Blakely speaker at banquet

Kenneth Frye honored as 'Ag Man of the Year'

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
 Editor-Publisher

More than 450 persons attended the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association banquet Saturday night at the Bull Barn, with highlights including a keynote talk by humorist James "Doc" Blakely, presentation of the "Ag Man of the Year" award, and the recognition of new directors.

Kenneth Frye was the recipient of the "Ag Man of the Year" award, presented to an outstanding area individual involved in agribusiness and community. The award is sponsored by The Hereford Brand and was presented by publisher Speedy Nieman.

Randy Wieck, representing the Umberger-Dawn area, and J.C. Pohlmeier of the Nazareth area, were named as new directors for 1994. Frye was also re-elected to the board.

Bill Cleavinger, TSBGA president, presented plaques to retiring directors Ed Ramaekers of Nazareth and Richard Friemel of Umberger for their services to the association.

Steve Reynolds, vice president of Holly Hybrids, also made brief remarks at the banquet. Although the weather created problems for this year's harvest, Reynolds said the board and growers focused on positives during the association's business meeting Friday.

Frye, a native of Dimmitt, was cited for his farming operations, his work with the sugar beet board, Castro County ASCS board, and his involvement in church and community. He and his brother, George, farm approximately 14,000 acres of land in Castro, Parmer and Pecos counties. Together, they are the largest beet growers in the area with 1,100 acres of sugar beets.

Frye rented his first farm at the age of 17 while still attending West Texas State University. He and his wife, the former Linda Hogue of Slaton, have three children. Kenneth was ordained as a deacon in First Baptist Church of Dimmitt last year.

Roger Hill, president of Holly Sugar, told growers Friday that there has been a tremendous growth in the sugar beet industry. "We now have more production than consumption can handle," he said. He added that the industry must find ways to store more sugar beets so that growers can sell them year around.

Yields for the 1993 sugar beet harvest averaged 21 tons per acre and the sugar content was about 14 percent, according to Holly Sugar officials. Hill said the company would like to see an average of 25 tons per acre and sugar content of about 16 percent.

Reynolds told the growers at Friday's business meeting that Holly Hybrids had developed a new seed variety called "rhizosen." He encouraged farmers to try the new variety, planting it side by side with other varieties and comparing the results.

Dr. Steve Winter, a researcher at The Texas A&M Research & Extension Center at Bushland, identified soil nitrate management and soil-borne disease management as two key areas of concern for growers. Another researcher gave results of experiments in weed control conducted at Bushland over the past year.

Cleavinger noted Friday that the sugar beet industry scored victories in recent negotiations for the North American Free Trade Agreement and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Industry representatives were able to change a provision of the NAFTA pact that allowed Mexican food companies to substitute high-fructose corn syrup for sugar in their products and set the leftover sugar back to U.S. markets as a surplus.

Cleavinger said the sugar section "was the only substantive ag change made in the NAFTA pact, and this was a major victory for the industry." He added that the GATT agreement will force European countries to compete fairly with U.S. sugar growers.

Frye receives congratulations

Kenneth Frye, left, recipient of the "Ag Man of the Year" award, was congratulated Saturday night by Bill Cleavinger, president of the Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association. The award was presented at the Sugar Beet Banquet. Frye and his brother, George, are the largest sugar beet producers in the area.

White House hopes speech will rejuvenate presidency

By TOM RAUM
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - White House officials hope President Clinton's State of the Union address tonight can help re-energize his presidency and mobilize national support for his most ambitious initiative, universal health care.

"It's all ready to go," Clinton declared on his morning jog. "I'm ready to go back to work."

"The big issues are crime and health care and welfare reform, and that's what he's going to focus on tonight," said a senior aide, George Stephanopoulos.

The speech, scheduled for national broadcast at 9 p.m. EST to a joint session of Congress, comes at a good time for Clinton.

Both the economy and his own standing in public opinion polls are on the rebound.

"This an opportunity for the president to establish his presence as an articulator of government programs and possibilities," said Henry Graff, a Columbia University political scientist. "He hasn't had this kind of forum in a long time."

It was Clinton's first official State of the Union address, even though his speech on economic policy last Feb. 16 had many of the trappings of one.

He only addressed Congress formally on one other occasion: his speech Sept. 22 on his health care plan.

For the most part, Clinton has favored more limited settings for getting his message across, such as "town hall meetings" and TV talk-show interviews.

"It's an important speech. It's really his first State of the Union address," Stephanopoulos said today on NBC. "He's now been in office for a year. And he wants to tell the American people and actually thank them for the accomplishments of the first year and lay out the agenda for the second year."

"He will try to lay out both what he accomplished last year briefly and his goals and objectives for the coming year," Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

The president took the speech draft home with him overnight and made "considerable edits and changes, put his own mark on it," Myers said. He'll spend some time rehearsing it in this afternoon in the family theater, she added.

Clinton will speak "both in terms of specific policy and in terms of values and what we need to do to bring this country back together again, because the government can only do so much," she said. Myers said his prepared text should run 30 minutes to 40 minutes long.

City's beautification group names officers

Wade Easley heads the slate of new officers who will serve the Hereford Beautification Alliance for 1994, it was announced Monday.

Other new officers are Pat Reily, vice president; Louise Leasure, secretary; Bobbye Riddle, treasurer, and Jan Furr, who will continue as executive coordinator.

Furr reported that the board discussed plans for clean-up, beautification and recycling projects for the new year. As an affiliate of Keep Texas Beautiful, the state organization, HBA will conduct another Great Trash-Off on April 9.

HBA also plans to prepare a slide program of proposed projects to be used for programs at civic clubs. Furr also challenged board members to get churches, clubs, businesses and youth involved in the Adopt-A-Highway program.

The program entails cleaning up a two-mile stretch of highway four times a year. Such a project not only involves the commitment of the group, but it changes people's behavior patterns in care of the environment, said Furr.

