WHOM DO YOU TURN TO?

■ Over three decades, Vaughn's built most of the area feedyards

When the organizers of the Spicer Gripp roping competition got ready to build their new rodeo arena, they turned to the man who probably has more experience in building stockpens than anyone in the Panhandle.

The Gripp Memorial Youth Foundation, which puts on the annual competition, chose Bobby Vaughn, owner of Bob's Welding, to do the welding at the arena.

And, he does have the experience. During his 33 years in Hereford, Vaughn probably has built more pens for stockyards than anyone else in the Panhandle, maybe even the country.

"When I came to this country in '66, I went to work for a man named Cecil Parker. We started Easley Feedyards (now Barrett & Crofoot West). We built Southwest Feedyards, then we went out and built Cattle Town and United Feedyard, which is Bar-G now," Vaughn said.

"We built Dalhart Feedyards and I've added pens at just about every feedyard in the country," he said.

However, Vaughn's welding services were limited to feedyards.

"Most of the ranches and farmers around here had built their pens out of wood and over the years they starting falling down. So, their kids and grandkids would have me build metal pens. I guess I've rebuilt most of the pens on the ranches around here," he said.

After Parker retired, Vaughn said he bought out a nephew in 1973 and began operating his own welding

Train, truck collide at crossing

A 117-car train, hauling 15,000 tons of coal, collided with the trailer portion of tractor-trailer rig just after noon Friday, blocking crossings for more than two hours.

According to Hereford Police Department reports, the tractor-trailer, driven by Aaron Warden, 21, was crossing the tracks at U.S. Highway 60 and Lawton and high-centered, trapping the trailer.

Police reports indicate the train, which was traveling to the Muleshoe Tolk Station, was traveling at about 55 mph when the engineer first saw the stranded truck, at which time he began slowing down. Estimated speed of the train was 15 mph when the collision occurred. Reports also indicate a second train was in close proximity to the first train.

No one was injured in the wreck but damage estimates for the primary tracks are nearing $16,500. Tracks will need to be repaired for train traffic, but the crossing is open for vehicle crossing.

Investigation into possible charges remain under investigation, but officers were not sure who would be responsible for the damage.

The tractor-trailer rig was registered to Rick McCracken of Hereford.

FBI checks hard drives for tampering

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators are closely examining two computer hard drives containing nuclear secrets that were found at the Los Alamos weapons laboratory, believing they are the ones missing for more than a month. They want to determine whether the information has been compromised.

Authorities hoped to know by late today whether the two drives definitely are the same ones that disappeared and, after an electronic examination, learn whether the contents have been copied or otherwise tampered with, said one official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The two devices, each about the size of a deck of cards, contain highly technical information that would be used by a nuclear emergency response team to locate and dismantle not only U.S., but some Russian and other countries' nuclear devices in case of an accident or terrorist act.

"They were found in a secure area. The area is being treated as a crime scene," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said at a news conference in Phoenix, where he was informed of the discovery Friday while holding a meeting on summer electricity reliability.

Richardson said the two devices were found within the secure "Division X" area of the New Mexico weapons lab in an area that had been searched previously. Another official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they were discovered behind a copying machine.

The highly restricted area includes the vault where the two drives, which belong to the Nuclear Emergency Search Team had been kept. They were last reported seen April 7 and found missing a month later, although senior lab and Energy Department officials were not informed until recently.

While relieved that the drives were found within the secure area of the lab, Richardson said "this is not a victory speech" and that the FBI and the Energy Department "would continue to aggressively pursue" the criminal investigation. Even with the drives recovered those responsible could face criminal charges for security breaches.

"We are going to hold people accountable. There are going to be people disciplined," Richardson said.

At least a half-dozen Los Alamos scientists — among 26 people with free access to the vault where the devices had been kept — have been given polygraph tests and some answers have raised suspicions among investigators, according to government sources. And six Los Alamos managers, including the chief of the emergency response team that used the devices and the head of the lab's nuclear programs already have been put on leave with pay pending completion of the investigations.

The disappearance of the hard drives had evoked anger and frustration both in Congress and at the White House and Energy Department, which didn't learn of the security breach for nearly a month after the devices were found missing from the vault.

The discovery of the two drives did not stem the criticism.

"It raises more questions about security than it answers," said Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., a member of the

HISD trustees to discuss Region SVI contracts

Hereford Independent School District board of trustees will meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Administration building, 601 N. 25 Mile Ave..

The board will discuss Region XVI ESC contracts for the coming year, food service bids, high school roof and track bids; band locker bids; junior high software bids and insurance bids.

Employment recommendations will be presented as needed.

City commissioners to meet

Hereford city commissioners will consider approval of the settlement agreement between Energas and the municipalities served by the gas company.

The commissioners will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

The agreement hammered out in negotiations between representatives of the cities and Energas called for a rate increase of about 2.7 percent. The company had originally asked for an increase of nearly 10 percent.

The commissioners also are expected to approve a request from the Veterans of Foreign Wars for a sublease arrangement with the Gripp Memorial Youth Foundation, which is building a rodeo arena on a 7-acre tract of Veterans Park, and receive a report from the Hereford Economic Development Corp.

Collier to leave board

Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors are expected to accept the resignation of board member Mark Collier when they meet at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center, 801 E. 3rd.

The directors also will assign committee positions, receive financial reports for May from the hospital and the Hereford Health Clinic, and consider credentials for Drs. Rod Nugent, Robert Todd, James Hamous and Ravi George.

Brand adds new staffers

Two new staff members have joined the daily operations at the Hereford Brand.

Jeff Blackmon, who joined the Brand in late February, has been named Hereford Brand Sports Editor.

He will replace Yuri Soto, who accepted a position with Sports.com in Dallas and is now employed as a sportswriter with the Frisco Enterprise in Frisco, Tx.

Blackmon grew up in Fayetteville, Ga. where he graduated from Fayette County High School in 1995. Blackmon then attended Abilene Christian University in Abilene from 1995-1999. He graduated in 1999 with a bachelor of science degree in broadcast journalism.

Before coming to the Brand, Blackmon worked at KRBC-TV in Abilene and KVII-TV in Amarillo.

Blackmon is married to Angela Lindsey Blackmon who is originally from Plainview. Angela is currently in her fourth year of college at Amarillo College in the dental hygiene program.

The Blackmons will begin residing in Hereford in July and currently attend the Central Suzanne Gibbs joined the Hereford Brand staff this month as an advertising sales representative.

She is replacing Loretta Camp who accepted a position in May with American Home Patient in Hereford.

A native of Springlake, Gibbs is married to Brent Gibbs who is employed with FirstBank Southwest as an assistant vice-president.

Gibbs is a graduate of Springlake-Earth High School and earned a bachelor's degree in plant science and agronomy from Texas Tech University.

Formerly, she was a field unit supervisor for the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation.

service. Vaughn learned welding on the job. "I was raised on a ranch out of Elida (New Mexico). My brother was foreman of the Whitelake Ranch and I grew up there," he said. "When you grow up on a ranch, you just learn how to do things, like welding."

After completing high school, Vaughn spent three years in the Army, serving with the 11th Airborne. While he was stationed in Augsburg, Germany, a crisis broke out in Lebanon and President Eisenhower sent in military units to protect U.S. citizens in the country.

"We were down there about five months, but we didn't see any action," Vaughn said.

The service in Lebanon did, however, qualify him for membership in the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and he's served three terms as commander of the Hereford VFW post.

After getting out of the service, Vaughn went to work for a ranch between Artesia and Cloudford in southeastern New Mexico. He worked on the ranch for nine years before he and his wife, Reba (they've been married 48 years) moved to Hereford in the fall of 1966 — and stayed busy building the first of the many feedyards that would dot the landscape.

And, he's been busy ever since. "I keep trying to slow down, but I just stay too busy," he said. "I don't anticipate slowing down anytime soon."

Senate Intelligence Committee. "The hard drives were apparently discovered in an area that had been previously searched, raising the strong possibility that they were returned to the site after being stolen."

Rep. Porter Goss, R-Fla., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee called the missing drives "a major security failure" that had "potentially devastating" consequences if the information were compromised. The CIA has been asked to make an assessment of potential harm.

Meanwhile, six Democratic members of the House, led by Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, ranking member of the Commerce Committee, urged Richardson to cancel the government's contract with the University of California for managing the Los Alamos lab.

They said the university, which has managed Los Alamos as well as the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California for the government for more than 50 years, is "incapable of carrying out its ... obligations" to provide security.

Physician completes his CEUs

Duffy E. McBrayer Jr., a Hereford family physician, has completed continuing medical education requirements to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians (AAFP), the national association of family doctors.

AAFP members are required to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years.

Family Practice was recognized in 1969 as a medical specialty by the American Medical Association and the American Board of Medical Specialties. McBrayer has been an active member since 1969.

Family Practice was the first specialty to require its Diplomats to recertify by taking re-certification exams every six years.

TRAVEL OFFICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last chapter in the seven-year White House travel office controversy is being played out at a bad time for Hillary Rodham Clinton — in the midst of her campaign for the U.S. Senate.

Independent Counsel Robert Ray won't prosecute anyone in the long-running investigation, but he is putting the finishing touches on a report likely to be made public before the November election, officials say.

Some documents and testimony gathered by Ray's office and already on the public record suggest Mrs. Clinton played a central role in instigating firings at the travel office, which makes transportation arrangements for the White House press corps. She denies being involved.

The report could be sent to a three-member federal appeals court panel as early as next week and publicly released three months from now after lawyers for the first lady and others named in the document have had an opportunity to respond, say legal sources familiar with the investigation, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Among the questions that could be answered in Ray's report is whether then-deputy White House counsel Vincent Foster and other presidential aides tried to protect the first lady from criticism by saying she had little to do with the purge.

Ray's predecessor, Kenneth Starr, zeroed in on the travel office in January 1996 when a memo by presidential aide David Watkins surfaced stating that Mrs. Clinton had been behind the firings.

A year and a half earlier, Mrs. Clinton had denied ordering the dismissals in written answers a White House lawyer submitted on her behalf to the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

"We ... knew that there would be hell to pay if ... we failed to take swift and decisive action in conformity with the first lady's wishes," Watkins wrote in his unaddressed memo. He added that he had been

"as protective and vague as possible" in his own answers to investigators.

"Once this made it onto the first lady's agenda, Vince Foster became involved, and he" and Hollywood producer Harry "Thomason regularly informed me of her ... insistence that the situation be resolved immediately by replacing the travel office staff," Watkins wrote.

The first lady continued to insist she didn't direct the firings. "I had no decision-making role with regard to the removal," Mrs. Clinton said in written answers to Congress in 1996.

Ray's decision marks the second since he took over for the oft-criticized Starr that he has closed down an inquiry without any prosecutions in the long-running probe of the Clintons.

Previously, Ray announced there would be no prosecutions regarding the White House's gathering of FBI background files on former Republican administration employees.

The White House had no immediate comment.

Protesters planning to be at Democrats' convention

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

News digest

LOS ANGELES — The protesters who swarmed recent world trade and banking summits in Seattle and Washington now are targeting the Democratic National Convention.

Some demonstration planners, hoping to rally 30,000 protesters, are promising a carnival-like convergence of activists for the Aug. 14-17 convention.

"There will be people with giant puppets, there'll be street theater, folks in funny costumes and carrying giant banners," said organizer Shawn McDougal.

But there could be more disruptive actions as well. For example, groups such as the Berkeley-based Ruckus Society plan July training camps to teach elaborate protest tactics including creating virtually impenetrable human blockades by having protesters link arms through plastic pipes.

Los Angeles police Lt. Horace Frank said officers have met with some activist groups to discuss ways to keep the protests peaceful. The department expects some, however, to seek attention by breaking windows or provoking confrontations.

"If people decide to break the law, we will have to take appropriate action," Frank said.

Some police officials will travel to Philadelphia to monitor expected protests during the Republican convention two weeks before the Democrats gather in Los Angeles.

North Korea proposes early talk to discuss separated families

SEOUL, South Korea — North Korea proposed Saturday that Red Cross officials from North and South Korea meet this month to discuss the reunion of families who have lived separated for a half century across the world's most heavily armed border.

