WEEKEND Profile

GARCIA: He's taking page from book

By VIRGINIA ARTHO
Special to The Brand

Frank Garcia seems to have taken a page out of the book by centenarians Bessie and Sadie Delaney.

The sisters gained nationwide recognition with the publication of two books - "Having Our Say" and "The Delany Sisters' Book of Everyday Wisdom."

In the latter book, Sadie states: "Most folks think getting older means giving up, not trying anything new. Well, we don't agree with that. As long as you can see each day as a chance for something new to happen, something you never experienced before, you will stay young. ... Even after a century of living, we haven't tried everything. We've on just started."

Bessie died at 104 with 106-year-old Sadie by her side. Boston Globe syndicated columnist Ellen Goodman said: "If there is an epitaph, I hope it reads simply: 'Here lies Bessie Delany. She was undaunted.'"

Hereford has its own volumes of wisdom in senior citizens who spend their lives trying something new. One of those undaunted souls is Garcia, 83, an employee of the Hereford YMCA.

Garcia's colorful, memorable life began in Variadero, N.M.

"A few years after, we moved to Colorado. I took school in El Moro, Colo., and Trinidad. Probably 1925, Mama wanted to visit her sister. We came over here to Texas, and Mama (became) sick and died. She's buried in Petersburg, Texas," Garcia said.

"We went back to Colorado, but my dad couldn't bear it there anymore, so we came back to New Mexico. I went to school right in Variadero, a small school made out of rock. There was only two rooms."

"There wasn't much of jobs to do then. My dad used to work, but there wasn't much money. That's the way it happens sometimes. He got married and we couldn't make it with my stepmother, so I had to quit school to feed my brother and (three) sisters. I was the oldest one in the family, maybe 16 or 17. I used to work anywhere I could. I even ran a herd as a shepherd and attending lambing season in Vaughn, N.M."

"I was a CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps) boy about 1934-36, more or less. At that time, we built up forests in Santa Fe, N.M. I worked with Indians fencing the reservation right there in Santa Fe," he said.

Garcia also assisted at Silver City,

N.M., where the workers were "stationed right down on the side of the Gila River."

Over 60 years ago, Garcia worked with the CCC laying Hereford's brick streets.

"I was in El Paso when they sent me here. I was about the first Hispanic to be here. There was nothing but the main street. That drain in the new park was made by the CCC boys, too. There was a CCC camp out west of town where the prisoner camps used to be during the war. When the war was over, that's when they moved the barracks over here to the labor camp," he said.

The CCC sent 200 men in 1934 to build a clubhouse east of Hereford and landscape the surrounding area for a state park (Veteran's Memorial Park). In 1940, the state deeded the clubhouse and park to Deaf Smith County and the clubhouse was sold in 1947 to the local American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars posts.

Garcia and his wife, Rosa, married in 1941, when she was 15 and he was 26.

"I was in school before Rosa was, but she was young. Then she started growing and growing and growing. I didn't live very far from her, so I was keeping care of her. She was going to be my wife."

"The rest of the people that lived there were kinfolks to her, and I wasn't. We've been married almost 57 years," he said.

Garcia teases his wife that when she dies, he wants her to be buried somewhere besides next to him. After spending so many years together, he jokes he's tired of her. But their devotion is unquestionable.

"I worked at the WPA (Works Progress Administration) in Trujillo, N.M., in 1941. The WPA was a project to help people who didn't have much money then. It was $20 a week. I believe. We had to buy stamps for gasoline and stamps for food, because it was during (World War II).

In the WPA, Garcia helped construct highways and build dams and dikes.

"We built that highway that runs from Tucumcari to Trujillo. The most interesting jobs I had was WPA and the CCC," Garcia said.

"After that, I went into the Army, but I didn't qualify."

"For many years, I was working in the railroad for Southern Pacific and very proud of it. I was a section laborer. A section laborer built up the rail so it would be in condition for trains to travel on through. I built up all the stations down in three places: Montoya, N.M., Cuervo, N.M., and then returned to Montoya," he said.

"(In 1945), I moved to Tucumcari and went to work for Southern Pacific ... in the round house. The round house is where you turn a machine to turn locomotives around. It was like a wheel and had tracks. We had to put that (locomotive) right on the tracks and then turn it around facing the other way. One person could do it because it was easy to do," Garcia said.

"Every time that train came by, we used to change that locomotive around and hook up to boxcars and load on the equipment. We was getting the locomotives always ready to be on the rails with coal, water and sand (to put behind the wheels for traction). The locomotives were ready to haul Army

Happy Birthday to you!
Happy Birthday to you!
Happy 100th Birthday, dear Hereford.
Happy Birthday to you!

Hereford residents, past and present, will celebrate this city's centennial, complete with a birthday cake.

Kickoff for the nine-day long celebration will begin July 31 with a live concert by Emilio in Whiteface Stadium.

An "eight-day" week will follow concluding on Saturday, Aug. 8, with Centennial Jubilee Day, featuring the Centennial Parade and culminating with a fireworks display in Veterans Park.

A special aspect of Hereford's heritage will be the central theme for each day's activities.

Aug. 1 is Cowboy Heritage Day. The Spicer Gripp Memorial Roping will be held beginning at 10 a.m. at Circle A Arena. Cowboy action shooting will also take place that day.

The Anchor Club will sponsor Cow Patty Bingo and a community wide barn dance in the Little Bull Barn.

While team roping and steer roping events will continue on Sunday, a community-wide church service will be the highlight of Religious Heritage Day. Hereford Ministerial Alliance will sponsor the service at 6 p.m. in Dameron Park and it will include homemade ice cream.

Agriculture Heritage Day on Monday will feature an antique farm implement show, farm tours and feedlot tours.

Tours will also be given of the E.B. Black House and gardens and a ladies salad luncheon -- with seating for 50 -- will be held in the Black House.

Tuesday's special events will center on youth activities from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Aquatic Center Park with Hereford Police Department as the sponsor of this Youth Extravaganza.

No 100th birthday celebration would be complete without a dress-up day. Pilot Club is hosting 1898 Dress-up Day on Wednesday and awards will be presented.

Hereford residents will display their varied backgrounds on Thursday with International Heritage Day.

"The Way It Used to Be" story telling time with representatives of pioneer families will end the day in Dameron Park.

Activities inside and outside at the Deaf Smith County Museum will pay tribute to your Historical Heritage on Friday.

Representatives of pioneer families will again be special guests at the raising of the 1948 time capsule at 7 p.m. Friday at the Deaf Smith County Court House.

Raising of the time capsule buried in 1973 is to be held Saturday, Centennial Jubilee Day, in conjunction with other events normally held during the annual Town and Country Jubilee.

SkyTalk

by John Gilmore

A new column, making its debut on Page 12A of today's issue of The Hereford Brand, will bring the heavens closer to those readers who would like to know more about the composition of a starlit night.

The column, "Sky Talk" by John Gilmore, will appear initially on a semi-monthly basis in the Brand's weekend edition and will offer helpful tips on identifying stars and constellations, in addition to discussing current space exploration and astronomical findings.

While the column is being offered as a test in this market, The Hereford Brand editorial staff believes there is enough general interest in the subject of astronomy to offer this column as an additional item of interest to our readers.

"You don't have to talk to John very long to discover his fascination for astronomy," said Brand general manager Mauri Montgomery. "He has devoted a great amount of time and attention to his personal study of the stars, and his ability to write about astronomy in layman's terms brings some hope for those of us who usually associate the word pulsar with the name of a wristwatch."

Gilmore, the son of Ernest and Tillie Gilmore of Hereford, is a 1967 graduate of Hereford High School and has attended Amarillo College.

Gilmore and his wife, Sherry, have two sons, Paul, 13, who lives at home and Alex, 23, who serves in the Navy in San Diego, Calif.

"Sky Talk" columns will regularly feature charts, maps and graphs relating to the topics being discussed and should be saved for future reference. Readers wishing to obtain additional reference material or information may contact Gilmore by writing to: John Gilmore, 1408 17th St., Hereford 79045, or by e-mail: ASTROX@wrt.net

Hereford gets new shot at ELC

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Hereford telephone customers will get another chance to decide if they want expanded local calling (ELC) to exchanges in Amarillo and Canyon.

The Texas Public Utility Commission, which on June 8, voided the ballots for the election after it was determined there were discrepancies between the number of Southwestern Bell customers and the number of ballots distributed.

The PUC directed Southwestern Bell to resolve the discrepancies and provide a new list of telephone numbers in the Hereford exchange.

The PUC also has directed the telephone company to provide a commission-approved published notice, with one month allowed for publishing the notice, and distribute a ballot, marked "2nd Ballot" and printed on a different color paper from the first ballot. The different color ballot will enable both the telephone customers and the PUC distinguish between the two ballots.

The PUC staff also was directed to create a list of Hereford telephone numbers for the petition coordinator, Dennis Hicks of Hicks Well Service.

At the same time, the PUC established a new schedule for the ELC election. The ballots are to be distributed on Aug. 20. Customers who participate in the election must mail in the ballots no later than Sept. 4. The results of the balloting should be released Sept. 29.

The original ballots were sent out April 20 by Southwestern Bell to its customers in the Hereford exchange after the PUC approved a petition, coordinated by Hicks, calling for an election on toll-free telephone service between Hereford and the Amarillo/Canyon exchanges.

By April 27, Linda Hymans, the commission's ELC coordinator, began receiving calls from Hereford subscribers who had not received a ballot.

Subscribers were asked to send Hymans a letter stating they had not received a ballot and how they would have voted.

Seventeen letters were received by the PUC; however, when the PUC staff checked those names with the master list supplied by the telephone company, the names were not on the list of subscribers.

The master list was verified with 7,592 access lines, but only 4,620 ballots were mailed. Multiple lines were eliminated, as were SW Bell test lines, leaving about 3,000 subscribers without ballots.

The PUC ordered the telephone company to file a written report explaining the discrepancies.

Hicks has said he doesn't believe the discrepancy was deliberate, saying he thinks it was just a mistake by the telephone company.

If 70 percent of the subscribers who return the second ballots approve of the ELC, the PUC would order SW Bell to stop charging long-distance toll between Hereford and the Amarillo/Canyon exchanges.

SW Bell's customers in Hereford would see a new line-item charge on their monthly telephone bills. The company would charge up to $3.50 for residential customers and up to $7 for commercial customers for expanded calling.

The ELC was designed to enable communities, such as Hereford, with less than 10,000 telephone lines to petition the PUC for toll-free service with larger communities. For example, Vega already has ELC with both Amarillo and Hereford.

In a previous ELC election, some Hereford residents apparently were confused about the telephone exchanges involved. Although there are several prefixes in Amarillo, the city is considered one exchange for purposes of the ELC.

Supporters of ELC have contended the ELC will be beneficial to Hereford commissioners will conduct public hearings on two requests for zoning changes when they meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chambers at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

After conducting the public hearings on the requests for zoning changes at 120-136 N. 25 Mile Ave. and 240 N. 25 Mile Ave., the commissioners will meet in regular session.

- During the regular session, the commissioners will:
- Discuss a mutual use agreement for recreational and athletic facilities with the Hereford Independent School District;
  - Consider a Hereford Economic Development Corp. agreement with American Modular Building; and
  - Receive a report from HEDC.

Back to school time again

Children attending elementary school classes in the Hereford Independent School District during the 1998-99 school year, will register during a two-day period later this month at the HISD Elementary Intake Center.

Kindergarten and pre-kindergarten students will register July 28, and first- through sixth-grade students will register July 29.

School district officials emphasize all elementary registration will be completed on these days and individual campuses will not be open. Students need not be present.

Parents must provide birth certificates, Social Security cards and immunization records at the time of registration.

Students needing immunizations prior to registration may obtain that service at the Texas Department of Health Clinic which has extended its hours and will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on both registration days. Parents must bring the students' existing records when obtaining new immunizations.

STEP results

Drivers seem to be getting the idea that seat belt laws are meant for them as well as everyone else, that is if the results of the latest STEP campaign are accurate.

During the July 4th holiday, July 2-6, Hereford police officers noted a 85 percent compliance rate for seat belt use.

Cpl. Terry Brown said this number is up from three years ago when only slightly more than 50 percent compliance.

Brown also said that the number of child passengers, who should have been secured in a child safety seat dipped slightly to only 62 percent.

"We really need to get parents to fasten their children in the safety seats," said Brown.

Even with the high number of drivers and front seat passengers wearing seat belts the department issued 366 tickets.

Officers will participate in a roving STEP campaign, watching for seat belt and child safety seat violations on July 31-Aug. 1.

Mostly clear

Tonight, a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, otherwise mostly clear, lows in the mid-60s.

TEXAS HEAT

Number of confirmed victims on the rise

DALLAS (AP) - The death toll continues to rise with the mercury in Texas, as more people have been confirmed as victims of the unending 100-degree heat.

At least 35 people across the state have died in the sweltering temperatures since June 1.

Even scattered thunderstorms have brought little relief. Highs across the state are still forecast at or above 100 degrees through Sunday, and likely through Wednesday.

Temperatures in Dallas hit the century mark for the 12th consecutive day Friday. Austin, Killeen, Temple, Waco and Bryan all recorded highs above 100 degrees by early afternoon.

National Weather Service meteorologist Skip Ely in Fort Worth said the long-term forecast shows an increase in clouds and showers from the Gulf of Mexico, but no immediate relief.

"There are a lot of things that happen that could be misleading,"

Ely said. "Overall, the rest of the summer is going to remain hot. I don't see any relief until September."

Officials across the state Friday verified several more victims of the heat. Among them: a 64-year-old man found dead Thursday at his home in the Dallas suburb of Garland, a homeless man who died in a metal shed in Houston on Wednesday and a Tyler man who died last week while doing repairs in the oppressive heat of his attic.

The latest victim, 91-year-old Allene Gossett, was found dead in her Tyler home Friday. Smith County Justice of the Peace Quincy Beavers said Ms. Gossett's daughter had bought her an air conditioning unit, but the victim never used it for fear of running up her electricity bill.

Also on Friday, the Tarrant County Medical Examiner reported Ulysess Council, 39, of Fort Worth apparently died Thursday from the heat.

Bargains everywhere

Hereford and area residents got an early start on bargain shopping here Saturday morning during the 2nd annual Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce City-wide Garage Sale. According to some garage sale vendors, shoppers showed up a little too early -- 6:30 a.m.

More than 140 garage sales, scattered throughout the community, were on tap for the day. A wide array of Hereford merchants were offering sidewalk sales, and an arts and crafts show was also scheduled.

Republicans seek to raise $2.9 million

AUSTIN (AP) - The Republican Party of Texas is working to raise $2.9 million to help turn out their vote in November, including $1.5 million for the effort to gain a House majority and keep its Senate edge.

"It's just a full-court press," Susan Weddington, head of the state GOP, said.

Republicans - who swept all statewide offices on the 1996 ballot and have taken control of the state Senate for the first time in more than a century in addition - are planning a special push at the House, which is now split 82-68 in Democrats' favor.

The "wish list" budget for the Republican Party Majority (RPM) Committee targeting the Legislature is $1.5 million, Ms. Weddington said. The initial budget for the Victory '98 Committee, which primarily focuses on statewide candidates but also helps those further down the ballot, is $1.4 million.

Ms. Weddington, who also plans to travel to House districts in the quest for eight more GOP seats, said, "There's so much enthusiasm out there, and we just want to be very visible all across Texas."

The Democratic Party isn't looking at having that much money in its House and Senate victory funds, said Jorge Ramirez, Democratic executive director.

"Probably our goal is about $250,000 in each of those accounts," he said, while hastening to add that get-out-the-vote expenditures by other Democratic groups will enhance the effort.

"The Democratic Party has said from the beginning we would never be able to compete with Republican Party special-interest money, and that the challenge for us would be to focus on grassroots organizing throughout the state," he said. "Grassroots organizing ... began the day after the 1996 election."

