Walls sees change

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

It's not quite home economics, but Rebecca Walls has things cookin' at the Deaf Smith County Library.

There's the Internet, the World Wide Web, and the library's plans to tie into it, and the constant effort to improve and stay up with the changes in technology, while keeping true to the traditions of libraries.

Walls wasn't trained in library science when she "fell into the job," as she described how she moved into the field.

In 1978, Walls, who had a degree in home economics from Texas Woman's University in Denton, was a line supervisor at a clothing factory in Hereford.

Her husband, Jerry, called her about a job advertisement he saw in the paper.

"You've got to apply for it!" he exclaimed.

She did, and she was hired as coordinator of children and adult programs at the Deaf Smith County Public Library.

A few years later, she was promoted to assistant director and then, in 1987, she was named library director.

After taking the position with the library, Walls went back to school, earning her master's degree in library science through a special program offered by North Texas State University (now the University of North Texas).

Through a cooperative agreement with Texas Tech in Lubbock, the North Texas master's program was taught at the Texas Tech campus.

Britain, world pays tribute to princess

LONDON (AP) - With timeless splendor, in a sea of tears, Britain bade farewell today to its "Queen of Hearts," millions of mourners seeing Diana, Princess of Wales, to her final rest after a life of golden days, heartache and too few years.

"All over the world she was a symbol of selfless humanity," said Charles, the ninth Earl Spencer.

But her brother was bitter, too, in his eulogy from the pulpit of Westminster Abbey, taking aim at a gossip-hungry press that caused her pain and may have contributed to her death, and a royal family that sought to smother her in "duty and tradition."

A stately procession had borne Diana's coffin to her Westminster Abbey funeral, passing at "dead march" step through hushed corridors of humanity, massed in central London to wish the much-loved, star-crossed princess an emotional goodbye.

Later, after the funeral, a black hearse carried the princess's remains at the head of a motorcade heading north, toward her ancestral home, Althorp Park, 75 miles' distant, where her grave awaited, on a quiet, wooded island in the estate grounds.

Within Westminster Abbey's hallowed, soaring walls, black-clad ranks of royals, glittering rows of celebrities, and hundreds of ordinary people whose lives felt her human touch gathered to hear words of praise and prayer for Diana, killed at age 36 last Sunday in a Paris automobile crash many blame on pursuing photographers.

"Diana profoundly influenced this nation and the world," declared Westminster's dean, The Very Rev. Dr. Wesley Carr. "Although a princess, she was someone for whom, from afar, we dared to feel affection."

But with his own paean of love and prayer, Diana's brother delivered an indictment of the media, in a eulogy that drew long applause in the abbey and across London, where hundreds of thousands watched the funeral on giant TV screens.

"She talked endlessly of getting away from England, mainly because of the treatment that she received at the hand of the newspapers," Earl Spencer said.

He also pointedly alluded to his sister's troubled years within the royal family, which took away her "Royal Highness" title when she was divorced last year from Prince Charles.

She was "someone with natural nobility who was classless, who proved in the last year she needed no royal title to generate her particular brand of magic."

Amid the sorrowful tones of Bach, Verdi and Purcell in the abbey, the 2,000 mourners also heard a grieving pop tribute from Diana's friend Elton John.

"Goodbye England's rose," he sang, "... your candle's burned out long before your legend ever will."

And the ceremonies Saturday, a day when this nation shut down as for the death of a true monarch, will clearly help make the legend of Diana.

Six gleaming black horses had pulled the gun carriage bearing the coffin down the city's boulevards and avenues. Slowly striding behind were her adored sons, heads bowed, and Prince Charles.

Hundreds of representatives of the charities Diana championed, some in wheelchairs, some in nurses' white, also joined the procession.

Mourners honor Mother Teresa

CALCUTTA, India (AP) - Weeping masses gathered in the rain today to pay homage to one who belonged to this city as well as the world: Mother Teresa, a tireless minister to the "poorest of the poor."

The 87-year-old Roman Catholic nun, who retained her simplicity and humility despite an avalanche of international fame, died Friday of a heart attack, surrounded by grieving sisters of her order.

As disciples and other well-wishers poured into Calcutta, her Missionaries of Charity order, announced that the date of the funeral had been moved back to Sept. 13 from Wednesday.

Her body was being kept in a hall of her home in this eastern Indian city while a 155-year-old brick and plaster church was being prepared to receive the body. At the church, sisters of the order of Loreto strung guide ropes of blue and white - the colors of Mother Teresa's order.

A nun at the home where Mother Teresa's body was being kept said the sisters wanted to give more people a chance to pay their respects. She said plans for placing the nun's body in a downtown Calcutta church were postponed until Sunday because the nuns wanted more time to pray themselves.

"Today Mother Teresa is enjoying the presence of Jesus whom she loves and to whom she dedicated her work. We should all be rejoicing today for we have a great intercessor in heaven," said Father Sebastian, who celebrated a Mass in her honor at her convent's chapel.

Clarification

An article in Thursday's issue of The Brand indicated the all juries are comprised of 12 members; however, the number of jurors may vary according to the legal proceeding.

Also, the same article gave the impression that the jury is selected by computer. The computer compiles a list of potential jurors from the database, but the attorneys make the final selection of jurors.

And, the district clerk was inadvertently misquoted regarding excuses people give in trying to avoid jury duty.

Montana report rips jails

HELENA, Mont. (AP) - Montana inmates at a Texas prison go hungry and have to wait days for medical care, while the company running the prison continues to violate its $3.6 million-a-year contract with the state, an investigation by Montana corrections officials found.

A report released Friday said the Dickens County Correctional Center operated by the Bobby Ross Group is not fully complying with 15 of 22 provisions of the state contract. Violations include food service, medical care, security, inmate transfers and disciplinary actions, according to the report.

"While there have been some areas of improvement, the concern is that those improvements are the result of Montana (Corrections Department) considerable oversight rather than a genuine commitment by BRG to fulfill the obligations agreed to between the department and the contractor," the report said.

Montana Corrections Director Rick Day summarized the report: "We attempt to ensure Montana gets what it pays for. The contractor is not supplying the services required in the contract."

PAULA JONES' ATTORNEYS WITHDRAW FROM CASE
EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - The sexual harassment lawsuit against President Clinton has been thrown into chaos amid a breakdown of relations between plaintiff Paula Corbin Jones and her attorneys. At issue, sources say, is whether to settle out of court and for how much.

The lawyers' withdrawal from the case, expected as early as Monday, coincides with intensified settlement talks - and with an approaching court decision on whether a reluctant witness should be forced to testify.

Two sources close to the case told The Associated Press late Friday that Jones' Virginia-based attorneys, Joseph Cammarata and Gil Davis, had already prepared their petition to withdraw and would formally file it with the court in Little Rock, Ark., on Monday.

A spokeswoman for Jones, Susan Carpenter McMillan, confirmed that the relationship had broken down over the question of settling the suit. But she vehemently disputed sources who characterized Jones as primarily seeking a large monetary settlement.

SCIENTISTS WANT TO REVIVE THALIDOMIDE
BETHESDA, Md. (AP) - Scientists voted to revive the world's most infamous drug, thalidomide, saying it should be sold to a small number of leprosy patients but under very tight rules aimed at preventing horrific birth defects.

If the Food and Drug Administration follows Friday's advice from the scientific panel, thalidomide would become the most restricted drug ever sold in this country.

But even with the limits, doctors are expected to prescribe thalidomide for a wider range of conditions, and all sides agreed that accidents could happen.

"One day a thalidomide baby will be born," one of the world's top leprosy physicians, Dr. Thomas Rea of Los Angeles County Medical Center, told the FDA's advisory panel.

NAVY'S NEWEST SHIP HAS FEMININE TOUCH
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A Navy ship armed with more computers than guns joins the fleet today, bringing with it the latest in stealth technology - and a decidedly feminine touch.

In addition to being only the second Navy ship ever named for a woman, the sleek, 500-foot-long destroyer USS Hopper is one of the first ships designed from the keel up with female sailors in mind.

Affectionately called "Amazing Grace" by the crew, the ship is named for Rear Adm. Grace Murray Hopper, a computer pioneer credited with coining the term "bug" when she found a moth in a switching contact.

The first ship to carry a woman's name was the World War II destroyer USS Higbee, named for a World War I Navy nurse.

The coffin was shrouded in the royal flag and topped with white flowers, one wreath each from her brother Charles and from sons William, 15, and Harry, 12. A card propped up on the flowers read simply, "Mummy."

Sobs and anguished cries of "Diana!" were heard. Some in the throng, often 50 deep, tossed flowers as the cortege passed. A banner read, "No one can hurt you now. Just feel the love."

Police estimated several million people lined the sidewalks and filled London's parks to watch the requiem on TV screens. But silence reigned, seldom broken by more than the clomp of hooves and the bell's sad call.

Uncounted millions of others around world watched on television as the British people buried the earl's daughter and former kindergarten teacher who became perhaps the most-photographed woman on Earth.

As the day broke, cool and dry, central London was jammed along the 3.5-mile procession route. Some stood all night to claim prime places outside palaces and the abbey. Police forecast crowds of well over a million - and perhaps up to 5 million - outstripping the numbers who flocked to the capital for Diana's wedding to Charles in 1981.

Saturday's ceremonies were closing a week of shock, sorrow, regret and recriminations.

In the six days since the princess's death, there has been a remarkable outpouring of public grief. Diana's astonishing popularity, which had troubled the royal family in life, was now humbling it in death.

"They (the royals) must get closer to the people to survive," said Doreen Duffell, who joined a subdued throng before the procession. "Di was the only one who showed expression in her face. The expressions of the others hardly ever change."

That very sentiment had led Queen Elizabeth II on Friday to shatter royal protocol by making her first live, televised address since the early years I went to Tech every weekend - that's how I got my master's," Walls said, noting the North Texas is one of only three universities in the state that offers a master's degree in library science. "So, going to Tech was a whole lot better than driving to Denton or Austin," she said.

When Walls first went to work for the library, there were no computers, just the 3x5 cards, while had to be manually filed.

"When I was assistant director, I was filing about 300 cards a week. Since then, we've automated," which reduces the workload significantly, she said.

Other changes include expansion of the library's resources through its participation in the Harrington Regional Library Consortium, a cooperative effort involving more than 30 Panhandle libraries. The consortium pools the libraries' resources - to the benefit of all of the libraries and their patrons.

The Deaf Smith library also has become involved in a cooperative effort with the Hereford Independent School District, the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission and the Region XVI Education Service Center in operating a GED laboratory.

Walls said the library has followed along with technology changes, seeing the old vinyl record albums replaced by cassettes and now, compact discs; typewriters replaced by computers; the transition of film to video; and the expansion of the books on tape, of which the library now has a collection of about 1,000.

However, the new technology doesn't mean the old is thrown out, she said.

"We had typewriters for public use. Now we still have the typewriter, but we have two personal computers for public use. ... (and) the 16mm film projector is in a closet, just in case we need it," she said.

Other changes include the growing demand for large-print books, a trend that Walls attributed to an aging population that has trouble reading regular type.

There's also been an increase in demand for children's mystery and suspense books, and the "kids love paperbacks, which are easier to carry," she said.

Also, Walls said, when she started as coordinator of the children's programs, more children participated in Storytime. However, now that both parents work outside the home, there are fewer and fewer parents bringing their children to Storytime, something that distresses Walls who said the program has suffered significantly.

"When I started I had at least 12 mothers, maybe more, bringing children every Thursday. Now we're lucky to have five for Storytime," she said. "I hate to see that being lost."

One of the most enjoyable aspects of her job has been the opportunity to do a variety of tasks.

"I feel sorry for librarians in the large cities," she said. She said a big-city library will hire a librarian to do nothing but catalog books or another who does nothing but research. Because the Deaf Smith County Library is smaller and has fewer staffers, Walls said she "never has to do the same thing two days in a row. Here, when you're tired of something, there's always something else to do. I get to do all of it."

Looking ahead, the library already has access to the Internet through Gateway; however, the "dumb terminal" limits the use of the World Wide Web, she said, because it is unable to retrieve graphics.

However, through the linkup with the Harrington consortium, the Deaf Smith library should soon be going at full throttle on the Internet.

"The line's in place and we'll be able to have one PC (personal computer) that will become Internet-dedicated," she said, adding she's keeping her fingers crossed that this improvement of library services will occur rapidly.

As library director, she said her least-favorite task is the development of the budget and having to face the Deaf Smith County Commissioners Court.

"We have to be very careful. Taxpayers don't want their taxes to go up, so it's really difficult to stretch the budget" and continue to make improvements that the public expects, she said.

The library now operates with five full-time and two part-time staff members, although some students work as volunteers during the summer.

Walls and her husband, Jerry, director of the respiratory department at Hereford Regional Medical Center, have two children, Stephanie, who attends Texas Tech, and J.O., who will graduate later this month from the Wyoming Technical Institute in Laramie.

MOTHER TERESA

Mother Teresa's body was laid out in the simple habit worn by members of her order - a blue-trimmed white sari and a long-sleeved blouse. A fan placed at her head gently rustled a bouquet of yellow roses. Wreaths and bunches of white tube roses filled the room.

More than 200 nuns sang "Hallelujah" in chorus. As they filed out after the service, one nun made the sign of a cross on Mother Teresa's forehead.

Sister Nirmala, her successor, said the funeral would be Sept. 13, just three days after the 51st anniversary of the day Mother Teresa received what she described as a calling from Jesus Christ to tend to the poorest and sickest.

Mother Teresa not only ministered to them, she loved them. In Calcutta's fetid slums, she took in the destitute dying in gutters, sheltered infants abandoned in trash heaps, soothed the ulcers of lepers.

The accolades that had poured in during her lifetime were echoed as the world responded to her death.

Pope John Paul II celebrated a Mass for her today at his summer residence in Castel Gandolfo and told the late nun's successor that he was confident Mother Teresa's selfless work for the world's poorest would continue.

Earlier, the pope said he was profoundly touched by Mother Teresa's death.

Clinton portrait reported missing

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - A portrait of President Clinton that was ultimately destined for his presidential library is missing from the state Capitol rotunda.

Secretary of State Sharon Priest said the portrait was in its spot Thursday night but gone Friday morning.

"We are obviously not pleased about this," Mrs. Priest told The Arkansas Democrat-Gazette in a story published today. "If it has been stolen and if we find who did it, that person will be prosecuted to the fullest extent."

Mrs. Priest and other officials unveiled the oil portrait May 23. Later, it was hung about 12 feet above the floor with other portraits in the rotunda.

A police search and interviews with maintenance staff turned up no leads, Mrs. Priest said. The White House was notified as was the National Archives, which owns the work. The FBI is taking over the investigation, Mrs. Priest said.

reports by three inspection teams of department officials in May, June and July, will be used by the Racicot administration to decide whether the Texas contract should be canceled.

Day said that decision will be made "within the next few weeks," and will take into consideration the Bobby Ross Group's response to findings in the report.

The company has until next Tuesday to reply, but a spokesman said Friday he will ask for more time.

Terry Pelz, director of operations for the Texas-based firm, declined to comment immediately on the report's conclusions. Any reaction will be given first to Montana corrections officials, he said.

"In fairness to them, we'll respond just directly to them," Pelz said.

He acknowledged the company was concerned about losing the contract.

"We have grave concern. We want to make them happy as we always have," he said.

Dickens County has had problems since Montana inmates were sent there about a year ago. One inmate was killed in a May brawl, a near-riot had to be halted by gunfire from guards last fall, a warden was fired, and two Montana escapees remain on the loose.

Day said he was not surprised by the report's findings, recalling that results of a similar department investigation released in February cited the same kinds of problems.

In hindsight, he said, it was not a mistake to send inmates to Texas. Montana's overcrowded prison system desperately needed to find space and the Dickens County prison was one of the few able to handle 250 inmates.

Friday's report found the company is complying with the contract in its education, treatment and drug-testing programs, providing jobs for inmates, keeping track of inmate funds, supplying medication to inmates and maintaining a set of medical policies.

But the study was especially critical of food service at the Spur, Texas, prison.

It does not have enough food for what is on the menu, staffing is inadequate, and fresh produce, fruits and vegetables for inmates was "almost nonexistent," the inspection teams found.

The lack of food has forced some inmates to buy from the prison canteen or go hungry. "The inmates who eat well have money," the report said. "Many wake up hungry and go to bed hungry."

The inspectors found "very little in the way of substantive improvement to the food service operation" since the last visit in December 1996.

The prison lacks adequate services by a doctor, requires inmates to wait several days for medical care and fails to maintain records of treatment inmates receive outside the prison, the report said.

The report also cited poor security. Equipment is inadequate, and inmates working in administrative areas are not routinely searched for contraband when they come and go, the study said.

It found personnel at the prison do not receive the required annual training. Montana corrections officials were unable to document whether guards are properly trained in their first year on the job.

The report said problems exist in other security areas, but did not provide specifics.

The prison has changed the security classification of Montana inmates and moved some without first checking with Montana officials, as required in the contract, the report said.

Also, the Dickens County Correctional Center has shifted from a prison with medium to high security, to one with low to medium security, in violation of the contract, the state found.

Budget surplus celebration may be a bit premature

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK - The new federal budget projections have been announced, and they appear to call for a celebration. The budget, it is said, will be in surplus by the year 2002.

This would seem to be a noteworthy accomplishment, even an astonishing one since, in spite of promises, projections and good intentions the budget hasn't been in surplus since 1969.

