Whitewater hearings open on Capitol Hill

Pre-race fine tuning

Cub Scout Pack 50 members Brent Brethour, foreground; and William Whitson, background; receive last-minute instructions and equipment checks before their race Sunday at Veterans Park. The Pack gathered at the park for its second annual Pack 50 Cubmobile Derby, traveling down the main road of the park, using nothing but inertia to power the homemade vehicles. Ten boys competed in the double-elimination competition. Winner was Dustin White, with Whitson coming in second and Sean Bradley taking third place. One racer, Dusty Clark, retired after his racer crashed into a ditch.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Clinton administration's ethics were being placed under scrutiny in Congress today with the opening of Whitewater hearings into how the president's aides gathered information about a politically sensitive federal investigation.

The leadoff witness for the hearings, White House counsel Lloyd Cutler, was expected to argue that contacts between Clinton aides and Treasury Department officials broke no ethics rules.

But Republicans planned to challenge that and also to question whether the administration's explanations have been completely forthcoming.

"Public candor will be on trial," said Rep. Jim Leach, ranking Republican on the House Banking Committee, which was holding the hearings.

Accounts of Whitewater-related discussions between the White House and Treasury have been seeping out over the past five months.

The first congressional hearings were limited in scope to those contacts, leaving out the bulk of issues in the Whitewater affair, which are under investigation by White-water prosecutor Robert Fiske.

Fiske already has concluded that the White House-Treasury contacts were not criminal.

Presidential adviser George Stephanopoulos said the Whitewater controversy has been "overblown in a lot of instances" and predicted the hearings would show that there was "a lot less to this than met the eye." Stephanopoulos' remark came during an appearance on CNN's "Larry King Live."

But Leach said in advance that during the hearings, "a pattern of misleading the public will develop." The congressman said the chief question to be addressed was whether the administration intentionally misled.

A central figure in the hearings: Deputy Treasury Secretary Roger Altman, who is now under fire, five months after disclosing to Congress the first of more than 20 White House-Treasury contacts.

Altman has altered his account several times to disclose more contacts.

Altman is the No. 2 Treasury official, but until last March he also was acting chief of the Resolution Trust Corp. That was the agency investigating the Whitewater land venture and its ties to a failed savings and loan owned by the Clintons' Whitewater partner, James McDougal. The Treasury Department eventually referred a number of matters regarding the S&L to the Justice Department for possible criminal prosecution.

The Clinton administration launched a political offensive on the eve of the hearings, with Clinton and Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen saying they wanted Altman to remain in his post.

And Altman held a news conference, saying he has no plans to resign. He was "wholly accurate" when he told Congress he did not learn until this year about Whitewater briefings given to senior White House aides last fall, Altman told reporters.

Another Treasury official, Joshua Steiner, also went on the offensive.

The lawyer for Steiner tried to downplay inflammatory entries his client made about the Whitewater contacts in a personal diary.

Reid Weingarten, Steiner's lawyer, said such references were "offhand, impressionistic" and sometimes recorded weeks after the fact.

And the Clinton administration found an ally in the House banking committee's chairman, Henry Gonzalez, who said that many of the claims about the White House-Treasury contacts are "outright lies, distortions or exaggerations."

Much of what comes out in the hearings, even the Republicans concede, will be material that's already been disclosed.

But one question that remains is exactly what Clinton learned about the Whitewater-related referrals by Treasury to the Justice Department and what, if anything, the president did after learning about that.

Probation given to two men here

Two defendants in 222nd District Court were granted probation Monday, on completion of terms in the Special Alternative Incarceration Program of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Judge David Wesley Gulley placed Luis Balderaz on probation for five years after SAIP. He was convicted earlier of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Manuel Garcia, convicted of burglary of a building, was given a six-year probation sentence and fined $1,000, after finishing SAIP.

Terms of probation of two other defendants were modified.

Vincent Perez Garcia, convicted of hindering a secured creditor and bail jumping and failure to appear, was placed on intensive supervision for three months. Originally, he was sentenced to five years' probation on each charge.

Convicted earlier of tampering with a government record, Elizabeth Ann Chavez, was ordered to enter the Taylor County Restitution Center as terms of her four-year probation sentence were modified. She also must spend 60 days in jail and three months under intensive supervision. Her probation was extended one year.

Commissioners shown vote counting machine

A demonstration of vote counting equipment was given Deaf Smith County Commissioners Monday after they finished routine business on their agenda.

Approval was given for a water line across a county road and a request was received for county funding for the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence office.

County Judge Tom Simons pointed out that a $5,000 allocation for the program is included in the budget for next year. Representatives of Hart Forms and Services, Don Blakely and Roger Tinnen, explained the benefits of the fiber optics vote counter and demonstrated its use.

Blakely said the counter reduces time of counting and produces reports required in the election process. Cost of the equipment is $21,595.

Commissioners took no action after the hour-long demonstration.

Lawmaker defends firm working for state

AUSTIN (AP) - A powerful state legislator says there's nothing wrong with his concrete company doing business in the state's prison-building boom.

The Austin American-Statesman reports that the ties are prompting calls for changes in the state's ethics laws.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, who chairs the House committee that determines which bills are sent to the floor for a vote, says he obtained an attorney general's letter in 1987 that OK'd such work for Transit Mix Concrete and Materials Co.

During the past three years, Texas has undertaken a $1.3 billion construction program as it doubles the size of the state prison system.

During that time, Transit Mix has grown from eight ready-mix plants in the Beaumont area to more than 30 locations across Texas, the American-

Statesman said. Several of those are located near prisons, existing and planned. To date, the newspaper said, Transit Mix has supplied concrete for six prison projects and might do so for others.

Government watchdog groups say the business raises questions.

They cite the Texas Constitution, which prohibits legislators from having direct or indirect interest in state contracts authorized while they are or were in office. Critics contend the prison-concrete arrangements are a conflict of interest.

Stiles says the attorney general's office approval he received said it was OK to do such work as a subcontractor. General contractors bid for state work; Stiles' company submits his concrete bid to the contractor. The general contractor's bid is public record; the bids from Stiles and competing subcontractors aren't public because they are considered private business transactions.

The American-Statesman said there are calls for an investigation and for changes in state law to prohibit Stiles from doing such work. Travis County prosecutors, charged with enforcing ethics laws at the Capitol, say they intend to seek a legal opinion from Attorney General Dan Morales.

"What Mark Stiles is doing may be legal, but that doesn't mean it should be," said Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen.

"There's something wrong when a legislator can vote on prison construction bills, sit on committees (that oversee the prison agency) and then can sell the concrete for the construction," Smith said.

Added Suzy Woodford, executive director of Common Cause of Texas, "Clearly, this is a loophole that needs to be closed."

But Stiles points to a memorandum prepared for then-Attorney General Jim Mattox in 1987. It said lawmakers could own an interest "in a business which sells goods and services to businesses that contract with the state" without violating the Texas Constitution.

The memo said the constitutional prohibition did not include subcontractors.

"I didn't want to violate anything," said Stiles, who was elected to the Texas House in 1982. "If we hadn't gotten that letter, I would have quit the Legislature."

Water purification system going in to serve Rwandan refugees in Zaire

By SHAWN POGATCHNIK Associated Press Writer

GOMA, Zaire (AP) - With clean water crucial to slowing the spread of a deadly cholera epidemic, American soldiers started setting up the first water purification systems in Goma today for 1 million Rwandan refugees.

