Clinton studies line-item veto

WASHINGTON (AP) - With his list of veto candidates dwindling, President Clinton appears less eager to put the line-item veto to its first use.

A veto decision that aides had hoped Clinton would announce in Saturday's weekly radio address will not come until Monday, White House press secretary Mike McCurry said late Friday. "Deliberations are well advanced. He's honing in on a decision, but he isn't there yet."

Confining himself to the Oval Office and its nearby putting green for much of Friday afternoon, the president telephoned members of Congress and other outside advisers for input on the list of potential veto targets in the recently signed tax and spending bills. He and his aides had already whittled a list of 79 down to a small handful.

Under the line-item veto statute, enacted in 1996, Clinton must exercise any veto by midnight Monday.

Two days after Clinton told reporters that he expected to wield it on bipartisan budget package, officials held out the possibility that the president may save his first line-item veto for another time.

"There'll be other opportunities, to be sure, to use it," McCurry said. "But if it's used this time, he wants to make sure it's the right decision, and he's going to take the time necessary to assure himself that it is, indeed, in the nation's interest."

But carefully giving Clinton room to decide either way, McCurry added: "I think that he's still looking very carefully at the prospects of using it in connection with this legislation."

The president is mulling over a handful of 79 special-interest tax breaks included in the $152 billion tax cut bill that he signed with great fanfare on Tuesday. Also under consideration are as-yet unspecified items in the spending bill.

An administration official said one of the spending items concerned an aspect of the Medicaid program. The issue is "whether or not there are specific initiatives that cost money out of the Medicaid program that are flawed policy that the administration has consistently opposed," said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity. He gave no further details.

Union complains that UPS shows no intent to bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) - It's back to the bargaining table for the Teamsters and United Parcel Service, but the union's president says he sees little point in prolonging discussions if the company isn't ready to bargain. "I'm not going to spend any more time here if we're not about to start making some progress," Teamsters President Ron Carey said Friday night as he left a nine-hour session with UPS negotiators and federal mediators. "That hasn't happened; progress hasn't taken place."

UPS Chairman and CEO James P. Kelly suggested for the first time that the company was looking for a way to accommodate the union. He said "informal discussions" had touched on proposals from the union as well as what the nation's largest package-delivery company had termed its "last, best and final" offer.

But Kelly agreed with Carey that "we have not made significant progress" in about 19 hours of mediated talks Thursday and Friday.

Without agreement today on the key issues of full-time jobs, subcontracting, increased wages and pensions, Carey said he would begin girding union members for a protracted fight.

"I would rather be out on the picket lines... talking about what this strike means," Carey said.

Three Republican governors - Terry Branstad of Iowa, George Allen of Virginia and Jim Edgar of Illinois - urged President Clinton to intervene in the strike.

The governors noted that small businesses were suffering because they couldn't rely on UPS to ship their goods.

"I am writing to request your intervention in the United Parcel Service strike, which has caused... considerable disruption to the conduct of business in Iowa and throughout the United States," Branstad wrote Clinton. "I am particularly concerned about the impact that this strike is having on the prompt delivery of medical supplies."

Clinton has maintained that the inconveniences generated by the strike do not imperil the nation's safety or health - the standard for federal intervention under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Postal Service said it would deliver parcels in some areas, including New England, on Sunday to handle the overflow from the strike.

John Calhoun Wells, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, described the strike as "one of the most difficult, complex and challenging disputes" he had ever encountered.

"These people are at the top of their craft," he said. "They're master negotiators."

The company contended that 7,000 of some 185,000 Teamster members had crossed picket lines to go to work. But Carey said the actual number of returnees could fit "on the head of a pin."

"They're solid as a rock on the picket lines," he said.

UPS, which normally handles 12 million letters and parcels daily, was operating at 10 percent capacity with management personnel and others. The company has no strike insurance.

The dynamic of the strike could change significantly next week, as UPS customers realize there may be no quick resumption of their normal delivery service and the Teamsters are required to begin paying strike benefits.

If the strike continues through next week, the union will start paying $55 in weekly strike benefits. Those benefits, however, go only to those who follow their local union's wishes during the strike and who do not work more than three days at another job.

At the end of 1996, the union reported it had $6 million on hand, $59 million in investments and $6 million in U.S. securities. That was offset by $81 million in liabilities.

An internal memo dated June 23 reported that the Teamsters had $6.7 million in their treasury. But the AFL-CIO and other unions could pool support for the strikers with several million dollars in credit.

"We will be supporting the picket lines all across the country," AFL-CIO President John Sweeney told a labor meeting in Austin, Texas, on Friday. "We will be assisting them with any resources they might need, and we also will be assisting the individual strikers."

School board sets session here Monday

Other action items include the approval of the HHS student handbook, parking lot options at the High School, and athletic guidelines. These items may be amended after board discussion.

The school board will also consider the school calendar, the new 504 Coordinator and authorizing Jack Patton as representative to transmit funds to Texpool.

Parents and interested residents are encouraged to attend the open session and address the board during the time allotted for public comment.

Attempt to unionize Wal-Mart rejected

MERRILL, Wis. (AP) - Like cheerleaders at a high school football game, jubilant "associates" clasped arms and applauded the rejection of a first-ever attempt to unionize a Wal-Mart store in the United States.

Mary Ann Abraham, her eyes teary and with a smile on her face, hugged colleagues minutes after hearing the vote Friday to join the United Steelworkers of America failed 54-27.

"We are caring people and we take care of one another. We made it. We are a big family here," she said.

Union officials said they would keep trying. The vote was "a very sad day for all retail workers across America," said Peggy Boehm, an pro-union employee.

Only in Windsor, Ontario, does a Wal-Mart store have a union. The Bentonville, Ark.-based retail giant otherwise portrays itself as one big, happy family made up of blue-approved workers called "associates."

"Our associates once again leave no doubt that they believe workplace issues are best resolved and customers are best served by the associates within each Wal-Mart store without interference by a third party," said David Glass, the company's president and CEO.

Outside the Merrill store, about 30 unionization foes clapped, cheered and chanted, "Who's number one, the customer is always." They then spelled out the company's name and shouted: "What's that spell? Wal-Mart. Louder. Wal-Mart."

The union said it filed complaints with the National Labor Relations Board of unfair activities to influence workers' votes. Wal-Mart denied the activities and said it expects more union efforts because of Wal-Mart's large number of employees - 670,000 in the United States. Wal-Mart has 2,308 stores and 439 Sam's Club outlets worldwide.

While industry experts saw the election as a bellwether for the fate of unions in retail, eight-year Wal-Mart worker Danette Woodward was just happy the vote was over.

"The message it sends is we don't need a union in retail," Woodward said. "Union is more for the factory. This is a union town, though, but not for Wal-Mart."

Teachers preparing for new school year

Summer is almost over. Youngsters and teens are looking forward to mega shopping outings for all the cool, neat and bad clothes.

Parents are looking forward to the end of summer and just having the children back in school.

Before all of this takes place, the teachers of Hereford Independent School District will return to their classrooms and begin the arduous tasks necessary for the beginning of a new school year.

Teachers began the back-to-school routine as early as Monday, August 4, and will continue through next week.

Teachers, depending on the campus where they teach, have been busy hanging curtains, designing bulletin boards, arranging desks and preparing teaching schedules.

The campuses themselves have been primed for the big day. Hallways were painted, floors have received a couple of fresh coats of wax, computers have been wired and all is nearing readiness for the students to enter with their bright, smiling faces.

Part of the readiness includes a teacher breakfast at the administration building on Monday, August 11.

All teachers and administration will be welcomed for the coming year. Following the breakfast, teachers will adjourn to their respective campuses for the first round of teacher in-service days.

Hereford ISD has employed 39 new teachers for the 1997-98 school year for various positions through the district.

New teachers to the district met August 8, for new teacher orientation and a tour of the district, administration building and introduction to the school policy and procedures.

This is all a preliminary to the happy day when students don their new duds, have all their needed school supplies, and actually look forward to the new year.

Israeli warplanes raid Lebanon bases

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israeli warplanes attacked suspected guerrilla bases in eastern Lebanon Saturday, a day after Israeli jets raided a Palestinian guerrilla base just south of the Lebanese capital, Beirut. State-run Beirut Radio reported that one person died and three others were injured in Saturday's raid. The two days of raids, which include Israel's retaliatory raid Friday on a Palestinian guerrilla base deep in Lebanon, made for a violent prelude to Saturday's latest U.S. mission to the Middle East.

Lebanese Foreign Minister Faris Bweiz said Saturday he feared Israel was planning a large-scale attack on Lebanon.

Two Israeli fighter jets fired air-to-surface missiles Saturday at the village of Nabi Sheet, 50 miles northeast of Beirut in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, according to security officials in Lebanon. They spoke on customary condition of anonymity. Beirut Radio did not say whether the casualties were guerrillas.

The Lebanese Army and the Iranian-backed Hezbollah guerrilla group responded with anti-aircraft gunfire. No direct hits were reported.

The Israeli army said pilots reported hitting their target and returned safely to base.

Nabi Sheet is the hometown of Hussein Musawi, leader of the Iranian-backed Islamic Amal, a small faction affiliated with Hezbollah. It was not known whether Musawi's residence was hit.

Israeli jets flew within 15 miles of Beirut on Friday to fire missiles at a hilltop base of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command.

There were no injuries, and the missiles missed their targets, newspapers in Lebanon reported Saturday, quoting a spokesman for the guerrillas. The group, based in Damascus, Syria, opposes Yasser Arafat's peacemaking with the Israelis and is allied with the Iranian-based Hezbollah guerrillas.

The first Israeli raid came within hours of a cross-border rocket attack by Lebanese-based guerrillas. The rockets caused the first injuries and damage from a rocket barrage on Israel since April 1996, when the United States brokered a pact forbidding the targeting of civilians in fighting between Israeli forces and guerrillas in southern Lebanon.

Two rockets hit the border town of Kiryat Shmona. One fell on the Gates of Heaven synagogue while worshippers were at prayer, sending up glass splinters that wounded a woman sleeping in a home nearby.

Inspecting damage after the attack, Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai blamed Hezbollah guerrillas - and the Lebanese government for failing to curb them.

Hezbollah leader Sheik Hassan Nasrallah denied his group was responsible. But he warned Hezbollah might resume cross-border attacks if the accord against targeting civilians - brought about after deadly Israeli attacks as far north into Lebanon as the Beirut suburbs - fell apart.

Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, blamed Israel Saturday for the escalation in violence.

Idea of charging affluent seniors more for Medicare is not dead

WASHINGTON (AP) - The idea of charging affluent senior citizens more for Medicare is not dead, even though Congress stopped it for this year. Advocates for the elderly expect the issue to be high on the agenda of a Medicare advisory panel that President Clinton will appoint this fall.

"Maybe that's inevitable," said Nickolas Staffa, 80, a retired auto worker who came from Baltimore to join a demonstration of hundreds of senior citizens one recent evening at a park near the White House.

Adds Patrick Burns, spokesman for the National Council of Senior Citizens, which sponsored the protest: "I don't think any of this is going to go away."

Although it was ultimately left out of the five-year balanced budget plan signed this week by Clinton, seniors' advocacy groups consider so-called means testing of Medicare very much alive. They continue to organize rallies and town meetings. One group, the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, has a grassroots "campaign" underway, including mailings to 5.5 million seniors.

The idea of charging affluent retirees more for their Medicare benefits has made a remarkable comeback considering a disastrously unpopular experiment less than a decade ago. During this summer's budget debate, it won 70 votes in the Senate before petering out for lack of enthusiasm in the House.

"It shows that there are a lot of political officeholders who are prepared to take this stand," said supporter Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I.

Furthermore, bipartisan congressional leaders and Clinton have agreed means testing should be discussed by a commission they'll appoint before the end of this year to make recommendations for long-term Medicare changes.

"Because it had so much momentum and came so close (to being included in the balanced budget agreement) it has to be taken seriously," said Max Richtman, executive vice president of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare.

Independent polls earlier this summer indicated that a majority of Americans of all ages - even the affluent elderly who would be directly affected - support means testing Medicare.

But Richtman contends that more in-depth discussions with seniors reveal latent doubts - similar to those that surfaced in 1989, when public outcry forced Congress to repeal a plan to have the wealthy elderly bear the brunt of costs for expanded hospital benefits and prescription drug coverage for all Medicare beneficiaries.

This year's means testing proposal would not have provided any new Medicare benefits, but Senate supporters argued it would help save Medicare from financial crisis as more than 70 million baby boomers near retirement age.

Had the plan survived, individual retirees with incomes above $50,000 a year and couples with incomes above $75,000 would have paid higher monthly premiums for regular Medicare coverage of doctors office visits and other outpatient treatment.

"You have many wealthy people who are getting the same benefits as others. If they could pay something to help, why not?" said Donna Phillips, 52, who works for the county aging services agency in a well-heeled Washington suburb.

But Phillips said many seniors she's talked to are frightened by the prospect of change.

"These are people who really used to believe the government was going to take care of them," she said.

Wilma McBroom, a 68-year-old retiree from Elkton, Md., said she's afraid the definition of "wealthy" will grow over time to take in people who already must budget fixed incomes carefully.

"They'll finally get down to everybody," McBroom said.

Investigators know what caused crash of DC-8 cargo plane, not why

MIAMI (AP) - Alarms sounded, warning pilots that their cargo plane was too low and going too slow to stay aloft before the DC-8 crashed and sent burning wreckage across a crowded business district, investigators found.

An early analysis of the cockpit voice recorder Friday indicated separate systems warned the crew they could stall and were dangerously close to the ground, said Jim Hall, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The plane rose too steeply on takeoff to keep flying, NTSB spokesman Pat Cariseo said. "We know that happened and now we have to figure out the why part," he said.

Officials with the NTSB and Federal Aviation Administration said they were looking at whether the 29-year-old plane may have been overloaded with cargo and extra fuel, whether the cargo shifted during takeoff, and at mechanical problems or pilot error.

The plane rolled a long time on the runway, struggled into the sky with its nose at an 85-degree angle and then plummeted to the ground tail first Thursday.

Three bodies found after the crash were believed to be crew members. A body was found Friday in a charred car, the first known victim to be killed on the ground. A fourth person on the plane was presumed dead, and two people believed to be in the vicinity of the crash were reported missing.

Authorities said none of the four bodies found so far have been identified because they were so badly charred.

