Three injured in fire in county jail kitchen

A quick response by Hereford firefighters to a fire call from the Deaf Smith County jail Wednesday evening may have averted serious injury and extensive damage to the facility.

Two jailers and a dispatcher in the sheriff's department were taken to Hereford Regional Medical Center for treatment for smoke inhalation and reported in good condition Thursday morning.

A grease fire broke out shortly after 7 p.m. in the jail kitchen. A deep fat fryer was left unattended for a few minutes, officials reported.

The call to the fire department was made at 7:11 p.m. Sheriff Joe Brown happened to be at the fire station and went immediately to the jail.

He said inmates were evacuated from the jail in about two minutes. Men were moved to the outdoor recreation area and women were taken to the ground floor of the courthouse.

For several weeks, certain electrical equipment has been under repair in the jail. The smoke alarm system has not been operating but Sheriff Brown said Thursday that portable alarms had been placed throughout the jail.

"We bought about a dozen alarms," he said, "and they all went off."

The exhaust system in the jail was turned on manually by Jail Administrator David Castillo, to clear the building of smoke.

Brown said prisoners remained out of the jail for about an hour.

The sheriff said Thursday that an investigation may be in order to determine why the fryer was being used after hours of meal preparation. The evening meal was served about 5:30 p.m., Brown said.

"They were picking up trays and apparently someone was cooking burritos," he said. Brown said he understood jailers and trustees were away from the kitchen when the fire broke out.

Cooks who prepare meals had left for the day, Brown added.

Damage to the jail was limited to the kitchen area, Brown reported. "Mostly it's black from the smoke," he said.

Whether the smoke damage extended to other parts of the jail had not been determined Thursday morning.

Deaf Smith County Judge Tom Simons attributed the limited damage and injuries to the quick action of the Hereford Volunteer Fire Department.

"The fire department responded quickly and probably saved us from a lot of trouble," declared Simons.

Taken to HRMC by EMS ambulance were Jerry Mendoza and Joe Hernandez, jailers, and Ruby Gallagher, a sheriff's department dispatcher.

Five units of the fire department were dispatched to the jail with 24 firefighters on the scene for duty.

Brown said a two-inch line was run into the jail after a fire extinguisher failed to put out the blaze.

Officers preparing for curfew

Youth on Hereford streets after 12:01 a.m. Saturday will be subject to enforcement of the city ordinance establishing a curfew for Hereford.

The ordinance, adopted by the City Commission on Sept. 19, provides for fines up to $500 for violation.

All youth age 16 and under are subject to provisions of the ordinance. Curfew hours, Sunday through Thursday are 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. On weekends, the hours are 12:01 a.m. to 6 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

In preparation for enforcement of the curfew, a panel of city officials visited three intermediate schools and appeared on Channel 1 at Hereford High School and Hereford Junior High.

Police Chief David Wagner said city police officers met last Monday for in-service on the ordinance provisions and departmental policies on enforcement.

Youth found on city streets after curfew are subject to a citation and must appear in municipal court. Two or more citations may result in arrest of the offender.

Appearing in panel discussions at Bluebonnet, Shirley and West Central Intermediate Schools, panel members responded to questions from students and teachers. They also addressed students in SOAR at Stanton Learning Center.

Prior to the panel's appearance on Channel 1, students submitted questions about the ordinance and enforcement.

Taking part in the discussions were Officers Emilio Valdez and Randy Stribling and Assistant City Attorney David Red.

Fliers about the curfew also have been distributed to students, Wagner said.

Students and parents concerned about youth who attend sponsored events that end after the curfew begins are reminded that a reasonable time will be allowed for them to reach their homes.

"If an event ends at 1 a.m., they should be going straight home, no stops for video games or other activities," emphasized Chief Wagner.

Businesses that knowingly permit juveniles on the premises during curfew hours will be subject to citations by police officers, he reminded.

Parents of youth who receive citations for violation of the curfew will receive notice from the police department.

Mexican politician murdered

By ISAACA LEVI
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) - Thousands came to the ruling party's headquarters to mourn its No. 2 official, whose assassination jolted Mexico's already jittery political scene.

Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, fatally shot in the neck Wednesday outside party headquarters, was the second top official of the Institutional Revolutionary Party to be assassinated in seven months.

His body, inside a closed coffin, was placed in party headquarters, and Mexico's president and president-elect were among the party leaders who paid their respects by candlelight late Wednesday. Thousands of people crowded into the street outside.

The body was later taken to a funeral home, where small groups of mourners gathered overnight.

The killing shocked officials still recovering from the March 23 assassination of PRI presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio, shot at a Tijuana campaign rally. Ernesto Zedillo, his successor, won the Aug. 21 presidential election and takes power Dec. 1.

"This is a day of mourning for all Mexicans," Zedillo said.

Mexico also was shaken this year by an uprising in January by Mayan Indians in southern Chiapas state, kidnappings of businessmen for ransom and drug-related violence.

Search for wreckage, bodies on in Baltic Sea

TURKU, Finland (AP) -- Salvage workers searched this morning for the wreck of the sunken ferry Estonia, as authorities asked grieving relatives to help identify dozens of bodies recovered from the frigid Baltic Sea.

Survivors -- only about 140, mostly men, from a ship that had carried at least 964 people -- dealt with memories of wailing children left clinging to the ship's railing, and wounded fellow passengers left bobbing in the sea.

A witness to the rescue effort said some of the victims were sucked into the propellers of boats that tried to reach them in rough seas.

Helicopters and ships from Finland and Sweden continued to criss-cross the area where the Estonia capsized and sank in a storm early Wednesday. But rescuers did not expect to find any more survivors of one of the world's worst maritime disasters. The water temperature was 46 degrees.

Andrus Maidre, a 19-year-old Estonian who was on a short pleasure cruise with friends before going into the army, talked in Turku Central Hospital about dragging himself up the stairs of the heavily tilting ship.

"Some old people had already given up hope and were just sitting there crying," he said. "I also stepped over children who were wailing and holding onto the railing."

There was still confusion about the number of people on board as well as the number of survivors. Finnish police said today they received an updated list from Estonian authorities that raised the number on board to 1,047 people.

Earlier Finnish authorities at the rescue operations headquarters in southwestern Turku said the provisional death toll in Wednesday's sinking stood at 826, while the number of survivors was 138. But Swedish police said the number of survivors was 147, with 58 dead bodies found.

Much of the confusion about the number of survivors was because so many boats, ferries and helicopters were involved in the rescue.