The border town, which was swamped with refugees earlier this month, rattled to the roar of aid plane after plane today. A record 36 aircraft landed Monday, and a similar number - including a huge U.S. cargo plane - was expected today.

But a lack of staff and trucks kept tons of emergency food backed up at Goma's tiny airport.

After sunrise today, 15 U.S. Army specialists armed with M-16 assault rifles drove to the shore of Lake Kivu to inspect the site for two water purification machines.

"These people will have fresh water by the end of the day," said Staff Sgt. William Thomas, 45, of Fort Worth, Texas.

The two machines will be able to purge cholera bacteria from the waters of Lake Kivu at the rate of 1,200 gallons an hour. With the United Nations putting basic daily consumption at five quarts per person, that would only put a dent in the overwhelming need.

A growing stream of refugees was leaving the scene of death and squalor behind and returning home. The number crossing back over the border since it was reopened Sunday was estimated today at 20,000, said Ray Wilkinson, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Undersecretary-General Peter Hansen, in charge of U.N. emergency relief operations in Goma, said the United Nations doesn't have the money or staff to feed and care for the refugees. "It is out of control," he said.

Wilkinson said the United States needs to step forward and impose a "military-style operation" to ease the crisis on the tarmac.

"The Americans could come in and run this airport far more efficiently than it's being run right now," he said. "We hope that will happen."

But he noted today that flights were already nearing the airport's capacity, and transferring responsibility would be touchy considering that French forces have run air traffic control since mid-June.

Privately, many independent aid workers and some U.S. personnel blamed the air traffic foulups on the French troops, who arrived last month on a humanitarian mission. In addition, Zairian troops have been demanding payments of $2,000 per landing.

The speed and scope of the Hutu refugees' flight into Zaire has overwhelmed relief agencies. The Hutus fled victorious Tutsi rebels, fearing retribution for the massacre of 200,000 to 500,000 people, mostly Tutsis, by Hutu militias.

An estimated 250,000 children have died since Rwanda's civil war reignited in early April, UNICEF said.

Richards backs off support of lake protection program

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Ann Richards has backtracked on her support of a federal program to protect some Texas waters from pollution, saying she would like to see an alternative solution considered by the state.

Richards, a Democrat, has been blasted by Republican challenger George W. Bush for earlier saying she favored designating several bodies of water as federally recognized "outstanding national resource waters."

They are Caddo Lake in East Texas; Austin's Barton Creek and Barton Springs; Christmas Bay in the Houston area; South Bay near Brownsville; and waters within Guadalupe Mountains National Park. Such designation means, in essence, that no increase in pollution would be allowed in those waters, according to the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. Opponents of the designation say it would stymie development.

The subject came up during a campaign stop by Bush in East Texas. When asked about her stance later in Corsicana, Richards announced her new position.

"I am no longer convinced that this federal program is the best way" to protect the waters, Richards said, according to campaign spokesman Chuck McDonald.

Later Monday, officials released a letter she sent state conservation commission Chairman John Hall.

In it, she said elected officials who initially endorsed the designation have questioned whether it's the best way to go because of concern over federal intervention in land use and water management.

"Our recent experiences with federal agencies and their ham-handed approach causes me serious concern about taking action that increases their authority in local matters," Richards wrote. "The possibility of greater federal involvement in state or local management or interference with economic development is unacceptable."

She asked that the state commission consider developing an alternative approach.

Bush had criticized Richards for supporting the federal designation.

"In my opinion, that would invite federal intrusion into places where the federal government should not be... It would hurt economic development. It would mean that Texas would lose sovereignty over the governance of some of its resource base," Bush said after a Monday speech to the Sheriffs Association of Texas.

"I've insisted all along that we have local control in the state of Texas as much as possible. This is inviting the federal government into the state. It is bad public policy. It is not right," Bush said.

He added that he favors protection of Texas' waters.

"I just know that Texans can figure out how best to do that, not a federal bureaucrat that's completely removed from Texas," Bush said.

In other political developments Monday:

- Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Richard Fisher said - after a speech to the Sheriffs Association of Texas - that he shares criminal justice goals with his opponent, Republican incumbent Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Those goals include giving local law enforcement officials "as much as possible in terms of leeway."

Richards, after touring a prisoner work camp at a wildlife management area in Palestine, said she wants to expand such prisoner work programs.

Bush agreed to provide electronic copies of his campaign finance reports to journalists. His campaign initially refused, while Richards and most other statewide candidates said they would make theirs available electronically.

Bush said, "My concern about electronic filings are this: I don't want our lists to be taken over by mail-order people, and that's why my staff took a dim view of electronic filings. I am convinced that you will not violate the trust with the lists. I believe you'll do your job in a fair and decent way and so I've told them to hand over the electronic data."

- Marta Greytak, Republican candidate for land commissioner who has released her federal income tax returns, repeated her call for Democratic incumbent Garry Mauro to do the same.

Mauro's campaign manager, Andres Gonzalez, said Mauro has released his in the past when asked. He said Mauro was on vacation and would be back next week.

If Mauro's accountant also is back from vacation then, any returns that have not been previously released will be, Gonzalez said.

Collision of SP trains causes death of four

MARATHON, Texas (AP) - Investigators will conduct a thorough probe of a train crash that killed four Southern Pacific employees to determine how the trains ended up on the same track, a company spokesman says.

"I think it'll take a while to figure that out," said Mike Furtney, a spokesman for San Francisco-based Southern Pacific. "There's a lot of information to go through."

The two freight trains collided head-on Monday morning in a sparsely populated area of Brewster County in West Texas, killing all four crew members and derailing at least seven cars, authorities said.

The identities of the dead were not immediately available Monday, but Brewster County Judge Val Beard said all four crew members were from Sanderson, Texas.

The engines of the two trains caught fire, making it difficult for emergency crews to extract the crew members' bodies, said Department of Public Safety spokeswoman Laureen Chernow.

One train was traveling eastbound from Long Beach, Calif., to Houston while the other was westbound from Memphis, Tenn., to Long Beach, said Furtney. Two crew members were on each train, he said.

Furtney said both trains were carrying various types of hazardous materials, including paint, peroxide and petroleum distillates.

Those cars did not derail and a DPS aerial review of the site about 5 miles east of Marathon determined there were no leaks of hazardous chemicals, Beard said.

Furtney said the hazardous materials were in containers on board regular railroad cars.

Publisher honored

O.G. (Speedy) Nicman, publisher of The Hereford Brand, was presented the Harold Hudson Memorial Award during the closing awards banquet at the West Texas Press Association annual convention Saturday night in Wichita Falls.

The association's highest honorary award recognizes journalists for their leadership, active support and dedication to the press organization, to their communities, and the newspaper profession, according to Stephen Henry, WTPA president from Levelland.

At the convention, The Brand also earned two awards in the association's better newspaper contest—third place certificates for advertising composition and sports reporting.

The special presentation to Nicman was made by Ed Harris, former publisher of The Graham Leader and last year's award recipient. Nicman became the fourth honoree. The award is named in memory of Harold Hudson, former publisher of The Perryton Herald, who was active in state and national newspaper organizations.

