The forgotten WAR

U.S. Defense Department

Marine landing forces come up on an elevator from the hanger deck to enter helicopters to launch an assault on North Korean forces in the Inch'on area. It was the first time the Marines moved from ship to shore by air.

INCH'ON LANDING

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

A timeline of important dates relating to the Korean War shows that on Sept. 15-16, 1950, U.S. forces landed at Inch'on and on Sept. 16-22, the United Nations forces broke out of the Pusan Perimeter, fought their way north and recaptured Seoul.

When the "Forgotten War" began in June 1950, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander-in-chief of the United Nations Command, directed a defensive effort to repel the armed attack of North Korea.

However, by the end of July, the North Korean army had overrun most of South Korea, pushing the U.N. forces south almost to the sea.

In a last-ditch effort, U.N. forces established a 90- by 50-mile defensive area around Pusan on the southeastern tip of Korea.

Within this "Pusan Perimeter," some 140,000 U.S. and South Korean troops were the last hope for saving

MacArthur rolled the dice with risky plan to stop North Korean's advance, relieve embattled U.N. forces in 'Pusan Perimeter'

South Korea. If the Pusan Perimeter fell, the war would be lost.

MacArthur devised a daring plan to retake South Korea. He would land an invasion force at Inch'on, a port just west of Seoul. Landing troops there, behind the North Korean forces, MacArthur envisioned U.N. forces trapping the enemy and cutting off its supply lines and escape routes.

On Sept. 15, under the cover of intense naval and air bombardment, U.S. Marines quickly took the port of Inch'on. Within a few days, U.N. forces had recaptured Seoul.

By Sept. 30, the North Korean army was finally pushed back across the 38th Parallel. After three months of bloody fighting, it seemed the war might be over. But as U.N. troops marched into North Korea, more than 100,000 experienced Chinese soldiers were slipping across the Yalu River. U.N. and Chinese troops clashed and the war dragged on.

During and prior to this critical time in the war, servicemen from Hereford and the surrounding area were serving in Korea. Three of the following accounts indicate that there was an American military presence in Korea at least as early as right after World War II.

• Alva Lee "Al" Daniels •

Daniels was an Army technician 5th grade Jan. 9, 1945- Sept. 11, 1946, serving the last nine months in Korea. He was in charge of caring for the Sharanuhi Hotel in Seoul, then he was assigned to an ice dock. After his active duty, Daniels enlisted in the reserves. He received his honorable discharge on Dec. 10, 1949.

• Floyd D. Smith •

A master sergeant, Smith served in the U.S. Army Air Corps (1942-1946) in Europe during World War II and in Korea for the few months left on his enlistment after the war ended. He was the radio engineer on a large plane which flew to Korea, pulling three gliders all manned by young men with no training.

This experience convinced him that his own sons should get a good education in hopes they would have a better chance in life.

• Archie L. Hill •

Hill was in the Army from 1946-1965 with the 104th Engineers. He served in Korea in 1947 prior to the war and then again in 1953-54 with the occupation forces.

• J.P. Jones •

Jones was a reservist who was activated Jun 17, 1950, serving as a machinist mate aboard the USS Hamul, a destroyer tender with a machine shop equipped to repair most destroyer problems. Jones was separated from the Navy on Jan. 23, 1952.

Between his service in World War II from 1942-1946 and his Korean service, he was awarded the Asiatic Pacific Medal, American Theater Victory Medal, Philippine Liberation

C.W. Walker prepares a chuckwagon meal.

Family works hard to have fun

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

It could be called a family tradition, in the truest sense of the phrase. It could be called cultural heritage, or it could be called a lot of hard work in the name of fun.

For C.W. and Margaret Walker and their family chuckwagon cooking competitions are all that, plus a great hobby involving the entire family.

"Chuckwagons and chuckwagon cooking is purely a hobby," said C.W. "There's no money in it and even if we do win something, it just barely covers the cost of getting to the competition."

"If you don't like this sort of thing, you don't do it," Wayne Walker said. "It's a lot of hard work and time."

Chuckwagons are truly part of the Walker family heritage. His parents crossed Texas in a covered wagon when his mother was eight years old.

The first chuckwagon they built came about when Wayne began collecting old parts and chuckwagon paraphernalia. Built to the specifications of the original Charles Goodnight chuckwagon, it took about seven or eight months to complete. Adding realism was C.W.'s mother, Annie Maynard Walker, who remembered down to the finest detail the early chuck wagons.

"She was the supervisor," C.W. said. "She told us exactly how and where everything went."

Since their beginnings more than eight years ago, the Walkers have added wagons, sold wagons, rebuilt wagons and found numerous ways to enjoy their family hobby.

• Transit workers strike •

LOS ANGELES — Thousands of transit workers went on strike early Saturday after bargaining broke down between union officials and the Metropolitan Transportation Authority. The walkout by bus and rail drivers, mechanics and clerks is expected to affect about 450,000 people who rely on public transportation in a 1,400-square-mile area of Los Angeles County. But its full impact is not likely to be felt until Monday, when the bulk of the transit system's users return to work from the weekend. "Get that bus off the streets," picketers chanted as drivers pulled their buses into the terminals.

• Bush skips GOP meet •

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — As California Republicans opened their convention, George W. Bush was leaving the state, marking the fourth straight time he has skipped the gathering. Far from feeling snubbed, Republicans praised the move as a savvy one that allows the GOP presidential nominee to avoid the bitter feuds that usually plague the Republican convention. Campaign officials say the Texas governor is better served courting California's undecided voters, as he did much of this week. He will, however, have a presence at the convention, delivering an address by satellite Saturday afternoon.

• Gore courts black voters •

WASHINGTON — A clearly relaxed Al Gore spent a day pitching his message to blacks, a group of potential voters who already overwhelmingly back him for the presidency. Friday night, the vice president and Democratic nominee spoke to an overflow crowd of black appointees of the Clinton administration. "In a lot of previous administrations, they wouldn't have needed a room this big to hold an event like this, you know what I'm saying?" Gore said. The audience erupted into cheers of "Go Al! Go Al!" as the vice president recited a list of Clinton minority appointees and ended it by saying "53 judges and not a Clarence Thomas among them. When I hear the other side say affirmative action is unnecessary — please give me a break," Gore said. "We need affirmative action for the good of the entire nation." He also promised to work for hate crimes legislation and increased federal efforts to end racial profiling by law enforcement.

Gore has edge in key states

The Associated Press

Al Gore has gained the upper hand over George W. Bush in Michigan, Illinois and Pennsylvania, according to new polls in several key industrial states.

In a fourth state, Ohio, the two candidates were roughly even, with Republican Bush at 43 percent and Democrat Gore with 41 percent.

Gore was up by 8 points in Michigan, 45-37; ahead by 15 points in Illinois, 48-33; and had an 18-point bulge in Pennsylvania, 51-33, according to the polls conducted by EPIC/MRA of Lansing.

Gore's recent rise in state and national polls was not particularly worrisome to Michigan Gov. John Engler, an adviser to Bush's campaign.

Bush's plan to refocus on his message of improving education and cutting taxes could help the Texas governor regain some of the momentum he has lost in recent weeks,

ELECTION 2000

Engler said.

The new poll "just reflects the fact that the message in the last couple weeks has been about debates and peripheral issues and not the central themes of the campaign," Engler said. "I don't think the debate about the debates has been helpful to Bush."

Democrats were cautious about making too much of the polls showing a lead for Gore in the crucial Midwestern states.

James Blanchard, a co-chairman of Gore's Michigan campaign and a former governor, said he still expects a tight race as the candidates woo the state's swing voters. But he likes Gore's strategy.

"The issues are working for Democrats," Blanchard said, referring to Gore's focus on education, health care, Social Security and the environment.

The polls were taken Sept. 6-13 with an error margin of 4 percentage points in Michigan's poll of 600 likely voters. In Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, 400 likely voters were polled in each state, with error margins of 5 percentage points in each.

Ed Sarpolus of EPIC/MRA, said the poll reflects a loss of confidence in Bush by Republican voters. Gore is starting to make inroads into some areas where Bush has been stronger, such as among men and those with moral concerns, he said.

In mid-August, Bush led Gore in Michigan by about the same margin he now trails — 8 points.

The margin in Pennsylvania, similar to another poll taken after the Democratic last month convention, is larger than the campaigns have seen in their internal polling.

Exercise treadmill installed

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The crew of space shuttle Atlantis began installing a special exercise treadmill aboard the international space station early Saturday, one of their last major tasks inside the orbiting complex.

The seven-man crew also began wrapping up the transfer and stowage of some 6,000 pounds of supplies and equipment for the station's first permanent residents, who are due to arrive in November.

Pilot Scott Altman, astronaut Edward Lu and cosmonaut Boris Morukov began fitting the treadmill — about the size of a four-drawer file cabinet — into a pit in the floor of the Russian service module Zvezda. They hit a small snag early on, having some trouble getting a mounting pin to fit, but Mission Control figured out a solution.

No off-the-rack treadmill, this one was designed so that an astronaut running on it would not transfer any vibrations to the station's structure. The reason: to keep intact any sensitive microgravity experiments. Vibrations would skew the data from the experiments, which will be performed throughout the space station.

The treadmill vibration isolation system includes a frame of guy wires, bungee cords and computer-controlled dampening mechanisms. The complexity of the system made for intricate work, NASA said.

"There were a lot of pieces," space station lead flight director Mark Ferring said.

Thanks for setting record

Dear Editor:

Thanks to the amazing support of businesses and individuals that care. The 2000 edition of the Heifers & Bulls Golf Tournament broke yet another record for a donation to our local chapter of Make-A-Wish.

This year's donation has exceeded $15,000. Confirmation has already been received that only the annual car show in Amarillo produced more money for Make-A-Wish in 2000 in the entire Panhandle.

Congratulations to each and everyone of you that made this possible. I hope you enjoyed it if you played in the tournament.

By the way, an additional $4,775 in Hereford Bucks were awarded to the winners of the golf tournament.

events and even big-name country singers. They've traveled as far as Alpine and won various prizes at Amarillo, Lubbock, San Angelo, Red River and even Kansas City, Kan.

Regardless of where they are headed or what event is drawing them, the biggest reason for chuckwagon cooking remains a pride in a family heritage.

"The most interesting thing about cowboy cooking is maintaining the heritage and preserving something that's lost," Wayne said.

Finding that lost something can sometimes be a true challenge. Everything on a chuckwagon must be authentic. The people competing must dress in period clothing and not even a pen or pair of sunglasses can be in sight. The only exception is a cooking thermometer and a jug of bleach. Everything else must be as it would have been found on a ranch chuckwagon in the 1880s.

The Walkers keep their wagons authentic down to the after-supper entertainment, which includes musicians pickin' guitars and sawing on an old fiddle.

"Between cooking, visiting, setting up and tearing down, there's not a lot of time left, but we do try to get in a little original entertainment," Margaret said.

Wayne and his wife, Bobbie, took their love for chuckwagon cooking all the way to the altar. They got hitched a little more than two years ago in a chuckwagon ceremony.

Other members of the family, mostly the daughters, joined forces this year in a friendly competition with their father and his group to compete at the Cowboy Symposium in Lubbock.

"Each wagon is like its own museum," said Karen Fangman, one of C.W.'s daughters and a member of the Walkin' F, the first all-female wagon at Lubbock. "They each say something about the ones running it."