The proposal was another tangible sign that the isolated communist North may be eager to implement a series of agreements struck by the leaders of the two Koreas during their historic three-day summit, which ended Thursday.

For over a half century, the two Koreas have traded saber-rattling rhetoric across the Demilitarized Zone, guarded by nearly 2 million battle-ready troops. Occasional progress toward rapprochement had often been reversed by armed skirmishes and other tension-raising developments.

In a telegram sent to its South Korean counterpart Saturday, the North Korean Red Cross Society proposed that they meet at the border village of Panmunjom this month to discuss reuniting separated families and repatriating North Korean spies held in the South.

"Red Cross Societies of both sides must actively contribute to improving North-South relations by faithfully implementing the summit agreements absolutely supported at home and abroad," it said.

Relations have warmed since this week's summit, when South Korean President Kim Dae-jung and North Korean leader Kim Jong Il signed agreements aimed at easing tensions, helping the impoverished North rebuild its economy and eventually working toward reunification.

Native Hawaiians call Mauna Kea telescopes unholly intrusion

HONOLULU — For decades, astronomers have flocked to the highest point in Hawaii to search the night skies with some of the most powerful telescopes on the planet.

Now a dispute is erupting at the 14,000-foot summit of the dormant Mauna Kea volcano over the presence of those telescopes. Native Hawaiian activists call them an unwelcome intrusion on sacred Hawaiian land.

University of Hawaii officials hope a master plan approved Friday for future telescope development will resolve that dispute.

At stake, scientists say, is a top-notch window to the universe.

CANYON — "Renovating Yesterday; Building Tomorrow" will be on display through Nov. 16 in the Alexander Gallery at Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

The exhibit features historical blueprints of the museum from the past and proposed renovations for the future, which are scheduled to be complete by May 30, 2001.

The exhibition shows actual historical blueprints of each addition to the museum and documents chronologically each renovation/annexation in the life of the largest history museum in Texas.

A narration is included in the exhibit of the progression of the museum from the original "brick drive" in the early 1940s to the opening of the Harrington Petroleum Wing in the 1980s, with all of the other changes in between. The presentation will chronicle the growth of the museum from the less than $500,000 initial investment to the more than $6.3 million in renovations.

A historic view of the 20th century is the highlight of the exhibit and offers a new perspective to the vital growth and enormous change representative of the Texas Panhandle as illustrated in the development of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

Camp Alphie takes reservations

Special to The Brand

Camp Alphie, an overnight summer camp for children with cancer and cancer survivors, is accepting reservations. The camp will be July 30-Aug. 4 at the Bishop Quarterman Conference Center near Amarillo.

Children ages 7-14 who have cancer or have had cancer are welcome to attend Camp Alphie, and each camper may be accompanied by a sibling. Camp Alphie is free to campers, thanks to individual, business and civic sponsors who underwrite expenses. Sponsoring a camper costs $250.

Established in 1988, Camp Alphie offers all the regular activities of summer camp, including indoor and outdoor sports/recreation, arts and crafts, and swimming. The camp provides special facilities, diets and trained staff to accommodate the needs of cancer patients.

The parents of Camp Alphie residents also receive a much-needed dose of relaxation as they attend a free, concurrent parents' camp. While the children enjoy the outdoors, parents spend a week at an Amarillo hotel being treated to a variety of diversions, such as special dinners and visits to area attractions.

Camp Alphie board president Barbara Miller said there also is a serious purpose.

"When cancer invades a family, the focus immediately is directed to the illness and its treatment. The family unit can come apart under the strain," Miller said. The camp gives everyone in the family a break and helps them redirect attention back to the family unit.

The camp staff are volunteers and nearly all parents' camp activities are donated. Camp counselors are high school graduates and most are in college. They work on a volunteer basis and some also are cancer survivors.

Because of laws governing the confidentiality of cancer patients, Camp Alphie cannot contact eligible campers without their permission. Parents of eligible campers are asked to contact Camp Alphie by writing to P.O. Box 3819, Amarillo 79116-3819. Preregistration is encouraged before June 30.

Camper sponsorships and activity sponsorships also are available. For more information, call Norman Stuppi at 363-8941.

FIRST AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

YOU Said It!

“Out on South Main, you’ve got a mess. They’ve brought in houses and left the original numbers on the houses and just keep on using them.”

DAVID RULAND,

Deaf Smith County clerk explaining the problems the county has had in providing addresses in rural areas.

Utility sues the TNRCC

Ed Sterling

AUSTIN — TXU Electric Co., one of the state’s largest power providers, last week joined the list of industries that have filed lawsuits against the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

The state environmental agency faces similar lawsuits, all filed in Travis County, by Solid Waste Association of North America, Allied Waste Systems Inc., the City of Garland and the City of Grand Prairie.

The lawsuits seek to prevent the TNRCC from enforcing new rules meant to improve air quality. The new rules would bring Texas into compliance with air-quality mandates from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

States are required to meet minimum standards mandated by the EPA under the federal Clean Air Act. States that fail to comply risk federal fines or cuts in funding.

“Although we believe we will prevail in court, defending those lawsuits is going to consume resources which instead should be directed to clean air efforts,” said TNRCC chief Jeff Saitas.

“Lawsuits,” he added, “do nothing to clean up the air.”

The TNRCC also already faces lawsuits by certain airlines, cement kiln operators and engine manufacturers seeking to block portions of an aggressive clean-air plan in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Insurers face scrutiny

The Texas Department of Insurance is surveying insurers selling “industrial life” and other small life insurance policies to determine if any are charging African-Americans higher premiums than others.

New figures on dropouts stats

Most students who withdraw from a school district simply transfer to another school district and don’t drop out, according to a new study by the Texas Education Agency.

For the second year, Texas school districts have reported the reason any student withdraws in grades 7 through 12.

“It is clear that most students who left one school district during the course of a year are re-enrolling in some type of education program,” said Education Commissioner Jim Nelson.

Of the 1.8 million student records submitted in “school leaver” reports, the districts could not account for 21,432 students or 1.1 percent of the students enrolled in grades 7 through 12.

State removes plaques

Plaques bearing symbols of the Confederacy last week were removed from the Texas Supreme Court building under orders from the governor’s office.

The NAACP applauded the action, but Confederate heritage groups filed a complaint with the General Services Commission, the agency that maintains state buildings.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Tom Phillips said the plaques presented a “problem for people who come to the court seeking relief” and he is glad they were replaced.

‘Turtle Patrol’ back on job

We’re back! The “Turtle Patrol” has rescued its first shelled friend of the summer. A few days ago, Annette managed to rescue a turtle and we took it way out in the country to a new home where it has food and water.

The Turtle Patrol (Annette and I) first became active not long after our marriage. At the time we were living in Lubbock and were on the road between Lubbock and Big Spring when we saw the driver of a pickup swerve toward the shoulder to run over a turtle that was just about to clear the roadway.

We were enraged. After all, what are the odds that a small turtle will survive being run over by a 2-ton pickup?

Now, for all the zoologists out there, I know that what I’ve called a turtle isn’t a turtle; it is a terrapin. But almost everyone calls a terrapin a turtle, so “turtle” it is.

However, when we lived in Louisiana, Annette did rescue a bona fide turtle. An ancient loggerhead had crawled out of the swamp south of Alexandria and managed to find itself on the highway.

Annette stopped the car and went to get the turtle off the roadway and back into the muck. The loggerhead’s aggressiveness didn’t deter her in her mission. She got a weightlifter’s belt and dangled it in front of the old guy’s face. He latched on and she pulled him off the highway and back down into the marsh where he belonged.

He did let go of the belt when he got into the water, by the way.

I honestly don’t understand what it is that would compel someone to nearly wreck a car or pickup in an effort to run down and crush one of those slow-moving little creatures. It can’t be because the turtle is a threat to the vehicle, or because the turtle is so aggressive it’s a threat to life or limb.

No, the turtle is just about the most inoffensive animal on the planet. It just tries to go about its life in its own timid, slow way, trying its best to stay out of our way and, I’m sure, hoping we humans will just leave it alone.

So, if you’re traveling and you see a turtle on the roadway, why don’t you stop your car and move the little guy to safety?

It’ll only take a moment and you’ll probably feel a whole lot better.

■ Any flag, even the Confederate flag, is nothing more than what people make of it

The Confederate battle flag, once considered a proud symbol of Southern heritage, has for the last few years come under attack as an offensive item, disdained and scorned for promoting racism.

The flag is merely that — a flag, a simple piece of cloth with a design specific to a location or event. The Confederate flag is as much a part of American heritage and history as it is a part of Southern heritage. It neither promotes racism nor condones it. Racism is an idea developed by people, the flag has nothing to do with it.

The Civil War, despite popular belief, was not fought over the issue of slavery, but over sectionalism — the right of one particular part of the country to do what it feels is right, over the best interests of the country as a whole.

Removing the Rebel banner, in any form, from state houses, government offices and public view is nearing epidemic proportions.

In no way do I feel that any people should be oppressed, but if the public is going to scream for removal of all signs of oppression which have happened in this country, then maybe they should look at other cultures which have suffered.

Maybe we should destroy all the railroads which criss-cross the nation. After all, thousands of Oriental people were maltreated by the big railroad engineers. True, most of the Orientals came to this country voluntarily to work for the railroads, but they didn’t know they were to be deported when the jobs were done.

If we destroy all memories of the Confederacy by removing all traces of the flag, then maybe we ought to go one step further and destroy the U.S. naval fleet, because many of the Orientals came to this country voluntarily to work for the railroads, but they didn’t know they were to be deported when the jobs were done.

We must not overlook the oppression of the Native Americans. From the moment Europeans arrived, Native Americans were (and still are) ridiculed, denounced and belittled as savages who could not co-exist with the “superior” white men.

Native Americans faced eradication by weapons, disease, overpowering numbers and even starvation. They were continuously pushed off lands their tribes had claimed for years and forced to accept the white man’s ways. And, it is a historical fact that many one-time slaves captured and enslaved Native Americans.

Seldom do I see signs of Native Americans regaining tribal lands or status. I have never seen the all-powerful American government seeking forgiveness for early dishonest deals.

Can anyone imagine the wonder of Hillary bowing down to the tribal leaders and begging their forgiveness for their trickery and deceit? I certainly can’t.

Irish immigrants, who came over as indentured servants, were promised freedom after they had worked for a number of years for the person who sponsored their trip. After working for the “sponsor” many found they could still be held in “indenture” by some trivial loophole. Has anything been done to right these wrongs?

Blaming today’s racism on the flying of the Confederate flag, or the posting of its likeness is like blaming the Holocaust on Germans born since 1945. It just doesn’t go together.

I have both Confederate and Union ancestors. My Irish ancestors arrived in the late 1890s and endured some of the indenture problems, and, of course, the blood of the Cherokees runs freely in my veins. None of this means I am going to pursue the old fights. They are over and done with.

LOST — REWARD OFFERED: No questions asked and names will remain confidential unless someone steals them first. Large bureaucracy seeks the return, or information leading to the recovery of two missing computer hard drives containing vital national secrets. Hello, Hereford.

They say that where there’s smoke, there’s fire.

And when you’re talking about the inept Department of Energy, the smoke indicates a raging inferno — or far worse, a Chernobyl.

Members of the Nuclear Emergency Support Team in Los Alamos recently discovered the disappearance of two computer drives, containing highly sensitive nuclear weapons data.

The missing inventory wasn’t discovered until they entered a secure (ha! ha!) vault to take three nuclear kits to safety as wildfires raged in the area, forcing the closing the 43-square-mile facility for about two weeks.

Remember that DOE is the very government agency that oversees security of nuclear power generation, weapons construction and dismantlement; and occasionally asks communities like Hereford to trust its ability to bury nuclear waste under precious water reserves without contamination.

As you might guess, Republicans are furious and Democrats are running for cover.

But neither party can deny that under the legs of DOE, the U.S. seems to be winning a maddening foot race with Russia to see who can give away more nuclear secrets.

Russia, at least, has an excuse. It’s in the grips of capitalism: Where the government elite’s corrupt need for designer tennis shoes, bagels, luxury cars and vodka typically outweigh today’s need to bolster an aging post-Cold War military security complex.