"There were hundreds of bodies that were bobbing up and down in the sea. Many were dressed only in underwear and life vests," Hemming Eriksson of Sweden was quoted as telling the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet. Eriksson was a passenger on the ferry Isabella, which helped with the rescue.

"Some of them moved, so you could see they were living, but we had no chance to bring them up in the heavy sea," Eriksson was quoted as saying.

A Briton who spent seven hours in a lifeboat before it was spotted by a pilot told how one by one, six of the 11 other people on the raft with him died. During the night, lying among the dead, Paul Barney watched rescue helicopters pass unable to see them.

"I just kept myself going because I wanted to live. I knew I had to survive," Barney said from a Finnish hospital where he is recovering from shock and hypothermia.

The investigation of the cause was expected to focus on the seals on the ship's large bow door, used to load vehicles and cargo. A surviving ship's engineer said water began pouring through it about 30 minutes before the ferry went down.

Survivors said that as the ship's hold filled with water, the vessel listed over to port in three big lurches. The engines stopped, power went out and the ferry sank, bow up.

Ships were using sonar to look for the Estonia's sunken hull, believed to be 260 feet to 290 feet under water, said Raimo Tiilikainen, the Finnish coast guard commander in charge of rescue and salvage operations.

A robot camera will be used to examine the wreck and possibly spot bodies, Tiilikainen said at a news conference.

Dr. Aki Linden, the chief medical examiner, appealed at the news conference for relatives to send in pictures to help identify bodies. Forty-two bodies are waiting to be claimed in Turku.

But medical examiners cautioned it will be difficult bodies that were disfigured by cold water and exposure to the elements.

Linden said that in some cases relatives may have to send in hairbrushes, which could provide hairs for sophisticated DNA testing.

"If we have fresh corpses to study, they can be identified by their physical appearance," Linden said. "But as time goes by, deterioration becomes advanced. It's hard even for relatives to identify them."

Ready for the walk

Wes Klett, chairman of the 1994 United Way of Deaf Smith County fundraising drive, points out to United Way executive director Sally Nolen the course he and others will take on Saturday during Care Walk 1994. This year, Klett will walk a marathon course -- 26.2 miles -- around Hereford. The public is invited to join Klett in raising money for United Way through a three mile walk, a half marathon walk or Klett's full marathon walk.

Klett, United Way set for new walk

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

A year ago, Wes Klett headed out on foot for Amarillo, determined to increase awareness about the United Way of Deaf Smith County and to raise money for its annual fund drive.

He also determined something else -- he would not talk to Amarillo again.

So this year, Klett, who is again serving as chairman of the United Way's annual fundraising drive, has modified his walk and is inviting the community to come along and help raise money for United Way.

Care Walk 1994 will be held on Saturday beginning at Whiteface Stadium and is open to anyone who wants to walk along.

Admission is $10 per person, which includes a T-shirt for participating.

There will be three separate walks through Hereford, a 3 mile walk, a half marathon (13.1 miles) and a full marathon.

Klett will be walking the full marathon and encourages anyone who wants to do the same to join him as he sees much of the city by foot.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the stadium.

Participants do not have to raise sponsorships to walk, but everyone is encouraged to find people who will pay per-mile support to the United Way for walking.

Sally Nolen, executive director of the United Way of Deaf Smith County, said $25 in Hereford Bucks will be presented to the person other than Klett who raises the most money.

That presentation will be made several days after the walk to allow participants time to collect pledges and turn them in to the United Way office.

The three Care Walks will be held in conjunction with one another, all starting and ending at the field.

"The three-mile walk is a tour of the northwest corner of Hereford," Klett said.

Walkers will travel north on Stadium Drive to La Plata Drive, west to Hickory Street, south to Moreman Avenue, west to Kingwood, south to Westhaven Drive, north on Centre to Plains Avenue, then east to Texas Avenue, north to Moreman and back to Stadium Drive and the stadium.

At that point, Klett said, those walking in the half-marathon and marathon events will have completed the first three miles of their walks.

The half marathon will continue from the stadium for 10.1 miles "basically downtown between Highway 60 and 385."

Returning to the stadium, he said, "that's 13.1 miles which is a half marathon."

Now, he said, "you're set for the last half of the marathon."

Marathon walkers will keep going past the stadium when half-marathoners drop out.

They will travel west on La Plata to the Nazarene church, north to 15th Street, then east to Progressive Road, across U.S. 60 to Dairy Road and New York Street to Main Street, then south to Country Club Drive, west to U.S. 385 to U.S. 60, then west to Holly Sugar Road and on to South Kingwood, then north to Park Avenue, west to Redwood, north to Plains, then back to Stadium Drive and the finish line.

Klett said he plans to be finished with the entire marathon by about 5:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

"There will be liquid refreshment at the stadium," as well as drinks along the marathon course in the afternoon.

For people who are not able to walk three miles, or who will not be able to participate in the walk at all, there are alternatives to help out the United Way.

Klett will be accepting sponsorships from local residents interested in donating a set amount per mile he walks. Those may be made by calling KPAN Radio at 364-1960, or the United Way office at 364-5220.

Or, he said, "If you don't think you can walk three miles, you can walk laps around the track (at Whiteface Stadium) for donations."

The same $10 entry fee applies to those walkers as well.

Klett said corporate walking teams are also welcome to participate in the event.

For more information on Care Walk 1994, call the United Way office.

Whew! Indian summer hits with record high

A new record high temperature for Sept. 28 was set Wednesday in Hereford when the mercury climbed to 96 degrees and set the scene for another possible record-setter Thursday.

The forecast for Thursday was for sunny skies and a temperature in the low to mid-90s. Highest reading for Sept. 29, according to KPAN weather records, is 93 degrees.

Low temperature Thursday morning was a moderate 56 degrees. Forecast calls for a mild night Thursday and high readings Friday dropping into the high-80s.

Melba Goforth has joined the staff of Family Support Services as the coordinator for the Hereford Outreach Office.

As coordinator of the office -- formerly known as the Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence Center -- Goforth will be responsible for crisis intervention for victims of family violence and sexual assault.

She will facilitate a group for survivors of family violence and sexual assault. She also will help with the organization of bilingual parenting classes, which will be held for the first time in Hereford this fall.

Goforth holds a master of education degree in Professional Counseling from West Texas A&M University and holds a temporary license from the Texas State Board of Examiners of Professional Counselors.

She has volunteers for the Salvation Army and been involved with AMBUCS in New Mexico.