Chairman for the standing sub-committees of the year have been named. They include: Jan Furr, beautification; Louise Leasure, clean-up; Rosemary Thomas, education; Wade Easley, finance; Pat Reily, recycling, and Ruth Knox, public relations.

HBS's annual membership drive is now underway and forms can be obtained at both banks and at the

Hereford gets New Jersey woman as VISTA volunteer

By GARRY WESNER
 Managing Editor

It was a long, arduous journey for Francina Still to get from New Jersey to Hereford.

Now that she's here, however, he way is clear.

Still arrived in Hereford on Dec. 20 to begin a one-year stint here as a VISTA volunteer working with the Texas Department of Health in finding ways to address local health care needs.

She and Sharon Kohout, Health Department public health promotion program manager from Lubbock, met Monday with the Healthcare Alliance, which has been addressing that same subject.

Still's work, said Kohout, is basically developing the community around health services. We hope to work on the health needs of the community.

VISTA -- which stands for Volunteers in Service To America -- is a wing of the Peace Corps.

Still said she had been on a Peace Corps waiting list for a country assignment, but gave up and transferred to VISTA.

"She asked for an Indian reservation and got Hereford," Kohout said with a laugh.

"I wanted a small community," Still said, adding that the friendliness of Hereford surprised her. "That was what was really overwhelming to me, the friendliness of the people." Still she said hopes her work here will result in a grass-roots awareness of health care and prevention of illness.

"If we can get leaders in the community ... that can carry out this publicity program, that's going to be a benefit to the community."

Starting immediately, Still will conduct a community-wide survey in Hereford to determine what residents perceive to be health care needs in town.

Kohout said the survey will be conducted by 15 to 20 volunteers trained by Still, who will each contact 10 people from throughout the community.

They will be given a two-to-three-page interview about health problems here, where to go for health care and other topics.

"We definitely would like to cover all segments of the population," she said.

Those surveys will then be forwarded to Austin, where results will be compiled and sent back to Hereford.

At that point, Kohout said, the results will be taken to the Healthcare Coalition to see if "together we can present these to the community."

"What comes from that is a list of issues people feel are important to them," Kohout said.

At-large members of the committee are drawn at random from the list of Deaf Smith County citizens who served on grand jury panels during the previous year.

A need for additional storage space for the county and for the SPAW program was reviewed by commissioners who authorized expenditure of $641.49 for materials to enclose two 22 by 20 areas in corners of the Bull Barn for storage.

Judge Simons observed that the areas to be enclosed are "dead space" at the east end of the building and are not useful in the facility. Dean Hacker, county maintenance director, was authorized to implement the plan.

Hacker also presented a plan to convert a building owned by the county for SPAW storage and work area. Materials for the job are estimated to cost approximately $5,500. Some, if not all, of the work will be performed by participants in the SPAW program, Hacker reported.

She grew up in Cherry Hill, N.J. The journey from there to Hereford, she said, was interesting. After attending a three-day VISTA training workshop in Louisiana, she headed out for Hereford.

"First I ended up in Houston because I missed my flight," she said. "Then I flew to Odessa to pick up my car."

Then it was a simple jaunt from the Permian Basin, through the South Plains, to the Panhandle.

Cancer claims Telly Savalas, 70; star gained fame in 'Kojak' role

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Telly Savalas, the gruff, bald-headed actor who became a television favorite as the lollipop-loving New York detective in the 1970s series "Kojak," died Saturday of prostate cancer. He was 70.

Savalas died in his suite at the Sheraton-Universal Hotel in Universal City, said his spokesman, Mike Mamakos.

"Who loves ya, baby?" which Kojak muttered to fellow cops and assorted hoodlums, grew into the detective's signature and a national catch-phrase.

The series grew out of an acclaimed TV movie, "The Marcus-Nelson Murders," based on the real-life brutal murders of two young career women in New York City.

"Kojak" broke into the top 10 rated shows in its first season, 1973-74, and Savalas won an Emmy as best actor in a dramatic series. The series lasted until 1978, setting the standard for gritty, realistic police shows such as "Hill Street Blues" and "NYPD Blue."

Savalas and his shaved head became indelibly identified as Lt. Theo Kojak, and he remained grateful for the recognition.

"I made 60 movies before 'Kojak' with some of the biggest names in the business, and people would still say, 'There goes what's-his-name,'" he once said.

Savalas' brother, George, had a smaller role in the series as Detective Stavros. After gaining success behind the camera as a television director, Savalas began his acting career in the late 1950s.

Burt Lancaster provided Savalas' first important film role in 1961, as a police detective in "The Young Savages," set in New York City's Harlem neighborhood. The following year he appeared in Lancaster's "Birdman of Alcatraz" as a sadistic convict. The role won him an Academy Award nomination as best supporting actor.

Savalas became one of Hollywood's busiest character actors, often in hoodlum roles. His films include "Johnny Cool," "The New Interns," "The Greatest Story Ever Told," "Genghis Khan," "Battle of the Bulge," "The Slender Thread," "Beau Geste," "The Dirty Dozen," "The Scalphunters," "Mackenzie's Gold" and "Kelly's Heroes."

Cast as Pontius Pilate in the 1965 film "The Greatest Story Ever Told," Savalas was ordered by director George Stevens to shave his head. He considered the role a disaster, but he had found his screen persona.

Kojak's bullet-shaped head and lollipop became trademarks, along with his expensive suits. Savalas justified the wardrobe by saying, "He's a guy from the streets of New York who was always poor. They won't let him go out with girls on the show, so what else can he spend his salary on but clothes?"

After "Kojak" ended, Savalas remained active in films and television, including returns in his Kojak role.

He was born Aristotle (Telly for short) Savalas in Garden City, N.Y. He recalled that for him and his five siblings, "it wasn't so much strong discipline as strong love that kept us in line."