Beyond the knowledge that someone out there in the Third World is very interested in those secrets which have been evaporating from Los Alamos with such great ease, a journalist’s biggest regret in DOE’s bungling would be that all the nation’s most closely-guarded secrets aren’t housed at Los Alamos. We’d like to wrest the answers to some of the secrets that have worried us all:

1. What is the secret formula to Coca-Cola, and why doesn’t the government pick on food conglomerates like it does utilities and high-tech companies.
2. Never mind George W.’s past peccadilloes, what kind of drugs or fire water is Panhandle water raider T. Boone Pickens on?
3. Who are those people who determine what we have to watch on TV, and what are their addresses?
4. What the definition of “is,” is?
5. How many legal residents call the United States home, and how many legal bathrooms do they use?
6. Which volume of concrete is greater — that poured into Hereford’s new Highway 385, or the total poured into the fortified bunkers used in both World Wars?
- (I’m throwing the next one in for my mother-in-law.)
7. She has always wanted to know where Elvis has been hiding, and still wonders why he’s never dropped her a line?
8. How does someone as devoid of talent and who dresses as tacky as Regis Philbin manage to become a game show host whose hardest tasks are asking “Is that your final answer,” and doling out millions?
9. How does Al Gore walk so well without a spine?
10. How many probes can we rain on Mars before we ruin the Martians’ fastidious pride in xero-scaping?

The missing hard drives were taken from locked containers in the Los Alamos national laboratory’s “X Division,” where nuclear weapons are designed, by “X-Men”; who also gather and sort uncut copies of the “X Files.”

They were first missed May 7, but their

What about the subs?

By Joan Milton

Special to The Brand

I just had the saddest experience in a long time at a Kids Inc. baseball game.

Let me explain the situation to you, but let me also say that I have five grandchildren playing Kids Inc. baseball this season.

It has been a joy to be a spectator at these games this season — except for one of my grandsons. And, if I had known at the beginning of the practice season what I know now I would have advised the parents of this young boy to switch him to another team immediately.

Now to the circumstances of my discomfort.

This grandson was assigned to a team. No problem. Then he started to go to the practices prior to the season's games. From the first, he came home and was so excited to proclaim that he was the "sub" for the team.

His parents and I were not that concerned about the title because we realized that there are substitutes on all the teams because there are always more than nine players on each team.

OK. The season began and we noticed a pattern about the way the coaches were playing the members of this team and there were always at the most two boys who were subs. In other words, they were the bench-warmers.

Well, if there were exactly nine players who showed up, our grandson played the game. But if there were one or two extra players on the team, our grandson was always one of the two that were the subs and if he was the only extra player, he was the sub for the game.

He was in that situation tonight (Thursday). It didn't seem that fair, so I went over to the coach and asked him why my grandson was on the bench for so long.

His answer was, "The rule states that a sub only plays field two innings and is at bat one time."

He said this to me two times like that was the rule and he was adhering to the rule. Well, I found an official of Kids Inc. and asked him if there were such a rule.

I learned that was the minimum amount of time that a sub was to play. In other words, they could play longer if the coaches chose to put the substitute in earlier. This coach was correct in the rule, but as far as I'm concerned he carried it to the extreme and seemed not to care about the spirit of my grandson or his love of the game.

It was to the point that this boy didn't want to go to any more of his games; he was tired of sitting on the bench most of the game. And, in my heart, I can't blame him. When one boy on the team is sitting out more than any other boy, it doesn't seem very fair to me and it's obvious to the players of the team that he is left out, too.

Such good team spirit.

In this situation, I think the coaches are out of line with their reasons for playing the games. I feel like they had an attitude of "win at all costs." To me, that means they didn't have the whole team's best interest at heart. It saddens me to think there are coaches out there who don't care about the feelings of each boy on their teams. So, therefore, that shows a lack of conscience on these coaches' part.

Secrets

disappearance wasn't reported by Los Alamos officials to the Energy Department in Washington until June 1.

Energy Secretary Bill Richardson, considered by some to have an inside track as the Democratic Party's vice-presidential nominee, last year promised a "zero tolerance security policy" in the wake of an espionage scandal involving a former computer scientist, Wen Ho Lee, who was fired and later indicted by federal grand jury on 59 counts of illegally removing U.S. nuclear secrets from lab computers.

On Tuesday, Richardson said he was "outraged" about the latest security lapse, but he doubted the incident involved espionage.

Positive thinking always seems to shine more brilliantly through those who are closest to the guillotine.

Even so, he thought another independent investigation was warranted.

"The president has every confidence in Secretary Richardson," said White House spokesman Joe Lockhart. "We've done an enormous amount as far as changing the security culture at the labs."

Like Richardson, the White House's confident mantra resides with the belief the computer drives will eventually turn up — even if they have to make two new drives from scratch.

But barring the advent of another Wen Ho Lee in the Los Alamos ranks, there's a good chance the hard drives have simply been misplaced.

If I were Richardson, I'd have the FBI look around the lab a bit more. They might find the disks secreted away in one of the most secure hiding places ever devised by Americans — tucked safely away with the paper clips, finger nails, rubber bands, loose buttons, food debris and TV remote controls residing under the cushions of the lab's most-comfortable couch.

Flag

The Confederate flag, the feathered tribal headdress, or the Irish potato are all just artifacts of history that make up the people of this country. None can be removed without erasing part of that history.

The Confederate flag is what the people make of it. In itself it is neither good nor bad, it is only a symbol and by itself can not impact the ideas and beliefs of a nation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

In attempting to put one's ducks in a row, it might be a good idea to look around for anything borrowed that needs to be returned to its owner.

I guess I may need to chase ducks, since I should have a long time ago returned some weaving pattern books to Priscilla Ham, but I need her current mailing address. I thought the Hams moved to Colorado.

If anyone has kept in touch with Priscilla since the Hams moved from Hereford some years ago and has a current mailing address for her, would you please call me after 6 p.m.? Please look up the number under Anderson's Tuxedos or Anderson's Formal Wear.

And, speaking of those ducks in a row, if I have loaned books to anyone, please keep them as my gift to you. I suspect I may have too much stuff already, especially at house-cleaning time.

ON THEIR ANNIVERSARY

BLUE-COLLAR DAD

(Carry King)

Hard work was not a stranger to the man who gave me life. I watched him toil and struggle, raising five kids and a wife. He was just a child himself when they started down the road. And honor, love and duty would exact a heavy toll.

I recall the days of summer, with the hot sun blazing down, And working with my Daddy, while my friends all played in town. In truth I mostly loved it, though at times it seemed unfair. But Daddy knew his young son needed time with Daddy there.

He taught me life and labor, and how to be a man. The love of life and family, and how to "make a hand." Oh, I know he was not perfect, and often times he erred, But one thing is for certain, we knew our daddy cared.

We're scattered now in different towns with children of our own. Some of them are parents, too, and they all think that they're grown. Our strength is in each other, and the little things we had, Especially in our family, bolstered by a loving dad.

MOMMA'S SONG

In the deepest recess of my mind, familiar memories unfold I recall the walk to church, with Momma's hand to hold. She ferried me to football games, to Boy Scouts and movie shows, To skating rinks and baseball fields, and even rodeos.

She nursed me through my broken hearts and cycle wrecks and fistfights in the alley. She taught me how to write my name and be polite, and even how to sing "Red River Valley."

I remember cherry trees and picking fruit and Momma canning jelly. Watching Tim Conway and Carol Burnett, with Momma on the telly. Playing ball out in the yard, and hanging with my friends. Momma's beans and fried potatoes called me home, just wafting on the wind.

Since those days, I've traveled far and wide and to places in between, tried German food and Mexican and fancy French cuisine. I've tasted food from many lands, of boasting I am able, But the finest groceries in this life, I found at Momma's table.

I know there are other moms who've loved other sons, But I'm proud to say to all the world that my mom's No. 1!

Momma taught my soul to sing, and love and sweet caress. She reached beyond my boyish ways and taught me tenderness. All I am or will become is rooted in her love. For my Mom, I give my thanks to the one who reigns above.

ARMS CONTROL: Clinton appears unlikely to work out arms deal

Tom Raam
The Associated Press

Despite President Clinton's efforts to build a legacy in his remaining days in office, he seems likely to become the first president in decades to fail to negotiate a major agreement with Moscow on strategic arms.

And with the clock ticking, his job isn't being made any easier by Republicans in Congress bent on thwarting his negotiating authority — or by growing international alarm over U.S. plans for a national missile defense.

This week's disclosure of missing computer hard drives containing nuclear weapons data at the Los Alamos nuclear laboratory in New Mexico has only further hardened GOP animosity toward the Clinton administration's national security policy.

It's likely to spill over into Clinton's attempts to reach further agreements on nuclear weapons. "It's an enormous embarrassment," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has said any arms-control pact Clinton negotiates this late in his presidency will be "dead on arrival" in his committee.

And, late last week, the Senate added an amendment to a defense spending bill that would effectively deny Clinton an authority presidents of both parties before him have had — the ability to make unilateral reductions in nuclear arms.

Dramatic unilateral cuts in the U.S. tactical nuclear forces deployed in Europe by then-President Bush in September 1991 prompted then-Soviet Union President Mikhail Gorbachev to withdraw all tactical weapons from outside Russian territory and to dismantle thousands of warheads.

At the same time the Republican-led Senate was denying Clinton this authority, it voted to give it to the next president. Senate Republicans are betting that will be Texas GOP governor, George W. Bush.

Bush has recommended deep reductions in the U.S. nuclear arsenal — now at the 7,200 Cold War-vintage level — whether Russia makes corresponding cuts or not.

He also has urged Clinton to make no new arms control pacts with Russia that he might have to renegotiate.

Clinton has said he will ignore such a recommendation, but he's had little luck in coming up with any such agreement, partly because of his advocacy of a missile-defense program.

Now, two leading Senate Democrats on foreign policy issues — Joseph Biden of Delaware, the senior Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, and John Kerry of Massachusetts, a committee member — have come forth and urged Clinton to leave missile-defense decisions to the next president.

After opposing Republican plans for a missile defense for most of the first six years of his presidency, Clinton did an about-face in late 1998 and agreed to support such a concept. His condition was that the system be designed to stop a limited missile attack from what the United States considers "rogue" states like

North Korea, Iran or Iraq.

"The world changed very vividly when the North Koreans fired that missile," Clinton's top adviser on Russia, Strobe Talbott, said recently, referring to North Korea's August 1998 launch of a multistage missile over Japan.

So far, Clinton has been unable to persuade either Russia or America's European allies to go along with such a system. Nor is Russia willing to modify the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty to permit such a system.

The controversy has had a chilling effect on arms reduction proposals.

The START II treaty, negotiated by Bush and Gorbachev and establishing reductions to 3,000 to 3,500 warheads on each side, has yet to take effect.

The cash-strapped Russian government has proposed going as low as 1,500 warheads as part of a future START III agreement, compared with the 2,000 to 2,500 warhead level the United States has suggested.

The domestic dispute over missile defense has put such talks on hold. Russian President Vladimir Putin rejected Clinton's appeals for Russian support to modify the 1972

Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty to allow such a system.

And, while some White House officials hold out the possibility of a late-term agreement, Putin is mindful that missile defense and arms control have become presidential campaign issues and that, either way, he'll be dealing with someone other than Clinton.

Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Ford, Reagan and Bush successfully negotiated major nuclear disarmament agreements with Moscow. President Carter negotiated one but had to withdraw it from Senate consideration in 1980 after Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan.

"What would be most tragic about the possible failure of the administration to conclude an agreement with Russia is that the opportunity for success has been so great after the end of the Cold War," said Daryl Kimball, executive director of the Coalition to Reduce Nuclear Dangers, an arms-control advocacy group.

Now is the time to file for Social Security

Special to The Brand

AMARILLO — Individuals who became or will become 65 this year and who have not filed a claim for Social Security benefits because they are still working may need to do so to avoid losing benefits, according to the office manager of the Social Security Administration.

Peter Gilbert said the new law that eliminated the Social Security "retirement" or "earnings" test for people 65 and older makes working people eligible for benefits beginning with the month they are 65 or even before the month they are 65, depending upon their earnings up to that point.