New board members introduced

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross recently announced its new board members. Lupe Chavez (seated) is serving as chairman and other board members include, from

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My mother is planning a baby shower for me and has asked for a guest list. The problem is my husband's parents are divorced and both have remarried. My sister-in-law and mother-in-law do not get along with my father-in-law's wife, "Ginny."

I am especially close to my mother-in-law, but I also have a good relationship with Ginny, and I want to keep it that way. If I don't invite her to the shower, she will be offended. If I do invite her, my mother-in-law and sister-in-law will never forgive me.

These women cannot be in the same room without getting into a fight. I'm afraid if any one of them learns that the other two are invited to my shower, none of them will come. I very much want them all. Wouldn't you think they would put aside their differences for just one day for my sake?

What do you suggest?—Pregnant and Pondering in Pennsylvania.

DEAR PREG. AND POND.: The old Ann Landers Law of Social Survival goes like this: If you are having a party, wedding, clambake or bar mitzvah, invite everyone you would like to attend. Pay no attention to who is mad at whom. It is not your problem. The real losers are those who choose not to show up because they heard that someone they are not speaking to will be there.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I live alone in a triplex in West Los Angeles. I love my apartment and don't want to move. I am, however, having a problem with my landlords. (I have two.)

into my apartment when I am at work. I have explained that I would like to be given 24 hours' notice if they plan to enter my apartment, but they have ignored my request.

It happened again today. I asked my mother to wait in my apartment for the telephone repairman, and a plumber let himself in and scared her almost to death. Obviously, the landlords gave the plumber permission and a key to enter.

Is there a law against this?—West L.A.

DEAR WEST L.A.: According to Chicago attorney David Sugar, landlords generally have no right to let themselves into a leased apartment without the tenant's prior approval, except in emergency situations or to make necessary repairs—either to your apartment or to an adjoining one.

Laws vary from state to state, however, and you should review your lease before confronting your landlords. The lease will probably spell out the circumstances in which they can enter your apartment without advance notice.

Minchew selected as best speaker at recent meeting

Linda Minchew was named as the best speaker at the Hereford Toastmasters Club meeting held Thursday morning in the Ranch House.

Mike Harris was chosen best evaluator and Jigger Rowland was selected best topic speaker.

Ralph Barndt led the pledge and Rowland gave the invocation. Joe Don Cummings presided over the business meeting.

Rick Jackson served as Toastmaster; Ed Gilbert, timer; Rowland, "ah" counter; Charles Minchew, grammarian; Pat Varner, wordmaster; and "candor," the chosen word.

Topicmaster was Esther Frazier and topic speakers included Mike Harris, Joe Weaver, Margaret Del Toro, Nancy Griego, Rick Jackson, Dave Kimmel, Linda Minchew and Jigger Rowland.

Dr. Milton Adams spoke on "Proposals To Be Voted On at International Convention," evaluated by Joe Weaver, and Linda Minchew spoke on "Where's the Elk," evaluated by Mike Harris.

Barndt gave the reading and the joke was told by Nancy Griego. Joe Don Cummings served as general evaluator.

Adolfo Del Toro was welcomed as a guest.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Readers: Have you ever had a young child read to you by pointing out the pictures in the book and spontaneously making up a story? It's amazing how their little minds can create a story with ease.

This is the beginning of their reading development stage, and once they truly enjoy reading, this relaxing and informative practice will form a lifelong love.

To help you nurture along your child's desires to read, the "Helping Your Child" series offers a booklet titled "Learn to Read." Most of the book contains information and helpful techniques for parents of children from infancy to 10 years old—they're never too young to start!

The booklet touches briefly on helping older children continue as readers, and it ends with a wonderful resource section.

To order, send your request along with 50 cents and your name and complete address to: Consumer Information Center, Dept. H-375A, Pueblo CO 81009. Please allow three to five weeks for delivery.—Heloise

LETTER OF WARNING

Dear Heloise: This is a warning rather than a hint. Not all that is cottony is cotton.

I was out of cotton balls, so I took the cottony stuff out of the box some jewelry came in to remove my nail polish. The fake cotton and the polish gummed up and smeared all over my fingers. I ended up dangling my fingers in the bottle of remover to get the goo off.

So, beware of substitutes. They aren't always as good as they look.—Martha Trammell, Crosby, Texas

You are so right! Just because two things look the same, it doesn't mean they work the same.—Heloise

REMINDER
Dear Heloise: When unlocking your car, if you put packages, your purse, coffee mug, etc. on the hood of your car in front of the driver or passenger side instead of on top of the car, they'll be in view and you won't drive off and forget them after you've unlocked the car door.—Mrs. Shipman, Hartsel, Colo.

NEW YORK (AP)—Summertime. Yasgur's farm. Richie Havens. Sound familiar?

No, not Woodstock, but a near-facsimile. The lineup for Bethel '94, a two-day festival celebrating the 25th anniversary of Woodstock, includes nine Woodstock veterans.

Along with Havens, there's Country Joe McDonald, Melanie, John Sebastian, Mountain, Canned Heat, Iron Butterfly, Sha Na Na and Blood, Sweat and Tears.

Other artists booked to appear include Fleetwood Mac, Judy Collins, the Chambers Brothers, Tom Paxton and Leon Russell. In all, fourteen acts—none including a single member a day younger than 45.

The show, scheduled for Aug. 13-14, will take place on the same site as the original Woodstock in New York's Hudson Valley. Tickets were to go on sale today for the commemorative price of $94.69.

Rock fans seeking something more current can shell out $540 for a block of four tickets to Woodstock '94 in nearby Saugerties.

Signings, injuries highlight NFL camps

By The Associated Press
The signings and injuries that dominate camp news in July sometimes share the NFL spotlight with the players who decide to pack up and leave.

The latest came Monday at Redskins camp in Carlisle, Pa., where rookie fullback Brian Satterfield quit the team.

"He said he didn't want to play anymore. He didn't have his heart in it and felt he was wasting our time and his time, too," running backs coach Bobby Jackson said.

It was all the more surprising because Satterfield, a rookie free agent from North Alabama, played briefly but well in a scrimmage Saturday, catching three passes for 26 yards and rushing for a two-yard touchdown.

Jackson said it was only the second time he could recall someone quitting training camp like that.

"You'd never think the guy didn't have his heart in it," said Jackson, who said he was approached Monday by Satterfield and told, "Don't try to talk me out of it."

Reggie Brooks, currently sidelined with a hamstring pull, is the certain starter at running back, and Frank Wycheck is the team's projected fullback.

With Brian Mitchell and Ricky Ervins sure bets to make the team, Satterfield was competing for the fifth and possibly sixth running back slots.

On Sunday, Lance Lundberg, the seventh-round draft pick by New Orleans, left training camp saying he didn't want to play football anymore.

"I like him, I tried to talk him out of it," coach Jim Mora said. "I thought he had a chance to make it and tried to encourage him to stay."

"He came in this morning and said, 'I just don't have it in me.' This wasn't for him," Mora said.

Cardinals

Arizona will open camp Wednesday without halfback Garrison Hearst, coach Buddy Ryan said.

Hearst, the Cardinals' top pick in the 1993 draft, will be placed on the physically unable to perform list, keeping him from practicing with the team.

Hearst missed all of training camp last season in a contract dispute before suffering a season-ending left knee injury against Washington in the sixth week of the season. He underwent surgery to repair a torn ligament on Nov. 2.