The actor's first three marriages, to Katharine Nicolaidis, Marilyn Gardner and Sally Adams, produced four children and ended in divorce. In 1984, he married Julie Howland. They had a son in 1985 and a daughter in 1987.

Bush says president being hurt by advice

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - One year out of office, George Bush says President Clinton's top foreign policy aides - more than Clinton himself - are to blame for U.S. setbacks in Somalia, Haiti and Bosnia.

While he only mildly criticized Clinton, Bush lambasted some of his former Democratic opponents in Congress, particularly Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri.

Bush said he's not ready to start writing his memoirs, is working with his wife, Barbara, on health care issues, and has concluded that he lost the 1992 election mainly because, "I just wasn't a good enough communicator."

He complained of media-created "myths" that gave voters a mistaken impression that he was out of touch with mainstream America. And he said he was surprised to discover after moving to Houston that "I don't miss the politics a bit."

Bush said it was too early to grade Clinton's overall performance on foreign policy. But he said the president's aides were mostly to blame for an ill-disciplined, "start-and-stop" approach that was harming America's standing in the world.

"They're good people generally, but there doesn't seem to be any structure to their policy," Bush said in the interview with Washingtonian magazine.

"I think President Clinton tries to do too much all by himself, but he needs first-class support" from his National Security Council and at the State and Defense departments, he said.

Bush didn't mention any Clinton aides by name but he suggested outgoing Defense Secretary Les Aspin was among the weak links.

The interview was conducted by Victor Gold, a friend and former Bush speechwriter, on Dec. 13, three days before Aspin announced his plan to resign.

Bush said his thyroid and rapid-heartbeat problems were under control and that his main interest soon will be teaching and holding seminars - possibly with the participation of world leaders - at the George Bush School of Public Service at Texas A&M.

In a detailed review of major foreign policy problems confronting the Clinton administration, Bush was most critical of the approach to Haiti and Bosnia.

Recalling the administration's decision Oct. 12 to withdraw a Navy troop landing ship from Haiti after a small band of armed thugs threatened to resist it, Bush said the incident was "devastating, sent a horrible signal" to the world.

"When you send a U.S. ship loaded with military personnel to go ashore, you don't say, 'They're going ashore,' unless you mean it," Bush said. "And you don't get turned back by a group of thugs standing on the dock."

Bush credited Clinton with deft handling of relations with Russia but said that on Bosnia he exhibited a "start-and-stop pattern" of first threatening to use force to end the fighting and then backing away when European allies balked.

Book review heard by study club members

Carol McGilvary gave a book review on the novel My Thomas when members of Bay View Study Club met Jan. 20 in the home of Mary Herring with Lois Scott serving as hostess.

McGilvary explained that the book was the story of Thomas Jefferson and his 10-year marriage to his wife, Martha, who was a sickly woman and died soon after the birth of a child. Mrs. Jefferson, who was the love of Jefferson's life, had what they called "kidney fever" and the treatment for the ailment was to drink "gabblers" and being "bled."

The speaker explained that Jefferson was so distraught by the death of his wife that he lost his mind for several months and was still grieving 40 years after her death.

Jazz finally beats top team

By The Associated Press
Utah, doing fine against most of the NBA this season, had no success at all in its first six games against the teams it will have to beat come playoff time.

The Jazz were 0-6 against Seattle, Phoenix and Houston and 26-8 against the rest of the league going into Monday night's game with the SuperSonics. But Utah's top players, Karl Malone and John Stockton, came through in a 95-90 victory.

"It's not so much getting a monkey off our backs, but it's proving to ourselves that we can play with these teams," said forward Tom Chambers, who scored six of his 10 points during a decisive 19-1 spurt in the second quarter, when the Jazz outscored Seattle 29-13.

Malone had 26 points and 16 rebounds and Stockton finished with 16 points and 18 assists against the Sonics, who are 4-4 in their last eight games after a 26-3 start.

The SuperSonics led 31-19 after one quarter, but Utah pulled ahead for good with the 19-1 run in the first 5:35 of the second period.

In the only other NBA games, it was Boston 110, Dallas 102; Chicago

92, Detroit 86; and Milwaukee 96, Indiana 88.

Gary Payton scored 18 points and Detlef Schempf, Shawn Kemp and Ricky Pierce each added 14 for the Sonics. But Payton picked up his fourth foul near the end of the first half, and Kemp was whistled for his fourth midway through the third quarter.

The Sonics, who trailed by double digits for most of the second half, closed to 93-88 with 12 seconds left after two baskets by Vincent Askew and one by Kemp. Two free throws by Stockton sealed the outcome with 8.5 seconds left.

Celtics 110, Mavericks 102
Boston extended its season-best winning streak to five games as Rick

Fox scored 22 points against Dallas.

The Celtics, who lost a franchise-record seven straight games at home before starting the winning streak, beat the Mavericks for the second time in six games, handing them their 14th consecutive loss.

The Celtics took the lead for good with a 6-0 run that made the score 61-56 with 8:57 left in the third quarter.

The Mavericks were led by Jamal Mashburn with 27 points.

Bucks 96, Pacers 88
With his father Rick and brother Scooter watching in the stands, Jon Barry came off the bench to score a career-high 23 points, 12 of them in the final nine minutes, as Milwaukee won at Indiana.

Aikman recovering nicely from concussion

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - Troy Aikman will play in the Super Bowl Sunday and he hopes he does as good as everyone says he did in the NFC Championship game.

He has to take his teammates' word about the day he hit 14 of 18 passes for 177 yards and two touchdowns in a 38-21 victory over the San Francisco 49ers. Some day he'll play the tape.

The Dallas Cowboys quarterback only remembered two things:

1. The pregame introduction.
2. A dropped touchdown pass by Alvin Harper.

"That's it," he said. "The rest is a blank."
When Dallas arrived Monday night in Atlanta for a Super Bowl rematch of their 52-17 victory over Buffalo last year, the main concern was Aikman's head.