Completing the Walkin' F team were Jeannine and Theresa Zimmerman, Elaine Southward and Toni Green. And, for their first time out, they didn't do so badly. The Walkin' F earned a third place for potatoes.

The wagons, their grouchy cooks and all the accouterments, are subject to the whims of the cook-off judges and officials.

All the participants get the same menu to cook. Sometimes it's pot roast. Mostly it's chicken fried steaks, potatoes, sour dough bread, camp fire gravy and cowboy coffee. And, don't forget the peach cobbler — that's a must for any cookoff.

Competitors don't even know if the visitors to their camp are just friendly visitors with curious questions or judges looking for something that will cost the team high marks. Most of the team members have a speciality — some cook the gravy, some do meat, some do the cobbler.

"There's always a louse on a wagon," Bobbie said. "They usually get stuck doing the dishes."

For all their hard work and fun, C.W.'s wagon won third overall in cooking and camp and fourth place for bread last week in Lubbock.

Until the next event, the Walkers will be on the lookout for ways to improve their camp and more ways to have fun carrying on their family traditions.

Blue laws coming under attack across Bible Belt

MONROE, La. (AP) — As a churchgoing city councilman and minister's son, Robert Stevens is well aware of the political risks that come with challenging the Sunday liquor restrictions of this Bible Belt city.

"It's still taboo," he says.

But with expected revenue shortfalls in Monroe and a push to increase bookings at the new convention center, it was Stevens who began questioning publicly whether the city's best interests are served by banning Bloody Marys and other drinks from Sunday brunch.

"We need to be looking at generating revenue versus laying off employees," Stevens said. "It's not going to kill anybody to look at it."

In heavily Christian Monroe and cities like it across the South, the last bastions of blue laws are succumbing to economic pressure.

"Business does best in the areas with the fewest restrictions," said Bill Oakland, an economics professor at Tulane University in New Orleans. "If one jurisdiction tries to be more restrictive than surrounding areas, they lose their shirt."

As recently as the 1970s, the centuries-old laws — named for the blue paper they were written on — kept shoppers across the South from numerous activities on Sundays, including grocery shopping or going to hardware stores. In Louisiana, auto dealerships remain closed on Sundays.

City economy slides slightly

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Hereford's economy was stagnant in September, at least by one measurement.

The city's sales tax payment from the Texas Comptroller's Office this month was $79,247, down 0.05 percent from the $79,290 received in September 1999. The month's allocation also was significantly below the $96,496 payment the city received in August. For the year, Hereford has received $787,943 in rebate payments.

Deaf Smith County received a rebate of $26,995, down 0.6 percent from the $27,160 received a year ago. The September payment also was down from the $32,413 received in August.

The Texas Comptroller's Office sent 1,103 Texas cities and 199 counties $210.2 million in sales tax revenue for September. The month's sales tax rebates are up 11.9 percent compared to September 1999. For the year, payments to cities and counties are up 8.1 percent from last year.

The sales tax rebates delivered include $194 million to Texas cities, up 12.4 percent compared to September 1999. Texas counties received rebates of $16.2 million, up 6.3 percent compared to a year ago.

In addition to city and county sales tax rebates, $74.4 million went to Texas' six metropolitan transit authorities and two city transit systems, and $6.9 million was paid to 54 special purpose districts. September sales tax rebates represent sales taxes collected in July and reported to the comptroller in August.

By law, the state collects sales taxes for Texas cities and counties that have local sales taxes. The comptroller's office then returns the portion of the taxes on a monthly basis.

The state charges a 6.25 percent sales tax and local sales taxes can be up to 2 percent above that. The city of Hereford levies a 1.5 percent tax, while Deaf Smith County's sales tax is 0.5 percent.

Around the area:

- Borger — $169,703, down 8.5 percent from $185,402 last September;
- Canyon, $43,782, down 7.5 percent from $47,333 in September 1999;
- Dalhart — $84,904, up 13.8 percent from $74,593 last year;
- Dimmitt — $25,957, down 0.3 percent from $26,039 last year;
- Dumas — $134,829, down 1.3 percent from $136,648 in September 1999;
- Friona — $22,314, up 8.3 percent from the $17,389 for last September;
- Pampa — $195,917, down 4 percent from $204,098 in September 1999;
- Plainview — $200,555, down 0.9 percent from $202,434 last year; and
- Vega — $2,662, down 7.7 percent from $2,886 last September.

DROUGHT

■ Texas viewing an instant replay

Since the days of the Republic, Texans have been toughing-out drought. We can take one year of drought, or even two. But five consecutive years of drought, such as we are experiencing now, is more than most farmers and ranchers are able to withstand.

A child born in Texas will start kindergarten this fall not knowing anything but drought. Here we go again: parched, panting, having lived through another one of the worst summers on record. Temperatures averaged up to 5 degrees above normal over large parts of our state through August. Central and West Texas received less than 25 percent of normal rainfall in July, and parts of Texas were without rain for a staggering 73 days.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service report that, by the end of August, Texans had suffered $595 million in agriculture losses—and the service is still counting.

KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON
U.S. Senate

Cotton, our numero uno cash crop, has been hardest hit, with economists estimating $285 million in crop damage. Other estimated losses this year include $125 million in wheat and $50 million in forage crops. Hay production reached a standstill by mid-summer and producers face soaring feed, water and added irrigation costs.

At the same time, the drought has prevented many of the state's beef producers from building their herds in anticipation or stronger prices.

Aside from doing a rain dance (and I'd do that if it would help), the situation requires that we immediately bring into play all existing federal government resources that can be of assistance. Here's what's on tap for hard-pressed farmers and ranchers so far:

The House and Senate are finishing up their drought relief for farmers and ranchers.

That includes $450 million for the Livestock Assistance Program to make direct payments to eligible livestock producers who suffered grazing losses due to natural disaster, and another $450 million for framers who suffered crop losses due to the drought.

I anticipate there will be at least that much drought relief funding in the final bill. It is probable that farmers and ranchers in most Texas counties will be eligible for the livestock and crop assistance programs. This emergency package, combined with assistance already available through the 1996 farm bill, adds up to a substantial federal response to the economic situation facing farmers and ranchers.

Currently, 180 counties in Texas have been designated for federal disaster assistance by the Secretary of Agriculture, Farmers and ranchers in those counties will not be eligible for U.S.

Che's memory lives

More than 30 years after his death, Che Guevara is still revered by many.

I was aware of the affection many still hold for which the Argentina-born hero of the Cuban Revolution, but was brought home to me earlier this week when Annette and I visited the Texas Tech University Museum in Lubbock.

A young man, most likely an exchange student from Latin America, said, "I love your T-shirt." My T-shirt was bright red and emblazoned with a portrait of Che.

Later, when we were leaving the museum, the same young man stopped me and asked me if I read Che's writings.

"Yes, I've read most of them," I said.

"His diaries, too," he asked.

"Yes."

"Where did you get the T-shirt?"

I told him I had ordered the shirt from a catalog and told him the Internet address.

"He was a great man. He stood up for everything he believed," the young man said.

Che Guevara was executed by elements of the Bolivian army in October 1967. He had been captured after he was wounded during a skirmish between his band of guerrillas and the army. Following an interrogation that involved agents of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, Che was executed by Bolivian army Sgt. Mario Teran while CIA agent Felix Rodriguez waited nearby.

According to journalist Alexander Cockburn, Che was profoundly romantic, in that he believed deeply in the possibility of absolute change. ... He had will, conviction and a saving sense of irony.

Che was an unlikely guerrilla fighter because of his physical limitations. He suffered from asthma, which certainly had to be aggravated by the climate and stress he was under as he waged guerrilla warfare, first against the forces of the Batista regime in Cuba, then in the Congo and, finally, in the mountains of Bolivia.

Donald Cooper

Because of his romantic appearance, style and his refusal to bow down to any kind of establishment, be it capitalist or communist, and his death while fighting for what he believed in, Che became a legend and an idol for the disaffected, the disaffected and the disenfranchised around the world. Young people in Europe, Asia, Latin America and Africa frequently hold banners bearing his image.

The portrait on my T-shirt is the most familiar of all photographs of Che, and was on a poster that I had tacked to the barracks wall when I was stationed in Berlin. I had purchased the poster at a shop in the British sector and decided to put it on the wall — because I did admire Che and also because I wanted to gig the treads (career soldiers) a bit.

A few days after I put the poster on the wall, the first sergeant came into my room. He looked sharply at the poster.

"He a rock star or something?" the first sergeant asked.

"Something like that, Sarge," I said.

"He needs a haircut," the sergeant said as he left the room.

More than 30 years later, I printed out a small picture — the same one that was on the poster — and taped it to my computer at work.

A local teen-ager who was walking by saw the photo and came over for a closer look.

"That one of the Beatles?" he asked.

"Yeah, it's George," I said with a sigh.

Contributions appreciated

Dear Editor:

It would be impossible to thank everyone personally, but we are extremely grateful for every person who contributed to the Make-A-Wish tournament and auction last weekend.

Bill Brown, the Make-A-Wish people, Buick Division and all of you who so generously contributed to the success of the auction with your donations and contributions, and all of the special people who braved the heat and played their hearts out on the golf course — how can we ever thank you enough?

This is truly what makes Hereford great. Thanks from all of us and the "kids" at Make-A-Wish.

I read with interest the viewpoint written about the hospital in a recent editorial. I know there have been several charges and much discussion about the future of our hospital.

We have an excellent hospital which should make Hereford proud. When I have heard discussion about the hospital, I have been a passive listener, but not any more. We as residents in Hereford should be concerned, be involved and stand up for the hospital care we have here.

In July, I had a medical problem that required hospitalization. I knew that our hospital had exceptional surgeons and immediately scheduled the surgery.

I do not have enough words to express the excellent quality of service provided at our hospital. The surgeon, Dr. Nadir Khuri, and his surgery room staff were efficient and compassionate. The nurses, aides, office staff, housekeepers and volunteers were loving, happy, caring people. The attention you re-

Texas signs new handgun agreements

Ed Sterling

AUSTIN — Texas has signed reciprocal agreements with Florida and Tennessee, allowing citizens with concealed handgun licenses issued by Florida or Tennessee to legally carry concealed handguns in Texas, and vice versa.

Col. Thomas A. Davis Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, signed reciprocity agreements with Florida and Tennessee through which their licensees can visit Texas with their concealed handguns.

"This agreement will allow licensed Texans to travel freely in the states of Tennessee and Florida, while enjoying the same or similar privileges their licenses give them at home," Davis said.

The reciprocity agreements with other states are the fifth and sixth Texas has reached.

They were made possible by 1997 changes to the state's concealed handgun law. Texas also has reciprocity agreements with Arkansas, Louisiana, Arizona and Oklahoma.

Texans should remember that weapons laws vary from state to state, and before traveling, license holders should educate themselves about laws in other states that govern where and when they can legally carry their concealed handguns, Davis said.

Grain transfer station opens

Texas and Mexico officials last week announced the opening of a truck-to-truck transfer station in Rio Grande City.

Mexican transport trucks will be allowed to cross the border on privately maintained roads and proceed to the Rio Grande City transfer station, the Texas Department of Agriculture said.

At Rio Grande City, Mexican trucks will pick up deliveries from U.S. trucks transporting Texas grain shipments from throughout the Rio Grande Valley and the Coastal Bend.

Mexico is the top market for Texas grain sorghum with about 1 million tons exported south each year.

Combs said she wants to develop more Texas-Mexico marketing partnerships such as the Rio Grande City project.