The plane, operated by Fine Air Services, was headed for the Dominican Republic with 80,000 pounds of fabric for Levi's dress slacks.

A flight data recorder recovered from the wreckage did not fully measure data it was supposed to, a common problem among older planes, said Robert Benzoni, NTSB's lead investigator.

But the cockpit voice recorder indicated that a device activated to warn of a dangerous slowing of the plane. In order to keep aloft, planes must maintain a certain speed or they will go into an aerodynamic stall, in which the wings don't generate enough lift.

Initial signs indicate the engines flamed and that the last thing the crew heard were warnings that the plane was too low or about to hit something, Benzoni said.

Grandson of Malcolm X sentenced to 18 months

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) - The 12-year-old grandson of Malcolm X must spend at least 18 months at a juvenile facility for troubled adolescents for burning to death his grandmother, Betty Shabazz.

Malcolm Shabazz's sentence will be reviewed at the end of 18 months, and can be extended a year at a time until he turns 18, a judge decided Friday.

Prosecutors said the boy set the gasoline fire in hopes of being reunited with his mother, Qubilah Shabazz, who has had problems with alcohol and a major run-in with the law.

Malcolm pleaded guilty July 10 to the juvenile equivalent of manslaughter and arson in the death of his grandmother, with whom he had been sent to live.

The widow of the slain civil rights activist suffered burns over 80 percent of her body in the fire June 1 at her Yonkers apartment. She died June 23 after a series of painful operations.

Family Court Judge Howard Spitz rejected defense requests to send the boy to a juvenile treatment center in Virginia after hearing testimony about numerous fire calls and youngsters running away.

Spitz said Malcolm is mentally ill and gave him the maximum sentence allowed.

"You have a challenging road ahead," Spitz told the expressionless boy. "I know you have the ability to prevail and become an outstanding citizen."

Joseph DeCarlo, the probation officer assigned to the case, said Hillcrest Education Center Inc., a center for troubled youngsters in Lenox, Mass., has successfully dealt with firesetters and runaways.

UAW local reaches contract

DETROIT (AP) - A United Auto Workers local threatening to strike at General Motors' Cadillac assembly plant reached a tentative contract agreement early Saturday.

UAW Local 22 president Ed Ptasznik said a vote on the contract would be scheduled soon. Neither he nor GM spokesman Paul Stadafora would provide details of the tentative agreement reached after a midnight strike deadline.

The plant, with about 3,600 hourly workers, is the only source of Cadillac's full-size sedans and the Eldorado coupe. It has been without a contract since September.

A walkout would have been the seventh this year against General Motors Corp. and the second in less than a month. A strike last month at a parts plant in Warren shut down four assembly plants, leaving 19,300 workers without work before an agreement was reached.

A strike at the Detroit-Hamtramck plant would not have had as wide-ranging effects as the parts plants that shut last month. But it could delay the launch of the redesigned 1998 Seville, crucial to the luxury automaker's plans for a major overseas expansion.

remained under consideration, McCurry said, while a congressional source said the list had been narrowed to perhaps only a single tax break. White House officials have consulted with congressional leaders throughout their veto deliberations.

Two measures that appeared safe were a tax break for hard-cider manufacturers and a $2.3 billion Amtrak rescue package, about which White House spokesman Barry Toiv remarked, "We did not oppose it."

On the cider provision, McCurry said: "Looks like there's good, sound reasons for it."

Historical implications, especially when presidents have been seeking line-item veto authority since the days of Ulysses S. Grant, also weighed on Clinton.

"Remember, at no time in the history of the country has a president exercised line-item veto," McCurry said. "So this being the first time, if it is to be the first time, the president wants to assure that it's done properly."

McCurry acknowledged that concerns about the anticipated court challenge of Clinton's first line-item veto also was a factor. Justice Department officials and White House counsel Charles F.C. Ruff have advised the veto may be harder to defend if it is used to strike a tax item rather than a spending item.

Besides the cider and Amtrak tax breaks, other items that sources said were under review included a provision to let heirs to Texas-based Sammons Enterprises Inc. avoid estate taxes. Another measure permits county officials in 34 states more favorable tax treatment for expenses.

One item would defer taxes on the sale of a sugar beet processing facility owned by Texas businessman Harold Simmons, an influential Republican contributor, to a farmer-owned cooperative.

Alaskan towns mark centennials of when world went Klondike crazy

By DAVID GERMAIN
Associated Press Writer
DAWSON, Yukon Territory (AP)

The mad rush started with one prospector giving another the shaft, forsaking a promise to pass on the word if he found gold on a little stream bed in the middle of nowhere.

By the time the gold dust settled a couple of years later, tens of thousands who came north in the Klondike stampede had gotten the shaft, fleeced by con men, trampled by the elements, or done in by their own greed.

A century ago, the world went Klondike crazy. Alaska and Yukon towns that sprang up during the Gold Rush - and survived its brief duration - have been marking a slew of centennials, from the arrival of the Canadian mounted police to the actual gold discovery to the stampede a year later.

The Gold Rush of 1897-98 was a maniacal dash toward the Yukon by wannabe prospectors with visions of nuggets waiting to be scooped up by anyone holding a shovel.

"I think it was the same sort of craziness you saw in the late 1940s, people buying Geiger counters and thinking they'd get rich finding uranium," says David Neufeld, Yukon historian for Parks Canada.

The big strike came in August 1896, when George Carmack and Indian companions Skookum Jim and Tagish Charley found a thumb-size hunk of gold in a stream off the Klondike River that became known as Bonanza Creek.

The three were panning there on the advice of prospector Robert Henderson, who was working a nearby creek that turned out to be a bust.

Henderson asked Carmack to report back on the prospects along Bonanza Creek. Though Carmack spread the word to every other miner he encountered, he didn't tell Henderson about Bonanza's rich claims.

Historians speculate the snub resulted from racist comments Henderson made about Carmack's Indian partners. Whatever the reason, by the time Henderson heard about the gold on Bonanza and an even richer branch called Eldorado Creek, the claims were all staked.

Henderson, the man some credit for touching off the Gold Rush, found himself shut out of the Klondike stampede.

Carmack and company grew rich overnight. Hundreds of others swarmed in from outposts along the Yukon River. Some of their 500-foot claims produced $1 million or more in gold within a few years.

The town of Dawson sprouted nearby and became the goal for 100,000 gold-seekers who set out for the territory. News of the gold strike trickled out, but it took a year and a dramatic voyage south by the first Klondike tycoons to set the stampede in motion.

The steamship Excelsior pulled into San Francisco on July 15, 1897, with about 20 prospectors who shambled down the dock in ratty mining clothes, lugging suitcases filled with gold.

Two days later, a second vessel carrying Klondike gold headed into Seattle. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer heralded its coming with the headline, "Gold! Gold! Gold! 68 rich men on the Steamer Portland. Stacks of yellow metal!"

Thousands mobbed the wharf to catch a glimpse of the gold and its rumped owners.

"Imagine the scene," says Canadian historian Pierre Berton, whose book "Klondike" is considered the definitive account of the Gold Rush. "Here are these men still stained with the mud of Eldorado and Bonanza creeks, and they're all rich, carrying sacks of gold. This got people out and turned them crazy."

Policemen, bartenders, doctors and lawyers, store clerks - even Seattle's mayor - quit their jobs and converged on the Yukon in an 1890s version of "Planes, Trains and Automobiles."

People built snow bicycles, boat-sleds and other ridiculous contraptions to reach the Klondike. Some talked of flying hot-air balloons to the gold fields.

Newspapers fed the frenzy, competing with one another for the most sensational - sometimes fictional - stories of the Yukon's easy pickings.

"The Gold Rush was one big O.J. trial," says Dave McClelland, a tour operator in the Gold Rush town of Skagway. "The coverage was so sensational, it got people all churned up. Then people got here and saw it wasn't so easy."

The country had been mired in a depression, and the sudden optimism of the Gold Rush jump-started the economy.

"Part of what caused the depression was a mental attitude. If you expect a disaster, you'll probably get one," says Irene Henriksen of Skagway, whose grandfather joined the Gold Rush to work on a Yukon railroad. "The Klondike brought hope. People saw riches to be had if you could just get there."

In Alaska, many stampedeers holed up for winter along the lower Yukon or in the boom towns of Skagway and Dyea, the gateways to mountain passes to the river.

Skagway became known as a "hell on earth" for its lawlessness, gunfire and den of thieves and swindlers led by the infamous Soapy Smith. His gang preyed on "cheechakos," newcomers who wouldn't know the difference between gold dust and dandruff.

Until he died in a shootout in 1898, Smith sent many stampedeers home penniless without ever getting nearer than 600 miles of the Klondike.

Most of the 30,000 gold-seekers who made it to Dawson started at the Chilkoot Trail, a 33-mile trek over a steep mountain pass leading to the Yukon's headwaters. Charlie Chaplin re-created their single-file ascent up a staircase carved in snow in his silent film, "The Gold Rush."

Enchanted by Hollywood movies about the Klondike and the tales of Jack London and poems of Robert Service, visitors today wax romantic about the Gold Rush. For stampedeers, though, the journey was a nightmare.

About 60 died in an avalanche along the Chilkoot Trail, while others drowned or froze. Some developed scurvy or lost limbs from frostbite. Many lived for months on beans and sourdough bread, or less.

The scene in "The Gold Rush" when Chaplin cooks his footwear for dinner was drawn from the story of a bishop who supposedly boiled his boots to drink the broth and eat the shoe leather.

After their hellish winter, those still bent on the Klondike reached Dawson in the summer of 1898 to find the gold claims already staked. They milled about the muddy streets listlessly, ogling the dancehall girls and following the rich prospectors who strutted around town in splendor.

Many of the Klondike's nouveau riches didn't stay that way long, squandering fortunes on wine and women or bankrupting themselves in bad business schemes.

Gamblers, showgirls and shrewd merchants - those who parted the prospectors from their gold pokes - were the ones who found the real Klondike mother lode.

"The people who made money weren't the ones who found a gold mine," says Berton, whose father came to the Yukon in the Gold Rush. "They found a man who found a gold mine."

Most latecomers quickly went home without ever seeing the gold fields, though some stayed on to work or start businesses. John Firth of Whitehorse, the Yukon capital, says his grandfather opened an insurance office in Dawson after failing to strike gold.

"He was a man of letters, and a lot of the miners were illiterate," Firth says. "His ability to read and write were worth more money to him than digging in the dirt."

As quickly as it started, the Gold Rush faded. National interest turned to the Spanish-American War, and the Klondike was forgotten.

Some towns such as Dyea vanished, but Skagway and Dawson lived on and thrive today as popular tourist stops. Gold still comes out of the Klondike as miners rework the old claims with modern machinery.

After the Gold Rush, professional prospectors moved on to new strikes around Fairbanks and Nome, Alaska. But even those who went home broke felt somehow enriched by the Klondike. In the end, the stampede wasn't about gold at all, Berton says, but about testing one's mettle.

"If you read their diaries, very few people who participated were disappointed," says Clay Alderson, superintendent of Klondike Gold Rush National Historical Park.

"Most said, 'We didn't get rich, but I'm glad we went and made it there and got to be part of this.'"

Discovery astronauts test miniature robot arm

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Warming it up for days of orbital exercises, Discovery's astronauts stretched and retracted a new miniature robot arm.

The $100 million Japanese creation - a model of what space officials from that country hope to fly on the future international space station - was tried out for the first time Friday.

At 5 feet, the remote-controlled arm is one-tenth the length of the space shuttle's giant crane. The arm will undergo tests throughout Discovery's 11-day mission.

Astronauts Jan Davis and Stephen Robinson will try to unlock, open and close a small door in the shuttle's cargo bay, loosen bolts and lift a 1 (-foot box with the jointed device.

Friday's testing went along slowly and there were some glitches, but NASA said that wasn't surprising since the arm is so new.

The shuttle's 50-foot robot arm, meanwhile, already has been put to work on this flight. Within hours of Thursday's liftoff, the crane released an ozone-studying satellite.

That spacecraft, built by the German space agency, began nine days of collecting information on Earth's ozone layer. Its telescopes measured components of the atmosphere, including the ones thought to be responsible for ozone depletion.

The satellite traveled within 45 miles of the shuttle so the astronauts could maintain communication with the craft.

As part of the ozone study, NASA launched two small rockets from Wallops Island, Va., and one from White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico while the satellite passed 184 miles overhead. A total of 66 small rockets and balloons are to be sent up before the astronauts retrieve the satellite next Saturday.

Texas peanut farmers say industry is going nuts

HOUSTON (AP) - Across the nation, peanut farmers say their business is in the doldrums as crops shrink and Americans eat fewer peanuts.

But in Texas, peanut farmers say the industry is going nuts.

Last year, Texans produced an unprecedented 339,500 tons of peanuts, catapulting the state into the No. 2 spot behind Georgia. This year's output is expected to be even bigger with 30,000 new acres planted in 1997.

Experts say the near future, when federal rules regarding domestic peanut sales expire, is still more promising for Texas.

"I tell people we have the potential to run the entire peanut industry," Chip Lee, a Texas A&M University professor and peanut specialist, told The Wall Street Journal's Texas Journal in today's edition.

The state's advantage comes in aggressive marketing overseas. Texas has become the nation's leading peanut exporter in recent years.

Last year, 56 percent of the Texas crop was shipped abroad, mostly to Canada, the Netherlands, Germany and Mexico. Georgia, by contrast, peddled only 20 percent of its crop overseas.

Texas looks overseas because the traditional peanut states have a tremendous advantage at home. Federal output quotas guarantee the biggest chunk of the domestic market to those Southern farmers, whose forebears got into the peanut-growing business long before most Texans.

The quota program, established in the late 1940s, limits the number of farmers who can sell peanuts in the U.S. to those who own special permits, known as quotas. The quotas are passed down from generation to generation. Fewer of these so-called quota owners are in Texas.

But change is in the air. Experts say the quota system could be completely dismantled when it expires early in the next century, and Texas could find itself at the forefront of a radically different peanut market.

To persuade other nations to buy Texas nuts, growers and shellers regularly put in appearances at such shows as the International Peanut Forum trade show in Rome. The Western (Texas) Peanut Growers' Association has been sending envoys to the forum for five years. This May, it had its own exhibit - and Georgia farmers didn't.

Texas' next target is Asia, largely untapped by U.S. peanut growers.