"The people of Hereford are very generous and I look forward to working with the population of Deaf Smith County and surrounding area for a very long time. I'm excited about being a part of the good work Family Support Services does," said Goforth, who recently moved to Hereford.

She said she enjoys living in this area.

For more information about Family Support Service programs and services, or for information about becoming a volunteer for the organization, call Goforth at 364-7822, or the main office in Amarillo at 372-3202.

Texas GOP split on dual campaigns

By SCOTT ROTHSCHILD

Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) -- Republican politicians are rallying behind a law that would allow U.S. Senator Phil Gramm to run for president and reelection to the Senate at the same time.

And that has one Republican angry.

Clymer Wright of Houston, chairman of Citizens for Term Limits, said support by politicians of the law shows "the running of government shouldn't be left to career politicians."

"Many term-limits advocates have long favored repeal of the law because it was written for the convenience of career politicians and contributes to the inconvenience and expense of the public," Wright said.

The law was passed in 1959 and allowed Democrat Lyndon Johnson to run for re-election to the Senate while also running for vice president.

The law was used the same way in 1988 by then-Senator Lloyd Bentsen, also a Democrat.

Now a Republican, Gramm of Texas said he would use the law if he makes a run for the presidency when his Senate term expires in 1996.

Citizens for Term Limits surveyed 12 statewide candidates and found that most Republican candidates want to keep the law intact, while at least half the Democratic candidates want to repeal the measure.

Wright said that while Republicans usually advocate term limits, only one of the six GOP candidates surveyed supported repeal of the LBJ law. That was Don Wittig, a candidate for attorney general.

The others oppose repealing the law, Wright said. That includes U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison, who is running for re-election; George W. Bush, who is running for governor; Tex Lezar, lieutenant governor; Teresa Doggett, comptroller, and Marta Greytak, land commissioner.

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock and Land Commissioner Gary Mauro say they support repeal of the law. Attorney General Dan Morales doesn't. Comptroller John Sharp hasn't made up his mind and a spokeswoman for Governor Ann Richards said the governor had questions with the law, but doubts repeal would come up during the next year's legislative session, Wright said.

He said that except for Wittig, GOP candidates argue "that since the Democrats have been using this in the past... the Republicans ought to get to use it and then we can repeal it."

"In other words, it's a bad law, but let's keep it on the books anyway so we have a shot to use it next. This is the kind of thinking by politicians and posturing by politicians, in my view, that has the general public really upset with them."

Wright, a Republican, finished 12th out of 24 candidates in the 1993 special Senate election that was won in a runoff by Hutchison.

Nominations sought for scholar-athletes

DALLAS -- High school seniors who excel in academics, leadership and community service, and who are varsity athletes, are invited to apply for the FINA/Dallas Morning News All-State Scholar-Athlete Team.

Last year, HHS football player Mark Kuper was a finalist for the award. Another Hereford graduate who was a member of the team was Stefan Hacker.

Nominations from the public are now being accepted. Forty finalists will be announced in January, with 12 members selected in March. A total of 40 scholarships will be awarded, 12 $4,000 awards to team members and $500 each of the 28 finalists.

To be eligible, applicants must be Texas high school seniors who have a 90 grade average or better, be in the top 10 percent of their graduating class and have a varsity letter in a UIL sport.

"Our purpose is to focus attention on the many outstanding high school scholar-athletes who are contributors to their schools and communities," said Ron W. Haddock, president and Chief Executive Officer of FINA. "That goal is best served by involving the public in the nominating process."

The British warship Vanguard exploded in 1917 at Scapa Flow, killing some 800 people.

Clearly, encouraging, recognizing and rewarding excellence and dedication in our youth is a worthy task for everyone.

Applications are available from principals, senior counselors, National Honor Society advisors and athletic directors at all accredited Texas public and private high schools.

Nominations should be submitted to FINA Public Affairs, P.O. Box 2159, Dallas, Texas 75221, and must include the student's name and address.

Nominations also may be submitted by calling (214) 750-4111. Each nominee will receive an application form, which must be completed and returned by Dec. 14.

The team is co-sponsored by KDFW-TV, 96.3 KSCS, Southwest Airlines and The Staubach Company.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The quest for identity is something that many adoptees undertake because they feel the intense need to discover the missing links in their background. I was fortunate enough at age 60 to locate my two half sisters and a half brother. More than 100 delightful birth relatives showed up for my "homecoming." Laer, the warmth of their love helped me recover from the agonizing death of my first husband after 40 years of marriage.

It is never too late to link families - the old, the new and those yet to come. This letter is a plea to ask you to reconsider your assumption that adoption records should stay sealed tighter than Fort Knox. I found that a search conducted with courage and respect for families can be very rewarding.--Mary in Detroit

DEAR MARY: Sorry, I hold firm to my position that sealed adoption records should remain sealed "tighter than Fort Knox." There is no moral justification for violating this pledge.

I'm happy that your search for your blood relatives yielded so much joy. My mail, however, is a very reliable barometer, and I can tell you that the vast majority of people do not wish to be looked up by their adopted children, siblings or anyone else. In fact, the principal fear that bedevils them constantly is that blood relatives will surface and disrupt their lives.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back, you printed a letter from a wife whose husband is obsessed with unplugging everything from the toaster to the microwave.

You responded that he saves nothing by unplugging the toaster and the dryer. In terms of electricity, you are correct, but consider this: A few years ago, my husband and I moved into a brand new condo. Shortly thereafter, I used the trash compactor for the first time. The kitchen filled with smoke. I was terrified. I tried to round up my two cats, no small feat considering that I was on crutches at the time. It turned out that the wiring was not hooked up properly.

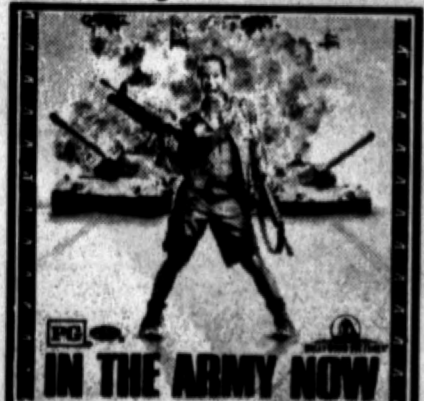

That episode convinced me to have a safety check by the fire department. One of the first things the inspectors did when they entered the kitchen was unplug my toaster. I was advised that since toasters work on a hinge mechanism, sometimes the hinge will release, turning the toaster on. If the toaster is on a table next to curtains, for example, the results can be disastrous. I was told this was a major cause of kitchen fires.

