Fiery crash kills 16 at N.C. base

By EMERY P. DALESIO
Associated Press Writer
POPE AIR FORCE BASE, N.C.
(AP) - An abandoned fighter jet careened across a runway after a collision with a transport plane, hurling flaming debris at paratroopers waiting for a jump. At least 16 people were killed and 82 injured.

"I saw a huge fireball rolling at us. I only had a second to try to run," Army Sgt. Gregory Cowper, told the Fayetteville Observer-Times. "The fire caught up with me and I started rolling. ... Ammunition was going off. "I couldn't tell where it was. I looked to my left. There was a man on fire. I looked to my right, and there was a man on fire."

The F-16D fighter and the C-130 Hercules transport collided less than 300 feet above the Air Force base Wednesday afternoon after both pilots thought they were cleared to land, said Brig. Gen. Bobby Floyd, a wing commander.

"For some unknown reason they both appeared at the same time in the same place," Floyd said. "Obviously, there was a failure to communicate."

The C-130's five-member crew landed safely despite losing a piece of the tail. The F-16 pilot and a flier being trained ejected safely, but their abandoned jet crashed in flames and skidded across the runway at 180 mph.

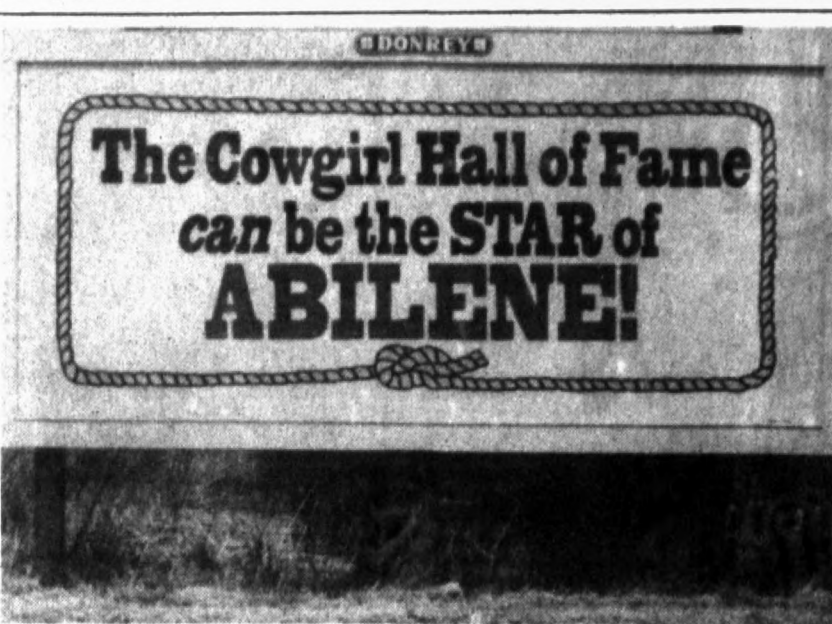

Flying metal punctured the fuel tanks of a C-141 transport plane preparing for takeoff, destroying the plane in a blaze. All six crew members aboard the C-141 escaped injury.

The jet's flaming hulk then skidded into a staging area where about 500 Army troops from the 82nd Airborne and other Fort Bragg units were preparing for jumping exercises. The C-141 was going to take the paratroopers up.

About 60 soldiers were hospitalized, most with burns and broken bones. A medical team specializing in burn injuries was sent from Fort Sam Houston near San Antonio. The names of the victims were not immediately released.

"It was mass mayhem. It was very, very horrible," said Army Sgt. Lawrence Male, whose burned hands were wrapped in huge mitts of white gauze.

"I didn't know how bad I was hurt. I rolled on the ground to make sure I wasn't on fire," Male, a paratrooper from Jackson, Mich., told The News & Observer of Raleigh.

Wanted: Hall of Fame

This sign, located just north of Hereford on U.S. 385, proclaims the desire of the city of Abilene to lure the Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center to that town. The hall's board of directors is deliberating about where to move the hall, which has outgrown its Hereford location. In addition to Abilene, cities still in the running for the hall are Fort Worth, Granbury and Dodge City, Kan.

Billboard declares desire for CHOF

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Lynda Calcote of Abilene had a dream...about a billboard in Hereford promoting Abilene's bid for the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame...and it became a reality.

The miracle of the story is not so much that it happened, but that it was accomplished in less than a week. Getting a message on a billboard normally takes at least 10 days, Calcote was told.

The billboard is located on US-385, just north of Hutto Veterinary Hospital, and carries the message: "The Cowgirl Hall of Fame Can Be the Star of Abilene!"

The idea for a billboard in Hereford began Thursday when Ms. Calcote watched an Abilene television newscast featuring a live broadcast from the Cowgirl Hall of Fame. Calcote had been a member of the Abilene contingent that flew to Hereford for a visit.

The night after watching the broadcast, she dreamed that Abilene had a billboard in Hereford. "The dream was so vivid, I awoke thinking that the sign was already there."

It was late Friday afternoon before she reached Gerald Galbraith, chairman of the Committee for the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame. He thought it was a great concept and told her to "go for it!"

She called an outdoor advertising official in Abilene, telling him the committee wanted to emphasize that the Hall of Fame would be a major attraction in Abilene. He, in turn, contacted a similar company in Amarillo to inquire about available space, and took the closest sign to the museum. The manager of the Abilene outdoor advertising firm started working on the billboard design, then faxed it to an artist in Fargo, N.D.

The artist's sketch was faxed back to Abilene, then faxed to a company in Decatur, Ill., where the billboard was handpainted. It had to be handpainted in order to accomplish the quick turn-around. The completed artwork was sent overnight delivery and arrived in Amarillo Tuesday morning. The billboard was put up in Hereford Wednesday.

"The people of Abilene would like to have the Hall of Fame," said Calcote. "We hope the billboard project, completed in such a short time, shows how Abilenians pull together to make things happen."

Medicare expansion plan wins approval in House subcommittee

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Medicare would be expanded to cover the uninsured and every American guaranteed health coverage by 1998 under a compromise Democratic plan that cleared its first hurdle in Congress.

"It's the first step in a long journey," the bill's author, Rep. Pete Stark, said Wednesday.

But even Stark, D-Calif., predicted wholesale changes when the full House Ways and Means Committee takes up the proposal next month.

Stark's bill was reviled by Republicans on the Ways and Means health subcommittee; at least two Democrats, before voting for it, blasted the way it was financed.

Stark won a 6-5 vote of approval Wednesday night after he dropped a new, across-the-board payroll tax and raised $24 billion a year instead from big corporations, states and Medicare patients.

His bill would allow the uninsured to enroll in Medicare and strictly limit the growth of public and private sector health spending. Republicans called it worse than the original 1,342-page Clinton health plan.

The two Democrats who voted for it reluctantly - Gerald Kleczka of Wisconsin and Jim McDermott of Washington - and a third who voted against it - Mike Andrews of Texas - said Stark's last-minute changes made it worse.

