unless a guard physically stops your progress. As it happened when my friend was going through a turnstile, a guard jumped out in front of her and locked her in the turnstile. There was nothing she could do but stand there - and pry. Eventually the guard let her out without explanation, at least not one she could understand.

When she finally got through the buildings and guard stations she crossed a bridge into Red China. In the middle of that bridge is a large clock, again ticking down the seconds to Communist takeover. She told me that she stood there, against instructions, and wept for the people of Hong Kong.

There are signs all over the area which proclaim that China will make Hong Kong better. One look at Red China, the real Red China in its filth and poverty, away from the border, compared with an immaculately clean, modern, prosperous Hong Kong tells you that the signs are simply not true.

Something halfway around the world often does not touch us until we have some personal link with it. The tales told me by my dear friend made this impending event a reality to me, and is what attracted me to one of our new books this week.

The Last Six Million Seconds by John Burdett takes place on the eve of the historic changeover. When Royal Hong Kong Police Chief Chan Sui-kai ("Charlie") finds three heads floating in the sea and their bodies at the bottom of a commercial meat grinder in an abandoned warehouse, he also has to find the reason why the coast guard and another outside agency are opposed to his investigation.

The determined Chan, half Chinese, half Irish, goes in search of the killer and the truth behind the British government's attempts at cover-up. As he proceeds in the investigation he comes face to face with the shocking, behind-the-scenes workings of the Red Chinese.

This book will help bring home to you the reality of the Chinese takeover of Hong Kong and the effects on its people.

Incidentally, my friend and all of her group were able to get all the Bibles through to the Communist side. Each one of those Bibles will touch hundreds of people as they tear out pages, memorize them, and pass them on to others who are doing the same thing.

If you're interested in seeing Hong Kong, especially before the changeover, we have a new guide book, but you'll need to book your trip soon. The Treasures and Pleasures of Hong Kong is full of shopping tips for the wonderfully exotic shops there. Hong Kong is evidently a marvelous place to shop.

Other new nonfiction books include the biography, Erma Bombeck: A Life in Humor by Susan Edwards.

It's hard to believe that she has been gone nearly a year. If you like her laugh-at-yourself humor, you'll enjoy this celebration of her all-too-brief but ultimately triumphant life.

With spring approaching, are you getting the new house itch? If you are we have the book for you. Ten Steps to Home Ownership by Ilyce R. Glink includes not only step-by-step instructions on how to buy a home, but also a section called "The Top 5 Emotional Mistakes First-Time Buyers Often Make."

Other new books this week are:

- Fiction:
The Hammer and the Cross by Harry Harrison.
Necroscope: Resurgence The Lost Years, Volume Two by Brian Lumley.
Destination Gold by Richard Marcinko and John Weisman.
Suspects by Thomas Berger.
Manhattan Nocturne by Colin Harrison.
 Nonfiction:
Living Faith by Jimmy Carter.
The Weigh Down Diet by Gwen Shamblin.
The Complete Book of Personal Legal Forms by Daniel Sitarz.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: We spend many hours watching videotapes of shows we've recorded. We've acquired quite a collection, and in order to quickly find a particular episode we'd like to watch we have a loose-leaf binder with all our tapes numbered and a brief description of the episodes. We can quickly scan the list and find out which tape we want and away we go! — H. & L. Mills, Billings, Mont.

Super video-library idea. I'm sure it will help others who are building up a "library" of favorite shows. — Heloise

FAST FACTS

Dear Heloise: Having been transported from California to San Antonio, I know what a drought can be like. Conserving water came as no surprise to us.

I hope the following ideas will be of use to others.

• Replace showerheads with a low-flow head.

• Don't leave the water running while brushing your teeth or shaving.

• When hand-washing dishes, wash a lot of them first, then run the rinse water.

• When showering, either turn the water off while soaping and shampooing or place buckets in the shower to collect water. Use to water plants or landscape.

• Pay attention to your water use. Fix any leak, no matter how small it may seem. Each leak leads to wasted water and increased water bills. — Robin Latimer, San Antonio

SUBSTITUTE WIPES

Dear Heloise: When unable to obtain the personal hygiene wipes I had been using, I bought the least expensive baby towelettes I could find and cut them in half to fit the plain plastic box from the unobtainable product. These wipes also come in handy for a quick cleanup of bathroom fixtures.

I enjoy your columns in our paper and in Good Housekeeping. Thanks! — Anne W. Morris, North Little Rock, Ark.

PORCH LIGHT SIGNAL

Dear Heloise: When I was growing up, my mother would turn the front porch light on and off several times to signal that it was time to come in for the evening. Although this was annoying to us (we were teen-agers), we always saw our signal and went inside.