"I view our relationship with Mexico as a two-way street, and we must both work together in partnership to enhance each other's economies," Combs said.

Combs said she visits regularly with her counterparts in the four Mexican states that border Texas: Chihuahua, Coahuila, Tamaulipas and Nuevo Leon.

Food and agricultural trade between the U.S. and Mexico have more than doubled during the last 10 years and are expected to total $10.9 billion in fiscal year 2000, Combs said.

Drought crumbles foundations

Shifting soils from heat and lack of rainfall have cracked the foundations of homes across the state, the Texas Department of Insurance reported last week.

Foundation repair companies, insurance agents and lawmakers have been hearing from homeowners from Corpus Christi to Wichita Falls who describe how drought conditions have cracked foundations, outside brick walls and interior walls.

An early sign of trouble is a door or window that will not open or close or a small crack that appears inside the house. As the drought continues, cracks in the soil widen and the problems for homeowners multiply.

Sam Nelson, chief engineer at the Texas Department of Insurance, said homes built over fill dirt or clay soil are the ones most likely to develop problems.

"Visualizing what the bottom of a dry stock pond looks like with its huge cracks will give you an idea of what's happening around many concrete foundations," Nelson said.

After a period of drought, the soil shrinks, and once rains return, the soil swells, creating movement in the foundation of a home, he said.

Homeowners can prevent foundations from cracking by maintaining a proper moisture level around the perimeter of the home. Watering the general area twice a week for 20 minutes is sufficient, he said.

Barriers also may need to be dug near a home to prevent roots of large trees from pressing against foundations as they tend to rise during drought-like conditions, he said.

Why aren't more companies coming here? Drought

I hear a lot about the lack of industry coming into the Hereford area.

I hear people complain about special programs to bring in more agricultural (cattle) businesses. There also are questions about the lack of retail business and other non-agriculture-involved enterprises.

What I haven't heard is anyone addressing the reasons for the situation. Why aren't companies attracted to a wide-open area such as ours — an area with numerous advantages?

As I see things, companies are looking for far more than tax incentives when they begin considering a major move or expansion. One of the first concerns has to be the ability to maintain a solid employee base. This means a qualified workforce, decent housing, after-hours recreation, good schools, acceptable medical care and pleasant surroundings.

I don't think finding qualified local people is a factor. It seems too many local people move or work outside the area simply because there is not acceptable employment locally. I can't help but believe many of these exceptional individuals could find reasons to stay here if presented with strong enough motive.

Should a company consider a move to the area, which includes bringing people with them, these employees will need and want some place to call home. As a long-time house hunter, I realize all too well, the obstacles facing individuals looking to rent suitable family housing. Decent rental property really isn't available for under $500 a month. Rental property is either economically out of reach or so physically flawed they are almost uninhabitable. The few apartment complexes in the area also have their own limitations. The better quality apartments stay full and have long waiting lists. Many of the other apartments have numerous, visible defects. This in itself may limit an organization's desire to relocate to our area. Even if a company were to move to town, the housing shortage could induce many employees to move to Canyon or Amarillo, providing those towns with the benefits which could be coming our way.

More than likely the top management of any organization, including a prison, a juvenile detention facility or a major retailer, will more than likely purchase a home. Where the managers purchase those homes could depend on the availability of affordable housing. Real estate agents say there are plenty of houses on the local market. But are they priced at fair market value or has some external force caused an inflated and false value base line?

A tremendous draw for employers and their employees is the quality of off-duty recreational events. And, Hereford has the potential of some really great facilities. Our YMCA is one of the best I've ever visited. I've been told John Pitman Municipal Golf Course is one of the best to be found in any town our size. Local sporting events are unequaled in nearly all age groups, but the rest is pretty limited.

Sure, we have a bowling alley and a theater. We also have a great swimming pool that is seldom available to those who would swim after 5 p.m. Our tracks and walking facilities are great, but sometimes unusable because of odd watering schedules.

The schools, of course, speak for themselves. Four campuses achieved exemplary status and the district was recognized by the state. New and remodeled buildings could easily be envied by larger, more prosperous districts.

Area residents also enjoy a level of medical care that isn't all that bad, either. Generally, the doctors and their staffs seem to be kind and caring people who want the best for all their clients. The staff of the hospital and the various doctors' offices are capable of handling general treatment and, knowing their limitations, readily refer clients to specialists, if needed. Yes, the building that houses the hospital is old and needs renovations, but I'm sure needed improvements would be added with increased usage.

And, then there are the pleasant surroundings.

I'm not saying Hereford is an unpleasant town, but the feedlot dust at sundown, dilapidated buildings at every entry point, rusted fences and junk cars scattered throughout the city don't make for good first impressions.

Topping the list of sore subjects are the towering weeds, which seem to thrive in a drought.

No, Hereford is not an unpleasant place to live, but there are definitely things which could improve the economic growth outlook for the community.

Sure, we need non-ag-related businesses to come to our city, but let's give ourselves a fair chance. If we want these industries, then we — the residents who call Hereford home — have to do the things which will make Hereford a desirable place to live and work.

Department of Agriculture (USDA) low-interest emergency loans.

In addition, to date, 36 Texas counties have been approved by the USDA to allow their livestock to graze on Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) acreage through at least the end of September, with the possibility of extension through November 30. Under this designation, livestock grazing is allowed on cropland that has been removed from production of annual program crops, such as wheat or feed grain, and dedicated to resource-conserving cover.

(The 36 Texas counties released by the Secretary of Agriculture for grazing include Bailey, Baylor, Briscoe, Callahan, Castro, Childress, Cottle, Crosby, Dawson, Deaf Smith, Dickens, Eastland, Fisher, Floyd, Hale, Hall, Haskell, Howard, Jones, Kent, King, Knox, Lubbock, Martin, McCulloch, Mitchell, Motley, Nolan, Oldham, Parmer, Potter, Randall, Scurry, Swisher, Taylor and Young. Dallam County has requested emergency grazing permission as well, and this request is in the works.)

There are a number of other measures Congress has adopted recently to stabilize farm income, promote savings and investment, and create a cushion for producers.

We took a major step in the right direction when Congress restored three-year income averaging for farmers, which was taken out of the tax code in 1986. That should help protect farmers from unintended tax consequences that result from the wild income fluctuations that are unique to the agricultural economy. Farmers have little control over wide swings in their income or losses caused by conditions such as the drought we're going through now.

All Texans, whether in urban areas or the country, have a stake in Texas agriculture because it plays such a prominent role in our state economy. For more information on the help being made available to farmers and ranchers at this perilous time, please contact the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency in your county, which will be listed in your local telephone directory. Or contact your member of Congress or my Washington office at (202) 224-5922.

and noticed the uncut and dry condition of our lawn there.

A city employee who was working there estimated that some of the weeds alongside the sidewalk were 12 inches high or so.

Can't this city afford the high water rates the rest of us pay? Perhaps it can't, as evidenced by the tree across from the post office. The tree, purchased and planted by the Hereford Beautification Alliance, is now a dead trunk with undergrowth thanks to city neglect.

In fairness, I did notice later that afternoon that the lawn mowing had begun at City Hall. But, I do hope our elected officials will be more responsive to city and county residents' concerns about our community's appearance.

An example of those concerns was reflected in Herb Vogel's comments to Deaf Smith County commissioners, as reported by the Hereford Brand in its Sept. 5 edition. He cited the old brick factory east of town as an obvious eyesore and a detriment to economic development.

In truth, we have many more eyesores.

Surely, the city won't continue to contribute to them.

THE CHOSIN FEW: Survivors remember the battle against the enemy, elements

By Gary Carter

Herald Democrat (Sherman/Denison)

POTTSBORO— For some men, it's their alma mater that leads to a reunion every year. For others, it's family or work. But for a group called The Chosin Few, it's a battle against an enemy and against the elements that brings them together to share stories and to celebrate life.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Korean War, a time in America's history in which the 3,000 living members of The Chosin Few remember very well. During a fish fry and reunion of the local chapter of The Chosin Few in North Texas, dozens of Marines recalled the most harrowing times of their lives, a time which led them to be named The Chosin Few.

It was the winter of 1950, and America was six months into the war with North Korea. More than 20,000 Marines and Army infantrymen (mostly Marines however) were sent well north of the 38th Parallel to bring a swift end to the conflict.

Temperatures by day rarely got above zero and it was snowing all the time. This division of military men were high in the mountains of Korea, not far from the Chinese border.

Back in June, when America entered the war, this division of Marines started in the very southern tip of the Korean peninsula.

The breakout stalled in December 1950. Marines wait while another roadblock is reduced.

eral with the Marines, explained that the top brass wanted to sweep through Korea decisively and be home by Christmas. His Marines were ordered north of the 38th parallel toward China.

The Marines and Army infantrymen slid into the western shore of North Korea and began to fight. Later, they were ordered back on ships to head to the eastern shore of North Korea and the city of Hungnam. From there, the men were to fight their way to the Yalu River which serves as the border between China and North Korea. While the American military moved north, the Chinese had already moved into Korea from the north and was starting to surround the Americans.

"It's known now that the Chinese were fighting us," Gen. Carey said. "Now, to keep from declaring war on the U.S., they called this a voluntary army. But it wasn't."

The Americans had to fight their way north to a region called the Chosin Reservoir. There, high in the Korean mountains, the 20,000 Americans found themselves surrounded.

Carey said the Chinese moved in 10 divisions, more than 250,000 men. "They totally surrounded us. And their objective was to annihilate us."

Jack Nolan, a retired Marine who fought in this battle, said, "We fought all our way in, and we had to fight our way out."

In one night, 30,000 Chinese came at a small regiment of Marines totaling around 1,500 men. Carey said he lost a few hundred men, "but they were heavily whipped. I walked along the lines and counted 3,000 dead (of the enemy) after one night."

But the attackers came in droves. "They just kept coming at us. It was a frontal assault and they came 24 hours a day. They came in blowing bugles. There was no care for casualties."

The Marines held, but it was clear they were outnumbered. The orders came in to withdraw to Hungnam on the eastern shore. But that was 60 miles away. A small airstrip, carved with a bulldozer out of a frozen rice paddy, helped ferry the dead and wounded to friendlies far away, but for the most part, the Marines had to fight their way out of the Chosin Reservoir.

But as they battled the Chinese who were coming from every direction, Carey said the Marines were battling Mother Nature as well. "At night, it would get down to 30 degrees below zero. It just kept snowing."

It took a week, and more than two-thirds of the Americans were killed or injured on the trek back to Hungnam ... most of the casualties suffered frostbite. The dead were stacked on trucks. The frost-bitten were taken in Jeeps or trucks, flew out of the makeshift airstrip, and many more fought through the pain.

"You can't treat frostbite. You just had to get them on trucks and get them out," said Cecil Carpenter, a corpsman in the Marines at Chosin (they call them docs).

Even Gen. Carey suffered frostbite. "Most of these men here today are disabled because of frostbite. There were arms and legs lost, some died. But we brought our men out."

Once the men fought their way back to Hungnam, they were evacuated to South Korea. They reorganized and fought back north to the 38th Parallel. Once that position was stabilized, a peace was reached and a treaty signed that's still in effect today.

But for many, such as The Chosin Few, the scars will never heal. "That's why we meet like this every year. Yeah, we have reruns of what happened and the stories start to stretch, but this is a bond we share that makes us special. When they named it The Chosin Few, they named it right. The hell we went through together, that's what brings us here today."