Here it is in black and white from the Congressional Budget Office: The federal government should take in $32 billion more than it spends in 2002, and a whopping $86 billion more by 2007.

And soon to follow, we are told, is an even rosier projection from the White House Office of Management and Budget, a report that foretells of even larger surpluses in the same time frame.

There is a lesson in such numbers, and it is this: They can leap around crazily, adding billions here and making them disappear there, as if someone had spilled coffee into the computer keyboard.

A billion dollars is a very serious sum to the roughly 15 million families aspiring to a surplus on incomes of $35,000 to $50,000. But in a federal budget, billions are like $10 bills.

Consider this: The budget deficit for this year is expected to be $34 billion, but the Congressional Budget Office last January was projecting a deficit of $107 billion.

At that, the $107 billion projection was about 25 percent or $27 billion lower than the same office had projected less than a year earlier, making that earlier projection a $100 billion miss.

Just eight months ago the CBO was also forecasting continued deficits, and in fact a trend toward higher deficits, reaching at least $158 billion in the year 2002.

This is not meant to denigrate the CBO, which generally is thought to be well run and to contain the best analysts available, but to bring to the fore a few practical reminders.

First, though not the most important, is the reminder that in projecting an economy large and varied as that of the United States there are bound to be miscalculations. Just too many variables.

The variables may be strictly economic. Who, for instance, knew the U.S. economy would grow so strongly and pour so much revenue into the federal treasury? It could not have been foreseen.

Consider that in a nation of roughly 100 million households, a $100 billion miscalculation is equivalent to an error of $1,000 in a family's budget. What family hasn't made such an error?

Second: The biggest variable is political. In spite of the rhetoric and the promises, and aside from overspending, who can foretell what Congress will do?

Alone, these variables, domestic economics and politics, make forecasting more an art than science. Throw in such things as a global economy, natural disasters and war and its a guessing game.

And the third reminder: Accept for what they're worth the projections and promises in the recent budget deal, and the clapping and back-patting too, while keeping in mind all these variables.

Entertainment highlights

By The Associated Press

Entertainment highlights during the week of Sept. 7-13:

75 years ago: Harold Lloyd began filming the scene in "Safety Last" in which he climbs up the side of a building and hangs from a clock. The close-ups were filmed on sets constructed on top of several tall buildings to give the impression that Lloyd was doing a death-defying scene.

35 years ago: "MGM Inks 11-Yr-Old" headlined Daily Variety, referring to the signing of Kurt Russell to a new Elvis Presley film, "It Happened at the World's Fair." Russell later played Presley in a TV movie.

15 years ago: John Mellencamp was the first male recording artist to have two U.S. Top 10 hits and a No. 1 album simultaneously on the U.S. charts. "American Fool" topped the albums chart, while "Jack and Diane" and "Hurts So Good" were in the top 10 of the singles chart.

And Patti LaBelle opened on Broadway, co-starring with Al Green, in the gospel musical, "Your Arm's Too Short to Box with God."

10 years ago: A thousand screaming schoolgirls greeted rock star Michael Jackson as he arrived in Tokyo to open his "Bad" tour. A chartered Boeing 747 brought in 22 truckloads of equipment for use in the extravaganza, including 700 lights, 100 speakers, two 24- by 18-foot screens and three lasers using 40 mirrors.

"American Bandstand" rolled into its 35th year with honors from "The Guinness Book of Records," which named the program TV's longest-playing variety show.

And Los Lobos topped both the U.S. albums and singles charts with "La Bamba," a song that Ritchie Valens had made popular nearly 30 years earlier.

Five years ago: The 9th annual MTV Video Music Awards, held in Los Angeles, plummeted to a new low with the appearance of shock jock Howard Stern's bare buttocks. Stern descended to the stage on cables, wearing a costume that boasted a bigger-than-life jock strap and bare buttocks.

Spoken 10 years ago:

"It is definitely 10 years since punk rock happened....Punk rock isn't dead. It just smells funny." - Billy Idol, still proud to be a punk.

Spoken five years ago:

"I wrote this song to heal myself. It didn't occur to me that you would like it." - Eric Clapton, at the MTV Music Video Awards, referring to "Tears in Heaven," a song he wrote to honor his 4-year-old son, Conor, who died in a fall from an apartment window.

Former smoker now tastes what she's eating

EDITOR'S NOTE - In the midst of public battles over smoking, the private struggle of the person trying to quit is often overlooked. Last October, The Associated Press interviewed one woman going through a first month without cigarettes. This is one of an occasional series of follow-up interviews to check her progress.

By DONNA ABU-NASR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - For the first time in decades, former smoker Lauretta Bambula can taste the garlic in her food and the nutty flavor of her coffee.

More importantly, the lump that was discovered in her left lung 14 months ago has disappeared. Her doctor says the cancer is in remission.

"It's been hard, but it's worth it" to quit, said a smiling Bambula, 68. "I still crave cigarettes, but these cravings are fleeting."

It has been a challenging 10 months for the retired legal secretary. In addition to the struggle of getting over a 43-year-old habit, she had to deal with the growth in her lung, which doctors diagnosed as cancerous in March.

After eight weeks of radiation, she was told the mass has disappeared. Her doctor confirmed the news for The Associated Press.

"I felt happy, surprised, shocked. I thought now I can smoke," said Bambula with a laugh. "When I had cancer I didn't want to smoke because I didn't want to sabotage my chances of getting well. Now, I'm freer, freer to make a choice but also careful (because) it might come back."

During those eight weeks of treatment, she said, she rarely felt anxious or scared that the treatment would not work. She had a brush with cancer before - breast cancer in 1984 - and survived it.

She did feel regret at not quitting for good when she first tried in 1982. "I regretted that I didn't stop smoking then, that I picked up smoking in the first place," she said.

"I was a person interested in the arts and painting and the opera. Smoking was kind of stupid."

"I don't know how I got hooked on it. I did it because everybody else did it. You were treated like an outsider if you didn't do it," she added. Now, when cravings hit, she reaches for her nicotine gum and cinnamon stick, aids she recommends to those trying to kick the habit.

At times though, she finds the temptation hard to resist, especially when she's with friends who smoke or when watching her favorite opera, "Carmen." The little character works in a cigarette factory and there's a lot of smoking in the show.

"As much as I enjoy watching 'Carmen,' it bothers me. I keep telling the performers don't inhale you'll ruin your voice," she said.

Bambula said the first thing she would tell someone thinking of giving up cigarettes is this:

"Giving up smoking is very hard. If they don't tell you that they're lying."

She recalled the first two weeks after she smoked her last cigarette on Sept. 24, when she suffered from intense cigarette cravings hour after hour.

"I was used to smoking when I went home, I was used to smoking after dinner, smoking in restaurants while waiting for my food. Those are all hard things to get over. Even today they are," she said.

She admitted it was a lot easier to give up smoking this time because fewer people smoke than they did in 1982.

She said those planning to quit should make sure they incorporate more activity into their life because "cigarettes leave a void."

She has filled that void without reaching for a smoke, and hopes she has kicked the habit for good.

Fall: time of change

The feller on Tierra Blanca Creek wanted to know if you noticed that when you bounce a check at the bank they charge you more of what they already know you don't have?

Summer's quickly coming to a close and fall is yawning it's wake-up time. Tradition tells us that the first of the year is the time for change, but practical folks know it's this time of the year most change occurs. We change from hot to mild, no school to school, short sleeves to longer, green leaves to orange, daylight savings to standard time, baseball to football. Jobs change and job descriptions change. Vacation breaks are reduced to coffee breaks. Kids around are now kids off at college. The preacher hollering about something - well, some things never change.

With all the changes we endure, you would think we would get a little used to it. We don't take changes too well too often, unfortunately. You would think with all the changes in life we would learn how to do them a little better. How do we face and make changes which are beneficial to almost everyone?

Think about change for a moment - the coin kind. How do you get that kind of change? Most of us don't go to the bank and trade in currency for change to have in our pockets. We spend currency at the restaurant, the Pak-a-Sak, or the grocery store and pocket the change. To get change, you spend. If someone asks for some change to buy a Coke, you may have it if you have spent some money already.

If you are going to lead your family, your business, your school, your church or your community and you know some change is going to have to be made, make sure you have spent some currency to have the change to make. Spend some of the currency of caring. Spend some ten-spots of trust. Spend the currency of time and listen. Spend you love and energy giving to the people involved and they will put change "in your pocket," so to speak. Then when it comes time to make the change, your pockets will be full and folks will more readily accept the change you give because you have spent time loving, listening and showing you have their best interest at your heart. You can't fake that. You can't always make change easily. But you can spend what it takes creating an atmosphere of change which benefits all.

Just trying to help.

Not in our backyard

Hereford Mayor Bob Josseland and the City Council are to be commended for leadership in renouncing President Clinton's American Heritage River Initiative, a proposal which many consider a backdoor assault on private property in the guise of protecting and improving the health of American rivers.

The city government of Hereford has taken the opportunity to sign a resolution of non-support for the American Heritage Rivers Initiative.

The resolution states in part: "... We oppose the intervention of the federal government, agencies and employees into our local zoning, planning, land use and water authority.

"We will not submit nor support any petition for a federal designation of a river in our community for the American Heritage Rivers Initiative, nor shall we enter into any agreement with the federal government concerning the same federal designation within the boundaries of our jurisdiction."

The American Heritage Rivers Initiative guidelines so far have been vague and open-ended. It is touted as grassroots driven, but with the inclusion of groups (non-governmental) such as American Rivers, Nature Conservancy and the Sierra Club, it doesn't seem likely that local residents are expected to provide the impetus for nominating their own rivers to the program.

An example of how far afield the grassroots notion is: Texas Land Commissioner Gary Mauro jumped right in to nominate the entire Rio Grande, from Brownsville to El Paso. That can hardly be construed as locally inspired.

Opposition to the government's latest land grab scheme has been widespread, leading Kathleen McGinty, chair of the Council on Environmental Quality, to express feelings of bewilderment and dismay that the public has somehow detected nefarious dealings afoot.

Perhaps she believes Americans have forgotten President Clinton's election year stealth attack on Utah when he invoked the 91-year-old Antiquities Act to lock up 1.7 million acres, rich in reserves of low sulphur coal.

The American Heritage Rivers Initiative will create a new federal nexus requiring consideration of effects taken by federal officials upon the American Heritage Rivers. Federal action covers a broad array of activities and will probably have a detrimental impact on private property owners in that the nexus establishes the right of the lead agency to intervene and argue against any development which it claims could adversely affect an American Heritage River. This may not be confined to public areas, but it could very well include private projects on private land using private funds.

This program is further undesirable because it will expose property owners to increased trespass by the general public in addition to unauthorized collection and dissemination of environmental data, harassment from radical environmental groups, plus higher overall costs.

Let there be doubt about the dimensions of the program, quoting the Federal Register notice:

"... scope of the area covered by nomination may include an entire watershed, the length of an entire river, or a short stretch of river."

It doesn't take much imagination to realize the exercise of federal responsibilities will emphasize regulations and restrictions for dairies, feedyards, farm and ranch operations in upstream watersheds, because, according Karen Hobbs of Council on Environmental Quality, "We all know that agriculture negatively impacts water quality."

It is expected that President Clinton will sign his initiative into life through executive order, thus bypassing Congress, which has not approved the major federal action as required by the National Environmental Policy Act, nor has it appropriated funds to carry out its programs.

Our city government has struck a blow for freedom and it is hoped that communities across Texas will follow suit by renouncing any attempts from Washington to abrogate the power of the people.

Reflections

By Don Cooper

Jack, Zoe are missed

One of our "children" is no longer with us. Zoe, our little gray cat with the white mustache, is a traffic fatality. A few days ago, she ventured out of the yard into the street and was run over. It hurt to lose her because she was one of our favorites. She was an independent little creature, one who tolerated Annette and me. We thought she was our pet, but I wouldn't be surprised if it weren't the other way around.

Zoe was just like her father, Jack, a one-eyed old tomcat with a cauliflower ear and a dyspeptic personality. Jack just showed up one day, and I don't think I've ever seen an uglier cat.

If a cat could be a punch-drunk stumblebum, Jack certainly fit the bill. His ears were permanently flattened; his body was covered with scars; he hobbled along as if he had arthritis and occasionally stumbled when he lost his balance. Because he was missing an eye, Annette and I started calling him "One-eyed Jack" after a Marlon Brando movie character.

When I looked at Jack, I thought about an old boxer that I used to see shuffling up and down the streets in Washington, D.C. In his prime, the old boxer was a feared heavyweight, a fighter whose speed and power was so awesome that the reigning champion and top contenders dodged him. Finally, after he had slowed and his punch lost its sting, he got a shot at the title, but it was too late.

After that one shot at a title, he became a punching bag for young fighters seeking to build up a reputation. Those last years of absorbing thousands of punches took their toll and when he retired, he was punchdrunk and broke. He was forced to eke out a living as a shoeshine man on the streets of the capital. I remember seeing him shuffling along the sidewalk, carrying a shine kit emblazoned with "Hurykane," a misspelling of his ring name.

That's who I thought of when I looked at Jack. The old cat looked like he'd been in hundreds of fights and lost most of them.

At first Jack was wary, staying well away from us. But after we began putting a dish of food on the front porch for him, he overcame some of his wariness and would let us scratch his head. He even seemed to enjoy the human touch, as he would arch his back and push his head against my hand. With a shudder, I'd rub Jack's head, trying to ignore the sores and scabs.

We thought about his missing eye, which might be infected. We also decided that because Jack apparently had picked us as his people, we wanted to keep him out of fights, which he surely would lose, with the other neighborhood tomcats.

A few days later, moving very cautiously, we maneuvered Jack into a pet carrier and took him to the veterinarian for a rabies shot, an examination of the damaged eye - and a neutering.

Jack had to stay overnight at the vet's clinic after his surgery. The next afternoon when I went to pick him up, the vet's assistant said, "You go get him out of the cage."

"Why?"

"When we took him out of that carrier yesterday, he went ballistic. We had to wrap a towel around him to give him a shot," she said, then motioned for me to follow her and we went down the hallway and into a room lined with cages.

Stopping in front of one of the cages, she crossed her arms and said, "He's in here."

Her eyes opened wide when I reached inside the cage, pulled out Jack and put him in the pet carrier.

"I don't believe it," she said. "He would have tried to take my hand off."

"He knows me," I said.

A few weeks after his surgery, Jack decided he wanted to spend his days inside the house, not on the porch. It must have been the East Texas summer heat. Annette and I had to pick him up and carry him outside, because he wouldn't leave. He had gotten like the main character in the play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner." We even thought about changing his name to "Alexander" after Alexander Woollcott, the man who really did come to dinner at playwright George S. Kaufman's home and stayed - and stayed.

But we didn't, so he stayed Jack, the wannabe housecat.

Jack's arthritic old legs, and probably his poor depth perception caused by his missing eye, caused him to miss now and then when he tried to jump up on the porch, so he generally went around to the front and walked up the steps rather than suffer embarrassment by jumping, missing and having to take a second jump to get up on the porch. Jack did have his pride.

He even began grooming himself. However, he deserved praise for the effort, not the results. Jack's hair stuck out in all directions, leaving his appearance no better than when he started.

But one thing that Jack wouldn't attempt to clean was his feet. He had what were supposed to be white paws, but they were a rust color from all the reddish dirt that covered them.

Annette and I finally gave up and let Ol' Jack stay inside and sleep on the floor in front of the refrigerator. He managed to get fat and contented, while remaining ugly - and with dirty feet.

After living on our porch, in our house and in our hearts for several months, Jack began to get feeble and could walk very far without becoming exhausted. One day, after having spent nearly a week just sleeping in the kitchen, Jack got up and went to the door and meowed, asking one of us to let him out.

He went down the front steps and headed toward the dense undergrowth in a gully to the side of our house. We never saw him again. He disappeared like he had arrived - unexpectedly.

I guess Jack didn't want to die inside. But we still miss him - and we miss Zoe.

What Others Are Saying

By The Associated Press
A sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Waco Tribune-Herald on need for state judicial reform:

A recent decision by the Texas Supreme Court demonstrates the need for judicial reform and improvements in Texas' Public Information Act.

At the same time, the justices have managed to give the appearance that they have something to hide.

The issue that caused all the commotion was the Supreme Court's unusual per curiam opinion that contradicted an opinion by Attorney General Dan Morales regarding access to the on-the-job phone records of the justices.

Last month the attorney general, who normally has the final word in questions of open records, issued an opinion that said the telephone and fax records of the Supreme Court were public records and should be turned over to Texans for Public Justice, a consumer group that requested the records.

In a highly unusual move, the Supreme Court issued its own opinion that said its phone and fax records are not subject to public inspection. The justices noted that the state's open records law specifically excludes the judiciary in an effort to maintain judicial independence.

Morales took the judiciary's exemption into account but made a reasonable conclusion that there was an obvious difference between the judiciary's publicly financed administrative records and those records pertaining to judicial deliberations.

The Supreme Court justices saw no distinction between their administrative records and the records pertaining to their judicial decision-making.

Even if the justices happen to be correct in their interpretation of the open records law, nothing prevents them from voluntarily turning over the administrative records of their phone and fax calls. But they also refused that option, which gives the obvious appearance that the records of their on-the-job phone calls contain information they want to hide from the public.

The justices argued that public inspection of their administrative records could lead to "political criticism" that could impinge on their independence.