Now that I have my own teen-agers, I use this same signal to let them know when to come in. It still works and I'm sure it's also annoying to them. — R.S., San Antonio

Windows, wrapping porch enhance country look

FEATURE HOMES
BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

A picturesque front porch, wrapping three sides of the front, this home adds character and charm.

A formal foyer opens to an angled hallway leading to a dining room and activity room. The dining room is sumptuous with lavish windows and also includes a vaulted ceiling and central fireplace.

The clustered bed rooms are particularly impressive. A large central laundry is near both the kitchen and the bed rooms.

The master suite includes a volume ceiling and enormous walk-in closets. Embellished with a luxurious salon bath, covered patio access and volume ceilings, this area indulges the homeowner in complete comfort.

The central kitchen is perfect for both casual and formal entertaining. The adjacent breakfast area is vaulted and a discrete half bath is adjacent. A three car garage is accessible from here also.

A combination of exterior treatments and steeply pitched multiple rooflines provide a distinctive appearance to the home.

All W. D. Farmer plans include construction details for substituting brick, frame or stucco exterior finish. Plan number 2184 includes 2,145 square feet of heated space and is furnished with a crawl space foundation.

To receive an information packet on this plan, call W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc. at 1-800-225-7526 or 1-800-221-7526 in Ga.

Couple turns vintage house into charmer

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition

Elise and Curt Hine line started with a modest house and a shoe string budget. By working on one or two projects at a time over a number of years, they've turned a plain old farmhouse into a charmer.

"We call it the ultimate recycling job," says Elise Hine line about the two-story circa-1920 farmhouse in the center of Ridgefield, a picturesque old town in Connecticut.

Virtually every square foot of the house and its lot have been changed in some way. Hine line redid the grounds, built a picket fence and gate, and put up a large Victorian barn out back. He also repainted the exterior of the white house and removed the shutters to simplify the facade and emphasize the multi-paned 20-over-20 windows, one of the house's most appealing features.

The house, which encompasses about 1,600 square feet of living space, has a living room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom and tiny mud room on the ground floor and three bedrooms and a bath upstairs.

Thanks to the renovations, visitors today experience the charm of the small house, framed by plantings of birch, oriental cherry and rhododendron. You approach the house along a brick walk built by Curt Hine line, stepping onto the porch he widened and into the house through the front door that he relocated to make a more gracious entryway.

Inside, the most extensive attention was lavished on the master bedroom suite in an L-configuration on the ground floor, where the house's first occupant ran a home laundry. An addition to the original house, it was heated only by a kerosene stove. Hine line gutted the space, insulated, rewired, added closets and raised the ceiling.

"We heat it with a woodstove in the winter, so it's a cozy little apartment for us," says Elise Hine line.

Perhaps the most intriguing feature in the room is the soaking tub in one corner. The round tub, six feet in diameter, is actually an animal watering tank purchased from the Sears farm catalog. They had it plumbed and then painted it themselves with white epoxy paint.

"As a child in the midwest, Curt took baths in an old galvanized tub," says Elise, "and that was his inspiration."

"We saw the neighbors loading it to dispose of it and they gave it to us in another instance of salvage," she recalls.

As a professional house painter who offers special finishes - marbling, mottling, combing, sponging, wood graining and stenciling - Hine line decided to make his house an example of the art of faux finishing.

Midseason hiatus of ER may be healthy for Hope

Hector Elizondo, Christine Lahti, Adam Arkin and Mark Harmon (from left) staff the hospital of Chicago Hope, airing Mondays on CBS. With ER on hiatus, Chicago Hope is the new focus of prime-time medical drama fans. Monday's episode features a guest appearance by Alan Arkin, father of cast member Adam Arkin.

By Roberta C. Nelson
OTVData Features Syndicate

The comparisons and competition were inevitable.

Ever since two prime-time medical dramas, Chicago Hope and ER, premiered in the fall of 1994, the shows have been rivals.

Now, with the midseason hiatus of top-rated ER, Chicago Hope has a chance to resuscitate its ratings and even lure some ER viewers.

But that may not happen.

"We're not making any plans on how we're programming our show based on ER being off the air," says Adam Arkin, who plays Dr. Aaron Shutt on Chicago Hope.

That's a shame. The Emmy-winning Chicago Hope is a well-written, strongly cast series worth watching.

From the beginning, the series has relied heavily on Broadway talent.

During the first season, Juilliard-trained Mandy Patinkin, in the role of eccentric surgeon Dr. Jeffrey Geiger, dominated the show. The Tony Award-winning star left the series last year to spend more time with his family.