McDermott predicted that Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., would never let Stark's revenue package "see the light of day." Even Stark foresaw "a complete change in the financing package."

"It's not a perfect bill by anyone's stretch of the imagination," said Stark. "There is something ... for each of us to dislike." But he said it met President Clinton's goal of universal coverage and preserved Americans' freedom to choose their own doctors. Stark would not force most Americans into mandatory insurance-purchasing alliances, as Clinton would. His plan would let people keep the private health plans they now have.

Stark scuttled his 0.8 percent payroll tax to pick up the vote of Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich. "This is how bad law is made ... at the 11th hour, to garner a couple of votes," charged Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa.

Rep. Bill Thomas, R-Calif., the panel's top Republican, said, "We may have lost this particular battle, but I can assure you we have not lost the war."

Andrews, who voted with the Republicans for two alternative plans - a managed competition bill and a proposal to require individuals to buy insurance that lost by 6-5 margins - said the full Ways and Means panel must "move toward the center."

Richards, Bush differ over crime statistics

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards is touting a decrease in the state's overall crime rate, but her Republican rival's campaign says Texans don't feel safer.

Richards, a Democrat, announced the second consecutive drop in the crime rate at a Wednesday news conference at Texas Department of Public Safety headquarters.

"These statistics ... tell us that we are not helpless, that we can fight back against crime, and that we can win," she said.

But candidate George W. Bush's press secretary, Deborah Burstion-Wade, said, "Gov. Ann Richards is out of touch if she thinks Texans feel safer today than they did a few years ago."

"Crime in Texas is becoming more violent, more random and the criminals are getting younger than when she took office."

The total number of violent crimes is higher than it was in 1990, the last year before Richards took office, Ms. Burstion-Wade said.

DPS statistics show the only crime to increase from 1992 to 1993 was rape. One official said that could be due to more reporting by victims.

The overall number of crimes - including murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft and motor vehicle theft - went down 6.8 percent, to 1.16 million. Violent and property crimes both went down

There were 6,438.5 crimes per 100,000 Texans, a decrease of 8.8 percent, according to the DPS.

Weishaar, Villarreal, Schlabs file for board

Three last-day filings for the HISD board of trustees created the only contested races in May school and city elections.

Incumbent school board president Ron Weishaar and secretary Raymond Schlabs filed documents for re-election bids on the final filing day for the May 7 election.

Also filing was Angie Villarreal, who will square off against Weishaar in the race for the District 1 seat Weishaar has held since 1991.

Weishaar is a grain merchant for Barrett-Crofoot Feedyard and operates his own cattle grain and trucking business. Villarreal listed her occupation as owner of Two Line Fashions.

Schlabs, who has held his District 3 seat since 1988, will be opposed by Randy Tooley, who filed to run on March 3. Both men are farmers. No new filings were reported for the upcoming city commission race.

Earlier, incumbents Nancy Griego Place 2; Wayne Winget, Place 4; and Carey Black and Roger Eades, at-large commissioners, all filed to run for re-election to their current seats.

None of the commission candidates faces opposition.

Mexican candidate slain

By AMANDA COVARRUBIAS
Associated Press Writer

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) - President Carlos Salinas de Gortari appealed for calm and unity today after an assassin lurking at a campaign rally murdered his party's presidential candidate.

The assassination of Luis Donaldo Colosio on Wednesday in Tijuana threatened to plunge the country into a new political crisis just five months before elections and less than three months after a peasant uprising.

Colosio was shot in the head and stomach while in a crowd of supporters and died three hours later. Authorities first said two men were arrested as suspects, but the attorney general's office said today that only a 23-year-old mechanic was considered a suspect and the other man was held as a witness.

Colosio, the first major politician to be slain since president-elect Alvaro Obregon in 1928, had only a handful of security guards. Gov. Ernesto Ruffo said Colosio asked for a discrete security presence so he could have greater contact with the crowd - a populist style he adopted for his campaign.

Colosio's death was a stunning blow for the embattled leadership of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, which is still reeling from the New Year's Day uprising by Indian peasants in southernmost Chiapas state.

The rebels were seeking improved living conditions and reforms to clean up Mexico's fraud-ridden electoral system through which the ruling party has won every presidential election for 65 years.

Salinas, who handpicked Colosio in November as the PRI candidate for the Aug. 21 election, called the slaying a "cowardly attack."

A grim-faced Salinas went to the Mexico City airport this morning to meet a Mexican air force plane carrying Colosio's body.

The body was taken in a motorcade to party headquarters downtown, where Salinas stood at attention beside a coffin draped with a white cloth bearing the red, white and green party symbol. Party activists applauded and chanted "Colosio, Colosio!"

Sheriff says he can't afford to do background checks

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) - Val Verde's sheriff has become the first Texas law enforcer to challenge the legality of the Brady law, saying his department can't afford to conduct background checks on people seeking to buy handguns.

Sheriff J.R. Koog's bid for a temporary restraining order against the law was rejected March 14. A hearing on a temporary injunction is scheduled for April 15 in San Antonio federal court.

"Congress passed a law aimed directly at chiefs of police and sheriffs, and we have nothing in our budgets to cover it," said Koog, whose legal expenses are being paid by the National Rifle Association.

The Brady law requires a five-day waiting period and background checks of people attempting to purchase handguns.

Koog's lawsuit claims that Congress has mandated duties on local law officers without providing Colosio!" The president declared today a national day of mourning, with the stock market and all banks, government offices and schools closed.

"I call on all my compatriots to share their indignation in serenity and calm," Salinas, who by law is limited to a single term, said in a statement. "I call on them to reaffirm our shared conviction that within the framework of institutions and of the law we can overcome this offense."

funds to carry out the work.

He also objects to the law because it does not say what constitutes a "reasonable background check" of gun buyers. And, he said, he faces a fine of up to $1,000 and or a year in prison for failing to enforce the law properly.

"I am just trying to find the answer to some of this stuff," Koog said.

He is one of five sheriffs who have sued to halt enforcement of the Brady law. The others are in Arizona, Louisiana, Mississippi and Montana.

Although no response had been filed by late Wednesday to Koog's lawsuit, the U.S. Justice Department said in the Arizona case that law officers are free to decide if other duties are more important than checking the backgrounds of would-be handgun purchasers.

"In other words, a 'reasonable' effort may be no effort at all," the government's brief said.

Unpacking

Cheryl Davison, secretary to assistant superintendent Richard Souter, empties cardboard boxes that litter her office in the new Hereford ISD administration building, 15th Street and U.S. 385. School offices were closed on Tuesday and Wednesday to allow administrators and other officials to move from the old administration offices and the second floor of the Stanton Educational Services center into the new facility. The building opened for business today with all personnel in place in their new quarters.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I add to your very good advice to "Amityville," a recovering alcoholic whose sister was the caretaker for their elderly mother?

She and her sister had made their vacation plans at the same time, and the sister wanted "Amityville" to stay home and care for their mother. You said that she should not cancel her plans and that her sister should hire someone to fill in for her while she's away.