As for the Democratic equivalent of the Republican's Victory '98 Committee, Ramirez said, "We are going to have a get-out-the-vote campaign that we are at this very moment organizing with the major Democratic statewide candidates. At this point, we don't have a (money-raising) goal."

In the House, Ms. Weddington said the GOP would look particularly at districts that the party estimates have a Republican voting strength of 50 percent or higher - which, among others, would include that of House Speaker Pete Laney, D-Hale Center - but would also look individually at how hard candidates are working and how they're doing.

"We will continually adjust what we may be doing in any of those districts," she said.

Regarding Laney's race, Ms. Weddington acknowledged, "Clearly the longer a person has been in office and he's been in there over a quarter-century, those dynamics right there sometimes make it more difficult to defeat someone."

But she added, "I think we have a shot."

Laney, first elected as a House member in 1972, faces Springlake rancher Hollis Cain, who is making a second bid to unseat him. Laney has been speaker since 1993.

Bush plans tax cuts
Mauro, Bush differ on excess spending

AUSTIN (AP) - As Texas faces the luxury of an anticipated budget surplus, Gov. George W. Bush said Friday he plans to lay out a series of tax cut proposals in the coming months.

He has said those proposals will come after "fully funding the state's priorities, beginning with public education."

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro, meanwhile, said the $3.7 billion surplus anticipated when this two-year budget period ends next year is fuel for his proposals to improve public education, put more police officers on the street and abolish the sales tax on cars, trucks and vans.

"We have an historic opportunity to put Texas families first," Mauro said.

The Republican governor said, "We've got to make sure ... in this day and age of surpluses and cash flow that we don't make a lot of long-term commitments that the state won't be able to fund later on down the road."

"I'm going to propose a series of tax cuts over the course of the next couple of months. I've already laid out two and I intend to lay out some more," Bush said.

Proposals already made by Bush in speeches around the state, said his spokeswoman Linda Edwards, would provide:

- A franchise tax credit for research and development to encourage high-tech companies to invest in Texas. It would cost an estimated $227 million over two years, Ms. Edwards said.
- A franchise tax exemption for small businesses with gross receipts of less than $100,000 a year. It would cost an estimated $35 million over two years and affect about 176,000 businesses.

Mauro's said his proposals would:

- Abolish the 6.25 percent sales tax on cars and trucks, which he dubs a "tax on people getting to work."
- Give teachers a $5,000 pay raise.
- Spend $2 billion on new school buildings to relieve crowded classrooms.

Mauro's said his proposals would:

- Provide scholarships to high school seniors who maintain a B average.
- Put 10,000 more police officers on the streets.
- End the early release of prisoners.

Mauro says Texas could end mandatory early release of all prisoners despite a court decision that Bush and others say ties officials' hands in older cases.

Five hurt in multi-truck
accident

VEGA (AP) - A collision involving three 18-wheelers Friday left one man dead, another in critical condition with severe burns and five others with lesser injuries.

L.B. Snider, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety, said the accident happened just before dawn on Interstate 40, just west of Vega. The crash site is about 30 miles west of Amarillo.

Thomas Dwyer, 44, of Missoula, Mont., who was a passenger in one of the trucks, was killed in the crash.

Troopers say one rig was westbound on I-40 when it crossed over into the eastbound lanes, striking a second truck.

DPS officials were still sorting out the details, but believe some of the men injured had rushed over from a nearby truckstop to help when a third truck slammed into the wreckage.

machinery during the war. There used to be a lot of trains going by carrying ammunition, all that stuff that was used for the war, troops and all that. There wasn't much passenger trains then."

"After that, I worked for the Bureau of Reclamation. That job was welding basket forms to build up cement log joint pipes. From there, I started working for construction jobs, such as we built Conchas Dam. When I was there, I worked on that siphon that's been dug under that mountain -- about three-quarters of a mile -- where the water comes through the dam. I was a pipe sheeter on that job, a motor man and a driller," he said.

"I learned everything on the job, except the Indian reservation (where) we had to put wire, make holes and set the poles -- I already knew that." Garcia and his family moved back to Hereford in 1953.

"Right here in Hereford, I didn't do much potato picking, probably a few times. The sewer plant -- I worked on that thing from the bottom to the top. The other one was so close to town that it was getting terrible, so we built that new one," he said.

"I went to work for Hereford Wrecking Co. when they built that new St. Anthony's Church. Hereford Wrecking Yard had wench trucks that we used to go out there and lift struts. We did the same to Piggly Wiggly."

"When I was working at Hereford Wrecking, I went with the wench truck and picked up cars only when they needed help. Most of the time I used to stay right there and attended to the yard. When farmers would come there and need a disc, I would show them the piles of discs that I would keep separate. All of the farmers around here would know me," he said.

At 63, Garcia became ill and had to quit his job at 28 years.

"I retired from Hereford Wrecking after Mr. Culpepper died," he said.

"I took two months off, then I worked at cutting lawns all kinds of places. That's when I met Jackie Hammett, the supervisor at the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame. When I started working with the Hall of Fame (through the Green Thumb program), there wasn't anybody there, and I had to work on all the trees," he said. Garcia manicured the trees and lawn for the museum until it relocated to Fort Worth.

"Then I was transferred to the Aquatic Center Park. What I was ordered to do was feed the ducks ... see about all the tables they got around there and see about the restrooms and pavilion," he said.

"I started working at the YMCA on Feb. 6. .... Where I'm at now, I'm really happy with that job. I'm sure glad and I thank God now, after so many jobs, I wind up working for the YMCA," he said.

Garcia's job makes it possible for him not only to get out of the house, but to take care of his wife who suffers from arthritis and to offer care to their grandchildren.

"We help our granddaughters as much as we can. We have one granddaughter here until school is over while her mother works in Dallas. We raised that little girl," he said. The Garcias helped provide for several grandchildren by giving them a home and transporting them to school.

"I'm glad I've had the chance to do many, many things -- especially when it's a happy life, no problems. I'm so happy I've lived so many years."

LONDON (AP) - It's Sir Singing Detective now that Prince Charles has knighted Michael Gambon.

The prince tapped Gambon on the shoulder with the ceremonial sword at the Buckingham Palace investiture Friday and joked, "It's not quite dramatic enough, is it?"

The actor is best known to American public television audiences from "The Singing Detective" series.

BOBBY BROWN

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Prosecutors have dropped their sexual battery case against singer Bobby Brown.

"It's my understanding it's due to insufficient evidence," Victoria Pipkin of the Los Angeles County district attorney's office said Friday.

Brown was arrested for investigation of sexual battery June 21 over an alleged incident at the pool at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Police did not release details, but Brown reportedly was accused of slapping a teen-ager on the behind.

Brown, the husband of singer Whitney Houston, denied touching anyone.

Brown, who lives in Mendham, N.J., is best known for his 1988 album "Don't Be Cruel" and the hit single "My Prerogative."

York court's review of an oral contract in which Tyson agreed to keep Rooney as his trainer "for as long as the boxer fights professionally."

Tyson's lawyer did not return a call for comment.

Coyle said his client will be entitled to $7.6 million when interest is added.

In a 1996 trial, a jury awarded the money to Rooney, who had sued the boxer for $49 million. The judge later tossed out the award, saying it was improper because Rooney failed to prove Tyson had a contract with him.

Rooney trained the former heavyweight champion for the first 35 fights of his career, but was fired in 1988. Tyson later said he became angry about the trainer's public comments about his then-marriage to actress Robin Givens and a contract dispute with his former manager.

U.S. staying quiet on covert report

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration sidestepped comment on a published report it was seeking broad new authority from Congress to plan and mount covert operations against Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"I don't comment on intelligence operations; I don't comment on covert operations," White House spokesman Mike McCurry said.

At the Pentagon, Defense Secretary William Cohen also refused to comment on the report in Friday's Wall Street Journal.

"I wouldn't comment on any report pertaining to intelligence matters," Cohen said at a photo session with Romanian President Emil Constantinescu.

The report said the administration had sent a classified notice, or "finding," to Congress seeking approval to tap secret contingency funds in the defense and intelligence budgets for the operation.

The secret initiative would "go far beyond past efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency to encourage resistance inside Iraq." The effort would be "a combined overt-covert strategy to weaken and potentially oust the Iraqi leader."

The report cited unidentified government officials familiar with the talks with Congress as the source for the information.

Congressional leaders have long expressed frustration over being able to deal with Saddam, and have on several occasions considered ways to mount operations against him.

In April, Congress voted to provide $10 million to Iraqi opposition groups to set up a new Radio Free Iraq program. However, the legislation has yet to go to President Clinton, who has threatened a veto over another section tying U.N. payments to anti-abortion restrictions.

Hereford residents and businesses.

For example, Hicks said Hereford Regional Medical Center is a major reason why the ELC should be approved, citing links between HRMC and Baptist St. Anthony's Health System in Amarillo. Many patients who cannot receive treatment at HRMC are transferred to the Amarillo health center, and the consultations between the local physicians and Amarillo facilities can run up the long-distance bills.

An HRMC administrator has acknowledged the hospital would benefit from toll-free calling between Hereford and Amarillo.

Hicks has said the Hereford Independent School District probably spends thousands of dollars each year on telephone calls to the educational service center in Amarillo, as well as to the various Amarillo schools in the same UIL district. Also, the Deaf Smith County Public Library, which is a member of the Amarillo-based consortium, would realize reductions in its telephone bills if the ELC is approved.

Our bank is our people.

And that makes all the difference in the world.

At Hereford State Bank, we learned long ago that what really separates us from other banks is our people. People like Vonnie Elliot and Tama Lassiter.

Vonnie works as a new accounts representative and has been employed with Hereford State Bank since 1987. She has four daughters; Cathy Betzen of Amarillo, Karen McPherson of Hereford, and Joni Koozer and Mary Pierce — both of Lubbock. Vonnie is a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and sings in the church choir.

Tama has been a bank employee for four years and is currently serving as an outside teller. She and her husband Coby have three children; Carley, Berkley and Derek.

We're proud to have Vonnie and Tama, and the many other employees of our bank who work extra hard to make your banking easy.

All banks say they do this — make your banking easier. Being able to do it better than anyone else is the definition of our success.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the key to wisdom is to create problems for which only you have the answers.

Did you ever notice: A journey of a thousand miles often begins with a three-hour delay.

A calendar of events for Hereford's Centennial Celebration was distributed this week by Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, starting with the "Emilio in Concert" on July 31 and ending with all the Jubilee Day events on Aug. 8. Copies of the special brochure are available at the CoFC office. To celebrate Hereford's 100th birthday, the chamber enlisted the help of clubs and other organizations to "sponsor" a day or event during the nine-day observance. They started with the annual Town & Country Jubilee format and enlarged it to come up with a varied and entertaining program of activities that should attract the participation of everyone in the community. A page 1 article in today's paper outlines the busy schedule of events.

The Hereford Brand staff has been working on a special "Centennial Edition" which will be published with the Aug. 2 edition of the newspaper. As soon as we started working on the project in April, we realized the work should have begun sooner, and we signed on several freelance writers to help with the historical articles. Many of our advertisers are helping make the edition possible, and we believe it will be a special paper -- a tribute to Hustlin' Hereford and the people who contributed to the growth and progress of our community.

"Let's face it, English is a crazy language," notes an anonymous article that came our way. There is no egg in eggplant, no ham in hamburger, neither apple or pine in pineapple. English muffins were not invented in England, or French fries in France. Sweetmeats are candies, while sweetbreads, which aren't sweet, are meat.

We take English for granted, but if we explore its paradoxes, we find that quicksand can work slowly, boxing rings are square and a guinea pig is neither from Guinea nor is it a pig.

If the plural of tooth is teeth, why isn't the plural of booth, beeth? One goose, two geese...so one moose, two meese? If you have a bunch of odds and ends and get rid of all but one of them, what do you call it? If teachers taught, why haven't preachers praught? If a vegetarian eats vegetables, what does a humanitarian eat?

In what other language do people recite a play and play at a recital... ship by truck and send cargo by ship...have noses that run and feet that smell? How can a slim chance and a fat chance be the same, while a wise man and a wise guy are opposites? How can overlook and oversee be opposites, while quite a lot and quite a few are alike? How can weather be hot as hell one day and cold as hell another?

Have you noticed that we talk about certain things only when they are absent? Have you ever seen a horseful carriage or a strapful gown...met a sung hero or experience requited love? You have to marvel at the unique lunacy of a language in which your house can burn up as it burns down; in which you fill in a form by filling it out; and in which an alarm clock goes off by going on.

English was invented by people, not computers and it reflects the creativity of the human race (which, of course, isn't a race at all). That is why, when the stars are out, they are visible, but when lights are out, they are invisible. And why, when I wind up my watch, I start it, but when I wind up this story, I end it.

"The longer I live, the more I realize the impact of attitude on life. Attitude, to me, is more important than facts. It is more important than the past, than education, than money, than circumstances, than failures, than successes, than what other people think or say or do. It is more important than appearance, giftedness, or skill. It will make or break a company...a church...a home. The remarkable thing is we have a choice every day regarding the attitude we will embrace for that day. We cannot change our past...we cannot change the fact that people will act in a certain way. We cannot change the inevitable. The only thing we can do is play on the one thing we have, and that is our attitude. I am convinced that life is 10 percent what happens to me and 90 percent how I react to it. And so it is with you...we are in charge of our Attitudes."

Dear Editor:

I noticed in the July 12 issue of The Brand where editor Don Cooper's editorial cartoon showed a milk carton advertising asking if anyone had seen Sid Blankenship.

I can't help you there, for I have no earthly idea where he could be found. But I have an idea that I think will work for this district, especially after my experience with our present Republican congressman.

Why don't we retire our present congressman this November and send Sid to Washington? If Sid cannot be found by November and he does not show up in Washington, just think how much better off we all would be in this district.

Love of politics hereditary

I've always enjoyed politics, it's just politicians I don't like.

I guess I came by my interest in politics honestly. When I was a kid in Nashville, Ark., I used to go to town on Saturdays with my grandfather and sit next to him on a stool in the bus station coffee shop, listening as he and some of the other regulars argued about politics.

Granddad loved to talk about going to Center Point, a small town about seven miles north of the family farm, to hear Jeff Davis, then a candidate for governor speak at a Democratic rally.

Davis won the election, the first of three terms he would serve as Arkansas governor. No other governor would serve more than two consecutive terms until Orval Faubus, who served six two-year terms.

Granddad loved to talk about that rally, saying it was a hot, summer afternoon and there were so many wagons and buggies in town he had to tie up his wagon about a mile from the town square and walk back.

The old men who sat and argued about politics may have disagreed on many things, but they all agreed on one thing: FDR and Republicans.

They loved the former, loathed the latter.

They were firmly convinced Franklin D. Roosevelt had saved the country during the Depression, and were unable to understand why so many farmers seemed to vote for Republicans.

"No Republican has ever been a friend to the farmer," my grandfather would say, and the heads would nod in agreement.

Granddad even liked Ike, until the general decided he was a Republican and ran for president. Granddad still had a grudging respect for Eisenhower, after all he did win the war against the dreaded Hun, but he always thought the general must have suffered a sunstroke on the golf course when he opted for the Grand Ol' Party over the Democrats.

My grandfather cast his first vote for president in 1904 and voted in every presidential election through 1968. In every single election, he voted Democratic, not just for president but all the way down the ticket.

He might have liked Ike, but he voted for Adlai Stevenson. His father might have been a dedicated Baptist -- Granddad detested the clergy almost as much as Republicans, but he always said his father was a Baptist -- but still my grandfather voted for Catholics Al Smith in 1928 and John Kennedy in 1960.

In his own twist on the fears voiced by many Southerners in 1928 and 1960, Granddad said he'd rather have the Pope in the White House than a Republican.

But even though Granddad always read the newspapers and tried to keep abreast of everything going on in politics, from Washington to Little Rock, he let his real feelings about politicians slip one summer afternoon when we were sitting in the front porch swing.