That's a ridiculous argument because Texas Supreme Court justices are politicians. They shouldn't be, but they are. Justices run political campaigns as announced candidates for political parties. They solicit hundreds of thousands of dollars from lawyers, law firms and corporations that bring cases worth fortunes before the court.

It's easy to imagine how phone records that gave the appearance of justices mixing their judicial deliberations with their personal and political considerations could lead to some richly deserved "political criticism."

The next session of the Legislature should amend the Texas Public Information Act to specifically identify the judiciary's administrative records as open to the public. Lawmakers also should again tackle judicial reforms that remove politics from the selection of Texas judges and justices. In the meantime, the Supreme Court should show it has nothing to hide by voluntarily opening its administrative records to the public.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Congress' fall agenda:

As much as we might like to see campaign finance reforms on the fall agenda for Congress, it is a subject that still will be drowned out by hearings and finger-pointing.

But Washington will find other things to do now that the budget outline and a tax bill have been agreed upon in a show of harmony and bipartisanship that is only skin deep. In many cases, Congress will deal this fall with contentious issues that we might have thought we settled.

Welfare, for instance. There are disagreements about how much people coming off welfare should be

Congressional leaders talking adjournment

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON - Congress is just back from a month-long summer vacation and already leaders are talking about calling it quits for the year.

Their reasoning is simple: Enacting the first balanced-budget plan in three decades and the biggest tax break in 16 years - as Congress did right before the August recess - are hard acts to follow.

So why bother?

All Congress really needs to do is keep the government from shutting down, handle a few other high-priority items and adjourn.

Leaders are talking about Oct. 31 as an adjournment target.

It could mean that some high-profile proposals, like the Clinton administration's "fast-track" trade bill, tobacco-litigation legislation and campaign-finance overhaul may wind up on a side track instead.

"It is certainly our goal and objective ... to be done by the 31st of October. There is no reason why that can't happen," House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said Tuesday.

Of course, keeping the government, or parts of it, from shutting down has proven to be no mean chore in the past. And not one of the 13 appropriations bills needed to fund the government in fiscal 1998 - which begins in just 27 days - has been enacted.

Inside Politics

By Tom Raum

Incumbents don't need to be reminded of the bitter winter of 1995-96, when partisan budget battles resulted in two separate partial government shutdowns. Although Republicans took most of the political heat for those disruptions, neither party wants another shutdown. It would sour the celebration of the budget accord - right before a midterm election season that sees the entire House and a third of the Senate up for re-election.

New figures released Tuesday may have bolstered the case for Congress to rest on its laurels. The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office said the budget-balancing package and a continued strong economy should produce a $32 billion federal surplus in 2002 and a $86 billion one by 2007.

Recent developments make even a partial government shutdown unlikely this year.

The budget accord resolved most of the major spending disputes between President Clinton and the GOP Congress.

And all 13 bills are now moving along. Each chamber has passed seven of them, with more votes expected this week.

"The budget agreement worked. We now know what the (spending) targets are," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said.

Furthermore, the new line-item-veto legislation gives Clinton another tool to cancel individual projects or spending items without having to veto an entire appropriations bill.

That doesn't mean all 13 spending bills will be passed by Oct. 1.

GOP leaders suggest a stopgap measure still may be needed to keep some agencies operating in October while the appropriations measures are completed.

But few think such a temporary spending bill will be government-wide, as it was in 1995-96.

Certain fights loom over welfare-to-work rules, methods for the 2000 national census and whether to allow parents to use tax-free Individual Retirement Accounts for private-school tuition.

But leaders seem generally pleased with progress.

Army told reporters Tuesday that a controversial GOP measure - to prevent shutdowns by requiring that agencies denied fiscal 1998 funds keep operating on previous-year levels - now might not even be necessary, or worth the fight.

Republicans tried to attach it to last spring's emergency flood relief bill for the Dakotas - and got burned again in public opinion polls.

Nor do leaders seem in any rush to air new initiatives.

"I'm not interested in creating confrontational issues - or avoiding them," Lott said.

On campaign-finance reform, for instance, the Senate GOP leader said he had attended "two dozen events in my state" during the August recess "and not one person asked me about campaign finance reform."

And both Lott and Arney suggested Tuesday that Clinton could run into big trouble on the fast-track trade bill if it contains too many labor and environmental restrictions.

The measure, expected later this month, would allow the extension of the North American Free Trade Agreement to Chile and give Clinton expedited authority to negotiate free trade pacts with other countries.

"If the president keeps it clean, it will go straight through," Arney said. Otherwise, "it could bog down."

For the moment, at least, members returning from their August recess seem mostly interested in a fast track home again.

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Another federal budget, another year without a pay raise for federal judges?

It's starting to look that way. As the saying goes, that's politics. Under current law, increasing judicial salaries would require members of Congress to vote themselves a raise, too. And they worry about how that would play with voters back home.

The House of Representatives is set to consider the federal court system's budget - with no money for raises - next week.

An already-passed Senate appropriations bill would separate judicial and congressional pay raises by letting judges get the annual cost-of-living increases given to most federal employees. Doing so, however, would leave lawmakers even less political cover if and when they vote themselves raises.

The best hope for judges to catch up and then keep up with inflation is the House-Senate conference committee, where differences in the appropriations packages will be reconciled.

The U.S. Judicial Conference, which sets policy for the federal courts, has been seeking what it calls "delinkage" - separating judicial and congressional pay raises - and a 9.6 percent pay hike to cover the lost years. Orrin Hatch, Republican chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, is the most prominent champion of both measures.

"It goes beyond money and to the independence of the judiciary," says Barefoot Sanders, a veteran federal trial judge in Dallas who leads a Judicial Conference committee involved in the pay-increase quest. "We always will be able to find people to take such prestigious jobs, but it is becoming more difficult to get them to stay on."

The notion that all federal judges are independently wealthy because they once had lucrative law practices is not true, Sanders says. And, he adds, the American public would not want such a monolithic federal bench.

It's not that the federal judiciary today is subsisting on poverty wages. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist's job pays $171,500 a year, and his eight Supreme Court colleagues each earn $164,000.

The salary for appellate judges is $141,700, and trial judges get the same $133,600-a-year pay that members of Congress collect.

But federal court officials say a $171,500 salary in 1993 had lost $47,826 in purchasing power by the end of last year; a $133,600 salary had lost $37,258 to inflation. Those calculations are based on Consumer Price Index percentage changes for all urban areas.

Tying judicial pay increases to those of most lower-level federal employees would give judges a 2.8 percent cost-of-living adjustment for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

And it also would get judges out of the political line of fire, Sanders says.

"It's unseemly for judges to be supplicants before the Congress every year, asking for a pay raise," he says. "Delinkage of judicial and congressional salaries would put an end to that. That's really what we'd like to nail down."

What are the chances the congressional conference committee will bear good news for judges? Federal court officials and their allies on Capitol Hill say it's too close to call.

Richard Carelli covers the Supreme Court and legal issues for The Associated Press.

Victims' rights amendment now pushed

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. - George and Madeline Calloway thought their son's killer would stay locked up for at least five years.

Instead, he spent 71 days in jail and was freed after a judge held a hearing to reconsider the sentence in the manslaughter case.

Nobody told the Calloways about the hearing. They were outraged that they didn't have a chance to speak out against the release of Christopher Kelly for the 1993 shooting death of their 22-year-old son, Earl, in a quarrel over money.

The Calloways felt victimized again, this time by the criminal justice system.

"It's like being raped over and over," Mrs. Calloway said.

The Calloways are among the ranks of violent crime victims disgruntled with a justice system that they believe gives more rights to defendants.

The only way to restore balance, advocates of victims' rights say, is to guarantee in the U.S. Constitution that victims receive notification of all court proceedings and plea bargains and the opportunity to address the court at sentencing.

After persuading 29 states to adopt their own constitutional amendments, victims' rights advocates are renewing their push to amend the U.S. Constitution. A coalition called the National Victims Constitutional Amendment Network is in the forefront of the drive.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has introduced the amendment in the House, but also has indicated he may opt for the more modest approach of changing existing law.

That route, Hyde said, "is a lot easier" than trying to amend the Constitution, which requires the approval of two-thirds of the House and Senate and 38 state legislatures.

Negotiators have been working privately to find common ground in wording the amendment. The proposal has gone through nearly 50 drafts in the Senate, partly aimed at winning the backing of Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. The amendment is sponsored there by Sens. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Jon Kyl, R-Ariz.

The Calloways and other amendment supporters have allies in President Clinton and Attorney General Janet Reno and backing by both Republicans and Democrats in their 1996 national platforms. In February, the National Governors' Association endorsed the amendment.

Association endorsed the amendment.

In addition, the Oklahoma City bombing trial helped highlight some of the victims' complaints. A Pennsylvania newspaper, The Mercury of Pottstown, launched a national drive this summer to gather 1 million signatures of support.

Despite such support, the quest for a 28th Amendment won't be easy.

"I think we can handle victims' rights without having a constitutional amendment," said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

TWO TOWNS WILLING TO TAKE LIQUOR NAMES

GRANVILLE, N.D. (AP) - Two rural hamlets in the middle of this cold state are fighting for the name McGillicuddy City, and the $100,000 that comes with it.

Granville and Streeter, each with fewer than 250 people, are finalists in a contest that would change the winner's name to honor Dr. McGillicuddy's, a brand of schnapps made in New Orleans.

Officials from Sazarc Co., the liquor's manufacturer, say they have one main requirement: The town must be cold and snowy, the right kind of weather for a shot of the liquor. The town also needs to have at least one bar, and some lodgings for rent.

With winter bringing temperatures down to 30 below and as much as 8 feet of snow, both towns pass the test. They beat two other North Dakota towns as well as communities in Minnesota and California.

Granville wants to build a new civic center and gym for $600,000, so the cash would help.

"If we get it, fine," said Hilman Ullard, Granville's mayor. "If we don't, well, we gave it a shot anyway."

Fall TV season could be pretty good

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer
 Bottom line: This could turn out to be a pretty good season. Some solid new dramas. A handful of promising comedies. Plus ABC's resurrection of "The Wonderful World of Disney" and the arrival of Bryant Gumbel on CBS with his new magazine.

There's a lot to sift through as the 1997-98 season kicks off - which it does officially Sept. 22, although some programs have premiered already, and some won't be seen until November. By our count there are 35 new series, though your mileage may vary. After all, "new" becomes a relative term when shows are vaulting like jackrabbits from one network to another (ABC's veteran "Family Matters" is new on CBS), and when other shows are renewing themselves with revamped concepts (NBC's "The Naked Truth" will be unveiling its third variation in as many seasons).

As for sitcoms, we count 20. A big number like that may seem a comfort. We could use some cheering up. On the other hand, some of the "humor" may come across as less funny than eerily ripped from the headlines. For instance, the title character of ABC's "Teen Angel" dies after eating a hamburger. And in its first episode, the chauffeur on NBC's "Veronica's Closet" is drunk when he arrives to pick up Veronica ("I'm wearing two different shoes").

Meanwhile, the new dramas, even sight unseen, have some viewers riled up. They protest that CBS' "Brooklyn South" is too violent, and that ABC's "Nothing Sacred" is too well, un-sacred. And did we mention (warning, warning!) that Andrew Dice Clay is back on TV in "Hitz," a UPN sitcom?

FARM AID COMES HOME TO TEXAS
DALLAS (AP) - Willie Nelson is bringing his campaign to benefit family farmers home to Texas this year. The singer announced Thursday his Oct. 4 Farm Aid '97 fund-raising concert will be at Texas Stadium, donated for the day by Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones.

"We're glad to bring Farm Aid back to Texas, my home, and an area with a proud tradition of hard-working men and women who struggle every day to make a living on the land," Nelson said.

The 12-hour music lineup starting at 11 a.m. includes Leon Russell, Joe Ely, Asleep at the Wheel and David Allen Coe. Other headliners are John Mellencamp, Neil Young, John Fogerty, Dave Matthews Band, The Allman Brothers Band and Nelson himself.

Since Farm Aid was founded by Nelson, Mellencamp and Young in 1985, nine benefits have been staged, including two others in Texas. The organization has given more than $13 million to farm organizations and service agencies.

Did Beethoven write a 10th Symphony?

WASHINGTON (AP) - It's one of the great mysteries of music. Did Ludwig van Beethoven complete a Tenth Symphony?

Tonight, with the help of a British musicologist, the National Symphony Orchestra will open a three-week Beethoven festival by giving a Washington audience a hint of what that symphony may have sounded like.

"It's not Beethoven," National Symphony conductor Leonard Slatkin quickly concedes. "All it does is bring to light some of the materials Beethoven had in mind. I'm sure if Beethoven had finished it, we'd have something quite different."

The pulled-together piece comes courtesy of Beethoven authority Barry Cooper, who spent five years reconstructing and orchestrating the first movement from sketches in more than 8,000 pages of the composer's notebooks.

"Until the 1980s, Beethoven's Tenth Symphony was regarded as an elusive, legendary work that many did not believe had ever existed except, perhaps, inside Beethoven's head, and no sketches had been identified with any certainty as belonging to it," Cooper wrote.

The beginning sounds familiar to many. Beethoven, who sometimes recycled his melodies, adapted a theme from the second movement of a well-known piano sonata, the Pathétique, that he had written many years before.

Slatkin has made some changes in Cooper's 13-minute piece. "Cooper had a boom-boom in there (at the end) that didn't seem quite right," Slatkin said, explaining why he cut the last two measures.

Cooper wrote that what he had done was "not a new Beethoven symphony as such, but a kind of artist's impression of the first movement. It is probably fairly close to what he had in mind."

Beethoven had the Tenth in mind less than a week before his death. Anton Schindler, his first biographer, wrote that he asked to have the sketches brought to him and talked about them at length. But no full score has ever been found.

"There are still a couple of Beethoven's notebooks missing and anything may turn up," Cooper said in a recent interview, "but it's not likely that the symphony can be completed."

Critics have found Cooper's work interesting but one British scholar, Robert Winter, was not impressed. "The miracle is how mundane Beethoven's early concept sketches for a project are," Winter wrote in the Journal of the Royal Musical Association. "The premise that if you know Beethoven's style you can construct from concept sketches is flawed. It's grossly distorting to call this music in any way Beethoven's, and I think it clouds the picture of his later style."

70,000 gun sales blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) - Police background checks on 2.6 million would-be handgun buyers last year prevented the sales of 70,000 guns, more than two-thirds of them sought by people convicted or charged with felonies, the Justice Department said Thursday.

Since the Brady Act requiring such checks took effect in early 1994 through 1996, about 250,000 handgun and long gun sales, were blocked under that law or state background check laws, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics found. They included 173,000 handgun sales, which the report focused on.

"It's extremely heartening to demonstrate again that the Brady law is one of the great legislative successes of the '90s," said Naomi Paiss, spokeswoman for Handgun Control Inc., which led the battle to get the legislation enacted.

But the National Rifle Association, which supports only instant checks, criticized the lack of prosecution of those who try to buy guns illegally.

"Excusing 250,000 criminals from a prison term is hardly a reason for celebration," said NRA spokesman Tom Wyld. "We believe that the instant check remains the superior system in part because the instant check facilitates the instant apprehension of a prohibited person. ... The wait-based system prompts flight."

The Supreme Court ruled in June that the federal government could not force state and local authorities to conduct Brady's background checks, but left intact its five-day waiting period for a handgun purchase. Most law enforcement officials in the 23 states affected - states that lack their own background check laws - have continued the checks.

Of the 70,000 block handgun sales last year, about 47,000 - or 67.8 percent - involved buyers convicted of a felony or charged with one, the bureau said.

An additional 6 percent were fugitives from justice, 6.2 percent were prohibited by state or local law from buying guns, 3.9 percent were subjects of restraining orders, 1.5 percent were mentally ill or disabled and 1.2 percent were drug addicts.

But Cooper maintains that the 200 bars he found useful for the first movement, sketched by Beethoven over a dozen years, are all properly related.

Cooper's version got its first performance in 1988 by the London Symphony Orchestra, to which Beethoven had twice promised the work more than 150 years before.

Chiropractic Care Q & A

Q: The pain from my neck injury in a car wreck is gone but my chiropractor wants me to continue treatment. Is this necessary?

A: Soft tissue injuries go through three phases. The first treatment focuses on pain relief. The second phase is the healing segment where the doctor is working to restore strength and flexibility. This important phase can range from 6-12 weeks and is critical to avoiding re-injury. Phase three, which rarely involves pain, includes specific exercises recommended by your doctor.

Q: A chiropractor I'm seeing wants me to diet in connection to my low back pain. What do nutrition or dieting have to do with my condition?

A: Your weight is a key factor in your health and obesity places added stress on the discs that cushion the spine as well as causing a higher proportion of low back, hip, knee, and ankle joint problems as well as foot pain. Your nutritional profile also has a profound impact on your health. For instance, studies show that a chromium deficiency is a leading factor in chronic pain. It sounds like your doctor is addressing your overall health.

Hall leads Bank One

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Walter Hall knows from his short time on the Senior PGA Tour that anything can happen over the course of 54 holes.

Hall, who turned 50 on June 12, shared the lead going into the final round of the Northville Long Island Classic in August and faltered to a tie for 11th.

"Northville was a learning experience," said Hall, who headed into today's second round of the Bank One Classic with a one-stroke lead after an opening 66. "I got off to a bad start on Sunday and learned my mistakes. I can't control what everyone else does, only my own game."

Hall, a sales manager for an appliance firm in North Carolina before turning pro in 1994, prepared well for the senior tour. He played on the Asian tour in 1994 and 1995 and on the Hooters Tour in 1996 and the first half of this year.