My grandmother is nearly 90 years old and in excellent health. She is, however, a chronic complainer. While she does not live with my parents, she makes my mother's life miserable. Mom has high blood pressure and is under a lot of stress due to my healthy grandmother's frequent "emergencies."

I also have two uncles who live in the area and take absolutely no interest in Mom's plight except for an occasional phone call to say how sorry they are that she has to put up with the "lousy situation."

My grandmother is determined to move in with my parents. She has told her doctor that if she gets "sick enough," my mother will be forced to let her move in. So far, Mom has resisted. I thank God because I know that it would kill her. My grandmother says my mother "owes" it to her. Her sons, apparently, have no such obligation.

As you can see, my grandmother is a manipulator from hell. Meanwhile, it breaks my heart to watch my wonderful mother suffer at the hands of this hypochondriac. What do you suggest?—Bitter and Angry.

DEAR B AND A: I suggest that your mom get off the defensive and make it clear to her mother that she is not able to take care of her in her home and if she "gets sick enough," she will have to live in a nursing facility.

Your mom should also insist that her brothers lend a hand and spend more time helping their mother, running errands or driving her to doctor appointments.

If your mother refuses to extricate herself from this situation, you must accept the fact that she has resigned herself to the role of "victim" and there is nothing you can do to save her.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our son "Chuck," who lives in Wisconsin, has become engaged to a young woman who shares his apartment. He has known "Crystal" for several years, and the marriage is scheduled for next fall.

My husband and I feel this marriage has great potential for disaster. We are well-acquainted with Crystal and have told Chuck exactly how we feel about the girl's motives. We have assured him, however, that our love for him will not change and that the decision must be his.

Crystal exhibits the desire to smother Chuck. She has repeatedly positioned herself between him and his hobbies, his friends and his family. We fear her possessiveness will eventually jeopardize his job, where he is highly regarded.

Is there anything we can do without ruining our relationship with our son? Should we be passive and hope Crystal will shoot herself in the foot before it's too late? Please help.—Virginia Parents

DEAR PARENTS: Apparently, you've let Chuck know exactly how you feel about his fiancée, so my advice is to cool it and stop knocking her.

Generally, it's the girl who marries a boy her folks can't stand to "show them." This time, it may be the son who will do it.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Here is a tip to use for vacations. When I decide where we are going, I write or call the city and ask for any information that's available. Most will send you a vacation planner with a free state map.

Once we get there, my first stop is the Tourist Information Center. There I get all the brochures, pamphlets and newspapers I need. I then go through them for money-saving coupons. A lot have half-off or dollars-off of admissions, dinners and discounts on merchandise purchased. You might also ask if they have any type of coupon book available for purchase.

Before we leave home, I put a piece of masking tape on the rolls of film. As I finish a roll, I mark on the tape what we did, the date and the number of exposures. I also keep a small notebook in my purse with what we did day-by-day and note how much money we spent on each purchase.

When I get the film developed, I then put my photo album together with brochures, postcards and pictures taken. My album becomes one of the best souvenirs we have.

Save brochures from places for any future trips; you'll have addresses and phone numbers handy. — A Reader, Grand Prairie, Texas

Dear Heloise: Last year I noticed my 12-year-old daughter was ironing her shirt one morning before school.

As I took a closer look, I realized she did not even have the iron plugged in. I asked her why she didn't have the iron on and her reply was, "The tag says to use a cool iron." — Julie Funk, Frankton, Ind.

Hereford to host tennis tourney, track meet

Hereford will be crawling with runners, jumpers, throwers and tennis players this weekend, as the Beef Capital of the World Tennis Tournament starts Friday, and the Hereford Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Invitational Track Meet will be held Saturday.

The sports weekend starts early this week, as the boys' and girls' golf teams play the first district round today at Comanche Trails in Amarillo. The second district round will be Friday at Palo Duro Creek in Canyon.

Also on Friday, the baseball team will play its first home game in more than three weeks. The Herd will take on Levelland at 4:30 p.m. at Whiteface Field.

Girls' track captains

The annual tennis tournament has a different name and a different format from past years.

It's being sponsored this year by six area feedyards, plus the chamber of commerce. Six teams are coming to Hereford for the tourney: Dumas, Vernon, Andrews, Levelland, Roswell High and Roswell Goddard.

They'll play all day Friday—from 8:30 a.m.—8 p.m.—and spill over to Saturday, starting at 8:30 and playing until about 4:30.

The format includes flights, where each team puts one singles player or doubles team in a bracket, with all No. 1 singles in one bracket, all No. 2's in another, and so on. This format lets more players play.

The track meet on Saturday will include seven girls' teams and seven boys' teams. The girls' teams will be Hereford, Pampa, Randall, Levelland, Floydada, Littlefield and Amarillo High. The boys' teams will be Hereford, Littlefield, Levelland, Tascosa, Palo Duro, Plainview and Lubbock High.

Field events will start at 9 a.m. and conclude by shortly after noon, with the exception of pole vault (2 p.m.). Preliminary track events start at 10 a.m. and conclude at noon. Finals start at 1:30 and conclude at 4:45, running in this order: 3,200-meter run; 400 relay; 800 run; 100/110 hurdles; 100 dash; 800 relay; 400 dash; 300 hurdles; 200 dash; 1,600 run and 1,600 relay.

Gretzky passes up Gordie as hockey's king of goals

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - A wide grin spread across Wayne Gretzky's sweat-soaked face. Giddy with delight, he paused to revel in his new status as hockey's greatest goal-scorer.

Fifteen years ago, Gretzky scored his first NHL goal against the Vancouver Canucks. On Wednesday night, he came full circle. With a flick of his wrist, Gretzky got the puck past Vancouver goalie Kirk McLean and overtook Gordie Howe with 802 goals.

"I don't think words can describe the emotion that I felt, and the feeling that I had," he said, his blue eyes flashing. "I was pretty tickled. It was a pretty fun moment."

A crowd of 16,005 agreed, saluting Gretzky with a prolonged standing ovation punctuated by shouts of his name.

Howe, who retired in 1980, scored 801 goals in 1,767 games over 26 seasons. Gretzky set the record playing in his 1,117th game and 15th season.

It was Gretzky's 62nd NHL record, and now he owns every major offensive record, including total points with 2,448.

The Kings lost the game, 6-3.

Gretzky is the rare athlete who always wants to give the credit to someone else. This time, he finally had to take it all himself.

And his awkwardness showed. "That's just never been my style, to tell you what I think about that stuff," he said. "I think those are the kind of things that people sit around bars and drink beer over and discuss and argue about. That's what sports is all about."

Few can argue Gretzky's ascension to the same level as Hank Aaron, Walter Payton and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Each of them is the all-time leader in their sport.

"It probably depends where you live," Gretzky said. "Up in Canada, it might be up there with those records. Down here, it's probably lower on the totem pole. That's fine by me."

