U.S. 385 PROJECT

HERE WE GO AGAIN

CHESTER NOLEN
"I don't mean to tell you how to do your job, but if you don't get it all at once this time and have to do it twice, you're really going to hear a lot of complaints from local businesses."

TxDOT explains construction plans

By Julie L. Carlson
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

State highway department representatives met Thursday with city and county officials in an effort to ease concerns about construction planned for U.S. Highway 385 (25 Mile Avenue).
"Several years ago, we went through it and replaced the right-hand lanes with concrete because there are so many trucks passing through Hereford and now we have the same problems with trucks tearing up the middle lanes," said Tonya Detten, a spokesperson for the Amarillo office of the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT).

"Tons of grain trucks pass through 385, so we decided to go through the whole thing (with concrete)," she said.
Hereford residents, as well as some non-Hereford residents, clearly remember what a hassle it was working on U.S. 385 the first time.
Holmes Construction of Amarillo has been hired for the new U.S. 385 project after submitting a $2.9 million bid.

Miles Smith, project coordinator for Holmes Construction, explained the construction layout, which did not impress City Manager Chester Nolen.
The original plan, which is currently under deep consideration with new changes, was to tear up the southbound lanes of 25 Mile Avenue in sections, starting at 15th Street. Once the southbound lanes are completed, construction would begin with the northbound lanes. Each section of construction will be 600 feet long, with 1,300 feet done before moving to the next work area.

"I don't mean to tell you how to do your job, but if you don't get it all at once this time and have to do it twice, you're really going to hear a lot of complaints from local businesses," City Manager Chester Nolen said.
For most businesses located along the highway, business slumps during construction.
"I think the north end will be faster, but the farther south, it could get harder and more difficult (with more traffic and businesses)," Smith said.

TxDOT and Holmes Construction representatives said they have learned from the mistakes made during the last construction on U.S. 385 and are focusing a lot of attention on businesses.
"Our plan is to go door to door before the construction starts and tell businesses you know this is what we plan to do ... and some may need

Witkowski, Vallejo are Miss, Mr. HHS

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Hereford High School's version of the Oscars — Koobraey 2000 — all but brought the house down Thursday evening when Audra Witkowski was named Miss HHS and L.J. Vallejo claimed the title of Mr. HHS.
"Koobraey" is yearbook spelled backwards. Each year the yearbook staff presents awards to the chosen candidates in a number of categories.
Along with the awards, numerous student entertainers sang classic rock hits of '50s, popular soul music of the '60s, disco dance tunes of the '70s and some just plain rock of the '80s and 90s to the theme "Shake, Rattle and Roll."
The winners received commemorative plaques and will be featured in the 1999-2000 yearbook.
Rafael Campos was recognized as Foreign Exchange Student of the Year.
Awards presented at Koobraey 2000 included:
Friendliest: Tessa Baker and Craig Campbell;
Well Rounded: Tori Walker and Daniel Fangman;
Best Leadership: Danielle Garza and Seth Pietsek;

- Shyest: Becky Fuller and Nathan Parson;
- Most Courteous: Audrey Cabezuella and Riley Hall;
- Most Likely to Succeed: Lisa Coneway and Nelson Beville;
- Most Humorous: Ashley Gonzales and Tim Dudley;
- Most Athletic: Brionne Yosten and Ram Zambrano;
- Cutest: Laci Black and Slade Hodges;
- Most Talented: Hannah Williams and Wade McNutt;
- Most Dependable: Kali Hall and Kyle Artho;
- Senior Favorites: Michelle Bixler, Jackie Gaitan, George Castillo;
- Junior Favorites: Tessa Baker and Slade Hodges;
- Sophomore Favorites: Abby Caperton and Drew Denison;
- Freshman Favorites: Wendy Briones and Nick Foster;
- Most Intelligent: Lynita Dotson and Nelson Beville;
- Who's Who (Girls): Sarah Artho, Toni Eicki, Valerie Guzman, Tori Walker and Audra Witkowski;
- Who's Who (Boys): Nelson Beville.

At the annual Koobraey awards presentation Thursday night, Audra Witkowski was named Miss HHS, while L.J. Vallejo was the pick for Mr. HHS.