Gen. Carey said it's difficult to describe why they're such a tight-knit group. But what made this experience stand out to this group of veterans, many who served in World War II and Vietnam, was the elements of the harsh winter and the fact the Marines were outnumbered nearly 12 to 1. "Chosin, it's been compared to the battle at Valley Forge during the Revolutionary War."

About 3,000 men that battled their way out of Chosin still meet today in chapters like the one that met at Lake Texoma recently. "It's good to see their faces," Carpenter said.

Medal with one star, Japanese Occupation Medal, and the Korean Service Medal.

• Buford Arnold Hill •

A private first class, Hill served with the Quartermaster Corps and by early August 1950 was stationed in Pusan, Korea, where he was a foreman over Korean crews who unloaded and stockpiled food supplies to be put aboard trains and sent to the front lines.

"They don't understand me and I don't understand them, but somehow we get along pretty well," Hill said about working with the Koreans.

• Emmett Potter •

Potter was in the Army from Oct. 4, 1950, to Aug. 15, 1952. A private first class, he was a combat medic who drove a 2½-ton supply truck, delivering medical supplies to the front lines.

Emmett's brother, Kenneth, was also in Korea at the same time, serving in Pusan. Emmett took leave and rode the train from Seoul to Pusan to see his brother. He said that everything from Seoul to Pusan was destroyed, except for the train track.

Potter received a variety of honors, including Distinguished Service Medal, Army of Occupation Medal-Japan, Combat Medic Badge, Korea Service Medal with one Bronze Star, and the United Nations Service Medal.

• Billie Mullen Draper •

Draper, nephew of Tom and Argen Draper of Hereford, served as a medical aide in the 547th Medical Clearing Co., going to Korea in September of 1950.

A private first class, Draper was with the U.N. troops that marched northward toward the Yalu River in late November 1950 at the same time the Chinese soldiers were crossing the river into North Korea.

He was with the U.N. forces that were surrounded by Chinese troops at the Chosin Reservoir for approximately three weeks. Draper remarked that supplies began to run out, even shoes and other necessities against the bitter December weather.

The U.N. forces were forced to fight their way in retreat toward Hungnam where they, with Korean refugees and military vehicles, were evacuated by sea on Navy ships and merchant vessels.

Draper was discharged in August 1954 with the Korean Service Medal with three Bronze Service Stars, National Defense Service Medal and the Army of Occupation Medal (Germany).

Cox served as a boatswain's mate seaman in the Navy from June 1, 1950, to April 1954. He served aboard the USS Frank E. Evans, a 2,200-ton short hull destroyer that was fast, light, heavily gunned, equipped to attack and destroy submarines, aircraft and surface ships with equal ease and deadliness.

The Evans was in Korean waters for three tours and Cox was aboard for the second and third tours. During its three tours, the Evans steamed 130,000 miles, stayed at sea for 56 consecutive days off Korea, inaugurated the blockade of Wonsan and Songjin, fired 20,000 rounds of five-inch ammunition and won six of the 10 combat stars awarded for Korean service to be worn on the Korean Service Medal.

Cox received several awards, among them one Silver Star and two Bronze Stars. He reported that they almost qualified for hazardous duty pay for being under fire so much, but actually, he was glad not to qualify.

• Clarence Summers •

Summers, a radarman 3rd class, was in the Pacific Active Reserves after World War II and was called back to active duty in October 1950. He served aboard the USS 914, an LST which transported personnel — sometimes U.N. troops and sometimes prisoners of war. A picture from that time shows men standing, packed together like cattle, on the LST.

After he completed his tour of duty in Korea, he received his final release from the Navy on Aug. 17, 1952.

• Richard Ray "Dick" Oakes •

Oakes was inducted into the Army in November 1950. He served in Company F, 14th Infantry Headquarters Division, reaching the rank of staff sergeant.

In September 1951, he led a platoon into battle. All of the men were killed except Oakes and one other and they were both badly wounded. Oakes was struck by a mortar shell in the right shoulder. He received immediate first aid, then was transferred to Japan and finally to Brooks Army Hospital in San Antonio. He received a permanent 50-percent disability discharge, with retirement benefits, on Oct. 31, 1952.

He received two Purple Hearts, Combat Infantry Badge, and the Korean Service Medal with a Bronze Star.

• Gene Teeters •

Teeters served in the U.S. Army for 27 years, serving in two armed conflicts — Korea and Vietnam — and retired as a first sergeant.

When the Korean War started, he was stationed at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., but because he had served in the Army Medical Corps (1947-1950), he was sent to Korea as a combat medic with the 3rd Reconnaissance Company, 3rd Infantry Division in the Chorwon Valley.

Teeters states that one of the things he remembers most was the "cruel cold, with temperatures 25-35 degrees below zero, even at noon."

• Eugene R. Scott •

Scott served in the Navy from September 1950 to September 1954 in Squadron VR-8 Airplane Squad. He was stationed at Hickham Air Force Base in Honolulu, Hawaii, beginning in January 1953 and when a shortage of aviation photographers developed, Scott was selected to receive a two-week training course.

While never actually stationed in Korea, he flew missions over it. Most of his photographs were of ceremonies, such as changes of command because he was assigned as an orderly to the chief of staff.

Scott also assisted the officers when dignitaries visited. He recalls a visit by President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower, as well as visits by a number of congressmen. He served 19 months at Hickham before his discharge.

• Thomas E. Jones •

Jones was in the Air Force during the Korean era. Between March 1952 and August 1954, the airman first class was stationed at Elmendorf Air Force Base at Anchorage, Alaska, where he worked in maintenance and refueling and some on the flight line.

• Billy G. Shore •

Shore served as a private first class with the Army's 503 Engineer Depot from 1951 to 1953. In August 1951, when Shore's training group was divided, half were sent to Korea and half to Germany. He was sent to Germany, but he kept up with a buddy who went to Korea and knew that he got home safely from his tour of duty.

• Donald Ray Waters •

A boatswain's mate seaman 1st class, Waters served from 1950 to 1954 in the Navy aboard the USS Lanning, which was based in Newport News, Va. Her service included escorting larger ships, like aircraft carriers, out to sea.

Herd rustles Steers

Whitefaces dismantle top ranked Big Spring 28-7 in home opener

By Jeff Blackmon
Hereford Brand Sports Editor

If there was any way to make Hereford High forget about last week's heartbreaker, it was to take care of business against the Big Spring Steers Friday night at home.

The Hereford Whitefaces did just that, beating region 4A foe Big Spring 28-7. The Steers (1-1/0-0) had their hands full all night allowing the Herd to gain 349 total yards in the loss.

Boys Athletic Director and head football coach Craig Yenser said the win gives his team a much needed confidence boost.

"Our confidence was shaken last week," Yenser said. "We felt like we were going to have a good football team, and I just can't say enough about the character of our kids."

Their character came out, because they were not going to let happen again what happened last week," Yenser said.

C o a c h Yenser said Friday's win was a result of the renewed tenacity and hustle of the Whitefaces. He said the team came in Monday determined to turn things around.

"We had a revival meeting on Monday, and we kind of rededicated our lives to our purpose here," Yenser said. "I told the kids we had our first workout of the year Tuesday."

"During that practice I saw the intensity level I had seen all last year, and we had that back," Yenser said.

On the practice field earlier this week, Yenser said the team made no excuses and worked their hardest despite the heat. He also said practicing so hard made the team realize how much fun Friday night football can be.

"When you practice hard during the week, it makes playing the game fun and easy," Yenser said. "I feel like we understand that now, and hopefully we won't let things slip up on us again."

The game also saw the Whitefaces run the ball more than usual. Last week, the Herd had 43 pass attempts, but Hereford only attempted 11 against Big Spring. Yenser said the way Big Spring lined up on defense made the Herd establish the run early on.

"I thought they had a good defensive plan on our perimeter game," Yenser said. "They were giving us the middle, and we were able to have success."

On their first position, Hereford senior quarterback threw an interception to Big Spring senior Bowe Butler, but the play was negated by off setting penalties. The senior QB said the interception shook him a little.

"After the interception I thought it was going to be a long night," Hodges said. "But our offensive line did a good job establishing the run."

The Herd struck first Friday night after an interception by senior free safety Chayse Rives at Big Spring's 39-yard line. The Steers held the Herd and forced a fourth down situation on the Steer's 35. C. Hodges kept the ball on fourth down and ran for 10 yards for a first down. The Steers would force another fourth down situation on the same drive, and the Herd went for it again with Hodges hitting senior receiver Slade Hodges for a 13-yard gain. Junior receiver Cody Marsh then ran the ball in on a reverse for the first score of the game to go up 7-0 with 2:10 left in the first.

Hereford extended their lead in the second quarter to 14-0 on an 81-yard drive behind the strong running of senior tailback Ramiro Zambrano. Zambrano had a total 42 yards during the drive including a one' yard touchdown run with 7:31 remaining.

Big Spring came back though with their only big play of the game scoring on a 70-yard run by senior tailback Jason Woodruff. Woodruff's score cut the Whitefaces lead to 14-7 with 6:09 left in the half.

After a C. Hodges fumble, Big Spring marched down to the Hereford 11 only to be stopped four times and held without a score. The big stop came on fourth down and four with sophomore linebacker Derek Mendoza making the stop to preserve the 14-7 lead.

Hereford's defense owned the second half — shutting down the Steer offense for no points. Hereford scored two more touchdowns in the third quarter to go up 28-7. The first strike was capped with a 17-yard fade to S. Hodges to put the team up 21-7.

"We had to play every play like it was the last," S. Hodges said. "Our heart showed tonight."

But that scoring drive was sparked by a tricky 34-yard half-back pass from senior receiver J.P. Holman to S. Hodges on third down. Holman said he was excited when the play was called.

Stanford remembers last year's 69-17 home loss

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Coach Tyrone Willingham normally is given to methodical, measured analysis of Stanford's successes and failures.

After the Cardinal lost 69-17 to Texas in last season's opener, Willingham was sorely tempted to throw out the tape and simply start over.

"I was just disappointed we didn't properly assert ourselves," Willingham said. "There was a great deal to be learned from that game, but it was also very discouraging. We recovered, but it was a large hole to dig out of."

The loss was the most embarrassing early defeat in a season full of humiliating setbacks for Pac-10 teams. The rematch is set for Saturday night at Stanford Stadium, where the No. 5 Longhorns will look to improve on their highest ranking since 1990.

The Cardinal recovered to win the conference title and play well against Wisconsin in a Rose Bowl loss, but even then, the stigma of suffering Stanford's worst defeat since 1954 stuck with the returning players.

Eric Heitmann remembers looking up at the scoreboard in Austin last season and seeing Stanford down by 52 points — with nearly 10 minutes still to play. It gave the Texas native, a Stanford offensive guard, a feeling he could have done without.

"It was terrible to lose like that in front of people you knew," Heitmann said. "It was a bad, bad loss, but that really made it a little worse."

The Longhorns (1-0) are strong favorites against the Cardinal again, particularly given Stanford's unimpressive defensive performance so far this season. Willingham thinks Texas is better this year.

"The mindset with Texas is a little scary," Willingham said. "It's rare that you see the overall talent that they have. This is a very good,

Anti-gun bias of network news organizations is documented

When was the last time you heard any positive news about gun ownership or the shooting sports on any of the major television networks? Can't remember? Small wonder.

A study by the Media Research Center that tracked the past two years of news reports by major networks revealed anti-gun stories outnumbered pro-gun stories by ten-to-one. Media Research Center analysts found news coverage by ABC, CBS, NBC, and CNN was dramatically tilted in favor of gun control.