"The ones we have our eye on mostly now are the Indonesian" islands, says Mary Webb, executive director of the Texas Peanut Producers Board.

If Texas does seriously challenge Georgia, which still produces twice as many peanuts as the Lone Star State, it will be due to efforts in West Texas, where some cotton farmers weary of boll weevil and weather problems are switching to the hardy peanut.

In West Texas, unlike other parts of the state and other states in the South, peanuts so far have proved practically immune to insects and plant diseases. That translates into cost-savings for farmers.

That also means Texans can turn a profit on peanuts overseas, where nuts often sell for only half as much as in the U.S. because of price supports here.

The prospect has mouths watering in West Texas.

Andy Timmons, a 29-year-old peanut farmer in Brownfield, says he used to concentrate solely on cotton.

But last year, Timmons decided to try 180 acres of peanuts. This year, he hiked the peanut crop to 600 acres and shrunk his cotton crop.

"Cotton out here is like a sheep walk in around looking for a place to die," Timmons said. "You go out there now and the only thing green is the peanut."

Southern Baptists strengthen boycott of Walt Disney Co.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - The Southern Baptist Convention is urging members to withhold at least $100 each from the Walt Disney Co. in the next year, after a June resolution to boycott the company.

Richard Land, head of the convention's Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission, says the group will appeal to 91,000 pastors and church leaders. Land says he wants to energize the country's 15 million Southern Baptists and to send the message that the boycott won't die.

"We're just getting started," Land says. "I think Disney thinks the Southern Baptist Convention has been hijacked by a bunch of radicals. This came from the grass roots up. Rank-and-file Baptists are very upset and they've found a way to channel their anger."

Pastors will get a fact sheet soon explaining why the denomination is boycotting Disney and asking them to appeal to their members for support, Land says. The information will accompany the September/October issue of Light, a magazine that goes to about 38,000 pastors as well as youth leaders and those in other church ministries.

The sheet, designed to be inserted in church bulletins, calls on every Southern Baptist to withhold at least $100 in entertainment spending from Disney in the next year. It also asks families to follow up with letters to Disney chairman Michael Eisner.

Disney spokesman John Dreyer says Disney is ready to talk to Southern Baptists. An informal meeting last month ended when both sides walked out.

"We think there is room for discussion and in the meantime would hope there's a sense of tolerance and an attempt to treat each other decently," Dreyer said.

Dreyer wouldn't say what toll, if any, the boycott is taking on Disney.

Southern Baptists approved a sweeping boycott of Disney in June to protest the company's overtures to homosexuals and its production of television shows and movies that the convention believes are violent or include themes that ridicule Christian values.

Disney has angered some by allowing Gay Days at its theme parks and by extending health benefits to partners of gay and lesbian employees.

Classroom program has agriculture basis

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) - Tanya Collins' fourth- and fifth-graders made their own outdoor classroom in rural San Rafael. They planted trees, built a berm for erosion control, helped clear trails, even learned how cement is made and built a concrete bench decorated with their handprints.

They gathered wildflowers, dried them, labeled them and learned their uses. They studied the soil of the cleared field next to their school that became their outdoor classroom, figuring out how much manure that kind of soil needed.

"My kids love to work," says Ms. Collins. "They love to go outside and work."

She had been looking for resources to use at the rural San Rafael Elementary School near Grants where she teaches. A colleague pointed her to a program called Ag in the Classroom, which uses an agricultural basis to teach everything from math to history. The nationwide program began in 1983 and is handled in this state by the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau.

"It's a wonderful way to teach kids and there's not one aspect of New Mexico that's not touched by agriculture in one way or another," says Ms. Collins.

Ag in the Classroom has helped her students learn about their roots, taking pride in the area's different cultures. For example, a longtime ranching woman talked to them about what ranching was like 50 years ago and how it's changed.

The program also got Ms. Collins' kids hooked on science, resulting in San Rafael Elementary having one of its largest science fair turnouts in years, Ms. Collins says.

"It wasn't fighting the kids to do it, it was they had questions they wanted answered," she says.

Her students kept journals, using the dictionary and doing research for entries. At the end of the year, they had to write their own interpretation of what they learned from Ag in the Classroom.

"They learned to work with people they usually could not have worked with," their teacher says.

"They learned to get along with each other, to work together."

Ag in the Classroom offers a summer workshop for teachers, and has lessons in all subjects from kindergarten through high school.

Jennifer Hopper, who directs the program in New Mexico, gives examples of lessons for second-graders - using popcorn.

For math, students use popped kernels to learn about the "ones" and "tens" places. If the number is 32, students count out three popped kernels for the "tens" place and two unpopped kernels for the "ones" place. Or children can count five kernels plus two kernels to equal seven.

Then there's science. Kids study popcorn to learn the different parts of the kernels, giving them a foundation for later biology studies. They also can study popcorn's nutritional value.

And since the oldest popcorn kernels were found in Carlsbad Caverns, New Mexico kids have built-in history and geography lessons, Ms. Hopper says.

"You can give them a map, say where is Carlsbad Caverns? If you're studying ancient times, you can tie that in. There's the history of popcorn, who made the popcorn maker, that sort of thing," she says.

Ag in the Classroom also can help teachers get grow labs - classroom greenhouses ranging from a few feet square to up to 16 feet long.

The program has the plans for building one, with materials running about $50, Ms. Hopper says. She says some classes have gotten materials donated by a local Farm Bureau, then the high school Future Farmers of America builds the grow lab.

"It teaches science, the process of growing things, but also teaches about life because sometimes plants don't grow," Ms. Hopper says. "There was too much water, not enough water, too much light. It teaches patience, watching the (growth) cycles."

"Even with kids we think have attention problems, behavior problems, the grow labs are really successful. They want to come to school to see how their plants are doing. So it's more than agriculture."

Patriots top Dallas in exhibition game

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) - Drew Bledsoe had struggled in his last two games, both against the Green Bay Packers. He improved against the previous Super Bowl winner. He threw for 103 yards and a touchdown in three series Friday night as the New England Patriots survived a late scare for a 16-10 exhibition win over the Dallas Cowboys.

"Drew was real close to having a heck of a night. He missed a couple of guys in the flat," Pete Carroll said after his first victory as Patriots coach. "He ran the clock real well, he moved the team, made some good decisions."

Against Green Bay, Bledsoe threw four interceptions in a 35-21 Super Bowl loss and was just 5-of-10 for 30 yards in a 7-3 exhibition setback.

But he was 9-for-17 against Dallas, which didn't stick with its first-stringers as long as the Packers did last week.

"You've got to take that into account," said Bledsoe, who played every offensive play until the final three minutes of the first half and threw a 5-yard touchdown to Ben Coates. "At the same time, I thought we came out and put together three very good drives."

Dallas coach Barry Switzer seemed more preoccupied with his team's performance than his own troubles. He was charged with a misdemeanor for carrying a loaded gun at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport last Monday and was fined $75,000 by owner Jerry Jones.

"I've always enjoyed being on the field. It's especially good this week, probably more than most," he said.

Even if he did lose to the defending AFC champions.

"They had their dress rehearsal tonight," Switzer said. "They were going to play their guys longer. We are going to do that next week" against the St. Louis Rams.

Switzer was greeted at Foxboro Stadium with chants of "Convict" and signs that said "Get out of Jail for $75,000" and "Hey, Cowboys, check your guns at the gate. This means you, Barry." On the other hand, Jones was asked for autographs when fans caught sight of him at halftime, and was cheered when he walked off the field at the end of the game.

Quarterback Troy Aikman played just two series for the second straight game. In the first one, he threw two touchdown passes in a 34-27 loss to Oakland. On Friday, the first drive ended without a first down when he threw a poor pass toward Michael Irvin. The second ended with a missed field goal.

"The frustrating thing for me was missing Michael on the first drive," said Aikman, who was 6-of-9 for 34 yards. "The second drive was more like it."

The Patriots, who held a 390-122 advantage in yards, took a 16-0 lead midway through the third quarter on Adam Vinatieri's 38-yard field goal. He already had connected from 42 and 22 yards.

Dallas' comeback began when Omar Stoutmire blocked Tom Tupa's punt and Kevin Mathis returned it 32 yards for a touchdown with 9:11 left in the game. Danny Kight's 34-yard field goal made the score 16-10 with 4:12 remaining.

Then Daryl Hardy recovered a fumble by Tupa, playing quarterback, with 3:05 to go. That gave Dallas the ball at the New England 25, and Jason Garrett drove them to the 6. But on fourth down, his pass sailed over the head of Macey Brooks, and the Cowboys never got the ball back.

The Cowboys played without several top players.

On offense, Emmitt Smith rested for the second straight game and receiver Anthony Miller and tackle Mark Tuinei are recovering from knee problems. Tuinei's replacement, George Hegamin, left with a sprained right knee early in the second quarter.

Both starting cornerbacks also missed the game - Kevin Smith with a sprained ankle and Deion Sanders, who is playing for the Cincinnati Reds.

Favre sparks Packer win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) - Brett Favre, playing less than one quarter, went 11-of-17 for 158 yards - including an acrobatic 5-yard scoring pass to Derrick Mayes - as the Green Bay Packers defeated the Oakland Raiders 37-24 Friday night.

Mayes caught 12 passes for 139 yards and two touchdowns as the Super Bowl champions overwhelmed the sloppy Raiders (1-1) on the way to their third straight preseason victory.

Raiders quarterback Jeff George, also making his first appearance in front of the hometown fans, played until midway through the second quarter. He completed 2 of 7 passes for 63 yards, including a 52-yarder to James Jett.

Packers backup Steve Bono threw a 3-yard touchdown pass to Emory Smith. Doug Pederson had a 10-yard scoring pass to Mayes and Chris Darkins had a 6-yard scoring run for the Packers (3-0). Ryan Longwell added field goals of 44, 34 and 21 yards.

Hurst leading LPGA Classic

AGAWAM, Mass. (AP) - Pat Hurst turned her old nemesis, the sand, into a friend at the LPGA Friendly's Classic.

"I worked really hard last week, and the confidence is back," she said of her sand game that helped her to a 3-under-par 69 Friday.

That gave her a 36-hole total of 5-under 139 and a one-stroke lead over a very crowded leaderboard as damp fairways and tricky greens at the Crestview Country Club kept anyone from pulling too far ahead.

Chris Johnson, a co-leader after the first round, shot a 72 Friday to slip into second place. Defending champion Dottie Pepper, Karrie Webb, Kristi Albers, Nancy Harvey and first-round co-leader Joan Pitcock were all tied for third at 141.

There were six golfers at 142, six at 143 and eight at 144, leaving a total of 26 golfers within five shots of the leader.

Young players taking over major golf championships

By RON SIRAK
AP Golf Writer

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) - When Roger Bannister broke the 4-minute mile, he knocked down a barrier and others followed. Seems Tiger Woods has done the same. Suddenly, players in their 20s can win major championships.

Woods' shockingly easy victory at the Masters set off a year in which players under 30 have won all three Grand Slam events. They could add a fourth at the PGA Championship - a sweep never accomplished since the Masters was created in 1934.

"It's time for a changing of the guard, so to speak," Woods said as he readied his game at the Buick Open last week. "Guys like Tom Kite and Tom Watson were great players, but they're on their way out."

While that might sound like the arrogance of youth, the numbers back him up.

In the 40 major championships in the 10 years before 1997, the average age of the winner was 33.1.

This year, the oldest winner of a major was 27-year-old Ernie Els in the U.S. Open. With Woods, 21, and Justin Leonard, 25, winning the British Open, the average age in 1997 is 24.3.

And when the 79th PGA starts at Winged Foot Golf Club on Thursday, the chances of another under-30 winner will be boosted by their talent, their numbers and the decline of several perennial contenders in Grand Slam events.

Woods, Els and Leonard are joined by Phil Mickelson, Jim Furyk, David Duval, Paul Stankowski and Stewart Cink as players under 30 capable of winning the PGA. Those eight players have 12 victories and 20 top-three finishes among them this year.

At the same time, the final-round leaderboard in the major championships this year has lacked some familiar names.

Nick Faldo and Nick Price, both 40, and 42-year-old Greg Norman have won 11 major championships among them but have not contended in any of the three this year.

Watson (47) hasn't won a major since 1983. Corey Pavin (37) has virtually disappeared. And Mark O'Meara (40) hasn't finished better than 30th in a major this year.

Throw in Tom Lehman (38) Fred Couples (37) Davis Love III (33) and Lee Janzen (32) and those 10 players - eight of whom have won major championships - have collectively missed almost as many cuts in majors this year (6) as they have top-10 finishes (7).

"I'm not sure what the reason is," Leonard said about the changing of the guard. "I think in my case, I see guys like Tiger and Ernie, and see Phil Mickelson win his 11th tournament last week. Seeing that maybe raises my expectations a little bit."

Expectations also were increased because the young players came to the PGA Tour battle tested in a better level of college golf, through tougher competition on the amateur circuit and - most of all - by tournament experience on the Nike Tour.

"People don't realize how good the Nike Tour has been for golf," Cink said about the 8-year-old minor-league circuit where he was the leading money winner last year. "It seems like we're seeing the results of it. We're more ready to win than probably any other era in golf."

One young guy who seems ready for a breakthrough victory in a major is Furyk. The 27-year-old with the distinctive looping swing finished in the top-10 in eight consecutive events going into last week's Buick Open, including fifth at the U.S. Open and fourth at the British Open.

He's fourth on the tour in hitting fairways and eighth in putting, a combination that will play well at Winged Foot, where the fairways are lined with tall trees and the small, contoured greens are protected by deep bunkers.

If a fourth major is going to be won by a fourth different guy in his 20s this year, Furyk is a sensible pick.

If one of the more veteran players is going to walk off with the title, it could be an outsider like 41-year-old Scott Hoch, who hits fairways and greens, makes putts and is a good bunker player.

Lehman, who leads the tour in greens hit at 72.8 percent, can contend if he can improve even marginally on his 170th-place ranking on the tour in putting.

And a war of attrition with the winning score around even par - as is likely - could let in the pure ball strikers like Faldo, Watson and Colin Montgomerie.

But don't be surprised if Winged Foot is the final stamp on the year the youngsters grabbed hold of the game.

"It's our generation," Woods said. "Our generation is a little more flamboyant. Our generation isn't afraid to take risks."