Granddad told me he'd met several Arkansas governors, both U.S. senators (then John McClellan and J. William Fulbright), a couple of congressmen and Huey P. Long, the "Kingfish" of Louisiana who campaigned across Arkansas for Hattie Caraway in her successful campaign for U.S. Senate, and shook the hands of each one. However, he also recalled with pride shaking the hand of Cole Younger when the old outlaw stopped in Nashville when on a lecture circuit not long after being released after 25 years in the Minnesota state prison.

When I asked him why he was more proud of shaking Cole Younger's hand than those of all the famous politicians, he grinned and said:

"At least ol' Cole was an honest crook."

1948

The night Democrats picked Harry

By MIKE FEINSILBER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - It was sweltering that night in Philadelphia, and the Democrats were a bedraggled lot. Hardly a delegate at the Democratic National Convention thought President Harry Truman could win the election. His ratings were low. People used to wink at each other and say: "I'm just mild about Harry."

Half a century ago on that July 15, the Democrats nominated an incumbent president in an election that remains a remarkable political story with an appealing moral: That in America, the people rule. And that it ain't over till it's over. Every underdog politician since then has looked at the 1948 election and taken heart. Some have even won.

Certain that Truman was doomed, the party's liberals and big-city bosses first tried to draft Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, but he would not bite. They thought about beckoning liberal Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, but that movement also went nowhere.

Resigned to sticking with Truman, who had replaced their hero when Franklin D. Roosevelt died in office, the liberals decided to force Truman to accept a strong civil rights plank.

That caused even more dissension. Handy Ellis, an Alabama delegate, took the floor and announced the South was bolting.

"We bid you good-bye," he said, and with that 13 Alabamians and the 23-member Mississippi delegation grabbed their state standards and stomped out.

Later, the Southerners would hold a rump convention as the States Rights Party and nominate the governor of South Carolina, Strom Thurmond - then a Democrat - as its candidate.

Some of the disenchanted liberals also would break away to nominate former Vice President Henry A. Wallace as the Progressive Party candidate.

There was even thought of dumping Truman in favor of the convention's keynote speaker, log cabin-born Sen. Alben Barkley of Kentucky, 70.

The country thought New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee, was a shoo-in.

So it was a desultory bunch of discouraged Democrats who waited in the convention hall for Truman to

Beat the summer heat

As long as the heat is on, you need a good dose of common sense to handle the dog days of summer.

These hot days can turn cruel quickly if you don't follow some basic health steps. The recent sweltering heat wave sweeping across much of the country has left many people physically fragile.

A good game plan is essential to help you enjoy the summer with just a few changes to your daily life.

First of all, remember to hydrate. One of the major problems of summer is people forget to drink enough water, especially when you're in air-conditioning all day. While the standard recommendation is to drink at least eight 8-ounce glasses of water each day, that number should be increased in summer.

Dehydration can lead to severe physical problems and possibly even death. When planning outside activity in the heat of the day, remember to drink water early and often. Fruit juice or sports drinks also are good alternatives instead of soft drinks to help replenish the body's nutrients. Some soft drinks are diuretics and are detrimental to hydration efforts. Juice and sports drinks help in providing minerals and vitamins to bolster the body.

Children actually have more skin area than adults per body size, and because of this larger body surface, can lose fluids more rapidly, leading to dehydration. Make sure your child has plenty of water and juice to drink to prevent this.

Secondly, don't forget sun screen. Use daily sunscreen with a minimum sun protection factor of 15 and reapply it frequently. Overexposure to harmful sun rays is a primary factor in skin cancer. Consider wearing a broad-brimmed hat to protect your ears, neck and face whenever you spend time outdoors.

In fact, studies show that 80 percent of your lifetime exposure to sun happens before you are 18 years old. So make sure children use sunscreen during the summer months to stay happy and healthy.

Also, when it gets so hot outside, there is an added

DAVID B. SMITH

risk for seniors with chronic lung and heart problems. Hot air tends to stagnate. If there is no wind, stagnation occurs with the inversion of sulfur dioxide and carbon byproducts, and this can trigger chronic lung problems and asthma. If seniors plan to go outside, try to do so early in the morning or at night. Mid- to late-afternoon will be a more physically taxing time for you.

Individuals on certain medications may be more vulnerable to heat-related health problems, so always consult with your health care professional if you have questions.

Another summer problem is that many people have a tendency to continue shopping after they have purchased groceries. Avoid food spoilage and the development of food bacteria by taking your groceries home and placing them in the refrigerator and freezer and soon as possible.

While it is important to maintain a good physical fitness regimen, it also is important to choose the right time of day to exercise. Do not exercise in the heat of the day. Instead, consider changing your workout time to early morning or later at night. This will help to considerably reduce the possibility of heat stroke due to exertion and dehydration.

Mentally, it also is a good idea to remind yourself that this is a very trying time of the year for everyone. The heat takes it toll on all of us, so keep that in mind

Where's the work ethic?

Probably not a week goes by that I don't read or hear about the need to import foreign workers to do certain tasks. At the same time, I hear about people in this country who need work, but who can't be expected to do certain jobs.

I don't understand! Do people think they are too good to work in the fields, scrub toilets, mow the yards or carry out any number of less-than-prestigious jobs which need to be done every day?

Maybe the problem is the disintegration of the American work ethic.

I know there are jobs that are so horrible that they would truly be last-resort types of employment. I've probably worked at most of them at one time or another. I also realize that all honest work is honorable.

When I first graduated from college, the only job I could find was working for a tarp manufacturer in Lubbock for minimum wage. The working conditions were terrible: no heat in the winter, no AC in the summer.

Dirt and grime would soak through my clothes, staining my skin. When I showered, it looked like rivers of mud trailing down the drain. And this is with a college degree.

But, you see, I had a family to take care of and couldn't afford the luxury of waiting for a better job. Growing up in this area, I remember chopping cotton from early morning to late in the afternoon for a quarter a row. That's how we bought back-to-school supplies and clothes.

I remember roqueing maize after school and until harvest. I've driven both the combines and the loaded harvest trucks and been thankful for the money. In years past, it was nothing unusual for me to drive a tractor, baling hay, loading it on to trailers and then restacking it in a barn, often without gloves. Callouses on my hands were as common as the leaves on the trees.

Now it seems that too many people feel they are too good to get their hands dirty, break a sweat, or develop a callous.

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

Who knows? That may be undignified. Probably the maddest I ever got at my oldest brother was when he came to my house and asked if I would help him get a job.

I called a friend who ran a sewer clean-out service and who always need workers. He hired my brother on the spot.

Two days later, brother dear refused to go to work. He said the job was hot and dirty and smelly. Besides that, he had a blister on one hand.

Now mind you I too was working in a hot, smelly job and my blisters had long since hardened to callouses. Needless to say, I didn't have just a whole lot of sympathy for him.

During the Depression, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed into law measures beginning a number of back-to-work jobs, just so men could go back to work and feel some pride in themselves.

Men went to work - hard, backbreaking, dirty work - laying bricks, digging (by hand, not machine) reservoirs, cutting timber, and setting stone for dams or bridges. And, they did this for pay ranging from 25 cents an hour to nearly a dollar an hour, if they were real lucky and were the top man on the crew.

So what happened to cause the American people to loose this work ethic: That all honest work is honorable?

Part of it, I'm sure is the move to computerization;

Battle set over trade with Viets

TOM BAUM

Inside Politics

WASHINGTON (AP) - A quarter century after the war ended, Vietnam still haunts the national consciousness. Even today, memories stir controversies out of proportion to the size of the communist-ruled nation, one of the smallest and weakest economies of Asia.

President Clinton's efforts to win a modest concession from Congress - one that would allow some economic aid to U.S. businesses that invest in Vietnam - is running into some stiff opposition in Congress.

As a first step toward establishing trade ties with Vietnam, Clinton would allow loans from the Export-Import Bank and the Overseas Private Investment Corporation to U.S. companies that do business in Vietnam.

That's a far cry from the most-favored-nation trade status that the administration recently suggested renewing for China - and which Congress is expected to debate later this month.

But the congressional mechanisms for both are the same. Clinton, who recognized Hanoi for normal diplomatic relations three years ago for the first time since the war, announced the waiver in February and sent the formal notice to Congress on June 3, starting a 90-day congressional clock for approval or rejection.

So far, two committees with jurisdiction over trade - House Ways and Means and Senate Finance - have gone along with the administration's request.

But the measure has generated some powerful enemies, including Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C. And supporters expect a rocky time on the floor of both the House and the Senate.

"For decades, Communists have been practicing Lenin's dictum - if you thrust forward with our sword and find mush, move forward. If you find steel, retreat," Helms said in testimony at a Finance Committee hearing. "Let's use our leverage to goad the Vietnamese government to relax its political and economic controls on the people of Vietnam."

The battle comes as Vietnam struggled this week to come up with ground rules for establishing its first stock market - one that won't be in operation at least until the year 2,000 - and to keep from being swept away by the financial crisis engulfing its neighbors.

The United States had a total trade embargo on Vietnam from 1975 until Clinton restored relations in August 1995.

"It's almost three years later, and we still don't have a trade agreement," said Stanley Roth, assistant secretary of state for East Asia and the Pacific. "I think Vietnam's expectation was it would come almost immediately."

Economic development has been slowed in Vietnam by corruption, red tape, inefficiency, a huge budget deficit and a banking system saddled with a high rate of debt.

"American business involvement in Vietnam has lagged behind other nations and still operates with severe handicaps," said Frances Zwenig of the U.S.-Vietnam Trade Council.

As to Vietnam's current role on the world stage, "No serious strategic planner believes Vietnam can alter any power balance in Asia," says Richard T. Childress, a former Asian specialist at the National Security Council. "The road to Vietnam is littered with broken promises."

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a Naval aviator who was shot down in Vietnam in October 1967 and held in prison camps until March 1973, wants to see more U.S.-Vietnamese trade.

McCain said Clinton's fledgling efforts to open trade with Vietnam have done much to speed up a program which has brought half a million Vietnamese to the United States since the early 1980s.

But another Senate Vietnam vet, Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., disagrees and, with Helms, has sponsored a resolution to overturn Clinton's waiver.

"I believe American businesses should invest in struggling democracies in Asia," Smith said. "We don't need to encourage them to invest in communist dictatorships where basic human rights are still being denied."

accept the nomination. Truman started talking. And to the surprise of the Democrats, he gave a stem-winding speech that had them hollering and stomping.

And he surprised everybody by calling the Republican Congress back into special session with a challenge to enact the progressive platform of education, health and civil rights the GOP had adopted at their Philadelphia convention a month earlier.

The Republicans called it a cheap trick. They gave Truman the silent treatment when he addressed the special session. He asked for an array of liberal legislation the Republicans had rejected in the regular session. Eleven days later, Congress adjourned with a barren record.

The rest is a classic come-from-behind story.

Certain of success, Dewey limited himself to high-minded political platitudes during his "Victory Special" train tour. Truman barnstormed the country on a 31,000-mile "whistle-stop" tour. He made hundreds of speeches from the back of his train, blistering the "do-nothing, good-for-nothing 80th Congress."

That Congress had passed a law making it impossible for the government to lease additional bins for grain storage - and farmers reaped a tremendous harvest that summer with no place to store it. Farm prices fell for the first time since the depressed 1930s, and farmers blamed the Republicans.

Every poll predicted a Republican landslide. Truman didn't believe it. He wrote his sister on Sept. 2 predicting that he would remain a prisoner in the White House: "It looks like another four years of slavery."

The country liked his plain language and his pluck - he sometimes spoke at night in pajamas, and always introduced Bess, his wife, as

"The Boss."

The country chose the underdog, and it wasn't all that close. Of the 48 states, Dixiecrat Thurmond won four, Wallace carried none, the GOP's Dewey took 16 and Truman swept 28.

CHIROPRACTIC For Better Health

Dr. Jeff Williams, D.C.

Chiropractic Q & A

Q: My chiropractor has referred me to another chiropractor for my shoulder problem. Are there chiropractic "specialists?"

A: There are more than 15 different areas of specialization in which chiropractors can be certified. One such area is Sports Medicine. After completion of a regular chiropractic education (two years college pre-requisites and four years chiropractic college) doctors who wish to specialize undergo additional training.

These certifications call for anywhere from 160 to 300 hours of additional instruction and rigorous examinations. Your doctor is probably referring you to just such a specialist. You should ask about the doctor's area of specialization and credentials on your first visit.

Q: My chiropractor says he will need to see me three times a week at first. This seems like a lot of visits. Is this really necessary?

A: The cause and treatment of injuries to the neuromusculoskeletal system are complex. Some injuries (such as Whiplash) can take up to a year to heal. Most injuries go through three stages: acute (the first 72 hrs. following injury); healing (the subsequent six-week); and the rehabilitative phase (of up to 12 months). Patients need to be seen at different frequencies during each of these phases and may often feel they are "all better" before complete healing has occurred. Patients who abandon treatment early risk re-injuring themselves and complicating further attempts to rehabilitate their injuries.

We accept assignments on Medicare & Medicaid & most insurance carriers.

Historic black cemetery restored after vandalism

NEW YORK (AP) - A cemetery considered the nation's most significant black burial ground is being restored a year after it was destroyed by vandals.

The cemetery at Rossville A.M.E. Zion Church is in a community called Sandy Ground on Staten Island. Free black oystermen from Maryland established it in the early 1800s.

A stop on the Underground Railroad, the community is a symbol of strength for many blacks today.

Two teen-age boys were charged in the vandalism. A $4,000 grant from the Sacred Sites fund of the New York Landmarks Conservancy covered most of the restoration costs. The church is raising the remainder.

Catholic, Orthodox meeting planned

BALTIMORE (AP) - International Roman Catholic and Orthodox Christian leaders will gather in Maryland next June.

Cardinal William H. Keeler, leader of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Baltimore, says members of the Joint International Commission for Theological Dialogue have accepted his invitation to meet June 7-15 at Mount St. Mary's College and Seminary in Emmitsburg.

Keeler says Emmitsburg was chosen over Baltimore because of its tranquil, wooded setting. The town of about 2,000 people is in the Catoctin Mountains near the Maryland-Pennsylvania border, about 50 miles northwest of Baltimore.

Mount St. Mary's Seminary is the second oldest Catholic seminary in the country. The oldest is in Baltimore.

Keeler says the group will focus on how each church exercises authority through meetings of their respective hierarchies, such as the Pan-Orthodox Synods or the Second Vatican Council.

Inmate gets compensation; prison ignored Islamic fast

DENVER (AP) - A prisoner who was not allowed a proper fast during the Islamic holy month of Ramadan five years ago is to receive $9,000 in compensation.

U.S. District Judge Wiley Daniel ruled that, in February 1993, Colorado prison officials deprived Akceith Abdul Makin of his constitutional right to practice his religion.

Other Islamic inmates at the Canon City prison were served breakfast at 4 a.m. and supper at 6:30 p.m., which allowed them to fast as required from dawn to sunset.

But Makin, who was held in segregation, didn't get those meals. So he didn't eat breakfast and lunch and saved his evening meal until after sundown, Daniel said in his ruling.

The compensation is to come from the retired warden and a former deputy director of operations.

DANDRIDGE—

part is the number of people who go to college to fill the employment needs of the highly computerized world.

But most of it, I can't help feel, is the attitude that there is always someone else who will take over when someone abandons responsibility.

Whether it be a church, a governmental agency, or a social or civic group, someone will always be there to pick up the pieces.

I can't help but feel that every newcomer in the job market, regardless of background, education or breeding, should have to work at the lowest rung of any job position before moving up the ladder to management.

For at those lowest rungs will be found the keys to attain the highest and best things in life - a strong work ethic, pride in one's accomplishments, and more importantly, the knowledge that all are created equal; the difference comes from what we do with what we are created with.

Draft statements haunt him

DENVER (AP) - The front-runner for the Republican nomination for Colorado governor admitted making misleading comments about how he avoided military service in Vietnam.

Bill Owens, 47, the state treasurer, has said he generally supported U.S. policy in Vietnam, went through the draft process and didn't use a college deferment.