Sanders leaves

CINCINNATI (AP) — Deion Sanders' dressing cubicle had just been cleaned out.

All that Prime Time left behind was one bat, some batting gloves, several nearly empty bottles of lotions, two towels, a few papers, a Cincinnati Reds team photo and one of his baseball cards.

Sanders left the Reds shortly after their 8-6 victory Friday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates. With the club's permission, he's off to play football full-time for the Dallas Cowboys.

The Reds sold 20,622 tickets for Sanders' final game — a couple thousands below average but typical for a high school football Friday night.

Griffey Jr. hits 49th

DETROIT (AP) — With each swing, Ken Griffey Jr. seems to break open two races — the chase for the AL West title and the contest for the league's MVP award.

And with every home run, he takes on an even greater challenge — the pursuit of history.

Griffey hit his 49th homer Friday night, tying a career high set last season and sending Seattle past the Minnesota Twins 10-6. The win increased the Mariners' division lead to four games over struggling Anaheim, which lost 6-1 at Detroit.

Griffey's solo shot in the first inning marked his third home run in two days at the Metrodome, and his sixth homer in four games.

On deck to become the 15th major leaguer to hit 50 in a season, he needs 13 home runs in the final 21 games to break Roger Maris' record of 61 in 1961.

Woods misses cut

MONTREAL (AP) — Rocco Mediate took the lead. Tiger Woods took the plane home. It was difficult to tell which was the bigger news in the Canadian Open.

Mediate, trying for his first victory since back surgery in 1994, was at 5-under-par 135 after 36 holes on a Royal Montreal Golf Club tailored with the narrow fairways and deep rough of a U.S. Open course.

Woods, who triple-bogeyed the first hole, shot a 6-over-par 76 Friday and stumbled in at 146 to miss the cut for the first time in his pro career.

"It had to happen," Woods said. "I can't play my entire career without missing a cut."

Mediate, who shot a 68, put up his leading score early in the day then watched as everyone fell victim to the swirling wind that plopped shots into the penalizing rough.

"These are definitely major championship conditions. It is a national championship. I wore out all kinds of 3- and 4-irons," he said about the six-par-4s that measured over 430 yards and played longer than that because of the wind.

Aikman appreciates injury-free year, so far

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING (AP) — Troy Aikman reads the injury reports and knows he is just one blindside blitz from joining the ranks.

That's why he appreciates games like last Sunday's, when he was knocked down just once and never sacked during 30 pass attempts in the Dallas Cowboys' 37-7 romp over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

It's called a "rocking chair" game. It's also a good way for Mark

Tuinei, Nate Newton, Clay Shiver, Larry Allen and Erik Williams to get very expensive Christmas presents this December.

"I've said for a long time, and Emmitt Smith has joined me, that over the last five years we've had the best offensive line in football," Aikman said. "They set the tempo for us offensively. I appreciate them. It's why they always get something nice from me every Christmas."

Aikman appreciates the protection because of the way he was introduced to the NFL. In 1990, his second year in the league, Aikman was sacked 39 times for 288 yards in losses. In 1991 he went down 32 times for 224 yards. He had one game against Philadelphia where he was sacked 11 times.

These totals dropped off once the Cowboys found a cohesive offensive line. Still, in his career, Aikman has been sacked 185 times for 1,200 yards in losses. That's a lot of time at the bottom of a pile.

Aikman also has had all kinds of knee and arm injuries plus six concussions in pro football, college and high school.

He's had two relatively injury-free years, but he knows what Steve Young of the San Francisco 49ers and other quarterbacks running for their lives are going through. On Sunday, Young suffered his third concussion over the last 10 months.

Roger Staubach retired as quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys after 11 concussions. Doctors told him he might be permanently added if he sustained another blow to the head.

"I've had six concussions and I've had no post-concussion effects but to be honest if I receive another one I would be concerned," Aikman said. "You never know what the next one will bring. I've been told that the more you have the more susceptible to permanent injury you become."

"Injuries are a big part of the game, as unfortunate as it is," Aikman said. "You just have to try to deal with it. But it's hard in the age of the salary cap."

Again the big play killed the Hereford Whitefaces.

A stingy Hereford defense only surrendered 198 total yards to the Amarillo Tascosa Rebels, but 69 of those yards proved to be the difference.

The Rebels got the only big play they needed and hung on to shutout the Whitefaces 6-0 Friday night at Whiteface Stadium.

"It killed us," said Hereford head coach Craig Yenzen, referring to the 69-yard pass from Tascosa senior quarterback Ryan Jackson to tight end Rob Mansfield late in the first quarter. The Rebels scored two plays later on a one-yard quarterback sneak by Jackson.

"They ran a deep pass and we weren't keying the way we need to, (Mansfield) slipped right passed us," Yenzen said.

The one play tarnished an otherwise superb defensive performance by the Whitefaces. The

Hingis, Williams reach finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Not yet old enough for the high school prom, Martina Hingis and Venus Williams will hold their own party at the U.S. Open.

The youngest Grand Slam finalists in Open era history, Hingis and Williams will battle in the new Arthur Ashe Stadium on Sunday for the women's singles crown. Oh, yeah, and the $650,000 that goes to the winner.

Hingis at 16 years, 11 months old is seeking a third Grand Slam tournament singles title of 1997, a trophy to go along with those from the Australian Open and Wimbledon. Williams, the "old" member of the pair at 17 years, 3 months, is going for her first professional title of any kind.

"This is a chance of a lifetime, a tournament of a lifetime," Williams said Friday after clinching a spot in the final with a 7-6 (7-5), 4-6, 7-6 (9-7) victory over 11th-seeded Irina Spirlea. "I've done well.

"I wouldn't be angry if I didn't win. But I'm not going to go out there and be afraid. I won't let that happen."

Hingis, who advanced by beating No. 6 Lindsay Davenport 6-2, 6-4, gaining a measure of revenge for one of her two losses this year, agreed somewhat with Williams.

"I'm still 16," she reminded her audience of reporters. "If I don't win this time, I have so many years in front of me to win it hopefully next year or in the next years."

The men's final field was to be decided today when Jonas Bjorkman took on Greg Rusedski, followed by second-seeded Michael Chang against No. 13 Patrick Rafter. The men's final will follow the women's title match Sunday.

Williams came into the Open with very few matches, but a ton of hype. She has gained experience, learned a lot about the game and answered her critics about the way she was brought up in the game.

"I've learned a lot of things in this Open," she said. "I've learned to put more balls in play, not to go for winners so prematurely, not to rush things."

She put the lessons of her first five-victories into practice against Spirlea, whose penchant for drop shots played right into Williams' speed and power.

"I'm going to get the drop shot," Williams said, "that's all there is to it. I love people that hit drop shots on me."

While Spirlea, who knocked two-time champion Monica Seles out of the tournament in the quarterfinals, hit more winners than Williams — 56 to 34 — she also had a lot more unforced errors — 53 to 38 — and an uncounted number of mental blunders.

At 6-foot-2, the gangly Williams sports a confidence that borders on cockiness. On a changeover after the seventh game of the second set, the two bumped into each other as they walked to their chairs.

"I was not going to move," Spirlea said. "She never tried to turn. I wanted to see if she would turn, and she didn't."

Williams shrugged off the confrontation.

"I'm not having any injury from this."

Chang continues payback tennis in U.S. Open play

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Chang doesn't get angry. He gets even.

Chang has been playing payback tennis this summer, reversing losses the next time he met opponents. He lost to Todd Woodbridge at Wimbledon and turned that around at the Hamlet Cup. He lost to Gustavo Kuerten in Montreal and then beat him at Cincinnati.

What does that mean today for Patrick Rafter, meeting Chang in the semifinals of the U.S. Open after beating him in their last meeting, a week before the Open? Trouble, perhaps.

The other semifinal matches two unseeded players, hard-serving Greg Rusedski, a transplanted Canadian now living in Britain, against Swede Jonas Bjorkman.

Chang, No. 2 in the world, knows No. 15 Rafter will be a challenge.

"I'm looking forward to it," Chang said. "Patrick has been playing some very tough tennis I lost to him a couple weeks ago at the Hamlet. He's obviously carried that tennis into the Open. I think it's going to be a tough match. It's never an easy match against Patrick. It's going to be important for me to come out and play well and be focused."

It has not been easy for him to do that ever since inheriting the favorite's role following the elimination of No. 1 Pete Sampras. He struggled through a pair of five-set victories, coming within two points of losing to Cedric Pioline and then blowing a two-set lead against Marcelo Rios.

Chang admitted after the Rios match that he has been playing apprehensive tennis.

New name, same coach

Kitten, Lady Whitefaces have eyes open as they defend 4A volleyball title

By PAUL MASON
Special to the Brand

In 1996, Brenda Reeh, head volleyball coach and girls athletic director at Hereford High School, took the Lady Whitefaces all the way to the 4A volleyball finals — and won.

Along the way, the Lady Whitefaces compiled a record of 34-1. The title was the first-ever University Interscholastic League championship for the school.

This year's coach, Brenda Kitten, has some big shoes to fill.

Fortunately, the shoes are her own. Following the marriage of Brenda Reeh to Michael Kitten, she's now Brenda Kitten.

Kitten's priorities in directing a new Lady Whiteface squad is still a labor of sweat and tears. Kitten lost more than half of her starters to graduation, including three-time all-state hitter Danielle Cornelius.

But even in a rebuilding year, Hereford volleyball brings high expectations.

Kitten arrived in Hereford after graduating from Texas Tech in 1984 and spent her first year at the junior-high level. The following year she became the head volleyball coach at Hereford High School.

Following a dismal record of 14-52 her first three years, Kitten turned the program around to become one of the premier programs in the state. Her teams have earned playoff berths in each of the last nine seasons with a 228-54 record.

Now in her 13th season as head coach, Kitten's latest edition of the Lady Whitefaces were 8-3 prior to the Seminole tournament Friday and Saturday.

That's a good start by most teams' standards, but a disappointment to many of the players.

"We seem to play hot and cold," said Julie Rampley, a 5-9 senior middle blocker.

Kitten said that inconsistency is a problem, probably because many players now have different roles.

Seniors Kendra Wright, Katie Betzen, Briar Baker, Meredith Tabor, Kate Denison, Jamie Marquez and Stacie Betzen must provide leadership, according to Kitten.

"The first couple of weeks, everyone was looking around for direction. Now we have more occasions of players coming forward and taking charge," Kitten said.

Four juniors and one sophomore complete the team. The juniors are Christy Schumacher, Makesha Rives, Lyndi Carlike and Kristin Fangman. The lone sophomore is Tori Walker.

"This year's team, without the big middle hitter, will have to keep the ball in play and play defensively," Kitten said. "Last year and the year before, we set over half of our sets to Danielle. This year's team will have more hitters and will try to keep the opponents guessing."

There appears to be one constant variable in all of Kitten's players -- they know they are the defending state champions in 4A. They don't look beyond district, but their aspirations are higher. Even the younger players carry the proud look of champions.

Kitten is quick to give credit to her players for the success of the program, and her assistants, Kristi Lytal and Pam Dean.

In 1996, they all combined for a championship season and earned Kitten the 1996 Texas High School Volleyball Coach of the Year.

Volleyball fans in Hereford might want to shake Michael Kitten's hand the next time they see him. Maybe, just maybe, the name change might be another anchor for Hereford's continued success in volleyball -- to hold on to this coach who just might be the best high school volleyball coach -- anywhere.

Head volleyball coach Brenda Kitten pours over scouting reports recently in her office at Hereford High School.

that bump," Williams said. "I thought we both weren't looking. I'm sorry she feels that way. It's not a big thing to me."

In the third-set tiebreaker, Spirlea reached double match point at 6-4, only to have Williams the next three points and five of the next six to close out the victory.

"I was thinking about going home," she said, "and I said, 'That's not the right thing to think, Venus.' I had to hold strong. I had to push those thoughts out of the way. She has to win a point to win the match. She had two match points. Somehow, she didn't win them. Somehow, I didn't let her win them."

Davenport broke Hingis in the opening game of their match. When she held at 30 to take a 2-0 lead, it appeared as if Davenport could take her second straight victory from Hingis, whose only other loss this year came to Iva Majoli in the French Open final. But Hingis had her own agenda.

"I was very focused in this match because I lost to her the last time and this is the semifinals of the U.S.

Open," Hingis said.

In a strange sequence, six of the first seven games of the second set went against serve, Hingis holding in the fifth game. After losing her serve six straight times, Davenport finally held in the eighth game of the second set to pull even at 4-4, but Hingis responded by winning eight of the next nine points to gain a berth in the final.

Chang

"I'm not going to kid you or lie to you," Chang said. "It is a bit of a new situation for me because even though I'm No. 2 in the world, I don't normally go into a Grand Slam favored. This Grand Slam was no different until Pete lost. So it is a little bit different for me."

Chang won his lone Slam in 1989 at age 17. He's been to three finals since then, most recently a year ago against Sampras in the Open when he lost in three sets.

Rafter has reached just one Slam semifinal, losing in the French Open this year. He is playing the best tennis of his life, though.

"I enjoyed my tennis a lot more this year," he said. "I worked pretty hard the last few years. I guess the hard work is starting to pay off."

The change, he said came during Davis Cup play in a match against Pioline. "I felt good fighting, confident within myself that I could still fight and have a good chance of winning," he said. "So I thank Cedric Pioline for my success."

Rusedski's success can be traced to his booming serve. He set U.S. Open records with a pair of 141 mph serves in the fourth round against Daniel Vacek and then pushed that to 142 mph in the quarterfinals against Richard Krajicek.

Bjorkman has won four of five previous meetings, all his wins coming on hard court surfaces.

"I still think Greg is playing the same type of game with a big serve, playing serve and volley, still really aggressive," Bjorkman said. "But I think if his serve is not working that good, he doesn't have to be afraid of staying back because he's been improving his game from the baseline."

The Rusedski-Bjorkman match guarantees an unusual Grand Slam sweep. The survivor plays for the championship on Sunday and will join Carlos Moya (Australian), Gustavo Kuerten (French) and Pioline (Wimbledon) as unseeded finalists in this season's Slams. Moya and Pioline lost their finals against Sampras while Kuerten defeated Sergei Bruegera for the French title.

Progress

highlight for the defense was a goal-line stand against the Rebels at the end of the first half.

Tascosa advanced the ball to the Hereford five-yard line with 13 seconds remaining in the second quarter. Facing third and goal, Jackson looked to the end zone, but unable to find an open receiver, he was forced to run the ball. He was smothered at the one-yard line as time ran out in the first half.

"It was tremendous," said Yenzen. "We hadn't had a defensive stand like that in years."

The defensive performance of the Whitefaces was no surprise to Tascosa head coach Doug McCutchen.

"They did an excellent job of scheming us," McCutchen said. "They played well defensively and we expected that. We knew Hereford would be ready to play."

Offensively, the Whitefaces again moved in fits and spurts throughout the night. But despite moving the ball well at times between the 20-yard-lines, Hereford found problems in trying to capitalize.

The Whitefaces elected to go on first down four times deep inside Rebel territory, but could convert only once.

"We had three critical fourth-down situations," said McCutchen. "We're really pleased with the way our defense responded."

Fourth downs weren't the only downfall for Hereford. Penalties, nine for 59 yards, hurt the Whitefaces.

"Penalties," said Yenzen. "They killed us. We had too many penalties in the first half."

The Whitefaces first drive in the opening quarter would be an example of what was to come.

After the Hereford defense forced the Rebels to go three and out on their first series, the Whiteface offense moved 53 yards in 10 plays to the Tascosa nine-yard line. The key play of the drive was a third and 23 32-yard pass from freshman Cody Hodges to senior wide receiver Jeremy High on a fake reverse.

That took the Whitefaces to the nine. A Jeremy Scott run netted nothing, setting up a second and goal.

Then a critical illegal procedure penalty moved the ball back to the 14-yard line. It was one of three procedure penalties on the drive. The effect was major upon the Hereford offense.

Scott lost a yard. With third and goal from the 15, senior quarterback Jeremy Urbanczyk was unable to complete either of two passes to get the Whitefaces into the end zone.

Yenzen said penalties will be one of the areas that will be addressed in practice next week.

"We certainly hope these things will get taken care of, but these guys are getting there," Yenzen said.

The second-year Whiteface coach said Hereford's inability to execute in critical situations also was disappointing. Tascosa also gave the Whitefaces problems on the option with penetration.

"That's the sign of a young offensive line," Yenzen said. "They we're stunting... We've got to get better at that this week. We're going to work on how to effectively attack the stunts."

But Yenzen saw plenty of reason for optimism after the game.

"We were much improved over last week," he said. "I felt like we got better offensive line play. It was 10 times better than last week. We've made another step forward."

"The offensive line came off the ball well. They played their hearts out," said Yenzen.

Yenzen said that any loss is disappointing, but pointed out the Whitefaces are making progress with each passing week.

"I hate losing. The kids hate losing," Yenzen said. "But we're making progress we can build on."

"The reason I feel so good about this team right now is because I saw them come together as a family... We made up for the step backward we took last week."

Tornado-torn town wins game

JARRELL (AP) -- Matt Kitchens ran for three short touchdowns and kicked a 33-yard field goal, leading tornado-torn Jarrell from an 18-0 deficit to a 27-24 victory Friday night over Bruceville-Eddy.