With the Kings on a second-period power play, Gretzky took a cross-ice pass from Marty McSorley, a longtime teammate with both Edmonton and Los Angeles. McSorley had pulled McLean out of the crease before passing to Gretzky, who skated in from the left circle to

Cowboys' brass makes more headlines

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - It looked like a certain camaraderie had blossomed between the owner and coach of the Super Bowl champion Cowboys. If it had, the bloom is definitely off the rose.

The sensitive and simmering relationship between Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson hit the headlines again this week at the NFL owners meeting in Orlando.

Johnson was told by close friend and Chicago coach Dave Wannstedt, who heard it all in the Orlando bar, that Jones had threatened to fire him for a perceived snub and replace Johnson with former Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer.

The "snub" came when Jones wasn't invited to join Johnson at a table that included Wannstedt and Norv Turner, who was the Cowboys offensive coordinator until he left to join the Washington Redskins.

Jones offered a toast to the two Super Bowl championships. Afterwards, those at the table resumed their conversations and Jones left in a huff.

"Jimmy is mostly upset about the Switzer part of it," said another close friend who asked not to be named. "It seemed like Jerry had already talked to Switzer about the job. Jimmy has kind of calmed down, but he's still upset. He's out on his boat, Three Rings, at Key Biscayne."

On Wednesday, Jones refused to apologize and said his private remarks were taken out of context.

"The real facts are that Jimmy's the coach of the Dallas Cowboys. I expect him to be the coach of the Dallas Cowboys during the 1994 season. That's what should be important to our fans," he said. "Anything I said was said off the record and it had to be cast in the terms of how it was said, the humor it was said, the nature it was said, and the context it was said in."

"It's no big deal - just another day in the life of the Dallas Cowboys. I have nothing to apologize about. It's the way things go with us. It's happened several times before. This issue is humorous to me."

Jones said he hasn't spoken to Switzer about being coach of the Cowboys.

"I'm very content with Jimmy being the coach," he said.

It's been one spat after another between Jimmy and Jerry. Jones became irritated after Johnson went on The Late Show With David Letterman and made a joke about his frugality at the post-game Super Bowl party in Atlanta.

"The NFL gave us $60,000 for the party, but I think Jerry put $20,000 of it in his pocket," Johnson said.

At the Super Bowl, Johnson was nettled when Jones claimed he had the ability to coach in the NFL.

"Maybe after we win our 10th Super Bowl in a row I'll let Jerry coach," Johnson said.

Jones was upset before the Super Bowl when Johnson said he was "intrigued" by a chance to become the first head coach of the Jacksonville Jaguars.

"I certainly wouldn't agree to let anybody talk to him and I wouldn't agree to let him out of my agreement," said Jones.

Johnson shot back: "It's very, very easy not to be interested when you own the Dallas Cowboys and you have multimillions of dollars. If you're a working stiff like I am, and like a lot of people are, obviously you look at things."

Johnson, who has five years left on his contract at about $1 million per year, was steamed last September when Jones dawdled in signing Emmitt Smith to a contract. Jones rushed to sign Smith after the Cowboys lost their first two games, but Johnson wasn't happy with the way the deal was handled.

"We had a lot of handicaps to overcome to win the Super Bowl," Johnson said.

Then there was the incident in 1992 at Texas Stadium when Jones appeared on the sidelines with Prince Bandar of Saudia Arabia during the third quarter of a game against the Bears.

Witnesses said the tremor reached a 10 on the Johnson Richter Scale.

The outburst in Orlando seems to have left the hardest feelings between the two ego-driven men.

Cowboys public relations director Rich Dalrymple, when asked about the incident, said, "Oh, this is about the seventh time it's happened."

Michigan coach: late losing streak will help

By The Associated Press
Michigan coach Steve Fisher thinks a late-season losing streak may have helped the Wolverines, even though it cost them a No. 1 seed in the NCAA tournament.
"If you're the No. 1 seed you're going to be favored in every game," Fisher said. "And there's always the self-pressure. You've got to live up to that."
Michigan (23-7), which plays Maryland (18-11) on Friday night at Dallas, already has pressure as it attempts to advance to the NCAA final for the third straight time. The Wolverines lost to Duke in 1992 and North Carolina last year.
If Michigan wins, it advances to Sunday's Midwest Regional championship against either top-seeded Arkansas or Tulsa (23-7).
In Friday night's other games, Boston College (22-10) plays Indiana (21-8) in the East Regional at Miami, followed by Florida (27-7) vs. Connecticut (29-4).

Tonight, the Southeast Regional at Knoxville, Tenn., has Marquette (24-8) vs. Duke (25-5) and Purdue (28-4) vs. Kansas (27-7). The West Regional at Los Angeles has Missouri (27-3) vs. Syracuse (23-6) and Louisville (28-5) vs. Arizona (27-5).
Indiana goes into its game hurting. Sherron Wilkerson is in the hospital with a broken leg, Damon Bailey's painful midsection has to be wrapped for every game, Brian Evans has worn a shoulder harness half the season and Pat Graham has another foot injury to go in his bulging medical file.
"It's not a big surprise. We're not trying to hide that we're hurt," said Graham, a fifth-year senior who missed one season because of a broken left foot, now held together with a screw and two pieces of bone implanted from other parts of his body. "We're trying to get some rest and get as good as we can."

Wilkerson, a freshman guard, broke his leg in Sunday's second-round victory over Temple. Bailey tore abdominal muscles several weeks ago and hardly has practiced. Evans dislocated a shoulder twice during the season.
"Boston College is coming off a huge win," Graham said of the Eagles' 75-72 upset of North Carolina. "I don't see how you can be any more pumped up than they are."
Glenn Robinson, the Purdue All-American who led the nation in scoring at 30.3 points a game, said he doesn't mind the attention going into the Jayhawks' game against Purdue.
"I know I have to be on top of my game," he said.
Marquette (24-8) hasn't been to the Final Four since winning the tournament in 1977 under coach Al McGuire.

Melvin Booker, Missouri's leading scorer with an 18-point average, said the Tigers will have to lay off their outside shooting against Syracuse's zone defense.
"We have a tendency of standing around in a zone just looking for 3-point shots instead of working our inside players like Jevon (Crudup)," Booker said. "Going into this game, we've got to work and just keep moving like its a man (defense)."
Crudup, a 6-foot-9 forward, and Mark Atkins, a 6-6 guard, give Missouri a decided height advantage.
Louisville coach Denny Crum doesn't buy into the theory a team's chances against Arizona depend solely on stopping guards Damon Stoudamire and Khalid Reeves.

"That very well might be true," he said. "But they have to guard our guards, too. We have pretty good guards even though one of them is a freshman (DeJuan Wheat). Our game plan is to slow them down a little bit, keep them from totally dominating the game. At this level, it's rare when one or two players can win for their squad, too."