Records obtained by The Denver

Post show Owens claimed college deferments in 1969, 1970 and 1971, which made him ineligible for the draft in those years.

"For a guy who wraps himself up in the flag, we would have expected a little more from Bill Owens," said Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mike Feeley. "Owens is obviously ashamed of his behavior, but he should be more ashamed of his lie."

If Owens had not used the deferments, he probably would have been called up for service in Vietnam, said Lew Brodsky, a spokesman for the U.S. Selective Service System.

After being shown his draft records on Wednesday, Owens admitted his story had been inaccurate.

"I wished I had checked the record better," Owens said.

Employee seeks redress for wearing dress to work

GALLATIN, Tenn. (AP) - Claiming a violation of religious beliefs, a woman who refused to wear pants has sued to get her job back.

Charlene McCormick of Gallatin claims she was fired in violation of the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 and seeks back pay and unspecified damages.

"We believe you have to dress holy and look holy and walk daily with God," she said of the Pentecostal Holiness beliefs. "We believe (wearing pants is) a sin, and the Bible says it's an abomination."

According to federal court papers,

McCormick was working temporarily as a machine operator at the Robert Bosch Corp. plant in Gallatin. A few days into the assignment, her supervisor sent her home, cautioning that her dress could get caught in the machinery.

McCormick was assigned to another department, but an executive instructed the employment agency to fire her, the lawsuit said.

"We, of course, feel they didn't accommodate her, because she wasn't working where there was machinery," said McCormick's attorney, Glenn McColpin of Chattanooga.

Don't Seek Investment Advice From Strangers

Investing is serious business. No one wants to lose hard-earned dollars. Sorting through the multitude of choices, understanding the benefits and risks of each type of investment, deciding which are right for you, and then monitoring their performance — these tasks are not to be taken lightly.

So why do people expect strangers to be able to provide personal financial advice in five minutes or less?

A woman inherited about $25,000 and wanted to invest in mutual funds for the long term. To get the answers to her questions, she called a man giving financial advice on a radio talk-show.

The woman asked three reasonable questions:

1. Was the market too high to invest all her money now?
2. Would it be more sensible to dollar cost average, investing her money in installments?
3. Should she put all the money in one fund or spread it among two or more?

The man on the talk show had instant answers. He said the market was not too high, and therefore the woman should not be afraid to invest all her money now. The market could continue upward, making mutual fund shares more expensive later, he said.

As for dollar cost averaging, the man didn't feel it was necessary. He said this systematic form of investing serves two purposes: (1) It makes investors feel more secure to dribble money into the market, and (2) It allows people with small amounts of money to invest.

The man also advised the woman to put all the money in one fund — but if it made her feel better, she could divide the money among a couple of funds she "liked."

This financial specialist knew nothing about the woman's age, years to retirement, financial goals, income needs or other investments. How did he know these were the right answers for her?

His advice not to worry about the height of the market is generally appropriate. No one can predict the best time to invest. More money has been lost by investors who stayed out of the market fearing a downturn than by those who went ahead and invested. Solid companies that earn money and pay dividends have always proved to be good investments over the long term. Most financial professionals agree, the best time to invest is when you have the money.

As for whether the woman should dollar cost average, that is a personal decision. Dollar cost averaging may be appropriate if it would make her feel more comfortable. The woman could avoid a commission with each installment and obtain the discount usually allowed for lump sum deposits by signing a letter of intent with the mutual fund.

Finally, suggesting the woman put all the money in one fund or find a couple "she likes" is chancy. Unfortunately, too many investors "like" the funds showing the biggest gains in recent months. Typically, these funds also carry more risk.

Rather than picking a fund you "like," investigate a variety of funds and choose only those that meet your financial objectives and risk parameters before you even consider investing. Over the long term, mutual funds with a consistent growth pattern often exceed riskier funds with erratic performance. Allocating your money among several of these funds will minimize your risk even further.

Again, these are general principles. There are as many ways to invest as there are individual investors. Don't expect personal answers from the media. We can only convey general guidelines that have proven successful over time. For specific guidance, talk to a competent professional who takes the time to understand your situation and goals.

Witkowski recalls high school track days

Leo Witkowski of Hereford leafs through a book at his Hereford home.

BY KEVIN LEWIS
Plainview Herald

At age 84, and with an artificial leg, Leo Witkowski of Hereford still gets around pretty good, although he readily admits: "I won't catch any rabbits."

But there was a time... Back in the 1930s, Witkowski was a member of the Plainview High School track team which boasted some of the top sprinters in the state -- including Witkowski.

In fact, those Bulldog sprinters could have been among the fastest in the nation at the time.

Running at the state track meet in Austin in 1930, Plainview was one of four schools -- along with Abilene, Fort Worth Masonic Home and Waco -- who broke the state record in the mile relay.

Witkowski and his teammates Bill Isbell, Bill Smith and Milton Stoddard turned in a time of 3:28.2. By comparison, Plainview ran a 3:27 in the 1,600-meter relay at region meet this year but did not qualify for state.

Witkowski didn't recall it, but the PHS newspaper at the time reported that not only did they break the state record but the national record as well.

Abilene won at state in 3:25.5 and Masonic Home was second. Plainview and Waco tied for third place, although Plainview won a coin flip to bring home the bronze medal. Witkowski was the team

"Running then was harder because you ran against all schools."

-- Leo Witkowski

because you ran against all schools," Witkowski said, referring to today's classifications that group high schools according to size. Also making it tougher in Witkowski's day was most tracks were simply made of dirt, or at best a cinder track like the one in Austin that year.

Today, many schools have top-of-the-line track surfaces. Another change included distances being measured in yards instead of meters, and events no longer contested on the high school level were the javelin and medley relay.

The medley consisted of legs of 440 yards, two of 220 yards and an 880-yard finish.

With Witkowski and his teammates, Plainview captured the district track title. "It took Plainview 40 years to do it again," Witkowski said.

They also won meets in Hereford and at the second annual Amarillo Relays. After graduating from PHS in 1932, Witkowski went on to run track at Texas A&M, competing in the dashes and the sprint relay.

He married Louise Weil and moved to Hereford in 1945. He is now retired from farming. He lost a portion of one leg in a farm accident. Witkowski is a veteran member of the Texas Wheat Producers Board.

Rangers sting Devil Rays, 7-4

ARLINGTON (AP) -- The slumping Texas Rangers needed a lift, and Will Clark provided one.

Clark hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs to match his season-high as the Rangers rallied to stop a five-game losing streak with a 7-4 victory over Tampa Bay on Friday night.

"It seems like lately I've been a human highlight film, with everybody making diving catches and over-the-head catches," said Clark, who hadn't homered in 15 games. "It was nice to hit a ball out of the park where nobody can catch it but a fan."

The Devil Rays took a 4-3 lead into the seventh, but reliever Jim Mecir (3-2) started the inning with walks to Rusty Greer and Juan Gonzalez.

Albie Lopez came out of the bullpen to strike out Ivan Rodriguez, but Clark sent Lopez's first-pitch fastball into the right field seats for his 13th homer and a 6-4 lead.

"That picked us up a whole lot," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "In situations like that, it's usually the veteran who steps up and gets the big hit."

Rangers starter Darren Oliver (5-7) allowed four runs and 10 hits over seven innings. John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 26th save after Greer's RBI single in the eighth gave Texas an insurance run.

Before the game, Oates said he told Oliver "to be aggressive in the strike zone. With the heat and humidity, we wanted to get the players off the field as quickly as possible. We've been throwing too many pitches lately. Stamina-wise, you can't stand out there for 40-pitch innings."

"It feels good to go out there and contribute," Oliver said. "It's been a while since I've done that. I didn't walk anybody and tried to go after them and stick to the game plan."

The Devil Rays took a 4-2 lead in the fifth with the help of another fielding blunder by the Rangers, who made two errors to give them 42 in their last 40 games.

Tampa Bay loaded the bases with

Texas trades Van Poppel to Pittsburgh

ARLINGTON (AP) -- Less than a month after calling up local product Todd Van Poppel from the minors, the Texas Rangers traded him Friday to the Pittsburgh Pirates for Esteban Loaiza, another right-handed pitcher.

Loaiza is scheduled to start Saturday night when Texas hosts Tampa Bay.

Loaiza, 26, was 6-5 with a 4.52 ERA for the Pirates this season in 14 starts and seven relief appearances. In 91 innings this year, he has given up 96 hits and 30 walks while striking out 53 batters. In two-plus seasons with the Pirates, Loaiza has a 27-28 with a 4.63 ERA.

Van Poppel, 26, who grew up in Arlington and starred at Arlington Martin High School, was 1-2 with an 8.84 ERA in four starts for Texas. He was signed as a minor-league free agent and spent time at Class AAA Oklahoma City before joining the Rangers on June 20.

Van Poppel was a first-round pick of the Oakland Athletics in the 1990 amateur draft, but has never fulfilled the expectations of scouts. He is 21-35 in his major-league career.

none out, and Bubba Trammell grounded to shortstop Kevin Elster for what appeared to be an easy double play. But the ball got through Elster's legs, with Trammell getting credit for one RBI and the second run scoring on the error.

Clark's fifth-inning sacrifice fly cut Tampa Bay's lead to 4-3.

Tampa Bay starter Tony Saunders, seeking his first victory since April 16, lasted only five innings in the Texas heat. He allowed three runs, one earned, and four hits with three strikeouts and five walks.

captain and called the flip. Track captains have since disappeared on most teams and that's just one of the many differences in track and field over the past 50 years.

THE BRITISH OPEN

OPEN SEASON

Unknowns lead as variable weather conditions result in soaring scores

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) -- Brian Watts and 17-year-old Justin Rose thrived in the fickle conditions of the British Open. For Tiger Woods and Nick Price, it was simply a matter of survival.

Royal Birkdale struck back Friday with a bizarre mixture of rain, sunshine and blasts of wind off the Irish Sea that battered the leaders and forced a brief suspension of play.

Watts, an Oklahoman who makes his living on the Japanese tour, overcame a start as wild as the weather -- three birdies, two bogeys and a double bogey on the first seven holes -- for a 1-under-par 69 that put him at 137.

He took a one-stroke lead over yet another amateur to make an impact in a major championship -- Rose, a rising English star who thrilled the gallery with a 4-under 66 that tied the Open record for an amateur.

"That's one of my best rounds, and to play it in these circumstances is fantastic," Rose said.

Joining him at 138 were Woods and Price, who were thrilled to get off Royal Birkdale in one piece on a day that made players long for the warmth and light winds of the first round.

Woods, who started the second round tied for the lead with John Huston at 5-under 65, was 5 over for the day until birdies on the last two holes salvaged a 73.

"I was getting blown over," Woods said. "It was hard to stay steady. Temperatures were going up and down. You really had to keep your patience."

Price tried to keep his composure as he lost strokes in the bunkers and mangled rough that covers the sand hills surrounding the greens. He finally broke through with a 6-foot eagle putt on No. 17 and wound up with a 72.

"I don't want to listen to any of those guys who complained about the conditions this morning," Price said. "There's just so many crosswinds blowing. I'm grateful to have gotten off the course two strokes over par."

Thomas Bjorn of Denmark was the only other player under par at the end of two rounds after a 1-over 71 left him at 139.

Fred Couples, who started the day one back of Woods and Huston, didn't make a birdie until the 18th hole for a 74 and was at even-par 140. He was joined by PGA champion Davis Love III, Masters champion Mark O'Meara and Stephen Ames.

"The weather can change on a dime," said O'Meara, who played in the final pairing at Birkdale in 1991 and put himself in position to be there again with a 68. "It obviously tests the players' ability with their golf swing. And it really tests your composure."

Huston was among those who lost it -- a 77 that left him five strokes back at 142. A year ago, Huston shot a 5-under 67 to lead the Masters after the first round but followed up with a 77.

And talk about losing patience -- John Daly took five shots to get out of the greenside bunker on the 18th, taking a 10 and missing the cut by five shots. Earlier this year, Daly hit six 3-woods into the water in the final round of the Bay Hill Invitational and took an 18 on one hole.

The stark change in conditions was noticeable in the scoring as 27 players broke par in benign conditions on Thursday, but only seven players escaped the wrath of Birkdale and its capricious nature in the second round. And it could be seen on the faces, from the exuberance of Rose to the exasperation of Woods.

"It was so hard out there," said Woods, who time and again turned to caddy Fluff Cowan with a perplexed look when the putts wouldn't fall. He took 18 putts on the first nine holes for a 38, eight strokes higher than the day before.

Play was suspended for 30 minutes by the Royal & Ancient because it was "not sensible in the conditions." But then, when does the British weather ever make sense?

Couples and Love were among those who started the day in a cold rain that blew sideways. Within 30 minutes, the wind shifted direction, brought out the sunshine -- and then really started to blow.

"This is much more British Open golf today," Watts said. "The front nine, we had the rain for the first five holes and a steady wind, but the back nine it really picked up strong."

"I can't say I enjoyed playing in it, but I deal with it as it comes."

It's not surprising that an American is leading the Open -- they have won the last three. But Watts is not a typical American golfer.

He grew up in Texas and has lived the past 10 years in Oklahoma -- he won the NCAA championship at Oklahoma State. But when the 32-year-old couldn't qualify for the PGA Tour, he took his trade to Japan and has won 11 times over the past five years.

"Ideally, the American tour is probably the dream," he said.

Rose is living his dream out right now. He'll be in the final pairing Saturday with Watts, a far cry from when he was upset in the first round of the British Amateur last month and missed the cut last week at Loch Lomond.

His 66, highlighted by an eagle-birdie finish and applause he's never heard walking up the 18th, tied the Open record by an amateur that was first set by Frank Stranahan at Royal Troon in 1950

Hillenburg remains unknown driver

By DICK BRINSTER, AP Sports Writer

He has tasted victory twice at Daytona International Speedway, won an ARCA championship, operates a high-profile racing school, and gets rave reviews for his ability as a spotter.

A number of NASCAR Kingpins sing his praises, yet Andy Hillenburg remains the unknown racer, perceived as a businessman who merely dabbles as a driver.

"Nothing could be farther from the truth," Hillenburg said after arriving in Indianapolis for another of his specialties -- testing. "Sure, I'm a businessman, but I never said I wasn't interested in a steady ride."

"I'm a racer, and regardless of my business activities I have a hunger to compete. You don't satisfy that hunger by sitting on the sidelines."

At Indianapolis, Hillenburg was testing for Earl Sadler, hoping to try for a spot in the Brickyard 400 on Aug. 1. Hillenburg drove Sadler's car to a 29th-place finish in the season-opening Daytona 500.

Among those who like the 35-year-old Hoosier's resume are

"Hillenburg is awesome. It's amazing why he doesn't have a steady ride. Maybe because Andy's so busy doing other things, I don't know if anybody even pays a lot of attention to him."

-- Rusty Wallace

Jeff Gordon, Rusty Wallace and Ken Schrader. Hillenburg raced against Gordon around the Midwest in their open-wheel days, has won in cars owned by Schrader, and has Wallace as a customer.

"Hillenburg is awesome," Wallace said. "It's amazing why he doesn't have a steady ride."

"Maybe because Andy's so busy doing other things, I don't know if anybody even pays a lot of attention to him."

Hillenburg was the center of some attention last weekend at Loudon, N.H., where he played musical chairs with Morgan

Shepherd for a ride in Joe Falk's Chevrolet.

Hillenburg practiced the car and tried to qualify it. When he failed to make the field for the Jiffy Lube 300, Shepherd was given a shot. He couldn't do it, either.

The car made the race on an owner's provisional, and Shepherd was listed to drive. Hillenburg's name was painted above the driver's door.

"I'm a very interesting guy," he said. "You know, keep everybody in suspense."

With the unknown driver at the wheel, the car started last in a field of 43 and finished 31st. But such things do not reflect Hillenburg's talent in the eyes of some.

