GOP confident plan will pass Demos assail compromise

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Conceding that they cannot halt the Republican balanced-budget compromise from plowing through Congress, Democrats are labeling the plan an extremist blueprint for aiding the rich.

Republicans said Tuesday that they had the votes to move the budget outline through the House and Senate. It claims to eliminate deficits by 2002 by proposing to slow spending for Medicare and other social programs while delivering a $245 billion tax cut to millions of people and companies - including the well-to-do.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the number of possible opponents among the chamber's 54 Republicans was "too small to discuss." Aides said 51 of them would definitely vote yes - exactly enough to ensure passage through the 100-member body. In the House, vote counters were just as certain that they would succeed.

Since the blueprint does not require President Clinton's signature, that left Democrats trying to score political points by painting the package as a mean-spirited one that takes from the elderly and poor and gives to the rich.

"I can't imagine someone like Nelson Rockefeller looking at a document like this and doing anything other than throwing up," said Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., referring to his late uncle, a Republican vice president and New York governor who was a leader of his party's once-dominant moderate wing.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., conceded that "there's very little doubt" the measure will be approved. But he warned that things would be different when it comes to future legislation implementing the tax and spending cuts, which needs presidential approval.

"I can predict with certainty that this budget will be changed, or it will not become law," he said.

Such talk drew scoffs from Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour, who attended Tuesday's weekly meeting of GOP senators and said the package would prove to be a boon to the economy.

"If we have to take credit for that exclusively, I guess we'll just have to," he said in a brief interview.

GOP aides said support from only three Republican senators was in question: Sens. Olympia Snowe and William Cohen of Maine and James Jeffords of Vermont. They were upset over the budget's planned $10 billion reduction in aid for graduate student loans. Snowe, however, said she was leaning toward supporting the measure.

Republicans were hoping to retain the support of at least one or two of the three Senate Democrats who supported the measure earlier this year: Sens. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, Charles Robb of Virginia and Sam Nunn of Georgia. Kerrey said he was undecided, but did not like the deeper tax cuts and higher defense spending that the compromise allowed.

The budget-balancing compromise claims $894 billion in savings over the next seven years. Just more than half would come from Medicare and Medicaid, the health-insurance programs for the elderly, disabled and poor that are among the government's biggest and fastest-growing programs.

Other big reductions mapped by the plan include $100 billion from welfare, $13 billion from agriculture and $11 billion from federal retirees' health benefits. The Commerce Department and surgeon general's office would be eliminated, mass transit operating aid would be phased out, and reductions would be made in the National Park Service, job training and biomedical research.

Medicaid changes will hurt hospitals

By DEAN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) - Texas hospitals stand to lose billions of dollars under changes to Medicaid funding being considered in Congress, according to State Comptroller John Sharp.

An analysis released Tuesday by Sharp's office concludes that Texas hospitals could lose as much as $4 billion in Medicaid funds over the next seven years under a budget plan pushed by Republicans.

The state's health care industry as a whole could lose as much as $12 billion, compared with funding Texas would receive under the current Medicaid system, he said.

"Our analysis shows that by the year 2002, some public hospitals would have to hike local tax rates by as much as 50 percent to cover the shortfall caused by inequities in the proposed congressional plan," said Sharp, a Democrat.

The congressional budget plan pending in Congress caps Medicaid spending. In addition, lawmakers are considering a block grant system similar to the one proposed for welfare.

Under such a system, the federal government would give each state a grant, which the state would then distribute.

While he endorsed the concept of block grants and said the Medicaid reform effort has bipartisan support in Texas, Sharp questioned the formula by which the grants would be determined.

Formulas like those proposed for welfare - which provide states with current funding levels plus 5 percent - do not concentrate money on areas that need it most, he said.

In a growing state like Texas, where Medicaid funding has been historically low, less money will be available for more and more people. Whereas in states like New York or Massachusetts, where populations are declining, fewer people will continue to get more money, he said. "Block grants will not work under the unfair funding formulas that are currently pending in the Congress," Sharp said.