He has been unable to practice regularly during the Cardinals' three-week "voluntary" camp that concluded today.

"I'm not ready yet," Hearst said Monday.

Dolphins

Linebacker Bryan Cox, taunted with racist slurs by fans in Buffalo last season, is suing the NFL, charging racial discrimination made him a lesser player and prompted him to drink heavily.

Attorneys for Cox filed the suit Monday in U.S. District Court in New York City. Cox charges the NFL forced him to play in a "racially hostile environment" during a Bills-Dolphins game in Orchard Park, N.Y., and did little to defuse the situation.

"I'm not looking for money, but for a change in policy for what the league put me through last year," Cox said Monday. "It was handled very poorly and it's made me bitter toward them, enough for me to want to expose them for what they are."

Cox wants the league to "beef up security" and weed out drunks.

Colts

One day after signing top draft choice Marshall Faulk, Indianapolis signed linebacker Trev Alberts, their last unsigned draft choice.

The Indianapolis Star said Alberts, a 6-3 linebacker, got a six-year, $8 million deal that included a $3.2 million signing bonus. Faulk got a $17.2 million, seven-year deal - the richest rookie contract in NFL history.

Bills

Buffalo signed free agent safety Mike Dumas, a player they considered drafting in 1991 before picking Henry Jones instead.

Coach Marv Levy called Dumas, who played with the Houston Oilers the last three years, one of the top 10 special teams players in the league.

"But we didn't get him for special teams ability only. We think he's a good defensive backfield prospect," Levy said. "Now we're going to have to see where he fits."

Giants

In the battle to succeed Phil Simms as starting quarterback, Dave Brown will have the first shot at looking good.

Brown and Kent Graham, the two players vying for the job, decided between themselves to let Brown work with the first team for a half in the Giants' preseason opener against the Miami Dolphins. Graham will take over early in the second half. The roles will change the following week in the game against Cleveland, also at Giants Stadium.

Packers

Green Bay claimed rookie Bob Brasher on waivers from the Los Angeles Rams in an effort to bolster the tight end position. The No. 2 man at that position, third-year-man Mark Chmura, will miss at least four weeks with a hamstring injury suffered Sunday.

First-round draft pick Aaron Taylor, expected to be sidelined until December while recovering from a knee injury, agreed to a four-year contract believed to be worth about $4 million.

No. 1 draft pick Bryant Young, a defensive lineman from Notre Dame, was expected to sign a six-year, $8 million contract.

Hereford team drops two games in AAU tournament

Hereford's Texas Warriors AAU 12 and under boys team got hit by two steamrollers during the National AAU Basketball Tournament being held in Salt Lake City, Utah.

The team, seeded 34th in the tournament, played the 19th seed and eighth seed in their first two games of pool play on Sunday and Monday.

On Sunday, the Warriors came up against the Central Kentucky Magic, seeded No. 19, and lost 68-34.

Then on Monday, they faced the Twin City Lakers of Minneapolis, seeded No. 8, and were beat 60-44.

Their final game in pool play was set for Tuesday afternoon against the Missouri Rebels, seeded No. 45.

After that, said Paula Miller, one of the parents accompanying the team, the two top teams in the pool will advance to the championship round, while the other two will play in the Shootout Bracket, which is essentially a separate tournament.

Both brackets are double-elimination competition. Only those playing in the championship bracket are eligible for the AAU National Championship.

Unless there is a three-way tie in pool play, Mrs. Miller said, it is likely the Warriors will end up in the Shootout Bracket.

Trophies are awarded to the top three finishers in that tournament.

In Sunday's game, six Warriors scored, with two--Slade Hodges and James Miller--scoring more than 10 points each. Hodges has 12 points and Miller had 10.

Other scorers in the first game were: Eric McNutt and Chase Rives, four points each; and Cody Hodges and Nathan King, two points each.

On Monday, Cody Hodges led all Warriors with 13 points, followed by Nathan King with 10 points.

Slade Hodges and James Miller each scored nine points, while Eric McNutt had three points.

Shooting blitz leads North to all-star cage win, 118-99

HOUSTON (AP) - When the North lost center Maceo Baston, its tallest starter at 6-9, it was time for the perimeter players to take over.

So guards Rodrick Miller and Kyle Rogers did, keeping up an outside shooting blitz that carried their squad to 118-99 victory over the South in the 50th Texas High School Coaches Association all-star basketball game Monday night at Hofheinz Pavilion.

Rogers, of Class 3A Ferris, scored 29 points and Miller, of 5A Temple, added 24 point as the North narrowed the South's all-time series advantage to 26-24.

Miller, who is headed for Baylor, also had nine rebounds to win the North MVP award. Aldine MacArthur's 6-8 Galen Robinson was selected the South MVP after scoring a team-high 20 points.

The North led by as many as 15 the first half, but saw a late second-quarter rally by the South make it 46-39 North at halftime.

Then the South's inside attack of Robinson and 6-8 Ansu Sesay of Sugar Land Willowridge brought their team back to lead 78-75 early in the fourth quarter.

Shortly after that, Baston fouled out.

"They went to a bigger lineup when our big guy fouled out," Miller said. "That's when we were able to out-quick them. We had to neutralize their size with our quickness and that eventually prevailed."

It prevailed in no small part due to the fourth-quarter shooting of Rogers.

He hit four three-pointers in the final five minutes as he just missed tying the North All-Star scoring mark of 31 set by Humble's Derrick Smith in 1989.

Rogers, who is headed for Sam

Houston State, feels he proved something to the major colleges.

"Maybe I showed them that players from 3A and 2A and A schools can play," Rogers said. "We had the outside shooting and we were a lot quicker. That made the difference. I was so wide open, I had to hit those shots."

Maryland will miss Jimmy, but 'no drop-off' for Dallas

AUSTIN (AP) - The pudgy teen with the messed up feet is doing just fine these days as a Pro Bowl defensive tackle for the Dallas Cowboys.

But Russell Maryland's feet are still giving him problems.

"I've got flat feet and dislocated toes," said Maryland, whose overachieving spirit as a high school student in Chicago convinced Jimmy Johnson to give Maryland the final scholarship he had to offer on his Miami team nearly a decade ago.

"You name it, I've got it. I really need a foot transplant. I've got the same feet my momma had. She says she doesn't see how I can play football with 'em."

Johnson did. No other major university offered Maryland a scholarship in the spring of 1985, then he went on to become a two-time All-America and winner of the 1990

Outland Trophy award.

He also was on two national champions at Miami, helping the team to a 44-4 record over his four years.

Johnson kept watching, even when he went to the Cowboys. He wanted Maryland to join him in Dallas, too, so Johnson swung a draft day trade to make Maryland the top pick of the 1991 draft.

Now, they're apart as Johnson left the Cowboys in the offseason and has been replaced by Barry Switzer.

"I miss Jimmy, sure," said Maryland, who played six years for Johnson. "He did a lot of great things for me. He had faith I would be a player."

"I guess I was one of his boys. And he left an indelible mark on the Cowboys."

"There shouldn't be that much drop-off of what we accomplish as a team," Maryland said. "Coach Switzer has shown he is a player's coach. He's under a lot of pressure. Nothing less than another Super Bowl victory will be accepted. He must find a way to fit in as a piece in the overall puzzle."