Armey: HMO bill coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is going back to work on managed care reform and will deliver a bill that will let consumers sue their HMOs by mid-April, House Majority Leader Dick Armey said.
Armey, R-Texas, said he believes patients should be allowed to sue, but only in federal courts and only after they go through the health plan's review process.
"The idea of putting lawsuits ahead of review is obscene," he told an audience of health care professionals at a conference Thursday.
A bill with such provisions is similar to a plan House Republican leaders rallied behind as they tried to defeat a broader HMO bill that included an unfettered right to sue.
But some House Republicans joined with Democrats to pass a stronger bill.

Building enthusiasm — More than 90 businessmen and women listened Thursday evening to tips provided by Joe Combs of Development Training Services at the first of two personal development courses. The two courses are directed toward improving customer service. The second edition of the seminar, which is being conducted at the Hereford Community Center, 100 Ave. C., will begin at 7 p.m. Jan. 20. The course is sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

BUDGET

Clinton's proposal to call for boosting the spending limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeking political advantage for this election year, President Clinton will propose raising strict spending limits by billions of dollars, Democrats say.
Though some conservatives might be reluctant, many Republicans are willing to consider it, perhaps in exchange for roping off some of the budget surplus for tax cuts, GOP aides say.
But Republican leaders have not decided what to do about the limits, which were forged in the 1997 pact between Clinton and Congress aimed at balancing the budget by 2002. The budget was balanced in 1998, thanks to the robust economy, and many lawmakers from both parties feel the limits are outdated in today's world of growing federal surpluses.
"The current blueprint we're working off is not the house we're building today," said Richard May, a former GOP House Budget Committee director who is now a consultant.
Boosting the spending caps could give Clinton a political edge over Republicans. Since surplus projections are based partly on assumptions about future spending, higher spending means less money left for the tax cuts many Republicans want, including

Domenici claims GOP keeps pledge on Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite last year's splurge of spending and tax cuts by lawmakers, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici says Republicans have delivered on their pledge to protect Social Security money.
In a letter Thursday to Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., Domenici wrote that his staff projects that the fiscal 2000 surplus will be $10 billion to $20 billion. Fiscal 2000 runs through Sept. 30.

Court allows wolves to remain

DENVER (AP) — In a key decision involving one of the nation's endangered species, a federal appeals court has ruled that hundreds of transplanted gray wolves can remain in the northern Rockies.

Mark Van Putten, president of the National Wildlife Federation, said Thursday's decision by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has "enormous significance nationwide."

"The practical effect is that wolves are here to stay," he said. Jon Robinett, who says his livestock have been attacked repeatedly by wolves at his ranch in Dubois, Wyo., about 40 miles from Yellowstone National Park, was disappointed with the ruling.

"I just don't think they paid close enough attention to what was presented to them," he said. "Maybe they weren't well-versed in the Endangered Species Act."

The appeals court reversed a 1997 decision by a Wyoming federal judge who ruled that a federal wolf reintroduction program in Yellowstone and central Idaho was illegal.

U.S. District Judge William Downes ordered the reintroduced wolves removed but stayed his ruling pending the appeals court ruling.

Ranchers and state farm bureaus oppose the 5-year-old program because they say the wolves endanger livestock. They also claim that the program is unnecessary because there is already a viable wolf population in the area, which the government and environmental groups deny.

In suing over the program, the American Farm Bureau Federation and state chapters in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho employed an unusual tactic.

They said that while native wolves are covered by the Endangered Species Act, reintroduced wolves are considered part of an "experimental population" and can be shot if they threaten livestock. The farm groups said the reintroduction program violates the act.

But the appeals court said the 1973 act and a section added by Congress in 1982 were intended to allow the Interior Department flexibility in its approaches to the goals of preserving and recovering threatened animals.

Carrying on -- Wade McNutt did more than his fair share of 'carrying on' Thursday at the annual Koobraey event. In his performance, McNutt carried an electric keyboard, saxophone, a trunk with props, and numerous hats. McNutt changed hats, throwing them across the stage, as he played a number of popular songs on the saxophone with the electronic keyboard providing backup and rhythm.