"Washington should abandon these failed formulas of the past and turn to a simple solution instead: Send the money where the people are," he said.

Some, however, say such statements are premature since discussions on Medicaid block grants are just beginning.

A prediction on how Medicaid funds would be distributed and whether hospitals will suffer "is so far ahead of the game that it verges on irresponsible," said Tom Hoopes, an aide for U.S. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston.

Archer supported the legislation that would create block grants for welfare, which is pending in the U.S. Senate.

Sharp is pushing a system in which funding would be capped nationally. The government then could distribute from the federal pool according to the need of each state.

"The sky is really falling, and this is very, very serious issue," said Joe DaSilva, senior vice president of the 450-member Texas Hospital Association.

"We're supportive of a fair block grant approach," he said, urging the Texas congressional delegation to take a leadership role in the issue.

Sharp, who says two-thirds of the states would be adversely affected by the changes in Medicaid, said he has been working with other states to push his proposal.

He will travel to Washington, D.C., Thursday to discuss the issue with the Texas congressional delegation and members of the U.S. House subcommittee on Medicaid.

Presence of hantavirus probably not unusual

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor
Just because state Health Department tests showed the presence of hantavirus in area rodents is no reason to go on a mass rat-killing spree, a regional health department official said Wednesday.

Dr. James Morgan, regional director for public health in Lubbock, said the revelation last week that 16 of 338 rodents trapped in the area had the hantavirus is not that unusual.

"It appears this wouldn't be out of the ordinary," Morgan said from his Lubbock office. "This is probably a statewide situation where a certain small percentage of the rodents are positive."

Health department officials descended on Hereford, Deaf Smith County and the Muleshoe area after Rocky Arzola Jr., 15, of Hereford died in May of what was later determined to be hantavirus.

The hantavirus gained notoriety in 1993 when numerous people in the Four Corners region of New Mexico died of the rodent-borne disease.

However, Morgan stressed, there have only been three confirmed cases of hantavirus in Texas in two years.

He said retroactive serology tests on rodents captured around Texas several years ago have revealed results similar to those obtained from the Hereford and Muleshoe area rodents -- that about 5 percent of rodents appear to be infected with hantavirus at all times.

"We're not going to do a big kill-off of rodents," Morgan said. "It's not a big issue we're going to have alerts about."

He has said, however, that homeowners can kill rodents when they appear in their residences.

In addressing rodent populations in larger concentrations, Morgan turned to a Biblical example -- of the man who cleaned the demons out of his home, but was invaded by many more later -- as a parallel to infestation.

He said cleaning all the rats out of an area could lead to a later infestation far greater than in the first place.

"You might end up with a bigger problem than before," he said.

In addition, Morgan said, there are concerns that killing off large numbers of rodents could open the door to hazards of other diseases as well.

He said the rat population in infested areas actually helps to restrain fleas, which can carry such diseases as bubonic plague.

"That is one of the concerns we have," Morgan said. Fleas need a place to live and "we don't want it to be people."

Morgan also addressed concerns that Arzola had caught the disease at a feedyard, noting that media reports to that effect were untrue.

The youth worked at a facility in Muleshoe, he said, not at a feedyard in Hereford.

Reports have said Arzola's work place there was a sale barn, but Morgan said he did not go there and could not confirm what type of

Lubbock gears up for Reese shutdown

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Economy-minded leaders here wasted no time before launching a campaign to find new uses for doomed Reese Air Force Base.

Officials quickly put a good spin on the decision Thursday by a base closure commission to target Reese.

That base - source of about 2,500 military and civilian jobs - brings the Lubbock region a $201.2 million economic impact annually. It will continue training U.S. pilots for at least another year or two, while military officials arrange its shutdown.

Because they couldn't save Reese from the Base Closure and Realignment Commission, leaders in Lubbock immediately shifted their efforts to finding ways to cope.

"Reese was important and we did want to save it," said Quentin Thomas, assistant city manager. "But at some point in time we have to say we fought the good fight."

Thomas expressed confidence that new tenants would move in.