But the addition of the talented Christine Lahti has more than filled the void left by his departure.

Lahti, recipient of Golden Globe, Emmy, CableACE and Obie awards, stars as Dr. Kathryn Austin, a driven, ambitious cardiothoracic surgeon.

Another Juilliard-trained actor, Vondie Curtis-Hall, who is also a screenwriter and director (Gridlock'd), plays the compassionate Dr. Dennis Hancock.

Hector Elizondo, who plays chief of surgery Dr. Phillip Waters, is also a Golden Globe winner.

Hospital drama veteran Mark Harmon (St. Elsewhere) plays Dr. Jack

McNeil, an orthopedic surgeon.

Unlike those of ER, the story lines of Chicago Hope often take place away from the hospital.

Dr. Austin and her snake-turned-hero ex-husband (Ron Silver) traveled to Washington, where Silver's passionate performance as a health care advocate could well earn him an Emmy nomination. Unfortunately, the Tony and Drama Desk Award winner has since left the show.

Another highly charged story line involved Dr. Austin's father, a strong-willed man who refused medical intervention for his terminal illness.

The show's writers wisely chose the father's home as the setting for this intimate portrait of Dr. Austin's relationship with her father, who died at home.

But despite these fine performances by talented veterans of stage and screen, Chicago Hope lingers around No. 30 in the Nielsen ratings, while ER consistently comes in first.

Perhaps it is the generally younger cast on ER (Noah Wyle, for example) that draws so many viewers, especially women in their 20s.

More likely it's the time slot. Chicago Hope airs Mondays, often against Monday Night Football. ER has a comfortable home on Thursdays with the top-rated Friends and Seinfeld.

Or maybe it is the stability of ER, where few original cast mainstays have left, working against the revolving door of strong, interesting characters from Chicago Hope.

This week, Chicago Hope is bringing in a heavyweight to boost its numbers. Alan Arkin — actor, director, author, photographer, folk musician and father of Adam — plays an artist who claims to be Dr. Shutt's father in "The Son Also Rises."

Maybe the ratings will, too.

Incredible Insect Facts

Did you know that insects are the largest and most diverse class in the animal kingdom? Read on to find out more fascinating facts about the little critters we love to hate.

Terrible Termites

Because they love to eat wood, termites can be terrible pests to homeowners, causing damage to a house.

In some species of termite, the queen can grow as much as 20,000 times the size of an ordinary worker termite, becoming so swollen with eggs that she is unable to move. Some queen termites can lay as many as 30,000 eggs a day.

Pleasant Dreams

The bedbug can ingest its weight in human blood during a five-minute feeding and survive for months without another feeding!

Seeing is Believing

Like us, the bee can see the color blue. It also can see ultraviolet, which is invisible to the human eye. But, red is a color bees can't detect. Bees will see red objects as black.

Do you like honey? Next time you're enjoying some, consider this: A bee must visit about 2 million flowers to produce one pound of honey!

Sneaky Spiders

Spiders eat insects. They usually kill their prey with poison injected through their bite. Because spiders can swallow only liquids, digestive juices are pumped out onto the prey, where digestion occurs externally. The spider then swallows the resulting nutritious liquid.

Ants Everywhere

It has been estimated that, at any one time, there are at least 1 quadrillion living ants on the earth — a number so large that it is almost meaningless. There are as many as 10,000 different ant species.

Big Bugs

Dragonflies are predators that catch their prey while in flight. They have wingspans up to 5.5 inches and can fly at speeds up to 30 miles per hour. Fossils of dragonflies from 250 million years ago had wingspans up to 80 cm (31.5 inches), and were the largest insects known.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ March 16-22 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
It's time for an early spring-cleaning. Don't be a pack rat. Clean out your closets, and throw out what you don't need. Make room for new hobbies and ideas. Discover new things to do, and steer clear of the TV. Good news comes via mail on Wednesday. A quiet weekend is the way to go.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Stubbornness will only lead to loss and hard feelings. Let sensibility be your guide this week. Face issues clearly, and argue only your point. Keep things simple with co-workers. Don't let personal feelings or grudges and resentments get in the way of your professional relationships.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Think fun this week, Gemini. Try something new and daring. Have your eye on someone special? Now's the time to break the ice, especially if it's a Libra you're after. Later in the week, when your patience is called upon, give it generously. A Leo plays a strange role this weekend.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Don't fret over finances. Practice taking one problem at a time - and watch as things work themselves out, without you controlling everything. Sticking to a diet through temptations on Wednesday gives you a sense of pride. It's well-deserved, so flaunt it. New romance looks promising.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Romance looks good this week, Leo, but don't forget the basics. Be open about your feelings, and ask for what you want. Structure your priorities carefully at work, and organize time to meet tight deadlines - especially on Friday. A special date on Saturday keeps you smiling for days!