Land returns to Native tribe

Package deal benefits national parks, rivers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Clinton administration is reportedly preparing to return 80,000 acres of federal land to the Northern Ute tribe in a deal also intended to help clean up tons of mining waste near the Colorado River and two national parks.

Rep. Chris Cannon, R-Utah, said Energy Secretary Bill Richardson was expected to detail the plan today during visits to Moab and Ute tribal headquarters at Fort Duchesne.

"We consider this part of the Clinton-Gore environmental legacy," Richardson said in today's New York Times.

Just this week, Clinton signed declarations for two new national monuments in Arizona and another in California. In 1996, he created the 1.7 million-acre Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument in southern Utah.

According to reports this week in The Salt Lake Tribune and The Times, the land swap will involve the 88,890-acre Naval Oil Shale Reserve No. 2, about 150 miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

The reserve was acquired by the federal government in the early 1900s to protect petroleum deposits in case of a national emergency. The reserves no longer are considered important.

The plan is to return about 80,000 acres to the tribe with the stipulation that a percentage of revenue generated by oil and gas development on the land be returned to Energy Department.

The agency will then use the money to clean up the abandoned Atlas mine near Moab, in southeastern Utah.

There are 10.5 million tons of uranium tailings at the site not far from both the Arches and Canyonlands national parks. The sediment spans 150 acres and stands 40 feet high.

Contaminants from the Cold War-era tailings are seeping into the Colorado River, 750 feet away, and threatening three endangered fish, the southwestern willow flycatcher, razorback sucker and Colorado squawfish. The river is also a source of drinking water for 25 million people in the West, though authorities have said there is no significant threat from the tailings.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission estimated that capping the waste and groundwater cleanup would cost about $47 million and moving the waste more than $100 million. The Clinton administration plan was expected to support the removal of the waste.

The proposal also calls for designating 21,000 acres of the land being returned as a wilderness area and transferring the remaining 8,000 to 9,000 acres of the reserve to the Bureau of Land Management.

"We're taking a close look at the proposed trade," said Heidi McIntosh, conservation director for the Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance. "We're pleased DOE wants to move the Atlas pile and we want to continue discussions to see if we can't find a way to maximize the Utes' development opportunities and protect wilderness at the same time."

Tribal leaders have agreed to a number of concessions in return for the new land, the Tribune said, including accepting the new land as private property — meaning taxes would go to local governments — rather than as tax-exempt reservation property.

"The tribe will once again be the true owner of its traditional lands," O. Roland McCook Jr., chairman of the tribe's governing body, told the Times.

SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT Arrests

Behavior may have biological basis

CHICAGO (AP) — Very aggressive boys have lower-than-expected levels of a stress hormone in their saliva, according to a new study that suggests their behavior might be biologically based and hard to treat with counseling.

Extreme antisocial behavior in boys ages 7 to 12 appears to be related to low cortisol levels, researchers reported today in the January issue of the Archives of General Psychiatry.

Cortisol is typically released in response to fear, such as fear of punishment for misbehaving. Its low levels in the antisocial boys might indicate that they do not fear the possible consequences of their actions, said Keith McBurnett, a child psychologist at the University of Chicago medical school who led the study.

"Perhaps what we're dealing with here is a biological propensity that's resistant to treatment, which is very troubling," he said.

"The implication is that we may need to discard our traditional notions of treatment with these kids in favor of trying to help them fit in and find a niche in society where their aggressiveness and lack of a sense of danger is an asset."

McBurnett said a more appropriate treatment might include drugs similar to those given to hyperactive children.

The four-year project studied such symptoms as starting fights, using weapons, stealing and forcing sexual acts. McBurnett acknowledged that the sample was small — just 38 boys — but said the correlation between cortisol and "childhood-onset conduct disorder" was very strong.

The disorder is characterized by severely antisocial behavior such as animal cruelty and weapon use that shows up before age 10. Children with the disorder often grow up to account for a disproportionate percentage of crimes, the researchers said.

More than a third of the boys with low cortisol were labeled by peers as the meanest in their class. The 12 children with the lowest levels of cortisol averaged 5.2 symptoms of conduct disorder, while the 26 with higher levels averaged 1.5 symptoms. And 11 of the 12 with low cortisol developed aggressive symptoms before age 10.

