BREAKING THE CYCLE: Number of teen pregnancies sparks effort to launch center

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Teen pregnancy — a moral issue with community implications — is a growing concern for parents, health and school officials and especially for teen-agers who wind up as statistics.

Each year, unintended pregnancies result in uncountable abortions, or unwanted children, destined to be neglected, abandoned or one more name and number on state welfare rolls.

Life for teen parents takes on new hardships and complications, which most teen-agers are not emotionally, physically or financially equipped to handle. Teen parents are more likely to drop out of school, which perpetuates the cycle of lower paying jobs, increased incidents of domestic violence and new generations of children born to unwed teen parents.

"This year, school officials have predicted at least nine teen-age girls from this district will become pregnant," said Israel Olivo, youth pastor at New Beginnings Church. "Statistics indicate Deaf Smith County has a 10 percent adolescent birth rate — 4 percent higher than the state average of 6 percent."

School officials have said that this number may be even higher, if the girls never seek help from the school counselors or refuse services.

Not only does Deaf Smith County's teen pregnancy rate exceed the state average, it also has one of the highest percentages of women — 40 percent — who receive no or very late prenatal care.

These daunting numbers have led a group of concerned residents to invite the executive director of Care Net Pregnancy Center of Canyon to discuss developing an affiliate in Hereford.

Amy Crowley met with interested parties Wednesday in an effort to begin the process of organizing a Hereford Care Net Pregnancy Center.

"Our centers offer only information for women who find themselves dealing with an unintended pregnancy. We try to equip women with the information they need to make the best choice possible, regarding themselves and their unborn child," Crowley said.

Care Net Centers provide neither birth control, abortions nor adoptions, only full information on all pregnancy options.

"With teen pregnancies on the rise, we are very concerned with preventing unwanted pregnancies. We would like to be able to get our message to middle school and junior high students before sexual experimentation results in an unwanted teen pregnancy," Crowley said.

Care Net Pregnancy Centers' policies direct counselors to promote abstinence as a way of life for teens and unmarried individuals.

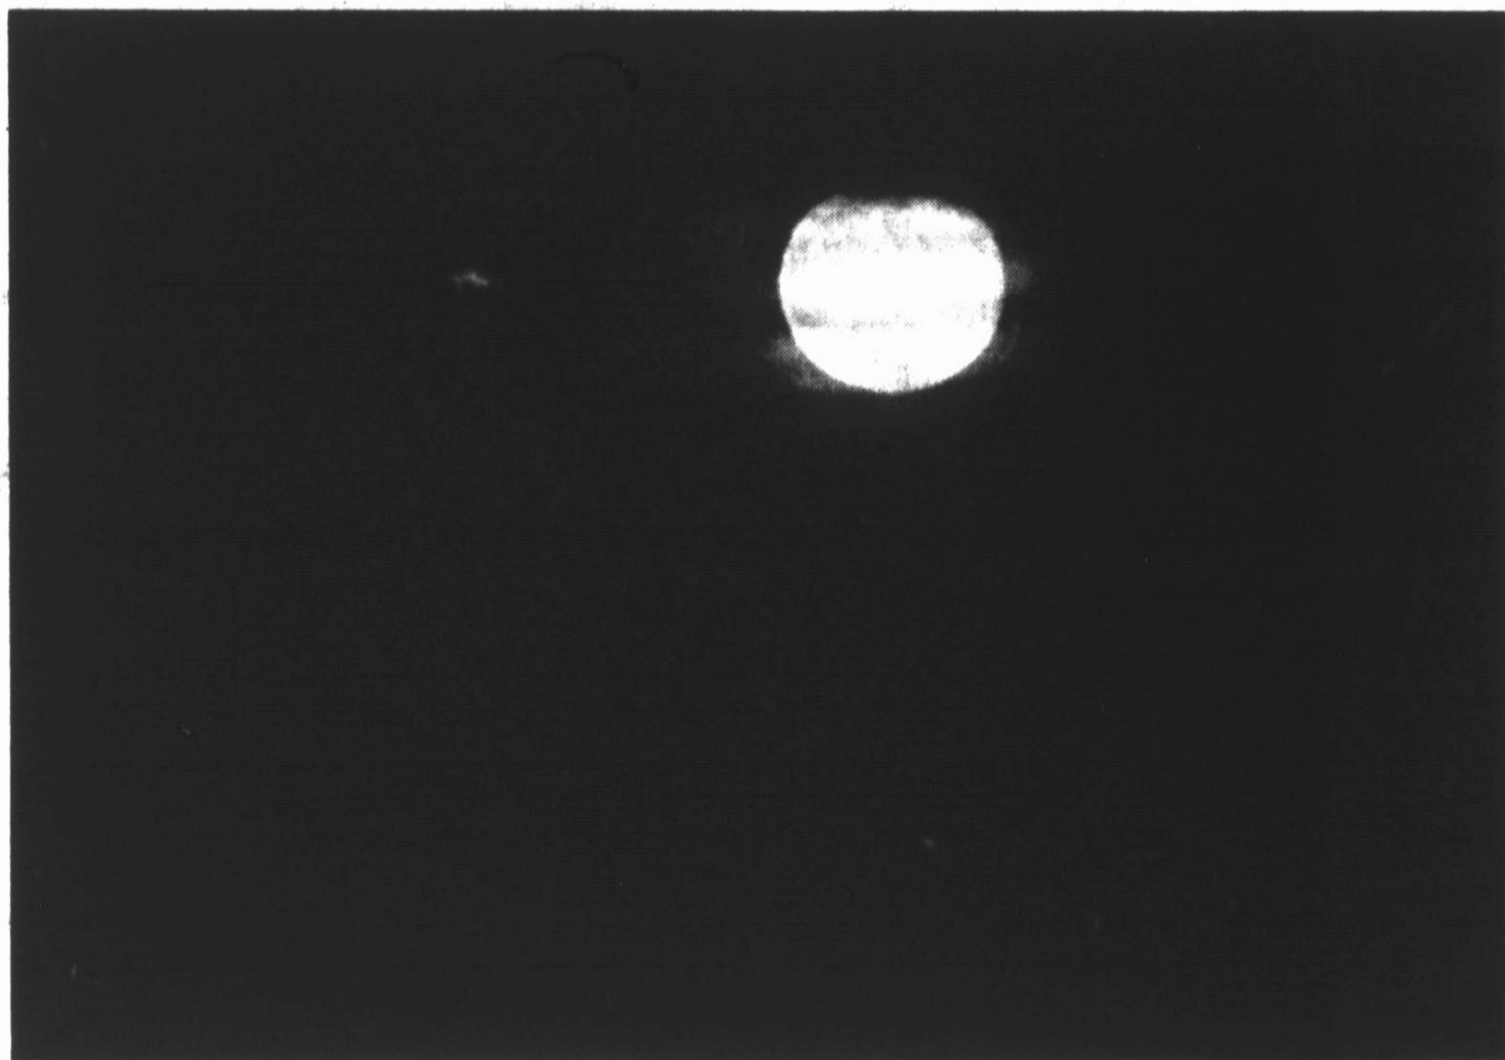

"We will not waiver on this. Every time we counsel with an unmarried client, we tell them the only sure way to prevent unwanted pregnancies is abstinence," Crowley said.

"With the help of this group, I think we can make a great dent in these numbers," Olivo said. "But, first we need to educate the girls and overall population that adolescence is a time for fun, but not in that way."

Crowley, who has been in the Canyon office for more than five years, said her office had counseled 70 women during the first year of

MOON OVER HEREFORD

BRAND/Maun Montgomery

A full moon shines over Hereford Friday night. To the superstitious, a full moon often means a time when unexplained events occur. That might have happened somewhere; however, in Hereford there was nothing out of the ordinary. The Whitefaces, as expected, trounced the Caprock Longhorns 47-20 in a District 3-4A game. ## DROUGHT

■ Adverse weather leaves mark on state, spoils crops, prompts burn bans, causes water woes

By Angela K. Brown

Associated Press Writer

A relentless sun has seared its mark on the state's diverse landscapes.

Grass that's usually lush in the Hill Country is as withered and brown as it is in the High Plains. Stream beds from the Rio Grande Valley to the Piney Woods are empty, leaving cracked ground and dead fish.

The entire state lacks enough moisture for crops, and the worst area is the Panhandle. So far this year the drought has caused $827 million in agricultural losses.

"Drought is even more an insidious natural disaster than, let's say, a hurricane or floods or tornados, because it happens very slowly," U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said during an August visit to a farm in Boyd. "Its impact is more long range, far reaching."

Although the long-running drought resulted in more than 1,000 wildfires this summer, the Federal Emergency Management Agency twice rejected the state's request for financial aid.

Lt. Gov. Rick Perry suggested that politics played a role in the decision. Texas Gov. George W. Bush is Vice President Al Gore's opponent in the presidential race.

FEMA officials, however, said they rejected the requests because most Texas fires were not threatening lives or public health and safety.

One of the worst fires ravaged 1,800 acres of East Texas forest near Nacogdoches, about 150 miles northeast of Houston.

As of last week, burn bans remained in effect for 188 counties — just about the entire state, except for a section of the Panhandle. Last weekend, a ban in Denton County canceled the University of North Texas' traditional

DROUGHT FACTS

- From September 1999 through the end of August, Texas had the eighth-lowest annual rainfall amount on record since 1895.
- "Moderate" to "severe" drought conditions exist across the state except in the Trans-Pecos region, where conditions are "extreme."
- The crop moisture index is "severely dry" in the High Plains, Low Rolling Plains and Lower Valley regions. The rest of the state is "abnormally dry" to "excessively dry."

HRMC in trauma system

By Donald Cooper

Hereford Brand Managing Editor

The Texas Panhandle recently received state designation as a regional trauma system. The Panhandle is the third of 22 designated trauma service areas in Texas to achieve recognized status.

The Panhandle was designated as Trauma Service Center A.

Hereford Regional Medical Center is a member of the Panhandle Regional Advisory Council, the state-designated coordinating body for the regional system. Terry Hazlett, trauma coordinator and Hereford Emergency Medical Service director, serves on the PRAC executive committee, as well as the hospital care committee and quality improvement/medical oversight committee. Hazlett also is active in the Panhandle Emergency Medical Services System, the prehospital arm of the PRAC.

The Texas Department of Health's Bureau of Emergency Management, which conducted a study of the trauma service areas, concluded the Panhandle system is "a strong, functioning regional system."

The chances of surviving a motor vehicle accident are better in areas where organized systems of trauma care are established. Such systems are set up to identify rapidly accident victims with severe injuries and transport them to emergency medical centers for urgent treatment. The Texas program was implemented in 1992, with the Panhandle RAC being established in 1993. The RAC member includes all hospitals, emergency medical services and emergency physicians in the area.

The Panhandle Regional Trauma System Plan was approved by the TDH in 1998 and revised last year.

The system is intended to develop and implement standardized procedures to ensure that victims of trauma are properly identified and transported to the appropriate facility. Under state guidelines, there are four levels of trauma centers:

- Level I: A teaching hospital with all specialty surgeons on duty 24 hours a day, research capability, physicians/staff specially trained in treatment of trauma victims, and all specialized equipment available;
- Level II: A hospital with selected specialty surgeons on duty 24 hours a day, with physicians/staff specially trained in the treatment of trauma victims, and all specialized equipment available;
- Level III: A hospital with emergency physicians on duty 24 hours a day and specialty surgeons available within 30 minutes, physicians/staff specially trained in treatment of trauma victims, and all specialized equipment available; and
- Level IV: A hospital with emergency physician on duty 24 hours a day and emergency physician/staff specially trained in treatment of trauma victims, and specialized equipment available.

• Recall of food products • from biotech corn widens

WASHINGTON — The recall of food products made with an unapproved variety of biotech corn is widening.

Irving-based Mission Foods Co., the largest manufacturer of tortilla products, voluntarily recalled all of its tortillas, taco shells and snack chips made with yellow corn because the flour may contain gene-altered grain that is allowed only in animal feed. The company also said it would switch from yellow to white corn.

The move followed a decision earlier this week by Safeway Inc. to remove all of Mission's taco shells from its stores and an earlier recall of taco shells by Kraft Foods.