Els captures lead by four in Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) - Ernie Els enjoys Warwick Hills Country Club. It reminds him of some courses back home in South Africa, and he plays it like a member.

Els, who came within a stroke of forcing a playoff with Woody Austin in the 1995 Buick Open, took a commanding four-stroke lead into Saturday's third round. His nearest rival was Dan Forsman, who also likes the golf course. He won the 1992 Buick Open.

"I've got to try and push it through now," said Els, seeking his third PGA Tour win of the season. "There will be a lot of good players chasing me over the weekend."

Els, stringing together brilliant streaks with a little luck, shot a second-round 63 Friday for a 13-under-par 131 total. Forsman shot a 67.

Mariners' Johnson whiffs 19; Texas tops Tribe

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
Randy Johnson was determined to finish what he started.

With Seattle's new-and-improved bullpen warming up and Mariners manager Lou Piniella wanting to pull him, Johnson still talked his way back to the mound for the ninth inning Friday night.

Johnson quickly added three more strikeouts for a total of 19 as the Mariners beat the Chicago White Sox 5-0.

Johnson matched the major league mark for left-handers he tied on June 24 when he struck out 19 in a loss to Oakland. The record for a nine-inning game is 20, accomplished twice by Roger Clemens.

"I got close once again to Clemens' record," Johnson said.

"Tonight was a special night." Johnson (16-3) pitched a five-inning shutout, and needed only 12 more to finish his 17th career shutout.

In other games, Baltimore beat Anaheim 6-2; Minnesota defeated New York 9-1; Texas rallied past Cleveland 6-5; Toronto topped Detroit 6-3; and Boston beat Kansas City 8-2.

Johnson allowed only five balls out of the infield. He leads the majors with 243 strikeouts, and has fanned 10 or more in 12 games this season.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit his 35th home run, and second in two nights. Edgar Martinez hit his 19th homer.

Orioles 6, Angels 2
Cal Ripken went 3-for-3 with a sacrifice fly as visiting Baltimore won for the 13th time in 16 games.

In six games since being dropped to the sixth spot in the batting order, Ripken is 9-for-19 with five RBIs, a home run and five runs scored.

Mike Mussina (13-4) gave up three hits in 7 1-3 innings. He is 6-0 in his last seven starts against the Angels.

Rangers 6, Indians 5
Scott Bailes, who retired from baseball in 1993 before making a comeback this season, pitched 1 2-3 scoreless innings for the win at Jacobs Field.

Bailes (1-0) earned his first major league victory since 1992. The 34-year-old left-hander opened three children's apparel stores after retiring, and later played semi-pro and winter league ball before signing with Texas' Triple-A team in Oklahoma City in the offseason.

Jim Leyritz's two-run single capped a three-run ninth inning that rallied Texas over Cleveland.

Juan Gonzalez, who had a homer and three hits, started the ninth against Mike Jackson (2-4) with a single. He returned to the Rangers after spending two days in Puerto Rico to finalize his divorce.

Twins 9, Yankees 1

Roberto Kelly's routine fly ball to center field was lost in the Metrodome roof, and the result was an inside-the-park home run that highlighted Minnesota's six-run first inning against Dwight Gooden.

Gooden (5-4) retired only two batters, matching the shortest start of his career. New York center fielder Bernie Williams waved his arms when he couldn't see Kelly's fly, and the ball landed 40 feet behind him for a gift two-run homer.

Chuck Knoblauch, who homered, and Paul Molitor each had three hits for the Twins.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 3

Carlos Delgado hit two two-run homers as Toronto defeated Detroit at SkyDome.

Delgado homered off Willie Blair (11-5), who had won seven straight starts, in the third inning. Delgado hit his 24th home run - and his first off a left-hander this season - against Mike Myers in the eighth.

Red Sox 8, Royals 2
Reggie Jefferson hit a three-run homer, extending his hitting streak to 22 games, as Boston beat visiting Kansas City for its season-best fifth win in a row.

Rookie Scott Hatteberg had three doubles and a career-high four hits for the Red Sox. At 57-59, the Red Sox moved within two games of .500 for the first time since May 8.

McGwire sparks Cardinal victory; McRae helps Mets beat Astros, 6-1

By The Associated Press
New surroundings brought success to Mark McGwire and Brian McRae, both of whom were playing home games for the first time with their new teams.

McGwire hit a 441-foot home run in his Busch Stadium debut as the St. Louis Cardinals stopped a five-game losing streak with a 6-1 win over the Philadelphia Phillies on Friday night.

McRae, who was traded earlier Friday from the Cubs to the Mets, had three hits and scored twice as New York defeated Houston 6-1.

Elsewhere, Florida beat Atlanta 6-4; San Francisco blanked Montreal 4-0; Los Angeles downed Cincinnati 10-5; Colorado defeated Pittsburgh 5-3; and Chicago topped San Diego 3-1.

McGwire, traded from Oakland to the Cardinals on July 31, had managed just two singles in 26 at-bats before connecting for a solo shot in the third inning.

The crowd of 32,530 gave McGwire a long standing ovation after his homer.

"I've never seen anything like this," McGwire said. "I don't think I've ever heard a crowd so loud in a regular-season game. It's tremendous."

Mets 6, Astros 1
McRae, who had a triple and two singles to help send Houston to its fifth straight loss, learned of the trade when he arrived at Wrigley Field in the afternoon.

He hopped a plane to New York and made it to Shea Stadium 90 minutes before gametime.

Carlos Baerga, John Olerud and Edgardo Alfonzo had two hits apiece for New York, which had its major league-leading 36th comeback victory of the year.

Brian Bohanon (3-1) pitched 7 2-3 innings, allowing one run and three hits with six strikeouts and three walks. Shane Reynolds (6-7) lasted 3 2-3 innings allowed six runs - two earned - on 10 hits and two walks.

Marlins 6, Braves 4
At Atlanta, Charles Johnson hit a two-run homer and drove in another run with a bases-loaded walk as Florida continued its dominance of Atlanta.

In the opener of a four-game series between the top two teams in the National League, the Marlins beat Atlanta for the seventh time in nine meetings this season and moved within 4 1/2 games of first place in the NL East. Florida has won nine of 11.

Alex Fernandez (14-8) survived a shaky start to win his fourth straight decision. Robb Nen pitched the ninth for his 28th save.

Giants 4, Expos 0
At Montreal, Mark Gardner held the Expos hitless until the seventh inning and finished with a two-hitter.

Gardner (12-5) struck out seven, including the side in the ninth, and walked one. He matched a personal best for wins in a season and had his sixth career shutout.

Carlos Perez (11-7) lost despite his seventh complete game of the season. He allowed nine hits and struck out six.

J.T. Snow hit a two-run homer as San Francisco won for the fifth time in six games. He connected for his 20th homer following a two-out single by Glenallen Hill.

Dodgers 10, Reds 5
At Cincinnati, Wayne Kirby, Eric Karros and Todd Zeile had RBI doubles in a six-run fourth inning that carried Los Angeles over Cincinnati.

The second-place Dodgers won for the third time in six games to hold their ground in the NL West, 1 1/2 games behind San Francisco.

Every starter except Mike Piazza had at least one hit as the Dodgers rolled up 15, six for extra bases. Brett Butler, Kirby and Wilton Guerrero had three hits apiece, with two of Guerrero's coming in the six-run fourth.

Rockies 5, Pirates 3
At Denver, Eric Young doubled twice and singled, driving in two runs as Colorado beat Pittsburgh.

Larry Walker went 2-for-4 and raised his average to .387 as the Rockies defeated Pittsburgh for only the second time in nine games this season.

Cubs 3, Padres 1
At Chicago, Kevin Oric singled in the winning run in the eighth inning.

The Cubs were playing with only 22 players after trading relievers Mel Rojas and Turk Wendell and outfielder McRae to New York for outfielder Lance Johnson and two players to be named. Chicago also lost pitcher Terry Mulholland, who was claimed off waivers by the San Francisco Giants earlier in the day.

The loss was San Diego's eighth in 10 games.

Japan's Suzuki wins women's marathon

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - Japan's Hiromi Suzuki won the women's marathon in sweltering conditions at the World Championships Saturday, only to find no one to greet her following the controversial decision to close the stadium to spectators.

Suzuki, 28, pulled away from the field with 9.3 miles remaining. She completed the strenuously undulating 26 miles, 385 yards course in 2 hours, 29 minutes, 48 seconds.

Defending champion Manuela Machado of Portugal placed second in 2:31:12 and Romania's Lidia Simon was third in 2:31:55. Olympic champion Fatuma Roba of Ethiopia dropped out about halfway through the race.

The marathon began just after 8 a.m. when the temperature was 81 degrees. By the time the runners finished the race, it was 91 degrees.

Several runners collapsed from heat exhaustion and dehydration. They were carried off on stretchers and given oxygen and intravenous drips. Eleven runners were taken to hospitals, though none were seriously ill.

After the long, lonely trek over the original marathon course used for the first Olympic marathon in 1896, Suzuki expected to be welcomed by a large, appreciative crowd in steamy Panathinaikon stadium.

Instead, the stands were empty after officials decided at the last moment to close the stadium to spectators.

Conflicting explanations were given as to who gave the order to close the stadium and why.

First, an International Amateur Athletic Federation spokesman said Greek officials made the decision as a security measure in the wake of Friday's bombing in Stockholm's Olympic stadium - possibly linked to the Swedish city's bid for the 2004 Games.

But Sports Minister Andreas Fouras later said the move had nothing to do with the Stockholm blast. He said Athens Mayor Dimitris Avramopoulos took the decision in the belief it would make for a more spectacular entrance for the athletes to come into an empty arena.

Mets, trying to shore up bullpen for stretch run, make deal with Cubs

NEW YORK (AP) - Intent on strengthening their bullpen for the stretch run, the New York Mets are counting on Mel Rojas to be everything the Chicago Cubs thought he would be.

Rojas, who has struggled most of the season as the Cubs closer, was traded with reliever Turk Wendell and outfielder Brian McRae to New York on Friday for center fielder Lance Johnson and two players to be named.

WGN, the Cubs' flagship television station, reported that pitcher Mark Clark and infielder Manny Alexander are the other two players in the trade. Neither team would confirm that.

The Mets began the day two games behind the Florida Marlins in the NL wild card-race and felt that they needed to make a move to stay in contention.

"We feel we are a team that can make a run for the playoffs," Steve Phillips said after his first trade since taking over as general manager of the Mets on July 16.

Rojas signed a $13.75 million, three-year contract with Chicago in the offseason. But he has saved just 13 games and blown six opportunities, and is 0-4 with a 4.42 ERA.

"It was just not working out here," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said. "Whatever it was, Wrigley Field or the cold, it wasn't working."

The Mets have been trying since the offseason to shore up their relief pitching.

"(John) Franco and (Greg) McMichael have been great, but these two fortify the staff," Phillips said. "They'll keep us in games and help us hold leads better."

Johnson, in his second season with the Mets, is hitting .309 with 15 steals and six triples despite shin splints all season. He led the NL triples and hits last season.

"He was an excellent player for our organization, but you have to give up quality to get quality," Phillips said of Johnson. "... He will be missed."

McRae, 30 and four years younger than Johnson, was having a subpar year but is considered better defensively than the man he replaces. McRae, batting .240 with 28 steals, will take over Johnson's leadoff spot.

"You always know something might happen, but you never know when it is going to happen," McRae said. "I enjoyed my time here."

Wendell is a hard thrower who saved 18 games in 1996. This season he has four saves and a 4.20 ERA working mostly as a setup man.

While Franco will remain the Mets closer, manager Bobby Valentine now has more options.

"This gives us more people with saves on their records and notches on their belts," he said.

Franco has 29 saves, second in the NL. McMichael is 7-9 with a team-high 52 appearances.

The Mets believe they are getting a player on the upswing in Rojas.

"The stuff has been there all season, the consistency hasn't," Phillips said. "His numbers other than the home runs are good. He is pitching well right now and we believe our people can work with him."

With Montreal last season Rojas had 36 saves in 40 opportunities, including 24 after the All-Star break.

"You just know he'll go to the Mets and not give up a run," Cubs first baseman Mark Grace said. "Just like it always happens here."

Rojas said it was difficult to be a closer on a losing team.

"I was going three or four days without pitching," said Rojas, who has struck out 61 and allowed 11 homers in 59 innings. "When you come into a game that you're losing you have a different attitude."

The Cubs also lost starter Terry Mulholland to San Francisco, which claimed the left-hander on waivers Friday. Mulholland is 6-12 with a 4.07 ERA in 25 starts.

"I think it's more of a retooling than a dismantling," Cubs general manager Ed Lynch said. "We felt we had to do something different. We felt we had to shake things up."

Rangers are big disappointment

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - A year ago, the Texas Rangers were printing tickets for what became the first playoff appearance in their history.

A year later, they have become one of baseball's biggest disasters thanks to a combination of bad pitching, bad fielding and clutchless hitting.

Their 1996 American League Western Division title flag proudly flies from The Ballpark in Arlington, but it's now a distant memory of the proudest season in the franchise's history.

Seattle and Anaheim are battling for the title while the defending champion struggles to get close to the .500 mark.

The capper came in a 17-1 loss to the Boston Red Sox when the Rangers' pitching staff yielded a club record 24 hits in the second worst beating in club history.

"Daren Oliver and Bobby Witt and that's about it," one writer wrote.

Roger Pavlik and John Burkett were on the disabled list and former star Ken Hill was traded. Texas manager Johnny Oates has been inserting an assortment of minor leaguers and well-traveled free agent pickups into the starting rotation.

"Our pitching has killed us and that was one of our strengths a year ago," Oates said. "We had 70 wins from our starting rotation last year. Now we have half that many. That's the difference."

Texas had a high-water mark of seven games over .500 on May 24. They have been 25-45 since then in the club's worst nosedive since 1988.

Pitching will be the Rangers' prime target in the off-season along with finding a shortstop. The Benji Gil experiment at shortstop was a failure.

The Rangers and catcher Ivan Rodriguez have agreed to a five-year, $42 million contract extension that makes him the highest-paid player in team history. The team dumped the big contracts of Hill and third baseman Dean Palmer.

"There's no doubt we will zero in on pitching in the off-season," said general manager Doug Melvin. "It will be our top priority."

Texas also was a team that put up some gaudy hitting numbers but had problems getting the hits when it counted.

The Rangers went from the best fielding team in baseball to one of the worst.