The game came 101 days after the Central Texas town was hit by the state's worst twister in a decade, killing 27 people. Six of those killed would have been part of the Class 2A school's varsity or junior varsity teams.

The impact of the tragedy was felt by everyone. Jarrell players wore black ribbons on the left shoulder of their uniforms, and both teams knelt and huddled before the game.

More than 600 fans crammed the stands, far more than usual for a team that went 3-7 last year.

But things didn't start well for Jarrell.

Rusty Stone ran 72 yards for a Bruceville-Eddy touchdown on the game's opening play. A Jarrell drive ended in a fumble, then Bruceville-Eddy went 93 yards for another score before Jarrell regained its balance.

Greece picked for 2004 Games

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP)--It might be eight years late. But the Olympics are finally returning to their birthplace.

Athens was awarded the first summer games of the new millennium Friday, ousting Rome; Stockholm, Sweden; Cape Town, South Africa; and Buenos Aires, Argentina. It was one of the most convincing victories in IOC history.

What also made a difference, according to many IOC members, was the one-woman show by Gianna Angelopoulos-Daskalaki, the Greek bid chief.

Angelopoulos-Daskalaki is a lawyer, former member of parliament and wife of a millionaire steel and shipping tycoon. She is the first woman ever to lead a successful Olympic bid.

Doctors to be on track when Earnhardt races

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) - They will be on the track with Dale Earnhardt, aware that doctors still don't know why he went fuzzy last weekend, but Winston Cup drivers say they aren't concerned about Earnhardt's fitness to drive.

If anything, they say they're worried for Earnhardt's health.

Doctors have cleared the seven-time series champion to get back behind the wheel after a battery of tests showed nothing wrong. At the same time, the medical experts said they can't guarantee the episodes won't recur.

After falling asleep at the wheel twice before the start of Sunday's Southern 500, Earnhardt crashed in the first turn. He later was disoriented, said he had double vision, and couldn't recall the next hour and a half.

Dale Jarrett, third in the standings, said concerns about his safety and chance to win a championship are secondary to those he has for Earnhardt.

"I'm thinking of his safety," Jarrett said. "The championship, nothing else matters. We're talking about a person here. This other stuff's just fun and games."

Jarrett and others also suggested that many drivers probably have similar experiences occasionally, but without crashing and drawing attention.

"Later in races, you get times where you've been breathing carbon monoxide all day or all night and it's just like you forget a lap or two," Jarrett said. "You don't remember it happening, but it did."

"This is something that normally happens to a lot of people," Rusty Wallace said. "It just happened to him when the whole world was looking."

Ernie Irvan knows that feeling well.

When he returned from a near-fatal crash last season, Irvan was possibly the most closely scrutinized driver in series history. That will change tonight, when attention will be riveted on the No. 3 Chevrolet.

"If he just bumps somebody, they're going to say, 'He must have passed out or something,'" said Irvan, who has won three times since his return.

A store of treasures,

And a trove of wealth

One man's trash is another man's treasure, according to an old saying, but for Hereford Senior Citizens Thrift Shop it is very much a reality.

Members of the community donate unwanted or unused items to the thrift center, and the thrift center then turns the items into a treasure that goes to operate their general fund.

Thrift store profits provide funding for transportation locally and to Amarillo for some elderly residents, it helps fund the home delivery program, the festival of trees and many other projects which are not federally funded.

Before the idea settles that this is just another junk store, think again.

The Thrift Store sells a wide array of name brand appliances, clothes, furniture and gadgets.

There's plenty of the traditional junk; odds and ends dishes, old patterns, just some real junk, but none-the-less still usable for the right person.

"We get everything from lawn mowers to curtains," said Margie Daniels, executive director of Hereford Senior Citizens Association.

A big problem for the Thrift Center is the ever-decreasing space.

"We get a lot of stuff in the back room that we just don't have the space to put out," said Daniels.

Right now the Thrift Center has a complete counter top electric stove, oven and range hood, but are unable to display it for lack of space on the sales floor.

"Earlier this week, we received a satellite receiver dish. We don't have anyplace for it or have any idea how to price it," said Daniels.

Daniels said the center does not sell mattresses, because the sanitation laws require special handling that the center is not equipped for.

"We hate to carry mattresses to the dump when we know there are people sleeping on the floor, so usually we give them away if someone comes in and needs them," said Daniels.

The headboards and rails, though, are sold and at much better prices than at private secondhand shops.

"Finding the items you want is simply a matter of finding it before someone else does," said Daniels.

"We get a lot of new and nearly new clothes through here. We keep our prices as low as possible, so we can move a lot of merchandise in short amount of time," said Daniels.

The Thrift Center runs with the help of 12-14 senior citizen volunteers, who work a couple of hours while the center is open, or help sort and collect during other times.

Daniels said that all the merchandise is donated and they have people bringing stuff by all the time, and the thrift center will even make arrangements to go pick up donations when they need to.

The thrift center is located at 1306 E. Park and is open 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Jeans and things

Margie Daniels, executive director of the Hereford Senior Citizen's Association, takes her turn at playing store keeper for the Senior Citizen's Thrift Store. nearly new clothes, great quilting pieces and some wonderful books can all be found at the local store.

Text and photos by Dianna F. Dandridge

Of all things

Anything and nearly everything can, at some time, be found in the Hereford Senior Citizen's Thrift Store, as Margie Daniels discovered when someone recently donated a satellite receiver dish.

"We are forever getting things in that we don't know what they are or what price to set them at."

Margie Daniels
Executive Director, HSCA

"We like to think that by keeping the Thrift Center open, we are providing a means of necessary assistance for some of the elderly citizen, as well as providing useful items to the public."

Margie Daniels

Books and books

Many a library could envy the number of books which come and go through the Thrift Center and Wayne Amstutz has the pleasure of keeping them neat and in some type of order.

Ministerial alliance sponsors campaign

Cooperating churches of the Hereford Ministerial Alliance are sponsoring a campaign to get "Every Child in Sunday School."

"While there are hundreds of children who go to Sunday School every week in Hereford, we want every child in Sunday School," Ted Taylor, president of the ministerial alliance, said.

The churches of Hereford are here to equip children with the Word of God so they will be ready to face the value decisions of tomorrow, according to the campaign material being distributed by the alliance.

The campaign will include a door-to-door distribution of brochures, as well as cooperating businesses who will hand out flyers.

"We want to emphasize the importance of every child having 'values' with a foundation in the Word of God," Taylor said.

As a part of the campaign, local churches have nominated outstanding Sunday school teachers. Those receiving the awards will be featured in future issues of The Brand.

The Perfect Snack - A Healthy Alternative to Snacking on Junk Food

Looking for the perfect snack? Then consider dried fruit.

Foods like dried figs, apricots and raisins are tasty, easy to serve and loaded with nutrition. They are especially high in fiber and contain lots of essential vitamins and minerals.

Dried figs, for example, are one of the best non-dairy sources of calcium, while one apricot provides almost 75 percent of your daily requirement for Vitamin A. And you'll get twice the fiber from a half cup of raisins than a slice of whole-wheat bread!

Dried fruit can be eaten as finger foods or added to cereal, pancakes, yogurt and cottage cheese. They're quick and nutritious - the perfect snack!

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

If you want your children to keep their feet on the ground, put some responsibility on their shoulders.

If you happen to drive by HJH between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. and see several law enforcement vehicles in the parking lot, you can be assured that we have visitors for lunch -- not trouble! Our cafeteria staff does a good job daily, but certain menus seem to draw visitors to our campus at lunch time.

Seventh grade science students are beginning metric measurement and the eighth graders are reviewing measurement.

Seventh grade math classes are reviewing the basics in math and will begin equations soon.

Department meetings are being held in the computer lab so that teachers can discuss ways to integrate each subject with the computer programs available at HJH.

During HAT period, each student is spending the first 15 minutes of the period reading and the remainder of the period on homework, tutorials or more reading. They will also be spending time on TAAS practice at selected times during the week.

Parents, if you have failed to return any of the forms that were sent to you to be read and signed, we need those as soon as possible. Some are used in the nurse's office and some in the main office. Your child's records are incomplete until all these forms are returned.

Junior Historians will meet on Wednesday at 7:40 a.m. to make plans for the new year. These plans include dues, fund-raisers, first field trip and projects. Our new Texas history teacher, Kim Hofferichter, is helping with Junior Historians this year and is certainly an asset to our staff.

Other new teachers at HJH include Rose Marie Arzola, ESL; Bruce Brazell, eighth math; Linda Gonzales, assistant principal; Bill Nelson, band; Sheryl Patton, nurse; Judy Phipps, math; Nikki Self, P.E.; Anna Torres, ESL aide; and Joann Serrano, Super Lab aide. We welcome each of these new members to our top-notch staff. Remember, if it's fact, it's not brag!!!

If you have concerns about your child's progress, or lack thereof, please contact the team during their teaming period. Progress reports will be sent home this week.

A great many people think they are thinking when they are really rearranging their prejudices.

Couple is united in noon ceremony

MRS. PETER CARMINE IANNELLI
...nee Kimberly Ann Sims

Kimberly Ann Sims of Austin and Peter Carmine Iannelli of McAllen exchanged wedding vows in a noon ceremony Saturday in Saint David's Episcopal Church in Austin.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sims of Hereford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carmine Iannelli of Alamo.

Rev. Jim Bethell of Saint David's Church officiated at the ceremony.

Co-matrons of honor were Vanessa Sims Ward, sister of the bride of Armidale, New South Wales, Australia and Missy Sims Leyendecker, sister of the bride of Corpus Christi.

Best man was Michael Iannelli, brother of the groom of McAllen. Bridesmaids were Susan Rowland Sauls of Spring and Deborah Gray Warner of San Antonio.

Serving as groomsmen were Frank Iannelli, brother of the groom of Dallas; Vincent Iannelli, brother of the groom of Dallas; and Steven Sims, brother of the bride of Canyon. Junior bridesmaid was Sondra Iannelli, niece and goddaughter of the groom and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Iannelli of McAllen. Junior groomsmen were Michael Iannelli, nephew of the groom and son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Iannelli.

Gianna Iannelli, cousin of the groom and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Iannelli of McAllen was the flower girl.

Stuart Leyendecker, nephew and godson of the bride and son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Leyendecker of Corpus Christi was the ring bearer.

Music was provided by organist Jean Fuller and trumpet player Robert Cannon.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of diamond white silk shantung featuring a Bateau neckline and fitted Basque waist. Hand-beaded Alencon embroidered lace adorned the entire sleeveless bodice.

A deep band of the lace accented the hem of the full, softly pleated skirt and the cathedral train which was caught at the back with a buffant bustle bow.

The floor length veil of tulle was accented with scattered pearls and attached to a headband of pearls and sequins.

The cascading bridal bouquet was of white casa blanca lilies, white roses, white stephanotis and baby's breath tied with French chiffon ribbon.

Bridal attendants wore ankle length sleeveless dresses of dark navy linen. They featured a bias cut with a flared skirt at the knee. Attendants carried hand-tied bouquets of sunflowers, purple larkspur, blue delphinium and fuchsia liatris with white French chiffon ribbon.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony at the Four Seasons Hotel in Austin.

The bride's four-tiered, white cake was layered with whipped cream and fresh berries and had fondant icing. It was decorated with fresh flowers which complimented the bridesmaids' flowers.

The groom's cake was two-layered chocolate marquis with dark chocolate-dipped strawberries.

Following a wedding trip to Costa Rica, the couple will be at home in Pharr.

The bride was Hereford Lion's Club Sweetheart in 1981-1982 and a 1982 graduate of Hereford High School. She received a Bachelor of Science degree in Political Science from Texas A&M University in 1986 and Master of Public Administration from Texas A&M in 1988. Red Cross Update

This statement was issued by American Red Cross president Elizabeth Dole, regarding the death of Diana, Princess of Wales.

"Diana, Princess of Wales, was a friend and champion to all humanity especially to those in greatest need, often forgotten by others. The Princess brought the power of her presence, her compassion and her position to some of the most important humanitarian issues of our time, saving countless lives and bringing comfort to countless others. Her work to bring about a global ban on landmines did more to galvanize world opinion on this issue than any other single individual.

Her death is mourned by an entire world. We at the American Red Cross share the grief of the British people in the loss of a national and global treasure. We will miss her special touch and the love that she so effectively expressed through action. I have asked that Red Cross flags in front of American Red Cross building be lowered to half mat in her memory. Our thoughts and prayers go out to her sons William and Harry on the loss of their mother and to the families of those who were also killed and injured."

For those wishing to make a contribution in memory of Diana, Princess of Wales, gifts may be sent to the American Red Cross International Response Fund, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, D.C. 20013 or by calling 1-800-HELP-NOW. These funds will be used to provide services to landmine survivors. Those gifts may also be brought to our chapter for forwarding to the fund.

The Successful Family

Managing Anger and Frustration

Whether you are the parent of a newborn infant or teenager, there will be times when you will get frustrated and angry. These are normal human feelings. It is OK to have them. It is not OK to lose control.

Here are some healthy ways to manage anger and frustration:

- Shut your eyes - Breathe deeply - Get away - Exercise - Take a walk - Take a shower - Call a friend - Draw - Call a baby-sitter - Listen to headphones - Paint - Sit down - Hit a pillow - Hug a pillow - Go for a job - Run around in a circle - Count to 10 - Have a good cry - Count to 100 - Write down your feelings - Read - Clean your house - Wash the car - Bake something wonderful - Take yourself out to dinner - Watch TV - Remember to laugh - TALK TO ANOTHER PARENT - GET HELP! TAKE CARE OF YOURSELF!!

Your job as a parent is not to be perfect. Your job is to love your children and do your best. It is hard work, but you are not alone. All parents know how you feel. They get frustrated and angry just like you.

The Children's Trust Fund of Texas has helped the HISD establish THE SUCCESSFUL FAMILY Program. The Nurturing Family sessions will start Oct. 7 through Nov. 18 from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Plan to be a part of this program for the entire family. Parents must accompany their children. Meals will be provided. For more information contact Tilli Boozer, counselor and facilitator, at 364-HELP or 363-7668.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have read and enjoyed your column for probably 30 of my 40 years, although I may not always agree with what you have to say. However, a recent response of yours sent me over the moon.

"C. in K.C." said her husband didn't want to get a vasectomy, even though they both had agreed not to have any more children. He told her if she should die or the marriage should fail, he might want to remarry and have more children. She figured he intended to dump her as soon as she reached menopause. You told her she had gone off the deep end with her assumptions and needed to get help.

She isn't the problem, Ann. Her husband just doesn't want to have a vasectomy -- it might cause him some inconvenience or, heaven forbid, pain. A vasectomy is far simpler and carries less risk than a tubal ligation, but if the male refuses, who continues to carry the responsibility for birth control? The woman, of course. And who has the ultimate responsibility if she gets pregnant? Again, the woman.

Ninety-nine percent of all birth control methods put the responsibility on the female. Why would a man want to take responsibility for his reproductive life? Society has never asked him to, and if attitudes like yours prevail, society never will. -- Angry in Rockford, Ill.

Dear Rockford: You say society has never asked the male to take responsibility for his reproductive life. Who, exactly, is "society"? This is the most personal of issues between the two people involved.

You may be right that many men are reluctant to have a vasectomy, but men can and do take responsibility for birth control. The condom, though not 100 percent foolproof, may be the most frequently used method to prevent pregnancy. Any male who refuses to use a condom because it cuts down on his pleasure is selfish and inconsiderate.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to ask you to recognize an extraordinary group of people who are truly saving our younger generation, one child at a time. I am talking about the incredible success story of the Foster Grandparent Program.

What began in 1965 as a program to bring seniors and children together has evolved into a national strategy for dealing with the growing number of young people whose parents are unable to give them love, instill confidence or teach them skills to determine right from wrong. Today, we hear of 12-year-olds killing other kids, bringing guns to school, having babies, selling drugs. For thousands of high-risk kids, Foster Grandparents serve as their only lifeline.

One youngster wrote: "I love having a foster grandmother. She treats me with love and does nice things for me. She has helped me with my bad attitude and tells me I should be a role model for the younger children in my family. She has taught me to respect all adults."

The Foster Grandparent Program currently has 24,000 foster grandparents who are serving 80,000 children and teenagers. The program is open to men and women, age 60 and older, who meet income requirements and serve 20 hours a week.

Please tell anyone interested to call 1-800-424-8867 for information. Thank you, Ann. -- Harris Wofford, CEO, Corporation for National Service, Washington, D.C.

Dear Harris Wofford: Thank you for letting my readers know about this excellent program -- and on National Grandparents Day, too. It is sure to fill the empty places in the hearts of both the young and the seniors. I hope that 800 number is jammed. If it's busy, folks, keep trying until you get through.

Forget to save some of your favorite Ann Landers columns? "Nuggets and Doozies" is the answer. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Nuggets, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $6.25.)

Godwin, Smith repeat wedding vows

MRS. KERRY MARTIN SMITH
...nee Charee Godwin

Dawna Charee Godwin and Kerry Martin Smith, both of Amarillo, were united in marriage Saturday evening in Central Church of Christ in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Belinda and Gary Bartels of Hereford and Keren and Howard R. Godwin Jr. of Corpus Christi.

Parents of the bridegroom are Lanny and Phyllis Smith of Dumas.

Gordon Clark, minister of First Street Church of Christ in Dumas, officiated.

The aisles of the church were decorated with tri-candled aisle candelabra. The front of the church displayed seven large candelabra, two of which were adorned with Virginia roses and greenery. The other five had greenery intertwined among the candles. Arrangements of Virginia roses were centered on two pillars and smylex draped the front of the baptistry.