As for microwaves, VCRs, etc., when we go away for a few days, we unplug these, too. This not only avoids a fire hazard but prevents burnout of these items in case of a power loss and resultant surge when power is restored. With the surge protectors on the market today, this may not be necessary, but why take a chance?--Fan in California

DEAR FAN IN CA.: You performed a real service by writing this letter. I can guarantee you that at least a million readers in the United States and Canada, and as far away as Bangkok, will be unplugging their appliances tonight. Thank you for writing.

Gem of the Day: Of all the things you wear, the expression on your face makes the most lasting impression. And it costs you nothing.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Ready for the style show

Lauren Josseland and her sister Andee, 3, make faces in the mirror as they examine themselves while preparing for this weekend's style show that is part of the Taste of the Southwest fundraiser for the Deaf Smith County Unit of the American Cancer Society. The style show will feature about a dozen children from Hereford, Dimmitt and Friona modeling clothing from Kid's Alley. The show will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center west banquet hall, which is where all taste activities will be held. The taste will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. It is open to the public at no cost, although there will be opportunities to donate to the Cancer Society throughout the evening.

Is healthy lifestyle too hard?

A healthy lifestyle includes eating fruits and vegetables, exercising and taking vitamins, and women in a national survey recently conducted for Avon Products, Inc. by Opinion Research Corporation. Yet, 37 percent admitted that they did not practice these and other healthy habits because it was "too much trouble." Interestingly, even among the health-conscious, who did exercise and eat a prudent diet, one out of four agreed that living healthfully was a lot of bother.

"We all know what good health habits are, but 'inertia' and 'paralysis prevent many of us from practicing them," says psychotherapist Tessa Albert Warschaw, Ph.D., an expert in motivational behavior. "It takes time and effort to prepare meals that meet a growing list of nutritional requirements, to exercise regularly and to remember to take vitamins daily. Having an all-or-nothing attitude towards a healthy lifestyle leads to inertia-you can't do everything, so you end up doing nothing," she noted.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Metallica, the four horsemen of heavy metal, are trying to gallop out of their record contract.

The headbanging quartet sued Elektra Entertainment on Tuesday. "We just want to be free," said drummer Lars Ulrich.

The group and Elektra disagree on dividing royalties. The band also wants to share control of their master recordings so the songs "didn't end up in a car commercial or toothpaste commercial," Ulrich said.

Jonathan Monjack, a spokesman for New York-based Elektra, declined to comment, saying he hadn't seen the suit.

Metallica signed with Elektra in 1984. The group's hits include "The Four Horsemen," and its latest album - 1991's "Metallica" - has sold more than 7 million copies.

With seven teams now in District 1-4A, Hereford starts the district football race a week earlier this year. The race will heat up immediately with the Randall Raiders (4-0) coming to Whiteface Stadium at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

The flames of rivalry between Hereford and the six-year-old Canyon school have been fanned by the last three football games, which have been about as exciting as the sport can provide.

Randall struggled in its first three years of varsity football play, losing three games to Hereford by a combined score of 119-12, but the last three meetings are a different story. Randall got its first and only win in the series in 1991, blocking a field goal to hold on to a 26-25 win. Hereford won the last two thrillers: 31-26 in 1992 and 29-27 in 1993.

Friday's game could live up to the last three in the series. Randall is undefeated under head coach Alan Cornelius, a 1973 graduate of Hereford High School. The Raiders have wins over Lubbock High, Carlsbad, N.M., Tascosa and Levelland.

Hereford is 2-2 through non-district play, but that 2-2 is a couple of failed two-point conversions away from being 4-0.

"We've lost two games we could have won, and that leaves you feeling good about the team, because we've played a tough non-district schedule and we could be 4-0," head coach

McCall's boxing title changes look of heavy division

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
 AP Sports Writer

Oliver McCall called it a picture-perfect punch.

Well, the right-handed punch that made McCall the WBC heavyweight champion certainly exposed Lennox Lewis as a talented fighter who neglected to learn his profession properly.

It also shifted the focus of the heavyweight championship picture. That man with the grin front-row center is promoter Don King, who had been missing from boxing's big picture since Mike Tyson's shocking loss of the undisputed title to Buster Douglas on Feb. 11, 1990, at Tokyo.

McCall's second-round upset of the previously unbeaten Lewis early last Sunday morning at Wembley, England, means that King will now have at least a piece of the title for Tyson to challenge for when he gets out of prison next year, probably in May or June.

It's possible the 29-year-old McCall, a former Tyson sparring partner, won't be champion when Iron Mike is ready for his megabucks challenge in the fall of 1995. It's certain, however, that the WBC champion when Tyson gets out will be promoted by King.

King would like McCall to make two or three defenses before meeting Tyson in a mandatory defense, which would be due next September. Possible opponents are the King-promoted Franz Botha of South Africa, Bruce Seldon and Peter McNeeley. An in-shape McCall should beat any of these three.

To get a mandatory title shot, a fighter has to be ranked No. 1 or be the highest-ranked challenger available. Jose Sulaiman, WBC president, told a reporter last week in London that as far as he is concerned Tyson will be ranked No. 1 as soon as he is released from prison in Indiana.

Washington's Lohmiller tries to stay cool during struggles

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) - As coaches publicly show their impatience over Chip Lohmiller's slump, the Redskins kicker is trying to keep his cool.

Lohmiller missed an extra point and a 47-yard field goal Sunday against the Atlanta Falcons, extending a skid that included earlier misses from 34 and 23 yards against the Seahawks and the Giants.

"There's a big mental part of it, because if you don't have confidence in yourself, you're not going to make the kick," Lohmiller said. "It doesn't matter how good you are, you have to have the mental strength to go out there and be able to make the kicks before you actually go out there and kick the ball."

Lohmiller's numbers put him among the NFL's best kickers in his first five years. But everybody knows a kicker is only as good as his last kick.

With that in mind, Redskins coach Norv Turner and special teams coach Pete Rodriguez tried out three kickers Tuesday: Cary Blanchard, formerly of the Jets, and two rookies, Todd Peterson of Georgia, and Dirk Borgognone of Pacific University.

Turner said it was just a matter of getting familiar with available talent, and that the team is sticking with Lohmiller for now.

Lohmiller understands the team has to look at other kickers when he's not doing his job.

"It's business," he said. "If somebody's not performing well, they're going to bring somebody else in and try to fill that spot. But in my position, I have to go out there and work harder and get back to where I was and get a groove."