A sister company to Mission, Azteca Milling, announced it was recalling all of its flour made from yellow corn. Azteca supplied the flour for both the Mission Foods and Kraft taco shells.

"Our guiding concern has been to protect the safety of the consumer, our customers and our food products," said Steve Brunner, senior vice president of Mission Foods.

The corn, known as StarLink, is not approved for human consumption because of questions about its potential to cause allergic reactions. Federal officials say the health risk is remote.

Mission Foods is a subsidiary of Gruma S.A. of Monterrey, Mexico. Azteca Milling is a partnership of Gruma and Illinois-based Archer Daniels Midland Co.

Mission's recall applies to all of its tortilla products, which are sold under both the Mission name and under a variety of private and generic labels.

• Shuttle's astronauts • to be construction workers

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The crew of space shuttle Discovery begins a week of demanding orbital construction work Saturday, starting with the installation of an aluminum truss onto the international space station.

Japanese astronaut Koichi Wakata will use the shuttle robot arm to lift the boxlike truss from Discovery's cargo bay and attach it to the space station. The truss holds four motion-control gyroscopes and two antennas, and will serve as the base for solar wings to be installed by the next shuttle crew. The solar wings will eventually provide more power to the growing station.

Wakata, who operated the robot arm on a 1996 mission, will crank up the arm again to move a docking port from Discovery to the space station Monday. The port will be used for future shuttle visits.

A pair of two-astronaut teams will make the necessary connections between the new segments and the space station during four back-to-back spacewalks, starting Sunday.

Most of the exterior work, which ordinarily is beamed to Earth via live video, won't be visible on the ground, thanks to a broken shuttle antenna. The lack of live, continuous video will be especially apparent during the four spacewalks that get under way Sunday.

operation; 400 this year; and more than 1,200 in five years. During that time, the number of Deaf Smith County women seeking assistance through her office has continually been on the increase.

"These women need a local place where they can go for information and assistance," Crowley said. "When they come into our office, we will never condone their actions which got them in the situation nor will we condemn them for whatever choice they ultimately decide on."

Care Net Pregnancy Centers offer free pregnancy tests, support services, abstinence and post-abortion peer counseling, housing, parenting classes, and help with financial, medical and material needs.

Along with these services, Care Net Centers sponsor Reality Check seminars, which bring teen-agers face to face with the problems caused by sexual activity and unplanned pregnancies.

The steering committee is being formed to bring this organization to Hereford. Individuals who are interested should contact their minister, Brady Boyd at the Trinity Fellowship Church or the Care Net Pregnancy Center in Canyon. The first committee meeting will be 7 p.m. Oct. 24 at Trinity Fellowship Church.

"Our ultimate goal is to provide girls and women the necessary information to prevent unplanned pregnancies before the need for an abortion arises," Crowley said.

Trauma

The Panhandle has one designated Level III trauma center, Northwest Texas Health Care System in Amarillo, and nine Level IV centers, among them Hereford Regional Medical Center.

Among the strengths of the Panhandle trauma system cited in the report were the regional cooperation, communication within the region, a centralized RAC office, a pre-existing Panhandle Emergency Medical Services System structure, active involvement of non-designated facilities in the process, the LIFESTAR flight program, and informal networking throughout the region.

The survey team cited two areas that need improvement: further identification/documentation of informal network system in the trauma plan, and more consistent quality improvement communication.

The survey team also identified four threats to the system and made recommendations. These are:

- Economics of healthcare — educate payors on value of supporting trauma care;
- Public awareness — increase the level of the public's awareness of the regional trauma system and its purpose;
- Contact failures with communication center — implement quality improvement tracking; and
- Insurance requirements and patient request send trauma patients to a non-designated facility — encourage this facility to obtain Level III designation.

■ Clinton says he will participate in the summit with Barak, Arafat

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton said Saturday he will attend a Middle East summit Monday in Egypt with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

"I will do everything I can to minimize the violence and to do all the preparation necessary to maximize the chances of a successful meeting," Clinton said in a brief statement at the White House before leaving on a political trip to the West.

Clinton has labored over the past eight days to end the crisis in the Middle East, where a lasting peace has been a top priority for his administration.

His first call for a summit was canceled when Egypt and the Palestinians balked. And in organizing the one on Monday, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak had to overcome demands by Arafat that Israel withdraw troops from the entrance to cities held by the Palestinians, lift a siege of West Bank towns and agree to an international inquiry into the causes of the violence.

Violence in the region during the past two weeks has resulted in the deaths of nearly 100 people — most of them Palestinians — and the U.N. Security Council accused Israel last Saturday of using excessive force.

"We should be under no illusions," a weary Clinton said. "The good news is the parties have agreed to meet and the situation appears to be calmer. But the path ahead is difficult. After the terrible events of the past few days the situation is still quite tense."

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, who has been in the region for a week trying to broker an end to the bloodshed, said earlier the summit aimed at ending the worst Israeli-Palestinian violence in decades would have no preconditions.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak had offered to serve as host for the summit at the Egyptian resort of Sharm el-Sheikh.

"President Mubarak and I are convinced that we must make every effort to break the cycle of violence," Clinton said.

With the summit in two days, Clinton said, "We expect that both parties will do all in their power to cease hostilities and halt the violence."

The violence appeared to be abating today, and Israel and the Palestinians appeared to be stepping back from the brink of war.

homecoming bonfire, which had been interrupted only twice since 1935, both times during World War II.

Much of the state endured a summer of record-high temperatures and rainless days.

Several cities shattered all-time high records Sept. 4: 112 degrees in College Station, 109 in San Antonio and Houston. Other areas reported record highs for September: 111 degrees in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and 107 in Del Rio.

On Sept. 5, Austin was sweltering in 112-degree heat, breaking the city's previous all-time high of 107. Thermometers also soared past the 100-degree mark that day and broke daily records in Del Rio, San Antonio, Houston and Lubbock.

At the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the official site for weather records in northern Texas, there was no measurable rainfall for 84 days. The no-rain streak beat the previous record of 58 days.

When things got bad in Abilene, people looked to the sky — and prayed. About 60 to 75 people, including residents of nearby Sweetwater and Merkel, gathered each night for more than a month at an Abilene park for "Forty Days of Reign," organized by pastors from 40 churches.

"We were praying for the reigning of God's power both on our spiritual bodies and in breaking the drought," said pastor Frank Estes.

The 1,000 residents of Throckmorton, about halfway between Wichita Falls and Abilene, said their prayers were answered in September when they received a new water source: a 21-mile pipeline built by volunteers to connect with nearby Graham's water treatment plant in Elbert.

On Sept. 13, Public Works Director Steve Bowlin opened a valve in the new pipeline and closed it five seconds later.

"That's all the water we're going to waste," he said.

While Wichita Falls residents endured water rationing, the Dallas Cowboys practiced on a lush, green field at Midwestern State University. College officials feared that failing to maintain the field could jeopardize their contract with the football team.

BEYOND CONTROL

Unpredictable factors now part of campaign; voters may be taking new looks at hopefuls

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press Writer

Until now, voters have been able to consider Al Gore and George W. Bush in relative peace and quiet. No more.

Middle East conflict and the attack on a U.S. warship, combined with some economic nervousness at home, are introducing unpredictable elements into the campaign and perhaps forcing people to look at Democrat Gore and Republican Bush in new ways, late in the game.

Whether the new elements will be consequential is beyond the understanding of both campaigns. At this point, they are bewildered over how the violence and disquiet might play in the Nov. 7 election — as alert as campaigns always are for a so-called October surprise.

On one hand, Democrats consider Gore's years of experience as vice president a strength for him when matters overseas take a dangerous turn — a point Republican strategists and supporters do not dispute.

"I can see how that might make people look at the candidates differently, like, 'Can they lead us at a time like this?'" Mike Scanlon, a Bush supporter and General Motors project manager, said while awaiting the Republican nominee's speech at a Pontiac, Mich., truck assembly plant.

Said Democrat Dennis Dochterman at a Gore event in Cedar Rapids, Iowa: "When there's uncertainty, people are less inclined to take a chance."

On the other hand, it is a Clinton administration-mediated peace process that is falling apart between Israelis and Palestinians, and an economy that Gore has been running on that is causing some worries, with inflation up and the stock market swooning before rebounding Friday.

Gore strategists prefer smooth economic trends, public satisfaction with the nation's overall direction, and no rude shocks — however unrelated to the campaign — in newspaper headlines.

On Friday, a day after suspected terrorists blew a hole in the destroyer USS Cole in the port of Aden, Yemen, leaving 17 U.S. sailors dead, neither candidate was jousting outwardly for advantage.

The White House was playing it somewhat carefully, too, even while offering a platform for Gore to show his experience.

President Clinton's spokesman, Jake Siewert, welcomed Gore back as the candidate interrupted campaigning for a second day to join Clinton in meetings. But the White House did not exactly place him at the center of its crisis management.

"I think it was his decision to come back here," Siewert said. "But the president ... always has appreciated his work on the Mideast peace process."

While saying he'd let "the experts" decide whether the situation helps Gore, spokesman Chris Lehane took the occasion to trumpet the candidate's strengths.

"The bottom line is that he is involved because he has a wealth of experience on these issues," Lehane said while flying to Washington. "He is a valuable part of the foreign policy team at the White House."

Dick Cheney, Bush's running mate, cautioned against looking at the events through a political lens. "It's a tragedy anytime lives are lost," he said. "I don't think you can evaluate it in terms of political win or defeat for anybody."

Given that Gore and Bush have not voiced major differences on Middle East policy, Andy Kohut of the Pew Research Center questioned whether the violence there will mean much in the election.

Gore may have rushed back to Washington, "but it's not as if he is being summoned home to find a way for peace, or to find a way to wage war," Kohut said.

A similar sentiment was voiced in Cedar Rapids by Gore supporter Chuck Silliman.

"I think this administration can bring some stability to things if anybody can," he said.

"But I'm also impressed with what Bush had to say about politics stopping at the water's edge."

Kohut noted, however, that each day devoted to problems abroad is one less day for Gore to pitch his prescription drug plan, challenge Bush or tangle with the Republican on domestic issues where he has an edge.

About three weeks are left for that, absent persistent distraction, after the candidates lie low for a few days to prepare for their final debate.

"What it might do is take attention away from the domestic issues and that, I think, would be bad news for Gore because he has more to gain from a focus on health care than Bush does," Kohut said.

But presidential historian Henry Graff of Columbia University said: "If we get into a critical situation, we're going to look for tried hands."

As for October surprises, Republicans feared that President Carter would pull one off in 1980 by winning the release of American hostages in Iran in time to take credit from voters and turn a looming defeat into victory. He didn't.

"If we get into a critical situation, we're going to look for tried hands rather than new hands."

WE Love THIS TOWN

SOME ADVANTAGES A BIGGER CITY WILL NEVER HAVE

Have you ever noticed, the bigger the town, the bigger its problem? In this town, there's a real sense of belonging. Neighbor helping neighbor. It's a great place to get involved in the schools, do some volunteer work, and support local businesses. That way, you know you're helping to make this town a better place for everyone. It gives this town some advantages a bigger city will never have.

YOU Said It!

"You should be getting organized, but don't do too much because all you'd be doing is spinning your wheels. There just won't be any real decision before April."

aide to Texas House Speaker Pete Laney, making a suggestion to communities that are planning to make proposals to the state should the Legislature approve a new round of prison construction.

EDITORIAL

Speaker's aide has good idea

Deaf Smith County officials should take the advice of an aide to Texas House Speaker Pete Laney and continue to organize to present itself as the right site for a new prison.

Although two powerful lawmakers said last week the Texas Legislature will not follow through on a recommendation by state corrections officials to authorize spending about $500 million for three new prisons, Laney's aide Stacy Nicchio said no one knows what the Legislature will do.

Nicchio said prison construction will be considered when the 77th Legislature convenes in January 2001. The lawmakers will receive the Texas Department of Criminal Justice's new projections on the prison population. When those figures are provided, the Legislature will decide what to do and — as she said — who knows what will happen?

Because any consideration of new prison construction likely will not come up before next April, Nicchio said Deaf Smith County should be getting organized to present its case.

That's good advice.

COMMENT

Does war have to be prelude to settlement?

Must war precede a lasting peace settlement in the Middle East? The warfare exploding in the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and in numerous Arab-Israeli towns in the past week suggests so.