Dr. James Dabbs, a Georgia State University psychologist who has studied hormones in saliva, said he found the report somewhat surprising but saw no reason to doubt its findings.

"Low cortisol would make you bold," he said. In youngsters with low levels of the hormone, "it doesn't bother them when you do things to them. It's hard to make them behave."

-- A 27-year-old man was arrested on an outstanding Randall County warrant for failure to pay a fine on a public intoxication charge.

Incidents
-- Deputies assisted Children's Protection Services on an investigation of child abuse.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband, "Waldo," gets a ride to work five days a week from a friend who lives in our neighborhood. The drive takes over an hour, and Waldo really does appreciate the ride. He has offered to pay his friend, but the guy refuses to accept any money. He does, however, allow Waldo to fill the tank occasionally.

Here's the problem, Ann. Waldo and I see very little of each other because we both work long hours. This friend loves to gab. When he drives Waldo home, the two of them sit in front of our house for hours, talking and drinking beer. When I suggested he tell the guy he needs to go inside, Waldo became angry and said, "That's why you don't have any friends."

Do you think it's me, Ann? Does Waldo owe this fellow hours of talk because he gives him a ride to work? I would appreciate your thoughts on this because I am doing a — Slow Burn in Ohio.

Dear Slow Burn: Would you prefer that Waldo sit in a tavern with his friend and drink beer? Face the facts, dear. Your husband enjoys the guy's company. He also enjoys the beer. P.S.: Maybe if you'd consider cutting back your hours at work a few days a week and "sweeten up," Waldo would come in the house sooner.

Dear Ann Landers: My dear father suffered a stroke recently, and has been in a convalescent center for the past three months. I am able to visit him more frequently than other family members because I live in the same city. Although the illness has impaired Dad's memory and thought process, there are many days when he is lucid and speaks quite clearly. Most of the time, I can only relate these conversations to other family members over the telephone, and much gets lost in the retelling. My wonderful cousin came up with a simple solution that I hope will help others in the same situation.

My cousin suggested I bring a small cassette recorder with me when I visit my father. This way, I can state the date, and let my father know we are taping his conversation for others to enjoy. Some days, he understands, other days he doesn't, but the visit is there for all the grandchildren, nieces and nephews to treasure and be able to hear Dad's voice. The tapes are easy to send in the mail and will serve as a living diary. Please let your readers know. — Liz in Sacramento, Calif.

Dear Liz: What a splendid idea! As time goes on, those tapes will become more valuable. How I wish I had thought of it when I interviewed my grandfather for a paper I was writing for my English class in 1936. I am sure my grandchildren and great-grandchildren would be fascinated with the stories he told about his life in Russia, and how he came to the United States and landed on Ellis Island.

Family histories can enrich the lives of those who come after us, long after we are gone. Pay attention, readers. You will be glad you did.

Dear Ann Landers: Ever since my husband, "Ed," died six years ago, mail has been arriving addressed to him. These letters try to sell him everything from cars to magazine subscriptions. Yesterday, a letter came for Ed from a well-known insurance company. Enclosed were forms for him to fill out to apply for life insurance. The man has been dead for six years. Needless to say, this was very upsetting for me.

How often do these companies update their mailing lists? — Canadian Widow

Dear Canadian Widow: From what you have written, I would say, not often enough.

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age? Improving Fast

■ Wrestling loses dual match to Boys Ranch, but keeps improving on mat

By Yuri Soto

Hereford Brand Sports Editor

The wrestling is based on the improvements of each individual, not the victories a wrestler gets.

Well ... The Hereford Whitefaces may not have beaten the Rough Riders of Boys Ranch, 54-27 to be exact, but the Whitefaces showed a vast amount of improvement on the mat.

"We are green, but we are aggressive and we are working hard and we are trying to do well," Hereford coach Mike Dominguez. "I am really proud of all these kids. They all wrestled well."

The road to improvement started with Seth Pietsek in the 171-pound division.

Pietsek, who had to leave the dual match early for undisclosed reasons, held off Mike Lefis, 3-0.

It would be Pietsek's last dual home match as a Hereford wrestler.