MRC's news tracking system on gun control policy monitored ABC's World News Tonight, the CBS Evening News, CNN's The World Today, and NBC Nightly News, plus three morning broadcasts including ABC's Good Morning America, CBS's This Morning, and NBC's Today.

To assess the tilt of stories, analysts counted the number of pro- and anti-gun statements by reporters in each category. News pieces with a disparity of greater than 1.5-to-1 were categorized as either for or against gun control, and stories closer than the ratio were deemed neutral. Among statements recorded as anti-gun rights were: Violent crime occurs because of guns, not criminals; and Gun control prevents crime. Categorized as arguments for gun rights: Gun control would not reduce crime; Criminals, not guns, are the problem; Americans have a constitutional right to keep and bear arms; Right-to-carry concealed carry laws caused a drop in crime. Using the story-angle method demonstrated how reporters' statements can often tilt the angle of an entire story.

Utilizing these criteria, the Media Research Center's analysts found that of 653 gun policy stories, those advocating more gun control outnumbered stories opposing gun control by 357 to 36, a ratio of nearly ten-to-one, while 260 stories were categorized as neutral.

Anti-gun sound bites were twice as frequent as pro-gun messages—412 to 209—while 471 sound bites were neutral. Gun control advocates appeared as guests on morning news shows on 82 occasions, compared to 37 times for gun-rights proponents and 58 times for neutral parties.

When numbers from the recent MRC observations were combined with results of a 1997 study of two years of gun policy stories using the same parameters, MRC analysts found that in 897 gun policy stories from July 1, 1995 to June 30, 1999, the major networks aired 514 anti-gun stories to only 46 pro-gun stories, a ratio of more than 11-to-1 anti-gun to pro-gun stories.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

As gun owners, hunting and shooting sports enthusiasts have long thought...so much for balanced news coverage and equal time.

MRC's findings concerning evening news broadcasts revealed that out of 300 evening news segments, anti-gun stories outnumbered pro-gun stories 164 to 20, about 8-to-1, with 116 neutral segments. So-called "talking heads" were slanted toward gun control by a 2-to-1 ratio, 296 for gun control versus 150 for gun rights, with 319 neutral spokesmen. Not surprisingly, ABC and CNN had the worst anti-gun bias. NBC was rated the closest to even-handed or "fair," although it was still anti-gun by a 5-to-1 ratio with 43 anti-gun pieces versus just eight pro-gun stories, and 36 neutral pieces. The peacock network's "talking head" coverage fostered 130 anti-gun pieces to 72 pro-gun pieces, with 24 neutral voices.

ABC's World News Tonight, with the network's gun control pitch-man Peter Jennings as its mouthpiece, was the most-biased in favor of gun control with 43 anti-gun stories to just three pro-gun segments and 24 neutral reports. The "talking head" ratio had 125 anti-gun stories to just 62 gun-rights stories, and 120 neutral presentations.

The World Today on CNN had 50 anti-gun-leaning stories versus only seven pro-gun and 34 neutral. CNN also had the most disproportionate ratio of "talking heads" with anti-gun leanings with 98 anti-gun, 40 pro-gun, and 79 neutral.

CBS Evening News stories promoted gun control 28 times, favored gun rights just three times, and were termed neutral on 22 occasions. CBS had the closest ratio of talking heads with 59 for gun control, 35 opposed, and 74 neutral.

Morning news shows weren't any better. During the survey period, ABC's Good Morning America ran 92 reports in support of gun control and only one that favored gun owner rights. A total of 51 reports were deemed neutral.

Over at CBS This Morning, 19 stories were slanted in favor of gun control, four were against gun control, and 27 were neutral.

NBC's Today had a whopping 10 segments that were pro-gun rights, but there were also 82 segments that pushed for gun control, and 88 segments were neutral.

The Media Research Center found that morning shows were nearly twice as likely to feature a gun control advocate as a guest than one opposed to more gun control. Collectively, gun control supporters appeared 82 times, compared with 37 gun rights spokesmen. Another 58 guests were essentially neutral in gun policy segments that were aired.

During the survey, 33 guests on ABC's Good Morning America professed beliefs in more legislation limiting gun rights, and only eight opposed such measures. There were 212 "neutral" guests.

Today on NBC booked triple the number of gun-rights guests that ABC did, with 24, but still had 40 gun control advocates, and 24 neutral guests.

This Morning on CBS was the most balanced of the morning show lot, and had the fewest interviews. It had nine guests favoring gun control, five against gun control, and 13 neutral guests.

Given these statistics, it's no wonder that America's law-abiding gun owners feel that their views aren't fairly represented on network newscasts.

Rangers take second from Kansas City

■ Dransfeldt hits game winner for Texas

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Rookie Kelly Dransfeldt hit an RBI single with two outs that capped a two-run rally in the bottom of the 10th inning and the Texas

Rangers, after blowing an eight-run lead, beat the Kansas City Royals 12-11 Friday night.

Rafael Palmeiro hit his 37th homer of the season and 398th of his career as Texas took a 9-1 lead into the sixth inning. The Rangers have never lost such a big lead in team history, and barely avoided doing it this time.

Dransfeldt, who entered as a pinch-runner in the ninth and took over at shortstop, threw out a runner at the plate in the 10th. Still, the Royals took an 11-10 lead on Mark Sweeney's sacrifice fly — Sweeney drove in two runs, giving him a Royals record of 135.

Frank Catalanotto had an infield single with one out in the Texas 10th against Jose Santiago (7-5). Palmeiro doubled and Texas scored the tying run on Gabe Kapler's sacrifice fly.

After Santiago intentionally walked Ricky Ledee, Dransfeldt lined a single to left. Palmeiro scored from second as Carlos Beltran's throw to the plate was high.

John Wetteland (5-5) pitched the final two innings for the victory. Texas tied it at 10 in the ninth. Rusty Greer led off with a pinch-hit double and was replaced by Dransfeldt, who slid into third ahead of shortstop Luis Ordaz's throw on Lamb's grounder. Dransfeldt scored the tying run when pinch-hitter Ruben Sierra grounded into a double play.

Texas has been focused on the quarterback derby between Major Applewhite and Chris Simms. Applewhite decisively won Round 1 last Saturday by passing for 315 yards and four touchdowns in the Longhorns' 52-10 victory over Louisiana-Lafayette.

But coach Mack Brown said Texas will continue to rotate Simms and Applewhite for the near future.

"We're going to have two starting quarterbacks because we feel they're both very good and they can both play," Brown said. "The guy that starts isn't an issue, because we know the other player is only one step from stepping in."

Brown has a tougher task this week. He must convince Texas that the Cardinals are a better team than the one that folded against the 'Horns last year and who was upset 40-27 by San Jose State last week."

To that end, he praised Stanford quarterback Randy Fasani, whose gaudy offensive numbers (373 yards passing and four TDs) against San Jose State belied an inconsistent performance that included a drive-killing interception in the fourth quarter.

"I'm scared to death coming out there because of their passing attack," Brown said. "They've got quality receivers, and Fasani has made a really great transition to become their starter."

Brown said Texas had three distinct advantages against Stanford last season: the Austin heat, the game's early start time and the fact that the Longhorns already had played a game the week before. None will be a factor this year.

"We didn't have any excuses last year, and we don't have any this year," Willingham said. "We just need to be better."

to let me throw it," Holman said. "I told Cody (Hodges) he better watch out."

Holman also recovered from his tough kicking performance in the Herd's loss to Tascosa with four perfect extra point kicks.

"The coaches worked with me this week and gave me a few pointers," Holman said. "Last week I was little nervous."

The last Hereford touchdown came on a play action pass to Zambrano who rumbled 55 yards to the endzone to cap off a 96-yard scoring drive.

Texas rallies to beat Royals, 12-11

Rookie Dransfeldt gets key hit in Ranger win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Rookie Kelly Dransfeldt hit an RBI single with two outs that capped a two-run rally in the bottom of the 10th inning and the Texas Rangers, after blowing an eight-run lead, beat the Kansas City Royals 12-11 Friday night.

Rafael Palmeiro hit his 37th homer of the season and 398th of his career as Texas took a 9-1 lead into the sixth inning. The Rangers have never lost such a big lead in team history, and barely avoided doing it this time.

Dransfeldt, who entered as a pinch-runner in the ninth and took over at shortstop, threw out a runner at the plate in the 10th. Still, the Royals took an 11-10 lead on Mark Sweeney's sacrifice fly — Sweeney drove in two runs, giving him a Royals record of 135.

Frank Catalanotto had an infield single with one out in the Texas 10th against Jose Santiago (7-5). Palmeiro doubled and Texas scored the tying run on Gabe Kapler's sacrifice fly.

After Santiago intentionally walked Ricky Ledee, Dransfeldt lined a single to left. Palmeiro scored from second as Carlos Beltran's throw to the plate was high.

John Wetteland (5-5) pitched the final two innings for the victory.

Texas tied it at 10 in the ninth. Rusty Greer led off with a pinch-hit double and was replaced by Dransfeldt, who slid into third ahead of shortstop Luis Ordaz's throw on Lamb's grounder.

Dransfeldt scored the tying run when pinch-hitter Ruben Sierra grounded into a double play.

The Royals went ahead in the 10th after Gregg Zaun led off with a single and moved up when third baseman Mike Lamb threw away Carlos Febles's sacrifice bunt.

Johnny Damon, whose grand slam keyed a seven-run sixth inning for the Royals, hit a grounder to Dransfeldt, who threw out Zaun at the plate. Mark Quinn's sacrifice fly put Kansas City ahead.

Ledee hit a three-run homer in the first as Texas took a 5-0 lead. Palmeiro homered in the third, moving him into a tie with Dale Murphy for 33rd all-time, one behind Al Kaline.

Down 9-1, the Royals rallied within a run in the sixth. Damon's slam came on the first pitch from reliever Jeff Zimmerman.

Damon went 3-for-4 to become the first Royals player to reach 200 hits since Kevin Seitzer in 1987.

The Royals scored twice in the eighth for a 10-9 lead. Pinch-hitter Dee Brown hit an RBI single and Sweeney had a sacrifice fly.

City sets budget hearing

By Donald M. Cooper
Hereford Brand Managing Editor

Hereford city commissioners will conduct a public hearing on the proposed Fiscal 2001 budget at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall.

Following the public hearing, the commissioners are expected to adopt the budget and tax rate.

City Manager Chester Nolen has proposed a Fiscal 2001 budget calling for $4.92 million in revenue and $4.9 million in expenditures. The budget projects a 2.1 percent increase in revenue and a 6.5 percent gain in spending.

The budget also doesn't provide for cost-of-living raises; however, Nolen stated it does contain individual pay raises that he described as "warranted, based on market prices and agreements when the individual was hired."

He also noted the city will incur a significant debt during FY 2001 for the construction of a wastewater treatment plant, which he estimates will cost between $3 million and $4 million. The debt service should range from $165,000 to $220,000 annual.

The Water & Sewer Fund revenues are projected at $2.7 million, up $11,500 (0.4 percent) from the current budget, while expenditures are estimated to be $2.4 million, up $75,150 (3.2 percent) from this year.

As a prelude to the formal adoption of the tax rate, the city conducted a public hearing this week to receive residents' comments on the proposed tax rate of 41 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

At the hearing, Hereford Mayor Bob Josserand said the 41-cent rate has been in effect for several years. Although the city is proposing to keep the tax rate at 41 cents, he acknowledged some Hereford residents will get a higher tax bill because their property's value increased following the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District's reassessment of property within the county.