Farm and Ranch

Demonstration days focus on drip irrigation systems

Producers interested in drip irrigation systems for corn and cotton will have the opportunity to attend one of two demonstration days at local farms.

The demonstrations, sponsored by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, will focus on the installation, convenience, and the possible savings associated with drip irrigation systems.

The first field day is scheduled for August 21, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Ronnie Owens farm, six miles east of Hereford on Highway 60 and one mile north on County Road E.

The second demonstration field day will be August 28, at the Eddie Verett farm located 2.4 miles north of Ralls on paved road 207.

"Drip irrigation is the slow, frequent application of small amounts of water to the soil area directly surrounding plant roots," said Ken Carver, High Plains Water District Assistant Manager.

Participants at either field day will be involved in discussions and demonstrations by experts in field water management.

Potential Evapotranspiration (PET), the amount of water that would potentially be extracted by a crop and surrounding soil for existing climatic conditions if the soil is completely covered and there is unlimited water, will be the basis for the discussions on the newer, more efficient irrigation systems.

"Water losses caused by evaporation, deep percolation, and runoff are virtually eliminated," Carver said.

According to Carver drip irrigation systems can save as much as 30-40 percent of the water when compared to furrow irrigation systems.

"Our PET program focuses on LEPA center pivot sprinkler systems because they have been proven to lose the least amount of water to evaporation," Carver said.

Carver explains by combining PET data with high frequency deficit irrigation, producers have the potential to produce the highest yield possible per inch of water applied.

Using high-frequency irrigation and PET data, irrigators are able to apply enough water to prevent roots from drying out or plants suffering from water-stressing, said Carver.

Personnel from the USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service and the High Plains Water District will be available to answer questions and demonstrate various water conservation techniques such as moisture monitoring with gypsum blocks and resistance meters.

For more information about the PET field demonstration day, contact the High Plains Water District, 2930 Ave. Q, Lubbock, TX 79405-1499, or call (806)762-0181.

Producers use Tilt to control disease

Texas Department of Agriculture has issued a crisis exemption allowing Texas Panhandle grain sorghum producers to use Tilt, to control Northern Leaf Blight as well as sorghum ergot.

Representatives from Texas Grain Sorghum Association and the National Grain Sorghum Producers contacted Texas Agricultural Extension Service to confirm and document the existing problem.

Dr. Harold Kaufman, extension plant pathologist, confirmed the threat of leaf blight, which he said is due primarily to the cool wet season.

With this confirmation, grain association leaders approached the Texas Department of Agriculture and requested permission to use the fungicide.

TAES granted permission for use of the chemical under specified guidelines.

Guidelines state the product may be applied when symptoms are first noticed and then reapplied 7-14 days later, if needed.

Tilt should be applied at the rate of two to four ounces per acre in a minimum of 15 gallons of water for ground application, or a minimum of five gallons of water when aerial application is used.

Application should be made only by certified applicators, licensed applicators or by persons under the direct supervision of licensed applicators.

A copy of the crisis exemption label can be obtained from any county extension agent and must be in the applicators possession to be legal.

The chemical should not be applied within 21 days prior to harvest.

TAES representatives stress that total use of the fungicide for control of leaf blight and ergot not exceed 12 ounces per acre per season.

This exemption applies only to Armstrong, Bailey, Borden, Briscoe, Carson, Castro, Cochran, Collingsworth, Crosby, Dallam, Dawson, Deaf Smith, Dickens, Donley, Floyd, Gaines, Garza, Gray, Hale, Hall, Hansford, Hartley, Hemphill, Hockley, Hutchinson, Kent, Lamb, Lipscomb, Lubbock, Lynn, Mitchell, Moore, Motley, Ochiltree, Oldham, Parmer, Potter, Randall, Roberts, Scurry, Sherman, Swisher, Terry, Wheeler and Yoakum Counties.

Texas Department of Agriculture will submit an application to the EPA for a specific exemption for the use of Tilt which will maintain the crisis exemption until a decision can be rendered.

Youth rodeo takes practice

BOYS RANCH, TX--Many preparations go into the nationally famous rodeo at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch prior to the big Labor Day weekend event and this year is no exception.

This summer at least 100 children have spent their Tuesday and Wednesday evenings preparing for the 53rd annual Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Rodeo.

Beyond the arena and behind the chutes is where the excitement and anxiety in the air could charge a Die-Hard battery.

Fourth-year rodeo veteran, Christopher Patterson, 8, isn't to worried. He considers himself a pro and knows that one event leads right into the next.

Patterson began his rodeo career riding in the stick horse events, moved to the mutton busting and is now looking forward to his second year of junior calf riding competition.

"Actually I'm riding one of the baby bulls," said Patterson as he was fitted for a vest and helmet.

"But they can still be really wild. So I hope I get a nice one," he said.

Older riders get a taste of the real thing as 16-year-old Ben Lotzgesell knows full well.

He described a recent practice ride as a "real rank" bare back ride.

"He was kickin' boards out of the chute," he said. "I was sure thinking, 'Man, do I really want to do this?'"

He rode the bronc for six and a half seconds, hopes he can do as well during competition.

More than 10,000 visitors attend the two day event each year, which was started in 1944 so boys would have something to show off to the visitors.

Harvest Aid Speeds Cotton Harvest

With so much profit riding on cotton grades, quality becomes a critical factor. Planning harvest timing to maximize cotton quality and yield is essential. Using a harvest aid program speeds harvest and helps maintain crop quality. Harvesting early can improve yield potential, by avoiding regrowth caused by late season rains and decreasing the risk of sticky cotton due to late season aphid infestations.

Connie Banks
Zeneca Ag Products

Most growers in our area have their own harvest aid tankmix recipe. No matter what you use for a harvest aid program, be sure to include CYCLONE® harvest aid in the program for faster, more effective defoliation and desiccation.

Cyclone offers the most effective and efficient harvest aid results of any product available. Adding it to any defoliation tankmix stretches your harvest aid dollars. Plus, Cyclone's flexibility will allow a whole crowd of tankmix partners. Cyclone fits any harvest aid program.

A harvest aid program that includes Cyclone:

- produces cleaner, higher quality cotton
- works quickly and is rainfast in only minutes
- provides good, fast, effective results, even in cool weather
- offers the lowest cost-per-acre of any burn-down on the market.

Cyclone is very predictable. Even in cool weather, count on a Cyclone defoliation to do its job in only four to seven days, so you can begin harvesting seven days after application.

For best results when using Cyclone, carefully time harvest aid applications. Crop maturity remains the most important factor in determining harvest aid applications.

Otherwise, proper development of immature bolls may be inhibited. A managed approach to harvest using Cyclone will open mature bolls, desiccate weeds, get higher grades and avoid the chance of stained cotton.

Growing high quality cotton is a yearlong job and Cyclone offers ways to help you see it through. Cyclone puts you in control of cotton harvest.

The tractor-trailer, packed with trash, weighed 40 tons - roughly 76,000 pounds more than the Ford Explorer it was about to crush.

"Oh my God," thought Lillian Carch, "doesn't he see us here?"

The truck lurched over the lane divider and struck the side of the utility vehicle. Desperate, Peter Carch floored it, but the 18-wheeler veered into the car a second time, catching the rear of the Explorer and spinning it around 180 degrees.

"I could see his lights coming directly at us..." said Mrs. Carch. "He came at us real hard. There was a tremendous impact."

And then this Pennsylvania family - Peter and Lillian, and their 18-year-old daughter, Laura - joined a statistical community, the 100,000 Americans who are injured each year in one-sided confrontations with the big rigs that increasingly dominate the nation's roads.

The big trucks are relied upon to deliver the things Americans want to buy to the places where they want to buy them. "As long as we keep consuming, and building Best Buy stores, people are going to expect that those stores have the products they advertise," said Chris Hoover, a spokesman for the American Trucking Associations.

But there is a price that must be paid, and on the evening of March 24, 1995, on Interstate 78 in New Jersey, the bill came due for the Carches.

Lillian and Peter, though battered and bruised, were saved by their seat belts. But the impact hurled Laura - state tennis champ, high school homecoming queen - 32 feet onto the pavement, snapping her neck.

Five-thousand people lose their lives in collisions with trucks each year. Doctors saved Laura. Though they said she would never walk again, by June 1997 she was able - just barely - to hit a tennis ball over the net.

The driver of the truck was unhurt. In fact, he drove away without stopping; he later told authorities that he was unaware that he had hit a car. He thought it was just a deer, he said.

Truck traffic has jumped 25 percent on the nation's highways just since 1990 - and a whopping 50 percent on city and town roads. The number of big rigs on the road is expected to climb at least another 14 percent in the next seven years.

As the number of trucks on the road has increased, the safety record of the industry has improved, said James Lewis, a spokesman for the ATA. But as the accident rate for trucks (and for cars as well) improves, the increasing number of big rigs on the road has kept the death rate from trucks at a consistent 5,000 per year. Critics fear U.S. highways are reaching the saturation point.

Although large trucks account for only 3 percent of vehicles on the road and 7 percent of miles driven, they are involved in 12 percent of the nation's road deaths. And of those deaths, 75 percent are occupants of the other vehicle, and 10 percent are pedestrians, bicyclists and bystanders.

Lewis points out that studies of police reports show that mistakes made by drivers of cars cause 72 percent of the accidents involving trucks. But it is the size of those trucks that can make such mistakes particularly costly.

Washington state researchers found that double and triple trailer rigs have a threefold increased risk of crashes compared to single trailers. And the risks of fatal crashes climb sharply with weight. An 80,000-pound big rig is twice as likely to be involved in a fatal accident as a 50,000-pound truck.

Lewis disputed those figures, maintaining that triple trailers have the lowest accident rate of any vehicles on the road. For example, he said, Nevada statistics for 1993 show that triples had only .64 accidents per million road miles compared with 1.7 for singles and doubles. The reason, he said, is that triples are the most heavily regulated, best-maintained vehicles on the road, are driven by the best drivers and operate only during good weather.

But critics say the sheer size of these triples makes accidents involving them a terrifying prospect, regardless of the rate at which they occur.

Some truck companies are pushing for federal approval of longer, heavier vehicles to cut down on their costs, including more widespread use of controversial triple trailers, which are currently limited under a 1990 federal freeze.

Lewis said the ATA is not seeking to increase the size of trucks currently allowed by law, but is asking for "a common sense adjustment in the current freeze on large combination vehicles and where else it makes sense to allow them." The ATA is not asking that triples be allowed on busy city interchanges, he said. But in some cases, such as in Denver, the freeze limits triples to older roads while banning them from newer ones where they could operate more safely.

The ATA points to a 1994 General Accounting office study that found expanded use of larger trucks could reduce the industry's operating costs by about 3 percent, or $3.4 billion annually. Bigger trucks and more trailers also mean less air pollution and fewer vehicles on the road, the ATA notes.

But according to Lewis, the main reason for the push for triples is that there is a nationwide shortage of truck drivers, and triples mean fewer drivers can haul bigger loads.

The state Assembly in California, one of the states targeted for increased use of triples, has gone on record as opposing any relaxation of the current federal freeze.

So has the American Automobile Association, which contends that longer trucks mix poorly with passenger vehicles, even when they don't collide.

An AAA study on cars riding alongside trucks found "the splash and spray problem on long doubles is great and could create a substantially increased automobile accident rate for temporarily blinded motorists in inclement weather."

The fight against triples is a rallying cry for San Francisco-based CRASH, or Citizens for Reliable and Safe Highways, which has organized families of big-rig accident victims.

"Triples are the equivalent of a 10-story building barreling down the highway on its side," said Michael Scippa, executive director of CRASH, which receives a major share of its funding from railroads, traditional rivals of the trucking industry.

Deborah Drown of Apple Valley, Calif., joined CRASH after her sister, brother-in-law and their two children, ages 17 and 9, were incinerated when they smashed into a jackknifed double gasoline tanker on Interstate 10. The truck driver told authorities one of his brakes locked up.

"The truck that was involved in my sister's crash was written up the day before for brake violations," Drown said. "But it left the terminal anyway - was that just an oversight?"

Lewis said the ATA makes no excuses for the minority of truckers who behave irresponsibly. The group supports more roadside truck inspections and random drug and alcohol testing of drivers, he said. It favors banning radar detectors from trucks and supports the 55 mph speed limit.

However, safety violations continue despite efforts that all sides agree has helped reduce the number of accidents in the last 20 years.

In June, authorities in Pennsylvania's Bucks County threw up a checkpoint and inspected 266 trucks. They wrote up 225 for infractions - and had to pull 61 trucks and 41 drivers off the highway because of serious safety hazards.

The pressure to keep the trucks in service, especially for smaller companies or owner-operators, is intense in an industry with a low profit margin.

"They're making their truck payment, they're paying the upkeep, they have to make the mortgage payment," said Mike Kvammen of South Pasadena, Calif., who drove doubles for 15 of his 20 years steering big rigs. Some find that after expenses, they are making little more than minimum wage.

The pressure for fast delivery not only threatens truck safety, it pushes drivers to the breaking point. A Labor Department study identified truck driving as the most dangerous occupation in the United States.

One 1986 survey found as many as 29 percent of truck drivers had drugs with a potential for abuse in their bloodstream.

Fruit stands popping up everywhere

By CHRISTINA QUICK
The Jonesboro Sun

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) - Clarence Wilson, 66, watches the traffic from his lawn chair on a steamy summer morning, a mound of watermelons and cantaloupe heaped in the bed of his pickup truck.

Already the heat has climbed into the 90s. And before the day's end, the mercury will hover near 100. Still, Wilson doesn't budge from his spot at the busy intersection.

"Some days it sells pretty good and sometimes it's slow," he said of his roadside fruit-peddling business. "Sometimes somebody comes along and runs you off because they don't want you on their property, but most people are pretty nice if you act right."

Wilson is one of hundreds of small-time entrepreneurs who sell produce from their vehicles, their backyards and tiny roadside stands. Although there are some who make a living at it, most do it to supplement another income. Still others do it for the sheer enjoyment.

"I love it," said Lantha Diamond, who sells peaches and nectarines under a striped tent near a city intersection. "It's hard work, but I love it."

Diamond has been buying fruit from farmers and selling it in Jonesboro every summer for the past 18 years. Many of Diamond's customers come back year after year. Some bring her cold soft drinks, tanning lotion and other gifts. One woman gave her an orthopedic pillow for her bad neck, Diamond recalls with a smile.