14-for-19 shooting as Chicago handed Philadelphia its eighth straight home loss.
Tim Perry led Philadelphia with 19 points and 10 rebounds.
Pistons 111, Clippers 107
Detroit's reserves outscored the Los Angeles Clippers' bench players 53-23 and Isiah Thomas got his 9,000th assist.
Terry Mills had 21 points and 14 rebounds, while reserves Lindsey Hunter had 19 points and Chitcut 12 in the Pistons' sixth win in eight games after they lost 32 of 37 outings. Ron Harper led all scorers with 27 points for the Clippers.
Pacers 78, Cavaliers 77
Indiana, held to 61 points at Cleveland on Tuesday, turned the tables on the Cavaliers, but it needed the last second to do it.
Dale Davis put back an offensive rebound with 0.8 seconds remaining, giving the Pacers the victory one night after the Cavaliers embarrassed them 93-61.
Gerald Wilkins led Cleveland with 22 points. Derrick McKey was the top scorer for Indiana with 12.

Magic's shooters kill Jazz

By The Associated Press
The Utah Jazz couldn't stop their slide by surrounding Shaquille O'Neal.
The Jazz blanketed O'Neal, holding him to 11 shots, but the strategy made room for Orlando's outside shooters, and the Magic won 98-93 Wednesday night.
"Every time I touched the ball, guys dropped and I was just trying to hit the open man," said O'Neal, who made seven of his 11 shots and scored 19 points, 10 under his average.
O'Neal's frustration surfaced late in the game when he was whistled for a technical foul with 2:02 left for elbowing Tyrone Corbin. Utah made two of the three resulting free throws, closing to 89-87.
Of his elbow to Corbin, O'Neal said, "I just have to let people know they can't grab on me all night. If somebody's not going to do something about it, I guess I have to. My name's Shaq, not Tre."
Anfernee Hardaway scored 21 points, Dennis Scott 18 and Scott Skiles 11, nine of them in the fourth quarter, for Orlando. Skiles had a 3-pointer with 2:44 left and hit a 17-footer with 11 seconds remaining, giving the Magic a 94-91 advantage.
Karl Malone had 27 points and 17 rebounds and John Stockton 22 points and 12 assists for the Jazz, who lost for the sixth time in seven games after winning 10 straight.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Chicago 99, Philadelphia 87; Atlanta 100, Charlotte 92; Detroit 111, the Los Angeles Clippers 107; Indiana 78, Cleveland 77; and the Los Angeles Lakers 112, Dallas 109.
Los Angeles, which officially announced the hiring of Magic Johnson as coach earlier in the day, outscored Dallas 13-2 in the final minutes.
Nick Van Exel, who scored 28 points, led the visiting Lakers down the stretch, scoring five points in the game-winning run before passing for their final three baskets.
Hawks 100, Hornets 92
Atlanta became the first Eastern Conference team to clinch a playoff berth as Kevin Willis had 32 points and 16 rebounds against Charlotte.
Willis had five points and an assist in a 7-0 run that gave the Hawks an 85-75 lead with 7:40 remaining. Atlanta extended the margin to 95-81 on Willis' tip-in with 3:54 left before Eddie Johnson's 3-pointer with 56 seconds remaining made it 96-92.
But a free throw by Willis and three by Stacey Augmon closed the scoring as the Hawks extended their winning streak to four games.
Alonzo Mourning led the Hornets with 25 points and 15 rebounds.
Bulls 99, 76ers 87
Scottie Pippen scored 31 points on

Lady Raiders to face Tide tonight

By CHIP BROWN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp has proven to be a master at chemistry.
Penn State coach Rene Portland hopes she finally has all the right elements as well.
With a starting lineup featuring three new junior college transfers, Sharp has managed to get her team in position to defend its national championship as the No. 2 seed in the Midwest Regional.
Second-ranked Penn State is the top seed, and both teams must overcome stiff tests tonight if they hope to battle each other for a berth in the Final Four.
The Nittany Lions (27-2), who held the No. 1 ranking in January, will match their running and pressing against No. 14 Seton Hall (27-4), which is making its first NCAA tournament appearance.
The ninth-ranked Lady Raiders (28-4) and No. 16 Alabama (24-6), a mild upset winner in the second round over third-seeded Iowa, will do battle in the other regional semifinal.

The Lady Raiders matched their best start ever this year, beating Vanderbilt, Stanford and Seton Hall without all-everything scoring machine Sheryl Swoopes and two other graduated starters from last year's team.
"To have three junior college players come in and face the pressures of trying to lead a team that's trying to repeat is a credit to them," Sharp said, giving extra praise to transfer Connie Robinson, the team's leading scorer "who has been compared to Sheryl (Swoopes) all year."
Meanwhile, Portland has taken 12 teams to the NCAA tournament, one as a regional top seed (1991) and four others as No. 3 seeds and none have won more than two games in postseason.
The Nittany Lions' past three NCAA tournament appearances have ended in the first or second rounds.
When asked Wednesday about her team's lack of postseason success, Portland tried to stay upbeat.
"We have had a great season," she said. "The Big Ten schedule has been good preparation for us. The leadership we have has been great. The players get along with each other and they ride each other hard to improve."

The Nittany Lions are led by the inside-outside attack of forward Helen Holloway and guards Tina Nicholson and Katina Mack. Holloway "carried the team on her back," according to Portland, as she scored 27 points in an 85-68 second round victory over Kansas.
Seton Hall is led by Jodi Brooks, a 3-point bomber, who averages 18.6 points per game. The Pirates hung on to beat Texas 71-66 in the second round last Saturday, preventing the Lady Longhorns from hosting the Midwest Regional.
"I would think the other coaches are excited we are here instead of Texas with the advantages they would have had as the home team," said Seton Hall coach Phyllis Mangina. "And hopefully, if they keep thinking that way, maybe they won't worry too much about Seton Hall."
Mangina says her team is so new to the NCAA tournament experience that, "It's almost like we don't know any better. Our players have been flying. I don't know if we needed an airplane to get here."
The Lady Raiders, who are expecting a throng of fans to travel the 334 miles from Lubbock to Austin for tonight's game, will try to force a half-court game against the run-and-gun Crimson Tide, Sharp said.
Sharp said star forward Michi Atkins, who twisted her ankle in a second-round 75-65 victory over Creighton "will be 100 percent."
"To say Alabama pushes the ball up the floor is an understatement," Sharp said. "I watched the first few minutes of tape we had on them, got sick and turned it off. They are the best transition team we have seen all year."
Alabama coach Rick Moody, who pleaded with Lady Longhorns fans for support Wednesday, has endured a season without four-year top assistant Dottie Kelso, who died suddenly from a cyst that burst in the back of her head last September.
"We hope to keep her spirit alive by representing everything she stood for, things like intensity and commitment," he said.
Star guard Betsy Harris said Kelso "was a friend, a coach and a parent. She told us she wanted a ring. We bombed on the Southeast Conference championship. Now we are shooting for an NCAA championship."