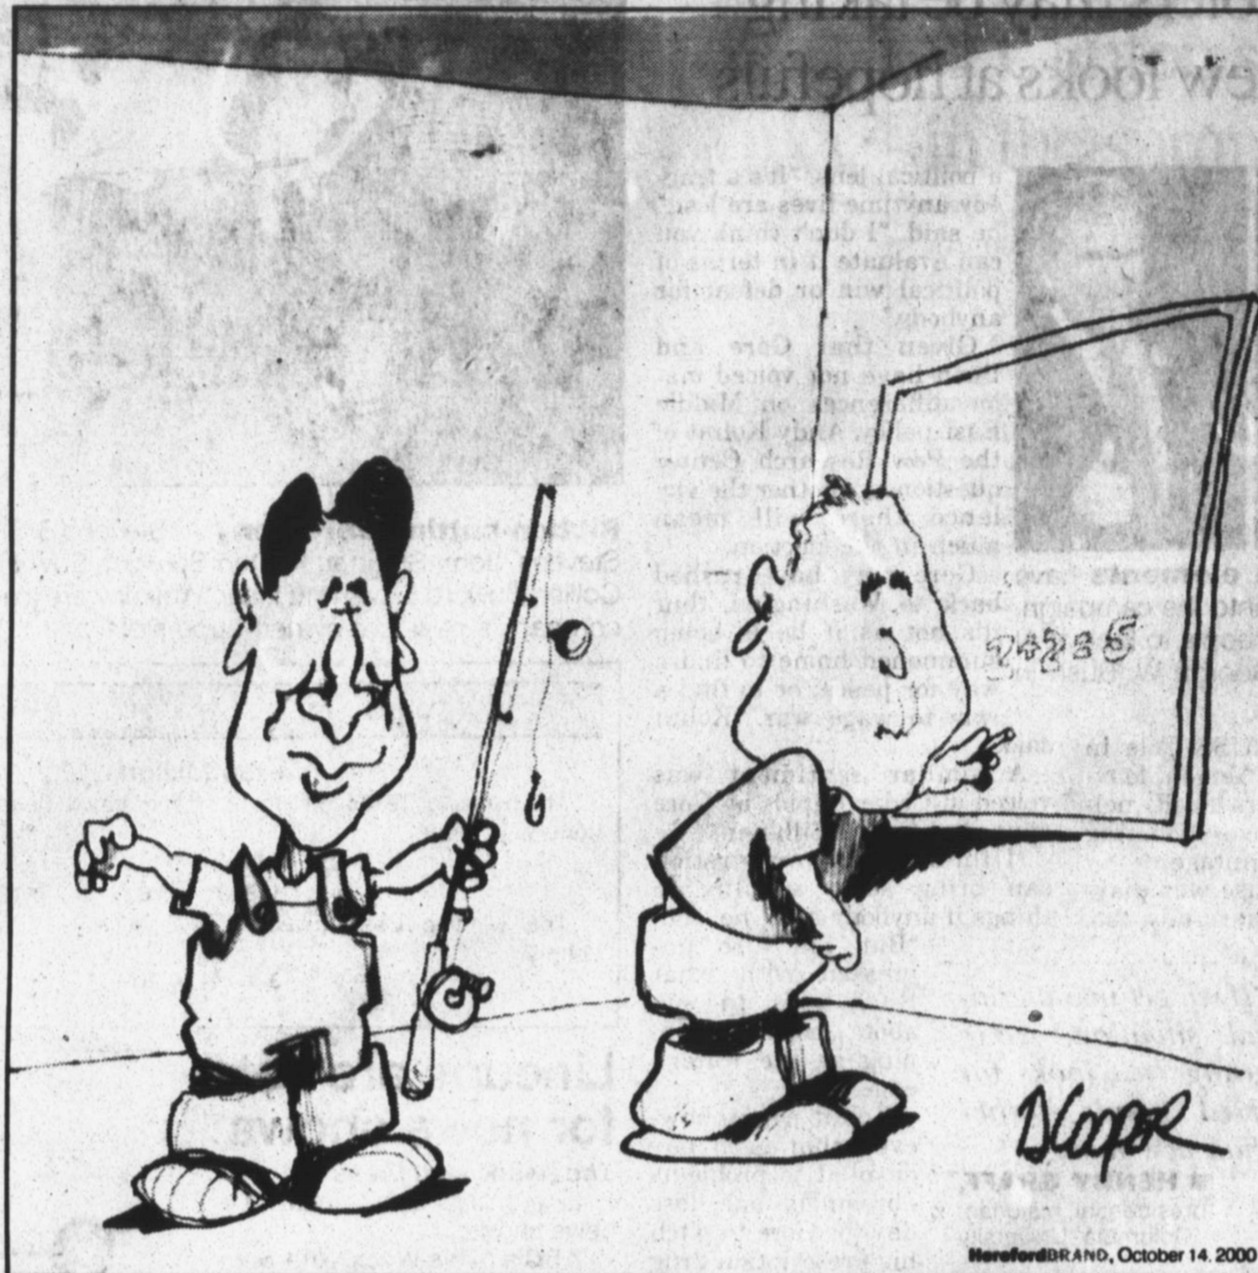

The villains, victims and hostages are many in this tumultuous episode between Palestinians and Israelis. The war's booty is no small treasure: Jerusalem.

Criticism has come from both sides that the other's leader could have taken action to stem the violence. Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak could have stopped (Israeli opposition leader Ariel) Sharon from visiting the holy site. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat could have restrained his police from shooting at Israeli armed forces.

Both men are under pressure from militant elements in their populations not to cede too much on the question of Jerusalem. Arafat also is being squeezed by Arab leaders in other countries.

Barak and Arafat did agree, during discussions this week in Paris with U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, to order a troop pullback from three locales that have been flashpoints — though it's not clear that alone will bring peace to the streets. They left Paris after differing on who should conduct an investigation of the fighting.

My 'other' grandmother

When I was growing up, I didn't know my "other" grandmother very well. Looking back over the years, it's sad how little I really knew about her.

There was Grandmother, my mother's mother, and Mrs. Cooper, my father's mother, and although they lived less than 20 miles apart, I guess the distance could have been measured in light years, not miles.

For much of my childhood, I lived on a farm about 4 miles north of Nashville, a small town in southwestern Arkansas. Less than a quarter-mile down the narrow, gravel lane from our house was Grandmother's house.

Unless I was sick, I think I was down at Grandmother's every day. During the school year, I'd get off the bus at the end of the lane and walk to Grandmother's house, where she and my mother usually would be waiting on the front porch.

If Hollywood were casting a Southern grandmother, Grandmother would have been the perfect choice. She was a soft pillow of a woman, who didn't mind her "chilluns" piling on her. She always had cold biscuits or corn bread in the cabinet or pie in the refrigerator, just waiting for a hungry child. She also had an amazing ability to make each of her grandchildren feel special.

My "other" grandmother may have had those same qualities, but I didn't know. She was a stranger whom I saw infrequently, usually on a Saturday afternoon when my father, a truck driver who was only home on weekends, would drive to Lockesburg to visit his mother at the L-shaped house perched on a bluff overlooking the Kansas City Southern tracks.

While Dad visited with his mother, usually drinking coffee at a little table in the kitchen, I'd entertain myself. After an hour or so, we'd get back in the car and drive back to Nashville. I usually got a powerful hug from my "other" grandmother, who was more solid and less cuddly than from Grandmother.

In our family, it was never mentioned, but I think the reason I wasn't around my "other" grandmother more was simply because she and my mother didn't get along. Because Mom had no intention of going to visit her mother-in-law on her own, she wouldn't make the 15-mile from Nashville to Lockesburg so I could visit with my grandmother.

When Dad would go to Lockesburg, my mother usually would develop a sick headache, which would keep her home. She usually recovered quick enough to have a big supper of fried chicken, mashed potatoes, snap beans, hot rolls and a homemade pie or cobbler ready when Dad and I got home.

I didn't even know my "other" grandmother's real name until I was 8 years old and I read my grandfather's obituary in the Nashville News. The obituary reported that among his survivors was "his wife, Spencer Norwood Cooper of Lockesburg."

She was born Spencer Elizabeth Norwood in 1890 in Cerro Gordo, Indian Territory (now Oklahoma). Her father, Lewis Norwood, had a trading post on what was then the Choctaw Nation land. He later would return to his farm in Sevier County, Ark. He operated a mercantile store in Lockesburg, served several terms as Sevier County clerk and as Lockesburg's municipal judge.

My grandfather was a gypsy at heart, a salesman who spent most of his life on the road. Spencer didn't enjoy the nomadic life, preferring to tend to her garden, taking care of her children, and playing canasta with her friends, but she followed him on the all the moves, some of which were from necessity — it was the Depression — and probably some just because he was always chasing rainbows.

During one year, the family — my grandparents, my father and his sisters, Elizabeth and Kathryn — moved from Lockesburg to DeQueen, Ark., then to Memphis, Texas, to Clarendon and Tyler, then to San Francisco, where they stayed a couple of months before moving back to San Antonio, before returning to Lockesburg.

I didn't really get to know Grandmother — I stopped calling her Mrs. Cooper when I was almost a teen-ager — until I was in college and working as a stringer for the Texarkana Gazette.

On Friday nights, I drove all over southwestern Arkansas to cover high school football games for the Gazette. Some of the games I had to cover were in Idabel or Broken Bow, Okla., or Nashville, DeQueen, Ashdown or Horatio, Ark. With the exception of Nashville, I had to drive through Lockesburg to get to these towns. So, I'd leave Arkadelphia early enough that I could stop in Lockesburg and visit Grandmother, sitting at a small table in her kitchen, drinking coffee and just talking.

When she died in the spring of 1971, I mourned her passing, but I was glad that in the last two years of her life I had gotten to know Grandmother, my "other" grandmother.

To tell the truth

Mauri Montgomery

Hello, Hereford.

With only 23 days remaining before Election Day, there appears to be a great amount of consternation over Campaign 2000 among political pundits.

After three debates between Democratic and Republican hopefuls, two presidential and one vice presidential, almost all of the political analysts privately suspect that someone in this year's presidential election campaign might be telling the truth. Worse, whoever is telling the truth might also be capable of restoring the public's faith in the nation's highest office.

Where, the panelists are wondering, will their careers go if national politics becomes an honest business? A few have secretly confided their worst fears — "into the toilet if the Texan wins."

"So, you think Bush is telling the truth?" I asked one of the analysts under the condition of anonymity.

"At the moment, I'm not sure. Let's just say I suspect him. If he is guilty of telling the truth, it will come out sooner or later. God, help us!"

I told him the experts contend we Americans should make our Campaign 2000 selection based on a candidate's ability to address the key issues of the day — which also happen to be the same key issues that faced our nation eight years ago.

"Exactly, it makes our job easier if nothing is ever solved," he said. "Beyond that, don't you think the voters would rather support someone who is telling them what they want to hear? Truth always makes the American electorate uncomfortable. They're not used to it."

Just for kicks, and in the interest of finding the guilty party, I decided to host my own private mini-debate between George W. Bush and Al Gore.

"Good afternoon Governor Bush and Vice President Gore, and thank you for agreeing to this informal telephone debate," I said officially. "Our space in this column is limited, so I would ask both of you to keep your answers brief and your sniping at one another to a minimum. Let's begin, shall we?"

Q: (This is directed to both of you and Governor, I'm asking you to respond first.) While I listened to your first debate, I was also working on my dripping bathroom sink faucets. I made a mess of it, now the faucets leak worse than ever. As one of your constituents, what sort of help could I get with those faucets.

BUSH: Mauri, I don't know anything about plumbing either, so I sympathize with your problem. But I think every Texan, actually I mean every American, is responsible for their own plumbing. You should hire a professional before you really screw it up.

GORE: Well, I agree with the governor that I have no expertise in fixing faucets — even if I may have helped invent them. However, I believe every American should have faucets that never leak and I would commit several billion from the budget surplus to insure they have the resources they need to buy a new sink, or at the very least, new faucets.

Q: Governor, you took some criticism and even fell slightly in the campaign popularity polls after you tendered a disparaging remark about a broadcast reporter. Do you think that comment was appropriate for a presidential candidate to make, and would you do it again? For example, would you say that about me.