"I've driven against Andy, and he's a good racer," said Gordon, in pursuit of his third series title. "I certainly think he could make it in Winston Cup if had the right opportunity."

"The one thing you don't want to do is go to a team that's not competitive, one that can't win and never will," Hillenburg said. "All that gets you is fired and maybe a reputation for being a lousy driver."

"I have had some discussions about driving both in and out of Winston Cup, but the situation hasn't been right."

He tests cars when he isn't taking an occasional foray into Winston Cup, runs the Fast Track racing school in Charlotte, N.C., and calls shots for Schrader from the grandstand roof.

"He's been an integral part of our program," Schrader said. "Since he's a driver, it makes him one of the best spotters in the business."

"Andy has a very positive attitude and the ability to adapt to different cars in different series."

Cowboys practice on as heat stays

WICHITA FALLS (AP) -- One minute Friday, the sideline thermometer at the Dallas Cowboys' practice field read 100 degrees.

Five minutes later, it read 110.

The lower reading came courtesy of a blessed cloud that appeared over Midwestern State University. Like a desert mirage, it didn't last long and the blowtorch sun came beaming down again.

On the field, the players, without pads but their shiny silver helmets reflecting the sun, continued laboring to impress new coach Chan Gailey.

But Gailey had to modify things: If you get overheated, take a break.

Running back Chris Warren did. The free agent running back from Seattle isn't as accustomed to the heat as his teammates, most of whom spent the summer working out at the team's scorching training facility, Valley Ranch.

Warren kneeled and a trainer ran to him. Within seconds, an icy towel cooled Warren's neck. A revived Warren was back running plays minutes later.

"I spent eight years in Seattle and never had a day like this," Warren said.

Welcome to Texas and the heat wave of 1998. Since June 1, an onslaught of 100-degree-plus days has claimed 19 lives in Dallas County and 35 in the state.

The Cowboys have been whipped into shape in brutal Texas summers since owner Jerry Jones moved training camp from balmy Thousand Oaks, Calif. to Austin in 1990. This is their first summer in Wichita Falls.

In the old days, breaks for water or ice were considered less than manly.

"Players have to drink plenty of water all the time," Gailey said. "They just can't start drinking water one day at practice."

Chiefs punter Aguiar reveals battle with cancer

By STEVE BRISENDINE
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. -- Louie Aguiar had heard about athletes and testicular cancer.

Cyclist Lance Armstrong, figure skater Scott Hamilton and baseball player John Kruk all underwent treatment for the disease in recent years. And testicular cancer killed Chicago Bears running back Brian Piccolo -- subject of the film "Brian's Song" -- in 1970.

But him? Never.

That all changed March 3, when Aguiar, the Kansas City Chiefs' 32-year-old punter, learned his swollen left testicle was cancerous.

"You don't ever think that it's going to get you," Aguiar said Thursday. "You think, 'I'm too young, too strong.' But cancer doesn't care who you are."

Aguiar had surgery March 4 to remove the cancerous testicle, followed by 15 radiation treatments. He has been given the OK to return this fall for a fifth season with Kansas City.

He revealed his battle with the disease during a news conference to announce the formation of his High 5 Foundation, which will benefit two local agencies.

At the time he was diagnosed with cancer, Aguiar's wife, Krista, was pregnant with their first child.

"When they told my wife and me (about the cancer diagnosis), I sank," Aguiar said. "The first thing I thought was, 'Who's going to take care of my son that's going to be born, and who's going to take care of my wife?'"

Aguiar's son, Cody Louis, was born June 5. Aguiar sat behind two photos of the baby at the news conference, and he had to fight back tears once after looking at the photos.

"I keep thinking that I might not have been here to see him," Aguiar held off announcing his treatment until he was given clearance to play. That came last Friday, he said.

"You don't ever think that it's going to get you."
-- Louie Aguiar

"We have been in constant communication with Louie and his physicians since this tumor was first diagnosed and have respected his wishes to keep this matter private until now," Chiefs general manager Carl Peterson said.

Aguiar said he discovered the cancer while on vacation in Hawaii, about two weeks after accidentally hitting himself in the left testicle while doing yard work at his offseason home in Sparks, Nev.

Aguiar's urologist, Dr. Steven Moss, diagnosed the cancer and performed the surgery. The radiation treatments came after further tests revealed that the cancer had spread to lymph nodes in Aguiar's abdomen.

He was cleared to begin kicking again in early May.

"It didn't even cross my mind about missing the season at all," Aguiar said. "(Moss) told me I would be ready by June 1, and I believed him, and I was."

The High 5 Foundation, named for Aguiar's uniform number, will benefit Cancer Action and El Centro.

Both agencies have programs for Kansas City's Hispanic community.

"I'm Hispanic, and I wanted to give something back to the community," Aguiar said. "I was already planning on creating a foundation to help support the Hispanic community in Kansas City."

The punter will donate $100 to the foundation for every punt he puts inside the 20-yard line.

Sorenstam leads by stroke at Big Apple

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) -- Annika Sorenstam birdied three of the last four holes -- the last two after a 94-minute weather delay -- and shot a 5-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the JAL Big Apple Classic.

Meg Mallon, who eagled the same hole for the second straight day, also had a 66 and was second alone at 8-under 134, one shot ahead of first-round leader Penny Hammel, who followed a 64 with a 71.

Sorenstam, a two-time winner this year and the LPGA player of the year two of the last three seasons, returned from the weather delay to make a six-foot birdie putt to tie Mallon, who had played in the morning, then took the lead with a 6-foot birdie putt on the par-5 18th.

"It wasn't that long," she said of the late afternoon delay, during which she kept score as her husband bowled in the clubhouse at Wykagyl Country Club. "There was lots of time to warm up and when I got back out I only had 1 1/2 holes left."

Chris Johnson and Jenny Lidback both had 68s and were at 136, one shot ahead of eight players.

Se Ri Pak, who set an LPGA record with a 61 in the second round of last week's tournament, had a 69 and was at 141. Nancy Lopez had a 75 Friday and was at 1-over 143, four strokes ahead of the cut.

Pak and Lopez came into the tournament on streaks.

Pak was trying to become the first player in 16 years to win three straight events, while Lopez had missed three straight cuts, the longest such streak of her Hall of Fame career.

Sorenstam finished second in this tournament last year when she set an LPGA record with more than $1.2 million.

"It's good to play a course where you have done well," she said. "You remember a birdie putt you made or know what club to hit off the tee and know the slope of the greens."

All but one of Sorenstam's birdie putts were from seven feet or less.

"I never felt I was going to make a bogey," she said. "I had a lot of tap-ins for par."

Mallon also has had success on the 6,161-yard layout, finishing third last year and in the top 10 two other times. She has had unbelievable success on the 432-yard, par-5 15th, getting an eagle there both days although in very different ways.

In Thursday's opening round she dropped a 15-foot putt for a 3, while she chipped in from about 20 yards on Friday.

2 share lead at Deposit Guaranty

MADISON, Miss. (AP) -- Paul Goydos and Doug Tewell matched opening-round 66s on Friday to share the lead midway through the Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic.

Goydos and Tewell took advantage of prime scoring conditions Thursday morning -- before 15-20 mph wind gusts -- to move to within a stroke of the lead. The top five first-round scores were all during the morning round.

Curtis Smith had a second-round 68 and was a 10-under 134. Franklin Langham was also at 10-under after a 66 that included two eagles in a three-hole stretch.

First-round leader Curt Byrum followed a bogey-free opening round with a 73 Friday and, at 138, was six strokes off the pace.

Canyon man wins first roping round at Frontier Days event

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) -- A Texas cowboy recorded the second-fastest steer roping time in Cheyenne Frontier Days' 102-year history on Friday. Leo Campbell's 11.7-second run won the opening round and claimed $5,422. The Canyon resident has been competing at Cheyenne since 1995, but Friday's run marked only the second time he recorded an official time in steer roping. Campbell was seven-tenths of a second shy of the record set last year by Marty Jones of Hobbs, N.M. "It's exhilarating," said Campbell, who makes bridle bits and spurs.

"I've known Marty Jones a long time. He's one of my idols." Jones, Frontier Days all-around champion in 1992 and 1994, placed fourth in the round with a time of 13.2 seconds and won $3,300. Seven-time national steer roping finalist Dan Fisher of Andrews earned $4,715 for his second-place time of 12.6 seconds. Third-place went to Bucky Hefner of Chelsea, Okla., who won the steer roping title in Cheyenne in 1995. Competition in the rodeo's other events begin Saturday. This year's rodeo will pay $502,275 in prize money.

Astros stomp Giants, 10-7

HOUSTON (AP) -- Jose Lima won for the first time since June 6 and Derek Bell had a two-run single in a five-run fourth inning as the Houston Astros beat the San Francisco Giants 10-7 Friday night. Lima (8-5), who was the first pitcher in the NL to reach six victories this season, had struggled since then with three losses and three no-decisions. After falling behind 3-2 after two innings, Lima retired 14 in a row from the third through the eighth innings and left with a 9-6 lead. Lima allowed eight hits and six runs and struck out five in eight innings.

British

and matched two years ago by Woods at Royal Lytham. "I have never met Justin Rose, but to have an amateur up there is great," said Colin Montgomerie, who missed the cut. These days, it's becoming common. Rose is the third amateur to make an impact in a major championship this year. Matt Kuchar was in contention until Saturday afternoon at the U.S. Open, and Jenny Chuasiriporn lost the U.S. Women's Open in a 20-hole playoff to Se Ri Pak. And Rose is not ruling himself out in his bid to become the first amateur to win the Open since Bobby Jones in 1930. He recalled seeing the sign on the scoreboard at Troon that said, "Well done, Justin," after Justin Leonard won the Open. "That's something that's stayed in my mind every since," Rose said. Kuchar missed his first cut in a major this year with another round of 75, but he was in good company. Tom Lehman, the 1996 Open champion and five-time champion Tom Watson also missed the cut, which was 147. Leonard thought he was out after his second straight round of 73 put him at 146. As the winds kept blowing harder and the scores kept getting higher, he was on the putting green late in the afternoon.

Driver

Wallace agrees, and says Hillenburg should be able to get a steady ride someday by making sure everybody knows he wants one. "Every time Andy gets into Schrader's car or somebody else's that's any good, he does super," Wallace said. "I've always been impressed. "Heck, I sent my grandpop to his driving school." Actually, it was Wallace's father-in-law. But the message was that he respected Hillenburg enough to entrust to him a family member. Wallace, Schrader and Gordon are royalty of the road, not king-makers. They can't give him a Winston Cup ride, and one might not be forthcoming according to Dave Marcis, who likes Hillenburg's work testing IROC cars. "There's a lot of politics involved today," said Marcis, an outspoken independent who never attracted a big-spending sponsor. "You've just got to have the right connections, or it's a tough deal."

Irwin fires 62 to lead Ameritech Open

LONG GROVE, Ill. (AP) -- As if Hale Irwin's record-setting round wasn't enough, he's got some bad news for the rest of the field in the Ameritech Senior Open. He can play even better. "I did a lot of very, very good things," Irwin said after shooting a 10-under-62 Friday. "But it was not a day that was flawless." It may not have been flawless, but it was close. Irwin, the Senior PGA Tour's money leader, flirted with bogey just once and had nine birdies through 12 holes.

His 10-under score broke the Kemper Lakes Golf Club record of 63, shot by Walter Morgan in 1996, the first year the Ameritech Senior was held here. It also tied the overall tournament record set by Joe Jimenez in 1995. Irwin's only real mishap of the day was on the second hole, when he missed a 6-foot birdie putt. "I would take today's putting round over just about anything I've had in a long time," said Irwin, whose shaky putter cost him the Senior Players Championship last weekend. "Maybe the moons and stars were in the right alignment," he said. "Maybe tomorrow they'll be all mixed up, I don't know. It was kind of a serene environment to play in, and you're not always in that state of mind." Joe Inman, who qualified for the Senior PGA Tour last year after 11 years away from competitive golf, was three strokes behind Irwin with a 65. Hugh Baiocchi was at 66, and Al Geiberger, David Lundstrom, Mike McCullough and Bruce Summerhays shot 68s. Defending champion Gil Morgan, who beat Irwin by three strokes last weekend, was seven back Friday at 69. "Gil and Hale are better than we are. You have to forget about them," Inman said. "They're playing one tournament and we're all playing another." That was certainly the case with Irwin. His hot putter carried him the entire day, starting with a 12-foot birdie putt on the par-4 No. 1.

Cowboys

They have to keep it up." "What we do is pretty standard," said trainer Jim Maurer. "We know the body needs water and you have to watch it. We provide plenty of liquids." It's a shame their fans weren't mimicking them. Nine spectators were treated for heat exhaustion Friday, while the team reported no major problems. "Our players are very well conditioned to the heat," Jones said. "If they get plenty of water they will be OK. They work in the heat all the time at Valley Ranch." Friday was the 12th straight day of 100-degree-plus heat in Wichita Falls, making it only slightly hotter than Austin training camps. However, the humidity is not as high because Wichita Falls is a lot farther from the Gulf of Mexico than Austin.

If economy slows, will lenders suffer?

NEW YORK (AP) - It's difficult to tell lenders anything about their business when profits are as good as they are now. Those profits, they may tell you, are proof of their money management skills.

If only it were so, but it isn't. While lenders make very good money on loans, their eagerness to lend seems to get them into trouble every few years, with consequences for the entire economy.

You may recall how they shoveled money to real estate developers in the 1980s, and how that led to Third World nations. And who can forget the collapse of savings and loan associations? Disasters all.

And now, some regulatory officials are concerned that lenders might be doing it again - that is, lowering their lending standards and putting money in the hands of those who might not be able to repay.

The inducement to do so is huge, because it makes the bottom line look pretty for a time. In just one day last week, seven large banks reported second-quarter earnings that met or exceeded analysts' estimates.

But what happens when the economy turns down and businesses fail and jobs are lost and borrowers opt for putting food on the table, so to speak, rather than repaying the lender? The lender then might fail.

While the United States and Europe seem insulated for the time being, the consequences of overlending can be seen throughout much of the world - in Indonesia, Japan, South Korea and Russia, to name the most obvious.

Less than a month ago, the Federal Reserve reported that it had found a significant relaxation of lending standards to business. And last week, the acting comptroller of the currency said her office found the same.

Relaxed lending standards, said Julie Williams, who heads the Office of the Comptroller, "could presage the same kinds of problems that afflicted the industry nearly a decade ago." That is, massive failures.

It happens time after time. During weak economies, money lenders are seen as conservative, prudent, and responsible, and they are, perhaps to a fault. Risks are obvious at such times, but are far less so in strong economies, as now.

In the money business, the incentive is more money, and the temptation is great to seek it. Ms. Williams explained it concisely: "Too much money chasing too few good loans; competition is fierce; memories fade."

As a consequence, lending standards are lowered, allowing poor credit risks to obtain loans. The income stream from such loans begins almost immediately and is quickly reflected in strong earnings reports.

The spurt in the lender's business, however, is too often at the expense of the future, which always includes the possibility that times won't always be as good as they are now. But greed overwhelms prudence.

Eligibility, collateral and maturity schedules are lowered to attract more borrowers. Speculative business borrowers are ushered in the door. Homeowners get 125 percent mortgages. Even the riskiest get credit cards.

The economy is a woven fabric in which one broken thread can lead to another.

A consumer marketplace overstuffed with goods can lead to production slowdowns, weaker profits, layoffs and inability to repay loans. Inflation can lead to higher interest rates, costlier repayment terms and defaults.

Both the Fed and the comptroller's office are increasingly concerned about a default scenario developing. Farm belt lenders are probably more worried. And credit-card issuers see flashing red lights.

Still, the temptations for lenders are there, viewed for the moment as moneymaking opportunities. Good times encourage risk-taking; even life insurers, ultraconservative usually, have raised their junk bond holdings.

Where does the blame lie? You could blame the lenders, who claim to be prudent and professional. Or the federal regulators. Or the borrowers, who generally have a fair idea of when they're overreaching.