Black coaches to get voice in NCAA decisions

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Black coaches will get at least a voice in the NCAA on academic eligibility standards, scholarship limits and other disputes that threatened to disrupt this college basketball season.
As part of a mediated settlement, the NCAA said Wednesday it also will try to increase the number of blacks on its senior and middle-management staffs and re-examine recruiting rules. Black coaches claim those rules prevent them from mentoring troubled teen-agers in inner city neighborhoods.
A 15-point agreement between the NCAA and the Black Coaches Association was announced by the Justice Department's Community Relations Service. The service was called in nearly 11 weeks ago to mediate the dispute after the coaches threatened to boycott Division I-A basketball games.
The coaches took the action after the NCAA, at its annual convention in San Antonio, rejected by a 119-91 vote their proposal to restore a 14th scholarship for men's basketball programs.
Even though the 14th scholarship was the flash point, a feud was brewing for years between the coaches and the NCAA over college presidents assuming more direct control of athletics in the wake of recruiting and academic scandals.
Southern Cal coach George Raveling, a BCA member, called

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Twenty-five years ago Monday, a young Navy lieutenant named Bob Kerrey led a group of Navy SEAL commandos up a 350-foot cliff and into the heart of a camp of North Vietnamese operatives.

Then one of his men bumped into a sleeping enemy soldier. In the ensuing firefight a grenade mangled one of Kerrey's legs, but he hung on to issue instructions for the next hour.

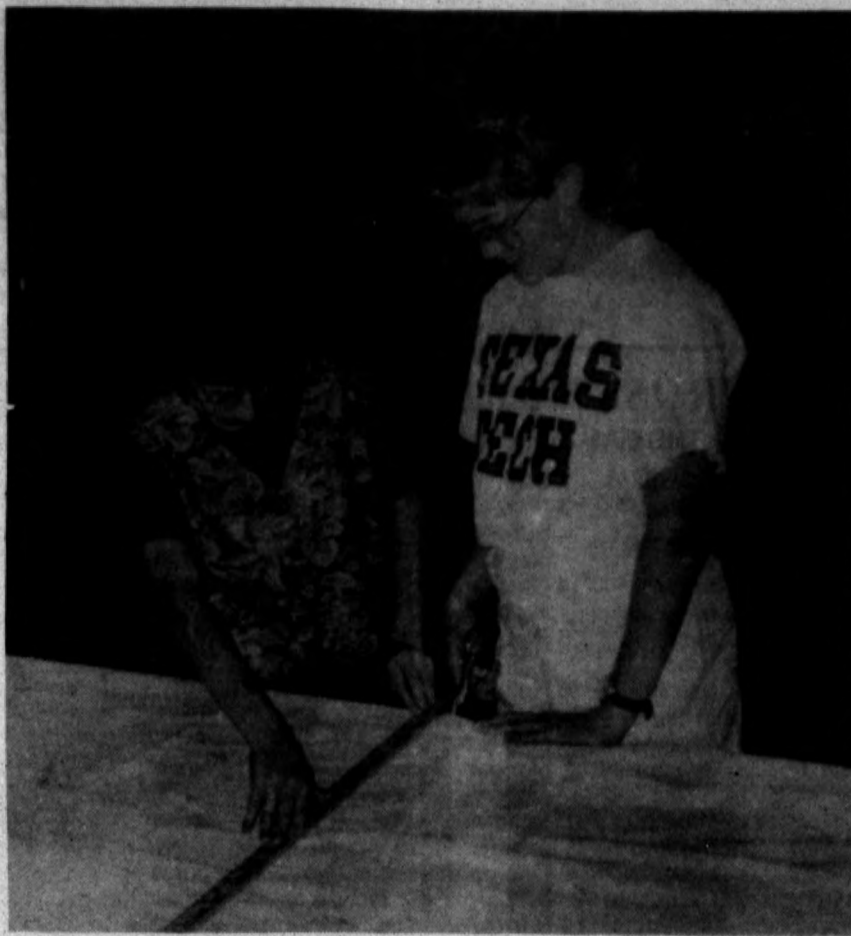

Kerrey won the Medal of Honor for his work that night, but has mixed emotions about the award.

"I don't like to attach it to myself and let people assume somehow that I feel that I'm particularly special as a consequence of having received it," he said recently.

He once thought about refusing the medal, but eventually came to terms with his role in the war and decided to accept it.

Working on project

Deaf Smith County 4-H members, Bekki Feller and Ashley Bridge, work diligently on a community service project to benefit King's Manor Nursing Home. The girls are using their clothing and textile project skills to cut tablecovers which will then be hem finished by the Family Community Education members. Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers in the clothing project are working on a number of project related workshops and learning activities in preparation for the April 28 4-H Fashion Show.

PRINCETON BOROUGH, N.J.

(AP) - Author Peter Benchley, who recently wrapped up his first acting job, doesn't think he'll be trading his pen for a film career any time soon.

"The phone hasn't been ringing off the hook with acting offers," Benchley said. "I don't expect it will be."

Benchley, who wrote "Jaws," plays an editor who fires writer Dorothy Parker in the upcoming movie "Mrs. Parker."

He got the role after calling the filmmakers to offer his expertise. Grandfather Robert Benchley and Parker both belonged to the famed "round table," a group of literati who gathered to exchange bon mots at New York's Algonquin Hotel.

Director Alan Rudolph invited Benchley to visit the set in Montreal, then asked him to play Vanity Fair editor Frank Crowninshield.

The movie, scheduled for fall release, stars Jennifer Jason Leigh

News of small businesses

Where are the best small businesses in America? Dun & Bradstreet and the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) Education Foundation want to know so that they can recognize them with cash awards totalling more than $40,000 as part of the second annual Best of America Awards.

The Best of America Awards, which are made possible by a grant to the NFIB Education Foundation from Dun & Bradstreet Small Business Services, will publicize and give cash awards to four companies that demonstrate:

-Growth in their business - in sales, plant expansions, product extensions or job creation;

-Innovation in how they run their business, such as exceptional creativity in management, sales/marketing or product offerings; and

-Active community participation, using small-business creativity and knowledge to solve community problems.

This year, the Best of America Awards' staff will select 60 regional semifinalists from the eligible entries submitted. Next, four independent jury panels will select four regional winners from among the semifinalists. Last, a prestigious, national panel of judges will review the four regional finalists and select the national grand-prize winner. The grand-prize winner will receive $25,000 and a crystal commemorative. The three remaining regional winners will receive $5,000 each. All four winners will be announced and honored at a special ceremony in Washington, D.C. on Sept. 20.

Last year the Vermont Teddy Bear Company, cited for its unique corporate culture, marketing creativity and a community relations, won the award's national grand prize.

To qualify for the Best of America

Awards, a company must be a for-profit business with fewer than 250 employees. It must also have been in business at least three years under the same management. The deadline for all nominations is April 30.

This year's national panel of judges will be chaired by Jane Applegate, syndicated small-business writer and an expert on small-business resources. John Sortino, president of the Vermont Teddy Bear Company and the 1993 Best of America Award winner, will join Applegate on the national jury along with Terri dial, executive vice president of small business lending at Wells Fargo Bank. Two more national judges will be announced in February.

Companies may nominate themselves or may be nominated by small-business advocates, such as trade associations, government agencies, or local chambers of commerce. Advocates who nominate one of the four regional winners are eligible for awards worth $2,500. There is no limit to the number of nominations an organization or individual may submit. Nomination forms and information can be obtained by calling 1-800-688-6342, priority code 110.