"They're almost like my family, I've been up here so long," said Diamond, who lives in Colt.

James Falk of Jonesboro is a regular customer of Diamond's.

"You see this piece of fruit," he says, holding up a plump, brightly-colored peach. "There ain't no way mankind can create that with the nutritional value and quality that's in it."

Diamond said she can easily double her money on the fruit, which she buys from a farm near Wynne. Because she enjoys it, she said, it is worth all the time and effort she invests.

Each day she hauls the fruit to Jonesboro, tends the stand for several hours, then heads to the orchards to pick and load a fresh batch for the next day.

"It's hard work, but you feel good after you do it," she said.

Diamond said her profits average around $500 per week during the months of June, July and August.

"It's not as lucrative as a lot of people think it is if you count your time and hours you put in," said Jim Tate, who was peddling tomatoes from his pickup truck at the Paragould Farmer's Market recently.

Tate, a tenant farmer who was disabled 12 years ago in an automobile accident, sells some of his produce to local supermarkets and restaurants, but says he must work the farmer's market to make ends meet. It took four weeks of selling tomatoes just to make up the cost of the plants, Tate said.

"Today I've got $42 took in, and I've got to split it with somebody," he said.

Not everyone who sells produce is dependent on the income.

Pat Smith and his wife Zoney were selling a variety of vegetables at the farmer's market in Paragould, all surplus goods from their backyard garden in Senath, Mo.

"I put the biggest part of it in the freezer, and what I can't freeze he has to do something with," Mrs. Smith said.

The couple said they made $15 in about four hours.

Maurice Hurd of Paragould doesn't use the farmer's market. He prefers for his customers to come to him. A wooden sign in his yard calls attention to his homegrown peaches and apples.

The 70-year-old, who owns about

350 fruit trees, describes his fruit business as a "hobby that pays for itself."

"I do it because I enjoy doing it," he said.

Herbert Knight, a pastor who started selling sweet corn from his carport this summer, said he is pricing the ears at 75 cents per dozen as something of a public service "so that older people on fixed incomes can get sweet corn."

"By the time I pay for the corn and pay for the gas and everything (to haul it), I make very little, a few dollars maybe. I just do this to help people out," Knight said.

Whatever the reason for individuals selling homegrown produce, the people who buy it clearly prefer it over store-bought fruits and vegetables.

"I either buy it from roadside stands or home stands," said Linda Layer of Jonesboro. "Tomatoes (at the supermarket) are too waxy. You can tell a difference," she said.

Dottie Schuchardt of Jonesboro said she buys from fresh produce vendors for two reasons. "It just tastes so much better when it's homegrown," she said. "And I like to support the people here in Jonesboro."

Local transportation system aids more than elderly, handicapped

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyles Editor

One of the best ways to help people help themselves is to make them independent.

That is just what Panhandle Transit does for the elderly and handicapped.

Panhandle Transit, a division of Panhandle Community Services, offers local transportation to the general public for a minimal fee.

There are no income guidelines to be met in order to utilize the services of Panhandle Transit.

"We offer the same service to every resident, regardless of their income," said Celia Serrano, local coordinator for Panhandle Community Services. "All we require is 24-hour notice and payment of the minimal fee."

Don and Linda Cumpton utilized the services of Panhandle Transit for their handicapped son, David.

"Panhandle Transit gave us the flexibility and freedom of not having to take David to work. They picked him up at the house, took him to work, then picked him up from work and took him home. All of this made him virtually independent," said Mr. Cumpton.

That is the best part about the system, according to Cumpton. It provides the opportunity for any individual to be independent.

Panhandle Transit has three vans, one of which is wheelchair equipped.

In June 1997 the vans logged 683 one-way passenger trips. Use by the elderly accounted for 455 of these trips. Medical trips numbered 167, handicapped, 155 and school trips, 289.

"School trips are something that most people don't think about," Serrano said. "We can provide transportation for students from school to the work site or from the work site to school. It is a very dependable service."

Driver Sammie Lance has seven years with Panhandle Transit and Taryn Zahodnik has four years. Both have their commercial drivers license and both have good safety records.

"The vans run even in bad weather if the roads are passable and if the weather is not hazardous to the passengers," Lance said. "Of course, the safety and well-being of our passengers are our first concern and if we feel they would be in danger then we won't make the trip."

Since Panhandle Transit is a public transportation system, everybody has to pay.

"Cost for trips in town is only $1 each way. And we have monthly tickets that provide unlimited trips in-town for the general public for $20," Serrano said.

The vans make regular trips for in-town dialysis patients on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. On Tuesday and Thursday they provide medical transportation to Amarillo during the morning.

Cost for out-of-town medical trips is based on mileage.

Transportation providers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to tell you why I will commit suicide some day. It may be 40 years in the future, but it could happen sooner. I would like to go peacefully in my sleep at an old age, having been healthy and active right up to that time. The reality is that this doesn't happen to many of us.

I used to visit a nursing home regularly and made some startling and profound observations. I saw old people waiting for death. They stare off into space with blank, hollow expressions. They have difficulty processing information and following instructions. When asked the simplest of questions, many look puzzled and give replies that have nothing to do with the subject.

These once intelligent people cannot remember the telephone number they've had for 40 years. They struggle with names of family members and longtime friends. Their bodies are disintegrating as fast as their minds. Many cannot stand or walk without assistance. Others are bedridden. Sight and hearing are greatly diminished or absent. So is the sense of smell. Food has very little appeal.

But they are still capable of feeling pain. Some have bedsores the size of gunshot wounds. Others have broken ribs from a hard cough or sneeze. A few have dislocated shoulders from turning in bed. And the dreaded broken hip is the nightmare of many.

The majority of nursing home patients are over 75, and seven out of 10 are women. This will NOT be my farewell. When I take my life, it will be clean. I will not leave my body where a loved one will experience the horror of finding it. I don't need Dr. Jack. I just need dignity. I am not asking for your approval, Ann, I just wanted to express myself. -- Anonymous in Missouri

Dear Anonymous: I am glad you didn't ask for my approval because I could not give it. Suicide is against my religion. I would like to know what my readers think about your letter. It's a powerful one, and I thank you for writing it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm so furious today that I'm having a hard time concentrating at work, so I'm writing you to let off some steam.

My problem is my cousin "Marie." She came to visit me a few months ago, and I took a week off to spend time with her. I put more than 1,000 miles on my car, not to mention what I spent showing her a good time.

After Marie left, I noticed a book of mine was missing. I had let her take a look at it and never saw it again. When I spoke to Marie later, I asked if she'd seen my book, and she replied, "I have no idea what you are talking about." Yesterday, I discovered that one of my favorite vests is gone. It was in the closet of the guest bedroom where Marie stayed. I searched my entire house and even called the cleaners, but there is no sign of the vest.

I don't want to create problems within my family, although I've told my mother and she agrees that Marie may have taken those items. I don't understand how she could have done this to me when I tried so hard to make her visit pleasant.

What should I do? My mother says to forget about it, but I can't. Am I overreacting, as Mom says? I'm so hurt by this, I haven't spoken to Marie since. Any suggestions would be welcome. -- Perplexed in Pennsylvania

Dear Pa.: Please phone Marie and tell her you are looking for that vest and to please search her closets because she may have inadvertently packed it when she left.

To accuse her point-blank of stealing would probably cause irreparable damage to your friendship and a permanent rift in the family. Giving Marie an easy out is the best way to go.

PCS receives performance award

AMARILLO -- Panhandle Community Services has been selected as a winner of the State Performance Award by the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs, officials announced at a press conference Thursday.

Sam Guzman, Director of Administration and Community Affairs Division for TDHCA, was in Amarillo to present the $16,610 award to PCS.

Guzman said criteria for the award included the number of people "transitioned out" of poverty, case management success, and whether the agencies had any deficiencies.

Guzman said that of the 51 similar agencies in the state, only nine met the awards criteria, and "none were anywhere close to the level of the Panhandle."

"The Panhandle is the model in the state, and very possibly in the nation," Guzman said.

PCS works in the 26 Panhandle counties, including Deaf Smith County, to help families escape poverty through rental assistance, home repairs, vocational training, loans for college and other programs.

"The follow-up we provide families is what separates us from other state programs," said Johnny Raymond, PCS executive director.

"People come out of our program and will never need to receive federal assistance again," Raymond said.

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS

First, Americans learned that children could be threatened by obesity while sitting idle watching hour after hour of programs on television. Now, researchers have found a link between excessive TV-watching by children and high blood cholesterol levels.

At the University of California-Irvine, researchers matched more than 1,000 young children and adolescents' cholesterol measurements with their TV-viewing habits. They discovered that children who reported watching at least two hours of television a day were twice as likely to have high blood cholesterol, above 200 milligrams, as those who watched four or more hours a day were nearly four times as likely to have cholesterol levels over 200.

Eight percent of those tested were found to have blood cholesterol levels of 200 milligrams per deciliter or higher. Another 13 percent had levels between 176 and 199. The American Academy of Pediatrics considers a cholesterol level over 175 in a child older than 2 years of age to be high enough to warrant treatment. These results are of great concern.

Wedding information must be submitted by 5 p.m. Monday to be included in the next Sunday Brand. Wedding information forms, as well as those for engagements and showers, are available at the news office, 313 N. Lee.

especially since the average youngster in the United States watches at least three hours of TV each day.

Obesity, linked with too much TV viewing, seems to be one of the factors contributing to the problem. Children who are becoming couch potatoes in front of the television set are not spending as much time playing ball, roller skating or bicycling--physical activities that burn calories and exercise the heart. This sets the stage for excessive weight gain, which in itself is a risk factor for high blood cholesterol. Children who watch a lot of television are more likely to exercise less than their peers who spend relatively little time watching the TV.

It is believed that commercials play another role in the TV-cholesterol link. After watching one tempting food commercial after another, youth, who watch the tube for long periods of time, are influenced to eat high-calorie, high-fat foods that may raise blood cholesterol levels. Research shows that people who regularly view such ads consume more calorie and fat laden snacks than usual.

Considering these new findings and other evidence, parents of children who spend hours in front of the television should try to curb this habit. The American Academy of Pediatrics suggests limiting television time to no more than two hours a day and encouraging children to participate in after-school activities that require physical exertion.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

It is a luxury to learn; but the luxury of learning is not to be compared with the luxury of teaching.--R.D. Hitchcock Orientation and registration for seventh graders will be at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 12 and eighth graders will meet at 7 p.m. on Aug. 14 for their orientation and registration. As parents and students enter the building they will receive information about which team the student will be a member of and where that team is to meet.

At each orientation the student code of conduct and waivers for school trips will be discussed and parents will be asked to sign these at this meeting. Those who are unable to attend that night sessions may come to HJH the next day and register to receive their schedule for the new year. Also, the HJH office will be open from 9 a.m. until 12 noon on Saturday, Aug. 16 for any who may have missed the other opportunities. We ask you to not wait until the first day of classes to register your student.

Supply lists will be available at each registration period. Do wait until you receive this list before you purchase supplies. Also, as you prepare clothing for the school year, be sure to check the student dress code in the code of conduct. Those students who come to school improperly dressed will have to contact parents for a change in order to stay in the classroom.

Marilyn Leasure, Richard Saucedo, Randy Farr and I contributed to the substitute teacher training sessions on Wednesday. Prospective teachers attended an intensive all-day workshop to help them prepare for substitute work in grades K-12.

Students will have the opportunity to being preparation for the Geography Bee and History Day as early as Aug. 26. An early start will make it easier for all--students, teachers and parents. We hope to have great participation in these areas.

Eighth grade Junior Historians will be meeting one morning next week before school in order to make plans for recruiting new members from our seventh grade classes. Eighth graders, listen for the announcement and plan to attend this meeting. We are counting on your leadership.

Everyone who remembers his or her own educational experience remembers teachers, not methods or techniques. A teacher affects eternity; he, or she, can never tell where their influence stops.

Schilling, Schertz united in marriage

Amy Beth Schilling of Slaton and Michael Joe Schertz of Lubbock were united in marriage July 26 in St. Joseph Catholic Church in Slaton. The bride is the daughter of Wayne and Mary Schilling of Slaton and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Keyes and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schilling, all of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Danny and Sandra Schertz of Krum.

Rev. Jim McCartney and Deacon Darris Linder officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Maid of honor was Michelle Schertz of Krum, sister of the groom. Best man was the father of the groom. Bridesmaids were Paige Price of Lubbock, Jodi Ashcraft of Roswell, N.M., Kyra Newberry, Melissa Berend and Marsha Moss, all of Lubbock, and Rachel Self, cousin of the bride, of Fallon, Nev. Groomsmen were Doug McCollum of Stephenville, Scott Read of Pampa, Tommy Schroeder of Taylor, Justin Ransom of San Antonio, Stephen Custy of Lubbock and Allen Schilling, brother of the bride. Ushering guests were Greg Schilling and Brad Schilling of Slaton, brothers of the bride, Travis Cook of Lubbock, Doug Alderson of Lubbock and Howdee Snoddy of Canton, Kan.

Junior bridesmaids were Kari Schilling of Hereford and Katie Walch of Fredericksburg, cousins of the bride. Candle lighters were Megan Keyes of Lubbock, cousin of the bride, and Jonathan Mallard of Krum, cousin of the groom. Serving as flower girls were Kari Schilling of Hereford, cousin of the bride and Chelsi Patterson of Krum. Ring bearers were Bryse Buster and Drew Knight, both of Krum. Providing musical accompaniment were organist Laverne Jones, cousin of the bride, pianist Sherri Brosch and vocalists Eunice Kitten, Wesley Kitten and Rex Thomas, all of Slaton. Gift bearers for the ceremony were H.T. and Ruby Finch of Denton, sponsors of the groom, Kathy Keyes of Hereford, aunt of the bride, and Margaret Cessun of Phoenix, Ariz., aunt of the bride.

Readers were Roger Kitten, great-uncle of the bride, and James Kitten, both of Slaton. The bride selected a gown of candlelight Italian satin featuring a wedding band collar, pointed sleeves that buttoned at the wrist and a sweetheart neckline enhanced with an inset of illusion and trimmed with the leaf pattern of Alencon lace.

The bodice and sleeves were covered in Alencon lace beaded with pearls, sequins and silver bugle beads. The basque waist allowed the full ball gown skirt to sweep into a semi-cathedral train.