Dodgers, Expos win; Reds hold off Astros

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

At this rate, Ramon and Pedro Martinez might see each other yet again this season.

The brothers took turns pitching their teams to bigger leads Monday night, Ramon leading the Los Angeles Dodgers over San Francisco 10-5 and Pedro helping the Montreal Expos beat Atlanta 6-4.

Pedro and Ramon talked Sunday when the Dodgers were in Montreal. That was the last time their teams are scheduled to meet this year, although a playoff matchup is still a possibility.

"We pumped each other up," Ramon said.

Ramon (9-7) collared Darryl Strawberry and cooled off streaking San Francisco, giving up only four hits in eight innings. Strawberry went 0-for-4.

Pedro (8-5) left in the seventh inning with Montreal trailing by a run, but the Expos rallied.

In another game with first place at stake, Cincinnati topped Houston 7-4.

Also, Colorado beat San Diego 4-3, New York stopped St. Louis 7-1, Philadelphia defeated Florida 8-1 and Pittsburgh downed Chicago 6-2.

Strawberry faced the Dodgers for the first time since they released him May 25. He greeted Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda - who had made critical remarks about Strawberry - with a handshake and hug before the game.

"I feel comfortable. I'm not pressing at all," Strawberry said.

Martinez struck out five, walked one and held Matt Williams, Barry Bonds and Strawberry to a combined one hit.

Eric Karros homered twice and drove in four runs for the Dodgers.

Mark Portugal (9-7) was tagged for seven runs in 5 2-3 innings.

Expos 6, Braves 4

Moises Alou hit a key triple. The victory in the opener of a three-game series ensured that the Expos will leave Atlanta in first place.

Terry Pendleton, playing for the first time since going on the disabled list June 22 with a strained lower back, and Ryan Klesko homered for Atlanta.

The Expos overcame an early 3-0 deficit, but still trailed 4-3 in the seventh when Pedro Martinez left for a pinch-hitter. Marquis Grissom drew a one-out walk from Mark Wohlers (7-2), Cliff Floyd singled and Alou tripled. Alou scored on Larry Walker's grounder.

John Wetteland got his 19th save.

Reds 7, Astros 4

Kevin Mitchell had two home runs and almost hit another as Cincinnati defeated Houston at Riverfront Stadium. Mitchell drove in three runs with a pair of second-deck shots against Greg Swindell (7-7). Mitchell barely missed adding his 27th home run when he later flied out to the wall in center field.

John Smiley (11-9) won and Hector Carrasco got his sixth save.

Jeff Bagwell reached 99 RBIs for the Astros.

Rockies 4, Padres 3

Andres Galarraga hit his 31st home run and Colorado beat Andy Benes in San Diego.

Benes (6-12) fanned 11 in six innings. He leads the NL in losses and strikeouts (168). Kevin Ritz (4-4) won his third in a row and Bruce Ruffin got his 16th save.

Phillies 8, Marlins 1

Curt Schilling won for the first time since pitching a shutout in Game 5 of last year's World Series, leading Philadelphia past host Florida.

Schilling (1-7) gave up one unearned run and struck out seven. He had not pitched in the majors since May 16 because of surgeries on his elbow and knee.

Schilling drove in the Phillies' first run. Milt Thompson's single off Dave Weathers (8-9) put Philadelphia ahead 2-1 in the sixth.

Mets 7, Cardinals 1

Rico Brogna went 5-for-5 and Bret Saberhagen won his fifth straight decision as New York won at St. Louis.

Brogna tied a team record for hits in a game. He doubled twice, drove in two runs and also started two double plays from first base. He is batting 19-for-37 (.514) in his last 11 starts.

Saberhagen (12-4) gave up seven hits, struck out five and walked one in his fourth complete game.

Brogna's two-run double highlighted a five-run fifth inning against Omar Olivares (2-3).

Pirates 6, Cubs 2

Pitcher Denny Neagle hit his first homer in the majors and Pittsburgh beat visiting Chicago.

Neagle was hitless in his first 40 at-bats, the third-longest slump in major league history at the start of a career. Since then, he's 8-for-23 (.348), and he has five RBIs in his last two starts.

Neagle (9-8) struck out nine in seven innings. Dan Miceli finished for his second career save.

Willie Banks (8-9) was the loser. He gave up the two-run homer to Neagle.

Royals, Rangers win in AL

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - The fireworks returned to Kauffman Stadium, thanks to Bob Hamelin.

Hamelin's three-run homer with one out in the bottom of the 12th inning Monday night gave the Royals a 6-4 victory over the first-place Chicago White Sox and set off the fireworks, suspended since an aerial bomb exploded in the right field bleachers July 15.

Royals manager Hal McRae was much more elated over the fireworks on the field.

"This could be the turning point," McRae said. "I think we'll get it done this time."

In the only other AL game Monday night, Texas beat Minnesota 7-4.

The Royals' third consecutive victory lifted them to two games over .500 at home for the first time this season and to five games over .500 for the season. However, they still trail the White Sox by 7 1/2 games.

"It was a must win and should give us some momentum for tomorrow," McRae said. "I saw nothing but positives."

The biggest positive was Hamelin's homer, his 20th of the season and third in three games.

"I was just trying to get the run in from third and get a pitch I could drive," said Hamelin, whose towering blast on Roberto Hernandez' first pitch just cleared the 410-foot mark in center field. It scored Dave Henderson and Wally Joyner, who both singled.

"It's a great feeling to leave the other team out on the field," said Hamelin, who also beat Boston 2-1 with a ninth-inning homer earlier in the season. "I was looking for a fastball because (Hernandez has) a good one. It doesn't get any better than this."

"Hamelin just crushed one of my fastballs," said Hernandez (3-4), who had an 0.66 ERA in his last 13 appearances. "It was bound to happen sometime."

The homer made a winner out of Hipolito Pichardo (4-3), who allowed one run in 2 2-3 innings.

The White Sox took the lead in the top of the 12th when Ozzie Guillen doubled with one out and scored on Tim Lincecum's two-out single.

Chicago tied the game 3-3 on Robin Ventura's opposite-field RBI double in the eighth, scoring Julio Franco.

Trailing 2-0, the Royals rallied to take a 3-2 lead in the sixth. Joyner led off with a triple and scored on Hamelin's bloop single to center. Mike Macfarlane's double past third moved Hamelin to third, and Hamelin scored on Felix Jose's grounder. One out later, Greg Gagne looped a run-scoring single to center.

Kevin Appier allowed nine hits and three runs in eight innings. Chicago starter Jack McDowell gave up 11 hits and three runs in nine innings.

The Rangers may be only 47-52, but they pushed their lead over the idle Oakland A's to 2 1/2 games Monday night by opening a 10-game homestand with a 7-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"This is a pivotal homestand," Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said. "We may only have two and a half weeks of baseball left. You can't take anything for granted."

Lousy pitching contributed heavily as the Rangers dropped a four-game series to the Toronto Blue Jays over the weekend. Texas began Monday with a two-game lead, its smallest since July 2.

Toronto battered Texas' pitching staff, outscoring the Rangers 25-8 in the series sweep.

On Monday night, the Rangers rolled the dice with spot starter Brian Bohanon.

Bohanon responded with his first major-league victory in more than a year.