"There's a 100 percent chance - not a chance, a statement of fact - that the people of West Texas are going to rise to the opportunity," he said.

But this latest blow to the Lubbock economy brought an acknowledgment last week from Mayor David Langston: "We have suffered a tremendous amount of disappointment over the last several months."

Langston, at his news conference Thursday, mentioned the pullout of American Airlines jet service and the elimination of 400 jobs at Texas Instruments. In January, voters rejected a sales tax for economic development.

Texas Employment Commission figures released June 20 show Lubbock with the state's fourth-highest unemployment rate, at 3.9 percent, compared to the Texas average of 5.6 percent.

That fact encourages those who believe the Lubbock economy will survive without a military base.

"Lubbock is prosperous," said Lew Hill, chairman of the economics department at Texas Tech University. "It's got a booming health care industry, the employment is high, people are working, making money. And so the Lubbock economy is strong and it is viable."

Reese offers 3,953 acres of runways, hangars, dorms and office space. The property about five miles west of Lubbock also includes a golf course and bowling alley.

"We're going to make a great big lemonade out of a very small lemon," U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison said at City Hall. "In 10 years we're going to look back and say, 'How could we have been so lucky?'"

Guilty pleas accepted in district court session here

A defendant in 222nd District Court Tuesday was sentenced to a 12-year prison term on each of two charges, after he entered pleas of guilty. On motion of the state, probation of another defendant was revoked.

Three defendants were given probated sentences after entering pleas of guilty to charges against them. And three other defendants were granted probation after completing terms in the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Special Alternative Incarceration Program (boot camp).

Abel Zepeda, 48, will serve two concurrent 12-year prison sentences on two charges of delivery of a controlled substance, cocaine.

On revocation of probation, Elizabeth Ann Chavez, convicted earlier of tampering with a government record and given a four-year probated sentence, was ordered to TDCJ institutional division for three years.

On a plea of guilty to felony driving while intoxicated, Richard Vara Casarez, 24, was sentenced to five years' probation. On a second charge, for aggravated assault, Judge

David Wesley Gulley granted deferred adjudication probation of eight years. Casarez also was ordered to a TDCJ substance abuse treatment program.

Glenn Eugene Toews, 18, entered guilty pleas to a pair of state jail felonies, forgery and burglary of a building. He was sentenced to two years in a state jail, probated five years, on each charge. He also was fined $1,500 on the burglary charge and ordered to make restitution of $3,814 on the forgery charge.

A five-year probated sentence was imposed on Reese Allen Dawson Jr., 43, after he entered a plea of guilty to felony driving while intoxicated. He also was fined $1,500.

Judge Gulley granted probation to Jose Limon, John W. Abbott and Raul Nava Jr. All three had completed terms in the TDCJ boot camp program.

Limon will serve six years' probation for burglary of a motor vehicle. Abbott, convicted earlier of theft over $750 but under $20,000, was given a four-year probated sentence. Nava will serve seven years' probation for aggravated assault.

State predicts 40 will die during holiday

AUSTIN (AP) - The state Department of Public Safety is predicting as many as 40 deaths on Texas streets and highways over the July 4 holiday period.

The counting begins at 6 p.m. Friday and continues through midnight Tuesday, Independence Day.

The anticipated death toll is less than the 69 during last year's long July 4 weekend.

That tally included 46 victims on July 3, the deadliest day in Texas traffic history. Three multiple-victim crashes resulted in 31 of the deaths within seven hours.

"We do not want to see a repeat of last year's carnage," Col. James R. Wilson, DPS director, said Tuesday. "As part of our Operation Mopac effort, we will have all available troopers out on the highways to assist motorists and vigorously enforce our traffic laws."

This year's period for counting traffic fatalities is one day longer than last year, when a July 4 fell on a Monday.

Wilson said an analysis of last year's July 4 accidents shows that 79.6 percent of those who died weren't wearing seat belts or other restraints - wearing seat belts and occupants of open pickup beds.