Lohmiller has tinkered with his technique in recent weeks, but he's going back to his old method.

"I made a pact with myself I'm going to go back and do that," he said. "I think I changed my style a little bit since training camp, and I just need to go out there and kick the ball. I was just being a little more smooth, and I wasn't really attacking the ball, I was just trying to be in a nice, slow, smooth rhythm, and my personality is to be fast and get after the ball."

White draws start for Oilers

By MICHAEL LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Opportunity is knocking again for Lorenzo White.

He missed it last season when a hamstring injury put him on the sidelines. Gary Brown replaced him in the Houston Oilers lineup and gained 1,000 yards.

He got another chance when Brown suffered a twisted ankle in Sunday's game against Cincinnati. That gives White the starting assignment for Monday night's game against Pittsburgh.

"Opportunity is what this game is about," White said Wednesday. "It was unfortunate that I was injured last year, but now it's great that I have an opportunity to start and help the team."

White rushed for 1,224 yards two seasons ago and was the starter last year until a hamstring injury gave Brown a chance.

Could this be another fortunate turn in White's up-and-down career? "Any time I can get on the field, it's good for me," White said. "I have to go out there and play for the team and for Lorenzo."

White became a free agent at the end of last season and tried to sign elsewhere. To his surprise, there were no takers.

If White is looking to show teams what they missed on national television, he won't say so.

"I feel I can go help the team anywhere," White said. "As far as trying to prove a point to some other teams, that would be selfish on my part. I don't have anything to prove. Under certain circumstances, I got hurt and lost my job."

Now that he's in line to play, White's answers are diplomatic. He felt differently in the summer when he visited Green Bay, Miami and Cincinnati and talked with the Raiders, but got no offers.

He eventually signed a one-year contract with the Oilers.

"I was mad and I was hurt," White said. "I look back on it, I can catch, block and run, that's been proven. It was like I didn't know what they were looking for. I don't know why no one signed me."

White will do his best to put on a good show against the Steelers.

"Every game I go out, I'm trying to do that, play my best," he said. "You never know who is watching. It's just a chance to show that I'm a quality running back and one of the best in the league."

Terry Bradshaw of Pittsburgh suffered a concussion on a pass play which produced the winning score against Dallas in the 1976 Super Bowl.

Mexican battlefield to be center of national park

By TONY GRAY
The (McAllen, Texas) Monitor
SANTA GERTRUDIS, Mexico - The towering sandstone obelisk stands alone atop the arid hill overlooking the historic city of Camargo, shining in the distance like a gleaming oasis.

Marked off by a patriotic green-and-red rope border, the marker commemorates the June 16, 1866, Battle of Santa Gertrudis, when Mexican troops turned back the Monterrey-bound forces of Emperor Maximilian I, a combination of Austrian, French and U.S. Confederate mercenaries.

By many accounts this was a more significant conflict than the much-celebrated Battle of Puebla, when Mexican forces defended that town against the French on May 5, 1862. Santa Gertrudis represented the beginning of the end for the Austrian archduke Maximilian and his generals, who were to lose control of Matamoros one week later on June 23, 1866.

The following year, as his European military support dwindled, Maximilian met his fate in front of a Quertaro firing squad and Mexico could reclaim its autonomy.

The hilltop battlefield is accessible from Mexico's Highway 2, which runs between Reynosa and Camargo, and is the site of an annual fiesta first held in 1867, one year after the battle.

But today, the municipality of Camargo is proposing that the 30-acre battle site be designated as a national park, with the adjacent idle brush land reserved for an ecological reserve in the Tamaulipas Rio Bravo Wildlife Corridor.

"This battle is not considered in the national festivals and should be. After all, this was Maximilian's kiss of death," said Camargo's municipal historian Victor Manuel Saenz. "If we can get a national designation for the site, it will help more people to understand the history that shaped today's events."

Verbal approval for the park site has been extended by Tamaulipas Gov. Manuel Cavazos Lerma and the state's Secretariat of Social Development, SEDESOL, which oversees environmental affairs, but a national designation requires the completion of a lengthy bureaucratic process, Saenz said.

But Camargo officials, in conjunction with the state of Tamaulipas, the Los Caminos Del Rio Heritage Foundation and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, have already initiated work on a multi-faceted park usage and wildlife management plan, the first step in satisfying Mexican federal park authorities who would, in turn, recommend a presidential designation of a national park site.

"We already have the land in place and the ejidatarios (local rural coop owners) have been very cooperative in considering allowing us even more land," said Camargo Mayor Raul Saenz Ramirez. "The battle is really only part of it. We can promote history and nature together for the good of everyone."

While historical accounts of the battle vary, it is estimated that some 600 men from both sides were killed in less than two hours.

With news of 200 supply wagons and 2,000 French and Austrian troops marching along the Rio Grande from French-controlled Matamoros, General Mariano Escobedo hid his men in the arid hills near Camargo on June 15.

With units strategically placed to block the interventionists' access to a water supply at the nearby Rio San Juan, Escobedo's outmanned and outarmed troops waited patiently until the next morning when they surprised the oncoming troops.

While numerous prisoners were taken after the battle, most were lucky, their lives spared. Ironically, many of them, including French and Austrians settled in nearby areas, blending in with locals as ill feelings gradually eased.

One of the foreign soldiers who fought for Maximilian at Santa Gertrudis was German-born Heinrich Portsheller, the man credited with developing a common architectural identity on both sides of the Rio Grande.

Portsheller settled and married in Mier after the battle, and eventually moved to Roma and built many of Starr County's most famous historic landmarks, leaving behind his trademark sculpted brick work.

But while history clearly dominates discussion of the proposed national park project, the area adjacent to the battle site is a perfect example of a dry brush land habitat, home to a number of endangered species.

U.S. Parks and Wildlife Botanist Chris Best referred to the area as an "upland chaparral" similar to a Bardas escarpment, typically found in South Texas.

Best, who has performed a preliminary botanical survey of proposed refuge site, will be assisting Mexican botanists to define the diversity of plant life in the area.

The project also calls for a bi-national perspective, similar to other wildlife and heritage projects currently under way along the Rio Grande.

Trade fair draws 6,000 monthly to restored textile mill in Post

By BRIAN COFER
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
POST, Texas - It took a little vision, hard work and lots of help from God.

That's how Marvin and Sheree Butler describe their odyssey in organizing Old Mill Trade Days. But they agree that their perseverance has paid off.