Aikman, the MVP of last year's Super Bowl, was addled in the third period Sunday when a knee smacked his helmet. He was spent the night in a local hospital regaining consciousness after smelling salts couldn't do the trick.

"My mom called me while I was in there (the hospital) and said it was an Abbott and Costello routine," Aikman said. "But I started regaining my senses about 4 a.m. I'm fine now. I don't look fine because I haven't slept in 20 hours."

Aikman said he will take his regular snaps under center when the team resumes practice Wednesday.

Doctors said Aikman suffered a mild concussion but should have no problems if he's hit hard by the Bills on Sunday.

"My neck is still a little sore, but I'll be OK by Sunday," Aikman said. "I had a few headaches in the hospital but I'm over those now."

Aikman, who also was knocked out for five minutes by the Phoenix Cardinals during his rookie season, said it was the first time a hit caused him to forget a game.

"They say I ran a play after I was hit, but I don't remember it," Aikman said. "It was a draw to Emmitt Smith. That proves I can run that play in my sleep."

Teammates said Aikman walked up to center Mark Stepnoski, who was lost for the season with a knee injury a month ago, and asked him: "Why aren't you in the game?"

"I've been taking some kidding about that," Aikman said.

Aikman said a hit like he received from Dennis Brown is a player's biggest fear.

"It happened to me so fast and sudden I didn't have a chance to fear it," Aikman said. "I was out, but still walking around. It was scary."

By Monday, everything was back to normal for Aikman.

"Things are looking up," he said. "I remember the flight here this afternoon. I got to see some highlights of the game. It looked like we played pretty good.

"I guess I remember the pass to Harper because he dropped it and I thought it was going to be a touchdown. But it was the only play from the game I remember."

Aikman said he wasn't pressing his injury condition to play on Sunday.

"If it was a regular season game I would play," Aikman said. "I'm fine now. It's nice to be back."

Aikman will get to explain his condition over and over again today because its media day at the Super Bowl, the time more than 2,000 credentialed reporters quiz the players in the Georgia Dome.

"I was concerned about Troy but he'll be fine," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "He'll be leading the team as usual on Wednesday."

Cowboys, Bills provide rematch

ATLANTA (AP) - What could be new? Certainly not the teams, nor the incentives nor the buildup.

Still, the Buffalo Bills and Dallas Cowboys have found a few original ways of spicing up Sunday's Super Bowl.

For one, they've given us the first immediate rematch in the 28-year history of the game.

"I expect this to be a great Super Bowl," Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said, which means he's looking for something relatively new - there's only been a handful of great Super Bowls.

"It's nice to be a part of history, but that's not the ultimate goal," said Bills linebacker Darryl Talley of Buffalo's record fourth consecutive trip to the big game. "The ultimate goal is the thing that's eluded us, something we have to make up in our minds and we've got to conquer and attack and get it."

Getting the NFL championship would be something very new for a franchise that has managed to be outscored 109-60 in the big game.

Marv Levy's approach to the game might be different after the distractions of the last three, ranging from the Gulf War in 1991 to Bruce Smith's comments on racism in 1992 to Talley's nightclub punchout with Magic Johnson's bodyguard a year ago. The Bills coach is thinking of placing a curfew on his players, something that rarely has worked for other Super Bowl teams.

"I have a player's committee, which I'll confer with tomorrow," Levy said Monday. "We'll talk about it. I'd like to get their reaction and their experience in this area."

"I think it can be a mistake to have your players sitting in their hotel rooms every night. We talk to them about common sense."

The Cowboys won't be fooling with any curfews. It's simply not necessary, guard Nate Newton said.

"Last year, we were just wild," he said, noting that they still won 52-17. "It didn't matter ... we were just out there. This year, we're a little bit more in control, we're aware of the situation."

The law of averages suggest that something very rare should happen in an upcoming Super Bowl - an AFC victory. It has been exactly a decade since the Los Angeles Raiders beat Washington for the last AFC win.

"If experience is any factor, we know the highs and lows," Bills general manager John Butler said. Butler, incidentally, is new to his job, having replaced Bill Polian last year. "When you look at the goals of this football team, that's the only one that hasn't been accomplished."

The Cowboys could become just the third team with four Super Bowl crowns, joining San Francisco and Pittsburgh. But - and here's a first - Johnson says he won't be making any proclamations or guarantees this week.

Right. And he'll be getting a buzz cut pretty soon, too.

"I wrote a check and the players paid it," he said. "This week, I'm not going to say a word, but you know how I feel."

He's concerned with how quarterback Troy Aikman feels. Aikman sustained a concussion in Sunday's NFC Championship game against the 49ers. It was early morning before Aikman got back his senses.

"I'm fine," he said. "I don't look fine, but I haven't slept in about 20 hours."

Aikman admitted the injury and loss of memory was scary, but not something that would haunt him in future games.

"I've always had a real fear of death, but after that incident I realized that everything happens so suddenly, so there's no sense being worried about much."

The ultraconfident Cowboys worrying about things? That would be new.

Madden officially joins FOX

NEW YORK (AP) - John Madden walked into a Cowboys meeting room in Dallas and defensive end Charles Haley spotted him immediately.

"Quickly and quietly, huh?" he said to Madden. "Quickly maybe, but quietly, no way."

And you know what? "He was right," Madden said.

"Quickly and quietly" was the way Madden said he wanted to make his life change. The two Q's. But it was with much fanfare Monday that Madden became "the final piece to the jigsaw puzzle" for Fox Sports president David Hill's new football machine.

Madden signed a four-year contract worth a reported $32 million, or $8 million a year, and will be joined shortly by his CBS broadcast mate of 13 years, Pat Summerall.

Summerall signed a four-year contract with Fox "some weeks ago," according to a source close to the network, and that announcement, along with others, will be made in the coming weeks.

"What we're doing in 28 weeks is creating what CBS has had 38 years to put together, so there are still one or two things outstanding," Hill said.