Another Hereford wrestler with a successful night was Randall Burrows in the 180-pound division.

Burrows overcame a rough start to hold down Justin Lefis and score the pin 3:18 into the match.

"I am just happy that I got

Seth Pietsek takes control by holding on to Boys Ranch's Mike Lefis on Thursday. Pietsek won his last home match, 3-0.

the win in front of the home crowd and it feels good," Burrows said "I learn from my wins and losses and get better like at practice."

"Burrows goes out there and gives it his all. Sometimes he comes out on the short end, up he wanted to put a winner on the mat and he definitely did," Dominguez added. James Witkowski fought hard in the 189-pound division and had a few chances to make a quick pin, but was not able to accomplish the feat. He lost 3-0 to Ben Hoffman. Another wrestler who was close to pinning his opponent but came up short was Tyler Yenser in the 160-pound class. He was pinned by Zane Steinbrecher 3:53 into the match. One of the easier Hereford wins was by Kris Hammerbeck, who pinned David Pena in 38 seconds. It was a redemption on his part after struggling in the Liberal (Kan.) Tournament. "Kansas was more of a learning experience," Hammerbeck, a nationally-recognized wrestler, said. "Those guys are good, former state champs; they beat me and

■ Senior guard has shown she can nail an opponent in different ways and from different directions

She is always one of the first players to show up for basketball practice.

She's also the player the opponents least expect to have a grand game on the court.

She's the one that picks up quite a bit of the slack on defense.

In a few words, she's been all that.

Toni Eicke has provided the Hereford Lady Whitefaces with some balance on the court.

She is part of the reason Hereford is — again — a returning threat on the basketball court in the Texas Panhandle.

"I just feel that I have to do my job just to help the rest of the team," the 5-foot-9-inch Eicke said. "I go out every game knowing that I have to get the job done."

She has done all that. Eicke has been the quiet scorer for the Lady Whitefaces, averaging eight points-per-game.

Eicke, who is a threat beyond the three-point arc, is more of a defensive specialist than an offensive weapon.

"She contributes in many other ways besides scoring," Hereford coach Key Harrison said. "She usually gets the quick guard on defense and she does really well as a defensive leader."

An example of that specialty was evident Tuesday when the Lady Whitefaces faced the state's third-ranked team, the Lady Dons of Amarillo Palo Duro.

Eicke was responsible for covering Palo Duro guard Toya Gonzales, who is the key to Lady Don post Casey Jackson's scoring success. Gonzales was held to four assists.

"You know you have to stop the guard from passing the ball to her because she (Jackson) is just a bigger girl that any of our players," Eicke said. "I just put it onto myself that I can't allow my girl to pass to the post. I just try to put as much pressure on the guard as much as possible."

Sacramento Kings give Spurs 107-103 defeat

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The start of the playoffs is four months away. The Sacramento Kings and San Antonio Spurs are ready for postseason intensity now.

"We talked about it at our shootaround, how we needed to make this game like a playoff game," Kings coach Rick Adelman said after the Kings' 107-103 win Thursday night. "We had to understand that if we got down, we had to keep playing our game."

Chris Webber scored 34 points and had 19 rebounds for the Kings, who trailed by 14 points before outscoring San Antonio 26-19 in the fourth quarter, winning their third straight game and moving to 13-2 at Arco Arena.

It was only the second game the Spurs have allowed 100 points or more this year. They lost both games.

"Emotions were high and we were happy our fans came ready because it was just a fun experience," said Webber, who scored 20 points in the second half. "This is the type of game you really want to win, and it hurts to lose."

Webber ignited the rally, scoring 10 straight points at one stretch. He had a slight edge over Tim Duncan, who finished with 33 points and 20 rebounds, but also had six turnovers.

"Webber played a great game," Duncan said. "He shot the ball well down the stretch, and those are shots that on any given night on a usual basis, I don't give up those shots at the top of the key. But he made three in a row."

Duncan had 16 points in the first quarter and 20 points and 12 rebounds by halftime, helping San Antonio take a 61-54 lead. He was limited to only two field goals and nine points in the second half.

"Tim Duncan is such a great player," Adelman said. "He has so many facets to his game, similar to what Chris is doing now. He's just a very tough player to guard."