DPS statistics also show alcohol was a contributing factor in 35.9 percent of last year's fatal accidents.

"The message from this is crystal clear," Wilson said. "Wearing a safety belt or using a child seat for youngsters is vitally important. And drinking and driving is very dangerous."

Gov. George W. Bush, at a Capitol news conference to promote safe driving, added that traveling Texans should take advantage of refreshments served at highway rest areas by volunteers.

"My wish, and the wish of our transportation people and the wish of our public safety officers, is that all Texans will drive safe this July 4th so they can live to see another day," he said.

House GOP cuts foreign aid $3 billion

Some Republicans want still deeper slashes in Clinton plan

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - After cutting nearly $3 billion from President Clinton's foreign aid plans, House Republicans overseeing spending laws are fending off demands from within the party for deeper cuts as they try to pass a veto-proof aid bill.

The bottom line after the House's late-night work Tuesday on foreign aid appropriations: $73 million in new cuts, leaving aid and export support at just under $12 billion for the next fiscal year.

The House rejected most efforts Tuesday to make deeper slashes in a bill that was already at 11 percent below current spending and 20 percent under President Clinton's $14.8 billion proposal.

Clinton has not opposed the appropriations bill the way he did a related authorization bill the House approved last month. Appropriations bills allow the actual spending of money. Authorization bills do not, and the one on foreign aid would revamp the State Department and impose far-reaching foreign policy changes.

House Appropriations Committee

Chairman Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., assumed the role of spending defender against fellow Republicans who were trying to make deeper cuts, including a proposal to lop off half the already reduced $595 million in aid to Russia and other former Soviet states. That went down 320-104.

Sounding more like Clinton than one of his main budget-cutting critics, Livingston angrily told the House that proposed deeper cuts in Russian aid would "frankly destroy our foreign policy toward what used to be the Soviet Union."

Rep. Sonny Callahan, R-Ala., chairman of the foreign operations subcommittee that shaped the bill, said it was built on a fragile agreement between Democrats and Republicans on the Appropriations Committee.

"The American people have sent a strong message telling us to cut government spending, and they said cut foreign aid as well," Callahan said.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, who led the floor debate for the minority, said that unlike the authorization bill, the appropriations measure as proposed is essentially "veto-proof" because it is the result of negotiations and has broad bipartisan support.

He and other Democrats warned, however, that significant additional cuts could change that.

With dozens of amendments - some would cut and some would add funds - still pending, the bill is expected to reach a final vote later in the week. Senate consideration would follow.

Tuesday's cuts, which pale against the $2.8 billion already slashed from the president's proposed budget, were:

- $15 million from aid to Russia, aimed at punishing Moscow for long-ago support of a Cuban nuclear power plant. The total package for former Soviet states stood at $580 million.

- A $20 million reduction in the U.S. contribution to the Global Environmental Facility, an international loan fund set up to reduce environmental damage connected with World Bank loans. This left the approved level at $30 million, a 70 percent reduction from this year.

- A $9.5 million reduction in the Overseas Private Investment Corp.'s loan fund, which insures U.S. companies against political risk abroad. A move to abolish OPIC was rejected.

- Elimination of $30 million that had been proposed for the Agency for International Development to pay for reduction of its operations. This would cover one-time expenses of terminating employees and closing far-flung offices. Critics insisted this could be done without spending anything.

- A $108 million reduction in three development funds, including one for Asia. The money was all added to a new children's survival fund, so it did not affect the aid total.

The Child Survival and Disease Programs fund, aimed at providing direct assistance for basic poverty reduction programs in the poorest countries, was the only major new expenditure in the bill. Funding was at $593 million with the latest amendments.

A portion of the cuts was offset by a $1.5 million increase in aid to Africa, which had been sharply reduced during writing of the bill.

Despite the broad cuts, it would retain current aid levels of $3 billion for Israel and $2.1 billion for Egypt.

Atlantis mission has friendlier overtones than 20 years ago

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - The commander of the shuttle Atlantis, Robert "Hoot" Gibson, was a Navy fighter pilot trained to combat the Soviet Menace when Americans and Russians first shook hands in space 20 summers ago.