In six months, the Butlers have transformed a derelict textile mill into a trade fair drawing about 6,000 people per month.

"We've been real pleased," Sheree Butler said, noting that the event has surpassed their expectations.

It was a success from day one with 10,000 people showing up the first weekend in March.

About 300 vendors sell wares ranging from antiques to crafts to live animals. An outdoor marketplace called the Trading Post recently opened, and 250 more merchants will soon set up shop in a newly refurbished building.

But don't call it a flea market. "We're kind of between a carnival atmosphere and a trade day," Marvin Butler said.

The trade days grounds also boasts an amphitheater used for concerts and live entertainment, a plethora of food booths and streets of false-fronted buildings resembling a Wild West boomtown.

It's all in keeping with the western heritage of Post and the former Postex plant, a collection of gigantic concrete buildings and a smokestack, founded by breakfast cereal magnate C.W. Post.

"These are some great old buildings," Butler said. "The first ones were built about 1912. They're really solid."

He first happened upon the complex a couple of years ago. He had already fallen in love with Post one day while making a sales call as an employee of a Lubbock food brokerage firm.

Soon the Butlers were operating an antique shop on Main Street. Still, the plant, which was shut down about 10 years ago, was on his mind.

"I went out to look, and I couldn't believe how big it was," he said. "The weeds were waist-high. It was a real ghost town."

Nevertheless, Butler envisioned turning the former mill into a trade fair like the First Monday sale in Canton, near Dallas, which draws as many as 100,000 people.

"I wanted to take Canton and improve on it," he said.

With that in mind, he quit his job and devoted full attention to his vision. But it wasn't long before troubles arrived. Their funds were almost depleted, and they still were no closer to launching the trade days.

"I told my parents, 'You'd better find us a place to live. I don't think we're going to make it.'"

About that time a friend came over. Butler describes the subsequent events as divine intervention.

"We prayed for a long time," he said. "He left. Then about 10 minutes later, the mayor came to the door. He told me his phone wouldn't quit ringing. Some ladies had called and said Trade Days would be the best thing for Post."

Soon the town was behind the project, Butler recalled, sponsoring a barbecue and lending whatever help was needed, and Old Mill Trade Days became reality by March. Since then, the Butlers have made several additions, such as the stage, the Trading Post and many of the western-styled buildings. Before long, the event will host 1,000 vendors, Butler said. Already, 200 are on a waiting list.

Word is spreading as more and more visitors venture out to Post bringing their money. Several Lubbock merchants open up shop on weekends and gross more in three days than they could in a month at home, Butler said. And the money doesn't stop flowing at the trade days' gates.

"Trade Days has really helped us," said Jim Plummer, owner of Post's Hotel Garza. "It has doubled our business."

More people are lingering in town, he said, and staying for lunch at the hotel. Others are drawn to stay for the night, especially vendors.

"It's only going to get better and better."

Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter hears program on hats

"Hats" was the topic presented to members of Xi Epsilon Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority during their recent meeting held in the home of Peggy Hyer.

Others members in attendance were Ruby Lee, Brenda Ramey, Linda Arellano, Holly Bixler, Melinda Henson, Carol Kelley, Connie Matthews, Gaye Reily, Susan Shaw, Melinda Whitfill and Kay Williams. Also, present were two guests, Denise Hafziger and Lanell Kendrick.

"Hats" was a humorous, inspirational program brought by Rita Welch of Dimmitt. She modeled various styles of hats and likened each to the type of member found in an organization. Her examples ranged from such personalities as Sarah Scatterd to Dora Do-Nothing to Lola Look-at-me. She noted that she has been giving this program for nearly 30 years to various organizations in the area.

The business meeting was conducted by President Lee, who led the Opening Ritual. Corresponding Secretary Whitfill noted that scholarship forms for legacies are available. Lee also displayed the latest Beta Sigma Phi cookbook and announced she was currently taking orders for them.

Secret sisters were thanked by Hyer, Arellano, Whitfill and Kelley. During a report from the Sorority City Council, Lee announced that the transfer of Sharon Bodner and Ruby Sanders for Alpha Alpha Chapter had been approved. She said XEA Chapter would host the Nov. 15 rituals while Alpha Alpha will host the April 1995 rituals.

Service Committee Chairman Shaw asked members to identify the type and number of pets per member, with wrong answers collecting money for the Christmas Stocking Fund.

Williams, program and yearbook chairman, stated that the next regular meeting would be held Oct. 4 in Southwest Public Service with Reily serving as hostess. Deann Harris will serve as co-hostess.

Arellano, a member of the social committee, polled members as to the best date for a couple's after-football game party. The event will be held Friday.

Last year's chapter sweetheart, Susan Shaw, collected secret ballots for the naming of a new sweetheart.

After adjournment, the closing ritual and Mizpah were repeated. Refreshments of sundaes, flavored tea and coffee were served by Hyer and Lee.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Where possible, you seem to give a light ahead for people to go toward. I hope you can help a friend who has been diagnosed with degenerative arthritis, with spine spurs, and osteoporosis. She's tried everything, including acupuncture. She has constant pain, is depressed and sees no future. I cannot accept this, and I told her I would write to you. — Mrs. M.B.

ANSWER: Your friend has three physical problems — her arthritis, her osteoporosis and her pain. The immediate concern is her pain, for which there is usually some temporary relief. It's chronic pain that presents the knotty challenge.

Many doctors today approach chronic pain as an entity in its own right, treating it with the newest and safest tools available. Pain-control clinics offer broad approaches that people such as your friend need.

Along with immediate pain control, efforts should continue to ferret out and treat its causes. Your friend's spine spur — a calcium deposit — is an example.

The spine's many nerves radiate outward, sending and gathering pain signals from near and distant points. Thus, surgery to remove such nerve-impinging spurs might alleviate wide-ranging pain by relieving the impingement.

Osteoporosis-related pain can occur from a collapse of osteoporotic bony sections, one upon another. Again, nearby nerves become compressed, causing local or distant pain.

Rest and temporary back supports can be parts of pain control, and many new medicines deal safely with chronic pain.

Pain-control clinics consider various approaches, staffed as they are with experts in rheumatology and neurology and in techniques such as biofeedback. Your friend should ask her doctor about a pain-control clinic in her area.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband had rheumatic fever when he was a child. He was hospitalized for it. At 40, he is in good health, except for some arthritis. His work requires physical exertion. Can we find out about potential heart problems ahead? — L.J.