Fox's announcement came one day after Madden and Summerall broadcast their last game for CBS, the NFC championship in Dallas. CBS, which had televised NFL games since 1956, lost the NFC portion of the contract last month to Fox's bid of $1.58 billion for four years.

"John is not only someone Fox wanted, but needed," Hill said in a telephone interview.

Also reportedly on Fox's agenda will be Ed Goren, senior producer at CBS who will join Fox as its executive producer, as well as producer Bob Stenner and director Sandy Grossman, who worked with the Madden-Summerall crew.

Madden said that a chance to continue working NFL games played a part in his decision, along with a chance to continue working with Summerall and others.

"I worked with Pat for so long, I couldn't see myself working with anybody else," Madden said in a telephone interview.

UCLA takes over No. 1 spot

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

As soon as then-No. 1 Kansas lost to Kansas State last Monday night, things changed around the UCLA campus.

The Bruins needed to beat then-No. 9 Arizona and Arizona State and they would move up one spot in the poll to No. 1, a place no UCLA team had been since January 1983, a place that once seemed to belong to the school that won seven consecutive NCAA titles and 10 in 12 years in the 1960 and '70s.

UCLA, at 13-0 the last undefeated Division I team, won those two games and was back on top of the rankings Monday with 59 first-place votes and 1,619 points from the national media panel.

"It was a big week here, but it always is when we play Arizona," said UCLA's Jim Harrick, sounding very much the coach he is. Then he was asked about the days leading up to the chance for one of college basketball's greatest programs to return to No. 1. "The magnitude of the week was just enormous."

Harrick had been an assistant at UCLA and then went on to a successful stint as head coach at nearby Pepperdine. He took over at UCLA in 1988 after the program had fallen as low as it ever had been. The Bruins have been to the NCAA each year he has been there and now they are back to No. 1.

"Since I haven't ever been there and with what we have tried to accomplish in six years at UCLA, it's a nice thing to have at this moment," Harrick said.

He was then reminded that there have been six No. 1s this regular season, and only Arkansas' five-week run lasted longer than one week. Harrick also has to travel to Stanford and California for Pac-10 games this week.

"You can't expect to stay there all year, that's a little too much to ask," Harrick said. "Our primary goal from the start has been and still is winning the conference."

UCLA and No. 2 Duke (13-1), which moved up from fifth, were the only members of last week's top nine not to lose. Fifteen ranked teams lost at least once last week.

The Blue Devils had six first-place votes and 1,542 points. Kansas (17-2), which held the No. 1 spot for just one week, dropped to third after the home loss.

One more change at No. 1 will match 1989-90, the busiest season ever at the top of the poll when five schools combined for seven changes at No. 1.

North Carolina (14-3) held fourth

Sunscreens have no effect on certain skin cancer

HOUSTON (AP) - Sunscreen may protect people against the more easily cured forms of skin cancer, but it appears to have no effect on the condition that can lead to melanoma, researchers say.

Three scientists from the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center published a study today in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute that warns that sunscreens may even promote development of melanoma because people wearing the chemical may feel it's safe to stay out in the sun longer.

Contrary to popular thought, the study indicates, chemical sunscreens provide no protection against melanoma.

Melanoma cases have increased dramatically in recent years, and many had traced that increase to changes in the ozone layer of the Earth's atmosphere that allowed more ultraviolet radiation to reach the Earth's surface.

In the study, three sunscreens were applied to the tails and ears of three groups of mice 20 minutes before the animals were placed under sun lamps. They were exposed to sunlamps 20 to 27 minutes twice a week for three weeks.

A fourth group of mice was treated with oil-and-water mixtures before exposure to the sun lamp, and another group was treated with the same chemical but received no exposure to ultraviolet light.

Two of the sunscreens (2-EHMC and o-PABA) absorb ultraviolet-B radiation and the third (BP-3) absorbs both ultraviolet-B and ultraviolet-A radiation.

On the day before the last exposure to the ultraviolet radiation in the sunlamp, scientists injected melanoma cells into the ears of all of the mice. The mice were then observed to determine if the injected melanoma cells grew.

The study shows that the sunscreens prevented skin swelling and inflammation as well as sunburn, but they did not prevent development of melanoma tumors.

Researcher Dr. Margaret Kripke said it is difficult to make a prediction about what this means. Studies seem to indicate a relationship between exposure to ultraviolet radiation and melanoma.

But she said it is not clear that the relationship is one of dose.

"The ultraviolet radiation may be involved through effects on the immune system," she said.

Previous studies of melanoma have indicated that the changes leading up to the more common basal and squamous cell cancers of the skin are very different from those that lead to melanoma.

Dr. Kripke and co-authors Dr. Peter Wolf and Cherrie K. Donawho noted in the report that "protection against sunburn does not necessarily imply prevention of other possible UV radiation effects, such as enhanced melanoma growth."

Drs. Howard K. Koh and Robert A. Lew of Boston University School of Medicine and Public Health wrote in an editorial accompanying the published study that, "People should also try to wear hats and protective clothing, seek shade, minimize exposure to UV radiation during peak hours, protect infants and children against too much UV radiation exposure, wear UV opaque sunglasses and avoid tanning parlors."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Some time ago, I loaned $1,000 to a couple I considered to be my closest friends. Their money was tied up in a court dispute with a business partner, and they needed financial assistance for living expenses.

I didn't have much excess cash sitting around, but I offered them my income tax refund because I knew they were desperate. They promised to pay me back within 90 days.

The due date came and went. They did not send the money, and I didn't hear a word from them. When I asked that they repay the loan soon, they assured me that the money would be in my hands within two weeks. The two weeks came -- no money was sent, and no explanation was given. When I phoned to say I really needed that $1,000, I was informed rather brusquely that they would give me the money when they could.