His Russian counterpart, Anatoly Solovyev, was flying MiG-21s and training to shoot down Western foe-like Gibson.

A few weeks shy of the 20th anniversary of the first U.S.-Russian space docking, these two former enemies are now on their own historic journey, this one to the Russian space station Mir.

Atlantis blasted off Tuesday with Gibson, Solovyev and five other astronauts and cosmonauts on the first U.S.-Russian docking mission since Apollo and Soyuz capsules linked high above Earth in July 1975. The shuttle should reach Mir on Thursday, where NASA astronaut Norman Thagard and two cosmonauts are waiting to be picked up and returned home.

Everyone agrees this orbital rendezvous should be different.

"We may have been shaking their hands" during the Apollo-Soyuz mission, Gibson said earlier this month. "But we were holding our gun behind our back just in case."

Solovyev said that after two cold decades, "we have learned to look at the Earth" as it's seen from space - without borders.

Unlike Apollo-Soyuz, which was a one-shot deal, NASA and the Russian Space Agency have a lot riding on this mission. It is the first of seven Atlantis-Mir dockings planned over the next two years, after which the two countries will start launching components of an international space station.

"If you look at this program, I think it's one of the shining lights in the very difficult relationship between the United States and Russia," NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin said Tuesday before heading to Moscow with Vice President Al Gore for talks with Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin.

"It's not done yet," Goldin added. "We've got a long way to go. The launch is the first step."

Goldin considers the docking the most challenging task in space since landing men on the moon. Once it's accomplished, the two hatches will open and Gibson will shake hands with Mir commander Vladimir Dezhurov - who was 13 when the Apollo and Soyuz capsules docked.

It's sure to be quite a celebration. Thagard, Dezhurov and Gennady Strekalov have been cooped up inside Mir since March 16. Solovyev will replace Dezhurov as commander on Mir; also staying behind will be Atlantis cosmonaut Nikolai Budarin.

NASA's public affairs machine has spent months preparing for this photo op. Make no mistake - considerable thought has gone into camera angles and lighting.

"What's the point of shaking hands if you can't see it?" a NASA public affairs representative grumbled this spring.

Like the Apollo-Soyuz crews, the 10 astronauts and cosmonauts will exchange gifts in a live televised ceremony.

operation it was.

Still, Morgan continued, there is no indication that Arzola caught -- or didn't catch -- the hantavirus at the Muleshoe facility.

Regarding the possible airborne transmission of hantavirus, Morgan said it was possible.

"You'd probably have to be in close proximity to the nest or the animal for that to happen," he said.

Hantavirus, he continued, probably would "not be floating through the air."

However, he cautioned, there could be a hantavirus risk for someone working in an enclosed area doing something that stirs up lots of dust. In that case, he said, a worker could be exposed to the disease if dried feces from an infected rodent were mixed with the dirt.

To be on the safe side, Morgan said, workers preparing to labor in an enclosed area should spray down any dust with a weak bleach solution -- one part bleach to 10 parts water -- before working to keep down the dust and kill any virus.

Morgan continued to stress caution when dealing with rodents.

He said people handling dead rodents should first spray them with an insecticide to kill any fleas that might be on the body.

Then, spray the body with the weakened bleach solution and wrap it in plastic before disposal.

Residents should observe care when dealing with areas where rodent excretions may be.

As with flea populations and the bubonic plague, he said, the best thing is just to stay away from possibly infected animals and take general health precautions.

Exotic and domestic animals part of production for children

By BECKY CAMP
Lifestyle Editor

The spotted cat was sleek and lean and appeared to be well cared for.

So did all the other animals used in the "Thank God for Kids" children's revival held Tuesday night in Dameron Park.

Dr. James Lavender, the founder of the kids' ministry, and his wife Avis, are responsible for the extensive collection of exotic and domestic animals.

"All the animals have been donated to us," said Lavender. "Some were orphaned and some were given to us because they were sick."