For example, in the year an individual turns age 65, anyone who will not earn more than $17,000 during the months he or she becomes 65, can get a Social Security payment beginning with the month the claim is filed. So, a person earning $3,000 a month who will be 65 this month is eligible for a Social Security payment as early as April (the month the law changed), even though the individual will earn $36,000 this year.

While the benefit amount is reduced slightly if full monthly benefits are paid for months before age 65, benefits paid can put a person ahead for many years.

On the other hand, benefits for people who elect to claim them after the month they reach full retirement age (65 this year) will increase by a half-percent per month or 6 percent for each full year of "delayed" retirement. There also are income tax considerations. Up to 85 percent of Social Security benefits can be subject to income tax, depending upon an individual's or couple's income.

Gilbert recommends people with questions to call Social Security's toll-free number — 800-722-1213. He said retirement benefits cannot be paid retroactively for months before a claim is filed unless the claimant is already 65 and then retroactivity is limited to six months.

So, for some individuals it will be important to file right away or some benefits could be lost. Generally, people who already have filed a claim for benefits don't need to take any action to get benefits because of the new law. The Social Security Administration expects to pay by early May any retroactive benefits due those who have already filed claims.

Students run in summer meet

■ Hereford students travel to Lubbock to compete in summer track meet

Several Hereford residents participated Thursday in a summer track meet at Coronado.

Hereford entered track competitors in three different categories during the meet ranging from bantam (ages 9-10), to midget (ages 11-12) and to intermediate (ages 15-16).

In the bantam division, Jessica Blakely won third place in the 100 and 200 meter runs. She also placed second in the long jump.

Kayla Leonard placed first in the 100 meter run and third in the 400 meter run. She also placed second in the 200 meter run and third in the long jump.

Jordan Foster placed second in the 400 meter run and won first in the 200. She also placed fourth in the long jump.

In the boys bantam division, Brant Bunch came in fourth place in the 100 and 200 meter runs. He also placed sixth in the 100 and second in the long jump.

Ray Carrizales placed sixth in the 100 meter run while Justin Blakely came in fifth. Blakely also placed fifth in the 100 meter run and third in the long jump.

In the midget category, Justine Shermer placed first in the 400 meter run and fourth in the long jump. Lucinda Carrizales placed second in the 400 meter run and fifth in the long jump.

Hatley Bunch placed second in the 800 meter run in the boys midget division while Gary Ammons came in second in the 100 meter run. Ammons also placed fourth in the 200 meter run and fourth in the long jump.

In the intermediate division, Shari High came in first in the 100 meter run and the long jump. She also placed second in the 200 meter run on the girls side.

In the boys intermediate division, Jeremy Blakely placed second in the 800 meter run and placed first in the 1600 meter run. Luis Perez placed first in the long jump, 100 meter run and 400 meter run. Perez also placed third in the 1600 meter run.

Carlos Perez came in third in the 800 meter run and fourth in the 400 meter run. C. Perez also placed second in the 200 meter run.

Pacers refuse to lose series on home court, win 120-87

■ Miller and Rose combine for 57 in Pacer win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There was no coronation on this night. Not while the Indiana Pacers were still playing with passion — and playing for a coach who isn't ready to retire just yet.

With ferocity and veteran pride, Indiana routed the Los Angeles Lakers 120-87 in Game 5 of the NBA Finals on Friday night. Jalen Rose and Reggie Miller led the onslaught as the Pacers shot 75 percent in the first quarter, led by 20 points before half-time and never let up.

"We wanted it more than them, simple as that," Indiana's Austin Croshere said. "There was no way they were going to win."

Coach Larry Bird, who will retire when the series ends, left Indiana a winner. The final home game of the best NBA season in Pacers franchise history ended with the sellout Conseco Fieldhouse crowd chanting "Larry! Larry!" In typical Bird fashion, he didn't acknowledge the cheers as he left the court — but there was no doubt he heard them.

"We've had such a great year here," Bird said. "The support has been there every game." Bird said before the game that the Pacers "hadn't played a great game" during the series. After watching his team dismantle the supposed champs-in-waiting, even Bird had to admit Indiana was looking good.

"In (Game 4) we fought so hard and played so well and let it slip away," Bird said. "It's great to see the guys bounce back and play the same way. We hit shots, played unselfishly and we fought them."

The Lakers, who lead the best-of-seven series 3-2, were looking for a trophy presentation — but found serious questions about their ability to close out a series. It was Los Angeles' worst loss of the season and the most points it has allowed in a game this year.

Los Angeles lost a potential series-winning game for the sixth time this season and, more importantly, allowed the Pacers to grab the series momentum.

The Lakers were at a loss to explain why they failed to show up on what could have been the season's biggest night.

"We just laid an egg out there tonight," Ron Harper said. "They came out from the beginning and hit shots and then just kept hitting shots. We didn't have a chance tonight."

Game 6 will be Monday night at Staples Center and Game 7 would be Wednesday.

Rose, after playing poorly in Indiana's 120-118 overtime loss in Game 4, led the Pacers with 32 points on 12-of-18 shooting. Miller added 25 points as the Indiana stars hit four 3-pointers apiece.

"We're a team that plays better when our backs are against the wall, and 3-1 was a big wall," Rose said. "We just need to take it one game at a time and see if we can get this thing done."

The Pacers hit their first six 3-pointers while running their offense while the Lakers looked helpless — and that was just the first quarter.

"I understand we have what it takes to beat L.A., but it does nothing to talk about it," Rose said. "I was going to shut up and play."

A four-point play by Miller turned a five-point lead into a nine-point lead just seven minutes in, and three 3-pointers by Rose helped the Pacers score 39 points in the first — their best quarter of the postseason.

The lead went to 19 by halftime, briefly shrank to 13 in the third and then grew to 25 early in the fourth as Miller stood at the line and sank four straight foul shots — three for being fouled on a 3-pointer and one for a technical foul on Derek Fisher.

Shaquille O'Neal continued his dominating series with 35 points and 11 rebounds, but he got no help. Kobe Bryant, the hero of Game 4, shot 4-for-20 from the field for eight points, and no other Lakers player had more points than Glen Rice's 11.

"When a team is shooting like that, there's not much you can do," O'Neal said. "I'm kind of upset ... but they played very, very inspired basketball."

For the first time, the Pacers executed Bird's stated strategy of allowing O'Neal to get his points while controlling everyone else on the Lakers. If this is how well the strategy works, who knows what lies in store at Staples Center?

"We knew this was going to be a difficult game," coach Phil Jackson said. "We shot 45 percent in the first half, they shot 61. Their shooting really had us in a quandary, and in the second half they beat us on the boards and got to the line.

"We're still in the driver's seat; we're not in a situation where we need to panic. We need precision and execution."

While Rose and Miller carried the action early, Croshere led the way late with 13 second-half points and nine rebounds. The Pacers maintained their lead and stood up to the physical confrontations that usually result during a blowout.

Four technical fouls were called during a span of 32 seconds in the fourth quarter, and Lakers enforcer Rick Fox was up to his usual mischief.

The Pacers weathered the storms and set their sights on Monday night at Staples Center, when they'll try to take the second step in a three-part plan to shock the basketball world.

Proposed migratory game bird regulations in F&WS hands

Proposed migratory game bird regulations approved by the Texas Parks & Wildlife Commission at its June 1 meeting in Austin still must be approved by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service this summer.

Should the okay come from the Feds, the state will be looking at an early teal season more in tune with the migration of blue-winged teal into Texas, and the sandhill crane season in our Zone A should extend through its normal time frame and not be cut short by the opening of a snow goose conservation season.

Earlier-proposed sandhill crane hunting dates would have seen the season cut off prematurely in the Panhandle area for the anticipated opening of yet another snow goose conservation season, but evidently that proposal got re-tuned before the Commission issued its proclamation from Austin. Under the proposed season guidelines area hunters would retain the option to take advantage of the large buildup of sandhill cranes that has occurred locally the past two years in early February.

The 2000-2001 Migratory Game Bird Proclamation submitted by the TP&W Commission includes a proposal for a 16-day teal season to open Friday, September 13, and close on Saturday, September 30.

In the past several years the early teal season has generally opened on the second Saturday of September, which would fall on September 9, this year. Biologists feel that Texas hunters will have more opportunity to harvest these early-migrators with a September 15 opening date.

TP&W teal harvest data show that hunters average taking fewer than two birds per day prior to September 14, and more than two per day after September 14, when the fall migration begins moving through the state.

Teal are such early and rapid migrators that a season format off by just a few days can mean missing the blue-winged flight entirely. We've seen a number of teal seasons locally that preceded the arrival of the bulk of the flight, and some that coincided nicely.

Also approved by the Commission and now handed-up for perusal by the Feds are options for extending sandhill crane hunting along Texas' middle and lower coast.

TP&W prefers to extend the Zone C sandhill crane hunting area along the mid and lower Coast and maintain a three crane daily bag limit. If the Fish & Wildlife Service prefers to restrict bag limits on sandhills to fewer than three birds daily in the extended areas of Zone C, the state is opting to create a Zone D that would include only the new coastal areas, with a two-bird or one-bird bag limit. The three-bird bag limit would be left intact in the other three crane hunting zones.

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Stelert

If neither of those ideas fly with the Feds, Texas still has the alternative to revert to last year's boundaries and a three-bird daily bag limit statewide.

The proposed sandhill crane season for our Zone A would run from November 11 through February 11—similar to years past, and hopefully avoiding the premature closing we saw last season in a foul-up over the initiation of the snow goose conservation season. ****

Some time back we heard about a number of concerns over the trophy bass fishery at Lake Fork, including largemouth bass virus that claimed enough fish to cause alarm last year, and some studies of experimental tournament regulations and resultant mortality that raised some eyebrows.

The latest information from Lake Fork is that results of a spring electrofishing sampling showed a drop in the number of adult bass in Lake Fork.

TP&W biologists assess Fork's bass population each spring and fall and compare their results to surveys from previous years. Electrofishing allows biologists to stun fish so that they surface. The fish are recovered, data taken, and the bass are then released unharmed.

The spring 2000 electrofishing survey showed the catch rate of adult-size bass larger than eight inches was lower than it has been during the four previous spring seasons, but the catch rate of quality-size bass larger than 14 inches was similar to the spring of 1999, but lower than the springs of 1996 to 1998.

Randall Myers, Lake Fork biologist, says bass captured this spring had no sores or lesions and appeared healthy.

A possible reason why fewer adult bass were counted may have to do with low water conditions this year.

Myers says that because of a low water level and lack of aquatic plants along Lake Fork's shoreline, bass may have been in deeper water at the time of the survey. Since electrofishing proves only marginally effective in collecting bass from water depths of over five feet, the catch rate may have been decreased.

According to Myers, the bass catch can also vary due to the timing of the bass spawn in relation to the timing of the survey.

At this point, biologists aren't hitting the panic button in the wake of the electrofishing survey. Lake Fork accounted for seven fish over 13 pounds in the ShareLunker Program this spring. That's more than any other Texas reservoir.

As always, biologists will continue to monitor the bass population of Lake Fork, and to listen to fishing reports from anglers. They want to understand the impact of the 1999 fish kill and to track bass abundance at Lake Fork.

You can bet that biologists, bass fishermen, and lake merchants will be paying close attention.

Bonds hits number 26 in Houston loss

Houston pitcher Scott Elarton loses third of season

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds hit his major league-leading 26th home run, leading Shawn Estes and the San Francisco Giants over the Houston Astros 7-4 Friday night.

Bonds had three hits, scored three runs and drove in two. He came to the plate in the eighth inning needing a single to hit for the cycle, but flied out. The crowd gave him a standing ovation when he returned to the dugout.

Rich Aurilia also homered for the Giants, who won their fourth straight and went a game over .500 for the first time since May 14. Estes (6-3) allowed one run and five hits in seven innings. He improved his home ERA to 1.61 in six starts.

The Astros scored twice in the ninth. Robb Nen relieved after Craig Biggio's RBI double and got the last out for his ninth save.

Scott Elarton (4-3) allowed six runs on eight hits and four walks in four 1-3 innings. He's 1-3 with a 9.36 ERA in six starts on the road.

Moises Alou homered and drove in two runs for Houston. Jeff Bagwell and Julio Lugo each had two hits for the Astros, who matched their season high with four errors.