It's been six months since I first told them I needed that money. I have written twice to let them know that I understand things are tight and that they are probably embarrassed. I asked if we could work out some sort of repayment schedule. So far, they haven't replied. I've called and left messages on their answering machine, but there has been no response.

Short of legal action, I don't know what else to do to get my money back and still retain our friendship. Needless to say, I'm deeply disappointed that my good friends would treat me this way. Can you offer any suggestions? -New Jersey

DEAR NEW JERSEY: The following rhyme says it better than I could:

I had some money
And a friend
I loaned my money
To my friend.
I lost my money
And my friend.

This is not to say one must NEVER lend money to a friend, but sad to say, more often than not, it sours the relationship.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last

Trade deficit produces the National Deficit

One trillion 293 billion dollars. That is the amount by which merchandise imports exceeded merchandise exports during the years 1981 through 1992. During that same period, the federal government spent two trillion 273 billion dollars more than it received.

When imports exceed exports, those "excess" foreign goods in our domestic economy are outside the federal tax base and therefore deprive us of revenues that U.S. made goods would provide. The average tax on all imports is a negligible three percent, and no tariffs are paid on one third of all imports.

Increases in imported goods for our domestic market mean fewer manufacturing jobs here as domestic manufacturers lose market share to foreign manufacturers. More than three million U.S. manufacturing jobs disappeared between 1979 and 1992, and another 239,000 disappeared between February and August of 1993.

The damage to our economy goes far beyond the immediate impact of lost jobs and wages. Workers and manufacturing firms pay taxes that support programs for the national good—such as schools, roads, healthcare, social security and other services we often take for granted. Those tax revenues are lost along with the consumer spending power of the displaced workers. When a factory shuts down, other businesses that provided it with goods and services also lose business, as do the stores and services that the former factory workers and executives patronized. This results in the loss of even more jobs and tax revenues.

The scenario gets worse. While it is losing revenues, the government must increase spending to provide job retraining, unemployment compensation and welfare for the unemployed workers and their families.

Government spending is out of control. We must provide unemployed workers and their families with a minimum amount of food, clothing and shelter. As manufacturing continues to shut down in the U.S., the amount the government spends must increase.

Every year since 1976, the U.S. has incurred huge trade deficits. These trade deficits reduce federal revenues and increase federal spending, producing enormous budget deficits.

Attempts to balance the budget prove futile. Raising the tax rate does not produce significant federal revenues when the tax base is falling. Even if Congress reduces the rate of entitlements, spending still increases to support more and more people who have lost full-time work. Before we can balance the federal budget, exports and imports must be brought into balance.

What can consumers do? For your children's sake and your country's sake, buy Made in U.S.A. products until that balance is achieved.

Early detection is key to breast cancer treatment

Early detection is a significant factor in the effective treatment of breast cancer. But new studies suggest that women may be able to reduce their breast cancer risk.

Research indicates that breast cancer may be linked to a woman's lifetime exposure to reproductive hormones, especially estrogen.

Women who started menstruating later than average, and who bore children before age 30, may be at a lesser risk than women who started menstruating early and delayed child-bearing until past age 30.

Medical researchers are just beginning to explore breast cancer prevention by manipulating levels of estrogen, which is believed to contribute to tumor growth.

Detecting breast cancer early continues to be a key to effective treatment. Women are urged to monitor their breast health starting as early as age 20.

The following guidelines provide a four-step breast health plan:

1. Monthly breast self-examination. Perform breast self exams at least monthly. Become aware of any changes in the feel or appearance of the breasts.

2. Talk to your physician. Consult with your physician about your family's health history. Discuss your individual risk factors and learn what you can do to modify them.

3. Develop a mammogram schedule. Again, talk with your physician and establish a schedule for periodic mammograms.

4. Report changes immediately. If you notice a breast cancer warning sign - changes in the breast, lumps or thickening, or an unusual discharge - notify your physician immediately.

Tips to help you breathe

Government and industry are teaming up to make us a lot safer these days, at home and at work.

Here and around the world, there's new legislation to protect people from environmental hazards. Studies show, for instance, farm workers, especially those who mix, load or apply pesticides, are more likely to develop certain kinds of cancers.

Wounded agent says radio kept him going

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Lying wounded inside the Branch Davidian compound, federal agent Kenneth King vowed he would not spend the final moments of his life in the home of doomsday prophet David Koresh.

King's salvation was his two-way radio.

"It was sort of my life line," he testified Monday, explaining how he contacted fellow agents during a gun battle to tell them his location.

After suffering six gunshot wounds in a Feb. 28, 1993, raid on the compound, King said, he slid off the roof of the home and found himself in a courtyard, barely able to move because of injuries to his chest, arms and buttocks.

"I didn't want to die there laying on that ground. I was determined that I was not going to die. I was going to make it," said King, who testified he remained in the compound for 2 1/2 hours.

Under cross-examination from attorneys for some of the 11 Branch Davidian defendants, King acknowledged no one tried to harm him or even talk to him inside the compound.

"They could have done you in. You had not cover from any other agent, did you?" asked defense lawyer Mike DeGeurin.

King agreed.

The agent, examining in court a bullet retrieved from his body, said he believed the shot came from an AK-47 rifle or an M-14.

During cross-examination, King also testified the ATF plan for entering second-story rooms did not include seeking permission to enter or identify the raid officers. Other agents assigned to enter the downstairs front door have said they identified themselves to Koresh.

King said "a real heavy volume of gunfire" broke out as agents reached the roof.

"I'd call it an ambush," he said. "I did not feel I should announce our presence."

Another ATF agent testified about retrieving bodies of slain agents McKeehan and Conway LeBleu from the roof. LeBleu still was clutching a 12-gauge shotgun, and McKeehan was holding an MP-5 gun, agent Gerald Petrilli said.

Four agents were killed and 16 wounded in the firefight, which led to a 51-day standoff between Koresh's group and law officers. Six Branch Davidians are believed to have died in the gun battle.