But, then, you must consider that no borrower gets her or his hands on money without the acquiescence of lenders. Anyone who has been turned down for a loan knows how true that is.

Lawmaker decries 'men seeking men' personal ad

RENO, Nev. (AP) - GOP Rep. John Ensign accused the Democrats of dirty tricks after someone tried to place an ad in the personals section suggesting Ensign was looking for a relationship with another man.

Ensign, who is married and has three children, is running for Democratic Sen. Harry Reid's seat.

The ad, sent to the Reno News and Review, a free, weekly alternative newspaper, appeared to have been faxed from the Nevada Democratic Party's Reno office and bore the party's name and phone number.

The ad, submitted in Ensign's name for the "Men Seeking Men" section, read: "Vegas politician seeks Republican man for companionship while campaigning in Reno. Must be interested in animals, canoe rides on Lake Tahoe, and possibly living in Washington. Being a Promise Keeper would be a plus."

The ad did not run. A newspaper staffer realized it was a prank.

Ensign campaign manager Mike Slanker said Tuesday that Reid and the Democratic Party "signaled again today that they plan to run the dirtiest campaign in Nevada's history."

Dismayed Democratic officials said they are investigating to see who sent it, and they apologized to the congressman, who belongs to the Christian men's group Promise Keepers.

Nevada Democratic Party chairman Paul Henry said the ad was despicable. "To the extent it's our fault, I take full responsibility for it and apologize to the congressman," he said.

ABC: Try doing what's not being done

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - An inside glimpse - that's one of the blessings of the Television Critics Association wingding in Pasadena, Calif. And that's just what TV writers got last week from Jamie Tarses, as the ABC Entertainment president shared some of the thinking behind her network's fall schedule.

Regrettably, I wasn't there. But as I studied the Associated Press account, this quote from Tarses caught my eye: "There's not a lot of shows with twins on right now."

Tarses was referring to "Two of a Kind," an upcoming ABC comedy where twin sisters Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen play twin sisters.

Let others dismiss it as kiddie claptrap. This is a series that will surely take the Olsen twins to a new level. After all, on the long-running "Full House," as everyone recalls, they portrayed not two kids, but just one in a sort of tag-team arrangement. "Two of a Kind" just has to be a stretch.

More importantly, "Two of a Kind" signals a stretch for Tarses' network, redolent of a bold new policy to make every one of its shows, even "Two of a Kind," one-of-a-kind. If we can take Tarses' words as anything more than off-the-cuff hokum, ABC intends to break from the pack. The guiding principle: There's not a lot of shows like burs on right now.

Granted, when Tarses said there aren't a lot of other shows with twins, she misspoke.

In a recent column I pointed out that TV is practically doubled over with twins: the twin teens on WB's "Sister, Sister," the twin toddlers on CBS' "Everybody Loves Raymond," the dancing twins on the Fox show "Ally McBeal," the twin babies on Nickelodeon's cartoon "Rugrats," along with next season's twin editions of "60 Minutes." And don't forget the twin firings of producers after that nerve-gas story aired on CNN last month.

If Tarses didn't happen to catch my article, who can blame her? She's been busy. Busy brainstorming. "There are only a finite number of ideas," she reminded TV writers. "It's about taking an idea and turning it on its side."

So say hello to what could be her biggest, most sideways inspiration: scheduling by default. It could usher in a whole new world of viewing.

Maybe for the 1999-2000 season, look for an ABC comedy about real estate investment trusts. There aren't a lot of shows like that right now.

Or an action-adventure series based on a tollbooth attendant. Or a family-hour show about a wild-eyed pathologist who gives the hopeless a helping hand to the hereafter. Or a comedy-variety show called "Pink Lady & Jeff." There aren't a lot of shows like those right now.

Enlist Steven Bochco, anxious for a new hit, to blend a popular kid's show with the mean-streets drama he's famous for, and you've got "Blue's Clues Blues." Sign a basketball superstar as host of a talk show that isn't painful to watch. There aren't a lot of shows like those right now.

What about a reality series called "P.O.-ed at the P.O.?" Each week, the host (perhaps Ken Kercheval, who played Cliff Barnes on "Dallas" - there aren't a lot of shows with him right now) would be on hand from a different post office, on the off chance that a postal service employee would snap.

A game show, "Y2K," would pit humans against technology as they race to reprogram their computers before the new millennium. "YIK" could dramatize how ordinary folks in 999 coped. There aren't a lot of shows like those right now.

Or sign a popular female comic for a sitcom, then wait for the fireworks when her character proclaims herself a lesbian. Or introduce a hard-hitting drama about a Catholic priest.

There aren't a lot of shows like that on right now.

Bush ignores e-mail

HOUSTON (AP) - To find out who has filled Gov. George W. Bush's $14 million-plus campaign coffers, Texans must go to Austin and flip through a 30,000-page paper file at the Texas Ethics Commission.

But if anyone wants to see who's supporting his brother, Florida gubernatorial candidate Jeb Bush, all they have to do is log on to that state's Internet site.

Gov. Bush and the Texas Legislature have yet to implement a 1991 law that requires the ethics commission to make it possible for Texans to scan such records with their computers, according to the Houston Chronicle.

When running for governor four years ago, Bush opposed electronically filing campaign finance reports, but submitted two in that fashion under pressure from reporters. He has returned to paper filings since winning office.

"We have fully disclosed all of our information so that it is available for the public to review, but not for others to abuse," Bush campaign spokeswoman Mindy Tucker told the Chronicle. She declined to define what she meant by "abuse."

A paper copy of the report would cost $3,000. Garry Mauro, Bush's Democratic opponent, files his reports electronically.

A searchable campaign finance database required by the 1991 Legislature still does not exist. Several lawmakers and both major political parties have sought to repeal the law.

Florida uses convicts to enter some of that state's finance data. Going electronic has saved the state money, said Sandy Brill, data processing manager for the state elections division.

Florida's searchable database gets between 10,000 and 15,000 Internet "hits" every day, Brill said.

Congress approves $500 million emergency farm aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - While farmers from the northern Plains to North Carolina struggle with natural disasters as agricultural exports and crop prices plummet, Congress is taking steps for those growers trying to stay afloat.

The Senate approved $500 million in emergency aid Thursday as part of the $57.3 billion agriculture spending bill for fiscal 1999, which passed on a 97-2 vote. Strongly backed by President Clinton, it now heads into negotiations with the House.

"I think farmers can take some hope that help is on the way," said Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D. "The real question mark is the House of Representatives."

The House did not include such a disaster fund in its version of the spending bill. Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., planned an announcement later today of a new "farm crisis" proposal, but has not endorsed the $500 million plan.

Net farm income in 32 states is projected by the Agriculture Department to fall $5.2 billion this year from 1996. That year, Republicans won approval of their "Freedom to Farm" law, which gradually phases out subsidy payments that once smoothed out price valleys, permits farmers to plant the crops offering the best profits and substitutes crop insurance for federal disaster relief.

Income is dropping because of low prices for most crops and livestock, driven down by enormous worldwide supplies and an Asian financial crisis that is throttling America's most important agricultural export market.

Meantime, in states hit by drought, wildfires, hurricanes and recurrent wet weather that triggers disease, farmers have trouble getting crop insurance and financing to continue in business.

Farm debt in 1998 could reach $172 billion, the highest since the height of the farm crisis in 1985.

Things are particularly acute in the Dakotas, where wet weather has hampered planting and caused a wheat fungus known as scab that cuts deeply into yields. In North Dakota, some estimates project 2,000 out of 30,000 farmers will give up this year.

"The little house on the prairie is in danger of being auctioned off," said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

Although many Democrats want to return to price supports that were scrapped two years ago, after losing a key subsidy vote this week they turned to the $500 million emergency aid package for farmers who have suffered significant income loss.

In a letter Thursday, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said the program would pay supplemental crop insurance for farmers who received insurance payouts in at least three of the last five years. The payment would equal about 25 percent of those payouts and would help roughly 48,000 farmers nationwide.

In addition, payments would be made of about $40 an acre for each year productive land was under water and would aid livestock producers with feed supplies and reimbursement for animals lost due to severe weather.

Not every farmer is suffering. With yields increasing for most crops about 1.5 percent a year because of better hybrids and technology, even at lower prices many producers are doing well. In fact, while prices are down from 1996, they are about equal to the average from 1990 to 1994.

"The facts simply do not represent a crisis all across American agriculture," said Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan.

On the final Senate spending bill vote, only Republican Sens. Jon Kyl of Arizona and Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania voted no. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, did not vote.

In other action on the spending measure, the Senate:

Approved on voice vote an amendment that would waive the statute of limitations for black farmers for discrimination claims against the Agriculture Department from 1981 to 1997. The House has included a similar measure in its spending bill.

Rejected, by a vote of 50-49, an amendment increasing funding from $34 million to $100 million for the Food and Drug Administration's campaign to reduce teen-age smoking.

Approved on voice vote an increase in money for in the president's food safety initiative from $2.6 million to $68 million. The House measure includes $16.8 million of the president's $101 million request.

Bad news: big crops, low prices, no storage

Across the grain Belt, farmers have received the bad news: With harvests looming, the nation's two largest railroads are forecasting a shortage of rail cars.

If that's not enough to worry about, farmers have been informed area grain elevators that make up the Toledo Board of Trade have more wheat stored in them now than in the same period during the past two years.

The warning Wednesday from Union Pacific Corp. and Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Railway Co. has producers scrambling for extra storage bins and dry spots to put their grain.

Farmers use grain elevators as holding bins until rail cars come to take the grain to market. With a shortage of cars, elevators fill up and are forced to dump piles of grain outdoors, where it can rot.

Farmers should not bank on more dollars this year. The wheat crop is strong worldwide, meaning a surplus of crops and expectations for little profit. Wheat prices are at their lowest since 1990, said Hall Reed, general manager of The Anderson Inc.'s grain division.

Railroads annually make the same warning, but this year it is more serious as producers watch prices plummet, in part because the financial crisis in Asia has weakened demand for U.S. grain.

Kevin Swanson, who farms 1,500 acres of corn in Nebraska, plans to pack most of his crop into the grain silos rather than watch it end up on the ground outside an elevator.

"It's definitely not a good situation," Swanson said. "Two-dollar corn doesn't come close to paying all the bills, and a car shortage will just bring lower prices at the elevators. I'll wait and hope for a market turnaround."

Wheat is usually considered a good cash crop for farmers. Because it is harvested in early June. It provides money to help farmers through the growing season.

The yields for this year's wheat crop were average to good, agricultural officials said. The Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service estimated yields at 60 bushels an acre, down slightly from 63 bushels last year. The agency predicts that Ohio growers this year will harvest nearly 70 million bushels of wheat, worth almost $210 million.

Due to the piles of grain left in reserve from last year and the near promise of a shortage of rail cars, producers are taking the warnings seriously and looking for ways to prevent the grain from being dumped on the ground.

Northwest Ohio farmers, who raise more wheat than do growers in any other part of the state, will make little profit from this year's crop, which is averaging about $2.40 a bushel, farmers and grain merchants said.

"If you break even this year, I'd say that will be about the maximum," said John Wolf, who raised 120 acres of wheat about 10 miles east of Toledo.

Matter of Fact

Rick Perry
Texas Agriculture Commissioner

An estimated $10 million a year. That's how much Texans spend trying to control imported fire ants in our lawns and gardens. The sad fact is most of the time all we're doing is chasing those ant mounds from our property line to the next - only to have those mounds return when our neighbors decide to treat their yards.

Educating property owners about community-wide treatment efforts is a big part of the Texas Fire Ant Research and Management Plan. This plan has brought together the Texas Department of Agriculture, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and other state universities and state agencies to work toward short-term relief as well as long-term control of imported fire ants.

Extension agents in every Texas county are armed with information that can help you and your communities organize coordinated imported fire ant programs. Such coordinated efforts can go a long way toward lowering control costs for homeowners as well as reducing the pesticide levels used in trying to corral these stinging pests.

To fight the fire ant, Texans need to start thinking - and working - like them. Remember, it's not one ant that creates problems but rather it's when the mound works together. Likewise, one homeowner can't do the job unless the entire neighborhood works together.

Community-wide treatment is one way to swarm the imported fire ant before it swarms Texas any further.

Citrus crop over Record crop exceeds demand

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) - Florida's citrus season officially is over, with predictions for the largest orange crop on record and a continuing problem with too much supply.

Agricultural officials said a record 244 million boxes of oranges would be produced during the 1997-1998 season, an increase of 8 percent above last year's 226.2 million boxes. Each box weighs roughly 90 pounds.

The numbers are subject to change as agriculture statisticians compile final numbers during the summer.

Friday's citrus forecast, the last one of the season, reduced the number of boxes of oranges expected this season by 4 million boxes from June's forecast. The decrease was caused by an overly optimistic prediction for Valencia oranges from the U.S. Agriculture Department's Statistics Board.

"It's still a record crop, and it still exceeds demand," noted Judith Gaines, an analyst with Merrill Lynch in New York.

The current abundance of citrus can be blamed on overplanting that followed tree-killing freezes in the 1980s. Although statisticians have not calculated the average per-box price for oranges and grapefruit for this season, it has dropped in recent years.

Orange prices averaged $3.87 per box last season, down from $4.68 in the previous season. Grapefruit prices averaged $1.23 per box last season, down from $2.14 in 1995-1996.

The final forecast for Florida's grapefruit crop was 49.5 million boxes, down from last year's grapefruit crop of 55.8 million boxes, with hot weather halting much of the grapefruit picking in June.

Overall, the drought-like conditions in Florida have not had much effect on citrus trees, said Paul Messenger, a statistician with the Florida Agricultural Statistics Service. Most of the state's big groves have irrigation systems that prevented trees from wilting.

Ag briefs

The heat and humid conditions are proving to be excellent conditions for pests feeding on area crops.

The weekly Panhandle Pest report, issued by the Agricultural Extension Service, reports southwestern corn borers being trapped continues to increase, while the European corn borer count remains about the same.

Second generation corn borers will start to lay eggs soon. Producers should be ready to apply pesticides.

Spider mites continue to increase and it has yet to be seen if the beneficial insects such as spider mite destroyers and thrips will prove beneficial.

Western corn rootworm adults continue to increase with reports of 12 or more per plant, causing enough silk-pruning to hamper pollination.

WASTE WATER AND YOU COULD GET SOAKED.

About 75% of a typical household's indoor water use takes place in the bathroom. Saving water saves you money. Especially hot water, since it takes energy to heat water. So Be Water Smart and

- Take short showers instead of baths; and
- Install low-flow showerheads and low-flow toilets.

The average shower uses 42 gallons of water. A low-flow showerhead can save a family of four almost 35,000 gallons a year. A low-flow toilet can cut indoor water use by an additional 20%.

SkyTalk

Astronomy (not to be confused with astrology) is the observational and theoretical study of celestial bodies. It is one of the oldest sciences and has undergone many changes in step with advances in instrumentation and technology through the centuries. Also, as well as a science, astronomy can be called a study of history; a history of light.

Every time you look at the points of light in the night sky you are looking at a history of the universe. Astronomers refer to this as "look back time." For instance, the light bathing our planet left its source, the sun, approximately eight and one-third minutes ago. Or as it is referred to in astronomical jargon, "eight and one-third light minutes." That simply means that if you were able to connect a switch to the sun, eight and one-third minutes would elapse from the time you turned the switch "off" to the instant the earth was cloaked in darkness. A chilling thought! But this distance is just across the room astronomically speaking.

For example, the nearest star to Earth, Proxima Centauri, is four and one-third light years distant. A light year is the distance light travels in one year, approximately 6,000,000,000,000 miles. That's six trillion! Our earth and sun are separated by a mere 93,000,000 miles. Compared to a light year, that's a stone's throw.