The Giants took advantage of two errors to score two runs in the first. Marvin Benard walked, stole second and went to third on Mitch Meluskey's throwing error. One out later, Bonds doubled off the right field wall.

Ellis Burks had an infield single, and Bonds scored when Lugo's throw got by Bagwell at first.

Bonds hit a 2-2 offering from Elarton into the last row of the right field bleachers with one out in the third. Aurilia homered on the first pitch he saw to lead off the fourth.

The Giants added a pair of runs in the fifth. Burks scored from second on Lugo's second throwing error of the game at shortstop. Bobby Estalella doubled home Aurilia with the other run.

Bonds tripled with one out in the sixth and scored when

Jeff Kent singled. It was Kent's NL-leading 63rd RBI.

Houston faces the Giants again today at Enron Field. The Astros are trying to regain last year's winning form.

Notes: Astros 3B Chris Truby made his major league debut. He tripled in the ninth for his first hit and scored on a groundout. Truby was recalled from Triple-A New Orleans to take Ken Caminiti's place on the roster. Caminiti was placed on the 15-day disabled list due to a ruptured tendon sheath in his right wrist. He'll undergo surgery on Monday at Houston's Methodist Hospital. He's expected to miss 8-12 weeks. ... Dusty Baker celebrated his 51st birthday with a day off Thursday, the first time he's had his birthday off since taking over as Giants manager in 1993. The Giants are 1-6 on his birthday. ... Elarton has now allowed six home runs in 25 innings pitched away from Enron Field. ... Biggio doubled in his 6,630th career at-bat for the Astros, moving him one past Jose Cruz for the team record.

Rangers drop ninth straight to Tampa Bay

Oates trying to keep perspective about longest losing streak since 1995

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Texas manager Johnny Oates is trying to keep a nine-game losing streak in perspective.

Most players left the Rangers clubhouse early following a 9-2 loss to the Tampa Bay Devil Rays on Friday night, leaving Oates to answer many of the questions about what's happened to the team during a skid that matches the longest losing streak in the majors.

The Rangers haven't pitched well, allowing 33 hits, 30 runs and 22 walks in the past three games. And Friday night, the offense produced just one extra-base hit — Frank Catalanotto's solo homer — against a team Texas had not scored fewer than five runs against in six previous meetings.

"The worst teams of all-time are going to win a third of the games, and the best teams of all-time are going to lose a third of their games," Oates said. "And everybody else is going to fall in between."

The streak matches Kansas City's nine-game slide in April. It's the club's longest stretch of futility since the Rangers dropped 10 in a row in July 1995.

The Devil Rays, on the other hand, are a last-place team that's played its best ball this month. They've won three straight, matching a season high, and have taken eight of 11 overall.

Starting pitching, which has hurt Texas, has been one of the keys to Tampa Bay's turnaround. Estaban Yan allowed two runs and seven hits.

"When you give up five runs in the first, you're kind of flirting with disaster," said Oliver, who left after Randy Winn's two-run single gave Tampa Bay a 7-1 lead in the fourth. "You give up a couple of runs any time after that, the manager's got to make a decision."

The Rangers loaded the bases with no outs in the seventh, but didn't make the most of the opportunity to get back in the game. Yan walked Luis Alicaes to force in a run, but reliever Jim Mecir got Dave Martinez to ground into an inning-ending double play.

The Devil Rays are 10-5 since May 31, when they were a season-low 18 games under .500. They haven't climbed out of the AL East cellar, but they are feeling better about themselves.

"We're just putting it all together," Guillen said. "When you put it all together, something good is going to happen."

Notes: The Devil Rays are 5-2 on their nine-game homestand, assuring them for their first winning homestand at Tropicana Field since last August. ... The Rangers are 0-7 on a nine-game road trip, the first time since 1994 that they've dropped seven in a row away from home. ... Texas DH David Segui was scratched from the Rangers lineup after fouling a pitch off the top of his left foot for the second straight night. He did it during Thursday night's loss to the Orioles in Baltimore and again in batting practice before Friday's game. X-rays were negative and he is listed as day-to-day.

Misprinted dollar turns life around

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP) — Three weeks after he wrapped up a personal bankruptcy, Frank Wallis got some good financial news — he found a misprinted gold dollar that could be worth up to $100,000.

Wallis bought four rolls of Sacagawea $1 gold coins a couple of weeks ago. He opened one, expecting to see the American Indian guide's youthful face on the coins inside. But one bore a more familiar profile: George Washington, in a pose usually seen on quarters.

The error is believed to be the first of its kind in the 208-year history of the Mint.

Even after spotting the mistake, Wallis didn't realize how valuable the coin, minted in Philadelphia, might be.

"I decided probably at least it was a fun coin to own because of the George Washington ad campaign," he said, referring to a $40 million campaign in which Washington, illustrated by his portrait on the $1 bill, insists he doesn't mind being left off the new coin.

After contacting experts, Wallis realized the coin was likely quite valuable.

The mistake is known by collectors as a "double-denomination mule error" — two currencies stamped on different sides.

Wallis' coin bears the front of the Washington quarter and the back of the Sacagawea dollar.

It is not known whether other coins with the same error are in circulation; 500 million Sacagawea coins were minted. A spokesman for the U.S. Mint did not return a call seeking comment.

Twenty days before he found the coin, Wallis, the business page editor of The Baxter Bulletin, was completing a bankruptcy.

"I was in financial ruin," he said, explaining that a hospital stay in 1993 caused him to forfeit two months' salary.

Keeping an Eye on Texas

Keeping cool in the Texas heat

The temperature in Texas is rising, and with high temps comes heat-related illness and even death. The best defense against heat-related illness is prevention.

Heat precautions include:

- Never leave anyone, including pets, in a closed, parked vehicle.
- Drink plenty of fluids, but avoid drinks with alcohol, caffeine or a lot of sugar. Start drinking fluids before going out into the heat.
- Take frequent breaks when working outside.
- If you do not have air conditioning at home, go to a mall or other public place with air conditioning.
- Check frequently on people who are elderly, ill or shut in.
- Check with a doctor about the effects of the sun and heat exposure when taking certain prescription drugs, especially diuretics or antihistamines.
- At first signs of heat illness—dizziness, nausea, headaches, muscle cramps—move to a cooler place, rest a few minutes, then slowly drink a cool beverage. Seek medical attention immediately if conditions do not improve.

FCC OKs phone merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators gave their blessing Friday to the merger of Bell Atlantic and GTE Corp., a union that transforms one of the offspring of the old Bell system into the nation's largest local phone company and wireless provider.

The approval allows the companies to complete a deal announced almost two years ago and launch a combined business under the new name Verizon Communications. It also brings them closer to their vision of offering a bundle of telecommunications services — local, long-distance, wireless and data — from one source.

COUNTRY SANTANA?

■ Asleep at the Wheel slices off a bit of fame for itself

By Dave Ferman
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

ABILENE — To appreciate the slice of fame Asleep at the Wheel has carved for itself, it's a good idea to be standing here, as the sun goes down and the band — sequestered in its big, comfy tour bus — prepares to take the stage.

A rock band that had been around 30 years and won eight Grammys (including two this past February) would probably be preparing to play Starplex or Reunion Arena. There would be legions of fans, a lavish backstage buffet, and so on.

The Wheel, though, can look forward to none of this. A gig is a gig is a gig, and this one is headlining the Celebrate Abilene! festival: One stage, a few booths, the locals sitting at rows of tables, chomping on big plates of steak.

Asleep at the Wheel is the most famous western swing band working. Last year's 'Ride With Bob,' a tribute to Bob Wills and the Texas Playboys, has become their biggest record, and in February the CD's leadoff track, 'Bob's Breakdowns,' won the Grammy Award for Country Instrumental of the Year.

Asleep just finished opening several dates for Bob Dylan in the Northwest, at Dylan's request. On Wednesday, they were up for two awards (Album of the Year and Top Vocal Group) at the Academy of Country Music Awards. And this summer, they'll be playing stadiums, opening for big fan George Strait.

And yet here they are: no buffet, no adoring fans at the backstage gate, and only a too-small, windblown stage, congealing food in takeout boxes and a long drive back to Austin after the show.

Such is mega-success, western swing-style.

There is, however, no complaining in the voice of the group's founder, Ray Benson, as he sits on the bus and warms up on guitar. A large man with a voice and hands to match, Benson is the lead singer and guitarist.

He's the guy who came up with the idea of teaming Asleep with 20 country and pop stars, from Merle Haggard to Don Walser to the Squirrel Nut Zippers, and in the process did for his band what 'Supernatural' did for Santana.

Right now he's searching for a guitar tuner.

"Hey, it's all show business," he says, tucked into a booth and limbering up with some jazz riffs. "Up and down, up and down, or else up and down and you're out. We got into this to play music and bring back older music that's been forgotten and I think we're doing that."

Asleep at the Wheel has been rolling along for more than 30 years.

Benson is taking success in stride — probably because he's seen so many years when Asleep at the Wheel was a cult act, loved by hard-core western swing fans and unknown to everybody else. He can say he never got into this to be famous without being disingenuous because, frankly, no matter how influential western swing has been on generations of musicians, it hasn't been country's hip sub-genre since Wills and his Playboys.

Benson and his band (steel guitarist Cindy Cashdollar, fiddler Jason Roberts, bassist David Miller, drummer David Sanger, 20-year vet Michael Francis on saxophone and newest member John Michael Whitby on piano) may never be able to change that completely.

Bush turns into newscaster

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — And now, George W. Bush with the news.

The Republican presidential contender was being badgered Friday with running-mate questions from reporters just before boarding his campaign plane from Boston to Ohio.

Yes, he had talked the night before with his veep-search coordinator, Dick Cheney.

No, he hadn't made a choice — or settled on a timetable.

As the questions persisted, Bush said he and Cheney were "moving smartly in a fluid way on a regular basis." Asked about responses to the questionnaires Cheney had sent to possible nominees, the Texas governor added: "I'm not telling anybody about the process. I'm talking to Dick Cheney on a regular basis."

Then he offered to "help craft the story" for the reporters.

In a mock newscaster's voice, Bush intoned: "Today, future President George W. Bush was very straightforward with the press corps when he announced he was making progress toward picking a selection. He was most revealing when he said that he speaks to Dick Cheney on a regular basis (but) was somewhat circumspect when he would not reveal what the conversations were about. However, he did say, 'Suffice to say, it's about the vice presidential selection process.'"

Bush then retreated to his seat.

Pride enters shrine

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Charley Pride, whose first three singles were released without a photograph in order to conceal his race, has become the first black to be voted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

"In our culture we're just ate up with what I call skin hang-ups," the 62-year-old singer said Friday. "I'm glad I'm in the Hall of Fame. I'm glad I'm right next to people that I love — Ernest Tubb, Marty Robbins, the whole bit. I don't care if they're pink"

Faron Young, a honky-tonk singing great, will also be inducted during the Country Music Association Awards on Oct. 4. He shot himself to death in 1996.

The two singers will become the 73rd and 74th members of the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Hall of Fame members are selected by about 350 members of the Country Music Association with more than 10 years of experience in the industry.

Pride was born in Sledge, Miss., the son of a cotton sharecropper. He played baseball in the Negro American League, served in the Army and unsuccessfully tried out for the California Angels before starting a music career.

Signed by legendary producer Chet Atkins to RCA Records in 1965, Pride's hit single "Just Between You and Me" in 1967 started a string of hits stretching into the late 1980s.

Young, a native of Shreveport, La., had a long list of hits from 1953 to the late 1970s. His first hit was "Goin' Steady."

FAMILY COOKBOOKS Contain more than just recipes

WACO, Texas — For many families, summertime means reunion time. And although they can't capture that time in a bottle, some families have found a way to preserve the food, stories and memories shared at their reunions — by compiling a family cookbook.

"Family cookbooks are not just about recipes; they're about everything that recipe means," said Kathy Steligo, author of the book "Meals and Memories: How To Create Keepsake Cookbooks." "Recipes, in a lot of cases, are parts of our own history, and history of any type is lost if it's not written down."

Waco resident Loeen Irons said that like many family gatherings, Irons family reunions are centered around food — including traditional family recipes.