Despite going over four minutes without a field goal in the fourth quarter, the Kings maintained a slim lead.

Webber made an acrobatic basket and followed with a jumper over Duncan, putting the Kings ahead 101-96 with 2:28 remaining.

David Robinson had 17 points, Avery Johnson 15 and Mario Elie 13 for the Spurs.

"Both teams got after it, and down the stretch they obviously shot it very, very well," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "So they deserved to win."

Jason Williams scored 22 points for Sacramento, and Nick Anderson had 10. Predrag Stojakovic opened the fourth quarter with two 3-pointers and a jumper. The Kings made six of their first seven shots in the quarter.

"I missed a couple of layups that were open, but I had to just put those out of my mind," said Stojakovic, who had all eight of his points in the first three minutes of the fourth quarter.

Trailing by 12 points midway through the third period, the Kings went on a 13-3 run, pulling within two. Despite missing 23 of 31 shots in the third quarter, the Kings closed to 84-81.

Eicke

Eicke's efforts against Gonzales helped Hereford to keep the game close in the second half and nearly pull off the upset victory.

Nonetheless, Jackson scored 25 points on Hereford. But Eicke thought her team performed well.

"I thought we played really well, against Palo Duro," she said. "Jackson had her 25 points, but we'll see what happens next time."

Next time, it may be Eicke who gets all the points.

It's possible because Eicke has scored quite a few points in games past.

"In one game, she had 20 points, and at other times, she's had 17 points and that's one of those unconscious things as a player when you step up," Harrison said. "When somebody is struggling, you try to find a basket somehow."

Eicke knows she's able to score, but also knows her teammates have that same ability.

"Tori (Walker) and Valerie (Guzman) have always been our go-to girls," Eicke said. "You always can depend on them and you can depend on anybody in this team."

Wrestle

taught me a lesson. I had my chance and I blew it. I learned from my mistake and, hopefully, I'll do better."

But on this night, Hammerbeck keyed Hereford's road to improvement.

"My match was just very routine for me, but I had to set an example for the guys," Hammerbeck said of his leadership role. "It was laid down on me the way Javier Alonso went down with his ACL. I just had to step up."

Luis Perez also continued wrestling excellence with a pin victory over Joseph Weatherspoon in 4:14, in the 119-pound division.

"I had to get aggressive on him because he was talking a lot of smack, saying he was going to win in the first minute," Perez said. "That got me going."

Perez dedicated his win to the lone senior of the squad, Pietsek.

"It was Pietsek's last home dual and I just wanted to win my match for him," Perez said. "He did really well."

Paco Castillo also was a winner in his 125-pound class, pinning Robert Wallner in 2:13.

"I see real potential in them," Hammerbeck said of the younger wrestlers. "As you can see, younger guys taking down more experienced guys."

In other matches, Terence Wilhelm struggled and was pinned by Justin Shirley in 41 seconds in the 103-pound class.

Refugio Alvarez lost to Dustin Merritt by pin in 1:03 in the 130-pound division.

Jimmy Gray pinned Joaquin Rodriguez in 42 seconds in the 135-pound class.

Christian Weatherspoon defeated Guillermo Saenz, 12-5 in the 140-pound class. Preston Sapp was dominated by Jason Kontopedes in a 1:38 pin in the 145-pound class.

Tim Schlabs, the 215-pounder, lost to Justin Carter by pin at 2:21.

"They (Boys Ranch) are a good team and we wrestled tough against them," Dominguez said. "We get a pin here and there, they get a pin here and there. We could have had our first home win, but we wrestled well and excited about it."

And the improvement process of Hereford wrestling goes on.

"Everybody scores and that's what's neat about it that you have anyone who has the ability to score," she added. "If they stop Tori, we can go to Valerie; if they stop Valerie, we can go to Ashley (Fangman) and that's what neat about it. I just do my job and if I get the opportunity, I know I have to score."

Eicke hopes that by season's end, she can score more than just points for her basketball team.

"We all want to make the playoffs and not play that third-place game like we did last year," she said. "We want to come out knowing that we have a shot at district and have to work each game, every practice. Our goal is to get past the regional quarterfinal."