ANSWER: Not every child who has had rheumatic fever has heart damage from it. The damage, when it happens, is to heart valves, which can fall prey to the streptococcus antibodies made during the germs' attack. That weakens the heart.

But that would have happened at the time of infection. It doesn't pop up later in life.

The doctor listens at the time for telltale murmurs that indicate such heart valve damage. Those signs would have been apparent at the time. Your husband's parents would have been warned.

Arthritis, too, can be a consequence of rheumatic fever, but it is only transient, leaving soon after the strep attack subsides.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Last year, I started experiencing joint pains. It started in my knees and traveled to my ankles, hips, elbows, wrists, shoulders and fingers. My family physician ordered blood tests. They showed a high eosinophil count. I saw an allergist. He tested for bowel parasites! The test was negative. Then I saw a hematologist and rheumatologist. They found nothing wrong. Since then, though, I have been having blood drawn once a month, but the eosinophil count never really gets back to normal. The pains come and go. — J.H.

ANSWER: Your situation presents a challenge. But we can start with the eosinophils, a certain kind of white blood cells. They represent about 6 percent of all white blood cells. They figure importantly in allergic reactions, so an elevated count such as yours would certainly fall into the province of the allergist.

High eosinophil counts occur from other non-allergy situations, such as parasite infections, rheumatoid arthritis or polyarteritis, which is blood vessel inflammation.

Some readers might recall a highly publicized epidemic a while back of eosinophil-myalgia — muscle pain — that was traced to taking of the amino acid tryptophan. I don't think that's your problem, though.

There is a rare illness, eosinophilic fasciitis syndrome, that features a high eosinophil count with swollen and tender joints and muscles.

With all this in mind, you can understand just how difficult it can be to find a specific meaning of any single blood test result.

I certainly have no simple answers. I can only advise continued patience and cooperation at this stage of diagnosis.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Just a note of thanks for your reply regarding my sister-in-law's (B.J.C.'s) vasovagal syncope. We finally were able to talk her into seeing a doctor after she was rushed to the emergency room. She is doing fine now. Her tests are OK and she is on medication and feeling much better. So, again, thanks for the reply. — Mrs. B.C.

ANSWER: Vasovagal syncope is a faint — the end result, as I wrote, of fast-moving contradictory events, including sudden blood vessel dilation and a slowing of the heart, The vagus nerve's job is to slow the heart, and in such cases it can precipitate a circulation crisis.

Emotional stress, fear, fatigue, pain or something as innocent as an overwarm room may precipitate the string of events, culminating in a transient and frightening bodily collapse. The swoon and the subsequent horizontal posture reverses the situation.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: I'm someone who likes to replace things before I completely run out. When buying a new carton of eggs, I take the two or three remaining older eggs and put a small dot on them with a felt-tip pen. That way I use the older ones up first. Never fails! — Sandy Raley, Vancouver, Wash.

What an egg-stra special hint; however, you should use a pencil or pen to mark the eggs because the felt-tip ink may be absorbed through the egg shell. — Heloise

Q: Do you have a favorite potato soup recipe that you'd share with me? Potato soup used to be the soup I preferred, but I can't make it so that it doesn't taste too bland. — T. Kendrick, Reeds Spring, Mo.

A: I have so many favorite soup recipes that I have compiled them into a soup pamphlet, appropriately titled Heloise's Sensational Soups.

Included in this pamphlet is a recipe for Hearty Chicken and Potato Soup. The recipe is a little too lengthy to repeat in this column, but I am sending you a copy.

There are also 20 other soup recipes and a generic cream-soup recipe that consists of dry ingredients that can be mixed ahead, stored properly and used as a base that you can mix with vegetables or meat to make your favorite cream soup.

House threatens baseball's antitrust exemption

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bill to partially remove baseball's antitrust exemption cleared its first hurdle in Congress, but the players' association wouldn't say whether the legislation could bring an end to the strike.

The House Judiciary committee's subcommittee on economic and commercial law passed the amended bill Wednesday and sent it to the full Judiciary Committee, which is expected to approve the legislation today.

"This is an historic day. For the first time in the history of Congress, a subcommittee—and tomorrow a committee, has voted to remove an exemption that has existed for over 50 years," said Rep. Mike Synar, the Oklahoma Democrat who sponsored the bill.

The bill would give baseball players the same legal status as athletes in other sports if owners unilaterally impose work rules.

Rep. Jack Brooks, the Texas Democrat who chairs the House Judiciary Committee, said baseball was "on the verge of being destroyed or worse—written off by the American public."

"The barons of the game appear to have forgotten the fiduciary respect of a public trust," he said.

However, two key provisions that the union had wanted were deleted before Wednesday's vote. The first eliminated what amounted to an automatic injunction against a salary cap until any lawsuits are decided. The second left it up to the courts to determine whether the union would have to decertify before a suit could be heard—a tactic forced on NFL players when they sued after their 1987 strike.

Union head Donald Fehr, testifying before the subcommittee last week, promised that if the original bill by Synar became law, players would end the strike, which began Aug. 12.

"I think this evidences a growing recognition on behalf of the Congress that there are significant abnormalities here that need to be corrected or you're going to continue to have strikes and lockout all the time," Fehr said Wednesday after his meeting with players in Phoenix.

Fehr wouldn't say if the amended bill, if enacted, would lead players to end the strike.

"Even though it's short, bills of this type take some scrutiny," he said. "But I think it's safe to say it's a significant step in the right direction."

Acting commissioner Bud Selig also said he would reserve judgement.

"Certainly this is what the chairman said he was going to do last week," Selig said.

Another House panel, the Education and Labor Subcommittee on labor-management relations, is to hold a hearing today on a bill by Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., that would impose binding arbitration if players and owners don't agree on a deal by Feb. 1. The arbitrator, much in the manner of a salary arbitrator, would select the final offer of one side. His decision would be issued by March 15.

"This is precedent-setting for this committee and an indication of the crisis in baseball," Williams said. "I'm not giving up on trying to pass it."

Among those scheduled to testify today are Orza, Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser, New York Yankees outfielder Bernie Williams, owners' negotiator Richard Ravitch, management lawyer Chuck O'Connor, economist Henry Aaron and law professor Gary Roberts.

On the other side of the Capital, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said he would introduce language similar to the Synar bill as an amendment to a spending bill for the District of Columbia.

"I think the American people want to see baseball played," Metzenbaum told the Senate on Wednesday. "I don't think we can have a World Series anymore this year, but I think there's a worry players won't go to spring training."