BUSH: By now, you should know that most Texans call a spade, a spade. I make no apology to that particular reporter or to anyone else. In my opinion, the reporter is an #$$*&^! Oops, I did it again ... What was the rest of the question?

Oh yeah. No, I think we could get along. Besides, I met your lovely wife when I visited your fair city a number of years ago, and it was my observation that evening that she was disparaging you pretty well, much better than I could.

Q: In that vein, Mr. Vice President, how do you feel about the name calling that has surfaced in this campaign, specifically Democratic campaign ads that call the governor a babbling, bumbling idiot?

GORE: I haven't seen the ads, and I didn't say those things personally. I have never attacked the governor's character like he has mine. Listen, I've said all along that a candidate's character has nothing to do with this election — the issues do. That's why, if I'm elected president, I will do my very best to take another 10 or 20 billion from the budget surplus and apply it to all the issues.

Q: Gentlemen, a great many voters still seem undecided about either of your abilities to manage the nation's interests. In fact, this has been the closest presidential race within recent memory. Is there anything you can offer my readers that might convince them to get off the fence and vote for you?

Submission not in her vocabulary

Submission is supposed to be a virtue. Unfortunately, like patience, it must be a virtue I was born without.

Submission just is not my thing. I know the Good Book says we're supposed to submit to the existing governments, our bosses, state leaders, parents and — heaven forbid — our husbands.

When it comes to submission, it's just something I'm not very good at. All too often, I find myself in the position of having to submit to some authority, who is just flat wrong. There is no telling how many times I've had to bite my tongue to keep from telling certain individuals just how wrong they are.

Dianna F. Dandridge

It's not that I believe I am always right, but there better be a pretty good argument presented if someone really wants to persuade me I am wrong.

It's not just men I don't like the idea of submitting to. I simply don't want to submit. Ask my mother. She'll tell you of my problems of submission. There are probably others, who would be happy to provide full details of my lack of submission, but I'd just assume leave them out of this discussion.

Maybe it has something to do with the zodiac sign I was born under — Capricorn, the sea goat. Not that I believe in that stuff, but from all the charts and posters I've read and laughed about, I supposedly don't like to take orders. I would much rather issue them.

One of those silly career aptitude tests we had to take in high school confirmed that. After the results came in, the counselor asked if I had ever considered a career in the military. I remember being completely offended when he told me I would make an excellent drill sergeant. Forget drill sergeant. I want to at least be a five-star general.

To label me only as strong-willed may be politically correct, but it certainly gives the wrong impression.

In truth, I can't take full fault for my non-submissive attitude. Sometimes sincerely wannabe helpful people just get in the way of my plans and goals. When this happens, my level of frustration increases accordingly. The truth of the matter is I would rather do something my way (usually the right way) rather than let someone else tell me how to do a project (their way). Then have to turn around and undo what they wanted me to do and then do it the right way.

Unfortunately, it is usually men who want to pass their (uh, uh, supposed) expertise off onto my less-than-expert concerns. This, of course, usually brings about some rather derogatory comments directed at the uncomprehending males.

It's got to be a genetic thing, because males of all ages seem to think they can tell me what to do and how it needs to be done. Just ask my son, he'll be happy to tell me how I'm supposed to do everything from manage the household budget to how I should have cut my hair.

Needless to say, he's already learned the chances of me following his directives have about as much chance of succeeding as that proverbial snowball in that proverbial hot place. More than once he has borrowed a line from one of his favorite movies — the Prince of Egypt — and informed someone: "That's why she'll never get married."

I guess for the most part women either have no desire to have me submit or are in tune enough to know it's probably not going to happen.

As things stand, I guess I'll have to accept the fact it was a man's world too long and they are unwilling to give up on the concept that women should be submissive.

It just ain't gonna happen. That's all there is to it.

Community blessed with aquatic center

Dear Editor: Hereford is immensely blessed to have our aquatic center, and I encourage more of our citizens to introduce themselves to this fabulous facility.

Though there are numerous features deserving praise, I especially want to commend the water aerobics program and invite the community to participate in this wonderful activity. Not only is the exercise fun, but the instructors are delightful and add much charm to our sessions. We enjoy a heated pool, year-round scheduling, comfortable shower facilities, affordable fees, and the first session is free.

Young people to senior citizens enjoy their choice of workout time and the option of exercising in the deep or shallow ends of the pool. Many who are recovering from joint surgery or stress injuries or who suffer chronic pain, such as arthritis, especially appreciate the unique aspects of water exercise. In fact, numerous participants are willing to travel from other communities to take advantage of the therapeutic benefits and say they're so grateful to have the Hereford facility available.

I've personally attended water aerobics with my husband for over a year, which we began to accommodate my chronic pain. I have fibromyalgia and could no longer tolerate other exercise, even the beloved walks I took with my husband.

To my delight, I discovered that no matter how tired or painful I feel, slipping into the pool and being released from the effects of gravity places me on an even playing field with healthy people. I can actually achieve a toning, cardiovascular exercise that improves my flexibility and energy levels. It's made such a difference to my quality of life, and everytime I leave for a session, I feel such gratitude that this opportunity is available to me.

An added bonus is that my husband and I can exercise alongside one another, enjoying each other's company as we did on our walks, but being able to work at our own pace or level of difficulty. Whereas, on our walks, I was always holding him back.

Not only that, but it isn't necessary to know how to swim. We're supported by flotation belts, which allow a non-swimmer like me to work out in the deep end, where my husband and I both get a more effective workout, and I don't suffer from standing or walking on the hard, concrete bottom of the shallow end.

If anyone suffers chronic pain, such as arthritis or fibromyalgia, a visit with their physician should reveal whether water aerobics is suitable for them. It might make a healthy difference for others, too.

Dog 'show' successful

Dear Editor:

Once again the Humane Society of Deaf Smith County expresses thanks to the people of Hereford, for making our efforts such a success!

In September we held our second successful Low Cost Shot Clinic, and in October we held what we hope to be the first of many "Adoption Days" in Dameron Park. Public response to both was phenomenal!

Despite the cold dismal weather on Saturday, we successfully placed 16 dogs with families. These were stray local animals that would have other wise been euthanized. Thanks to all those families that came to see the animals, and especially to those who adopted a pet. We encourage folks looking for a specific type of dog or cat to periodically call or visit the Hereford Animal Shelter.

Personal thanks go to the Hereford Police Department for their support; the many local merchants who posted our flyers; The Hereford Brand for great news articles and stories; KPAN; KNNK; and everyone who helped us spread the word.

Each HSDSC member has a special "Thank You" for Dr. Ronda Clark for once again acting as our vet at the September Shot Clinic. Her positive and caring attitude was a genuine blessing to everyone involved.

Our vision for the future is a community of educated pet owners living in an environment free of strays and animal disease, and each successful project encourages us that our vision is attainable.

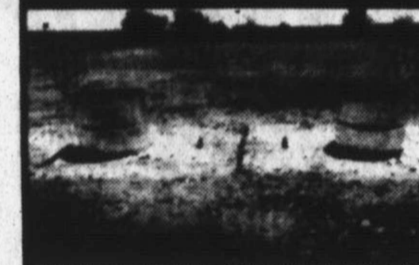

Thanks again, Hereford! You are the best, and we are excited about our future!

Gun safety lock distribution is halted

Pauline Word
Texas Press Association

AUSTIN — The supplier of the gun safety locks that Texas began distributing last month to parents has halted distribution because a possible defect could cause the locks to spring open.

Gov. George W. Bush's Criminal Justice Division, which oversees the Project ChildSafe gun safety program, contacted the nonprofit agency supplying the locks after hearing reports that locks it provided in Tennessee came open when hit or dropped at a certain angle.

"We hadn't received any complaints from any of the communities but we thought it prudent to take precautions," Bush spokesman Michael Jones said.

The agency, the National Sports Shooting Foundation, last week ceased distribution of the locks and called on the manufacturer to stop production until the potential problem can be identified and corrected. The cable locks can only be used on unloaded guns and are threaded through the weapon's firing mechanism to prevent it from discharging.

Last month San Antonio police agencies made the initial distribution of 10,000 locks to local parents. A police spokeswoman said the public had been informed to discard the locks, return them to a police officer or bring them back to a local police station.

New locks will be distributed once the supplier has completed its investigation and provided new shipments, Jones said.

The state already has distributed 21,000 locks to 14 law enforcement agencies, however, most have not given them to the public yet. The agencies cover the cities of Addison, Baytown, Converse, Killeen, Marble Falls, Mercedes, Paris, Plano and Temple and the counties of Bexar, Borden, El Paso, Navasota, Nueces and Zapata.

Project ChildSafe is a five-year, $5 million program to provide 5 million free child safety locks and firearm safety to Texas parents.

Abortion pill requires parental notification

Texas' parental notification law extends to the drug mifepristone, the so-called "abortion pill," and doctors must notify a minor girl's parents before prescribing the drug as a method of terminating a pregnancy.

Spokeswoman Heather Brown said Attorney General

John Cornyn made a statement to the Associated Press about the drug but had not issued a formal opinion. She said Texas Family Code states that parents must be notified before any minor child could receive prescription drugs so the pill would fall under the same guidelines.

The parental notification law requires physicians to contact at least one parent 48 hours before performing a surgical abortion or administering the pill to a girl 17 or younger.

On Sept. 28 the Food and Drug Administration approved the use of the pill, know by the trade name Mifeprex, or commonly referred to as RU-486, in the United States for the termination of pregnancies of 49 days or less.

Education database helps Texas schools

Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander launched the nation's first state education database to help parents, teachers and school administrators improve their school systems.

The online database, www.aimsdatabase.org, contains special reports, student performance and financial data for all Texas schools the comptroller has reviewed. It also includes success stories that school districts can use to improve their own educational systems.

Among the ideas, Mount

Pleasant Independent School District adopted a photo ID card that allows students to pay for meals, and Socorro Independent School District officials set aside more than $100,000 to help teachers buy computers through interest-free payroll deductions.

Other highlights

• Texas Education Agency last week named San Antonio

special education teacher Linda DeMino of Alamo Heights Independent School District as the Texas Elementary Teacher of the Year and Houston-area high school math teacher Lorraine Maneen of Spring Branch Independent School District as the Texas Secondary Teacher of the Year.

• The Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission and Continental Airlines and Southwest Airlines reached an agreement that will reduce the airlines' nitrogen oxide emissions by 75 percent at Houston's Bush Intercontinental and Hobby airports. The agreement avoids the threat of an airline lawsuit to block the TNRC's proposed clean air plan.

Truth

GORE: I think my opponent's philosophy on the issues of education, tax cuts, health care and social security is vague and lacks heart and compassion. Trust me, if I'm elected president, no one but the rich will suffer. And let's not forget I will mandate that every American family will have working faucets like the one's I designed back in Tennessee.

BUSH: I believe this election is about values, change and the character of the man who might become your next president. I want the job, but I won't sell my soul to get it. In my mind, Texas is nearly as big the rest of the United States anyway. I have faults and I recognize them. I'm not a plumber and I don't pretend to be. But I won't hire a bureaucrat to do the job for me unless I'm really interested in screwing up my leaking faucets even more than they already are.

Herd tramples Caprock, 47-20

■ Whitefaces claim fifth consecutive win with huge offensive and defensive displays

By Jeff Blackmon
Hereford Brand Sports Editor

Any worries or questions concerning the Hereford Whitefaces offense and whether or not they could play two halves consistently were quickly put to rest Friday night as the Hostile Herd mangled Amarillo Caprock 47-20 at Whiteface Stadium.

There was no doubt that the Herd's offense once again is a force in District 3-4A as the Whitefaces totaled 493 yards and seemed to make plays on the ground and in the air while the Longhorns could not stop senior quarterback Cody Hodges and the Herd's attack.

Boys athletic director and head football coach Craig Yenzler said he felt his offense put everything together on the field and played with intensity and determination.

"I think they are playing with a lot of confidence," Yenzler said. "They believe in the system we've put in and that is the key."

"The shotgun has been real good to us," Yenzler said.

The Hereford head coach also said he believes his offensive players are going onto the field with the understanding that if they play the way they are able to, they will not be stopped.

"They've sold out to our system, and consequently, they really don't think anybody can stop them," Yenzler said. "They feel like they've stopped themselves more this year than anyone else has stopped them."