Matron of honor was Cathy Cobb of Hendrix, Okla. Best man was Danny Chambers, uncle of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Kerensa Cashatt, sister of the bride of Lamesa, Calif.; Jessalyn Godwin, sister of the bride of Corpus Christi; and Kristin Smith, sister of the groom of Dumas.

Serving as groomsmen were Mark Smith, brother of the groom of Amarillo; Ben Chambers, uncle of the groom of Houston; and Damon Godwin, brother of the bride of Hereford.

Guests were seated by Jeff Hand of Amarillo and Jason Bullard of Dallas.

Flower girls were Berkley Freeman, daughter of Tony and Wilson Freeman of Amarillo and Adalynn Cobb, daughter of Cathy and James Cobb of Hendrix.

Ring bearers were James Cobb, son of Cathy and James Cobb of Hendrix, and Jacob Wooden, son of Mindy and Paul Wooden of Amarillo.

Chad Bartels and Hank McWhorter of Canyon served as candle lighters.

Music was provided by the Vienna Conspiracy, a string quartet.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of candlelight delustered satin and Venise lace featuring a Sabrina neckline and empire waist.

The bodice was designed with fully overlaid lace paneling and short sleeves of the wide lace which floated over the floor-length princess-line skirt.

The entire back waist was covered with lace and flowed into a detachable chapel train.

She carried a bouquet of 40 Virginia roses which were hand-tied with ivory ribbon.

Her jewelry included pearl earrings and a fifth generation family heirloom lavaliere with pearls, diamonds and sapphires.

Bridal attendants wore floor length crepe dresses with bodices in ivory and skirts in black. They featured open backs adorned with bows in the small of the back. Each attendant carried a hand-tied bouquet of six Virginia roses.

The couple was honored with a reception in the church atrium following the ceremony.

Servers were Lisa McCasland, J'Shae McCasland, Brie McCasland and Ashley Hardt. Assisting was Norma Chambers.

The bride's table was adorned with a candelabra arrangement of lisianthus, freesia and roses. The six-tiered petal cake was decorated with hand painted ivy and a variety of fresh flowers including roses, ranunculi, Freesia and stephanotis.

Following a wedding trip to Disneyworld in Orlando, Fla., the couple will be home in Amarillo.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School. She has a bachelor of arts degree in journalism and English from West Texas A&M University. She is the Panhandle Regional Marketing Specialist for Boatmen's First National Bank.

The groom graduated from Dumas High School in 1987. He attended the Art Institute of Dallas studying commercial art. He is a designer at Freemans.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: This hint is for pet lovers. If you should move or your phone number is changed, be sure to get a new ID tag for your pet.

Someone must have forgotten to do that and, as a result, I have a darling schnauzer, a little stray. (She had an ID tag, but with wrong information on it. The people we called said that the dog did not belong to them.)

I'm afraid I wouldn't have thought about changing a pet's ID tag if my phone number happened to be changed. — Merle Booker, Indianapolis

At least this little stray found a loving, caring home and didn't end up hit by a car.

Your reminder is very helpful. Also, if there is a veterinary tag, you can call them. It's recommended to let the animal hospitals in your area know you've found a stray or lost a pet.

LIGHT CANDLES

Dear Heloise: For years I struggled with the tall round glass candles and how to get them lit as the wick burned down lower and lower in the jar.

One day it hit me. I put a match on the end of a clothespin, lit the match, turned the candle jar sideways, inserted the clothespin with attached match and lit the candle.

Now I can light my candles all the way down to the bottom of the jar, and my hand doesn't get the back soot all over it. — Phetney Cleveland, Leverett, Mass.

Send a money- or time-saving hint to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000 or fax it to 210-HELOISE. I can't answer your letter personally but will use the best hints received in my column.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have been on Lopid for high triglycerides for the past year.

In a year, my triglycerides reading has gone from more than 2,000 to 271. How long do I need to take Lopid?

They want to test my blood to see if Lopid is damaging my liver. I'd hate to die of the cure. What options do I have? — Anon.

ANSWER: Triglycerides are fats, the yellow-white stuff you see within and around cuts of meat. They are shortenings used in baked goods. And they are what most dieters are trying to eliminate.

Triglycerides are taken more seriously now than they once were. The focus on cholesterol eclipsed triglycerides' role in illness and health.

Elevated triglyceride levels inflame the pancreas and double the risk of heart attack.

Triglycerides prime the liver to synthesize cholesterol. In fact, foods high in triglycerides raise blood cholesterol to higher levels than do cholesterol-rich foods.

Your reading of 2,000 was an invitation to disaster. Normal levels should be less than 200.

Lopid has done a yeoman's job of getting your triglycerides level out of the danger zone. The drug can cause liver damage. If your liver tests come back abnormal, you probably will be instructed to stop taking the drug, and your liver should recover.

In addition to medicine, you have the options of weight loss and reduction of alcohol. Also exercise and cut back on sugar.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My son, 37, has cellulitis. The doctors say they are giving him the strongest medicine they can give. His fever goes up and down.

I know that cellulitis has something to do with cells because of the name. Can you please tell me where I can find help for him? — E.D.

ANSWER: Cellulitis is a rapidly spreading infection of skin cells and the tissues directly below the skin. Staphylococcus and streptococcus germs are the usual cellulitis bacteria.

The germs enter the skin through a puncture or an open sore. Even a minor skin prick allows them to grab a foothold.

The skin of the leg — the legs are the most common site for the infection — becomes beefy red, hot and swollen. The infection marches up and down the leg, and in a short time the entire leg is infected.

Antibiotics are the answer. If your son's cellulitis is not responding to oral antibiotics, his doctors can hospitalize him for intravenous antibiotics. With intravenous infusion, higher concentrations of antibiotics reach the infected site.

Unless your son fails to respond to antibiotics, his regular doctor can take care of cellulitis. You don't have to search for a specialist.

IN RESPONSE to reader requests, Dr. Donohue has a complete listing of his pamphlets on various medical problems. Readers who want one should send their request to Dr. Donohue—List, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible.

A welcome addition to our team.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE ESPARZA
...united in marriage

Abalos, Esparza are wed in Waxahachie

Dolores Abalos became the bride of George Esparza in a candlelight ceremony in the Living Hope Church of the Nazarene in Waxahachie.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Abalos of Hereford. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Nick Esparza and Ms. Ofelia Esparza, all of Waxahachie.

Pastor Ray Vinson officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Maid of honor was Rhonda Thornton of Richardson. Serving as best man was Pastor Joe Reyna Jr. of Mesquite.

Bridesmaids were Donna Schardt of Grand Prairie, Harriett Connor of Longview, Billie Jean Villarreal of San Antonio, sister of the bride, and Amy Long of Dallas.

Tamra Abalos of Canyon, niece of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid. Chasidy Downs of Waxahachie, niece of the groom, was the flower girl.

Serving as groomsmen were Alford Martinez of Mesquite, Manuel Flores of Balch Springs, Louis Garcia of Orlando, Fla., uncle of the groom, and Oscar Esparza of Winter Park, Fla., brother of the groom.

Matthew Esparza, son of the groom, served as junior groomsman. Stephen Palma of Odessa, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer.

Roger Abalos Jr. of Canyon, nephew of the bride and Michael Esparza of Nashville, Tenn., son of the groom, served as the candle-lighters and ushers.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a princess line floor length gown with cathedral train of ivory Italian satin accented with lace and pearls. The bodice of hand-beaded lace created an empire waist and featured a wide sweetheart shaped neckline and long fitted sleeves.

She wore a two-tiered scalloped ivory illusion veil which fell to the top of the cathedral train from an ivory guipure lace headpiece accented with delicate seed pearls.

The bride carried a cascading bouquet of white roses accented with stephanotis and English ivy.

She wore a pair of pearl and diamond earrings which were a gift from her parents for her wedding day.

Bridal attendants were attired in floor-length, short-sleeved, princess style dresses of midnight blue crepe. They carried a single calla lily accented with ivory satin ribbon.

Music for the wedding was provided by Vincent and Rhoda Gonzales.

The couple was honored with a buffet reception in the First Christian Church Life Center following the ceremony.

The bride's cake featured seven separated layers in a free form arrangement and was decorated in ivory basket weave icing with English ivy and white roses adorning each layer.

The groom's cake was a large chocolate cake with swirled chocolate icing. Chocolate-dipped strawberries and English ivy decorated the top of the cake.

Assisting at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Todd Wagner of DeSoto; Mamie Fuentes of Waxahachie, aunt of the groom; Cynthia Fuentes, cousin of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Downs of Waxahachie, brother-in-law and sister of the groom.

Michelle Abalos of Odessa, niece of the bride, registered guests.

After a honeymoon cruise to Columbia, Panama and Costa Rica, the couple is residing in Waxahachie.

The bride is an attorney in the Dallas County Public Defender's office while the groom is employed at T.U. Electric as a business development manager.

Real Jackson is friendly, relaxed, unpretentious

NEW YORK (AP) - Go ahead. Ask Samuel L. Jackson for an autograph. Just don't forget the magic word.

"I make 'em say 'please,'" Jackson says. "That's one of my little quirks, you know."

Jackson, who in the last six years has risen from a well-respected but little-known cameo actor to a highly visible cinematic success with such hits as "Jungle Fever," "Pulp Fiction" and "A Time to Kill," is entitled to a few quirks.

He has spent more than 25 years fine-tuning the craft he first fell in love with on the stage at Morehouse College in Atlanta in the early 1970s.

Now that he's made a name for himself, one would think the 6-foot-3 star would be tempted to look down his nose at the little people. Instead, he rides the subway with them.

"People go, 'You know, you look like that Sam Jackson guy,' and I'll go, 'Really?'" Jackson explains, a wide smile creeping across his face and his right eyebrow lifting mischievously. "But I can't be him because I'm on the subway, and Sam Jackson doesn't ride the subway, he rides around in limos. He's FAY-muss."

Jackson admits to occasionally throwing around his weight, but he says he limits it to the little things, like scoring a free pass to a movie or a table at his favorite restaurant. Whatever the case, he is more likely to poke fun than congratulate himself for it.

"It's ME and I want to come into your movie," he says, projecting a rumbling bass as he leans forward on a sofa at the Mark Hotel and puffs up his chest in mock self-importance. "It's crowded out here. Do I really have to stand in this line?"

The real Jackson is friendly, relaxed and unpretentious as he engages in the last of about two-dozen interviews on a recent Sunday afternoon. He saunters over to turn off a golf game on television that no one's watching, and he makes sure a visitor isn't allergic to cigarette smoke before he settles down with his hands folded on top of his head and a bottle of lemon Perrier balanced on the floor between his feet.

Absent is the frowning face and furrowed brow intensity of "187," a short-lived but acclaimed summer movie in which Jackson starred as a science teacher named Trevor Garfield who goes over the edge after being stabbed by a student in one school and threatened by vicious students in another.

The electric undercurrent that ran through his portrayal of the wired, crack-head Gator in Spike Lee's "Jungle Fever" (1991), and the wisecracking, Bible-reciting hit man Jules in "Pulp Fiction" (1994) is palpable as Jackson drags on a Newport, rapidly taps his feet on the floor or raps his knuckles on the table while making a point.

"METEORIC!" he shouts with gleeful sarcasm when asked to describe his career.

The actor's upcoming roles include that of a scientist in "Sphere," a Barry Levinson movie based on the novel by Michael Crichton; a gunrunner in "Jackie Brown," an adaptation of the Elmore Leonard novel; and a curator for an auction house in "Red Violin," an art film directed by Francois Girard.

Whether he's working in a quirky independent film or what he calls a "big-budget bonanza" - Jackson says it's the role, not who's making the movie that influences his decision. The bottom line is that he be able to portray someone audience members can relate to.

"I go to my films and I watch them and hey... I want to be involved with my character and the other characters that are there, and if that doesn't happen to me, then I know I haven't done my job," he says.

Critical responses to Jackson's work indicate that he's been doing his job quite well.

His portrayal of Gator won him the Cannes Film Festival Special Jury Prize Award for best supporting performance, as well as a New York Film Critics Circle Award for best supporting actor.

He won the Independent Spirit Award for best actor and the Society of Texas Film Critics Award for best actor for his work in "Pulp Fiction." He was nominated for an Academy Award for best supporting actor, but many industry observers thought he should have received a nod for best actor instead (the nomination went to his co-star, John Travolta).

Although "187" bombed at the box office, The New York Times praised Jackson's "fine, smoldering performance," while a review by The Associated Press called him "breathtaking" and "stunning."

Jackson lives in Los Angeles with his wife, actress LaTanya Richardson, and 15-year-old daughter, Zoe. But he credits his theater days in New York in the late '70s and '80s for his diversity and the ability to make typical movie roles unique.

"You were always doing plays that had very different kinds of characters in them," he says.

Movies, on the other hand, "have stock characters... the bad guy, the good guy, the foil, the best friend, the sidekick, and within those generic roles you have to find things that make them different... I think that's kind of been my stock in trade."

Jackson, 48, says he is constantly on the lookout for characters "that are very different from the character that I just played... and... from any other major roles that I've had recently or - ever."

"I want to be challenged. There are a lot of things I can just wake up and do... The only way to get better as an actor is to not do the same thing over and over again."

What's a serving?

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) - What's a serving?

Maybe a pinch of this and a dollop of that won't make much difference, but food serving size is one of the keys to maintaining healthy weight, points out the Mayo Clinic Health Letter.

You can learn to visualize serving sizes with reasonable accuracy, a good skill to have if you eat out often. The publication lists these visual comparisons:

- 3 ounces of meat or fish is the size of a deck of cards or the palm of your hand.
- 1 cup of vegetables is the size of your fist.
- A medium apple is the size of a baseball.
- 1 cup of pasta, cooked, equals a scoop of ice cream.
- 1 ounce of cheese is the size of a pair of dice or dominoes.
- 1 teaspoon butter or margarine equals the tip of your thumb.

Ministry helps kids in detention

PALESTINE, Texas - Chuck Shaffer said the Lord revealed to him the need for a ministry to help kids detained in juvenile detention after visiting a child at the local center in January.

"I just felt the Lord guided me to come here and start a ministry," Shaffer said. "The Lord opened every door and brought the right people to help. That's why I knew the Lord was working because I didn't have to do anything."

Shaffer founded Greatest Love Ministries Inc. this year to serve the Anderson County Juvenile Detention Center. It takes its name from 1 Corinthians 13:13, "But the greatest of these is love."

Shaffer and his wife, Vickie, have been involved in youth ministry since 1991, but he wasn't on staff at a church when the ministry was formed. In fact, he felt he was being led in a different direction.

But the Shaffers and the Greatest Love Ministries held their first service at the juvenile center on Feb. 2. Services are provided every Sunday afternoon at the facility.

They were joined in the ministry by fellow Trinity Valley Community Church members.

"We tell the kids that no matter what they've done wrong, no matter why they're here, there is hope and they can find peace. And that hope and peace is through a relationship with Jesus Christ," Shaffer said.

Each of the ministry's volunteers has a testimony to share with the kids about how having a relationship with Jesus has turned their life around. That shows the kids that no matter what they've done to end up in a juvenile detention center, they can turn their lives around into something positive, Shaffer said.

Of the hundreds of kids they have talked with, Shaffer said, only a few have had attitude problems. But after a service, they are among the first to ask to talk with volunteers.

"Most of these kids want someone to listen to them, talk to them and care for them, and that's what they get from us," he said.

"You have to look into a kid's face and say, 'I don't care what you've done. I love you and Jesus loves you.'"

They provide the young people with Bibles, devotional books and gospel tracts, and have provided shoes and shared birthday cake and pizza.

Shaffer, who works in the maintenance department at Dogwood Garden Apartments in Palestine, spends his lunch hour three to four times a week at the detention center visiting. And the detention center's officers often call him to arrange meetings with him and the kids.

After hearing many of their stories and seeing their pain, Shaffer said he often sits in his truck and cries before leaving the parking lot.

"Then there are days when a kid comes up and shakes your hand or hugs you and says, 'thanks for coming to see me.' That's our pay," he said.

The ministry has established a prayer line from the detention center for the kids to call and talk to someone and pray with them. They also tell kids released from the facility to call if they need someone.

For those who aren't released to go home but are transferred to another juvenile facility, the ministry follows up with them, making visits to the Marlin Assessment and Orientation Unit in Marlin and the Crockett State School in Crockett.

"We let them know once you leave here we still care," he said.

De La Cerda to be crowned reina

Naomi De La Cerda will reign as reina (queen) over Fiestas Patrias festivities the weekend of Sept. 13 as part of the observance of Diez y Seis

San Jose Salon. De La Cerda's court will consist of princesa (princess) Janie Mendez and duquesa (duchess) Sonya Flores.

Post offices double as boutiques

WACO, Texas - The "Wascally Wabbit" of Saturday morning cartoons is now invading your local post office, and his friends will soon join him.

An attempt to get children involved in stamp collecting has spawned a marketing cooperation between Warner Bros. and the U.S. Postal Service to sell Bugs Bunny and other Looney Tunes paraphernalia including T-shirts, mugs, hats, ties, earrings and last but not least - stamps. The items with the exact replica of the stamps are only available at U.S. Post Offices.

The Bugs Bunny stamp has been on the market for about a month now and demand for the animated idol has skyrocketed, said Alicia Aguilar, Highway 6 Post Office window clerk.