Fehr has said the exemption partly has caused baseball's eight work stoppages since 1972. The U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1922 that baseball wasn't interstate commerce and was exempt from antitrust law, a decision last reaffirmed in 1972, when the High Court said it was up to Congress to remove the exemption.

HERD

Danny Haney said.

"We gained valuable experience in non-district, in all the games," Haney said. "Fighting off rallies, rallying ourselves—we got all kinds of valuable experience that will help us in the district race."

This race should be competitive. Randall is 4-0, while Pampa, Borger and newcomer Canyon all are 3-1. Dumas joins Hereford at 2-2, while Caprock is 1-3 after beating Tulia Saturday night.

"I feel like the district race is very even," Haney said. "It's something we'll have to wait and see how the teams are going to play on game night."

Randall is the frontrunner in the district race because of a potent offense and an improved defense.

"They've got a lot of players back," Haney said. "The bulk of their defense is back, and they're playing better defense than they have been.

"They run a five-man front, and they're pretty straight with it. They don't do any messing around. They read you and run to the football."

Players to watch on defense include end Lance Denton, linebacker Jared Taylor, noseguard Troy White and tackle Kenny Noggler, Haney said.

The leader of the Raider offense is D'Mitri McFarland, the district's leading rusher with 702 yards and eight touchdowns.

"The bulk of their offense is the running game with McFarland," Haney said, "and they throw enough to keep you honest in the secondary. They do that using play-action, faking the hand-off to McFarland and rolling out and hitting the underneath routes."

Randall uses two quarterbacks. Warren McCarty gets most of the snaps and has hit 12-of-24 for 240 yards with one touchdown and one interception. Jud Moller has hit 18-of-36 for 265 yards with one TD and one interception. Neither is much of a running threat.

Randall's leading receiver is Marcus Quesberry, with 14 catches for 226 yards.

Injury report: Linebacker Martin Martinez strained a calf muscle in the Coronado game two weeks ago and played sparingly last week against Frenship, but he should back at full-strength Friday, Haney said.

Players of the Week: Tight end Scott Parker on offense; linebacker Armando Zambrano on defense; and punter Brian Betzen on special teams. Junior varsity: offensive tackle John Messer; Sophomore team: tailback-free safety Stephen Cloud; and Freshmen: linebacker Jeremy Scott.

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams & Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — State Comptroller John Sharp says casino gambling proponents will have a "rough row to hoe" in the Legislature because lawmakers are not faced with a money crunch that helped prompt passage of a state lottery.

State leaders recently announced a $2.2 billion surplus following the first half of the two-year budget period.

Avoiding a tax increase in the next legislative session should be "a piece of cake," Sharp said.

But Jim Lee, president of the Texas Association for Casino Entertainment, said, "I'm certain they can use an extra billion dollars per biennium, which is what casinos will produce."

Lee said casino gambling would bring $500 million to the state annually and create 70,000 direct and indirect jobs.

Last month, state Attorney General Dan Morales ruled that a constitutional amendment would be required before casino gambling is allowed in Texas.

Comptroller 'Liens' on Lawyers
Meanwhile, the comptroller has begun filing liens against the property of Texas lawyers who have not paid their $200 annual occupation tax.

Sharp's "Operation: Make 'Em Pay" targets some 850 lawyers who have refused to pay the tax for at least a three-year period and have ignored six past-due statements mailed to them since May 16.

Records show that 8,590 of the estimated 43,000 lawyers are not current on their occupation tax payments, and other tax-dodging lawyers may find liens against their property or freezes on their bank accounts if they don't pay up, Sharp said.

Sharp said the state is due an estimated $650,000.

DA Requests Probe of Truan
State Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, is denying wrongdoing after allegations were made that he illegally solicited his home county to become its insurance agent.

Nueces County District Attorney Carlos Valdez said he has asked the Texas Rangers to find out whether Truan's solicitation of Nueces County Judge Robert Barnes constituted official misconduct or conflict of interest, according to a report in the Austin American-Statesman.

The state's official misconduct law went into effect in January 1993, after Truan had been named Nueces County's agent of record, Truan pointed out, and called the allegations "Republican smear tactics." Truan, an incumbent, is being challenged by Republican Rex Moses on the Nov. 8 ballot.

After receiving a freedom of information request from Moses, Barnes acknowledged the receipt of an unsigned letter dated September 1990, typed on Truan's official Senate stationery and bearing the name of a Truan aide.

Truan said the use of the stationery by an aide was inadvertent and apologized for the error.

Bullock Gets NRA Support
Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, who is recovering from heart bypass surgery, has received re-election support from the National Rifle Association in his campaign against Republican Tex Lezar.

"Gun owners and sportsmen have always been among my strongest supporters, and I'm pleased to have their backing again," Bullock said. "Hunting and gun ownership are as much a part of Texas as armadillos, the Alamo and high school football."

Bullock, a Democrat, said the NRA noted his help in passing legislation that would have allowed Texans to carry concealed handguns as the reason for its support. Gov. Ann Richards vetoed that legislation.

Term Limits in Oklahoma
Oklahoma voters last week overwhelmingly approved extending term limits to its congressional delegation.

The vote, pending a U.S. Supreme Court decision on challenges made against other states that have set congressional term limits, would limit Oklahoma's U.S. senators to two six-year terms and House members to three two-year terms.

In 1990, Oklahoma became the first state in the nation to impose term limits on its state legislators.

Other Highlights
■ The state consumer advocate for insurance has recommended a 5.7 percent reduction in standard auto insurance rates. Public Insurance Counsel Mark Kincaid also challenged the rate proposals filed earlier by Farmers Insurance Group and the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office. Farmers proposed a 9.8 percent boost, while TAIISO requested a 17.7 percent increase.

■ Rebecca Flores Harrington, a new board member of the United Farm Workers of America, says the union will intensify efforts to organize agricultural laborers in Texas. Harrington, who has been Texas' UFW director for 20 years, said many farm workers are battling poor working conditions, low wages and fewer job opportunities.

■ The state Veterans Land Board is increasing the amount of low-interest loans available to help veterans buy land, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro announced. He said the board has doubled the amount of money Texas veterans can borrow from $20,000 to $40,000.

Prayer to The Holy Spirit
Oh Holy Spirit! Thou who art all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my ideal. Thou who giveth me the divine gift of forgetting and forgiving wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all my blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part again from Thee. Though the illusion of material things abound--my desire is to be with Thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank You for Your mercy on me and my loved ones.
Persons should pray three consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be. Publish this prayer once grace has been attained.
Grateful for Grace attained.