Although these immense distances appear to render the stars unapproachable, much information may be gleaned from the light emitted by them. For instance, the surface temperature of a star may be determined by observing its color. An American astronomer, Annie J. Cannon (1863-1941), modified a stellar spectral classification system used by the astronomers of her era that is still in use today. This temperature sequence scale is represented by the letters O B A F G K M. For years, astronomy students have memorized this letter order by saying: "Oh Be A Fine Girl/Guy Kiss Me."

As you can see from the table, O type stars are the hottest, these are blue. The temperature decreases to the coldest M stars -- red in color. Astronomers use the Kelvin temperature scale to record the temperatures of stars. For clarification, a simple formula may be used to convert from the Kelvin to the Fahrenheit temperature scale. For example, our sun is classified as a G2 star. As you can see from the table, its temperature is 5800 Kelvin. To convert this to Fahrenheit simply multiply (1.8 X 5800) - 449 and you arrive at 9981 degrees. Again, referring to the table you can see this is extremely cool compared to the O and B stars, but relatively hot compared to the M class. Remember, these are just surface temperatures, the interiors are much, much hotter.

If this is your first encounter with astronomy, all of this information may seem a bit overwhelming. However, if you go out some evening after dark and look up at the stars, I bet you can identify some of the spectral classes we have discussed. I assure you it will be an enriching and rewarding experience. You will see a part of nature you have never seen before.

On the celestial current event calendar, the Perseid Meteor Shower will be making its annual appearance shortly. This phenomenon peaks on August 12 every year. There is a period of approximately two weeks on either side of this date when a gradual build-up and decline in the observed hourly rate of meteors may be seen. More than 40-50 meteors per hour are possible in a good year. I have personally seen as many as 36 in one hour. The meteors radiate from a point in the constellation Perseus. Look toward the low northwest horizon after dark. As the peak date draws closer, you will need to look a little higher in the sky.

Next time, we will explore the Summer Triangle and other wonders of the night sky.

Readers interested in obtaining further information or copies of astronomy charts may contact John Gilmore at (808) 363-6065, 1408 17th St., Hereford, Texas 79045, or by Email at: ASTROX@wrt.net

Local men in company of 'TEXAS'

Two individuals from the Hereford area are spending their summer as members of the company for the musical drama "TEXAS".

Jason Fisher, 23, is with the hospitality crew for his fifth year. He graduated from Vega High School in 1993 and is now attending West Texas A&M University. He plans to graduate in May of 1999 with a bachelor's in fine arts in computer art and ceramics.

He is involved in the Baptist Student Ministries and has been a part of the drama for four years. He is the son of Lin and Mary Fisher and is the grandson of Ewald Vogler of Hereford.

Lance Ortiz, assistant house manager, has returned to the Canyon drama for his third season.

Ortiz is a speech communications major at WTAMU. He is the public relations secretary for the WT Student Government, a former student senator, a president's ambassador, and an active member in the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity.

He plans to pursue a career in speech communications and enjoys hiking, golfing, and collecting political memorabilia.

He is the son of Alfred and Vickie Ortiz and the grandson of Pete and Tammie Ortiz and Lou Oswald of Hereford.

The musical drama "TEXAS," written by Pulitzer Prize winner Paul Green, uses song, dance, dialogue costumes and spectacular special effects to tell the story of early settlers in the Panhandle.

It can be seen nightly except Sundays in Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the 39-year-old male virgin who wondered if something was wrong with him. I am a female, 40-plus years of age, and I've been wondering if something is wrong with me. I have never been interested in sex and am still not interested.

I have fantasized about a few attractive men I've met over the years, but I've never had any interest in the real thing, although "the real thing" has been offered. I do want companionship, however, plus some cuddling and a man with whom to share my life. I am an outgoing person, well liked by friends and colleagues, college-educated and normal in every other way.

I know I am heterosexual because the alternative doesn't interest me in the least. Am I asexual? Am I a freak of nature? Are there others like me? I wonder if it's hormonal or biochemical. Ann, I doubt many of your readers are interested in this, but I'd like to know if there is anything I can do about it. -- Anonymous in Calif.

Dear Anonymous: I am not qualified to diagnose your problem, but I can give you an opinion based on what I have learned from my readers.

Some perfectly normal people have very little interest in sex. Reasons for this vary. Some grew up in "cold" families where there was no hugging or kissing. Some were abused. Others were afraid to show emotion because it was considered a sign of weakness. Still others were fearful of being rejected.

And of course, there is a strong possibility that your problem is indeed hormonal. Please see an endocrinologist, who will check your hormonal count. Also, make an appointment with a therapist, who will evaluate your emotional health. It may be that if you loosen up, you will be more receptive to that certain something which is missing in your life. I hope so.

Dear Ann Landers: Please allow me to add to what you said to "Rightfully Hurting in Virginia Beach," who complained that her boyfriend's parents will not accept her. "Bob" left his wife for this woman. They had a child out of wedlock. Now, "Virginia Beach" is upset that Bob's parents refuse to see her or the child and are still friendly with Bob's ex-wife. She does not seem to understand that there are consequences to her actions.

Bob's parents may have to put up with seeing him, but they certainly do not owe HER anything. If "Virginia" wanted acceptance and love for her child, she and Bob should have provided the proper setting for that to happen. Of course, the parents still love Bob's ex-wife. He brought her home as a lady and a wife. Now, "Virginia" wants to force herself on these people, who see her as an adulteress and a shacked-up babe. Get real, Ann. -- Honoring My Marriage Vows in Fla.

Dear Honoring Your Vows: You are probably right when you say Bob's parents see "Virginia" as "an adulteress and a shacked-up babe," and I agree that they need not open their arms to this woman. But they are wrong to refuse to see the child.

Regardless of the circumstances of the baby's birth, they are still that child's grandparents and should accept the little one with a loving heart. To do otherwise is cruel and shortsighted, and they will pay for it down the road.

Dear Ann: While we are applauding the marvels of modern technology, picture this: If one satellite fails, millions of pagers go silent, thousands of gas station pumps refuse credit cards, and all the TV and radio stations go off the air. Scary, isn't it? -- An L.A. Realist

Dear L.A.: Sure is. I could never understand high school algebra, much less a satellite control system. But can those who DO understand it do anything to avert a global catastrophe? Maybe we are getting too smart for our own good.

Have trouble sleeping at night and don't want to get involved in a novel? "A Collection of My Favorite Gems of the Day" is the perfect bed-stand mate. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Collection, c/o Ann Landers, P.O.

Vows are exchanged in Methodist Church

Hayley Diane Lockmiller and Andrew Christopher Lee were united in marriage in an evening ceremony on July 11 in First United Methodist Church of Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of Corky and Alice Lockmiller of Hereford. Parents of the bridegroom are Randy Lee of El Paso and Martha Blessing of Dallas.

Dr. Mike Fisher of Grace Bible Church in Dallas officiated at the ceremony.

Allison Farr of Lubbock was maid of honor. Best man was Mark Lee of College Station, brother of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Bridgette Peace of Amarillo; Beth Lee of Dallas, sister of the groom; and Brooke Bara of Houston.

Serving as groomsmen were Jeremy Zona of Lubbock; Benjamin Lockmiller of Lubbock, brother of the bride; and Michael May of Dallas.

Ushers were Jeff Samp, Landon Schale and Lane Long, all of Lubbock.

Junior bridesmaid was Elizabeth Guthrie of Plano, cousin of the bride and junior groomsman was Dustin Lee of El Paso, brother of the groom.

Emma Guthrie was flower girl and Joel Guthrie was ring bearer. They are cousins of the bride and children of Tom and Susan Guthrie of Plano.

Candle lighters were Jennifer Cox of Lubbock and Courtney Harris of Dallas.

Music was provided by Elaine Calkins as pianist/organist and Tom Guthrie, uncle of the bride, as vocalist.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a formal length gown of candlelight Italian delustered silk. The gown featured a basque waistline and decolletage neckline. The ballgown bodice featured satin bows in front and covered buttons in back. The skirt back extended to a cathedral train.

Her satin-edged, layered veil of illusion was attached to a tiara headpiece of candlelight satin roses.

She carried a cascading bridal bouquet of romance, ocinia and white roses with English ivy.

Bridal attendants wore floor length dresses of hunter green faille and chiffon. They carried a nosegay of romance, ocinia and white roses with English ivy and ivory ribbon. They wore silver heart necklaces, gifts from the bride.

The couple was honored with a reception in the fellowship hall following the ceremony.

Assisting with the reception were Leigh Potts of Denton, Lexi Sciumbato of Canyon and Brandy Samaneigo of Austin at the bride's table and Kristi Brooks of Lubbock and Gretchen Hamm of Houston at the groom's table.

The bride's cake was a spice cake of four separated tiers with basket weave cream cheese frosting decorated with romance, ocinia and white roses and ivy.

The groom's yellow cake with chocolate icing featured Raider Red, the Texas Tech mascot. It was made

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"Children need strength to lean on, a shoulder to cry on and an example to learn from."

Junior Historian T-shirt sales are keeping us busy -- especially Mrs. Drake, who has done most of the work with taking and delivering advance sales. Shirts will be $10 each after July 31 and will be available each day during Jubilee. Cookbooks will also be on sale for $8 each.

Students who have not gone by the HJH office for report cards should do so. Watch The Brand's Local Roundup column for a day during the last week of July to get these if you have not done so before then!!! Parents, don't you want to see these final reports?

REMINDERS:

*Those students who plan to be in athletics and have not received physicals should do so as soon as possible. Do not wait until school starts to go for physicals!

*Wait until you have received supply lists before purchasing school supplies. This will prevent having supplies not needed and will save time and money.

*Observe the dress code when purchasing school clothes. This, too, will save time and money!

The Dallas Morning News, June 7, 1998, in the column "Weathervane," included an excerpt from a letter to Governor Bush. It was from Patricia ??? of Hereford and probably was one of the letters submitted to Governor Bush in February. We have the column if Patricia wants it!

Plans are being made to have a Junior Historian opportunity for high school students this year. Several have expressed a positive interest and several have also expressed interest in high school History Day entries. This would be exciting to compete on this level in area and state!

Parents, help us on registration and orientation days by accepting the team assignment your student will have. We had requests for changes last year and some students were moved twice. This may suit the parent but is sometimes confusing for the student.

Be ready for the many "beyond the classroom" opportunities that junior high will offer the students. There will be contests and other fun activities that will enhance the students' education.

An important thing for parents to teach their children is how to get along without them. -- Frances Clark

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, July 17, the 198th day of 1998. There are 167 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: One hundred years ago, on July 17, 1898, during the Spanish-American War, Spanish troops in Santiago, Cuba, surrendered to U.S. forces. Nine days later, Spain sought peace terms.

On this date:

In 1821, Spain ceded Florida to the United States.

In 1917, the British royal family adopted the name "Windsor."

In 1938, aviator Douglas Corrigan took off from New York, saying he was headed for California; he ended up in Ireland, earning the nickname "Wrong Way Corrigan."

In 1948, southern Democrats opposed to the nomination of President Truman met in Birmingham, Ala., to endorse South Carolina Gov. Strom Thurmond.

In 1955, Disneyland debuted in Anaheim, Calif.

In 1975, an Apollo spaceship docked with a Soyuz spacecraft in orbit in the first superpower link-up of its kind.

In 1981, 114 people were killed when a pair of walkways above the lobby of the Kansas City Hyatt Regency Hotel collapsed during a "tea dance."

In 1996, TWA Flight 800, a Paris-bound Boeing 747, exploded and crashed off Long Island, N.Y., shortly after leaving John F. Kennedy International Airport, killing all 230 people aboard.

Ten years ago: Michael Dukakis arrived in Atlanta to claim the Democratic nomination for president, saying, "We're working hard to make sure we have a good convention, a strong and united party."

Five years ago: President Clinton, with several Cabinet members in tow, traveled to Arnold, Mo., where he heard the governors of eight flood-stricken states appeal for more financial assistance; however, he held out little hope the government could offer a total bailout.

One year ago: Woolworth Corp. announced it was closing its 400 remaining five-and-dime stores across the country, ending 117 years in business. President Clinton nominated Army Gen. Henry Shelton to be the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The space shuttle Columbia and its crew of seven returned to Earth after a near-flawless 16-day science mission.

THE HURST FAMILY
...Missionaries to Togo

Missionaries to speak at Assembly of God

Reverend Pat Hurst, Assemblies of God missionary to Togo, will be the featured guest speaker at First Assembly of God Church at 7 p.m. July 22, according to Reverend Mike Sullivan, pastor.

Togo is a small, French-speaking, West African nation bordered by Ghana, Burkina Faso, and Benin with a population of approximately 4.6 million.

Pat served as director of the local French-speaking Bible school in the city of Isiro.

Both taught in the local schools and ministered in regional churches on the weekends.

The Hursts left Zaire in 1997 as civil unrest escalated into full scale civil war.

The public is invited to attend the Hursts' missions presentation on July 22.

Pat and Suzanne Hurst began their African ministry in North Zaire in 1994.

Suzanne works with the Assemblies of God's Community Health and Evangelism program, promoting better healthcare standards and sharing the Gospel.

For thickening soups and sauces, you can use cornstarch instead of flour. One tablespoon of cornstarch equals two tablespoons of flour.

Nylon was first introduced to the public in 1938. Research chemists made this elastic material by combining water, air, and a by-product of coal.

Becky's Camp Site

By Becky Camp

Recent rains after such an extended dry spell and the accompanying hail have brought back memories of the years I spent growing up south of here in Concho County.

My dad was a stock farmer, at least that's the terminology used on his income tax return to describe his occupation.

(I never was clear whether a stock farmer was a farmer who raised stock or a stockman who farmed.)

At any rate, my dad was a dryland small grain farmer who raised sheep and sold two lamb crops a year in order to make ends meet and support his farming habit.

He frequently said that a farmer was a bigger gambler than any working man who took his paycheck and went to Las Vegas.

The drought years of the 50s proved his point. Either there was no rain at all, or just as happened with many Hereford-area farmers recently, if it rained it was accompanied by hail which destroyed what little crop there was.

Or, worse yet, just as he was about to harvest a wheat or oat crop, it would rain and the wind would blow and all the grain would be on the ground where it couldn't be harvested.

Income from the sheep, which my sister and I both professed to detest, was the only thing that kept us afloat for many years. At least the money from a lamb crop would pay the interest on the current bank note.

I remember distinctly the first year that the grain harvest was good enough to pay off the bank, not just pay the interest on the loan. (We actually took a vacation that summer!)

As if being a gambler isn't enough, there comes to mind one other expression that sums up the life of a farmer:

A farmer is the only businessman (and never think that farming is not a business) who buys his material and supplies at retail and sells his end product at wholesale.

KUB award recipients

— YOUR EYES —

Why Gas-Permeable Lenses

Recent improvements in contact lenses have enabled people with astigmatism to wear contacts successfully. However, because astigmatism is related to an out-of-round lens, and soft contacts conform to the natural shape of the cornea, these are appropriate only for a mild degree of astigmatism.

A better option for the highly astigmatic is often the hard, gas-permeable lens. This combines a firm, supportive shape, allowing clearer and more stable vision, with a more comfortable plastic that permits oxygen to penetrate and reach the eye. The lenses are bigger than ordinary contacts, but nothing like the oversize lenses of years ago.

Other advantages: many of these lenses feature a slippery surface that wards off protein build-up and, because the gas permeability prevents corneal swelling, there's less "spectacle blur" when the lenses are removed.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Knowing Your Numbers: What's really happening in your business?

(Part One of a two-part series)

When I was in college, one of my textbooks called accounting "the language of business." Because I was a veteran business owner when I returned to college to finish my degree, I know something the textbook author didn't. Accounting may be the language of business, but few small-business owners understand, speak or have any strong desire to learn the dialect.

Collecting, recording and managing numbers is not the reason why most men and women go into business. They are lured into entrepreneurship by dreams of wealth, personal success and taking control of their own destiny.

Sadly, not having a full understanding of financial matters, often leads to anxious moments for small-business owners. For nearly ten years I was at the mercy of my accountant. I saw his mouth move, I heard him speak, but I did not comprehend what he was saying.