To complete her ensemble, she wore a candlelight tiara of pearls and sequins connected to a soft pouff and fingertip veiling in candlelight. She carried a cascading bouquet of dendrobium orchids and white roses accented with bear grass and English ivy.

Bridal attendants wore princess-style evening-length gowns of black crepe with straps criss-crossing in the back. They carried long-stem red roses. A reception followed the ceremony at KoKo Palace in Lubbock.

Servers were Emily Ester and Rachel Greene of Slaton, Kayla Meyer of Childress, Annette Beisch of Lubbock, Holly Schilling of Hereford and Nicole Schilling of Garden City, Kan., cousins of the bride. Weight loss mystery puzzles researcher

WASHINGTON -- A nutritional researcher's plan to end world hunger became side tracked when people eating his "hi-tech" chewable food tablet lost weight. The reason for the weight loss is still somewhat of a mystery, but some results have been significant. Called Food Source One (FS-1), the low calorie food replacement, developed by National Dietary Research never achieved its original goal of feeding the world's undernourished people, but has instead become a windfall for some overweight people. So why are some people losing weight with FS-1 -- lots of weight? According to Dr. William Morris, director of research and development at NDR, the Food Source One Plan allows you to lose weight without giving up your favorite foods. "While controlling calorie intake is important to lose weight, with the FS-1 Plan there are no forbidden foods", says Morris. Dr. Morris says that he has received some incredible success stories from people who have lost 70 pounds or more with the Food Source One Plan. One woman from Niagara Falls, New York lost over 70 pounds without giving up her favorite foods which included chocolate, pizza and chicken wings. Although her results are not typical because individuals are different, the FS-1 Plan is a bona fide natural, drug free way of fighting obesity. According to an article published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition you don't even have to reduce the amount of food you eat to lose weight, provided that you limit the fat. *Use only as directed with enclosed plan. MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Hot business trend: Going Home

Working at home is a concept that is growing in popularity. In 1993, experts estimated that nearly 10 million Americans were working at home. Today that number has grown to more than 21 million.

Breakthroughs in technology, changes in the kind of work that many Americans are doing and the desire to lower costs of doing business are driving this trend. Today's technology allows us to communicate with co-workers in multiple locations, create, copy and send documents and maintain close contact with our customers via the phone line. Home, for many workers, is where the action is. Some folks believe that people who work at home are really just loafing. A few probably are, but I can tell you from experience that my home office is my most productive location. I can completely isolate myself and get after it. If I'm pushing a project deadline, I want to work at home.

A great place for business

Starting a small business at home adds a large percentage to the growing numbers of home-based workers. It is a solid, proven concept with many advantages. For example, starting at home requires less initial capital. It certainly can be more convenient and usually entails less risk. Monthly operating expenses are lower and your work schedule can be less flexible.

While some businesses are easier than others to start at home, creative entrepreneurs are starting all types. I've seen manufacturers, wholesalers, construction, medical services, network marketers, business services and even retailers who are successful at home.

By looking closely at those who are successful, you'll find some common traits. Here's a short list of characteristics you'll see in nearly every prosperous home-based business owner.

- You must be a self-starter. No one will motivate you when you are self-employed. Only the desire to succeed will get you up and going.
- You must take time to plan and prioritize. You'll never have time to do everything. Carefully choose what to do each day (plan) and begin each day with the absolutely essential activities (priorities).
- You must stay focused. You will face unique distractions at home. It requires self-discipline to stick to the job at hand.
- You must follow through. It is easy to cut yourself a little slack while working at home. However, you must keep your promises. You must meet customer deadlines, do exactly what you said you would do and maintain delivery schedules if you're going to be successful.

Start-up training

If you're new in your home-based business or have been thinking about starting one, we've got a program just for you. On Tuesday, August 19, you can join us for an exciting, informative home-based business workshop.

The program is called "Success at Home." The workshop will be held at the Texas A&M Research Center in Amarillo from 8:30 am to 5:00 pm.

The keynote speaker is Tumbleweed Smith. He will share his secrets for being successful at home. I'll give you the "Ten Commandments" of being home-based. You'll also learn how to create an effective and efficient home-based office and how to build a professional image on a shoestring budget. You won't want to miss the "Power Panel" discussion. You'll hear four members of the "$100,000 at home club" tell how they do it.

The cost of this workshop is only $35 including lunch. As a special bonus, you'll receive a free copy of both my books if you're among the first 50 to sign up. Call 373-0713 to register or 372-5151 for more details.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

A few weeks ago I had to take a plane trip and needed something to read. A co-worker handed me a book and said "Here, this is a good one." It was Intensity by Dean Koontz. The book was a great thriller. You know the kind that gets so intense that you have to put it down for a few minutes every so often just to catch your breath.

When I heard the TV movie "Intensity", based on Koontz's book, was going to be on, I could hardly wait. As the movie started I thought some changes maybe necessary, because you can't really show thought process. The longer I watched, the more disappointed I became. The movie never became the thriller the book was.

Then I realized there are many people that will never know the gut gripping, attention holding, tension clenching story, because they will never read the book. They think they know the story because they saw the movie.

In all of your movie watching experiences have you ever seen a movie that was better than the book? Why can't the movie makers just follow the book? They chose the story because it would make a great movie, so why change it? No, I'm not going to tell you anymore, you will have to read the book.

Among the new books this week you may find a wonderful book that will make a great movie, if the movie makers will just follow the book.

An Independent Woman by Howard Fast would make a good mini series. This is the final chapter of the "Immigrants" saga. The charismatic heroine, Barbara Lavette, is aging but still as strong-willed as ever.

Now the matriarch of the large powerful Lavette family, Barbara is the one they turn to for guidance. Barbara discovers the joys of real love when she meets and marries Philip Carter, a Unitarian Minister.

On their honeymoon the couple tour Europe and Israel. When they return to San Francisco following the honeymoon Barbara begins the challenge of being a minister's wife.

Wilbur Smith's Birds of Prey begins in the year 1667. This high seas adventure finds Sir Francis Courteney off the Agulhas Cape of South Africa waiting for a treasure laden galleon. The ship, owned by the Dutch East India Company, is returning from a trip to the Orient. At a time when maritime law permits acts of piracy, the Courteney's struggle for supremacy and riches on the high seas.

Shirley Kennett, the author of Gray Matter has a new book entitled Fire Cracker. A cunning computer hacker who calls himself Cracker may be involved in more than his own death and disappearance.

A wealthy, elderly patient in a St. Louis hospital dies because of complex medical orders carried out through the hospital's computer system. Then a diabetic man is given an overdose of insulin, again the order came through the computer system.

Veteran homicide detective Leo Schultz isn't so sure the hospital is as blameless as it claims. P.J. Gray, director of the Computerized Homicide Investigations Project, fears that someone is tampering with the system. P.J. has dealt with hackers before, but none as elusive as this man who doesn't exist.

Former U.S. Air Force Captain Dale Brown has a new book entitled Fatal Terrain. The up rising begins with The Peoples Republic of China attacking Taiwan. When the U.S. comes to Taiwan's aid the U.S. is surprised and devastated by the decisive setback.

China has just begun to reclaim territories in Asia and sets into effect its plan to immobilize the U.S.

Aerial strike force expert Patrick McLanahan and aerospace engineer Jon Masters are working on a plan that just might save the U.S. The recently retired B-52 Stratofortress bomber fleet will be converted into the new EB-52 Megafortress rapid reaction global strike force.

The Megafortress bombers will be equipped with the latest in stealth cruise missiles. As the doomsday clock ticks the shadow warriors take off. Will they be enough? Will they be in time?

Amethyst Dreams by Phyllis A. Whitney is set on the coast of North Carolina. Best friends Hallie Knight and Susan Trench have been separated by time and circumstances.

But when Susan disappears from her grandfather's seaside home it is Hallie that Nicholas Trench calls. Nicholas refuses to believe that his beloved granddaughter and heir to his fortune is gone forever. If anyone can find her it will be her best friend, the one who knows her best.

When Hallie arrives, Nicholas is surrounded by an odd collection of family and friends, each knowing more than they are willing to tell.

Food Group: Dairy

Want to know an easy way to achieve a balanced diet every day?

Just use the Food Guide Pyramid. Dairy products, near the top of the pyramid, are excellent sources of calcium, protein and Vitamin A.

Growing children and adolescents need calcium for healthy bones and teeth. Adults need calcium, too, especially women -- to strengthen bones and prevent osteoporosis.

Two to three servings of dairy products are recommended each day, and could include a glass of milk, 1-1/2 ounces of cheese, and a cup of yogurt.

Some foods from this group are high in fat, so select skim or low-fat milk products for older children and adults.

Good nutrition is easy...with the Food Guide Pyramid.

The Successful Family

Beat Your Habit, Not Your Kid
Substance abuse isn't a black and white issue when it comes to children. It is a black and blue issue.

Parental abuse of alcohol and use of other drugs has been identified as a major factor contributing to child maltreatment and death. A 1990 report by the Child Welfare League of America stated that alcohol and drug abuse are factors in the placement of more than 75 percent of the children who are entering care. Some states report substance abuse as a factor in as many as 90 percent of all reported child abuse and neglect cases.

Encouraging parents to seek help for addictions to alcohol and drugs is important in preventing possible verbal, physical and even sexual abuse of children. Parents who seek treatment can learn to better manage stress and become more effective parents.

If you're a parent (or know of a parent) with a drug or alcohol problem, you may be abusing your child verbally, physically, or even sexually. Help your child by helping yourself. Get treatment now for your drug or alcohol dependency, and learn how to become a more effective parent. Only then will your child have a chance to cure the physical, emotional and social scars that my otherwise never go away. Ever.

There is hope. If you or your family needs help or if you know a family who does, contact Tilli Boozer, counselor and facilitator, at 364-HELP or 363-7668. THE SUCCESSFUL FAMILY PROGRAM of the Hereford Independent School District will hold the Nurturing Family Sessions this

Everything old is made new again in 'neotraditional' communities

By CALVIN WOODWARD
Associated Press Writer

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) - The American front porch is back. Houses crowd narrow streets again. Leafy alleys lead to garages in the rear. Surprises are around almost every corner, from the edge of town to the village green.

Everything old is new again in a growing style of development across the country. Known as neotraditional towns, they are revolting against generations of suburban sameness and trying to reshape how we live.

"Before the 1880s, why did things look so good?" asks Joe Alfandre, master builder of the Kentlands development in Gaithersburg, amid Washington's sprawl.

"There was a language to it. That's what I think we've brought back."

They're trying, anyway, at Disney's new Celebration community in Orlando, Harbor Town in Memphis, Tenn., Northwest Landing in Du Pont, Wash., and some 150 other places.

"There's no way you can't know your neighbor," says Gaithersburg city planning director Jennifer Russel.

It may be too soon to know how well these places can move beyond experimental bubbles to rooted neighborhoods. They necessarily lack what the new urban thinking calls the "patina of age."

"We really don't have any proof that people in a (neo)traditional neighborhood know their neighbors more," said Joseph Molinaro, director of land development services at the National Association of Home Builders.

"New towns built from scratch take a while to mature."

What they may present to outsiders is a friendlier face than the gated communities that are gaining another prominent niche in the nation's housing.

With the rise of the suburb, the old language of neighborhoods gave way to zoning and the building economies of repetition. If that exacted a price in style and up-close sociability, it also made home ownership affordable to millions.

Over time, back yards expanded for living and front yards expanded for distance from the street. Cul-de-sacs formed. Porches vanished. Garages came to dominate many streetscapes.

Enter the neotraditional pioneers, like Miami architect Andres Duany.

When Duany came to Gaithersburg to meet city officials, he had a vision of a community inspired by ideals of the past.

Dismissing the suburbs as "cartoons of planning," he also had a bit of an attitude.

"Duany was going to save us from suburbia and ourselves," Russel said dryly.

"He insulted us, and made us look inside ourselves. And it worked."

Harbor Town, on a three-mile-long sandbar just off the Memphis riverfront, has brought the neotraditional town concept downtown.

"It's a real movement from the back yard ... to the front," says Memphis real estate agent Jim Black, who shows houses in that bustling area ranging from the low $100,000s to almost $1 million.

"They created it so it would go back to the earlier times when people sat on their front porch and everything didn't revolve around the T - or the computer. And sure enough, there is a lot of activity."

But Black says suburbanites may not be as isolated as neotraditionalists believe. "People are out just as much," he says of conventional neighborhoods. "There's a lot of children. People meet and interact."

At Kentlands, which opened in 1990 and is mostly done, mansions, townhouses, "granny apartments" over freestanding garages and a mix of other housing styles coexist in a deliberately achieved helter-skelter look of old.

There are no dead ends. Some streets are narrowed to one lane and parking is either around back or parallel to the sidewalk, not in driveways or lots.

The town's density, its twisty roads and all its idiosyncrasies are just the thing to drive conventional zoning officials mad.

"It is the kind of town we used to build in Pennsylvania and now is against the rules," said state Rep. David Argall, chairman of a Pennsylvania land use legislative committee whose members were touring Kentlands.

But there are drawbacks and tradeoffs to most of these communities, too.

Lots tend to be small. Molinaro of the builders group says Americans don't care much about front yards but want space in the back.

Despite robust sales among the 1,200 completed units at Kentlands, fewer families with children have moved in than the city expected.

So far in many of these developments, stores have not set up shop as planned, in part because the communities are fussy but also because the market is not always clear.

The goal is to have stores, jobs, schools and recreation within walking distance. Each step toward self-sufficiency risks increased isolation.

As in many new developments, residents are subjected to rules galore - not like the old days.

At Kentlands, people with a basketball net in their back yard were asked to remove it.

Mary Pat Berkoski doesn't mind most of the rules. She recently moved from a Philadelphia-area apartment where she and her husband knew few neighbors, and they find people here tip-of-the-hat friendly.

Military Muster

Marine Lance Cpl. Ismael Barba, son of Samuel and Juanita Barba of Hereford, is halfway through a six-month deployment with the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit (MEU), embarked aboard the ships of the USS Kearsarge Amphibious Ready Group.

Early in the deployment, Barba's unit conducted the evacuation of 2,500 American citizens from Sierra Leon. The evacuation was conducted jointly with French, Nigerian and Sierra Leon surface ships.

Equipped with the 22nd MEU landing force, helicopters, Harrier attack jets, high-speed assault hovercraft, landing craft, tanks, and armored and amphibious assault vehicles, the 22nd MEU provides theater commanders with a wide range of capabilities.