About five years ago, she decided to compile all those old recipes with other family favorites into a cookbook to give to relatives as a wedding gift. So she contacted other family members, fished through her own drawers of recipe cards and went to work organizing, typing and editing. The result was the 58-page "Irons' Family Cookbook — Four Generations of Good Eating."

The book includes not only family members' favorite foods, but also some with special memories.

Family collections preserve memories

The recipe for Plaza III Steak Soup, for example, came from Kansas City's Plaza III Restaurant, where Loeen and her husband, Kerry, and Kerry's brother Bill and wife Mary, often dined when the brothers were in medical school in Kansas City, Loeen said.

Now another generation of Ironses, including Loeen and Kerry's two children, uses the cookbook. Part of the fun of having a family cookbook is calling family members to double-check recipes and to see what they've cooked, she said.

Vern and Martie Sauter's family found that a cookbook was a good way to preserve their German heritage. The Sauters, Waco residents, say their family members brought over original recipes for German pastries, now considered delicacies. Martie Sauters said she enjoys having those special recipes more than any other. If no one had translated the recipes and compiled them in two volumes of cookbooks, they probably wouldn't have survived this long, she said.

"I think it probably points out the need to maintain some of those rituals and some of the old recipes even though time continues," she said.

Cooking up a keepsake cookbook takes time, patience and organization, Steligo said. Once the idea of a family cookbook is born, one person should take charge, she said. He or she should make a list of everyone in the family, send out a letter and specify the number of recipes and any other information desired, she said.

When Waco resident Carol Perry decided to undertake the task of a family cookbook, she sent out letters to family members asking them not only for recipes, but also for memories about family members and special times together.

Finding the recipes was no problem since they are a "family of cooks," she said. But the toughest part was getting everyone to meet their deadlines, she said. The result of her seven months of work is a 71-page family cookbook that includes photos of ancestors and personal memories about each member of the family.

"(The cookbook) helped me think back and remember special times," family member Suzanne Durham said.

One of the major obstacles to writing a cookbook is that many family recipes have been passed down by word-of-mouth or without exact measurements. Steligo suggests videotaping or watching someone make a dish and having them measure out ingredients as they go along.

Blackwood Brothers Quartet is scheduled to perform June 24

The Blackwood Brothers, world-renowned gospel quartet, will perform at 7 p.m. June 24 in the Hereford High School auditorium. Sponsor of the concert is the Hereford Ministerial Alliance.

The quartet was formed more than 65 years ago by three brothers and a nephew in Choctaw County, Miss. Membership has changed during the years, but Cecil Blackwood has sung the baritone part for more than 45 years and continues to carry on the legendary quartet.

Other members are Steve Warren, tenor singer; Eric Winston, low bass; Rick Price, lead singer; and Chris Blackwood.

There will be one show only and it will be filled with songs they helped make famous. Songs such as, "Have You Talked To The Man Upstairs," "Old Country Church," "I Love To Tell The Story," "Just A Little Talk With Jesus," "How Great Thou Art," and many more.

There is no reserve seating and the show is on a donations-only basis.

Granddaughter receives degree

Mary Jane May, 24-year-old daughter of Muri May of Del Valle and Kathy May of Austin and granddaughter of Clara Trowbridge of Hereford, graduated recently from the Gallaudet University for the Deaf in Washington, D.C.

During the 131st graduation at the University, May received a Bachelor of Science in Child Development.

Her father and grandmother attended the ceremonies. On their drive to Washington, they stopped in Powder Springs, Tenn., to visit Trowbridge's daughter, Teena Zavattieri and her husband.

Following graduation, Mary

Mary Jane May

Jane joined May and Trowbridge in a visit with Trowbridge's son, Ken May, in Middletown, R.I.,

then they continued on to Niagara Falls.

Next their journey took them to Ashmore, Ill., where they visited with Trowbridge's cousin, Mary Jane Coartney. The 87-year-old is a poet, a painter and prints the "Coartney Chronicles," a monthly family newsletter.

The last stop on their trip before returning to Texas was in Waynesville, Mo., to visit Trowbridge's brother-in-law, Edwin May and his wife.

Before arriving in Hereford, the trio stopped in Amarillo to visit Trowbridge's son, David May, and her sister, Neoma Oldhorn.

Sometimes simple gift is best

Sunday is Father's Day. If you haven't already gotten a gift for your dad, you are fast running out of time to do so.

It has become very popular over the last few years to give dad gifts that relate to his favorite pastime.

Perhaps this is because today's lifestyles are so drastically different from years past, not to mention that many of us have greater financial resources and don't feel so compelled to have to spend money on necessities instead of extras.

According to one source, novelty items, personal care accessories and fun gadgets are topping the wish lists of today's dads.

Personally, I'm not so sure what is considered a novelty item. One thing I saw advertised on television this past week might qualify. It was a replica of a stuffed fish which wiggled its tail and talked (or maybe it sang). Which ever, it was generally offensive, to my way of thinking.

If you're thinking of a novelty item for dad, maybe you should be sure he considers it "novel" and not "offensive."

I think gifting with more useful — if not practical — gifts is a better idea.

And sometimes the best gift of all costs nothing. Just spend some time with dad and tell him "I love you."

Ann Landers

Stacy Griffith, Mark Shugart

Engagement announced

Lue Griffith of Dimmitt and Randy Griffith of Shawnee, Okla., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Stacy Jean, to Mark Bodie Shugart. The prospective groom is the son of James "Button" Shugart of Borrego Springs, Calif.

The couple will be wed July 29 at the Temple Baptist Church in Hereford.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Dimmitt High School and is employed at Bimbo Cereal Foods, Inc. in Dawn.

Shugart is a graduate of Julian High School. He is employed by Keeling Cattle Feeders in Summerfield.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to surprise my former husband with this tribute, which I hope you will run on Father's Day.

Next month will mark our son's 18th birthday and the end of my child-support payments. We also have a daughter in college. My children's father has always been a strong, positive influence in their lives. He not only made his child-support payments on time, he also participated enthusiastically in our children's activities. He coached our son's Little League team, and bought season tickets to the symphony for our daughter when she was learning to play the violin.

My ex and I separated when the children were young, but the kids have spent at least two nights a week with their dad ever since we parted. We both juggled full-time jobs, but he was always available to help take care of them when they were sick or had doctors' appointments. You might ask why we weren't able to stay married. The truth is, the divorce was not my idea, but I decided early on that I would not become a victim. I was determined to rebuild my life.

We discussed the children frequently, and he was always generous with his time. I made sure the children saw their father often, and encouraged them to allow him to participate in every facet of their lives. Too many ex-wives use the children's schedules as an excuse to keep them away from their father. They may gain some personal satisfaction from this maneuver, but they sabotage one of the most important relationships their children will ever have.

I did my best to be gracious, and my ex returned the favor. He never said one bad word about me. In fact, he tried to build me up every way possible. Although I knew the kids liked him better, he always told me, "That's not true. They love you just as much."

Divorce does not have to be divisive and painful if you put your children's welfare first. We agreed that a good relationship with BOTH parents was vital, and did everything we could to make that possible. We all turned out to be winners, because my ex-husband met me more than halfway. I would like to thank him for that, and wish him a richly deserved Happy Father's Day. — His Ex in Arlington, Va.

Dear Ex in Arlington: What a gracious lady you are, and your ex sounds pretty gracious, too. I hope every divorced woman who reads this will ask herself, "Could I be this generous?" Never mind that the SOB was not a model husband or father. Taking the high road is always the way to go. Your children will respect you for it — and maybe even thank you when they are older. Believe me, they are more aware than you think.

Dear Ann Landers: I meant to write this on Mother's Day, and never got around to it. Now that Father's Day is here, I don't want to let another opportunity pass me by. I was adopted, and my parents are everything I could have hoped for. I would like to address this to my biological parents:

Thank you for my wonderful life. Thank you for having the courage to give me up for adoption when you knew you could not take care of me. Sure, I have some questions, but I would not dream of disturbing your lives. I just want to wish my biological father a Happy Father's Day, and let you know I love my life and everything about it.

Thank you, too, Ann, for letting me say this. — No Signature

Dear Readers: Although the person who wrote this letter gave me initials and a city, I'm not printing either. I want every reader who has given up a child for adoption to think perhaps this letter was written by his or her very own.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. WTAMU's AEI will be host site for field day

The Alternative Energy Institute (AEI) at West Texas A&M University will be the host site when the Panhandle Amateur Radio Club (PARC) conducts its annual 24-hour Field Day to practice emergency communication skills.

AEI will provide access to solar panels and wind turbines for charging the batteries that will be used to power radios as the club broadcasts from 7 p.m. Saturday, June 24 until 7 p.m. Sunday, June 25 at AEI's Wind Test Center. The AEI complex is located on WTAMU, simultaneously attempting to make as many long-distance contacts as possible within the allotted 24-hour time period.

But Field Day is also a friendly competition among amateur radio clubs affiliated with the American Radio Relay League, and 2,100 clubs with more than 31,000 individuals across the U.S. and Canada participated in last year's Field Day. Bonus points are awarded to those clubs that use alternative energy sources such as solar and wind power during Field Day because an actual emergency might render power from public utilities useless.

"If all our power was down, the sun would still be shining or the wind would still be blowing," Ken Starcher, AEI assistant director, said. "When the amateur radio group asked us if they could use our facilities for their Field Day, it just seemed like something we could do in the way of good, common sense preparedness. We had the space, and we are glad to help."

During last year's Field Day, the local radio group made contacts as far away as Northern Ireland and South America, according to Howard Palechek, PARC president.

"We scored something like 690 points last year at Southeast Park in Canyon, which was pretty good," Palechek said. "With the alternative energy behind us at AEI, I bet we'll easily improve on that this year."

And if a disastrous tornado or flood were to strike the area, alternative energy would enable emergency communications to continue, perhaps more efficiently than by other means, Starcher said.

"If the utilities failed and we had to keep a computer running for two days on campus, we've got what it takes," Starcher said. "By going through this procedure with PARC, we can also see what they might run into in the way of unexpected difficulties, and that may pay off for us at WT if we ever run into a disaster. Perhaps we'll learn something from them—another good reason for lending our support."

Palechek said the public is welcome to join in the fun of Field Day, and anyone with an interest in amateur radios can try their hand at broadcasting.

"If they just stop by and ask to try it out, we'll let them take a whack at it," he said.

LOOKING BACK

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Saturday, June 17, the 169th day of 2000. There are 197 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On June 17, 1775, the Revolutionary War Battle of Bunker Hill took place near Boston.

On this date:
In 1856, in Philadelphia, the Republican Party opened its first convention.

In 1885, the Statue of Liberty arrived in New York City aboard the French ship Isere.

In 1928, Amelia Earhart embarked on a trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Wales — the first by a woman.

In 1940, France asked Germany for terms of surrender in World War II.

In 1948, a United Air Lines DC-6 crashed near Mount Carmel, Penn., killing all 43 people on board.

In 1963, the Supreme Court struck down rules requiring the recitation of the Lord's Prayer or reading of biblical verses in public schools.

In 1969, the raunchy musical review "Oh! Calcutta!" opened in New York.

In 1971, the United States signed a treaty with Japan under which it would give up control of the island of Okinawa.

In 1972, President Nixon's downfall began with the arrest of five burglars inside Democratic national headquarters at the Watergate complex in Washington, D.C.

In 1986, President Reagan announced the retirement of Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Earl Burger.

Ten years ago: South African black nationalist Nelson Mandela and his wife, Winnie, arrived in Ottawa, Canada, en route to an 11-day tour of the United States.

Five years ago: Russian commandos stormed a hospital where Chechen rebels were holding more than 1,000 hostages, but the Chechens beat the Russians back.

One year ago: The Republican-controlled House narrowly voted to loosen restrictions on sales at gun shows, marking a victory for the National Rifle Association.

Today's Birthdays: Actor Peter Lupus is 68. Singer Barry Manilow is 54. Comedian Joe Piscopo is 49. Actor Mark Linn-Baker is 46. Actor Greg Kinnear is 36. Olympic gold-medal speed skater Dan Jansen is 35. Actor Jason Patric is 34. R&B singer Kevin Thornton (Color Me Badd) is 31. Actor-rapper Herculeez (Herculeez and Big Tyme) is 15.