"I felt real confident tonight," Bohanon said. "I'm going out there, let them put the ball in play. I'm not going to let it (hits) affect me. I just went out there, got some outs and let the offense feed off of that."

Bohanon (1-0) started in place of Kevin Brown, whose scheduled turn in the rotation was pushed back a day because of a stress fracture in his foot.

In his second start of the season, Bohanon allowed three runs and six hits over six innings, striking out five with two walks.

Bohanon, who also had six relief appearances for Texas since his contract was purchased on June 30, made 15 starts for Class AAA Oklahoma City.

But he'd struggled since being called up with a 8.10 ERA.

"He had a good fastball and made good pitches with men on base," Kennedy said.

Bohanon said starting is easier to handle from a mental standpoint.

"Being in the bullpen isn't a problem, but starting is a lot easier on me," Bohanon said. "It's the mental aspect. I know I'm going to be pitching every fifth day out."

Bohanon's last big league victory was July 15, 1993, over the Detroit Tigers.

Darren Oliver got the final three outs for his second save. Oliver, who has a string of 16 2-3 scoreless innings, is being groomed for Tom Henke's closer role. Henke was unavailable Monday due to a stiff back.

"We've got a good combination, Oliver to get to Henke," Kennedy said. "He's coming into his own and becoming acclimated to major league hitters."

Jose Canseco hit his 27th home run and rookie Rusty Greer reached base four times and had two RBI singles to spark the Rangers offense. All nine Texas starters had at least one hit.

Texas erased a 2-0 deficit and grabbed a 4-2 lead in the fourth with the help of left fielder Pedro Munoz's throwing error. One of Texas' four fourth-inning runs off loser Scott Erickson (8-10) was unearned.

Erickson dropped his fourth straight decision.

Mitchell beats marquee field in Goodwill Games

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) - The "Green Machine" felt like a money machine after winning the men's 100 meters at the Goodwill Games. Now, he wants to cash in.

"I feel like a million dollars," Dennis Mitchell said after beating a marquee field that included Leroy Burrell and Carl Lewis. "I wish I had a million dollars."

Mitchell might not collect that right away, but he's certainly in a strong position to demand big money for appearing at lucrative Grand Prix meets in Europe this summer.

"Zurich and Cologne will be bigger races than this," he said. "There is a lot of money walking around in the 100 meters this year, and I want to get a big piece of it."

Mitchell's coach, John Smith, said he will see to it that the 28-year-old sprinter is well rewarded by big meet promoters.

"When an athlete is running well, they want him," Smith said. "Dennis is running extremely well. He's a streak runner, and he's catching fire now."

Originally, Mitchell wasn't even invited by Goodwill Games organizers. He was asked to compete only after Britain's Linford Christie, the Olympic and world champion, withdrew because of a hamstring injury.

"They signed everybody but him," Smith said of Mitchell. "He was angry. It was a disgrace. They couldn't run the race without him."

Mitchell, known as the "Green Machine" for his green running outfits and shoes, led from start to finish to win his first major championship race in 10.07 seconds. The relatively slow time was due to a strong headwind.

Leroy Burrell, who set the world record of 9.85 earlier this month, finished with a surge to take second in 10.11. Jon Drummond was third in 10.12 and Carl Lewis fourth in 10.23.

Mitchell finally shook his third-place tag. He had won plenty of bronze medals, including at the 1992 Olympics and the 1991 and 1993 World Championships.

Now, he can lay a legitimate claim to being the world's best sprinter.

"I want to live up to the tradition of a cocky sprinter and say I am," Mitchell said.

Ukraine's Sergei Bubka may no longer be able to say he's the world's best pole vaulter. In a major upset, the world record-holder finished third behind two Russians.

Gwen Torrence completed a sweep of the women's sprints, winning the 200 meters in a Games' record 22.09, and Jackie Joyner-Kersey, the world record-holder in the heptathlon and seeking her third straight Goodwill title, built a 109-point lead after four events.

The final three heptathlon events - the long jump, javelin and 800 meters - were scheduled for today.

Other key events included the men's mile, featuring world record-holder Noureddine Morceli of Algeria, and the long jump with world record-holder Mike Powell. Lewis pulled out the long jump, saying he did not want to compete on consecutive days at this stage of the season.

In beach volleyball, Carolyn Kirby and Liz Masakayan of the United States were paired in the final against Monica Rodrigues and Adriana Samuel of Brazil. In the men's final, the U.S. team of Jeff Williams and Carlos Briceño was up against Norway's Jan Kvalheim and Bjoern Naesside.

The U.S. basketball team got back on track after Sunday's 77-75 loss to Russia, beating China 99-80 to set up a semifinal matchup Wednesday against unbeaten Italy. Puerto Rico will play Russia in the other game.

Unique cookbook recounts history

BEAUMONT, Texas - History often crops up in cookbooks, but seldom does it occupy the first 81 pages, only occasionally interrupted by recipes. It does in "Ma's in the Kitchen: You'll Know When It's Done," by Carl Randall McQueary and May Nelson Paulissen.

That this book is different is understandable when you realize that McQueary is now the curator of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas Museum in Austin and was at one time the executive director of the Bell County Museum in Belton, which houses an extensive collection of memorabilia associated with Miriam Amanda Wallace Ferguson.

"Ma," as she was dubbed by a young newspaper reporter who combined the initials of her first two names so the name would fit in a picture caption, was the first woman governor of Texas.

Nowadays that doesn't seem like a particularly strange idea. Things, however, were a little different in 1924.

Miriam didn't start out to be a politician particularly, having come from a well-to-do home near Temple. She grew up in that environment, where her parents put particular emphasis on education and her mother exercised her extraordinary cooking skills.

She met Jim Ferguson at a local party and later agreed to marry him. At the time Ferguson was practicing law in Belton, so Miriam settled into her new home as a wife and soon-to-be mother. By the time her second daughter appeared, Ferguson had become a banker as well.

It was a typical upper-middle class family in virtually all respects, until Ferguson decided in 1913 that he would run for governor in 1914. He won, and life changed drastically.

Unhappily for Ferguson, a disagreement over the method of paying household bills blossomed into a charge of mismanagement of state funds. He was impeached in 1917, and Miriam vowed then that she would see the family's good name restored. That put Ma on the political warpath in 1924, and in the course of her service as governor in 1925-26, she literally helped unmask the Ku Klux Klan.

She lost in 1926 to Dan Moody, but managed to beat Ross Sterling in 1932 for a second term. She declined to run for another, until in 1939, Ma announced she would run against Gov. W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel.

The 65-year-old Ma lost, but she came away from the campaign with O'Daniel's recipe for biscuits.

Ma died quietly in 1961 at the age of 86, but part of her lives on in the Bell County Museum and in this book. How many states have had governors who stopped to make peach preserves before worrying about her first runoff election? How many prepared such good chili that Will Rogers ate five bowls of it before a performance at the Paramount Theater? And how many still would be humble enough to admit that Lady Bird Johnson's recipe for Okra Pickles was better than her own? The recipe here is one of many recipes and household hints in the book's remaining 118 pages.

Found among her papers, it is one for something called Kansas City Skillet Cake, a favorite of Ma's father, Joe Wallace. It was in his provision bag on his final trip to Kansas City to sell cattle.