Josserand also acknowledged the city had increased water/sewer fees by 30 percent — in three annual installments of 10 percent — to provide funds to pay for a wastewater treatment plant.

Josserand also noted the effective tax rate for the year ending Sept. 30 is 39.52 cents. The effective tax rate is the rate required to generate the same amount of revenue in the next budget year as it did in the current fiscal year.

The 41-cent rate this year generated $1,119,456 in property tax revenue. The 39.52-cent rate, which would represent a decrease of 1.48 cents, would generate $1,117,358.

The city's tax base for the year 2000 was put at $282,710,576, up $9,672,527 from 1999.

By holding the 41-cent rate, Josserand said the city should realize an additional $40,000, which he said will be used in the wastewater treatment plant project.

PANTEX

Government's review finds safety documents inadequate

AMARILLO (AP) — A government review team says in a report released this week that many of the Pantex Plant's safety documents do not meet Energy Department standards or adequately analyze some nuclear weapons hazards.

The review, conducted by the Department of Energy's Office of Oversight, was completed this month. The Amarillo Globe-News obtained the report.

The report does note some improvements in Pantex's safety documentation, but faults DOE and Pantex contractor Mason & Hanger Corp. for not revising safety documents sooner.

Nuclear weapons are assembled and disassembled at the Amarillo Plant.

The report also states that Pantex has not fully analyzed the effects of radioactive leaks, as might occur in a high-explosive detonation accident.

Review team members also studied Pantex's hazard analyses and controls to ensure nuclear weapons operations and plant operations are safe, the paper reported.

"Although the rate of progress has improved in the past two years, significant work remains before the Pantex Plant will have a set of safety analyses that meets current DOE requirements," the report said.

Energy Secretary Bill Richardson ordered a three-month investigation of the plant's safety processes in March. He sent experts to review all safety documentation.

Area manager for the DOE in Amarillo, John Bernier, says Pantex has strengthened its safety processes, but those improvements didn't come fast enough.

A close presidential race, maybe

Even the closest of presidential elections haven't always looked that way at this point on the campaign calendar. And some that looked close, didn't turn out that way. In 1980, when Ronald Reagan won easily, the race was even in the polls two months out.

So the conventional political wisdom that foresees a close contest between Al Gore and George W. Bush — with the vice president holding an advantage at this point — is based on campaign barometers that seldom stay level.

It hasn't been a year since Gore was pronouncing himself the underdog, even for the Democratic nomination, and reorganizing his campaign after a shaken beginning. And it hasn't been two months since Bush led the public opinion polls by double-digit margins, now evaporated to the point that the Texas governor says he's the underdog. He claims he always was, but his early advantage in those polls propelled his campaign to the Republican nomination. In the close-count elections of 1976 and 1968, the eventual winners had comfortable leads in the polls going into October, saw them dwindle and just made it in November.

At this point in 1980, Reagan and President Carter were even in the polls, and close to it until the election, a 10-point Republican landslide.

"That was a very unstable time," said Andrew Kohut. "It was a pollster's nightmare. Take it from a pollster who was there."

Kohut, now director of the Pew Research Center, doesn't see the same instability in this campaign. He sees a Gore trend.

So does Thomas Mann, an analyst at the Brookings Institution. "The fundamentals of this election favor the Democrats," he said. "If close means not a landslide then sure, it's probably going to be close." But Mann said he expects to see Gore gain and hold a modest lead.

In the closest elections, Mann said, offsetting voter concerns have denied either candidate the clear advantage. This time, he said, with the economy strong and to Gore's advantage, the negative offset could have been the echo of President Clinton's sex scandal and impeachment, but it has not become a factor.

"Increasingly, this is looking more like 1988 than 1960," Mann said. In 1988, Bush's father, then vice president, eclipsed an early Democratic lead and won by 7 points over Michael Dukakis. In 1960, Vice President Richard M. Nixon, burdened by an economic slump, lost to John F. Kennedy by 0.2 percentage point. The polls had rated that one close all fall, with Nixon just ahead before their campaign debates, Kennedy edging ahead afterward.

When Nixon won in 1968, it was almost as close, 0.7 percentage point over Hubert H. Humphrey, after the polls had rated him comfortably ahead until mid-October. The Vietnam War was the dominant issue, and Humphrey almost overcame it after President Johnson declared a bombing halt.

In 1976, Democrat Carter opened with a runaway lead over President Ford, the appointed vice president who succeeded Nixon and pardoned him for Watergate. The economy was OK, and Ford whittled away the Carter advantage. He was gaining until he blundered in debate. Carter won by 2 percentage points.

The 1980 Carter-Reagan campaign, by contrast, was supposed to be close, even in mid-September polling, although the economy was troubled and the Democratic president was burdened by the Iran hostage crisis he couldn't end.

Here's a windmill - After much searching on the part of (from right) Carolyn Waters and Jane Gulley, a windmill to be erected in the new Career and Technology Commons Area was located on the Hagar farm near Dawn. Others in the group who gathered prior to the windmill being taken down were (from left) former HISD employee Ernie Eckerd and owner of the windmill Ruth Hagar and her son, Richard. Below is the windmill on the wooden tower as displayed in the Commons Area.

Windmill: Part of history

Open House for new HHS buildings offers opportunity for all to see historical display

By Becky Thorn

Hereford Brand Lifestyles Editor

Visitors to the new Hereford High School Career and Technology Building Two who are not familiar with the history of Hereford may wonder why there is a windmill in the Commons Area.

But long-time residents will know that the windmill played an important part in Deaf Smith County and that at one time Hereford was known as the "city of windmills" as windmills were more prominent than trees.

It is most fitting to have such a windmill on display so the high school students of today will be reminded of this part of the history of our city and our county.

An open house and formal dedication of the three new educational buildings at Hereford High School at 4 p.m. Monday will give area residents an opportunity to see the windmill and also the display of cattle brands from local ranches.

The buildings to be dedicated include Career and Technology Buildings One and Two at 701 and 703 Grand and the Physical Education Building at 203 Avenue F.

A cornerstone leveling will be conducted by the Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Texas at 4 p.m. and will be followed by special presentations which begin at 6 p.m. in the Commons Area of Building Two.

William Stanley and Cathy Whewell of the Texas Workforce Commission will make a presentation on the H.E.R.D. (Hereford Employment Readiness Development) Program which has provided first phase funding to train local citizens to become valuable members of the local work community. They will also talk about additional grants which may become available for this program.

The windmill in the Commons Area was donated by the Hagar family, long-time residents of the county, and was originally mounted on a steel tower and stood on the Dick and Ruth Hagar farm near Dawn.

"The windmill was put up in the summer of '47. It was brand new. And it's never been down," Richard Hagar, son of Dick and Ruth, said.

Use of the windmill was discontinued in 1962 or '63, Hagar said, after the well it was on went dry. "When the new well was drilled, we put in a submersible pump," he said.

The windmill is displayed in the Career and Technology Building on a wooden tower which had been used by the Hagars on another windmill. It is typical of most towers used in the early part of the 20th century.

It is very appropriate that the windmill came from a family whose history is so closely connected to Hereford schools, not the least of which is the fact that four generations of Hagars have graduated from Hereford High School.

Dick Hagar worked at Aikman School and fired the boiler that helped heat the school when the Hagar children attended.

Richard Hagar was a senior in the Hereford High School Class of 1955. It was during the Christmas break of his senior year that HHS moved into the building where it is presently located.

"When we got ready to leave for Christmas break, we took our books and furniture and stuff into the current high school building from Stanton," Hagar said.

Betty Hagar, Richard's sister, was in the first eighth grade class to go into Stanton Junior High.

All area residents are invited to attend the open house Monday to view the new educational buildings and historical displays in the Commons Area.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago, you printed something about a condom that played "Dixie" during use. It also played Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," "Happy Birthday To You," and "The Anniversary Waltz."

I meant to write you then about a similar story I had read, but I couldn't find the article. After all this time, I decided to write anyway and ask if you could find the story about a condom that plays music as a warning when the condom breaks. I think I read about it in the Redondo Beach, Calif., Daily Breeze. — Colorado Springs, Colo., Reader

Dear Colorado: Thanks to Sam in the library at the Daily Breeze, we have the story. It appeared in the Detroit News in 1994. Italian physics student Lino Missio patented a condom that plays Beethoven if it breaks during use. The condom is coated with a substance that charges electrical conductivity upon rupture, setting off a microchip that produces sound. Missio said he might include a verbal warning to the participants to stop what they're doing immediately.

What are the odds that a couple will "stop what they are doing immediately" to listen to a recorded message? I wish those geniuses who are developing tunes for condoms would divert their efforts toward curing some of the devastating diseases that plague mankind. The folks who use condoms will not miss the music.

Dear Ann Landers: This is about the second wife in California who wanted to outshine Wife No. 1 at the wedding of her husband's daughter. What an ego! That day belongs to the bride and groom. No one should try to hog the spotlight.

My son was married last summer, and I can't thank my ex-husband's wife enough for wearing a simple, understated gown and putting herself in the background. She looked lovely and behaved like a lady. Many people commented to my son that they never would have known his parents were divorced because of the respectful and cordial manner in which we treated each other.

After 18 years of chilliness, my ex-husband, his wife and I are friends. The children are thrilled to know they can mention our names to one another, and that we can get together socially. I say, let the wedding day be a new beginning for those who have had differences. Everyone will sleep better and live happier, healthier lives. — J. in Portland, Ore.

Dear Portland: Your letter is an example for ex-wives worldwide. The complimentary tone when speaking of your husband's wife spoke well for you, as well as for her. Here's another voice:

Dear Ann: I strongly disagree with your hard-boiled, insensitive response to "Second Choice in California." She is the woman who wanted to wear a drop-dead knockout gown to her stepdaughter's wedding. You told her to wear whatever she liked and to "have a wonderful time."

Sorry, Ann, but you were wrong. Her stepdaughter's wedding is not the appropriate time for this showoff to outshine the bride's mother. This stepmother had nothing to do with the girl's upbringing. She should take a gracious and retiring role, not emphasize her "great figure" and look for admiring glances.

The father was obviously trying to be tactful by asking her to dress down a bit. He sounds like a kind and sensitive man who wanted to be supportive of his ex-wife on a stressful day. Any woman who seeks to outshine either the bride or her mother has no class, and you should have told her so. — Dowdy Mother of a Groom in Washington State

Dear Mother: I bow to your superior wisdom. You qualify for membership in that much-publicized "First Wives Club."

That first kiss, that first embrace... Remember all those things that brought you and your loved one together? Ann Landers' new booklet, "Hos We Met," is now available. This collection of sentimental love stories will make a terrific gift for that special someone. MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Want Your Advertising to Work? Keep it Simple.

Many small business owners complain that they are spending more on advertising and getting less in return. Scary thought, but a common problem in the minds of most entrepreneurs. Many of these owners go on to tell me that they don't use this form of advertising or that one because they are too expensive. The bottom line is often, "we tried that once and it didn't work." In this column, I want to give you some tips for getting more bang for your print ads. These will apply to newspapers, yellow pages, direct mail, flyers, etc. Once you understand these basics, you can avoid many costly advertising pitfalls.

Investing in your future

Focus on results. Advertising is an investment in future business. For your investment to produce a return, you must understand what you're investing in. You want results. You must decide what results you want. If you don't know specifically what you want from your advertising, you're not likely to get anything good.