Hodges led the Whitefaces to the end zone six times including two quick scores at the end of the first half that broke Caprock's will. Hodges also compiled 257 yards in the air while completing 21 of 25 passes, and he rushed seven times for 46 yards. Hodges said he credits the offensive line for their depth and intensity during games and for giving him time to throw.

"Our line doesn't get a lot of credit and tonight I was able to sit back, and I saw the whole field," Hodges said.

The senior QB also pointed out that on every play it seems like the offensive lineman never quit. On several plays Friday night, Hodges said he would be trying to create a play by scrambling up field and several of the offensive lineman would be hustling up field right beside him to make hits.

"When I run down field I have offensive linemen chasing me down and picking up blocks," Hodges said.

Sophomore offensive lineman Tim Schlabs said the line takes pride in giving Hodges time in the pocket to make plays happen.

"We worked really hard on giving Cody time," Schlabs said. "It is our top priority that no one touch number 10 (Hodges)."

The Whitefaces also showed their Amarillo foe that they have two lethal offensive weapons in senior receiver Slade Hodges and junior receiver Geoffrey Marquez. S. Hodges and Marquez rank second and third behind Caprock's senior wide receiver J. Fields, but S. Hodges said he felt their team showed that two good receivers are much better than just one.

"We are not just a one man receiver corps," S. Hodges said. "The defense can't just focus on one receiver. Every receiver on every route expects to get the football and that is just the mentality that we have."

S. Hodges caught eight passes for 110 yards Friday, and Marquez caught seven passes seven passes for 78 yards. Marquez said the Whitefaces receivers felt like they had something to prove on the field, and they did it.

"We just wanted to go out and get the job done," Marquez said. "We wanted to show that our receivers are the best out there."

Senior fullback Kyle Artho and junior tailback Juan DeSantiago filled the hole left by Zambrano successfully for the second straight week combining for 146 yards and three touchdowns. Artho said he is glad they have been able to step in and help the team.

"Our team really gelled together this week," Artho said. "Juan really did a good job of stepping up also."

The Longhorns (3-3, 1-2) came into Friday's game boasting the district's top receiver along with a revamped offense, but Hereford's defense quickly disposed of Caprock's aspirations of leaving Hereford with another district win by stopping the Longhorns after they recovered an early fumble placed them in scoring position. The Hereford defense was able to hold them back while they went three and out and missed a field goal try.

Senior strong safety Richard Salinas said he felt they never allowed Caprock to get comfortable with its passing game.

"This game we stepped up, and we don't lose at home," Salinas said.

Senior defensive end Gilbert Hernandez said he thought the game also showed the defense's depth with

Hip-deep in hunting catalogs? We need a new camo pattern!

We are about hip-deep in hunting catalogs at our house. Others are likely in similar shape.

The annual mail-order avalanche seems to start earlier every year. I think we received this season's first must-have listing of hunting merchandise back in the rarified days of July, hard on the heels of the last of the stack of fishing catalogs that constituted the spring and summer landslide.

I believe the initial offering came from Mack's Prairie Wings, or maybe Herter's. Whichever, it spoke of the massive promise of fall migration, assuring prospective purchasers that an excellent waterfowl season was in the offing, and that the wise should begin stocking-up on gear now.

Hard to get fired-up about duck and goose hunting in the midst of century-mark temperatures and the worst drought in years.

The cavalcade of catalogs keeps coming in all shapes and sizes, some with beautiful hunting art on their covers and color illustrations of merchandise, others in plain black-and-white newsprint format that sometimes makes it hard to tell just what you're buying.

Seems as though there are more and more of the upscale specialty catalogs that are long on hype, short on selection, and rife with merchandise that sports eyebrow-raising price stickers and is of questionable practicality.

Even in some of the old-line catalogs the prices can be downright astonishing...Your basic hunting shirt for $59...An ear-flapped cap, if you can find one, starting at $29 and up...A decent hunting coat that will turn the wind and rain and snow and keep you warm will set you back a couple of hundred bucks...Ouch!

The culprit in some of this cost is the name-brand designer camouflage pattern adorning the fabric of the garment. If you want Mossy Oak Break-Up, or Shadowgrass, or Forest Floor, or if you want a Realtree Advantage look, or Backland, you're going to have to show-off plenty of bucks in order to disappear.

Fortunately for us guys on a budget, there are still a few catalogs that also offer basic brown camo patterns in their lines of hunting clothing. Their cost is substantially less than the designer patterns. The basic brown splotches

The Sportsman's Den

By Jim Steiert

may not look as in-vogue as the designer stuff, but if you get in cover and are still, the brown blotches will also hide you from ducks and geese, and other game too.

Who would have thought that a duck or goose call would become so pricey that it would demand a good part of a week's wages? Having hunted geese and ducks for a lot of years blowing basic plastic stuff, these Cadillac calls leave me a little short of breath when I read the price tag.

My main tool for calling in the goose fields for over two decades has been a hard black plastic P.S.-OLT. It's easy to blow, produces sounds good enough to pull Canada and snow geese, and costs only a few bucks. The last ones I bought were around nine dollars, as I recall. Today, these calls can be had for about $15.

I don't argue that there are spiffier calls out there that can produce better sound and look prettier—at a price. We're told by sporting magazines and the catalogs that the tonal quality and effectiveness of a duck or goose call is directly related to the revenue you invest in the instrument...In the end, which call is best all comes down to personal druthers. That's why catalogs are so full of stuff.

Today's catalogs feature all sorts of exotic calls crafted from exotic woods like cocobola, or clear or colored acrylics. I haven't tried any of them, but assume that they produce good "tunes." They ought to. Many sell for $125 or more. If you opt for a hand-crafted wooden call you may be looking at laying out upwards of $200.

The camo craze is everywhere. You expect to dress to hide from game, but now even the duck and goose calls and the thermos for your coffee are decked-out with designer camouflage patterns.

I guess that's supposed to be practical, but what are the odds you'll find your camouflaged call again should you be so unfortunate as to drop it while setting a goose spread in the harvested corn field you're hunting?

Even the trusty hunting dog must go afield in proper style. If he travels in a crate, it must be enclosed by an insulated cover. A plain cover "reasonable" in price is available in off-color green, but what your dog really deserves is the deluxe insulated cover that is available in—you guessed it—Shadow Grass, Break-Up, or Advantage camouflage—at a higher price.

If your four-legged hunting buddy does lots of water work and is subject to chill, he can be decked-out in a flotation vest that is state-of-the-art camo.

Your dog can also sleep better on a kennel pad that is, of course, available in Shadow Grass or Break-Up.

All of this stuff in the myriad catalogs is fun to look at and puzzle over. Invariably, in each of the books, you see a couple of items you think you might be interested in...There's the rub.

You set these catalogs aside, thinking that you will eventually order some more of those good upland hunting socks on page 273 in Cabela's, and that Thunder dog whistle and lanyard, along with some three-inch 20-gauge No. 1 and No. 2 steel shotshells from Herter's, and that nice warm-looking hunting cap in Mack's Prairie Wings, as soon as you get caught up on the bills.

The catalogs keep coming, and so do the bills.--We keep stacking the wish books up, putting off the culling-down process.

What mail-order sporting goods merchants should realize by now is what American sportsmen desperately need is a catalog stack hider--available in Advantage Wetlands, Shadow Grass, Break-Up, Backland, or Den Floor.

injuries this week to senior rover Rick Bordayo and sophomore linebacker Derek Mendoza.

"We are real proud of our second string guys," Hernandez said. "Part of having a good team is having those second string guys step up."

The win also gives the team their second straight win while missing several of their key players. Yenzler said winning the last two games without the likes of senior Ramiro Zambrano, junior Cody Marsh and several others only proved to themselves that they are a deep team. Yenzler also said the injuries and losses have made a difference in their concentration level.

"We've had a lot of guys that have played well," Yenzler said. "I thought we were really focused on what we had to do."

"I thought we had a lack of focus in the Borger game, but we've done a good job coming back and doing better the past two weeks," Yenzler said.

Cardinals face daunting challenge as series begins in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Down two games and facing a challenge no team has ever overcome in a league championship series, the St. Louis Cardinals now confront Shea Stadium, where the Mets had baseball's best home record.

Anybody got any ideas? "Most clues that get down two don't do very well," manager Tony La Russa said during workouts Friday. "It is possible."

La Russa said the solution was fairly clear.

"I'm not sure it's anything that's too complicated," he said. "It's just straight baseball. We had a couple of chances with men in scoring position where we could do a better job of having an at-bat. We gave up runs with two-strike pitches where we threw breaking balls that got up. We've got to make better pitches."

"We need to compete like we competed the last two days. When it gets down to the winning difference, a little bit better at-bat, a better pitch, you've got to make that thing happen. We played very hard and pretty good. They played better."

History is not on St. Louis' side.

Thirteen times, teams have frittered away the home-field edge in an LCS by losing the first two games at home. None recovered to win the series. The Cardinals are trying to avoid becoming No. 14.

"Down 2-0, it's definitely going to be a project," first baseman Will Clark said. "Especially here."

Playing at home has been an edge for the Mets all season. After losing a designated home game in Tokyo at the start of the season, the Mets were 55-25 at Shea, including a three-game sweep of the Cardinals in July.

In that series, Mike Bordick and Bubba Trammell, both acquired in trade deadline deals, homered in their first at-bats for New York.

"Our team plays well all over," manager Bobby Valentine said. "I think we just got a lot of hops when we were playing at home to make our record a little uneven. But we've played the same brand of baseball whether we're here or on the road."

"We don't get any signals from the scoreboard or any of that good stuff that some home-field advantages supposedly have. We just play the game of baseball."

Rick Reed, who starts Game 3 for New York against the Cardinals' Andy Benes, thinks the Mets are simply more comfortable in their stadium.

"You get used to your home field, obviously," he said. "I guess it's the excitement of the fans. They're into every game. They're into every pitch. So that's a little advantage on our side."

Complicating the Cardinals' task is the fact that the Mets are hot.

They have won five consecutive postseason games for the first time in franchise history and displayed remarkable resiliency doing it, winning three of those games in their final at-bat.

In Game 2 of the division series against San Francisco, J.T. Snow wiped out a 4-1 New York lead with a pinch home run in the bottom of the ninth. The Mets won it in

Yanks of old show up, win 8-2

■ Seattle must now win at least one at home to keep season alive

SEATTLE (AP) — The Yankees finally are playing like the Yankees.

Bernie Williams and Tino Martinez hit consecutive homers in the second inning and David Justice drove in three runs, leading New York over the Seattle Mariners 8-2 on Friday night for a 2-1 edge in the AL championship series.

Andy Pettitte improved to 8-4 in postseason play, Mariano Rivera broke Whitey Ford's record for consecutive scoreless postseason innings, and eight of nine starters got hits.

After slumbering through the final three weeks of the regular season and the first 10 days of the playoffs, the Yankees have shaken their lengthiest slump in five seasons.

On Wednesday at Yankee Stadium, they were six outs from falling behind 2-0 in the series before riding a seven-run eighth inning to a 7-1 win. Before that, the Yankees were starting to wonder if they would ever hit again.

"It did help. It helped boost our confidence," Williams said.

They made their third cross-country trip in less than a week and fell behind in the first, then did everything right, from timely hitting to clutch pitching. New York got 13 hits and scored in four innings for the first time in this year's playoffs.

And for the first time this

October, the two-time World Series champions looked like they were in control, playing with renewed resolve rather than cringing from the weight of their past accomplishments.

Even Paul O'Neill came through. The right fielder, the Yankees' warrior and backbone, had been 0-for-8 in the series, flailing at the plate in perhaps the worst slump of his career.

After Seattle clawed back to 3-2 in the fifth, O'Neill came right back with a sharp two-out single in the sixth off Aaron Sele, his first RBI hit of the postseason.

Chuck Knoblauch added an RBI single in the ninth against Brett Tomko. Justice followed with a two-run single and Williams added a sacrifice fly off Rob Ramsay.

Pettitte allowed nine hits in 6 2-3 innings, but just two runs.

"He walks that high wire without a safety net," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "Andy, when he needed to get out of jams, made some quality pitches."

Jeff Nelson followed with two-thirds of an inning and Rivera came in after Nelson struck out Edgar Martinez with a runner at second and no outs in the eighth.