One of Ma's favorite sayings may

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - For Jamie Lee Curtis, a kiss is just a kiss.

Even when she's kissing Arnold Schwarzenegger. Curtis, who plays Schwarzenegger's wife in the thriller "True Lies," says her celluloid romance with the last action hero was no big deal.

"When you're working with an actor who is married and you're married, you no longer invest anything in the kiss," she says in the June 30 issue of TV Guide.

"When you're not married and you're partner isn't married," she said, "then you might enter into some serious lip-locking."

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to fly the Atlantic - as a passenger - in 1928. In 1932, she flew the Atlantic solo. In 1937, she vanished over the Pacific on an around-the-world flight.

be helpful in the kitchen too, especially if things aren't going too well: "Never say die, say damn."

Judging from my experience, you won't have enough trouble with this recipe to warrant saying that.

KANSAS CITY SKILLET CAKE

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
Juice of one small can sliced pineapple
1-1/8 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder (heaping)
1/2 teaspoon salt
Cream yolks of eggs and sugar; add juice of pineapple. Add alternately the dry ingredients which have been sifted together. Add whites of eggs. Prepare Filling as directed. Pour the batter over the filling, but do not stir. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 35 to 40 minutes, and do not open oven door for the first 15 to 25 minutes.

Filling
1/4 pound butter
1 cup brown sugar
Handful of raisins
Diced pineapple slices from can
1 cup pecans
In an iron skillet, melt butter and brown sugar, spread evenly over bottom of skillet. Add handful of raisins, diced pineapple and 1 cup of pecans. Use as directed.

Writer's note: This makes a very nice, very goeey coffeecake look-alike - particularly good with coffee. I used the smaller flat can of pineapple tidbits, and only baked the cake 30 to 35 minutes because my oven is slightly hot. The cake will form a somewhat crisp crust, which adds to the overall pleasure of eating it. My tasters gave it a thumbs up on all counts.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Is Darvon addictive? Can it do damage to organs? A friend of mine uses it for migraine headaches. Can immunity be built up against it? And how can it help besides numbing the pain? — V.D.

ANSWER: Taken in high doses for long periods, Darvon — propoxyphene — can be addictive. It is a narcotic drug, but not one of the major addictive substances by a long shot. Doctors employ Darvon in many situations demanding pain relief.

Darvon, like many drugs that act on the central nervous system, can become less effective over time as the body becomes less sensitive to its pain-killing properties. When the patient reports that, the doctor re-evaluates drug therapy.

Darvon's only medical effect is its relief of local pain, as from a headache. It has no other effect, but pain relief alone commends it as a medical blessing for the problem migraineur.

Darvon can damage organs. It has been implicated in damage to the liver, where the drug is metabolized. Many potentially toxic substances, such as alcohol, do the same.

Muscle damage is also a potential Darvon effect, although an infrequent one.

I hope your friend does not rely on Darvon as the sole path to migraine relief. Other drugs can do that. A newer drug, sumatriptan, which is sold under the trade name Imitrex, has helped many, bringing migraine relief where the more familiar drugs have failed.

Your friend might want to look through my headache report, which discusses such therapies. It can be ordered by sending $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (52 cents) No. 10 envelope to: Dr. Donohue — No. 15, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Would high blood pressure — 200 over 122 — cause blurred vision? It did for me. It seems to have improved since I have the pressure down. — E.M.

ANSWER: High blood pressure can affect vision, certainly. It can damage blood vessels in the eye and cause leakage of blood into the retina, the image-sensitive lining at the back of the eye.

High blood pressure also can cause swelling of the optic nerve, which carries images to the brain. In fact, high blood pressure can act directly — on the image center of the brain itself.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I would like to know what a fatty liver is and what might cause it. I have put on a lot of weight in the past six years. I have now been informed that I have fatty liver. — R.J.F.

ANSWER: Fatty liver is an accumulation of fat in the organ. Lots of things can contribute to it, including diabetes, Cushing's syndrome, digestive tract malabsorption and cortisone drugs. But by far, the two most common fatty liver factors are alcohol and obesity.

A sign of fatty liver is increase of liver enzymes in the blood.

In general, the condition is simply noted and watched unless there are important symptoms.

You have been told you have fatty liver, but you don't tell me how severe the situation is.

You can improve the situation by doing things that will discourage further fat deposition there. If, as you imply, obesity has been implicated, then a sensible diet to lose weight would help a lot.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Some

baseball players look out of shape to me. All I see is this guy hits a ball then gets all winded after running a couple of hundred feet. What kind of exercise do you do for baseball anyway? I'm 14. — B.L.

ANSWER: I hear this knock on baseball athletes many times. You might be surprised to learn that the average body-fat content of professional ballplayers is 11 percent. That's pretty lean.

But to your question: Baseball is a game of stops and starts, without a lot of sustained aerobic intensity as in basketball or hockey. Any aspiring young baseball player needs a wide variety of training, including aerobics, the kind that gets the heart beating fast for 30 minutes or so continuously, at least a few sessions a week.

For the anaerobic energy so much in demand in baseball — to facilitate those brief speed bursts you mention — you need special training. If you watch pregame warmups, you can find fielders practicing speed sprints.

In fact, a good ongoing anaerobic program involves such sprints. Do two 50- or 100-yard sprints at half speed, then do three at maximum speed. Rest 30 seconds between sprints. I am sure you will find out why there's so much of that huffing and puffing during play.

Much emphasis is given these days to strength training. The only way to get that is through weight training, something altogether ignored a few years ago.

Also, you should include good stretch exercises. Baseball players ignore them at their peril. Such exercises, done properly, reduce chances of the career-interrupting muscle strains to which they are prone.

Finally, you need to emphasize training of muscles that are in special demand in baseball — which is to say arm and leg muscles. Baseball requires a lot of training in lots of different ways.

Make travel journal kit

If your family is about to hit the road together for a weekend or extended summer vacation, include a "Kid's Journal Kit" on your list of travel essentials. Once the kit is assembled for each child, your young travelers can easily keep personal daily records of their impressions of the vacation.

Encourage them to take a break for a few minutes each day and reflect on their experiences away from home. This will help kids develop a sense of "being on the lookout" for new things as they anticipate jotting down the discoveries. They'll also tune in to people around them, noting accents, expressions and foreign words.

Once the travelers return home, encourage them to continue the entries to preserve their memories of the summer of 1994.

To make the kit, first design a journal entry page. Print in block letters along the left margin the following topics as well as headings you may choose. Leave enough space for jottings.

Date
Location
Today's Weather

Something I Learned Today
Something I tried for the first time (sport, game, food)

Name and address of a new friend I made

How much money I spent

What I bought

The best part about today was

Once the headings are complete, decorate the borders of the paper if you wish, then photocopy enough pages for each day of your trip. Organize the sheets in a slim binder or folder with clasps.

In a large Ziplock-style plastic bag, or in a canvass tote, assemble the entry pages, markers, pens, school scissors, tape and a glue stick.

In addition to filling out the journal entries, your kids may wish to clip and affix souvenir brochures, ticket stubs and small nature finds to the pages. My kids especially enjoy looking back at their collections from our trip to favorite spots in California: real cotton from a friend's cotton field near Fresno, eucalyptus leaves from San Francisco and several teeny, tiny seeds a park ranger gave them from the pine cone of a giant, ancient redwood tree.