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Get in touch with an old, out-of-town friend. Make efforts to win someone's affection this week. Take romantic gestures to the maximum. Take a colleague out to lunch on Tuesday, and call it an "appreciation lunch." It never hurts to thank those who have helped you.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
It seems as though you've been hard to reach. That's OK, so long as you don't place blame on hard-to-reach friends. Remember that relationships are a two-way street, and what you get is what you should give. Romance requires lots of listening this week and not so much talking. Listen carefully to your partner's needs. A simple gesture shows you care.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
Exercise rids your frustrations. If you can't get to the gym, take a run around the block. Aggression is building at home, and you could find yourself in the middle of two people you care about. Advice? Play the diplomat. Resist the temptation to take sides. A Leo offers good advice.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Take some time out to cook this week, Sagittarius. Look to older generations in the family, and collect their most creative recipes. Work is a rude awakening on Friday. Be prepared to cover a lot of territory in a little time. A friend's behavior could lead to a major disappointment.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Try to ignore your family's comments regarding a romantic partner. Think about what you want, and present your thoughts to your family in a definitive manner. Leave time for others' perspectives. You may be under their influence, but you do not have to be under their thumbs.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Get ready to entertain, Aquarius. It's been a long winter, and it's time for some fun. Invite all your friends and even some favorite acquaintances to a party. Dress to kill, and call your flirtatious side to the front line. It's your time to shine. Enjoy every minute of it! A Cancer takes note.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Challenges at work try your patience early in the week. Keep calm. A romantic weekend helps ease your mind. Showing only part of the story can make you look suspicious to a loved one. Hiring friends to help you with special work projects could lead to hard feelings.

HIGHLIGHTS

Mother Jones (Mary Harris) was an Irish-born labor leader and union organizer. Her story and many others from the history of Irish immigrants in America are featured in the A&E special The Irish in America.

The Irish in America reflects a partisan view

By Suzanne Gill

OTVData Features Syndicate

Just in time for St. Patrick's Day, viewers can see U.S. history through emerald-colored glasses in The Irish in America, Sunday, March 16, on A&E. The two-hour film tells its story with such gusto that at times it would seem there was little need for any others to come settle the land, so numerous, industrious and adaptable were the sons and daughters of Eire.

While partisan loyalty threatens to run amok in Irish, it's also true there are old stereotypes to be corrected. Religious persecution brought the Irish, like other Europeans, to the New World. While the potato famine of 1846-47 may have been the efficient cause for a million souls to take their chances first on the high seas and then in the fields and factories of the new nation, it was the accumulated rancor of generations of bullying by the English - who legislated both commerce and faith - that provided motive.

The log cabin, an invention of the Ulster Irish that came to symbolize the pioneer spirit, is paid brief tribute. And the stereotyping that led to the use of terms such as "paddy wagon" is rightly deplored.

Unfortunately, a bitter tone saturates The Irish in America. Narrator Aidan Quinn gives a sweet lilt to the Fenian names, yet delivers an indulgent, partisan reading of the text to weary even a sympathetic viewer.

From St. Patrick to Mother Jones, all those connected with the Emerald Isle are credited with a cultural compass that propels them toward goodness. The making of the Kennedy fortune, the violence of labor organizers and the paid speeches of "Fighting Tom" Sweeney recruiting his countrymen to war all are whitewashed. Only the immigrants' acquired racism is censured.

Visually, the film has affecting images of natural beauty and social squalor, but repeated use dulls their impact.

Like all who have chosen America, the Irish faced hardship. Yet with their place in history secure, the film continues to argue for inclusion of the Irish in the American family - like an old man still fighting a long-settled war. It's time to move on.

SUNDAY

Tori Spelling answers the call of adventure as Marti Gerard, a World Cup skier caught up in a strange and dangerous phone relationship, in The Alibi, airing Sunday, March 16, on ABC.

While the champion skier is confined to her apartment with a leg injury, she receives a mysterious phone call from a man (Jason Brooks) claiming to have called the wrong number.

Their first conversation leads to others, and soon they are involved in a serious relationship. And when the man's wife is killed, Marti becomes his alibi.

IN FOCUS

Thumbs up to Mark-Paul Gosselaar and Gina Philips, who star as a young couple who run away from home and head to California in Born Into Exile, airing Monday, March 17, on NBC.