Thought for Today: "During my 87 years I have witnessed a whole succession of technological revolutions. But none of them has done away with the need for character in the individual or the ability to think." —Bernard M. Baruch, American businessman and statesman (1870-1965).

La Madre Mia Club holds annual retreat

The 11th annual retreat of La Madre Mia Study Club was held in the Ruidosa home of Ruth and Herschel Black on June 11-13. Co-hostesses were Gladys Merritt and Georgia Sparks.

A special "Show and Tell" event was the highlight of the retreat. Members brought items and shared special memories through personal stories relating to each. Items included an antique covered dish, a 1939 song book with Hereford sponsors, World War II dog tags and Navy whistle, a Packard Milling sugar measure, 1950s Rainbow ring, a grandmother's pin, a special pair of father's cufflinks, a high school charm bracelet and dated railroad nails.

Relaxation, "Spinner" on the deck and a tour of new homes and condo construction were participated in by Ruth Black, Linda Cumpston, Betty Lady, Merritt and Sparks.

Couple exchanges vows in Dallas

Anngie Kaneshiro and John Patrick Stevens exchanged marriage vows in an evening ceremony June 10 at Dovie's Old Estate House in Dallas.

The bride is the daughter of Yong Kaneshiro of Dallas and Kenneth Kaneshiro of Jesup, Ga.

Parents of the bridegroom are Mick and Tommie Stevens of Hereford.

The ceremony was performed by Ronnie Couch.

Maid of honor was Linda Foley and best man was Jason Hargreaves.

Bridesmaids were Kristi Morris and Teri Tijerina.

Serving as groomsmen and ushers were Greg Tankersley and Kenneth Morris.

Pianist was Tommie Stevens, mother of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin fitted sheath dress with spaghetti straps and featuring a hand beaded design from bodice to hemline. The chapel length satin train was detachable.

Her veil of tulle was accented with scattered pearls and attached to a beaded headband.

She carried a silk bridal bouquet of spring flowers in light pinks, lavenders and soft yellows.

Bridal attendants wore tank dresses with tops in silver and cream and flowing skirts in platinum satin. They carried bouquets of cream roses.

A reception followed the ceremony. The three layer princess bride's cake was decorated with fresh roses. The groom's cake was double fudge.

After a wedding trip to England, the couple will be at home in Dallas.

The bride is pursuing an accounting degree at Brookhaven College. She is employed as office manager for Crown Energy, an oil and gas firm in Dallas.

The groom graduated from the University of North Texas in December 1997 with a BA in history. He is the head construction manager for Plantation Homes, a homebuilder in The Colony. He is the grandson of former Hereford resident, Mattie Robinson, who now lives in Lake Tawakoni.

Special to the Brand

Students of every major, from accounting to wildlife biology, are building their own Web pages at West Texas A&M University.

Some probably do it in spite of the curriculum, but all University students must eventually produce Web sites of their own because to do so is a condition of CIS 105, a computer information systems offering that became a required course at WTAMU in fall 1999.

Twenty-five percent of a student's grade in CIS 105 is based on a research project in which they must select a topic from their own major field of study, retrieve relevant information found in a variety of Internet sources, and create and publish a Web site on the World Wide Web about the topic.

Each site must contain link to a PowerPoint presentation that synthesizes/summarizes the information found, and each link must be accompanied by a statement of evaluation.

"It is a course that teaches students how to use technology for research and how to manage information overload," Bobbie Hyndman, instructor of CIS, said. "Simply put, students are learning how to learn through technology. CIS 105 should help them through the rest of college."

About 14 sections (classes) of CIS 105 are taught each fall semester at WTAMU, containing 40-50 students each. The course is designed to help people who are learning about computers as well as those with online/computer experience.

The student Web sites remain on the World Wide Web until the end of the semester in which they are created. The sites are then eliminated from the University server to make room for the next batch of projects. But to view some examples of Web pages created by WTAMU students - A's, B's and even an F -- see: www.students.wtamu.edu/cis105. Click on "projects."

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

The Price Is Right Why Am I Broke?

Recently, a client stated, "I know my price is right because my customers are buying, but I sure seem to be going broke." When I asked how he determined his price, he explained his pricing theory. "What my suppliers charge me determines how low I can set my prices. My competitor's prices establish the ceiling. Generally, I try to be somewhere-in-between," he said. I've watched small-business owners for nearly 30 years. In that time, I've found that this "somewhere-in-between" pricing policy is a pretty common practice. I feel that using this system ignores some of the most important elements you should consider when making pricing decisions. In this column, I'd like to help you take an objective look at your pricing strategies. You should be able to tell if your prices are helping you grow a successful business or steering you toward the poor house.

Four Basic Factors

There are four fundamental factors you must consider as you evaluate your pricing strategy. They are:

- 1) Cost. You can't build a successful business without knowing all about your cost structure. Your price must cover both direct and indirect costs. I find that few small-business owners factor in all costs when they set prices. Most owners consider cost of goods sold and operating expenses when they establish price levels. I believe you also need to consider your income needs (opportunity costs), a return on your business investment (money costs) and future cash needs for growth and renewal (longevity costs).
- 2) Value. Regardless of costs, your customers are the ultimate judges of value. If your customers feel that your price is too high, it is. They don't care about your costs or your longevity. Their evaluation of your price is a self-interested judgement of what you're charging for your products or services compared to the quality and quantity they are getting. If you feel the value is less than it should be in your business, you have three choices: 1) you can lower costs so you can reduce prices and still maintain current profit margins, 2) lower prices and give up profits or 3) find customers who are less sensitive to higher prices. All three of these choices can work depending on the circumstances in which you apply them.

3) Competition. Yes, competitors do play a role in fundamental pricing policies. However, they should not set an artificial ceiling for your business.

You should be aware of competitor's prices for obvious reasons. You may choose to compete on price or you may decide to add value for your customers and not worry about having the lowest price.

I recently consulted with a business owner who chose to "out value" his prime competitors. He studied his craft, acquired new knowledge and skills and raised his prices by 50 percent. (Yes, I said 50 percent!) What happened? Did he lose customers? Yes, a few. Did he price himself out of the market? No, because of the newly acquired knowledge and skills, most customers feel that they are still getting good value. Through word-of-mouth promotion only, his business is increasing strongly.

4) Overlap. We need to realize pricing impacts many areas of business performance. The pricing overlap affects marketing decisions, sales levels, financial factors and profit. You need to consider the overlap factor when you set goals for this year. Will a price increase slow sales, or increase profits or both? If we reduce prices, will we increase market share and drive out competition or just lower margins?

Keep these four pricing fundamentals in mind as you adjust your pricing policies this year. Remember, there are two foolish positions in which you can find yourself: priced too high or priced too low. You lose something either way.

SOME BOOKS WORTH READING

Between the Covers

Rebecca Walls
Deaf Smith County Library

Parents how has your summer been so far? Are the children getting restless, bored, irritated and so unruly?

I have the perfect solution for you. Bring them into the Deaf Smith County Library and sign them up for the "Invent the Future" reading club. Even if you are working parents, this program will fit your lifestyle because the reading is done at your convenience.

There is no better way for your child to discover the joy of reading than to read for fun. There are no time limits, no tests to take, no reports to write, just reading for fun, and while they are reading, as an extra bonus, their reading skills improve and they receive prizes like glow-in-the-dark UFOs, stretch aliens and balloon yo-yos. Reading during the summer is especially important for the reluctant reader because each day they don't read is another day they regress, putting them even further behind when school begins again.

Growing up as a reluctant reader myself, and having a child that didn't like to read, I know what you are going through. I also know that child will thank you later when they discover the joy of reading a good book.

Once they discover the author or stories that peak their interest, a whole new world opens. The child that was my reluctant reader discovered auto repair manuals and would spend hours reading them. As an adult, his life's work is auto mechanics and he loves every minute of it.

This week's new book list has some titles that many of you have been waiting for. Jerry B. Jenkins, the co-author of the Left Behind Series, has a novel entitled Though None Go With Me. Set at the turn of the 20th century, Elisabeth Grace LeRoy knows that she wants something more.

Elisabeth promises to deepen her commitment to Christ and to be faithful to that commitment, no matter what. Moments after making that commitment, Elisabeth learns that her father is dying of cancer.

Elisabeth and her widowed aunt live together until Elisabeth turns 18. At that time Elisabeth promised to sell her father's house to her aunt and Elisabeth would then assume responsibility for her own life.

By the end of her junior year of high school Elisabeth has two proposals for marriage. One from Ben Phillips, a college man who is studying for the ministry, and one from Will Bishop, a classmate who has also lost his father and worked three jobs to support his mother and sisters.

Elisabeth feels that she is in love with Ben, but she admires and respects Will for the way he cares for his family. When the U.S. becomes involved in World War II Ben is drafted, giving Elisabeth even more time to make her decision. Elisabeth must also decide what God wants for her life. Elisabeth's life is not easy, and there are times when she questions why, but she does remain true to her commitment.

The Indwelling: the Beast Takes Possession is the seventh in the Left Behind Series by Tim LaHaye and Jerry B. Jenkins. The story begins in the middle of the Seven Year Tribulation. The battle of the ages continues in Heaven until it spills to Earth.

Members of the Tribulation Force are facing their most dangerous challenges. Rayford Steele must escape Israel. Buck Williams must locate a friend. Chloe Williams fears for her and her child's lives while many others are forced to live subversive lives on the edge of the evil one's lair.

Who can and where can safety be found? Who will be the next comrade to die? This is a series you don't want to miss.

Many of you have waited patiently for John Sandford's Easy Prey. Lucas Davenport knows this will be another case with many "small" complications. When he arrives at the white stucco house, after the party, he learns the victim is Alice Maison, one of the biggest and most beautiful models of the area.

Then the complications begin; drugs are involved, one of Lucas' own men is a suspect, and a second body is found stuffed in a closet with a deep dent in his skull.

Then there are the layers and layers of secrets. But nothing prepares Lucas for the old love that suddenly comes back into his life.

Hugh Holton, the best selling author of The Left Hand of God is back with his latest title Time of the Assassins centered around the most controversial story of today. It is believed the CIA is funding the counter insurgent drug lords in Latin American. The money was to fund revolutionaries but instead it is wholesaling crack and cocaine into the inter cities.

Commander Larry Cole has his work cut out for him. He must track down Baron von Rianoczek, the personal representative of the drug lords, a vicious hit man.

Larry Cole has unwittingly crossed paths with the notorious assassin, and twice has foiled the assassin's work. Now von Rianoczek has a new target, this one free of charge - Cole himself.

Oprah's Book Club selection Back Roads by Tawni O'Dell is also available this week. Harley Altmyer should be another carefree college student pursuing the joys of life. Instead, Harley is caught in the stifling coal town struggling to care for his unruly younger sisters. Frustrated and overwhelmed, an orphan with the responsibilities for a family, Harley finds himself in even more trouble.

He wants the no-good Callie Mercer so badly he fears he will explode. In the end Harley's humor and love for his sisters will save them all.

Weather makes the crop

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

The final planting day for cotton rolled around with many area producers wondering if Mother Nature would provide necessary moisture.

As is so often the case, the needed rain came, but with it came complications of either floods or hail at a critical time for the young plants.

David Varner, manager of Hereford Farmer's Co-op Gin, said maybe as much as 1,500 acres near Easter and La Posta were lost to hail; 300 to 400 acres near the Sims community; and some odds and ends in the service area.

The rains which have hit various fields in the last two weeks dumped enough water on especially low-lying fields to cause seedling disease. Seedling disease is often characterized by light coloring and loss turgidity.

"All together, we've lost about 3,000 acres," Varner said. "Some got hit too late to replant. It's still too early to really tell about how the crop will do."

"By July 1, we'll have a better idea of what we are looking at. We always like to see the first bloom by July 10. Closer to July 1, the better," Varner said. "If we get the first bloom by the July 4, we'll be in pretty good shape. You lose potential after July 10."

Farmers in the western portion of Deaf Smith County experienced exactly the opposite situation, with much of their crops not even receiving enough moisture.

"All that out there is dryland and there's not much hope of the crop coming up if those fields didn't get some moisture," Varner said.