But all of the animals they use in the program are healthy. Once the Lavenders acquire an animal it gets the best care they can give including proper diet and veterinary services when necessary.

The spotted cat, whose name is "Spot," is a cross between a leopard and a jaguar.

The Lavenders have two Siberian tigers, a three-year-old male and a five-month-old female.

"There are less than 100 Siberian tigers in existence," said Dr. Lavender. "Eighteen months ago there were 300 hundred. At that rate, the Siberian tiger could conceivably be extinct in another 18 months."

Lavender hopes that through his ministry, he will be able to reach someone who will be concerned enough about these big cats to help with the creation of a preserve for them.

As a youngster, Lavender wanted to join the circus and used neighborhood dogs as performers in his own backyard productions until he was "too old to do that any more."

He worked for a very short time as ringmaster for a small circus and auditioned as ringmaster for Ringling Brothers Circus, but was not accepted.

When he was 19 he was called to Smith to compete in Texas pageant

Mandy Smith, Miss Top of Texas, will be representing Hereford and surrounding communities in the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant July 5-8 in Fort Worth.

Area residents and businesses that would like to send congratulatory cards and gifts to Miss Smith are asked to leave them at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office before 4:30 p.m. on Thursday.

Members of the Miss Top of Texas Scholarship Pageant Committee will pick up the items and present them to Miss Smith at appropriate times during the pageant preliminaries.

the ministry. Two years later he received an offer from Ringling Bros. to be their ringmaster. But he declined in favor of staying in the ministry.

He has retained his love of the circus and through the years has made numerous friends in the circus world who have been instrumental in helping him obtain some of the animals.

A large group of volunteers help with the care of the animals as the ministry travels around the country. All the volunteers have had training in handling the big cats and other animals.

In his presentation Tuesday, Lavender also used a zebra, miniature horse, Sicilian donkey, llama, skunk, bobcat, dove, mountain lion, long eared rabbit, lamb, male and female lion, and a tame bear.

"Thank God for Kids" was sponsored here by the Hereford Ministerial Alliance.

Are you seeing spots?

The spotted cat, named Spot, is just one of the many exotic animals used in the "Thank God for Kids" ministry which was presented Tuesday in Dameron Park. Spot is a cross between a leopard and a jaguar.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: While I was doing my weekly grocery shopping, I saw a man open a jar of honey and taste it with his finger while his wife searched for a coupon. When she realized the coupon was for another brand, the man closed the honey jar and put it back on the shelf. I was shocked by his gross behavior and confronted him. He agreed to buy the jar but took it out of his shopping cart as soon as he thought I was out of sight. I reported the incident to the manager. He found the jar and removed it.

Why do we still have food items on the shelf that are not sealed? If foil seals that cover an entire opening are too costly, why not put a clear plastic ring around the lid on the outside? Many products have them.

This type of incident may be rare, but I'm sure it is not isolated. Knowing that the spaghetti sauce, jams, honey and other items that I regularly buy may have been contaminated by someone disgusts me. Any ideas? -- Worried Consumer in Virginia

DEAR VIRGINIA: You can (and should) go to the manager of the store and tell him you will not buy any food product that does not have a seal of some sort to guarantee against tasting or tampering.

I hope all food shoppers in my reading audience will be alert to such products and do likewise.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I have had five children in seven years. Four were conceived while we were using birth control. Our "miracle baby" was conceived after my husband had a vasectomy and his sperm count was nearly zero. The surgeon's explanation was "Sorry, those things happen."

My problem is this: Whenever I am introduced to a new acquaintance, a crude comment is invariably made about my having five children in seven years. Then a joke is made of it by some moron who says, "Don't you know what causes that?"

In this day and age, two or three children may be considered the ideal family, but some folks, like us, for example, are delighted with more. We don't feel that we should have to apologize.

I hope you will print this letter (I've never seen one like it), and maybe you can educate some of those ignoramuses. -- Happy in Kentucky

DEAR HAPPY: Any woman who has five children in seven years and is "delighted" has my unabashed admiration. I, with my one child, view such productivity as awesome.