"Let's Talk."

Southwestern Bell Telephone

Some of you may be familiar with Southwestern Bell's "Let's Talk." columns. We've found them to be an effective way to share important information with our customers. So if there's a telephone topic you'd like to see highlighted, please let me know.

Today, I want to tell you about several special discount programs offered by Southwestern Bell. These assistance programs are available to help provide telephone service to low-income individuals.

Through our Lifeline Discount Telephone Service program, eligible customers receive a $7 discount monthly on their basic telephone bill.

To qualify for Lifeline, an applicant needs to meet three requirements: 1) be the head of the household; 2) have only one phone line in the residence; 3) and have income at or below the federal poverty level or be receiving benefits from one of the following programs: Food Stamps; Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC); Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP); Medical Assistance Program (MAP); Supplemental Security Income (SSI); or Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

More than 54,000 Texans are currently saving money through Lifeline. Simply call us toll-free at 1-800-244-5995 to apply.

If you don't already have a phone or are moving to a new location, you may qualify to receive up to 50 percent off basic installation charges through our Link-Up America program.

Eligibility requirements similar to the Lifeline program apply for Link-Up America. Southwestern Bell customers can call toll-free at 1-800-244-5188 for more information.

Tel-Assistance is another program established to reduce telephone bills for those in need. This program is administered through the Texas Department of Human Services.

Those qualifying for Tel-Assistance receive a 65 percent discount in basic monthly telephone service and a reduction of FCC line charges. Similar qualifications to the previous programs apply plus applicants must be at least 65 and disabled. Customers may apply for Tel-Assistance by calling the Texas Department of Human Services toll-free at 1-800-343-8353. Thanks for your business. Have a safe and happy summer!

Raising the flag

Members of Boy Scout Troop 54 and Cub Pack 54 raise the American flag over Hereford Care Center during a ceremony on Friday. It was the first time the flag has flown there since a pole was installed. The pole was donated by Big T Pump Company and the flag by the VFW Ladies' Auxiliary.

Real cowboy disputes picture seen in fiction

By MICHELLE ELIZARDO
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
EARTH, Texas — For years cowboys have been glorified as gunslingers and lonesome wanderers. But John Murrell, 83, says his life as a West Texas cowboy wasn't like that at all.

Murrell — who worked at the sprawling Mashed O Ranch from 1929 until it was sold in 1973 — says he never slung a gun as a cowboy. But he did round up plenty of cattle and cook his share of steaks over an open fire.

He started out as a cook at the ranch, which spanned 181,000 acres in Bailey and Lamb counties. And in the years that followed, he worked his way up to ranch manager.

The ranch, owned by Amherst founder W.E. Halsell, was once a part of the former XIT Ranch. Sitting in his Earth home — the walls covered in cowboy photos and ranching artifacts such as whips, chaps and branding irons — Murrell reminisces about his cowboy days.

He speaks of driving the chuck wagon during three-month roundups that took him hundreds of miles from home three or four times a year. During those trips, the cowboys would run the cattle, brand them and sometimes have to wean the calves.

One year, Murrell says, they were out from spring until fall. "That was a long summer."

At the ranch, cowboys usually had their own section of land to tend. They would ride through the pastures, checking the windmills and making sure the cattle had plenty of water. They also doctored the animals when needed.

They worked hard despite sometimes brutal weather.

"The winters were a lot worse than it is now — if you didn't have chaps, you'd freeze. In '32, I pretty near froze my legs pinning calves west of Muleshoe," Murrell says, standing in front of his frayed, green chaps that now hang on his wall.

The cowboys lived on the ranch and stayed in bunkhouses, Murrell says. But it wasn't much fun, he says, because they had rules and regulations to follow there.

They had to be at the pasture they were working before dawn. "You went to bed early 'cause you'd have to get up early," Murrell says.

So early, he says, "for years, I ate breakfast in the dark."

As Murrell sits on his coffee table surrounded by his pictures and old articles of himself and the ranch, he says the years at the ranch were different than they are now. What he really remembers about that time is trying to make ends meet for his family.

"I worked for five years for $35 a month, and yesterday I paid $45 for an hour and a half's work," Murrell says, chuckling.

Israel, Jordan end years of hostility

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel and Jordan, launching a new era of peaceful relations, are making it possible for their citizens to talk by telephone, fly over one another's territory and cooperate on fighting crime.

The declaration the two countries signed Monday was hailed by King Hussein of Jordan as "a moment of commitment and of vision" and by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin as "the closest thing to a treaty of peace."

Both spoke enthusiastically of prospects for normal relations, even while acknowledging some thorny issues remain, including conflict over Palestinian refugees in Jordan, sharing of scarce water resources and determining a permanent border.

Hussein termed the so-called Washington Declaration a "modest, determined beginning" to end the region's fear, bitterness and suspicion.

Rabin, joining Hussein at a signing ceremony on the White House lawn, said the agreement to end 46 years of hostility set Israel and Jordan "on a road which still must be completed."

Later, at a black-tie dinner, President Clinton paid tribute to the "two brave leaders ... (who) have crossed much hostile territory so that their children and their children's children need fight no more."

In an emotional reply, Hussein called it "a unique day ... for all those who have yearned to the breaking of a new dawn in our region, when energies and resources and talents can together have an opportunity to flourish, can together build a better future, which is the right of all."

"What we have achieved today, sir, is something that we leave for all our people to protect and to cherish in the times ahead," said the king.

Rabin said one of the biggest obstacles to peace has been the psychological wall "built on prejudices on both sides."

Even when they were at war, Rabin said, "I always respected Jordan and the king of Jordan, King Hussein, as the most noble, reasonable, unique personality.... I believe his signature, when he signs, he means it."

In further recognition of their momentous pact, both Rabin and Hussein today were addressing a joint meeting of Congress, the first time two world leaders have addressed the lawmakers at the same time.

Losing steam

While most of the boys participating in Sunday's Cub Pack 50 Cubmobile Derby gained speed while they traveled down the Veterans Park racetrack, Jeremiah Conley, 6, and his driver, Teddy Twombly, needed a little help as the extra weight on board slowed them down. Jeremiah had ridden the course once himself, but crashed, so opted to be a passenger on a later run.

Access law coverage is expanded

WASHINGTON (AP) - As of today, 500,000 more American small businesses are covered by a federal law requiring efforts to ease access for workers and members of the public with disabilities.

To educate these newly covered employers, Attorney General Janet Reno brought some people here Monday who have already implemented the four-year-old law.

"Too many people, too many businesses and too many government agencies still do not know what the law requires," Reno told disability advocates at a ceremony at the District of Columbia's Martin Luther King Jr. Public Library. "Too many have taken a wait-and-see attitude to determine whether the Justice Department is serious about forcing compliance. I have just one answer: We are serious."

Beginning today, the act's provisions, which have applied to employers with 25 or more workers, now also apply to the 500,000 businesses with 15 to 24 workers. There are 49 million Americans with disabilities.

Signed July 26, 1990, the act requires state and local governments and businesses that run public accommodations and commercial facilities to make public areas and work places accessible to disabled workers and members of the public. The Justice Department has sought civil fines and compensatory damage payments for violations. Civil penalties go up to $50,000 for the first violation and up to $100,000 for subsequent violations.