Is it your desire to increase awareness? Do you want more customers to call? Are you trying to sell a particular product or service? Know what you want and focus your ads on getting those results.

Know your purpose. The purpose of advertising is to get the "right message" to the "right person" at the "right time." These three "rights" are critical to your success.

The right message will focus on what the customer needs to know and understand in order to take the action you desire. The message must give the customer reasons -- advantages and benefits -- for doing business with you.

The right person is your targeted customer. Who are you trying to reach? Don't use the sports pages to sell clothing to upscale female customers. Don't use the fashion section to sell auto parts. Know who you want to reach and target them.

The right time is simply when the customer is most likely to buy. When are your target customers paid? When will they have a need? Is there a "season" for what you're selling? Some items may be in season all the time. You buy milk and bread when you need them.

Send a clear message. Most ads try to cover too much ground. In smaller ads, one item or concept is best. Too many items will create clutter and make it easy for readers to run by your offer. Give one main message and focus on it in your headline.

Know what sells. Here's a rule of thumb. Features inform, benefits sell. At times you may choose to just give your customers useful information. However, if your goal is to sell you must tell the customer how they will benefit from what you're selling.

Make a strong offer. Keep it clear and concise. Have an uninterested party read your ad. Do they understand what the offer is? Can they see the benefit they get in the offer? Would your offer interest them enough to take action?

Be specific. Provide details of the benefits they get from you. Bullets are good and don't have to be complete sentences. Here are some do's and don'ts.

Don't say: Fast service. Do say: Same day service or one hour delivery, etc.

Don't say: We fix ACME, AJAX, XYZ and others. Do say: We repair all makes.

Don't say: Huge savings. Do say: Save 25 percent or more.

Don't say: Good for a limited time only. Do say: Offer expires October 1, 2000.

Keep a family look. Repetition brings recognition. No matter what print media you use, make all your work look similar. Use your logo, a distinctive type style and common graphics. Use them often.

SOME BOOKS WORTH READING

Between the Covers

Martha Russell
Deaf Smith County Library

Recently I was privileged to attend "Voices in the Wind," a storytelling workshop at WTAMU. What I heard there reinforced the knowledge that there is a rich heritage in family stories. I find myself wishing I had listened more closely to parents' and grandparents' stories.

Some of my fondest memories are of my father and his nine siblings, gathered for some holiday or landmark family event, sitting around after the meal telling the stories of their childhood. We laughed until the tears came and breath was gone.

One of the most memorable for me was the one about my Uncle Corky when Grandma made him help her do some yard work. The quirky Benson sense of humor surfaced as my uncle, to Grandma's dismay, proclaimed loudly enough for all the neighbors to hear, "If you're gonna leave me, leave me. But don't leave me chained to this tree! Go ahead and beat me, but please don't beat my dog!" This went on for some time, and I'm not sure whether he got out of working or not, but, knowing my grandmother, I doubt it.

You may not think anyone would want to hear your stories. But, almost any story, done with some skill and enthusiasm can be not only interesting and entertaining, but also enlightening and edifying. There is a craft to it as well as an art, but actually, we all tell stories everyday. You know how it is when the kids first get home from school. They have a world of stories to tell that are priceless treasures.

Don't think you have stories to tell? There are universal themes of human experience. Pick a subject (wind, fire, water, scars, for example) and dig in the archives of your memory. A story will surface. It may be funny or tragic, maybe just mellow. But it's probably a story that can be told, part of the mosaic of you family history, valuable and worthy of handing down.

You don't have to tell personal stories. History, legends, folk tales, jokes, and myths are all good sources for storytellers. Many tellers write their own stories. One of the beauties of storytelling is that you can tell it any way you want. It doesn't have to be true and it doesn't have to be just like you heard someone else tell it. Storytellers take great liberties with their stories, tailoring them to the audience, the times, personal preference, and whim. Above all, you must like the story you tell. You can't tell it effectively, "selling" it to your audience, if you are not "sold" on the story yourself.

Of course, libraries are full of stories. Some are meant to be read. Others, though written, are meant to be told. All are meant to be shared and savored.

John Erickson is noted as a gifted storyteller, as any Hank The Cowdog fan will attest. The Hank books are based largely on John's experience as a hand on the LZ Ranch near Perryton, Texas. In his book, LZ Cowboy: A Cowboy's Journal 1979-1981, you will recognize names, locations, and incidents used for that series: Tuerto, Drover, Casey the Bronc, the machine shed, the calf shed, the sick pen, and the gas tanks. High Loper, Sally May, and Slim were originally patterned after Tom and Janet Ellzey, LZ Ranch owners, and Erickson himself.

While Erickson never intended to publish his journal entries in that format, he decided that they should be published just as they had been written as "a log of a cowboy," if a reader wants to find out how it felt to be a cowboy in the Texas Panhandle in the years 1979-1981, here it is: the snow, the mud, the cattle drives, the pranks, the accidents, the equipment, the horses, the frustrations, the triumphs.

But most of all, it's the story of two men, Tom Ellzey and Erickson, who took pride in their horsemanship, their roping, and the hard work they did day after day.

Duty: A Father, His Son, and the Man Who Won the War by Bob Greene is another personal story. When Bob Greene went home to central Ohio to be with his dying father, it set off a chain of events that led him to knowing his dad in a way he never had before, thanks to a quiet man who lived just a few miles away, a man who had changed the history of the world.

Greene's father, a soldier with an infantry division in World War II, often spoke of seeing the man around town. All but anonymous even in his own city, carefully maintaining his privacy, this man, Greene's father would point out to him, had "won the war." He was Paul Tibbets. In 1945 Tibbets piloted a plane, which he named Enola Gay after his mother, to the Japanese city of Hiroshima, where he dropped the atomic bomb.

On the morning after the last meal he ever ate with his father, Greene went to meet Tibbets. What developed was an unlikely friendship that allowed Greene to discover things about his father, and his father's generation of soldiers, that he never fully understood before.

Not a Day Goes By by E. Lynn Harris is the story of the mischievous lives of two very unforgettable characters.

He is a devilish and handsome ex-football player, now a rising sports agent at one of the hottest firms in the country. Irrepressible and dangerously alluring, John "Basil" Henderson has a history with women. Basil is the consummate guy's guy: afraid of commitment and known for a double-edged magnetism that has the ability to thrill and wound.

She is the uncompromising Yancey Harrington Braxton, an up-and-coming Broadway star who oozes charm and bleeds ambition. Young, beautiful, and dangerously crafty, Yancey is prepared to do what ever she must to get what she wants. A femme fatale who has left more than a few brokenhearted men in her wake, Yancey is intrigued by Basil.

A lavish wedding is planned, and the ultimate power couple plans to spend their lives in holy matrimony. But just before the nuptials, fate and a little comeuppance from the past threaten the happy couple's future.

Drought impacts market; light cattle hit yards

Pasture shortage forces culling

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Brown, withered pastures and empty water tanks bode no good for state beef producers.

The drought that has gripped the Southwest has caused feeders and marketers to take a hard look at the future as beef producers.

"Cattle are coming off pasture at least 30 days early," said Jeff Matsler, manager at Great Plains Feeders. "And, then when the yards fill up, the dry conditions worsen the dust, which causes some health problems. It's not a good situation."

Guy Walker of Dawn Cattle Feeders agreed with Matsler saying the lack of any kind of pasture, not just adequate pasture, is forcing many producers to liquidate their herds, just to keep the cattle from starving or dying of thirst.

"Producers from all over are Feedyards across the area are seeing a greater number of lightweight animals as the summer drought dries the pasture and water tanks. Some feedyards are reporting as much as 13 percent over what they had this time last year. Others are reporting near capacity numbers with more on the way.

pushing their animals into the lots 30-45 days earlier than scheduled. We're nearing capacity and still have more animals en route," Walker said. "When there's not any pasture, the animals have to go somewhere and the feedlots are the only place to put them."

Feeders see this situation causing a number of problems for the producers and marketers, ranging from a shortage of replacement animals for beef producers to producing a glut in the beef market.

"This whole cycle is going to put the entire industry through a pretty thorough toilet flushing," Matsler said. "The rebound will be pretty substantial, but we may not see it until the second quarter next year."

"This is a supply-and-demand market," said Brent Gibbs, executive vice president at FirstBank Southwest. "Once the market gets flooded, you're going to see an oversupply of that product. Right now, that may be something we can't help with so many lightweight feeders being taken off pasture so early."

One of the biggest concerns for the feeders is the loss of bargaining power caused by the huge influx of slaughter animals.

"We've never had a real good bargaining position," Walker said. "But all the extra animals make it even more difficult to gain a strong bargaining position."

Liquidating herds also causes problems for future producers, who may not be able to find the necessary replacement stock when they need it.

"Ultimately, the cattle numbers will have to drop, which will push up a strong market.

But with lighter animals already being in the yards, it means fewer animals will be available when conditions improve," Walker said.

Gibbs said that some of the local cattlemen are just waiting for the herds to be culled so they can pick up the lightweight cattle at a better price, and maybe have a pasture until they are ready to go to market.

The lack of pasture has caused many operators to cull herds back to the minimum, but the pasture remains the hope of many of the same operators.

"We've got guys out there ready to put in a wheat crop, but if we don't get some rain pretty quick it may be too late to get a pasture for these younger animals," Walker said. "Without rain, the seed would just lie there. Probably the worst thing that could happen now, would be just enough rain to let the seed germinate, but not enough to let it develop."

"This is all part of a cycle in the cattle business," Matsler said. "You gotta take the good with the bad."

TAES plans summer crop tour

The Deaf Smith County Agriculture Day and Crops Tour is scheduled for Friday, Sept. 22 and will feature programs on grain sorghum, cotton production, irrigation management, weed control, insect control, marketing and risk management. The afternoon tours will feature result demonstration plots and field trials.

Registration and viewing of exhibits will begin at 8 a.m. in the Hereford Community Center Banquet Room. Seed companies, chemical companies and equipment dealers will have displays available to show new products and equipment.

The program begins at 8:30 a.m. and will feature presentations by nine specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and West Texas A&M University.

Dr. Brent Bean, associate professor and TAEX agronomist, will discuss management of summer planted grain crops and small grains including weed control and herbicide selection.

Dr. Carl Patrick, professor and TAEX entomologist will present information covering insect management and control methods for summer and fall grain crops.

Leon New, professor, and TAEX agricultural engineer and irrigation specialist will discuss irrigation water management and use of the PET Network for scheduling irrigation.

Cotton production will be the topic for Dr. Randy Boman, associate professor and TAEX Cotton Specialist. He will discuss the management of late season cotton, and the selection and use of harvest aides.

Johanna Patterson, TAEX IPM Agent, will provide information on managing late season cotton pests and give an update on the boll weevil eradication program.

Dr. Jackie Smith, associate professor and TAEX economist, will review the cotton market outlook and cover cotton marketing strategies.

Grain marketing will be Dr. Steve Amosson's topic. He will also give the market outlook for feed grains and wheat.

Dr. Gretta Schuster, assistant professor of IPM at West Texas A&M University will update producers on the use of integrated pest management.

Following lunch, the first tour stop will be at 1:45 at the Joe and Chris Grotegut farm, 2.5 miles north of Highway 60 on County Road DD. Turn west of Gayland Ward Seed. At this location, producers will have the opportunity to see grain sorghum variety trials.