Rivera retired pinch-hitter Stan Javier on a grounder and John Olerud on a flyout, then pitched a perfect ninth for his fourth save of the playoffs.

"He's working both sides of the plate better than ever," Torre said.

Rivera has 33 1-3 consecutive scoreless innings in the postseason since Sandy Alomar's homer in Game 4 of the 1997 division series, one more than Ford, the Yankees' Hall of Fame left-hander. Rivera has allowed two earned runs in 55 postseason innings, a 0.55 ERA.

"He's been amazing," Pettitte said. "Mo's been almost automatic."

Roger Clemens takes a 0-2 postseason record this year into Game 4 Saturday night, pitching against Paul Abbott. "I have a feeling we're going to come out tomorrow and start swinging the bats the way we're capable of," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said.

Some omens were against the Yankees. It was the 40th anniversary of Bill Mazeroski's home run that won Game 7 of the 1960 World Series for Pittsburgh, and the roof was closed at Safeco Field, where the Mariners were 10-3 in regular-season games that ended under cover.

Above the roof and thick overcast, there was a full moon. And, it was Friday the 13th.

Seattle, which has just five runs in three games, quickly went ahead. Consecutive one-out singles by Mike Cameron, Alex Rodriguez and Edgar Martinez put Seattle ahead in the first, but Pettitte retired Jay Buhner on a pop and the Yankees rebounded in the second with their first consecutive homers in 16 games since Sept. 23.

"It's never easy for me, always a battle," Pettitte said. "After I gave up the run in the first, the guys came right back and battled."

Williams connected to right on a 3-0 pitch and Tino Martinez, who played for the Mariners when they beat the Yankees in the 1995 playoffs, followed four pitches later with a drive just over a leaping Cameron in center. Neither had homered since Sept. 24 against Detroit, the Yankees' next-to-last home game of the regular season.

New York made it 3-1 in the third, scoring in consecutive innings for the first time during this year's playoffs.

Scott Brosius singled leading off, Derek Jeter hit into a forceout and Justice doubled with two outs to the gap in left-center as Jeter came home.

Seattle closed within a run in the fifth when Rickey Henderson doubled with one out and Cameron followed with an RBI single.

But New York came right back in the sixth, aided by Sele's fielding miscue. Williams singled with one out and Martinez hit a slow roller between the mound and first.

Sele got to the ball quickly, maybe too quickly. As his momentum carried him into foul territory, he couldn't get the ball out of the webbing of his glove. Jorge Posada flied to right, with Williams crossing to third, and O'Neill singled to right.

Notes: Posada was the only Yankees starter without a hit. ... Sele gave up four runs and nine hits in six-plus innings, dropping to 0-3 in the postseason — with all three losses to the Yankees. ... Umpire Fieldin Culbreth replaced Randy Marsh (injured left elbow). ... The previous pair to hit consecutive ALCS homers were Harold Baines and Rafael Palmeiro for Baltimore against Cleveland two years ago.

“After I gave up a run in the first, the guys came right back and battled.”

2000 MVP signs $88.5 million extension

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal, who came within one vote of becoming the NBA's first unanimous MVP last season, agreed to a three-year contract extension worth the maximum $88.5 million.

"I look forward to ending my career as a Laker," O'Neal said at a news conference Friday at team headquarters. "Having one championship is like having one car — it's not enough for me. Last year was a start for us."

O'Neal, who led the Lakers to their first NBA championship in 12 years last spring, is now under contract for six more seasons.

"This is clearly one of the brightest days in this franchise's history," general manager Mitch Kupchak said.

The 28-year-old center joined the Lakers as a free agent in July 1996, signing a seven-year contract for more than $120 million.

A 7-foot-1, 315-pounder who led the NBA in scoring and field-goal percentage last season, O'Neal received 120 of 121 votes from a panel of sports writers and broadcasters in the MVP voting, with the remaining vote going to Philadelphia's Allen Iverson. O'Neal received 1,207 points in the voting in becoming the Lakers' first MVP since Magic Johnson won the award in 1990. Minnesota's Kevin Garnett was second with 408 points. O'Neal's percentage of 99.2 was the highest for any player since the league introduced the award in 1955-56. Michael Jordan received 96.5 percent of the vote following the 1995-96 season.

"That was kind of hard to believe," O'Neal said when the results were announced.

KACV to give away tickets to concert

Special to The Brand
AMARILLO — Local public television station KACV-TV is planning a special one-night-only pledge event Oct. 28, combining a new program by The Moody Blues with the band's Nov. 21 concert at the Amarillo Civic Center.

"To make a long story short, we've got tickets to the Nov. 21 concert, which we'll be giving away during that night's airing of 'The Moody Blues at the Royal Albert Hall,'" said KACV-TV membership coordinator Joanna Latham. "We have lots of other things to give away as special 'thank you gifts,' to our contributors, too."

The Moody Blues concert tickets were donated by the Amarillo Civic Center, a long-time supporter of the station.

The band's last concert in Amarillo was one of the best rock concerts ever held in the Panhandle.

The pledge event, which is sponsored by Amarillo National Bank, begins at 7 p.m. with an encore broadcast of "James Last: Gentleman of Music." At 8:45 p.m. it will be followed by the station's first-ever airing of "The Moody Blues at the Royal Albert Hall."

"The Moody Blues at the Royal Albert Hall" captures the band in concert from London's legendary Royal Albert Hall. Taped in May 2000 on the last date of a triumphant tour of the U.K., the performance special is produced by the same team that brought "The Moody Blues in Concert at Red Rocks" to public television. This new release from American Public

Television's Premium Service features new music from "Strange Times" as well as hits like "Tuesday Afternoon," "I'm Just a Singer (In a Rock and Roll Band)" and "Nights in White Satin."

"The strength of The Moody Blues is the songs and the character of the band, and that's what's kept us going," said singer-guitarist Justin Hayward. "People know they can expect well-crafted songs from the band. I think that's what keeps people coming back."

The Moody Blues — Hayward; vocalist, bassist and guitarist John Lodge; vocalist and flutist Ray Thomas; and drummer Graeme Edge — are joined in this special by the World Festival Orchestra conducted by musical director Larry Baird.

Engineers plan to honor plow's inventor, maker

Special to The Brand

AMARILLO — The year was 1933. Fred Hoeme and W.L. Graham were young farmers whose only mission at the time was farming. Now more than six decades later, farmers, engineers and others in the industry still marvel at the success of their joint venture — the chisel plow that bears both their names.

On Tuesday the American Society of Agricultural Engineers will honor both the Oklahoma inventor, a Texas manufacturer and the invention as part of its national historic landmark program.

At 4 p.m., dedication ceremonies will establish a permanent marker at the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory located at 2300 Experiment Station Road, west of Bushland. The public is invited to help recognize the achievements of both men. Members of the Hoeme and Graham families will attend.

The monument, set in Texas by the national engineering organization, will feature a commemorative plaque near one of the early plows on display. The Bushland location will become one of only two ASAE sites in the state.

Last May, at a similar dedication held in Hooker, Oklahoma, an identical marker was placed in a recently completed city park. According to Bushland USDA laboratory director Dr. Nolan Clark, the engineering society will be sending its officials here to make the presentation.

"This will complete efforts to place historic markers in both states," Clark said. Today, there are other such monuments established by the organization in 35 locations.

QUILT CRAZY

Children's proverbs give insight

After hearing my sister, who has been an elementary teacher for 30 years, tell stories about the children she has taught, I will believe almost anything.

In all of her years as a teacher, she has never taught in a grade lower than the third or higher than the sixth. The abilities of children in this age group can be truly amazing.

While the following did not come from my sister, I tend to believe that it is based in reality.

A third grade teacher collected well-known proverbs. She gave each child in her class the first half of a proverb and had them come up with the rest.

(Their insight may surprise you.)

Better to be safe than...punch a fifth grader.

Uwaydah addresses health issues of women for L'Allegra

Members of L'Allegra Study Club met recently at Covenant Family Healthcare Center for a program entitled "Women's Health Issues" presented by Dr. Nema Uwaydah. Hostesses for the meeting were Karen Payne and Shelley Menke.

Given the complex influences factoring into a woman's health, Dr. Uwaydah chose to discuss the issue from a "well-woman exam" perspective, giving a synopsis on every one of the body's systems, highlighting signs and symptoms that could be clues to possible problems.

She further stressed the value of a woman undergoing an annual physical exam which gives the woman a chance to connect with her physician allowing the doctor to establish a baseline so he/she can later address arising problems.

Members asked Dr. Uwaydah questions on specific issues that concerned them. The doctor made several pieces of literature available to everyone.

After the program, President Melissa Clarke conducted the business meeting. Various members reported on activities, including making preparations for Project Christmas Card. Attending the meeting were Mary Janet Bricker, Kitty Gault, Barbara Kerr, Sylvia Khuri, Jody Skiles, Suzanne Smith, Jana Trotter, Judy Wall, Jan Weishaar, Clarke, Menke and Payne.

Ann Landers

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about the cheating husband who confessed to his wife. I was baffled by your remark that his refusal to name the woman showed he had "some integrity after all." You must be out of your mind. First, he lied to his wife about having the affair, then he said it was a "one-time fling." She was rather surprised to discover hotel bills that went back four years.

After being caught, "Mr. Integrity" bought his wife a diamond ring to shut her up. I wonder what he bought the other woman to shut her up. If you will allow me to play Ann Landers for a day, I have some advice for the wronged wife: THROW THE BUM OUT. — Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Baton Rouge: Thanks for expressing yourself. Several others did, also, and the vast majority sided with you. Keep reading for more:

From Calgary, Alberta: Ann, have you taken to drinking on the job? Saying that man had "some integrity" because he wouldn't name the other woman made no sense whatsoever. Instead of chastising the skunk, you handed him a bouquet of roses. How could you?

Mobile, Ala.: Your advice to stop pressuring the husband to name the other woman was off the mark. Not only is he a cheater, but a liar, as well. He said he had a one-time fling, but it was actually a four-year affair. I hope the woman who wrote dumps the guy. I dumped my liar, and am much better off without him.

Minneapolis: I'll bet the reason the guy doesn't name the other woman is because he is still seeing her. Once a liar, always a liar. Once a cheat, always a cheat. His wife is a fool if she believes a word he says.

Las Vegas: I can understand why her husband doesn't want to name the other woman. It's probably his wife's best friend, younger sister, next-door neighbor or the guy's secretary. Rest assured it's somebody she knows.

Denver: You were right to advise the woman not to pressure her husband into telling her the name of the woman with whom he had the affair. It won't do her any good to know. My husband told me the name of his other woman, and it destroyed a wonderful friendship. Sometimes, ignorance IS bliss.

New York: A skirt-chaser is like a chronic drinker. They may dry up or quit sleeping around, but the desire never goes away. The woman who wrote to you is young enough to start another life. I hope she does, and I wish her luck.

Atlanta: That husband should definitely tell his wife who the other woman is. If he doesn't, she will spend her life wondering if every woman who says hello to him is the one he slept with. It's a rotten way to live.

Chicago: Just because that cheated-on wife had children is no reason for her to overlook her husband's infidelity. My father cheated on my mother for 25 years. She was well aware of his fandangoes, but stayed with him "for the sake of the children." I have three brothers who have had a total of nine divorces. My sister has been divorced twice, and she is only 27. I never married, and I don't regret it. Does divorce run in families? I think it does.

Orangeburg, S.C.: My father was a faithful husband. It was my mother who couldn't keep her marriage vows. After many failed attempts, Daddy divorced her. My youngest sister was 9 years old at the time. Daddy went to court and fought for custody of us kids. He won, raised us, and now we are all college graduates and successful in our professions. We don't know where Mom is. She remarried, cut all ties, and the last we heard, she was living in Mexico with a cattle rustler.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Nuggets and Doozies," has everything from the outrageously funny to the poignantly insightful. ## Johnson gives program for Hereford Study Club

"Eat Your Heart Out" was the topic of the program given at the recent meeting of Hereford Study Club by Mary Johnson, specialty chef from Market Street United Foods in Amarillo and daughter of club member Mary Stoy.

The former Hereford resident gave credit for her cooking expertise to her Hereford High School home economics teachers Dorothea Prowell, Margaret Ann Durham and Dean Bradley. She said that her love of cooking started as a child making mud pies.