Koresh and about 80 followers died April 19 when fire engulfed the compound.

Big Tex Randall stands all alone above Canyon

By HOLLACE WEINER
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
CANYON, Texas (AP) - The concrete giant juts out of the plains, a genuine piece of Texas folk art and a curious calling card for this Panhandle town.

Big Tex Randall, a 7-ton statue anchored like an oil derrick on the side of the road, was constructed in 1959 by an industrial arts teacher as a tourist draw for his western curio shop.

Larger than the landscape, the figure's angular, 47-foot silhouette once beckoned for miles to travelers approaching a two-lane crossroads that linked Amarillo and Clovis, N.M.

Today both stretches of road - U.S. 60 and 87 - are divided-highways. Interstate 27 is the newcomer on the block, an arching overpass that overshadows and isolates the colossal Lone Star icon.

Bypassed by most out-of-town traffic, the curio shop is vacant and for rent. Canyon, a town of 17,000 located 20 miles south of Amarillo, directs visitors to its Panhandle Plains Historical Museum, rather than to Big Tex Randall.

Coffee drinkers nearby at the Cowboy Cafe marvel at the jumbo statue's staying power.

"It has been through some 100-mile winds," said Don Annen, who lives in Hereford, 32 miles west.

Pinky Taylor added, "We had a tornado through here and it stood."

Dick Barrett, who calls himself a "newcomer because I moved here in '36," remembers when the concrete and steel cowhand was built. He sold artist Harry Wheeler the materials for the project.

"He was an industrial arts teacher at the college," Barrett recalled. "It was West Texas State College then. Now it's West Texas A&M. He did every bit of work by himself. He welded pipes and rebar as he built it up. Next he wrapped wire mesh around it, then plastered with a lathe."

Once completed, the jumbo mannequin was outfitted in real clothes: denim jeans, red-checked shirt and blue neckerchief donated by the Amarillo Tent & Awning store.

"It was just a traffic-stopper," Barrett said.

Through the years, wind and weather tattered the cloth and cracked the concrete. A semitrailer rammed into the left boot and demolished a spur. A prankster shot the cigarette out of the cowboy's hand.

"It was getting pretty raunchy," commented one of the coffee drinkers.

Sentimental town folks launched a "Save the Cowboy" drive in 1987 to refurbish the monument, said Betty Bustos, an archivist at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum.

The chamber of commerce marketed bandanas and collected coins from college students and New Mexicans passing through.

A name-the-cowboy contest christened the sculpture Big Tex Randall - after Randall County, where it stands, and after the original Big Tex, a taller, 52-foot figure that heralds the State Fair in Dallas.

By 1989, $6,000 was raised.

Local contractors filled the cracks. They protected Tex with a waterproof coat of fiberglass. They painted him with blue eyes, a Burt Reynolds mustache, a hairy chest, a breast-pocketed shirt, a belt buckle bearing a bison, pale dungarees and a pair of 6-foot-long Justin boots.

In his right hand, the refurbishers placed a spur rather than a cigarette. After years of doing without, the roadside giant had apparently kicked the tobacco habit.

Wallaby market in Texas riding wave of popularity

DALLAS (AP) - The Texas wallaby market is hopping.

More Texans are raising animals in the kangaroo family than anywhere else in the nation, says Mary Runkle, who writes about wallabies, wallaroos and kangaroos for "Rare Breed Journal."

Ms. Runkle of Bloomfield, Iowa, says kangaroos are well-suited to the state's climate.

The miniature kangaroo-like native of Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand and New Guinea are riding a wave of popularity in Texas. Demand is exceeding supply, prices are rising and more people are raising the little marsupials.

But several things should be considered before people jump to buy one. The price tag for a wallaby ranges from $1,200 to nearly $2,000. They require a special diet, room for outdoor exercise and some cities prohibit them.

Permits to keep such exotic animals can be obtained for certain purposes, such as research, education and rehabilitation, said Capt. Sally Clinton, supervisor of Dallas animal control.

The state has no regulations on wallabies, said Beverly Boyd of the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Bill and Wanda Rowland of Dawn, a town of about 50 people about 30 miles southwest of Amarillo, say people often stop to take a look at their seven wallabies.

"Very, very few people have driven down the highway and seen a wallaby beside the road," Rowland said.

"I knew it would be real novel, but I never dreamed it would be like this. I feel like a tour guide. I'm out there showing people around all day long, every day."

Several of the Rowlands' wallabies are expecting. The baby joey should be peeking out of pouches by next month. All of the offspring are spoken for already.

Lisa Fitzgerald, a research technician at the Dallas Zoo, said wallabies adjust relatively easily to captivity, but still she questions whether they should be kept in that manner.

"The zoo strongly believes that exotic animals, imported animals and wild animals do not make good pets," she said.

Ms. Runkle disagrees, saying bottle-raised wallabies are affectionate.

"They are just lovable and sweet and love to be petted," she said. "You don't handle them like cows. You have to pay attention to them and meet their needs."

"They are wonderful pets, and people are fascinated by them. We've had them for 10 years, and we still say that," she said.

Town drops name for Super Bowl

BUFFALO, Texas (AP) - You won't find any Bills fans in Buffalo this week. In fact, you won't even find Buffalo.

Buffalo, Texas, that is. This town 100 miles south of Dallas has temporarily changed its name to Blue Star for the second year in a row. The switch will last until the end of the Super Bowl rematch Sunday between the Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills.

Buffalo made the same name change for last year's Super Bowl, and Dallas won.

"We felt like we needed to do this because we pulled the Cowboys through to win last year," Mayor Bobby Byrd said Monday. "I think we can do it again."

Less than 24 hours after the Cowboys beat San Francisco 38-21 Sunday to win the NFC championship, Blue Star's transformation began.

First thing Monday, residents were building the large blue star - the Cowboy's logo - that will be posted in the town's main intersection. Smaller stars will cover any mention of "Buffalo."