'The Talented Mr. Ripley' showcasing fine acting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Movie review

By David Germain

The Associated Press
Nose squashed against the window of high society, gawky young Tom Ripley would do anything for a taste of the tantalizing treats he sees on the other side of the glass. Even kill.

"The Talented Mr. Ripley," Academy Award-winner Anthony Minghella's first movie since "The English Patient," is the chilling story of a social climber in the 1950s whose aspirations come with a body count.

His talents are many: Mimicry, skullduggery, forgery, and a capacity for covetousness, violence and feigned innocence that would do Cain proud. He also plays a mean piano and wields an even meaner bludgeon.

Matt Damon stars as Tom Ripley, the ultimate robber baron, who steals the wealth, the life, the identity of the rich, and gives them to the poor — namely, Tom Ripley.

We first see Tom tickling the ivories as a hired pair of hands at a ritzy party. The Princeton logo on Tom's jacket (borrowed, like all things Ripley) catches the eye of the host, a shipping magnate who assumes the piano player is a former classmate of his errant son, Dickie Greenleaf.

The senior Greenleaf dispatches Tom to Italy to lure Dickie (Jude Law) home from the hedonistic life he shares with his girlfriend Marge Sherwood (Gwyneth Paltrow). With a grand of Greenleaf greenbacks in his pocket, Tom graduates from his squalid basement apartment in New York to a first-class cabin on a Cunard liner, heading for Europe.

Instead of landing his prey, the errand boy is hooked by Dickie's lavish lifestyle, and, in Tom's ambiguous sexuality, by Dickie himself. He falls for Dickie's clothes, mannerisms, jazz music, even his scent. At one point, Tom sneaks a sniff of the snoozing Dickie's duds, while Dickie is wearing them.

"I've gotten to like everything about the way you live," Tom tells Dickie. "It's one big love affair."

For a time, Dickie finds Tom a refreshing lark. True to his idle-rich nature, Dickie eventually loses interest and decides to cast Tom aside. Words are exchanged on a boating trip, bloodshed follows, and Tom finds himself up a creek with Dickie's paddle and an opportunity to step into his hero's shoes. A chameleon to the core, Tom seizes the day with relish.

Minghella wisely takes broad liberties with the Patricia Highsmith novel on which the movie is based. In print, Tom Ripley is a cold conniver with barely a whiff of conscience. On film, however, he suffers from the realization that he has achieved his goal at a price: living with the horrific deeds that got him there, and with the possibility that more such acts might be needed to keep the things he now calls his own.

While the book is heavy on Tom's internal, Machiavellian musings, Minghella also deftly fleshes out the secondary characters, who are little more than two-dimensional targets in Tom's sights in the novel.

Dickie and Marge, their friends Freddie Miles (Philip Seymour Hoffman) and Peter Smith-Kingsley (Jack Davenport), loom much larger in the movie and come to life in a joyful fraternity of expatriatism. Minghella even adds a character, the wide-eyed tourist Meredith Logue (Cate Blanchett), as a counterpoint of naivete to Tom's ruthless plotting.

"The Talented Mr. Ripley," distributed by Paramount, is rated R. It is showing at Moovies 6, 400 N. 25 Mile Ave.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Exodus intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

JACOB'S TOLL
JACOB HAS SERVED LABAN FOR HIS DAUGHTER RACHEL FOR SEVEN YEARS—NOW AS THE TIME OF SERVITUDE COMES TO AN END...

AND NOW IT IS TIME TO CLAIM MY WAGES—THY DAUGHTER AS MY WIFE!

AND A GREAT WEDDING FEAST IS PREPARED AND MUCH MERRY MAKING IN THE HOUSE OF LABAN...

AND IN THE EVENING JACOB DEPARTS THE FEAST TO GO TO HIS YOUNG BRIDE AS IS THE CUSTOM OF THESE DAYS...

BUT IN THE MORNING...

WHAT IS THIS! THOU ART LEAN, AND NOT RACHEL—I AM MARRIED TO THE WRONG SISTER!

WHAT HAST THOU DONE UNTO ME? DID I NOT SERVE THEE FOR RACHEL? WHY HAST THOU TRICKED ME?!