"We can't keep up with the demand for the merchandise that has been brought into the (Highway 6) office," said Steve Kincer, Waco postmaster's customer relations coordinator. "The Bugs is going out the door as fast as we can get him."

Jamie Lakey, a Stampers Program and Bugs Bunny representative, said the Bugs stamp will soon be taken off the shelves and replaced with another Looney Tunes character.

Kincer said that stamps such as the Looney Tunes characters create an interest in stamps and are pure revenue as far as the postal service is concerned.

The postal service issues 40 to 45 billion stamps in an average year, the majority of which are "definitive" stamps intended for day-to-day postage needs. "Commemorative" issues honor anniversaries, important people or special events and are printed just once in much smaller quantities than definitives, said Barry Ziehl, spokesperson for the U.S. Postal Service.

Commemorative stamps that are collected are pure revenue for the Postal Service since they are never put back into circulation.

Cowboy music was ultimately key to role in movie

FORT WORTH (AP) - Don Edwards' westward-bound career path always has been like a trail ride itself: a determined trek over sometimes rough terrain, spurred on by equal doses of mysticism and optimism.

"You don't give up, you know, and you don't know where it winds up," the cowboy singer-composer from Weatherford said.

In this case, it wound up above a bend of the Continental Divide, next to snow-capped Rockies outside Livingston, Mont. A river even runs through it, the Yellowstone.

No small amount of mystic good fortune brought Edwards to this place, "The Horse Whisperer" movie set where he is cast in the role of ranch hand Smoky, playing alongside Robert Redford in the film adaptation of Nicholas Evans' bestseller.

Redford, executive producer and star, met Edwards that first day of filming, in mid-June.

"He said he was a fan of mine," Edwards said, laughing at the irony. "Redford said, 'I was looking for the real deal.' I said, 'That's flattering, thank you.'"

Edwards will be in Montana through Sept. 3. He began shooting June 17, not even two weeks after he read for the part at his agent's urging.

Edwards' cowboy music was ultimately his key to a role in "The Horse Whisperer" and his summer in the Rockies. Producer Patrick Markey ("A River Runs Through It") had previously introduced Redford to Edwards' CDs.

Edwards had read for two roles, Smoky and a lesser character that would have required only about a week of work.

"About 10 days later I got a call saying, 'Robert Redford liked you for the part of Smoky,'" Edwards said with understandable wonder in his voice. He beat out more than 3,000 others for the part.

"It couldn't have been a more perfect thing for what I believe in, too," Edwards said of the gentle storyline, about a mysterious man who calms wounded horses, and people, with his voice. Executive producer Redford stars in the title role, and Kristin Scott Thomas, Sam Neill, Scarlett Johansson, Dianne Wiest and Chris Cooper co-star.

"The Horse Whisperer" is scheduled as a Christmas release from Touchstone Pictures.

"He involves people that are indigenous to the area or to the subject matter," Edwards said of Redford. "He's hands-on. He sees things that a lot of people don't see."

Edwards amended his usual reading diet of historical material to include "The Horse Whisperer" after he got the part.

"It's a character that I can do," Edwards said of Smoky. "It's not like I have to act. Redford made a nice statement. He said, a singer is acting to a point. An actor will sometimes over-act, but a singer will tend to be what he is."

After he got the role, it changed from a young man (in the book) to an older man, from a seven-week shoot to lengthier. Edwards may even get to perform his original music on screen.

Fans should see plenty of the Weatherford resident throughout the film. "I'm in it a lot, even though I don't have a real huge speaking part," Edwards said.

Others say he's downplaying his role.

"I was up there on the set with them, and he's got a pretty high-profile part," reported Waddie Mitchell, dean of cowboy poets and Edwards' recording partner. Mitchell is based on his ranch in Nevada. "He (Edwards) character Smoky is Redford's buddy."

Mitchell and Edwards had a highly acclaimed duet album together on Warner Western, "The Bard and the Balladeer."

"It's a marvelous opportunity," Edwards said, summoning up some professional detachment.

It's also about time, most of Edwards' friends agree.

"I've always wondered why he wasn't a household word," Mitchell said, adding that Edwards has a unique gift for conveying his love of cowboy lore to audiences. "Redford saw it. He'd heard his albums and caught a show. That's what so many of the great actors have done, John Wayne, Jimmy Stewart. Great characters that basically played themselves."

Edwards, 58, sees his inclusion in the movie as nothing less than an affirmation of his lifelong cowboy quest.

His first job after moving to Texas from his native New York in 1960 was as a mock gunfighter at Six Flags Over Texas.

Then, after years of playing regular gigs at the White Elephant Saloon in Fort Worth, writing and researching cowboy music all over the country, and recording independently, Edwards' star began to rise with the release of his first nationwide CD, "Songs of the Trail," in 1992 on Warner Western.

Bobby Weaver, assistant director of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, summed up Edwards' importance in the back-to-the-ranch movement.

"Don is the best purveyor of cowboy music in America today. He has taken that 19th century type of music and he has moved it into the present, dealing with the cowboy today and what he's doing," Weaver said. "He's creating an unbroken tradition. That's the importance of his contribution."

Naturally, Edwards' touring schedule is riddled with cancellations, about 25 in all. The bright side? One of his first dates back will be Gene Autry's 90th birthday party in California.

He's releasing a double CD set in mid-August, "Saddle Songs." It contains some of his older material that has never been available on compact disc before.

Edwards did a bit of horse-whispering himself, looking back on the mystic path that has led him from Fort Worth's Stockyards to a movie set in Montana.

"I just believe we're all here, doing what we do, but we're guided," he said. "A little force sort of guided me down here, and said, 'This is your next step.'"

"Like at the White Elephant," he continued. "John Lomax collected cowboy songs there 75 years ago to the day that I ended up at the White Elephant. Why?"

It's almost like the physical-spiritual transcendence in the film, from hectic corporate New York to majestic Montana. Joe Dulle of the White Elephant Saloon remembered clearly the difference when Edwards moved his act from the main stage to the performance space known as Upstairs at The White Elephant several years ago.

"Don was always down in the saloon where there was so much noise," he said. "Up there, there was a different crowd, a more focused audience. Only people who wanted to hear the authentic cowboy poetry would walk up there."

No doubt, they're the same kind of people who will walk up to see "The Horse Whisperer."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

The City of Hereford, Texas will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1996 by 4.09 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on Monday, September 15, 1997, 7:30 P. M. at City Hall, 224 N. Lee St., Hereford, TX.

FOR the proposal: Mayor Josseland, Commissioners Juarez, Coneway, Winget, Black and Eades AGAINST the proposal: None
 PRESENT and not voting: None
 ABSENT: None

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the .4035/$100 tax rate that the unit published on September 7, 1997. The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year	This Year
Average home value	$41,110.00	$43,330.00
General exemptions available (amount available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	$-0-	$-0-
Average taxable value	$41,110.00	$43,330.00
Tax rate	.42/$100	.42/$100
Tax	$172.66	181.99

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would increase by $9.33 or 5.4 percent compared with last year's taxes. Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would not change compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Do you run your business or does it run you?

(First of two parts)

I've seen it a thousand times. It goes on every day in some city and town in America. Someone who just wants to be his or her own boss, becomes trapped in a business that consumes more and more hours of the working day.

The original intention was to use their skills to make more money, control their own schedules and have more time for family or leisure activities. The actual result is a life dominated by the demands of the business. The business is running the entrepreneur, when it should be the other way around.

Only those who experience (or have in the past) this frustrating situation can fully appreciate this column. To most folks who have never owned their own business, the task looks fairly easy. However, the reality is often less income than expected, work that piles up and never gets done, high levels of stress and a growing dislike for the business you once loved.

The three-way fight

Every small-business owner is actually three-people-in-one: the creator, the organizer and the skilled technician.

The creator is the risk-taking, idea-developing, creative personality. This person is the driving force behind the business. Ideas flow faster than they can be implemented or acted on. The creator sees only opportunity. This side of the personality generates large doses of enthusiasm, dreams big dreams and usually is not detail oriented.

The organizer demands order. This side of the small-business owner is uncomfortable with the chaos created by the creator. The organizer wants to manage details. The organizer wants neat files, numbers in rows and columns and minimal change. The organizer feels the need to clean up the messes the creator makes while creating.

The third side of the entrepreneur's personality is the skilled technician. This person is the real reason the business got started in the first place. The technical skills may be in music, carpentry, mechanics or sales. The skilled musician may open a music store. The carpenter may start a construction or remodeling business. The mechanic may open a repair shop, etc.

The technician does the work that produces the revenue. All too often, the work becomes the driving force in the business. There is little or no time for planning, organizing, improving or taking care of nagging operational details that take time away from producing income.

These three personalities are usually at odds with one another. The creator dreams of opening another store, expanding into new products and becoming rich. The organizer just wants a clean office, sales tax reports filled out and a little time to plan. The technician is worn out from painting, hammering, baking, typing, or whatever, and just wants a rest from the hectic, stressful pace.

All too often, at the end of another very long day, many entrepreneurs begin to feel like the businesses they planned to run are now running them. The business has become the boss. The owners are now slaves to their business.

There is good news. If you're losing control, there are practical methods for regaining your sense of direction. You can learn to balance priorities and move forward to even greater challenges. You can even get all three of your entrepreneurial personalities working together.

There are six steps in my R.E.G.A.I.N.® system. In next week's column, I'll share these steps with you. While they offer no miracle cure, no instant solution or one-minute answer, they can, if implemented, help you regain both the control of your business and the desire to fulfill your dreams. Don't miss part two, next week.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Surprise, surprise, yes it is two weeks in a row with an article from Librarian Rebecca Walls. You see I made a deal with Assistant Martha Russell. The deal was if she would write the article the week I was on vacation, which would make it two weeks in a row for her, then I would write it for her regularly scheduled week. So here it is 7 p.m. on Tuesday, the library is very quiet and I am trying to come up with a good article opening.

Oh, I know. I'll tell you about meeting my reading teacher today and express my thanks to her for being there for me.

I know there are a lot of teachers that have found it difficult to begin the school year with the dedication and enthusiasm that they once had. Please let me take a moment to tell you once again how important you are to the future of each of your students. There were a number of teachers in my educational career that gave up on me.

You see I was an unmotivated student. That means if it was new or different I didn't want to have anything to do with it, and since school work is new and different almost on a daily basis, I wasn't very receptive. Mrs. Abney was that teacher that waited for me to have enough of rebellion and frustration and then showed me how to start, what the next step should be, and the next step, until measurable progress was made.

Mrs. Abney was the first one to show me those points in progress. She was the first teacher that was excited and proud of me because of the progress I was making and one on one she told me how she felt. For the first time it seemed that even though I wasn't the smartest kid in class there was hope that I wouldn't be the dumbest.

Or even though I may not ever be the valedictorian, I could still dream of a future and fulfill that dream. Now I never dreamed of becoming a librarian, but I did dream of helping others discover their potential knowing one doesn't have to settle. Many opportunities come throughout our lives and we must learn to recognize those that are good and be courageous enough to take the step that goes beyond the comfort level and discover the progress that can be made. Teachers, not only can you make a difference, but you are making a difference.

The reading opportunities for the week include Life Support by Tess Gerriston. Dr. Toby Harper has just started her overnight ER rotation at Springer Hospital and everything is calm. Toby has reason to be proud of her ER track record. She is becoming a good doctor. The man Toby admits is delirious and in critical condition suffering from a possible viral infection of the brain.

Throughout the prescribed treatment the patient barely responds. Toby leaves him for a few minutes and when she returns he has disappeared. Toby must now face the hospital administration for losing a patient. Concerned that she might have missed a life-threatening diagnosis, Toby is determined to find the patient.

When a second delirious patient dies in the care of the hospital it is discovered that the infection can only be spread through direct tissue exchange. Now it is up to Toby to discover what is going on and how the home for the elderly is involved.

Grail by Stephen R. Lawhead is the story of the gravely injured King Arthur and how his wounds heal and life is restored by the sacred relic, the Holy Grail.

Now in this time of rampant disease and death, King Arthur wants to share the Grail's healing powers to all those in need. A shrine will be built for the Grail in the Kingdom of Summer. Unbeknownst to Arthur, the beautiful maiden in his court will seduce the king's most loyal champion and disappear with the Grail.

The search for the Grail will lead Arthur and his Dragon Flight through realms of magic and the undead to the confrontation with Morgian, Queen of Air and Darkness.

Bad Memory by Duane Frankfort begins with computers being misconfigured, shipments misdirected and a trickle of angry calls directed to the sales division of the Hutsonbased Simtec Corporation.

"Hector" is his name and "Trojan Horse" is his operation. Hector has breached the well-guarded walls of Simtec, the world's largest manufacturer of personal computers, by entering the back door and he is now attacking the computer network. Simtec is under siege.

Respected troubleshooter, Barry Shepard, is also the number three man at Simtec. Barry has just received a ransom note promising that a one-million dollar payoff will insure the company's reputation from further damage. The leaders of Simtec vow to fight Hector not knowing that their every defense and counterattack will be met with a more damaging offensive.

Diane Hughes, the newly promoted CEO, must face the relentless test of her leadership. She must make the choices that will determine whether the company survives or not. But Hector has personally targeted Barry, his wife and daughter and for them life may soon end. A time bomb has been loaded into the hard drive and time is running out.

Library events that are coming later this month are: The election of officers for the Friends of the Library on the evening of Sept. 15; Family Film, Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory, on Sept. 18. My sons graduation from Wyoming Technical Institute on Sept. 19 isn't a library event but it is a special date marked on the librarian's calendar.

Farm and Ranch

Landowners get payment for idle land

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers nationwide will have five weeks beginning in October to receive government payments in return for idling environmentally sensitive land, Agriculture Department officials said last week.

The Oct. 14-Nov. 14 Conservation Reserve Program signup period will give thousands of farmers, including many in Texas, whose land was rejected in the spring another chance and permit those whose contracts expire next September an opportunity to keep the land idle.

"This is an opportunity for landowners to participate in a cost-effective, voluntary program to improve their land, water and wildlife resources," said Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

USDA is authorized to retire 36.4 million acres in CRP, which pays farmers a rental rate under 10- or 15-year contracts not to plant crops on land. About 27.8 million acres are currently in the program.

The nation's largest land conservation program, CRP was overhauled this year to place more emphasis on environmental protection and less on controlling what kinds of crops are planted on farms.

That caused some confusion in the spring signup, in which more than 7.1 million acres were rejected.

Glickman said farmers should learn as much as possible about tailoring the land they bid to fit the new Environmental Benefits Index, a primary factor in deciding which land gets in CRP. The index weighs each parcel on such things as how prone it is to wind or water erosion, how expensive it is and whether it is good habitat for wildlife.

"Landowners who do this have a higher likelihood that their acreage will be accepted," Glickman said.

Agriculture officials made some revisions in the index to better reflect wind speed, moisture conditions, soils and the benefits that planting certain grasses or trees can have for specific birds, fish and animals.

The index cutoff threshold will not be determined until after all farmers offer their land in mid-November, Glickman added. That means farmers should not assume their previous index number will either get them in CRP or keep them out this time.

The spring CRP signup enrolled 16.1 million acres, far less than authorized by Congress. But Glickman has repeatedly said the new CRP will focus on setting aside only the most environmentally sensitive acreage, with the rest going back into farm production.

The new CRP rules drew numerous complaints from farmers and members of Congress from states where hundreds of thousands of acres were rejected, including Texas, Washington and Minnesota. Some said USDA applied the new rules unevenly across the country, leaving out much eligible land.

Glickman said USDA's local service centers would be setting up public meetings for farmers to ensure "every potential applicant has the information" needed to make a CRP bid.

Researchers decode E-coli bacteria

WASHINGTON (AP) - E. coli, the bacteria family that prompted the nation's largest hamburger recall, has been genetically decoded by researchers, who say the discovery could lead to new drugs or even vaccines against certain food poisonings.

A team led by Frederick Blattner, a University of Wisconsin, Madison, geneticist, have sequenced and mapped the 4,288 genes contained in the 4.6 million base pairs of DNA in a common laboratory strain of E. coli. Experts said the new map is good news for public health and will be of great benefit in the laboratory, where scientists have used E. coli as a workhorse of experimentation and biological discovery.

The University of Wisconsin group beat a Japanese science team by just a few days in a years-long race to sequence all the E. coli DNA. A report on the new gene map will be published Friday in the journal Science.

Blattner said the next step is to find what makes some forms of E. coli deadly while other strains are harmless or even beneficial to digestion.

"The E. coli genome we have sequenced," said Blattner, "is closely related to O157, the E. coli that kills people."

Hamburger contaminated by O157 sickened people in Colorado and led to the recall of 25 million pounds of meat, the largest such recall ever.

Hudson Foods Inc. had to shut down some meat-packing plants and the firm announced Thursday that it was being bought by Tyson Foods Inc.

Forms of E. coli contamination in apple juice, lettuce and fruit also have been blamed in recent years for outbreaks of infection.

Now that his team has completed the E. coli gene map, Blattner said, "one of the first things we will do is a comparison with O157 so we can pick out the genes that are responsible for causing illness."

Blattner said the gene map "is the first big step" toward developing vaccines or drugs against the disease-causing strains of E. coli.

"The ability to attach to cells in the intestine and then express toxins is controlled by some genes that we don't know yet, but this map puts us on the trail," he said.

Harmful types of E. coli, such as O157, put out highly destructive toxins that poison healthy cells. The infection can kill elderly or the very young. Some patients who survive develop kidney failure or brain damage. Urinary infections and attacks of diarrhea are frequently caused by strains of E. coli.