Panhandle cotton growers traditionally plant approximately 3.26 million acres and harvest as much as 3.5 million acres. These 25 Panhandle counties produce roughly 3 million bales — half of the state's crop and nearly 25 percent of the entire nation's crop.

Hereford Farmer's Co-op Gin is expecting approximately 35,000 acres from local planters and an additional 5,000 acres from the outlying areas of Dumas, Dalhart, Stratford and Channing.

Varner said not many producers had completely given up on cotton, but more farmers will be planting dryland cotton than in the past.

"Right now, a lot of the dryland doesn't look real good, but it's still too early to tell. A little farther down the road we'll get a better idea," he said.

Local cotton producers know that weather is the biggest challenge of getting the crop up, unlike many of the producers who continuously have to fight the crop destroying boll weevils.

Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation says the mild winters are really good for weevils, but the hot, dry conditions which prevailed early in the year offset the mild temperatures.

"Number of boll weevils trapped is much lower in the northern portion of your area," said TBWEF communication director Michael O'Connor.

Young cotton plants needed moisture to get out of the ground but many acres suffered either hail or seedling damage during storms of the last two weeks. Crop outcome still depends on weather in next few months.

"Even the highest numbers don't look like you're being overrun by weevils."

The foundation has set out traps every 1/10 to 1/20 of a mile around all cotton fields to determine the weevil population.

O'Connor said that from what he could see, local producers had more reason to be concerned with weather conditions than the weevil damage.

TB plagues El Paso dairy herds

Infections could lead to eradication

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A chronic bovine tuberculosis problem may shut down El Paso County dairies—the state's fifth largest milk producer.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is proposing the elimination of El Paso County's multimillion-dollar dairy farm industry in an effort to protect the rest of the state, and eventually the rest of the nation.

Michigan and El Paso County are the only areas in the nation currently with a bovine TB problem. The USDA hopes to keep the disease from spreading.

The county's ten dairy farms, which have about 20,000 cows, would be financially compensated under the USDA's $40 million proposal, though no specifics have been set.

"The goal of the proposal is to create a buffer zone that would protect other herds in the U.S. and more immediately in Texas," said Hallie Pickhardt, spokeswoman for the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service for the USDA. She said the proposal is still in its preliminary stages.

Since 1985, herds in El Paso have been infected with TB, quarantined until they are declared clean and then re-infected, said Carla Everett, spokeswoman for the Texas Animal Health Commission.

Infection of even one cow is cause for quarantine, making it difficult for farmers to sell calves or breeding stock, Pickhardt said. That frustration might make farmers give up the fight.

"It's really a sad situation. Some of the better breeding herds are in El Paso," said James Terrell, spokesman for the Texas Association of Dairy-men. "Some of them have spent a lifetime and even generations building the quality of the herds up."

"Under the circumstances we feel that it's inevitable and that it's the best thing to do for the entire TB situation," said Brad Bouman, co-owner of two El Paso County dairies. "That is if it goes through. This thing's a long way from being a done deal. We won't know anything official until the end of the month."

Until a decision is made, dairy farmers will have about 2 years before the entire plan is implemented and farmers either pick up a new line of farming or move their dairy business to another area, Terrell said.

If the proposal is not implemented, the USDA will review the county's progress at eradicating TB for the next two years, Terrell said. Should there continue to be infection, the USDA would impose stricter regulations statewide.

That means Texas livestock producers — beef cattle or dairy — would be required to test every animal before it leaves the state, he said. The USDA estimates statewide TB testing would cost up to $150 million a year.

"It'll be a real impediment to trade. It would be better for the remainder of the state if El Paso dairies are eliminated," Terrell said. "But it's up to the producers in El Paso. No one's trying to force it on them; it's their decision."

TAHC tackles Johne's disease

They're bright, alert, maintain a healthy appetite, but the animals suffer from severe, chronic diarrhea and become emaciated (thin). That's atypical description of animals affected by Johne's a fatal, untreatable disease that can affect any ruminant, including cattle, sheep, goats, camels and deer.

Although Johne's is not a reportable or regulatory disease in Texas, in the future it could affect trade opportunities.

"For years, Johne's was thought to affect herds primarily in the northern portion of the U.S.," said Dr. Andy Schwartz, Johne's specialist for the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC), the state's livestock health regulatory agency. He said a 1997 study by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's National Animal Health Monitoring System (NAHMS), indicated that at least 12,000 of Texas' 153,000 beef herds may have contracted the disease. A recent NAHMS survey of dairies showed that about 23 percent of the herds across the nation are infected.

The increased interest in Johne's Disease has "spurred" the Texas cattle industry to explore and consider options and alternatives for a voluntary Johne's herd status program. The Texas Johne's Working Group is preparing to introduce a four-level cattle herd status program for cattle.

When implemented, the state's voluntary status program will help identify herds at "low risk" for Johne's. Producers in the program may enhance their marketing potential by providing other producers with a healthy pool of animals.

Johne's progresses slowly, targeting the digestive system and often is unapparent until the animals is well into adulthood. By the time animals show clinical signs of illness, the disease may have spread to herd mates.

"Johne's bacteria 'sets up shop' in the animal's white blood cells in the wall of the intestines," explained Dr. Schwartz. "The animal's body responds by sending in more white blood cells to combat the intruder, and eventually the intestinal walls thicken. Finally, the walls become so thick, the animal can't absorb nutrients, and it develops chronic diarrhea."

Despite a healthy appetite, the animal finally wastes away. Other less obvious signs in the herd can include decreased fertility, lower weaning weights, animals that must be culled sooner, and increased feed costs without related weight gain.

Young animals, from birth to a year of age, are most susceptible to the disease, he said. If a herd is infected, "pooling" the colostrum and feeding it to newborns can accelerate the spread of disease through the herd.

Dr. Schwartz explained that a vaccine for Johne's lessens the severe, clinical signs and shedding of bacteria, but instead of eliminating infection, it only "masks" or diminishes damage in the affected herd.

Plates presented As Holiday Gifts

Advertising plates featuring the calendar for the year arrived in the United States about 1906. A few earlier European plates showing calendars have been found. The plates have a calendar either as a border or as part of the center design. Pictures or other decorations were also part of the design. The name of the store or firm offering the plates was also printed on the face of the plate. It is easy to identify American plates as the full address was usually included. Popularity of the plates diminished after 1929 although some are still being made.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember these hints:
• Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of
• Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
• Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
• Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach

There's a place for EVERYTHING in the Classifieds.
Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information. Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer. Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live. Newspaper is more than just a smart place to advertise. It's an integral part of our lives.

Compact Walsh centers on family room

Three front gables, varied in size, give a welcoming look to the Walsh, a plan that is both contemporary and compact. Brick wainscoting and multipaned windows, one of them arched, add to the visual appeal, as does the wide covered porch.

A spacious and comfortable family room forms the core of this home, with other rooms wrapping around it on three sides and a small patio on the fourth. Tow glass doors that swing open for easy access are next to a gas fireplace tucked in the rear corner. The kitchen's eating bar and the family room's trayed ceiling help define these areas.

Counter space is plentiful in the C-shaped kitchen. Two or three people can work companionably there without getting in each other's way, and the nook is roomy enough for a good-sized table.

A slender sidelight brightens the entry. Straight ahead is a small coat closet, and next to it, a stack of triangular display shelves, ideal for displaying family mementos or other small treasures. To the right is a window-bright room that could be outfitted as a living room, home office, home entertainment center, or you name it. It could even be another bedroom, it that's what's needed.

Though not large itself, the Walsh's master suite boasts a large walk-in closet and a private bathroom. Amenities here include a dual vanity and a shower. Utilities are just outside the door, in a pass-through space that connects the house and garage.

For a review plan, including sealed floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $20 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Oregon 97402. Please specify the Walsh 30-247 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring 300 home plans is available for $12. For more information, call (800) 634-0123.

Murder case isn't all that it appears to be in Deadlocked

David Caruso (left) and Charles S. Dutton give powerful performances in the TV movie Deadlocked, airing Sunday on TBS. Dutton plays a desperate man attempting to prove his son innocent of murder, while Caruso stars as the prosecutor determined to find the young man guilty.

Demond Doyle fits everyone's expectations of the rapist-murderer. After all, he has the street-savvy air of someone who's on the wrong side of the law. His fingerprints are all over the murder scene. He refuses to take the stand in his defense. And he was scientifically linked to having had sexual relations with the victim.

Oh, yes, and he is black and the dead woman is white. Not much room for mitigating circumstances here. This apparent open-and-shut case is tossed into jurors' hands, and they are expected to do their civic duty and move on in Deadlocked, a murder mystery and courtroom drama airing Sunday, June 18, on TNT.

Simple cases don't make great movies. And Deadlocked is great for many reasons, primarily because it plays on such institutional racism that viewers will be watching until the end before they realize what's happening. Even the two stars say they did not figure out what was going on.

This TV movie offers exceptional performances. Charles S. Dutton (Roc) plays Jacob Doyle, a former corrections officer whose son, Demond (Jo D. Jonz, First Time Felon), is on trial for his life. Dutton shows how incredibly powerful his expressions are by simply sitting on the couch in one scene and watching family videos — birthday parties, learning to bike ride — of his son growing up. "I thought the kid was guilty and the father was in really deep denial," Dutton says, recalling his first reading of the script.

David Caruso (NYPD Blue) plays prosecutor Ned Stark, who's so certain of this case that he's on automatic pilot.

"One of the core issues of this piece is how willing we are to characterize somebody when we haven't realized who they are," Caruso says.

Within the movie's first minutes, the son is found guilty, and Jacob Doyle goes berserk. He grabs bailiffs' weapons and takes the jury hostage. Fury is rarely more potent than Dutton playing a man with nothing left to lose. He gives the prosecutor 24 hours to prove his son's innocence.

Though this seems highly improbable, Stark rises to the demand. Much of the movie revolves around him ferreting out the truth. As he searches for evidence about Demond Doyle's life, he also discovers much about his own existence. Stark realizes he's been ignoring his son. Despite the advantages of money, this teen-ager needs an attitude adjustment before he makes serious mistakes.

"He lives in denial that his kid is in trouble, and his marriage is probably on the rocks," Caruso says of his character. "He thinks that everything's OK. That's how people get to Columbine (High School shootings). Those parents are probably obsessed with money and career and they are not home. That's what Deadlocked is about in one sense. It is a recipe for disaster to ignore your children.

"The indifference and our willingness to convict this man for our own agenda and our own needs is terrifying," Caruso says of Demond Doyle.

But Doyle "is by no means an angel," Dutton says, which adds yet another layer to this fascinating whodunit. The insidious bigotry that steers the case is simply a reflection of life today.

Dutton found the rage for his realistic performance by looking inward and asking himself, "What is the most believable way to do this?"

"It reminded me of a theater piece in a way," he says. "The only way I figured how to pull that off was big passions."

SOAP TALK

Hutchison gets around; soap star pens TV movie

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Last seen as Jenna Bradshaw Cooper on Guiding Light, Fiona Hutchison has taken on a new role as Celia on As the World Turns.

She plays a mysterious woman whose actions have repercussions for Simon and Lily Snyder (Paul Leyden, Martha Byrne).

Hutchison also may be familiar to daytime viewers for her role as Gabrielle Medina on One Life to Live. For the past year, she has been teaching students how to be soap actors, but they may have the summer off. Hutchison will be on GL for at least three months.

Peter Parros (Dr. Ben Harris, ATWT) has co-written the new TV movie Something to Sing About.

The movie was produced by World Wide Pictures and stars Irma P. Hall, Darius McCrary and Tamera Mowry. It will air over the summer.

In other news: Victoria Rowell (Drucilla Winters, The Young and the Restless) recently underwent rehab for alcohol dependency. No word yet as to when she will be back to work full-time.

Dear Candace: Our soap club and many friends believe the writers should spice up GL.

Josh (Robert Newman) has a new lady in his life, and Reva (Kim Zimmer) has every right to be happy. We are tired of Josh and Reva breaking up and getting back together. Let them move on with other people.

It's time for new story lines. -Soap Club 206, Evanston, Ill.

Dear Reader: Whatever happens with this story line, it is definitely time to move on. There is a chance GL will have a new