The second stop, a modified center pivot irrigation system used in conservation tillage, will be at 2:30 p.m. on the Steve Hoffman farm, located 2 miles west of Highway 385 on County Road 10.

The final stop on the tour will be at 3:10 p.m. on Charles Schlabs farm, 1/4 mile south of the intersection of Highway 385 and FM 1055 and 1/4 mile west on turn row. Here, producers will see a replicated cotton variety demonstration, demonstrations of irrigation monitoring using moisture blocks and insect monitoring using pheromone traps. Discussion of harvesting and spray equipment will also be held.

The program and luncheon are free to all interested producers and agribusinesses.

States push contract protection

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Sixteen states plan to push for expanded protection for farmers who produce livestock or grain under contract with large companies.

Iowa Attorney Tom Miller said Wednesday the states will try to reduce the disparity in bargaining power between farmers and the contractors.

Miller said the measures would "give farmers involved in contracting some basic fundamental rights so we avoid the situation that developed in poultry where farmers in some parts of the country live almost as serfs on the land."

He said there's concern that consolidation in agriculture may hurt the prices paid to farmers for their crops and livestock.

"If this kind of legislation is enacted in a number of states, it gives broader protection to the farmers, but it also eliminates competitive disadvantages that states might have," Miller said.

The legislation would:

—Require contracts to be in plain language and disclose risks.

—Give contract producers a three-day right to review their contracts.

—Prohibit confidentiality in the contracts.

—Offer farmers a first-priority lien for payments due under contract if a company goes out of business.

—Protect producers from having their contracts terminated as a form of retribution if they have already made a sizable capital investment.

—Make it an unfair practice for processors to retaliate against producers who join producer organizations.

Industry analysts say many small producers have fewer options and are forced to go under contract. As a result, they lose bargaining power.

"Market options for grain and livestock operations are slim," said Lisa Hardaway of the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill, Neb.

Some of the proposals have already passed in Iowa. Gov. Tom Vilsack signed legislation preventing contracts from remaining secret between farmers and meatpackers last year.

Iowa is the nation's leading hog-producing state, accounting for about 25 percent of hogs grown in the country.

Miller said states need to tighten laws for pork and grain after watching the poultry industry become increasingly controlled by processors.

"In some parts of our country, the contracts with those that raise poultry are so one-sided that the economic benefits are really drained almost completely from the farmer and put in the hands of the processor," Miller said.

If the legislation is approved, farmers could file civil action against contractors for violating the protective clauses.

The legislation will be introduced in the following states: Colorado, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Southern Rolling Plains eradicates weevils

ABILENE - A major milestone in the boll weevil eradication effort will be reached Sept. 20 when Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs declares the Southern Rolling Plains Eradication Zone to be functionally eradicated.

The SRP is the first zone in Texas to attain this status, which indicates there is no evidence of reproducing weevil populations within the zone.

The declaration will be part of a celebration held at the Saint Ambrose Parish Hall in Wall at 11 a.m. A barbecue lunch, provided by Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo; Sen. Robert Duncan, R-Lubbock; Sen. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio and the Southern Rolling Plains Cotton Producers Association will follow the declaration.

"The growers in the Southern Rolling Plains put an incredible amount of effort and dedication into achieving eradication in their area and are to be congratulated on having reached their goal," said Lindy Patton, executive director of the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation.

"This would not have been possible without the leadership of the zone's steering committee, the commitment of the growers, a tremendous group of dedicated employees, and of course the support of our friends in Austin and Washington."

Cotton producers in the SRP took a leap of faith back in 1994 by being the first in the state to initiate an eradication program. While the program was proven in other states, there were still doubts whether eradication could be achieved in Texas.

Despite a brief shutdown in 1997 because of legal challenges, growers overcame the setback, and in 1998 weevil numbers had been reduced by more than 99.9 percent.

The next year the area was closely monitored to confirm that it had indeed managed to eliminate the No. 1 cotton pest.

Monitoring continues in the area, and through the middle of September, foundation traps had only caught 22 weevils, a far cry from the more than 3 million weevils caught during the program's first full year in eradication.

In the absence of weevil damage, cotton acreage has increased and pesticide use has been dramatically decreased. At a meeting with growers in Plainview, SRP grower Rodney Rippe said his fields had not been sprayed for insects, either by the foundation or by him, a single time during this growing season.

The SRP encompasses Coke, Runnels, Coleman, Iron, Tom Green, Concho, McCullough, Schleicher and Mason counties, and a part Taylor County.

Government reports on drought damage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dry, hot weather in August has damaged crops in parts of the Midwest and South, dampening this fall's projected harvest but providing a small boost in the prices of some major commodities, the government said Tuesday.

The heat and drought "severely stressed pastures and immature summer crops, including cotton, soybeans and sorghum," the department said in its monthly report on crop conditions. The department lowered its forecast of the soybean crop to 2.9 billion bushels, 3 percent below the forecast a month ago.

That would still be a record for soybean production, but it was enough of a drop for USDA to project a significant increase in the prices that farmers are paid for the crop. The department said it expected soybean prices to average about $4.75 a bushel this year, up 40 cents from its August forecast, and 10 cents higher than last year's average.

USDA lowered its forecast of this year's cotton harvest by 4 percent to 18.3 million bales Tuesday. USDA is barred by law from forecasting prices for cotton.

USDA didn't make a significant change in its projection of the corn harvest, which is expected to be a record 10.4 billion bushels.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same items/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

There's a place for EVERYTHING in the Classifieds.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information. Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer. Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live. Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise. It's an integral part of our lives.

Balmorhea State Park provides scuba lovers oasis

By David King

San Antonio Express-News

TOYAHVALE, Texas — Amid the creosote bush and rocks and prickly pear, at the foot of the boulder-strewn Barrilla Mountains, it is a disconcerting sight.

If there were any obstacles along Texas Highway 17 - the main street, and in fact the only street — in Toyahvale, it might be a traffic hazard.

In a land where the land looks perpetually thirsty, finding it might be as big a shock as coming across a Starbucks or a million-gallon-an-hour spring.

Painted on the side of a refurbished 1930s-era gas station — one of a half-dozen buildings in the seven-resident West Texas town — is the universal beacon for scuba divers, the red-and-white divers flag.

"People are always surprised when they see that flag," said Neta Rhyne, who with her husband, Darrel, operates the Toyahvale Desert Oasis, the dive shop inside the building.

"I can count on people coming in and asking 'What's this about?' pretty regularly."

That question can be answered pretty quickly: Check next door.

Dotted with cottonwoods and oaks, surprisingly green for an arid part of the state, is Balmorhea State Park.

The park's reason for existence is the San Solomon Springs, which bubble through the bottom of an L-shaped, manmade swimming pool at the rate of 26 million gallons a day. The pool, built by Civilian Conservation Corps Company No. 1856 during the Depression, is anywhere from three to 30 feet deep.

Its waters are a constant 75 degrees year-round, as clear as a Caribbean sea. The conditions make it an ideal picnic spot for folks from miles around, and a perfect location for scuba diving.

"It's just gorgeous," said Suzi Vogel-Wilkins, a San Antonio diving instructor.

PBS' Force More Powerful charts nonviolent activism

Striker's in Poland demonstrate peacefully at the Gdansk shipyard in archival footage used in PBS' new two-part special A Force More Powerful: A Century of Nonviolent Conflict. Part 1 airs Monday on PBS' with Part 2 scheduled for the following Monday on most stations (check local listings).

By John Crook

©TVData Features Syndicate

A critically acclaimed documentary project that chronicles a century of nonviolent social change comes to television as A Force More Powerful: A Century of Nonviolent Conflict, airing Monday, Sept. 18, on PBS (check local listings).

The two-part, three-hour presentation, which concludes the following Monday on most PBS stations, is an expanded version of a film that received rapturous reviews when it was released theatrically last year. Ben Kingsley, who won an Academy Award portraying "passive activist" Mohandas K. Gandhi, serves as narrator.

The PBS telecast follows screenings at a number of recent high-profile events, including a Los Angeles preview in August that coincided with the Democratic National Convention and a Washington premiere just last week co-hosted by the embassies of India, Poland and South Africa.

A Force More Powerful includes coverage of nonviolent movements in those countries, as well as Denmark and Chile, but American audiences are likely to be more captivated by the very first segment, which documents the movement to desegregate downtown Nashville, Tenn., in 1960.

To oversee the desegregation project, the Rev. Martin Luther King brought in the Rev. James Lawson, who took the doctrines of Gandhi and used them to train the young students, both black and white, who volunteered to assist in the effort.

The PBS presentation includes both modern-day recollections of that experience as well as fascinating archival footage, in which the students undergo simulations of the kind of taunting they should anticipate. Those lessons, however, are only a pale facsimile of the violent and thuggish confrontations that erupt once some of the white citizens realize the student sit-ins at city lunch counters aren't merely a passing fad.

Additional perspective is added by legendary journalist John Seigenthaler, who candidly admits that his paper, the Tennessean, was initially unsure about how to cover the emerging story (which broke on page 10).

"Part of the underlying force of nonviolent resistance is that people who undertake it believe wholeheartedly in what they're doing, because they deeply feel the justice of their cause," says editor and principal content adviser Peter Ackerman. "In contrast, conventional warfare is often waged for greedy, aggressive purposes and fought by persons who have been conscripted into the fight by their government.

"Nonviolent action always has the potential to prevail against ruthless opponents because it can be conducted on a huge scale and involves every citizen who wants to play a part. Its techniques flow from the disruption of the everyday normalities that the tyrant counts on to maintain power."

SOAP TALK

New daytime fanfest; sending out a soap SOS

By Candace Havens

It will be the battle of the soaps in Orlando, Fla., the weekend of Nov. 11-12. For the past few years, ABC has chosen this time to offer soap fans the opportunity to meet their favorite ABC daytime stars during Super Soap Weekend at the Disney MGM theme park.

Now NBC plans to get in on the action by combining forces with Universal Studios. The NBC Soap Fanfest will be held at Orlando's Island of Adventure the same weekend. Much like the ABC event, NBC's Fanfest will give fans of the peacock network's soaps a chance to get autographs and sit in on Q&A sessions with their favorite stars. They also will have the opportunity to attend a special Days of Our Lives 35th anniversary party.

Some of the stars attending the NBC event are Deidre Hall (Marlena Evans-Black), Drake Hogestyn (John Black), Kristian Alfonso (Hope Brady), Peter Reckell (Bo Brady) and Austin Peck (Austin Reed) from Days, and Galen Gering (Luis Lopez Fitzgerald), McKenzie Westmore (Sheridan Crane), Travis Schuldt (Ethan Crane) and Lindsay Korman (Theresa Lopez Fitzgerald) from Passions.

ABC is finalizing its list of attendees but will have stars from all four of its daytime serials: Port Charles, One Life to Live, All My Children and General Hospital.

For more information about ABC Super Soap Weekend and the NBC Soap Fanfest, check out abc.com or nbc.com.

Dear Candace: I am a huge fan of Passions and especially of Galen Gering and McKenzie Westmore. It is the one show I make sure I never miss.

Last week, I heard that NBC had canceled Passions here. I want to know what we can do to get it back on. Is there somewhere we can write? It is already off of CTV, CJON and others that used to get it. Do I need to contact NBC directly? Please, I'm desperate. -A Fan in Tellewa, British Columbia.

Dear Reader: NBC has not canceled Passions; it is doing very well in the United States. In fact, it has been renewed for another year.

You would need to contact the stations in Canada to find out why they let the show go.