Practical meeting for area producers scheduled

Ranchers looking for practical and creative ways to better manage their operations are invited to attend the High Plains Producers' Conference Thursday, Sept. 11 from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Hereford Independent School Administration Building.

The free conference is being presented in cooperation with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Deaf Smith County Extension Livestock Committee.

It is one in a series of five regional meetings which TSCRA is conducting in Texas and Oklahoma. Hi-Pro Animal Health is underwriting the project.

"We feel that we must take our educational information out to the producer face-to-face in order to truly fulfill our mission as a grassroots organization," said TSCRA President C. Coney Burgess.

"Conditions are different in each area; we have to be there to hear what our members want from their association and offer area-specific information to help them survive," he said.

Burgess said TSCRA directors and staff from each region will be available to help during the conference.

Kenneth Chambers, TSCRA field inspector for the Dawn Area will give the official welcome in Hereford.

Following the introduction, producers will hear from Steve Lewis, D.V.M., consulting veterinarian and owner of Hereford Veterinary Clinic, on the profitability of keeping cattle healthy.

Other speakers will include Dr. Carl Patrick, professor and extension entomologist, Dennis Newton, Deaf Smith County extension agent.

Dr. Ted McCollum, extension beef specialist will present a program on better and proper nutrition for beef cattle.

An "At Risk Behavior on Ranch Horses" program will be presented by Wayne Kirkland of ManagedComp of Dallas and Jim Leonard of Arthur Gallagher of Dallas.

"We are excited about adding some safety education to this year's conferences," said J.D. Cargill, TSCRA's director of marketing and member services.

We believe that whether a person was reared on horseback or just beginning to learn to ride, there is always more to learn, especially when it comes to the safety factors."

Information on services available from Hi-Pro Animal Health, First Texas Federal Land Bank Association in Lubbock, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Texas.

Members of TSCRA and non-members alike are invited to attend. Two CEU credits will be given to those who attend the program.

Those interested in attending the free conference should leave a message on TSCRA voice mail at (800)242-7820, extension 7820.

TCFA plans meeting

Texas Cattle Feeders Association chose "Visualizing the Future" as the theme of its 1997 annual convention to point out the many changes in the cattle feeder industry and the changing consumer marketplace.

The opening session, on Nov. 16 will feature TCFA president James Herring, who will share his thoughts on the the past year and his vision for the future of cattle feeding.

Gov. George W. Bush has been invited to update cattle feeders on the future of agri-business in Texas.

Participants will get a glimpse of how technology will affect their future from Dr. Dale Webb, associate director of the Mid-Continent Technology Transfer Center.

For cattlemen, visualizing the future may mean visualizing the industry in a different light.

Gary Hoover, founder of the company that became the foundation for Barnes and Noble booksellers, will share his vision of retail trends and what it will take to be an entrepreneur of the future.

Other feature speakers include Capt. Al Haynes, pilot of an United Airlines flight, which crash landed in a Midwest cornfield and John Huston, executive vice president of the NCBA Center for Consumer Marketing.

For more information on the TCFA Convention contact TCFA at (806)358-3681.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
 Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 --Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 --Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 --Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 -- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Home: Exotic design

By BARBARA MAYER
For AP Special Edition

From the pages of mail order catalogs to the hallowed halls of designer showroom buildings, an extraordinary diversity of unusual home accessories is becoming available to American consumers.

The exotic comes in many sizes and shapes, taking in folk objects and carved furniture originating in southeast Asia, African textiles, Mexican tin items such as mirror frames and lanterns, and even the borrowed motifs and bright colors of distant places as depicted on home textiles and wallpaper.

Exotic home furnishings are being shown not to replace traditional western home decorating, but to enliven it. The brilliant hues and unusual shapes add an unexpected individuality to rooms.

"When we add exotic accessories to the more familiar furnishings pictured in our catalogs, such as traditional pine pieces, customers really respond," says Bette Rosenberg, a consultant to the Spiegel catalog and former home furnishings coordinator.

Beyond novelty, other reasons cited for the popularity of decorating elements from far-flung places include the growth of imports and changing immigration patterns, with more people from southeast Asia and Latin America settling in the United States and bringing their tastes with them.

A colorful Asian influence is one of the main home textile trends for 1997, according to Cynthia White.

"The trend has already started at the designer level, and by 1997, Asian-influenced designs will be available at broader price ranges," says White, home fashions director of Cotton, Inc., a non-profit organization of American cotton growers and importers of cotton textiles.

White recently surveyed new fabrics by European and English companies, which often embrace trends up to a year in advance of American companies. She found an array of designs depicting camels, elephants, tents and turbaned figures. Designs that she says especially illustrate the direction in fabrics include the "Nomad Collection" by Osborne & Little of England and "Cloth Merchants," a fabric by Paris-based Pierre Frey depicting 18th century Chinese and Mogul traders.

Some of the colors that are coming on strong, such as red, orange and clay-pink, also are associated with an Asian feeling, she says. White also found a number of African-inspired design motifs in fabrics, such as animal prints and color combinations of brown, gray and black.

The African influence has extended beyond fabric to include a wide range of accessories. There is, for example, the Duma Collection. Introduced about a year ago, the collection - manufactured by about 17 different companies - now includes wall decor, accessories, lamps and shades, leather furniture, rugs, throws, and pillows.

The inspirations for the products come from regions in east, west, south and central Africa, says Reginald Powe, president of the Heritage Collection, Inc., of New York, the company that organized the collection and is licensing the designs to various companies.

In selecting exotic textiles and accessories as accents, Americans are hardly breaking new ground, of course. The use of Oriental imports such as rugs, porcelains and silks dates back at least to the 17th century.

"What is new is that the definition of exotic has broadened," says Anne Martin, marketing director for the Gramercy wallcovering and fabric brand of F. Schumacher & Co.

In 1995 and 1996, Gramercy came out with three new collections of wallpaper and fabric inspired by the designs and colors of Africa ("Odyssey Africaine"), the American southwest and south of the border ("Saddle Creek") and the Caribbean.

"Plantations," the Caribbean collection, was designed with the cooperation of the Barbados National Trust. Individual patterns pick up on Caribbean colors, flora and fauna, and architectural details of plantation buildings.

Life of Miss America not just fun in the sun

Tara Holland, the reigning Miss America, ends her term by crowning this year's winner of The Miss America Pageant Saturday on ABC. The 77th anniversary broadcast airs from Atlantic City, N.J., and features some changes, including a revamped swimsuit competition.

The Miss America Pageant gets a face lift and tummy tuck for its 77th anniversary broadcast Saturday, Sept. 13, on ABC.

In an effort to rejuvenate and modernize the annual event, which started out as a "bathing beauty" contest in 1921, the organizers have some major changes planned for this year.

"The Miss America Organization is the largest scholarship program in the country exclusively for women," reigning Miss America Tara Holland says. "(In 1996), the organization gave out $32 million in scholarships."

In tune with making the pageant more scholastically oriented, a professional broadcast journalist is asking the top five contestants unscreened, unstaged interview questions, instead of the pre-planned questions asked in past years.

"The journalist is the most important change," Holland says. "It will show the American public what Miss America does. It's all about going to press conferences."

"We've made a studied effort to create a new, exciting, cutting-edge environment," says Leonard C. Horn, president and CEO of the Miss America Organization and executive producer of the Miss America telecast. The broadcast has been too predictable in past years, he says, "and change is extremely important."

The change most people are talking about is in the rules of the swimsuit competition. Instead of a one-piece bathing suit traditionally supplied by the Miss America Organization, contestants have a choice between one- and two-piece bathing suits selected by themselves off the rack.

Horn says this move is designed to stress the distinct personality of each different contestant.

"(This change is) in an effort to display their individuality, their taste, the way they would go to a pool or a beach or a lake where they come from, and not have to go get all dolled up in something which is artificial," he says.

That same reasoning is behind the change from the evening gown competition to the evening wear competition, Horn says. He adds this change is designed so women "wear something they would wear at home and not anything they wouldn't be caught dead in."

Holland says the Miss America Pageant showcases women who are talented, intelligent and physically fit. "Miss America has evolved as women have evolved," she says. It advocates the women of the '90s, "and I am proud to represent such an organization."

What sets Miss America apart from other beauty pageants, Holland explains, is the emphasis placed on each contestant's platform: how, if chosen, she will help alleviate a problem facing the country. Holland's platform is literacy.

"I spend 95 percent of my time making speeches, mostly to charity and not-for-profit organizations," she says. Before becoming Miss America, she worked for six years in literacy programs and wasn't as successful as she would have liked to be in trying to convince local officials about the importance of the literacy issue. "As Miss America, I could bring attention to the problem nationally," Holland says.

This civic-mindedness, Horn says, is part of what makes the Miss America pageant more important than ever. "These are women who care about others," he says. "In today's world, we don't seem to have too many role models. This organization takes young, intelligent college women ages 17 to 24, and gives them the opportunity to articulate opinions and display talent, to become true wholesome role models for young people."

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ September 7-13 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
You remain exceptionally calm during a very hectic week, Aries. Problems at work cause you to stay late a few days, and pressures at home need your immediate attention. While you feel like you're being pulled in 10 different directions, you can handle it. Just get organized, and set your priorities. Leo plays a key role.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Your deliberate nature wins out over a co-worker's complaints. You don't let his or her whining deter you from the work at hand. Superiors are impressed. An intriguing stranger enters your life later in the week. Find out more about him or her, but don't show your interest until you know more.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Your emotions change quickly as the week progresses, Gemini. Early in the week, things go well, and you are fine. However, by midweek, you get extremely upset over a minor problem. Remain calm, because deep down inside, you know that everything will work out.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
You're the center of attention this week, Cancer, as friends and loved ones spend a lot of time with you. Enjoy it, because you don't always have this much time to share with those you love. Open up to them. Scorpio and Sagittarius play important roles later in the week.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Try to be sympathetic to a friend whose efforts cause you to lose something that's important to you. He or she really was trying to be helpful. A loved one needs your advice. Be honest, even though the truth can be painful sometimes. Your honesty is appreciated.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
While you'd rather be alone this week, Virgo, it's not an option for you. Co-workers need your input on an important project, and loved ones need you to help with a family problem. Don't shy away from your responsibilities - no matter how much you really want to. Aries plays a key role early in the week.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
It's a quiet week, and that will make you restless. Try to keep yourself busy around the house, and seek the company of friends and loved ones. Now is the perfect time for you to start a new fitness program. You've been wanting to do it, so why put it off any longer? Get motivated.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
You're not naive, so don't let a co-worker try to pull the wool over your eyes. Seek the truth, and try to stop him or her before a serious problem arises. A loved one pays you a surprise visit. Enjoy catching up with each other. Leo and Gemini play important roles.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
There's a big change in store for you this week, Sagittarius. Don't get nervous - everything works out in your favor, even though it doesn't seem like it will early in the week. You've got the perfect opportunity to motivate yourself and work diligently to reach a longtime goal.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't be stubborn during the middle of the week. Something that looks like it will create a problem really won't. If you pay attention to the situation, you can realize this and seize a golden opportunity to enhance your financial status. Someone very close to you can help.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
This week, a touchy situation at work calls for you to be diplomatic. Don't make any rash decisions or harsh judgments without trying to learn all of the facts. Superiors have their eyes on you. An old friend calls you up. Meeting him or her can be the start of a romantic relationship.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
It seems like everyone needs your help this week, Pisces. From co-workers to loved ones to friends, your advice and loyalty is called upon by just about everyone you know. Don't get overwhelmed. Remain calm, cool and collected, and you can be everything to everyone.

HIGHLIGHTS

The "art nun" takes viewers on a 30,000-mile tour of some of the world's greatest works of art in Sister Wendy's Story of Painting, a five-part series premiering Sunday on PBS (check local listings).

Sister Wendy spreads the gospel of fine art

Q: What's black and white and likes Andy Warhol?

A: Sister Wendy Beckett, the "art nun."

Though she insists her hands are practically useless — she can't sew, garden, cook or draw, she says — and she doesn't sing or fly like some film and TV nuns, Sister Wendy does possess the gifts of sight and insight.

She unveils great works of art in Sister Wendy's Story of Painting, a five-week series premiering Sunday, Sept. 7, on PBS (check local listings).

Born in South Africa and educated at Oxford, Sister Wendy was coaxed away from her quiet, contemplative existence in a trailer outside a Carmelite monastery in England by the vocation of inspiring those not interested in viewing or appreciating art.

Her 30,000-mile art odyssey stretches from the cave paintings of France to the New York School. Along the way, she caresses the Book of Kells, contemplates the Mona Lisa's smile and studies what she calls "the greatest painting in the world" (surprise, it's a Velazquez). And she never reads from a script.

"Art is just another way of being exposed to beauty," Sister Wendy says.

"All creativity shows the hand of God. Certainly, in art it's very clear that this human being (the artist) has been privileged to look, as it were, into the divine depths and bring something back to us."

Fifty years in holy orders haven't made Sister Wendy a prude or a cultural fish out of water. She knows some viewers will marvel at her ability to laugh and make jokes and to appear "practically human," but says it would break her heart if viewers didn't concentrate on the paintings as they are discussed.

Less than 10 minutes into the first episode, "The Mists of Time/The Hero Steps Forth," Sister Wendy delivers what at first might appear to be a melodramatic speech about the stirring Lascaux cave paintings. Tape it and listen to it again in five weeks. When the novelty fades, the art nun's passion becomes infectious.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Can you clarify the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Jack Nance, who played Pete Martell on Twin Peaks? -Claire Markiewicz, Jacksonville, Fla.

A: On Dec. 29, 1996, Nance got into a fight with two men in a South Pasadena, Calif., doughnut shop and received a blow to the head. A friend came by Nance's home to check on him the next morning and found the actor dead. The coroner ruled it a homicide.

Q: I haven't seen those ongoing Taster's Choice coffee commercials for some time. Is the actress who starred in those commercials Alexandra Vandernoot, who played the love interest of Adrian Paul in Highlander: The Series? My sister says I am dreaming. -Norma Siringano, Venice, Fla.

A: Vandernoot has appeared on Highlander, but that was Sharon Maughan co-starring with Anthony Stewart Head in those coffee commercials.

Head currently co-stars in the hit WB Network series Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

Q: What was Dennis Franz's character's name on Hill Street Blues? Also, I watched McMillan and Wife, which suddenly turned into McMillan. Where did "... and Wife" go? -Debbie G., Green Bay, Wis.

A: Franz played Lt. Norman Buntz on Hill Street Blues. In the last episode of that series, he punched out pompous Police Chief Fletcher Daniels (Jon Cypher), resigned, then moved to sunnier climes with his "associate," Sid "The Snitch" Thurston (Peter Jurasik), in a spinoff called Beverly Hills Buntz, which lasted less than half a season.

Susan Saint James, who played Sally McMillan on McMillan and Wife, left the show in a contract dispute at the end of its next to last season. (Co-star Nancy Walker, who played Mildred, also left to do her own show.) Sally was written out in a fatal plane crash, and the widowed Mac (Rock Hudson) went it solo for the final season.

Q: In the movie Dr. Strangelove ... Gen. "Buck" Turgidson (George C. Scott) had a girlfriend. I believe that she was played by Katey Sagal, who starred as Peggy Bundy on Married ... With Children. Can you confirm this? -J.F. of Louisiana.

A: Dr. Strangelove was released in 1963; Katey Sagal was born in 1956. That was Tracy Reed as Miss Scott, Turgidson's very personal assistant.

Q: My friend and I are fans of Mystery Science Theater 3000. Is it still on? If so, when and where? -P.A. via e-mail.

A: MST3K, as fans call it, appears exclusively on the Sci-Fi Channel, where it airs Saturdays. Bill Corbett is the new voice of Crow T. Robot, replacing Trace Beaulieu, and Patrick Brantseg recently took over the voice of Gypsy from Jim Mallon.

SOAP WORLD

Sterlings' world has never been better

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Imagine waking up with food all over you and not knowing how it got there. Or stopping at a fast-food place, bingeing and then throwing up before stopping at the next restaurant.

These horrifying stories are common among the millions of women who suffer from eating disorders.

Lesli Kay Sterling, who plays Molly on As the World Turns, is all too familiar with both of these stories, having overcome anorexia and bulimia. "I was one of those people who binged in my sleep," she says. "You feel so helpless, so out of control."

But during a group session, Sterling heard the startling story of a woman who stopped at one restaurant after another, bingeing and purging at each establishment. That tale set Sterling on the path to recovery. "After she told us that story, I thought to myself that I never wanted to get that bad," she says.

Sterling is healthier than ever. Her eating disorders have been under control for a few years now, and she's helped to counsel many who suffer from these ailments.

In an effort to help spread the word on eating disorders, Sterling has joined the Mental Health Awareness Project for 1998.

"I feel like I'm in a great position to have my dream come true, which is to counsel people with eating disorders on a much larger scale," Sterling says. "Beginning in January, I will be visiting colleges and talking to the students."

"There are a lot of things they need to learn, but the most important is to learn to love who you are and your body. Once you do that, it all comes together."

It has certainly all come together for Sterling. Her character on ATWT quickly has become a fan favorite, an amazing feat considering Molly is responsible for breaking up supercouple Holden and Lily (Jon Hensley, Martha Byrne).

"The fans have been really nice. Even if they don't want Molly with Holden, they say, 'Please just leave Holden alone,' but most of them are like, 'You go, girl!'"