She talked about eating healthy and emphasized that as one ages, not to worry about losing weight but to exercise a little every day and be happy.

She demonstrated how to prepare a healthy luncheon plate and only have to cook a boiled egg. Then she prepared a luncheon of tuna club sandwiches, Waldorf salad, asparagus with vinaigrette dressing, fruit yogurt, kiwi, banana and raspberry smoothie, mini fruit pizzas and hibiscus coolers.

During the business meeting, the club voted to make a donation to Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library.

Attending the meeting were two guests, Jeanie Caison and Sue Amstutz and members Barbara Allen, Jean Ballard, Doris Bryant, Hazel Ford, Elizabeth Hellman, Betty Gilbert, Carole McGilvary, Betty Martin, Helen Spinks, Joan Yarbrow, Gladys Setliff and hostess Mary Stoy.

New Arrival

Kara and Jason Underwood of Lamesa are the proud parents of a daughter, Faith Lauren, born Oct. 10 in Lubbock.

The infant weighed 8 pounds, 10 ounces and was 20½ inches long.

Hereford relatives include grandparents Lorraine and Jim Sandoval and great-grandparents Kathy and Bill Acton and Mary Kaye Sandoval.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

An Old Tool Can Be Your New Front Door

(Last of two parts)

Last week in the first part of this series, we discussed how the telephone is often the front door to business transactions. We also advised readers to get as many business lines as needed, use the yellow page listings and to not abuse the hold feature. It's better to get folks connected, than to entertain them on hold. Here are 13 more tips for getting more business through your telephone front door.

More Phone Success Tips

Tip Six — Get a catchy phone number. The experts say to try for a word that explains or identifies your business. A boat dealer might select 359-BOAT (2628). A barber might try for 673-HAIR (4247).

I'm not sure this really works. You've heard hundreds of catchy or clever phone numbers recently. How many of them can you remember?

Tip Seven — Treat every call as if it is an important call. Your business image is at stake. Even if you're expecting your spouse to call, answer the phone professionally.

Tip Eight — Project energy into the phone. Enthusiasm is contagious. Put more energy in your voice by sitting up straight or better yet stand up.

Tip Nine — Keep your mouth empty. No food, gum, or pencils.

Tip Ten — Focus on the caller. If a caller suspects you're distracted, you lose credibility. If your e-mail, letters, or other work is more important than the caller, terminate the call gracefully.

Tip Eleven — Prepare for calls you make. I outline the major points I need to cover. I also make a list of questions I need to ask. This usually eliminates a quick call-back to gather forgotten, but important, pieces of information.

Tip Twelve — Identify yourself. Voices sound entirely different on the phone. When you answer the phone identify yourself. When you call someone else identify yourself. This is a good practice in person as well.

Tip Thirteen — Answer promptly. There are two schools of thought on this one. The first school says never answer on the first ring because people will think that you are not very busy and are just setting around waiting for the phone to ring. The second school of thought that if you wait until the third or fourth ring folks will think your service is bad. So my advice is: answer promptly. Answering on the second or third ring gives you time to mentally make the transition from what you were doing to answering the phone.

Tip Fourteen — Create a good voice mail answering message. The best are short, clear and include simple directions.

Tip Fifteen — Use your manners. Please remember that courtesy is always in style. Thank you.

Tip Sixteen — Take good notes. This is one of my weak areas. I often look at my calendar and find an incomplete note without enough information to remember what I've committed to. Make it a habit to record date, time, name(s), phone numbers, company name, any required action and reminder notes.

Tip Seventeen — Be a careful listener. This begins with focusing your attention on the caller (Tip Ten) but goes beyond that. Listen to the tone of the caller's voice, ask questions of clarification and above all try to understand "what isn't being said."

Tip Eighteen — Avoid telephone tag. Don't leave messages for 10 people to call you back if you're going to be on or away from the phone. If you must leave a message, give the person you wish to return your call the best times to reach you.

One final thought regarding cellular phones, turn them off in meetings. If you're expecting an important call that may interrupt the meeting, stay out of the meeting.

SOME BOOKS WORTH READING

Between the Covers

Martha Russell
Deaf Smith County Library

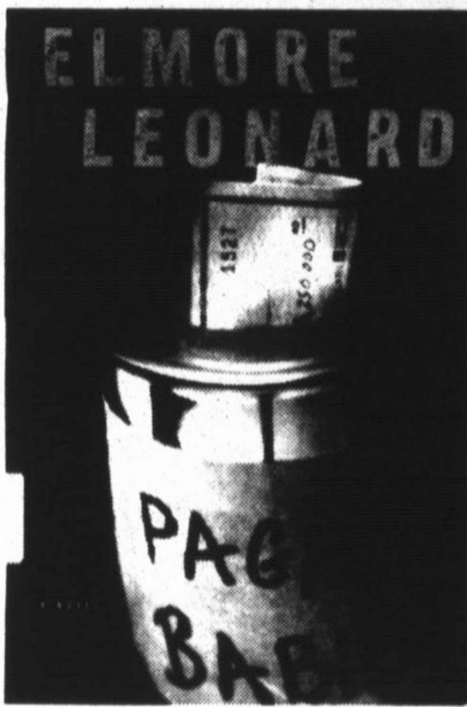

If you missed our Open House, you need to come in and see our new computers! We have four new workstations which have Internet access. Our online card catalog computers have been returned to that task exclusively, so that there should be no problem looking up books -- no

While they have greatly enhanced Internet access for Deaf Smith County, we did have limited access already. Think about those small town libraries who don't have the support of groups like Texas Panhandle Library System and Harrington Library Consortium. Having public Internet access available in those communities will make a major difference. Welcome to the 21st century! Come in and let us show you our new toys.

One of the maybe unintended, but very satisfying services the library provides community is a meeting place for friends. Aside from the rooms available for groups and organizations, the library is a perfect place for inadvertent meetings.

Just today, two women who have not seen each other in more than 20 years ran into each other and carried on a lively conversation, catching up on what has happened in their lives. We see this often as friends who do not normally cross paths connect at the library. What a fun place to work!

When you come in to see about the new books available at the library this week, keep your eyes more waiting for someone to finish their e-mail. And, we are about to acquire four more workstations through the TIF grant.

Is there an optimum number of computer workstations a library can manage? I think we may reach that point with the TIF machines. We are instituting new policy to allow maximum use and access for our patrons. We feel like this policy, drawn from the experience and expertise of others, will achieve this goal. However, only our own experience will fine tune some issues. This requires patience on the part of staff and patrons alike.

Library staff members are now "experts" in networking and the latest reference and business software from Microsoft. Yeah, right! We really did have two days of excellent hands-on training from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, but the brain can only take in so much information at a time! The Gates Foundation does realize this and will conduct follow up training in a few weeks. They also left us an abundance of print documentation, and for the next three years we have free technical support as close as the nearest phone. Bless 'em!

Gradually, piece by piece, we are becoming more and more proficient in such matters. While we still are somewhat (some-what?) technologically challenged, we are gaining ground.

I don't think we can say enough about the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and what they are doing for libraries across the nation. Their goal is to complete this grant program, providing Internet access to all Americans through public libraries, by 2003.

open for long lost friends!

As the holiday seasons approach, your thought may be turning to those crafty things that are so much a part of our celebrations. This week we have several books to help you make a beautiful and delicious, and perhaps profitable, holiday. Holiday Decorations for Fun & Profit by Maria Given Merius, Parties and Project for the Holidays by Martha Stewart, The Spirit of Christmas, Book Fourteen, and Christmas with Southern Living 2000 are just some of the books we have available to scratch your creative itch.

No Such Thing As A Bad Day is part memoir, part cancer survival story of former White House chief-of-staff Hamilton Jordan. In recent years, Jordan's life has been defined by an all too-common event in our society: cancer. Not once, not twice, but three times since his years in the Carter administration, he has been diagnosed with this disease in various forms, non-Hodgkins lymphoma, melanoma, and prostate cancer.

This book weaves together Jordan's reflections on his remarkable life rubbing elbows with history and his inspirational story of beating cancer. He discussed his years with President Carter and offers memorable anecdotes about his encounters with Martin Luther King, Jr., President Johnson, the Shah of Iran, and a young upstart politician named Bill Clinton. He also offers practical advice about coping with cancer through a proactive stance on research and treatment.

In Mr. Perfect by Linda Howard, Jaine Bright and three girlfriends having lunch together begin a tongue-in-cheek checklist of requirements for the perfect man. The next thing they know, the funny and racy list has spread like wildfire through their company and on to local newspaper and television coverage. What began as a joke suddenly becomes deadly serious as one of the four women is found murdered.

The prime suspect in the case is the victim's boyfriend, who was one of a number of men who found the list sexist and offensive. But an impenetrable alibi gets him off the hook. Now, with the help of Jaine's neighbor, an unpredictable police detective, the puzzle must be solved. And time is running out as a deadly stalker targets the three remaining friends. Now, knowing whom to trust and whom to love is a matter of survival, as the dream of Mr. Perfect becomes a chilling nightmare.

Elmore Leonard's latest, Pagan Babies, begins in Rwanda where Father Terry Dunn has 47 bodies in his church that need burying in the aftermath of the worst massacre this strife-ridden county has ever seen. Father Terry, the only priest for miles, has heard many confessions. Now he has heard one too many.

After exacting from them a chilling penance, he has to get out of Africa pronto.

Now Terry is coming home to Detroit, where a five-year-old tax fraud indictment is hanging over him. Is Terry Dunn really a priest? He certainly doesn't act like one. A fugitive felon on two continents, Terry is being pursued by a cigarette-smuggling cohort, who rolled over on Terry to save jail time.... yet demands his share of the money.

But Debbie Dewey has other plans for Terry. She's just been released from a three year stay at Sawgrass Correctional for aggravated assault and is now trying to make it as a stand-up comic. Debbie and Terry hit it off beautifully. They have the same sense of humor and similar goals: Both of them want to raise a whole lot of cash. Terry, for the children of Rwanda; Debbie, to score off a guy who owes her $67,000.

It's Debbie who keeps prying, until she learns the bizarre truth about Terry; Debbie who sells him on going in together for a much bigger payoff than either could manage alone. That is unless the priest is working a con of his own.

Coneway evaluates 120 years precipitation

Year's rainfall may still be above drought line

By Dianna F. Dandridge
Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Lack of precipitation equals drought, plain enough.

But, do the dry conditions actually warrant all the discussions centered around the current drought?

According to a private study done by Paul Coneway, a long-time resident farmer and rancher, what is being perceived as a drought may very possibly just be another year with its own set of weather patterns.

Coneway, using information gleaned from old editions of the Amarillo Daily News and local records, has tracked 120 years of precipitation for the area. For the last 30 years, Coneway has kept a written record of temperatures and precipitation.

Along with Ken Waiser, a friend at Poarch Bros., Coneway got the charts printed just to be able to get a visual idea of what he thought would be a weather pattern.

According to Coneway's charts, the average annual precipitation for the past 120 years is 20.13 inches.

One of the wettest years in history was recorded in 1924, when the area received nearly 40 inches of moisture. The second highest year was 1941, with more than 37 inches of wet stuff. This compares to the driest years of 1957, when the area received only slightly more than 8 inches and 1970, when measured precipitation was only 9.7 inches.

In comparison to the record-setting years, the Hereford area is only slightly on the dry side and still has nearly three months to bring that moisture level up to the normal ranges.

The chart with each year's precipitation measured shows 51 years with above-average rainfall, 52 years show at least 15 inches but under 20, and only 17 years show less 15 inches of moisture.

"The thing that caught my attention was that each decade with a higher than average amount of rain was followed by a lower than average decade," said Coneway. "And the five driest decades, 1930 through the '70s, were the driest decades on record."

As of Oct. 13, Coneway has recorded 75 days without rainfall, but at that the area has received two-thirds of the average annual amount.

Coneway broke his data down into yearly amounts and decade averages to compare each year with a broader spectrum to try to find some type of pattern.

"I don't really know what to think of it," he said. "For awhile, it looked like the pattern for a decade would be a decade of above-average rainfall followed by a below average decade. But, then we had those five decades which were below normal. Then in the '80s, it was considerably above average and slightly above average in the 90s. Now all I can see is highs and lows."