NEW YORK (AP) - Howard Stern's listeners may be politically incorrect, but they know when to support their man.

More than 200 listeners called to join the Libertarian Party on Tuesday after the radio bad boy announced plans to run for governor and instantly became Mario Cuomo's best-known challenger.

"I'm going to win," the Federal Communications Commission's whipping boy told his 3 million listeners. "I'm going to be the next governor of New York."

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Your column about the various causes of vertigo touched on a problem I have suffered with most of my life: motion sickness. My husband thinks I am exaggerating when I insist that I always have to ride in the front seat of the car. Air travel is a disaster. It is not that I am afraid to fly; the motion makes me quite sick.

I do get some relief by taking Antivert, but I am still sick and may remain sick for the day following the flight. This sounds ridiculous, but I can't even watch a movie that has a car chase scene in it. I get vertigo and feel queasy at my stomach. My husband laughs at me. Please explain to him my problem is real. Any suggestions would be appreciated.

DEAR READER: Motion sickness may not be fatal, but it can be quite disabling at the time. Some people do have exceptionally sensitive balance canals, but almost everyone will develop motion sickness if the stimulation to the balance mechanism is strong enough.

A good example of stimulation of the balance system is when a child whirls round and round until he is so dizzy he has trouble standing up. The whirling motion does it, and of course, it is temporary.

Sitting in the front seat of the car is helpful. If you sit in the back seat reading or not paying attention to your environment, you are apt to have motion sickness. It is best to sit in the front seat and not look out the side, but concentrate on the visual field directly in front of you. If you look out the side and see telephone poles whizzing by, you are more likely to get motion sickness.

Chase scenes are photographed as if you were inside the moving car which can give a susceptible person motion sickness. The best approach here is to close your eyes until it is over. Your balance system actually depends on nerve impulses from your entire body for position sense, the visual cues and the balance canals in your ears. These three inputs must then be integrated by your brain. Any of these four systems can be stimulated until you have motion sickness.

You will understand your problem better after reading Special Report 110, Dizziness, Balance, Vertigo, Motion Sickness, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/110, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Try out the scopolamine patch behind your ear. Test out your response before making a trip, and if you tolerate it well, you may find it will help you a great deal for air travel.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 54 years old, female, and have gallstones. Recently I had a gut-wrenching pain in the area over the gallbladder. This went on every afternoon for about two weeks. Then all of a sudden it was gone — nothing. Is it possible that one or more stones could have passed through the gallbladder to wherever a gallstone might go?