My friends who have large families say the older siblings take care of the younger ones. Even though they may gripe, it is wonderful training for parenthood. I salute these children.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: After reading those letters in your column about impotence and cuddling, I thought you might enjoy this story.

A man goes to the doctor and says, "I'm impotent. Can you help me?" The doctor describes some possibilities, each more expensive than the last.

Finally, the doctor tells him of the most successful operation that will make him feel like a young man again. The cost, however, would be $10,000. The man replied, "She would rather have a new kitchen." -- Sent by Jay Sher from Verona, N.J.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $6.25.)

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Do you have a remedy for meringue that won't peak? I use a cold bowl, have the egg whites at room temperature and use cream of tartar. Often I beat for 30 minutes and give up. I'm getting discouraged with baking pies because I never know if the meringue will stiffen and peak. -- Dottie Boyd, Riverton, Ill.

Don't give up. Here are some helpful hints just for you from the American Egg Board.

You should use squeaky-clean egg beaters and a glass or metal bowl. Any grease or film on these can keep the meringue from peaking.

Separate the eggs carefully, being sure not to get any yolk mixed in with the whites.

Let the whites sit at room temperature for about 30 minutes (they whip up better when not cold) and store the yolks in the fridge for another recipe.

Add 1/2 teaspoon of cream of tartar for every two egg whites. Beat with an electric mixer on a high speed until foamy.

Now it's time to add the sugar, about a tablespoon at a time. Don't dump it in all at once. Keep the beaters moving around the bowl or turn the bowl constantly to ensure everything mixes well.

Beat at a high speed until all the sugar is dissolved and the whites stand in soft or stiff peaks, depending on your preference.

To make sure all the sugar has dissolved, rub a little meringue between two fingers; you shouldn't feel any grittiness.

Hope this helps to solve your me-

ringue dilemma. -- Heloise

STUFFED PEPPERS

Dear Heloise: I was making stuffed peppers the other day and stumbled onto this hint. Peppers are rarely flat on the bottom and some need to be propped up.

I was making eight peppers and only needed a little something to put between two of the peppers. I grabbed a custard cup. At that instant I realized I could put the pepper in the cup and it would stand up perfectly. It worked great. -- Richard Whitman, Fayetteville, N.C.

RECIPE BOXES

Dear Heloise: When my children were in their late teens a recipe box was started for each of them. The individual files held only their "likes."

These recipe boxes then became lagniappe gifts at their respective bridal showers. The daughters and future daughters-in-law were most appreciative of the recipes. -- Patricia Reno, Covington, La.

DRYER SHEET

Dear Heloise: An easy reminder that my lint trap is full is when my fabric-softener sheet is left in the dryer.

I spread the used sheet out and empty the lint into the sheet, then fold up the four corners and throw it away without a mess.

The used sheet serves three purposes. It softens clothes, shows the trap is full, and holds lint for disposal. -- Ruth Gallagher, Cape Coral, Fla.

Name that Caller!

Take The Mystery Out Of Phone Calls Before You Answer Them!

Caller I.D. Services will become available to Hereford residents who wish to subscribe to the service. This service allows you to see the date, time, and phone number (Calling Number Delivery) and/or name (Calling Name Delivery) of most direct-dialed local calls and some long-distance calls before you answer the telephone.

When you get a call, Caller ID shows the phone number and/or name of the caller on a special display unit. A display unit is required for Calling Number Delivery and Calling Name Delivery. The Caller ID display unit stores the number, as well as the date and time of the call. That way if you're not home, or just don't want to answer the phone, the stored numbers will permit you to return calls. This also works in answering machines or voice messaging systems.

Assistance available for area students needing school loans

As costs increase each year at colleges and universities across the country, many families find it difficult to pay for a student's educational expenses. Thanks to the generosity of citizens across the Panhandle, area students have a source of assistance right in their own backyard.