Coneway didn't apply difficult scientific computations to his research. He just thought it was interesting.

He's not sure what has happened to the moisture, why it isn't reaching the ground, all he really knows is it is dry, and hot.

"There may be some moisture out in the atmosphere, but the temperatures may be burning it off before it gets a chance to form rain," Coneway. "I don't think I'll be around for the next 50 years, but I would like to know what the next 50-120 years' patterns would look like. Maybe if we could see another 100 years, we could see a real pattern."

Winter wheat needs rain

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — Farmers need more rain to keep their winter wheat crop alive.

"What we need is a good 2-inch soaker," said Alan Corr, University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension educator for Kearney and Franklin counties.

Drought last fall and winter hurt this year's wheat crop in Nebraska. So far this fall, timely rains have helped, but Corr said growing conditions have not been favorable as winter approaches.

"The wheat situation is similar to last year," he said.

Winter wheat generally is planted in September or October and harvested in June or July. It must sprout, emerge, go dormant, and then revivify in a process called "vernalization."

Lack of rain in the fall can scuttle the process, either by keeping the wheat from emerging before winter or by stressing the young plants, making them more susceptible to dying in the winter cold.

Richard Smith of Upland said he planted his wheat in northern Franklin County around Sept. 20. He said he was pleased with the way the wheat had emerged after a recent 1.4 inches of rain.

"So far it looks great," Smith said. "We were fortunate in this area to get some rain."

With a few more showers, he said, his wheat on 2000 summer fallow ground should survive the winter. But more rainfall is critical, he said.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!
Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs."
Then remember the "5 W's" to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, price, color, type, condition, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition. Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

WRAPAROUND PORCHES ENCOURAGE OUTDOOR LIVING

Master On First Floor

FEATURE HOMES

© BY W.D. FARMER, F.A.I.B.D.

This plan was designed with a family or retired couple in mind. The master bed room suite is on the first floor and the guest or family bed rooms are upstairs.

The luxury master bed room wing is separated from the daily activity but near the kitchen for those midnight snacks. It features a tray ceiling and compartment bath with twin walk in closets neighboring a garden tub.

The laundry and half bath are adjacent to a centralized kitchen. This kitchen is provided with excellent cabinet space and a U-shaped island including the sink near the breakfast area.

A formal dining room and a great room are shown separated by an open rail stair overlooking both rooms. The basement stair is beneath the main stair for greater space utilization. The spacious entry with a beautiful open staircase is a perfect introduction. A private porch on the rear of the home, combined with the front wraparound porch offer shade and relaxation.

There are two full sized bed rooms shown for the second floor. Built in dormers brighten these bedrooms and a central hall bath is shared.

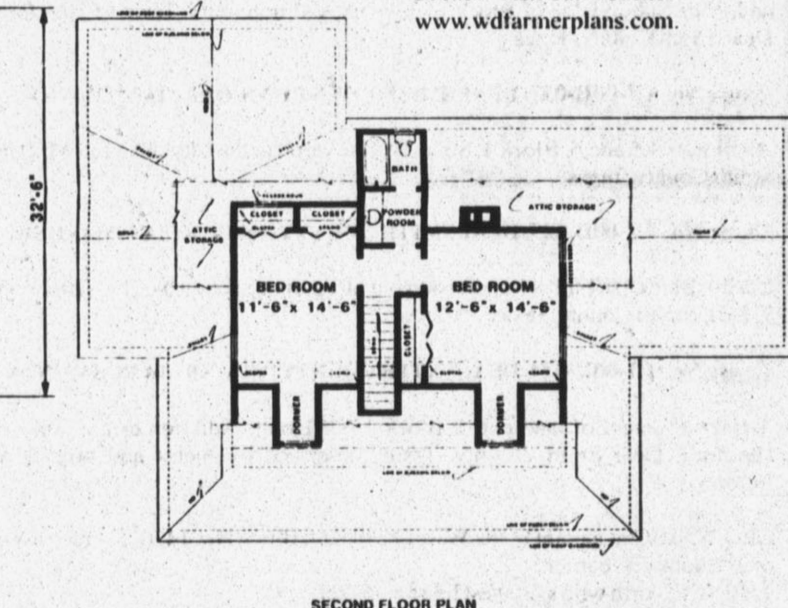

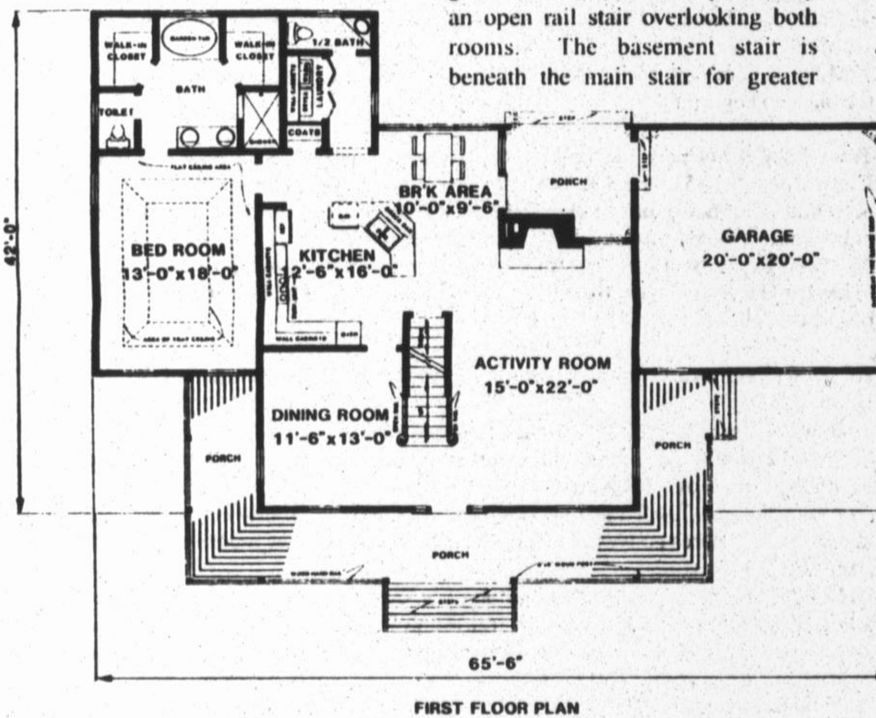

The exterior is designed with yesterday's charm and today's convenience in mind, featuring a full wrap-around wood railed front porch, horizontal wood siding and a steep gable roof design.

All W. D. Farmer plans include construction details for substituting brick, frame or stucco exterior finish.

Plan number 2070 includes 2,066 square feet of heated living space and is drawn with a basement foundation.

To receive an information packet on this plan, call W. D. Farmer Residence Designer, Inc. at 1-800-225-7526 or 1-800-221-7526 in GA. You can write to request the information at P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 31145. Visit our website: www.wdfarmerplans.com.

Real Estate News For Consumers

PROLIFERATION OF REAL ESTATE WEB SITES FUELS DEMAND FOR KNOWLEDGEABLE AGENTS

The Internet was supposed to virtually eliminate the need for face-to-face contact in many businesses, including residential real estate.

But a new study shows that consumers who look to the Web for their next home are actually more likely to use a real estate professional to complete the search and close the deal, and only 4 percent of homebuyers found the home they bought as a result of their own online research.

The number of U.S. homebuyers who use the Internet to search for homes more than doubled last year to 37 percent, according to the National Association of Realtors' 2000 Profile of Home Buyers and Sellers.

Despite the recent explosion of Web sites that provide information about homes for sale, Realtors continue to play a key role in consumers' search for the right home.

"Buying a home is the largest investment most people make," said Louise Hull, chairman of the board, Texas Association of Realtors. "Most homebuyers are not comfortable making a purchase decision without going to check out houses for themselves, and they still want a real estate professional who knows the process to represent their interests." Survey results show that nearly four out of five homebuyers used a real estate agent as an important information source and to assist in the transaction. Two-thirds of buyers said they would use the same agent again in a future transaction.

On the seller side, nearly four out of five homeowners sold their previous home with the help of an agent; just 16 percent of homes were sold by the owner directly.

Seven out of 10 sellers said they would use the same agent in future transactions.

"Today's Realtors provide valuable knowledge and service to both buyers and sellers," Hull said.

Selecting a real estate professional is an important part of the home-searching process, added Hull, who offered these tips:

- Ask for personal recommendations to find an agent who is knowledgeable about the neighborhood you want to live in.
- Look for Realtor membership. Realtors are professionals who go beyond state licensing requirements, subscribing to a strict code of ethics. In addition, many Realtors study to earn expert designations, such as the Accredited Buyer Representative (ABR).
- Make sure the Realtor has access to the local multiple listing service (MLS).

A growing number of MLS operations are Internet-based and have a public Web address, so agents can manage their clients' listings from anywhere and consumers can click to find basic property information.

In addition, many local MLSs in Texas upload their listings to Realtor.com, a public Web site with millions of visitors each month and more than 1.3 million residential properties, making it the world's largest compilation of homes for sale.

Because MLS operations are governed by strict rules regarding the status of property listings, MLS-fed Web sites tend to have more recent information than nonRealtor sites.

Doctor-patient relations are healing in Gideon's Crossing

Wednesdays on ABC, Sophie Keller, Kevin J. O'Connor, Ruben Blades, Hamish Linklater and Andre Braugher (from left) play medical professionals at a teaching hospital in Gideon's Crossing. Where ER looks at the pace of the emergency room, Gideon's takes a closer look at the deep doctor-patient relationship.

ER takes place in a hospital where doctors barely get to learn their patients' names. Dr. Ben Gideon learns far more from his.

Andre Braugher (Homicide: Life on the Street, Glory) stars as the determined doctor in Gideon's Crossing, airing Wednesdays on ABC. He is a man at a crossroads, an oncologist dealing with the death of a loved one from cancer just a year before and working at a teaching hospital where he finds that the patients offer the greatest lessons.

He is also an experimental physician who offers a last hope to the dying when traditional treatments have failed. With these medical risks come personal risks, and it is this story that initially attracted executive producer Paul Attanasio, who wrote the critically acclaimed films Donnie Brasco and Quiz Show.

"I set out to write this story about a man whose fight for life inspired his doctor. Kurt's (Bruce McGill) story was so bleak. Ben took the chance of getting involved in his life."

Attanasio adds, "What happens when we get sick is that this person you've never met suddenly becomes the most important person in your life."

Gideon's Crossing was inspired by the book The Measure of Our Days by Dr. Jerome Groopman, who has been retained by the show as a consultant. Many of the patient-related stories are based on actual cases handled by Dr. Groopman or his fellow physicians. The character of Dr. Gideon, in fact, originally bore more than a slight resemblance to the author.

"My original vision was of a white, bearded, Jewish doctor from Boston," Attanasio explains. "When Andre came in and read for the part, he encompassed the essential qualities of this doctor: tough, demanding, and yet warm and compassionate."

It helped that Attanasio and Braugher had worked together on Homicide, where the actor won an Emmy Award in 1998 for his portrayal of Detective Frank Pembleton. His finest performance in that series' six-year run came not as the usually in-command cop but as a man struggling to recover from a stroke. In Gideon's Crossing, the usually decisive doctor struggles, too.

Not that he has to go it alone. Dr. Max Calabranes (Ruben Blades), the hospital's chief administrator and a psychiatrist by training, offers advice as needed, and Dr. Pirandello (Kevin J. O'Connor), a fellow oncologist, is available for medical consultation.

Gideon explains his theories on medicine and patient care to an ensemble of interns and residents (Ravi Kapoor, Sophie Keller, Hamish Linklater, Russell Hornsby) who gather to hear him lecture. These scenes often sum up each episode in a tightly written, intelligent manner that explores the philosophical issues raised by the program.

"Doctors don't learn from books. They learn from doing, and Gideon is still learning. He may have the bedside manner of a genteel Marcus Welby, but he is still searching for a way to put his life into some larger context," Attanasio says.

"Experimental medicine is rewriting all the rules, but people yearn for a doctor who will hold their hand, look them in the eye and care for them."

That gives viewers a chance to get to know one of the most complex characters on television. As Attanasio puts it, "I want people to fall in love with this unorthodox doctor who will go to the frontiers of hope when there is no hope."