The change should be even easier this year than last, now that the lone Bills fan - high school basketball coach George Chaika, a Buffalo, N.Y., native - has moved to Warren, Texas.

Ryder had hoped the Houston Oilers, who left the playoffs early for the seventh straight year, would be involved in the name-change this time. Buffalo is about halfway between the two largest Texas cities.

"We had an excellent idea what to do if Houston got in there. We had to go to Plan B," said Ryder, who wouldn't divulge any details.

"I can't reveal any more. I'm hoping that one of these days Houston will be in there. I thought it would be this year."

Asked for his prediction before last year's Super Bowl, Ryder cited a highway sign 15 miles south of town that reads: Dallas 120, Buffalo 15.

This year he's even more optimistic.

"I'm predicting this year it'll be about, oh, about 120-10," Ryder said.

Ethics committee considers probe

By LARRY MARGASAK, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Victorious in a court fight to subpoena Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries, the Senate Ethics Committee must now decide whether the entries justify expanding its probe of the Oregon Republican to cover his dealings with lobbyists.

The committee also can turn its attention to whether it should hold public hearings, which could turn into a soap opera about Packwood's sexual conduct.

The panel had deferred those decisions until the Senate subpoena was tested in court.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson ruled in the committee's favor after balancing Packwood's "expectations of privacy" against the Ethics Committee's interest in examining the diaries for "evidence of misconduct."

Jackson rejected Packwood's arguments that his Fourth and Fifth Amendment constitutional protections against unreasonable search and self-incrimination were violated by the subpoena.

The judge concluded the diaries were "unquestionably relevant" to the committee's constitutional and "properly focused inquiry" and that Packwood lost his claim against self-incrimination when the diaries were "voluntarily committed to paper" before the committee sought them.

Bobbi Munson, Packwood's press secretary, said the senator would have no comment "until the lawyers and the senator have a chance to look at it and interpret it." Packwood's attorney, Jacob Stein, had no comment.

Packwood could ask Jackson to postpone delivery of the diaries while he takes his fight to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. That could be clarified by Thursday, when Jackson plans to set procedures for providing the diary tapes and transcripts.

The committee is investigating allegations Packwood made unwanted sexual advances to more than two dozen women, tried to intimidate some of his accusers and used his staff to do the same and attempted to obstruct the probe by altering the diaries.

The subpoena followed discovery of entries that raised questions about whether Packwood used his office to aid lobbyists and businessmen who offered his wife a job.

Perry must become strong spokesman

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER, AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - As defense secretary, William J. Perry must become a forceful spokesman for administration policy to fill an embarrassing gap in President Clinton's national security team. For a man who prefers to work behind the scenes, that could take some getting used to, associates say.

Clinton on Monday revealed his choice of Perry, 66, the Pentagon's No. 2 official, to replace Defense Secretary Les Aspin. The announcement came six days after Clinton's initial choice, retired Navy Adm. Bobby Inman, withdrew while complaining of unfair media coverage.

"He has the right vision for the job. ... He has been on the cutting edge of defense issues," said Clinton, adding that many people had told him, "Bill Perry is real pro - you can depend on him."

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said John Deutch, the current No. 3 in the Pentagon, is being considered as Perry's replacement.

The president applauded Perry's work in the 1970s on developing stealth technology for weapons and his more recent work in revising Pentagon purchasing rules.

Reaction from Congress was quick and enthusiastic, with predictions that the Senate will easily confirm the deputy defense secretary to replace his boss.

"A great choice ... a real professional with depth of experience," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, another member of that panel, cited Perry's experience "in all aspects of defense operations." He declared Perry "confirmable. ... He's already got the highest level of clearance."

Lawrence Korb, a former assistant defense secretary, called Perry "a good, safe choice" for Clinton. But he suggested the real test will be how well Perry moves from the Pentagon's corridors into a global limelight.

"What does he think about the use of force in Bosnia?" Korb said. "How will he articulate the president's strategic view in the world? How will he deal with the press, with Congress? Those are the key questions."

In contrast to Inman, who said he had to find a certain "comfort level" with Clinton before taking the job, Perry lauded the president's leadership and spent more time talking about others than about himself at Monday's announcement.

Inman himself said Perry's nomination was "wonderful news." Perry is "calmer ... has more patience and is a better listener," Inman said on CNN's "Larry King Live" program, contrasting Perry's personality with his own.

Perry said he would continue many of Aspin's programs, such as making it easier for women to serve in combat and developing the force structure called for in the "bottom-up review" of defense needs.

Clinton said Aspin would remain until Perry is confirmed.

The Newspaper BIBLE

SHE BECAME A MOTHER AT 90!

God's blessings are given to us by faith, as a free gift; we are certain to get them whether or not we follow Jewish customs if we have faith like Abraham's, for Abraham is the father of us all when it comes to these matters of faith. That is what the Scriptures mean when they say that God made Abraham the father of many nations. God will accept all people in every nation who trust God as Abraham did. And this promise is from God Himself, who makes the dead live again and speaks of future events with as much certainty as though they were already past!

So, when God told Abraham that He would give him a son who would have many descendants and become a great nation, Abraham believed God even though such a promise just couldn't come to pass! And because his faith was strong, he didn't worry about the fact that he was too old to be a father, at the age of one hundred, and that Sarah his wife, at ninety, was also much too old to have a baby.

But Abraham never doubted. He believed God, for his faith and trust grew ever stronger, and he praised God for this blessing even before it happened. He was completely sure that God was well able to do anything He promised. And because of Abraham's faith God forgave his sins and declared him "not guilty."

Now this wonderful statement--that he was accepted and approved through his faith--wasn't just for Abraham's benefit. It was for us, too, assuring us that God will accept us in the same way He accepted Abraham--when we believe the promises of God who brought back Jesus our Lord from the dead. He died for our sins and rose again to make us right with God, filling us with God's goodness. Romans 4:16-25