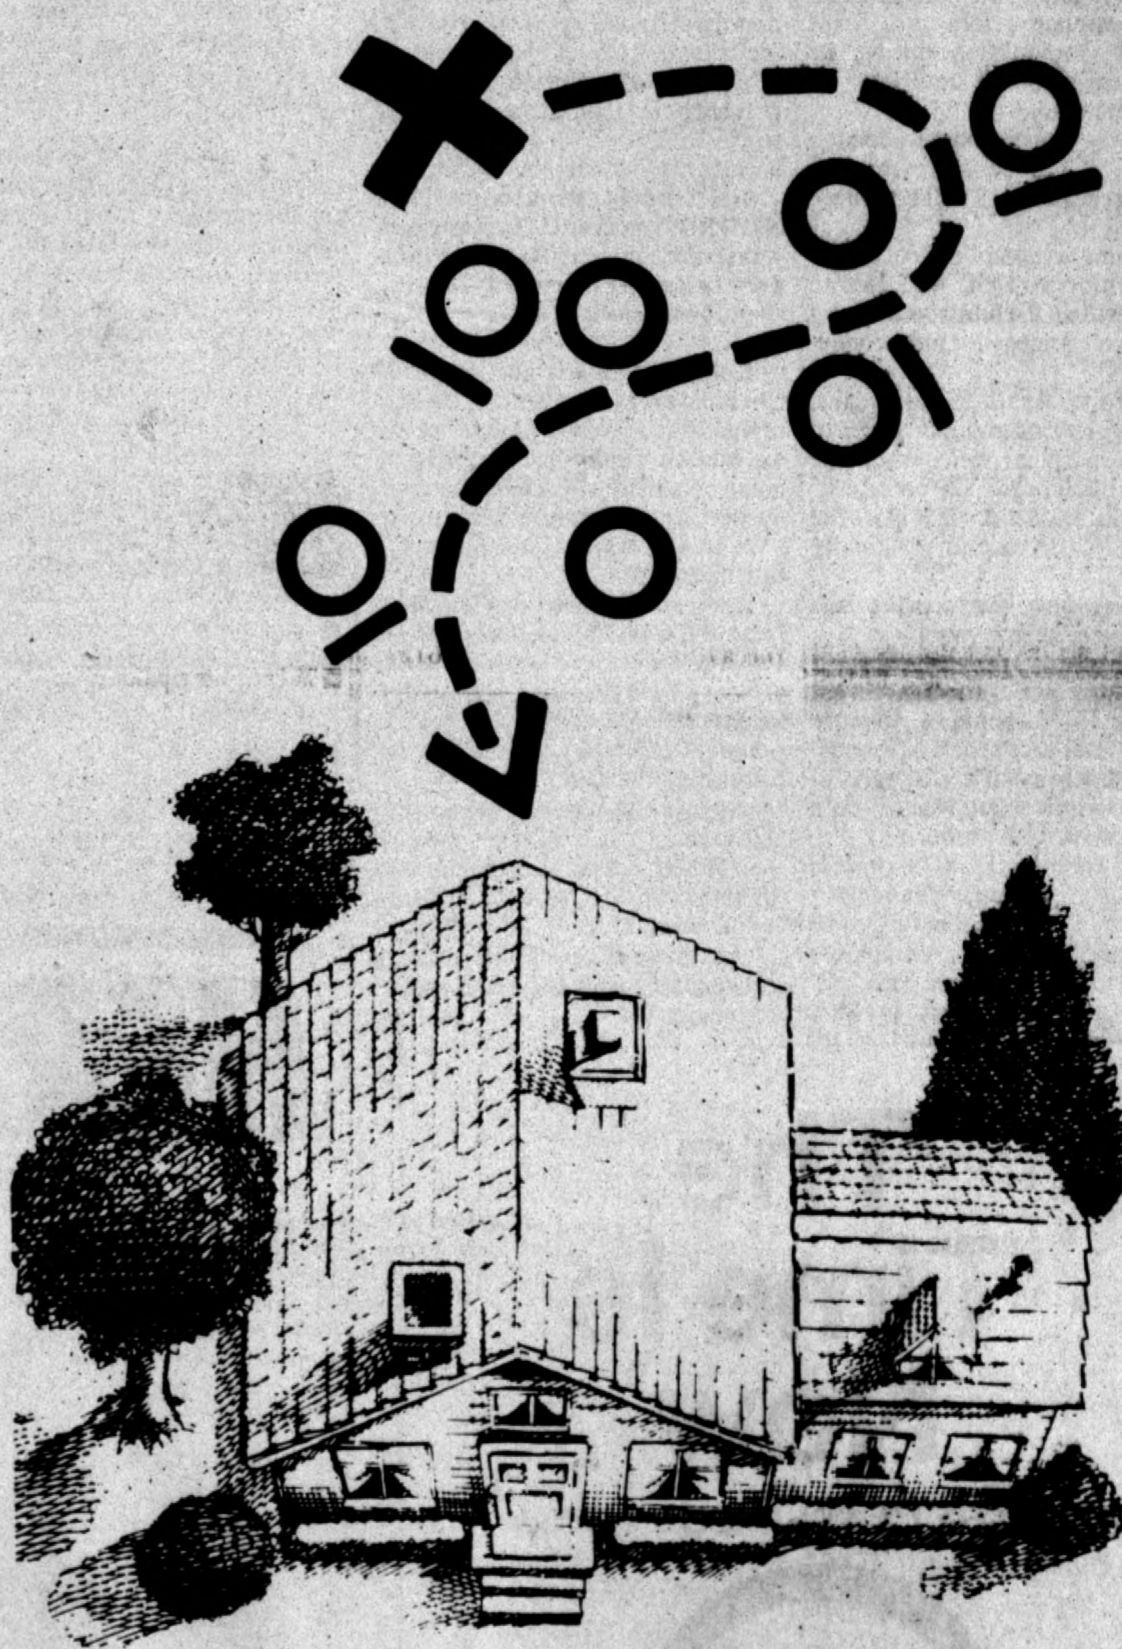

DEAR READER: It's possible. Intermittent pain, however, would be unusual. Most often the stone lodges in the duct that drains the gallbladder and that causes acute inflammation of the gallbladder with persistent pain. It is usually severe enough for the patient to seek medical attention. There could be other causes, including a kidney stone that passed, so I would not speculate on the cause of the pain.

But I would encourage you to see your doctor. You may need further evaluation, and if you do have such attacks on a recurrent basis from gallbladder disease, you may be a candidate for surgery. If a gallstone did pass through the bile ducts, it would enter the small intestine.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Williams calls for help for oilmen

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - One of Texas' most famous oilmen, Clayton Williams, dressed as a dinosaur to tell government regulators that without some help, independent producers are going to become extinct.

"I live in a very hostile environment," Williams, owner of a Midland energy company, told the Texas Railroad Commission during its annual hearing on the state of the oil and gas industry.

"If my environment doesn't improve, I will be more than an endangered species. I will be gone," he said.

Williams, a Republican candidate for governor in 1990 who lost to Democrat Ann Richards, outlined a "stay alive" strategy for independent producers.

The proposal calls for tax breaks, fewer regulations and incentives to maintain marginal wells when the price of oil fell below $20 per barrel. He said a federal oil import fee would help, but was not politically possible.

Oil prices have been nearing their lowest levels in five years.

In recent days, prices have risen from $14 per barrel for light sweet crude, the U.S. benchmark, to more than $15. But that's well below the $20 average price of a year ago.

The low prices are blamed on a market awash with crude.

Williams called himself "dinosaurius, damn-near extinctus" as he roared into the meeting room and talked about his company's layoffs and pay cuts due to cheap oil. "We are determined to keep trying, but I think it is in the best interest of this country, and this state, that the independent not become extinct," he said.

Williams has used theatrics before to get his point across. Several years ago he rode up the Capitol walk on a horse to promote deregulation of his long-distance telephone business.

Independent oil producers drill approximately 85 percent of the oil wells in the U.S. and produce about 37 percent of the crude oil and 63 percent of the natural gas, according to the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

But Thomas Coffman, president of TIPRO, said many of those stripper wells, which produce about 10 barrels a day or less, are in jeopardy of being shut down because of the low price of oil.

Coffman praised the Railroad Commission - the state's energy regulatory agency - for creating incentives for independents that were being considered on a national level by the Senate Finance Committee. "We're not asking for handouts," Coffman said.

Railroad Commission Chairman James E. "Jim" Nugent said the oil and gas industry receives little respect. "We live in a nation that treats the energy industry as renegade polluters and pirates of our natural resources," he said.

Meanwhile, natural gas company spokesmen said their industry performed well in keeping up with demand during a record cold winter in the north.

But they also asked for a reduction in what they said were unnecessary regulations.

N.Y. court to hear plea to prosecute military criminals in civilian courts

By JOEL STASHENKO
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Michael Bridgewater's life did not last long. His father's sentence for taking it away wasn't much longer.

Michael was 2-1/2 months old when his father shook him to death at an apartment in Carthage in 1991. Leslie Bridgewater admitted to manslaughter but got just a year in jail - a military jail, because he was an Army sergeant based at Fort Drum in northern New York.

Another Fort Drum sergeant was accused that year of raping a 13-year-old girl at another off-base apartment. Harvey Booth got two years for indecent assault and giving a minor alcohol.

People in Carthage were furious. Civilian prosecutors say both men escaped meaningful punishment because they were convicted at courts-martial in a justice system that protects soldiers.

"We were not pleased by the lenient sentences," said Jane LaRock, an assistant district attorney in Jefferson County who hopes to prosecute both men in New York's civilian courts. "The local community has great interest in what happens to the citizens, and particularly the children."

New York's highest court, the Court of Appeals, was to hear arguments today from LaRock and from a public defender for the former soldiers, who claims that prosecuting them again in civilian courts would amount to unconstitutional double jeopardy, or trying someone more than once for the same offense.

A lower court agreed and threw out the state's case against Bridgewater and Booth. Jefferson County authorities want the high court to reinstate the charges, which carry up to 25 years to life.

Under military law, the servicemen could have received no jail time, even after pleading guilty or being convicted by a military jury.

Generally, military personnel are tried by courts-martial if their offenses occurred on military property. Wrongdoing that occurs off base is usually prosecuted by civilian authorities.

LaRock argued that the military overstepped its authority in both cases because the crimes occurred in Carthage, outside Fort Drum.

"It is shocking to allow a military court, whose primary goal is to maintain discipline among the members of its ranks and to weed out those who are not good soldiers, to usurp the power of the state to prosecute serious criminal offenses," she said.

Military officials haven't challenged her argument and are staying out of the case, LaRock said. Calls for comment were not returned Wednesday by military prosecutors.

The public defender in Jefferson County, John Hallett, said courts in at least one other state, Oklahoma, have recognized proceedings in military courts as being the same as those in civilian courts for double jeopardy purposes.

"A defendant who has been convicted by a court-martial proceeding has in fact stood trial in every sense of that term," Hallett said in court papers.

Military law contains no double jeopardy protection. "They reserve the right to try all service members, whether or not they were tried in civilian courts," said Lt. Col. Doug Hart, a Pentagon spokesman.

The two cases have prompted Fort Drum authorities and Jefferson County prosecutors to try to avoid crossing paths in the future.

"Since then, and because of these problems, we've been communicating with them more closely," LaRock said.