He spoke of credits and debits, budget variance reconciliation and quick-ratio analyses. I was trying to figure out how I could make payroll on Friday. He discussed the accounting equation, negative retained earnings carryover and his four-page disclaimer of liability. All the while, I was wondering why my sales were up but my profits were down.

In the past ten years, I've worked individually with more than 2,000 small-business owners and taught basic, useful financial management principles to more than 19,000 people. I don't share the opinion of the "Principles of Accounting" author. Accounting, in real-world practice, is the language of accountants. Entrepreneurs don't speak the language, and most have no desire to become bilingual.

Entrepreneurs do want to understand their businesses. They desire to comprehend the cause and effect of financial decisions. They want to manage their numbers and retain more control of their business. What they need initially is not Accounting 101 and 102, but functional financial basics.

Financial Management Basics

Defined simply, financial management is a process of using numbers generated by your business to make operational decisions. Having good numbers lets you make decisions based on facts instead of feelings.

Accounting enters the picture at this point. Good record keeping is a prerequisite to good financial management. You cannot make good decisions without good information. You will make bad decisions if all you have is bad information. Incorrect data are worse than no data at all.

Let's start at the beginning. Every small business needs a separate business checking account. You should deposit all business-related income into this account. You should pay all business-related expenses from this account.

Your business checking account then becomes a backup for other business records. Reconcile your checking account every month. Get help early if you don't fully understand this process.

Your record keeping system should include the following information as a minimum: a record of all sales, a record of all expenses and list of all assets. Assets are anything owned by your business that has value and can be measured in dollars.

If you sell to or buy from others on open account, you'll need a list of accounts receivable (those who owe you - and the amount) and of accounts payable (those you owe - and the amount). If you have employees, you'll need a payroll journal in order to record all payroll activity.

In addition, you should maintain a record of your notes payable and your business inventory. You will need all of these records to create accurate, timely financial statements.

Next week, I'll discuss financial statements and give you some key tools for managing your numbers. Don't miss "Knowing Your Numbers," part two.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

Last week a woman came in the library to use the Internet. That's not unusual, but what she was trying to do was a new thing for her and for us. Fortunately, it turned out well. She was able to take a quiz for some sort of professional certification and get the results, including the certificate, all on the Internet at your country library, within the space of a few minutes. She was so happy to get this done so easily, and without the expense of postage. What a deal! We were thrilled, too.

I am a confirmed book lover. I love the way books feel and the way books smell. I like to hold them and work with them. (This really isn't as kinky as it sounds!) This is all besides the incredible places you can go in books, and all the fascinating information you can gain from them. I don't believe we can actually totally replace books, but I have to admit this Internet stuff is pretty amazing.

We really had no idea what was possible and available when we started on this adventure. We still don't. It's new world every day. I have decided, though, that I can't get Internet service at home. That's all I would get done. I'd e-mail the world and explore the entire universe, piece by piece.

We are trying as a library staff to spend time familiarizing ourselves with the net so that we can guide patrons in finding the information they need quickly and easily. It's just like learning what books are on the shelves. Shelving books is the best way in the world to become familiar with the book collection.

The possibilities appear to be endless, which is at the same time wonderful and scary. It also makes establishing policy that will allow optimum use a difficult thing to accomplish.

Tuesday was the last of our Summer Reading Club Tale Times. We were privileged to have Dr. Trudy Hanson, a professor at West Texas A&M University, come and share animal tales with us. She told some great stories and held the attention of more than 100 kids, most less than 9 years old, for almost an hour. That is no small feat.

Tuesday was also "Wear a Tail to the Library" day. Most of the kids, and some library staff wore tails. Some wore tales -- fairy tales, folk tales, and tall tales. It was great fun.

Daniel English wore three tails from "The Incredible Journey." Not only did Daniel wear the three tails, he can tell you all about them. Daniel, an avid reader, is a regular patron at the library.

Two other boys (we didn't know their names) showed up with one long common tail. It's a little hard to explain, but there was a boy at each end of the tail. Very creative!

Rebecca's tail was a dragon tail, inspired by the book, The Library Dragon. I'm sure we'll keep it around for future use. Maybe develop a program of dragon tails told by the library dragon!

If you haven't come in to claim your prizes for playing READO, there is still time. We will be awarding prizes through July 31. But don't wait too long!

Although the summer reading program has been fun, now that the Tale Times are over, a luxurious hot bubble bath is sounding good.

No matter what is pushing you, whether it's Summer Reading Club, keeping the lawn green and manicured, or keeping food in the house for those bottomless pits that you call your children, we have new books to help you slow down, pamper yourself a little, and recharge your batteries for real life.

Stopping: How to Be Still When You Have to Keep Going by Dr.

David Kundtz claims to be "a simple, straightforward technique for doing nothing, as much as possible for a definite period of time with the purpose of becoming more awake and remembering who you are." Sound like a plan to me.

When you get stopped, you might be interested in The Bath and Body Book by Stephanie Donaldson. In addition to the history of the bathroom (no, really!) there are chapters on making your bathroom a comfortable, attractive oasis, products to make bathing a soothing and aromatic experience, and other ways to pamper yourself such as aromatherapy and massage.

Healing Teas by Marie Nadine Antol will tell you how to select and brew healing teas to maximize your health and further enhance your relaxation.

Now that you're all mellowed out, you need a great novel to read.

Bridget Jones's Diary by Helen Fielding began as a weekly newspaper column and has been the number one bestseller in England for more than six months, also becoming a major international success. It is the hilarious and devastatingly self-aware account of a year in the life of thirty-something Singleton. She is determined to reduce the size of her thighs by one-and-a-half inches, establish a functional relationship with a responsible adult, and learn to program her VCR.

In James Lee Burke's newest, Sunset Limited, the 40-year-old crucifixion of a prominent labor leader named Jack Flynn remains an unsolved atrocity that has never been forgotten in New Iberia, La. When Flynn's daughter, Megan, a photojournalist drawn to controversial subjects, returns to the site of her father's murder, it quickly becomes clear that her family's bloodstained past will not stay buried.

Megan gives her old friend, Dave Robicheaux, a tip about a small-time criminal named Cool Breeze Broussard, scarcely suspecting that the seemingly innocuous case will lead Robicheaux and his partner Helen Soileau, into the midst of a deadly conspiracy. As New Orleans mobsters and mysterious hit men converge on his parish, Robicheaux soon finds that all the clues point back in time to the tortured death of Jack Flynn.

Calories and Food Labels

Part 2 of 2

When buying canned or packaged food, take a moment to read the food labels. By law, each label has to give the serving size, the servings per container and the calories in each serving.

The labels also list the number of calories form fat - and that's particularly important for all of us who are trying to cut down on fat in our diets.

By reading food labels, you can tell if a food is high or low in fat by comparing the calories from fat to the total calories in a serving. For example, suppose a serving of food you're about to eat has 260 calories and 130 calories from fat.

Then you know that food is half fat. Learning to read food labels can help you eliminate unwanted calories from fat in your diet.

TBS keeps Goodwill Games afloat in New York

By Mark Costello
©TVData Features Syndicate

Gilligan's Island has been a longtime staple of TBS. Now the cable channel would like to keep you stranded on Giuliani's island - Manhattan - for the next two weeks.

Beginning Sunday, July 19, TBS broadcasts the Goodwill Games from New York.

"The city has hosted a number of major, internationally recognized sport events," says New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, "but the Goodwill Games will be the first international, world-class, multisport event held here."

Jim Lampley will host the TBS coverage from a yacht to be moored at various locations in New York Harbor.

The games, which end August 2, will air at various times on TBS, HBO and CBS (check local listings). They are the brainchild of Ted Turner, founder of TBS and CNN and vice chairman of Time Warner Inc.

Turner launched his games to provide a politics-free competitive stage for the United States and the former Soviet Union after the U.S. boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow and the USSR's retaliatory boycott of the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

Turner planned the Goodwill Games to be held alternately in the United States and the USSR.

The first three Goodwill Games lost more than $100 million. And since the breakup of the Soviet Union, Turner's games have been "goodwill" hunting for a post-Cold War mission.

"The fact the games now benefit children makes the purpose of these games even more meaningful," Turner says in reference to newly formed charitable partnerships with the Boys & Girls Clubs of America, as well as UNICEF.

In addition to benefiting worthy causes, the 1998 Goodwill Games will feature two age-old missions: winning and acquiring riches.

Previous Goodwill Games - St. Petersburg, Russia, in 1994, Seattle in 1990 and Moscow in 1986 - abided by the Olympic spirit of not offering money. For New York's Goodwill Games, there will be a $5 million purse for prizes, as well as incentives for records and performance.

Two-time 1996 Olympic gold medalist Michael Johnson headlines this year's field of approximately 1,500 athletes from more than 60 countries competing in 15 sports.

"It is great to compete against the top runners in the world while having the home-court advantage," says Johnson, a Dallas native who is scheduled to run in the 200m and 400m. "A special energy that comes from the crowd spurs you on ... and the addition of prize money will ensure (the runners) turning in top-level performances."

As for Lampley, his mission may be to get through his telecasts without incident. In 1996, he was ringside for HBO when a riot broke out at a Riddick Bowe-Andrew Golota bout, and he was on the air for NBC's late-night Olympic show when the bomb exploded in Atlanta's Centennial Olympic Park.

Referring to his extended ad-libs during catastrophes, Lampley, a former newscaster at KCBS in Los Angeles, says, "I've been in that kind of situation dozens of times. I had earthquakes, fires, hostages. I've seen murders, plane crashes."

The Goodwill Games, though, should be smooth sailing for Lampley - as long as his floating anchor desk off Giuliani's island doesn't sink.

In the shadow of the Empire State Building, two-time Olympic gold medalist Michael Johnson prepares for his 200m and 400m races at the Goodwill Games. The games run from July 19 - Aug. 2, in New York. Johnson says competing in the United States against the world's top runners gives him the hometown advantage.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

Q: What can you tell me about Catherine Bell of JAG? I think she has beautiful eyes. -- Phillip Smoot, Lynchburg, Va.

A: The 20-something actress was born in London on Aug. 14, although the year is undisclosed. A former model, Bell made her film debut in 1992 working as Isabella Rossellini's body double in Death Becomes Her, then landed small parts in a couple of TV movies, as well as guest roles on Hercules: The Legendary Journeys, Friends and Dream On.

She guest starred as a murder victim on JAG in 1996, making enough of an impression on series creator Donald Bellisario that he hired her when he recast the female lead for the show's move to CBS.

Q: Please settle an argument. I say Jean Stapleton played Katey Sagal's mother in the TV movie Chance of a Lifetime. My husband says Stapleton is dead and that the role was played by the actress who used to play Roseanne's mother. Who is right? --Stephanie O'Madigan, Charlotte, N.C.

A: You are right, Stephanie. Stapleton, still alive and well at this writing, played Mrs. Duncan in that TV movie. Your husband is thinking of Estelle Parsons, who co-starred on Roseanne.

Q: My dad says John Travolta's first movie was Grease. My mom says he had a small part in a movie called The Devil's Rain. Who's right? --Klara via e-mail.

A: Your mom is right. By the time Travolta made Grease, he had been in such high-profile hits as Carrie, The Boy in the Plastic Bubble and Saturday Night Fever, and had gained TV stardom as Vinnie Barbarino in Welcome Back, Kotter.

Q: My husband is driving me crazy. He swears that Titanic director James Cameron used to play the father on Family Ties. I know he is wrong, but he won't believe me. --L.M.R., Erie, Pa.

Catherine Bell

A: Boy, this is turning into a bad week for husbands. I suppose there is a mild (and bearded) resemblance between the two men, but that was Michael Gross as Steven Keaton on Family Ties.

Q: Whatever happened to David Ogden Stiers? We graduated from the same high school, so I have followed his career with interest. --Claudia Douglass, Baker City, Ore.

A: Best known for his work as Maj. Winchester on *M*A*S*H*, Stiers is now a regular on ABC's Two Guys, a Girl and a Pizza Place.

Savage Earth, airing Sunday and Monday on PBS (check local listings), examines volcanoes, tsunamis and earthquakes, including the temblor that hit San Francisco in 1909.

Savage Earth shakes off summer doldrums

By Suzanne Gill
 OTVData Features Syndicate

When we lay the foundations of colleges, cathedrals, concert halls and custom homes in the Earth's crust, we tend to think of the planet itself as settled, civilized and reliable. It's not.

Savage Earth, airing Sunday and Monday, July 19 and 20, on PBS (check local listings), shows how what lies beneath your feet can end up in your face.

The sequel to 1996's Savage Skies, this four-hour documentary gets up close and personal with volcanoes, earthquakes and tsunamis. Savage Earth begins and ends in the Seattle area, which is prone to all three events.

Usually, the terrible forces unleashed at the surface come from deep within Earth's core, where red-hot magma is on rolling boil.

The first hour, titled Hell's Crust, serves as a reintroduction to dear old Mother Earth, starting with true stories from survivors of the Mount St. Helens blast in 1980. Then the program follows an invisible but very real stress line from the Pacific Northwest to Italy, where the earth shook hard six months after St. Helens blew. In another eyewitness account, an airline passenger tells of taking a 12-minute free fall when volcanic dust clogged all four engines in a trans-Pacific jumbo jet.

The second hour, The Restless Planet, focuses on earthquakes, especially the temblors of the last two decades in California, Mexico and Japan. Too bad there is nothing about the massive 1811 New Madrid, Mo., quake that changed the course of the Mississippi River, or about the very erratic effects of a quake's passing.

Monday's episode, Out of the Inferno/Waves of Destruction, deals with volcanoes, which can strike with amazing speed and thoroughness, and tsunamis, the destructive waves that can cause devastation thousands of miles from their source. Evidently, production was complete before the devastating volcanic outburst on Montserrat.

Perhaps the lesson to be learned is that when it comes to upheaval on the Earth's surface, there never will be a final event.

Two Pauls join *Bold and the Beautiful

Some new but familiar faces are joining The Bold and the Beautiful. Paul Satterfield (ex-Paul Hornsby, General Hospital) and songwriter-actor Paul Williams are being added to the cast.

Satterfield plays Pierce Peterson, a psychiatrist working with Taylor (Hunter Tylo). Pierce, who also is a motivational speaker who firmly believes in turning negatives into positives, could become a new love interest for Brooke (Katherine Kelly Lang).

Williams portrays Bailey, an associate of Pierce's who works with him to help motivate people. Bailey and Pierce appear to be positive and happy, and that is a nice change for a soap opera.

In other news: Michael Damian (Danny, The Young and the Restless) surprised his fellow cast members by tying the knot with his fiancée in Las Vegas instead of holding the European wedding they had planned. Damian says that getting married overseas involved too much red tape. The two will still have a ceremony and throw a reception in a 12th-century castle in France. It promises to be a very classy affair.

Dear Candace: Is there a chance that Charles Keating (ex-Carl Hutchins) will return to Another World? He was the main reason I watched the show. Soaps are supposed to feed fantasies, and Carl's relationship with his wife, Rachel (Victoria Wyndham), was the stuff dreams are made of. I'm not alone in thinking Carl's departure was a big mistake. What are his plans? -Celt26 on the Internet.

Dear Reader: Keating was a big draw for many fans. The actor is spending the summer doing theater and has several projects in development. He has no plans to return.

Dear Candace: What happened to Ruth (Lee Meriwether) on All My Children? We heard she left the show. -The Meyers in Florida.

Dear Reader: Contract negotiation broke down between Meriwether and the show. Her last episode aired July 7.

WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO SELL, NEWSPAPER SELLS IT BEST.

No matter what it is you're selling, newspaper can sell it best.

You can show it. Describe it. Explain it. Compare it. Offer a coupon for it. And cover your entire marketplace with it. All in one day.

And for a lot less than radio and TV.

And the unique thing about newspaper is that it adds credibility to your message.

People believe it when they read it in the paper.

Maybe that's why retailers use newspaper more than any other medium?

Newspaper. It delivers.