The 22nd MEU can evacuate civilians, rescue downed pilots, conduct reconnaissance and serve as initial landing force ashore.

Barba is a 1994 graduate of Hereford High School. He joined the Marine Corps in August 1994.

YOUR EYES

Why Tears?

Tears are nothing to cry about. Rather, our tears exist to cleanse and protect our eyes. Think how uncomfortable it would be if the salty, natural fluid were not there to wash away most of the dust particles that enter our eyes. As the eyelids blink - as many as 12 to 30 times a minute - tears clean the eyes thousands of times a day. Tears even contain certain bacteria-inhibiting substances.

Most people notice when there are too many tears, when they cry, perhaps, or when the eyes are irritated. Excess tears flow from the eyes through tiny ducts on the inside corners. The reason your nose runs when you cry is that some tears escape through the nose.

On the other hand, there are some people who don't have enough tears, and this "dry eye" condition is indeed uncomfortable. Most common in older people, dry eye is often a side effect of some drugs. See the optometrist to make sure there's been no damage. "Artificial tears" eye drops effectively compensate.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket. For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

No-frills Sandberg is small but comfy

By Associated Designs

The Sandberg is a small, no-frills plan. It is equally well-suited to the needs of young families buying their first home, empty nesters wishing to minimize their maintenance chores, and singles who want to quit renting and settle into a place of their own.

In this open, free-flowing floor-plan, no walls separate the living room, dining room and kitchen. So the room feels more spacious than its modest 1300-plus square feet.

Gathering spaces are bright. In the nook, natural light washes in through double windows with Craftsman-style multiple panes on their upper halves. Three similarly styled windows and two atrium doors span the rear wall of the living room and dining room. The master bedroom, master bath, and both secondary bedrooms all boast double windows, and the bedrooms have additional windows as well.

The kitchen is designed for efficiency. Sink, refrigerator, built-in stove and dishwasher are all close together. The peninsular counter could be extended slightly and outfitted as an eating bar if desired.

A pantry adds to the available storage space, and utilities are tucked behind double doors in the eating nook.

A long walk-through closet connects the master bedroom to a private bath with oversized shower and built-in seat. This suite is well-isolated from the secondary bedrooms and main bathroom on the opposite side of the house.

The Sandberg's long narrow attic stretches all the way from one end of the house to the other. It has windows at both ends and is accessed via a pull-down ladder located in the hallway that connects the secondary bedrooms.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Sandberg 30-083 and include a return when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Walters brings fresh prespective to The View

By Teresa Ortega
©TVData Features Syndicate

Barbara Walters, whose groundbreaking career in television began years ago on NBC's Today, returns to daytime TV this week with the new, hourlong, female-oriented The View. Airing weekdays on ABC, the entertainment, talk and informational program is hosted by Walters and four other women.

The View combines celebrity interviews, reports from experts and lively discussions of personal issues, news and events of the day. "I want this to be informative, but I want it to be fun," says Walters, who also serves as co-executive producer of the show.

The broadcast attempts to capture the intimate manner in which women relate to each other and addresses, in Walters' own words, "the kind of things that women would talk about" if they gathered in their own homes for a lunchtime chat.

The mood is expected to range from light to serious, with topics covering the worlds of fashion, health, entertainment, family and "all the different things that are happening that affect people," Walters says.

To bring an atmosphere of ease and spontaneity to The View, Walters has assembled a group of professionally accomplished women, all previously known to television audiences. Besides being knowledgeable and amusing conversationalists, the panelists also have compelling personal lives.

The multigenerational group is made up of Meredith Vieira, chief correspondent of Turning Point, who serves as an informal moderator; legal analyst Star Jones; Debbie Matenopoulos, guest host of MTV's The Week in Rock; and comic Joy Behar, who is taking turns with Walters as the fourth panelist.

Walters believes the varied life experiences of the show's panelists — such as Matenopoulos' struggle to pay off a $46,000 student loan, and Vieira's attempt to balance a career and motherhood — will connect with viewers.

"I think the audience will begin to feel that they know these four women," Walters says. "Most viewers don't know very much about my personal life; they'll know a little bit more when they see this program."

Because Walters wanted the show to be "as representative of our audience as we could," she chose a panel ranging in age from 22-year-old Matenopoulos to herself.

"There are things that Debbie feels being 22 years old that are very different from the way I feel," Walters says. "It's a totally different experience. She uses expressions, for example, that I'm unfamiliar with — and I know I've said sometimes, 'We need subtitles!'"

Because of her previous commitment to ABC's 20/20, Walters will initially appear on the show three days a week, later cutting back to two — and because her schedule is so hectic, nobody knows exactly which three days she is expected to participate.

In addition to the four panelists, each show features a celebrity guest who is first interviewed by Vieira and then joins the panel for what Walters calls "regular conversation — so it's not 'Plug my movie, hear about my television show.'" Monday's scheduled guest is Tom Selleck.

An expert appears later in the program to discuss the latest medical discovery, family issues or other topics of interest.

"This is a program we hope will inform and hope will entertain," Walters says. Certainly with Walters at the helm, The View promises to be a sparkling and stimulating midday alternative and a program well worth checking out.

MUSIC NOTES

Music is known to "soothe the savage beast." Whether as a form of personal expression, communication, ritual or thought, it can bring enjoyment to people around the world. There are many different types of music, and the following is just a brief description of some popular styles.

CLASSICAL
 Music historians refer to classical music as a specific style and period in music history, from roughly 1750 to 1825. It's great masters included Franz Josef Haydn, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart and Ludwig van Beethoven. Classical music is characterized by delicate textures, ornamented melodies and elegant sentimentality. It also is emotional, passionate and even boisterous at times.

BLUES
 Originating in the rural Mississippi Delta region at the beginning of the 20th century, blues is a musical style created in response to the hardships endured by generations of African-Americans. It is mainly vocal narrative style that features solo voice with instrumental accompaniment. This music often has a bittersweet emotional impact on people.

ROCK
 Rock music, which emerged during the mid-1950s, places a strong emphasis on beat. It's direct, adolescent-level message, driving dance rhythms and suggestion of youthful rebellion appealed to young audiences in the United States and western Europe when first arriving on the music scene.

★ ★ ★ August 10-16 ★ ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
Get right to the point when it comes to work this week, Aries. Beating around the bush only leaves you out of the picture when a new project is available. However, when it comes to your love life, keep your feelings to yourself until that special someone lets you know how he or she feels. It can save you a lot of embarrassment.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Be persistent when it comes to something that you really want, Taurus. Don't let a co-worker take over a project that you want to head. Talk to your manager. As for your family life, it certainly keeps you busy this week. A loved one calls on you for advice. Be honest.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Things seem to be moving too fast for you this week. Take some time for yourself this weekend. It helps you relax and get back in control of your life. A close friend turns to you for help. Don't let him or her down. Cancer and Leo play important roles.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
Don't let your emotions get the best of you early in the week. Cancer. Think before you say something that you may regret - especially when it comes to a work situation. A loved one introduces you to his or her friend. Don't let all the smooth talk blind you from the truth.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Being overly smug only hurts your reputation this week, Leo. Try to be modest when it comes to your career; it will make you look good. The same holds true for your personal life. Being vain pushes that special someone away. Taurus and Virgo play important roles.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
When it comes to sharing your true feelings about a problem at work, be selective. Don't just tell anyone who will listen; this surely will lead to disaster. That special someone pays you a surprise visit. Don't let it throw you off. Instead, just enjoy!

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
A problem at work gets you down early in the week. However, don't sulk. Try to see the bright side of the situation, and move ahead. The higher-ups are watching you. An old friend looks you up after several years. Open up to him or her; don't keep your distance. Gemini plays an important role.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
While it's not like you to show emotion, Scorpio, a touching family moment brings tears to your eyes. Don't be embarrassed; loved ones are moved by your show of affection. That special someone you've been interested in asks you out. Say yes!

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Keep your mind on the business at hand this week, Sagittarius. Don't let other people's problems distract you from getting the job done. When it comes to romance, you are doing well. A friend of a friend invites you out. This very well may be the first step to a lasting relationship.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't let a minor setback at work throw off your momentum. Shake it off, and get right back into the swing of things. This will impress your superiors. A loved one turns to you for advice. Your clear thinking can save the day. Pisces plays an important role.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Your shrewd nature serves you well when it comes to a financial investment this week. Think before you act. A loved one intrudes on a romantic evening late in the week. However, don't get angry; he or she really needs your help. Be supportive, and give him or her a shoulder to cry on.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
Your rose-colored glasses seem to be scratched this week, Pisces. You encounter problem after problem at work and seem to be floundering. As for your loved ones, they all are vying for your attention, but no one seems to care what you want. Don't get discouraged; next week will be better.

Trail of Hope traces Mormons' pioneer passage

Note to Mr. Dennis Rodman: If there's one must-see film for you this summer, it's Trail of Hope: The Story of the Mormon Trail, airing Sunday, Aug. 10, on PBS (check local listings). Besides explaining that the Mormons, or Latter-day Saints, are indeed a religious group, Trail of Hope offers an inspiring look at the courageous pilgrimage of a people both forced and called to settle a new land.

Established in 1830 in New York, Mormonism moved west to Nauvoo, Ill., a few years later. There, in 1844, founder Joseph Smith was murdered by a vigilante crowd, and church elder Brigham Young decreed the Saints would migrate another 1,300 miles to the valley of the Great Salt Lake, calling it his people's New Zion.

The parallels of this story to the biblical exodus of the Israelites from Egypt were as clear then as now. The travelers were organized under the same system of captains the Israelites used and took little with them when they left. Once, when it appeared they were facing starvation, quails flew into camp by the hundreds, as they did in the biblical wilderness. And Young, who is likened to Moses by commenting scholar Harold Bloom, almost died a few miles short of the goal, just as Moses died before his people crossed the Jordan.

Bloom describes both movements as "a religion that became a people."

"It just goes to prove that when a people have a common vision and all work together, something can be done," notes Hal Holbrook, the film's narrator. "I think it's a lesson for the country today."

The story of the Mormon Trail looms large for the descendants of those who answered Young's call 150 years ago. A three-month re-enactment of the journey was completed earlier this summer, and the Smithsonian currently has an exhibit dedicated to the Mormon pioneers.

Trail of Hope plays down the more controversial aspects of Mormonism, including the early practice of polygamy, but it captures a rare spirit of determination and brotherly love that does credit to the memory of the pioneers.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: What are they going to do with New York Undercover? Two of the main characters were killed in the season finale. Will the show be canceled, or is it returning with different characters? -Christine P. in St. Petersburg, Fla.

A: The show will return on Fox next year as a midseason replacement. "Surviving" star Malik Yoba, who saw co-star Michael DeLorenzo written out in last season's finale, is so upset about the changes to come that, at this writing, he was trying to end or alter his contract.

Producer Dick Wolf, who has a history of treating his actors like props (he's also the guy who fired Chris Noth from Law & Order), has issued a statement reading, "I see the changes for New York Undercover as a necessary step in broadening the show's appeal, and to push the show in a new direction, in the same way that Law & Order expanded its audience when we added two female characters in the fourth season."

Q: In the middle to late '70s, I saw a TV movie starring Alan Arkin as a recently committed mental patient who eventually escaped from the institution with damaging video evidence showing the cruel treatment of patients. I think it was called Escape From Hell, but I've never seen it listed. My friends are beginning to consider having me committed. -Thomas Garcia in Florida.

A: Actually, Thomas, Escape From Hell was one of the titles being considered for the NBC movie that eventually aired on Jan. 17, 1978, as The Other Side of Hell. Besides Arkin, the large cast also included Morgan Woodward and Roger E. Mosley, and the plot was just as you described. So loosen those straitjackets, guys, and back off!

Malik Yoba

Q: I recently caught a reference to a movie with Julie Andrews as a violinist battling multiple sclerosis. Being a violinist myself, I would like to find the movie, but I can't recall the title. -S.F. via e-mail.

A: Andrews gave a powerful performance in Duet for One, a 1986 drama based on the real-life tragedy of brilliant cellist Jacqueline du Pre, the late wife of conductor Daniel Barenboim.

Among the supporting cast is Rupert Everett, currently stealing the show in My Best Friend's Wedding.

Q: Are Jim and Timothy Hutton related? They look just alike. -Gail Buckbee, Burton, Ohio.

A: Timothy is the son of the late Jim Hutton.

Q: In the movie Tombstone, who played the character of Johnny Ringo? I say it was not John Schneider. -Amanda Newnham, Erie, Mich.

A: That was Michael Biehn playing Ringo.

Days of Our Lives needs to pick up pace

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I've been a faithful Days of Our Lives fan for more years than I can remember, but lately I have become disgusted with the show. The story lines have slowed to a crawl.

I believe new writers would breathe new life into the stories and hold our interest better.

I have other friends who were faithful Days watchers, but they have given up on the show.

Maybe if enough people stop watching, the producers will do something about it. -J.E., New Bern, N.C.

Dear Reader: Your wish has come true: Days has new writers. Many of the current story lines are in the process of being tied up.

Dear Candace: Will Ryan and Nina (Scott Reeves, Tricia Cast) ever get back together on The Young and the Restless? Ryan is throwing away his marriage so he can chase after Tricia (Sabryn Genet).

As for Hope (Signy Coleman), send her back to the farm; she's too smug where Kurt (Leigh J. McCloskey) is concerned. -M. Brown, Roswell, N.M.

Dear Reader: Ryan is halfheartedly trying to work things out.

The good news is that Nina and Ryan's marriage will generate a very moving story line in which Nina hopefully will find the inner strength and security she needs.

Fans' feelings about pairing Hope with Kurt are mixed. Some fans think it is a great idea; others think he belongs with Ashley (Shari Shattuck).

Dear Candace: I would like to know what happened to John Berardino, who played Dr. Steve Hardy on General Hospital.

I used to correspond with him, and he even sent me pictures of his family. Also, I haven't seen Jessie Brewer (Emily McLaughlin) in a long time.

Could you please tell me what happened to these wonderful actors? -M. Messelling, Hamilton, Ohio.

Dear Reader: Sadly, both are dead. Berardino died last year; McLaughlin passed away several years ago.

Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer.

Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live.

Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise.

It's an integral part of our lives.

Newspaper. It delivers.