A high-school student and her boyfriend get a rude awakening after they both run away from home and head to California, and find out that life's not all what it may seem.

Born Into Exile premieres on Monday, March 17th at 8:00 pm on NBC, cable channel 4.

Gary Cole stars as Dave Bay, a man who gives new meaning to the phrase "until death do us part," in Lies He Told, airing Monday, March 17, on ABC.

Feeling limited by his ordinary career and normal family life, Dave yearns for a chance to escape.

When he falls in love with another woman (Karen Sillas), Dave fakes his death to start a new life with her and secretly becomes a bank robber to support his new family.

Wendy Makkena also stars.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

Q: Can you tell me what other TV shows or movies Michelle Forbes of Homicide: Life on the Street has been in? I can't place her. -Barbara Willoughby, Warner Robins, Ga.

A: If you ever watch soaps, perhaps you remember Forbes for her Emmy-nominated work as Sonni Lewis in Guiding Light. She also had a recurring role as Ensign Ro in Star Trek: The Next Generation, and co-starred with Stockard Channing in the NBC movie The Prosecutors.

Forbes has made guest appearances on a number of series, including Seinfeld, Father Dowling Mysteries and Shannon's Deal. Feature film credits include Kalifornia and Swimming With Sharks.

Q: I remember a Dick Van Dyke sitcom (not the one with Mary Tyler Moore) that took place in Phoenix. I have never seen it in reruns. Who was in it? When did it run? -Harley Green, Marysville, Mich.

A: You're thinking of The New Dick Van Dyke Show, which ran for three seasons on CBS from 1971 to 1974. Van Dyke and Hope Lange starred as Dick and Jenny Preston. The characters lived in Phoenix, where Dick was a local talk show host. Angela Powell played their daughter, Annie.

The cast also included, among others, Marty Brill as Bernie Davis, Dick's manager; Nancy Dussault as Bernie's wife, Carol; Fannie Flagg as Mike, Dick's sister and secretary; and David Doyle as the station manager.

In an attempt to shore up weak ratings, the show made a radical format change for the third season. The Prestons moved to Hollywood, where Dick had landed a role on a soap opera called Those Who Care. His new co-stars included Richard Dawson, Chita Rivera, Dick Van Patten and Barbara

Michelle Forbes

Rush. The show was canceled at the end of that season.

Q: Whatever happened to Chuck Cunningham, Richie's older brother, on Happy Days? He left for college, but later it was as if he never existed. How does the series explain it? -F.P., Alexandria, Va.

A: It doesn't. Chuck, who was played first by Gavan O'Herlihy then Randolph Roberts in the early months of the show during 1974, was gone by 1975. There simply wasn't room or reason for this marginal character in the huge cast of Happy Days, and the writers thought it would be pointless to continue referring to a character who was never coming back.

Q: Who played the title role in Sugarfoot? -S.B., Roaming Shores, Ohio.

A: Will Hutchins played Tom "Sugarfoot" Brewster in the 1957-61 ABC Western series. Hutchins later starred in a short-lived NBC sitcom called Hey Landlord.

SOAP WORLD

Brooks takes night job in ABC's The Alibi

It didn't take long for Jason Brooks to make the move from daytime to prime time. The morning after his last day on the set of Days of Our Lives, Brooks flew to Vancouver to begin filming The Alibi with Tori Spelling.

One day Brooks was playing Peter, the villain Days fans love to hate, and the next he was playing a successful businessman caught in a web of intrigue. The Alibi airs Sunday, March 16, on ABC.

"I love suspense thrillers," Brooks says. "When I was a kid, I was a big (Alfred) Hitchcock fan. People are going to watch this movie and think they know what's going on, but they won't."

Brooks' and Spelling's characters begin a relationship over the phone, which Brooks says was one of the toughest parts about making the movie. "I hate talking on the phone," he explains.

"Tori's character is a woman who my character calls by mistake one day. She and I start talking and we end up developing this relationship over the phone. It becomes very intimate and intense.

"One day my wife is killed while I'm talking to this woman on the phone, and she becomes my alibi. Hence, the title of the film."

The movie also stars Michael Tucker and Rae Dawn Chong.

"When you are working on location, the cast and crew become a family," Brooks says. "It was great."

After the film, Brooks spent a day at home, then took his wife to Europe.

"We went to Paris and Amsterdam for two weeks," he says. "We needed time to just kick back and relax, and we did."

Brooks says he currently is spending his time working on his house and developing a few acting projects he has in the works. For now he has no plans to return to daytime, but he doesn't rule it out for the future.

"I need to get out there and see what I can do," he says. "But I would never rule out daytime."