The Opportunity Plan, Inc. of Canyon provides low-interest loans and scholarships to help students attend the college or university of their choice. Established in 1954, the program has provided financial assistance to more than 9,000 students. A total of $2,500,000 is currently on loan to area students. During 1994, $65,000 in scholarships was awarded through The Opportunity Plan program.

Three student loan divisions have been established by Hereford civic groups and individuals through The Opportunity Plan to benefit local students. In September of 1964, trustees of the Jim Hill Estate established the Jim Hill Memorial Loan Fund. More than 80 students have borrowed from this student loan fund since its inception.

The Hereford Division was established in March of 1972 and has assisted more than 150 students with their educational expenses. The third loan division which benefits Hereford students is the Emil W. Dettmann Memorial Division which was established in 1981 by Mrs. Audine Dettmann. Five students have received assistance from this division.

Mrs. Audine Dettman also serves on The Opportunity Plan board of directors, along with fellow Hereford residents Carolyn Baxter, Bonnie Wuerflein and John Aikin. These board members have done an excellent job of promoting the mission of the program.

Loans awarded through The Opportunity Plan carry an interest rate of seven percent. Payments and interest on the loan are deferred until after graduation as long as the student continues to attend school on a full-time basis.

The Opportunity Plan is currently accepting applications for low-interest student loans for the 1995-96 school year. Students who are interested in applying for a loan should contact a member of The Opportunity Plan staff at (806) 655-2528 or P.O. Box 1035, Canyon, TX 70915.

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: On my last visit to the doctor I had a blood test. Everything was fine, except he said I was very low in magnesium. He wants me to take magnesium supplements indefinitely. Could you explain how this came about? I am 73. What's a good magnesium intake? — N.H.

ANSWER: Magnesium gets little notice, but it is an important body element.

You don't need a great deal of it — about 280 milligrams a day for a woman; 350 for a man — and that is usually readily available in food. Nuts, legumes, unmilled grains and green vegetables have ample amounts.

Magnesium helps nerve ends fire and the heart beat rhythmically. You also use it to produce the energy that powers muscle contraction.

Some people lack magnesium because of a general digestive tract absorption problem, and others from an overactive thyroid gland. A vitamin lack also can reduce the amount of magnesium that gets into the body.

A prominent cause of magnesium deficiency lies in the action of some diuretics, water pills. They might leech magnesium from the body along with the fluid they release.

Appetite loss, nausea, vomiting, mental confusion and heart irregularities might reflect a magnesium deficiency.

For sure, you can rebuild your depleted magnesium store, but I'm left wondering why your deficiency came about to begin with.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a fairly large hydrocele in my right scrotum. The urologist said he will correct it surgically if it bothers me, but otherwise does not seem concerned. Am I in any harm by ignoring it? It doesn't bother me physically, but I don't want to ignore it, then discover later that it has damaged something. Do they sometimes go away on their own? Is jogging bad for it? — G.B.

ANSWER: You can ignore a hydrocele that isn't causing trouble once it has been duly reported and evaluated.

Some hydroceles are destined to grow, others to remain about the same. Nothing you can do medically will change a hydrocele.

They almost never subside on their own.

Sometimes an irritant can cause enlargement. If your jogging is doing that, then have it removed.

A hydrocele is a collection of harmless clear fluid within the scrotum. It is painless, and its presence poses no threat of damage.

I must tell you that in a few instances a hydrocele can be a source of a major problem — of infection or testicular cancer. For that reason, you were wise to seek professional evaluation.

You have assurance that your hydrocele is one of those things that happen for no apparent reason. You have the luxury of being the judge of what to do about it.

FOR A DETAILED REPORT on sodium and potassium, write: Dr. Donohue — SR82, Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539. Enclose $3 and a self-addressed, stamped (55 cents) No. 10 envelope.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

'War of the Staked Plains' scheduled for production

The first War of the Staked Plains is scheduled to take place in Ned Houck Park in Clovis, N.M., with armies beginning to gather on June 30.

This war is not of this era. The parties involved are all members of the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA). The SCA is a world-wide group of people who spend their weekends going back in time. Each member develops a character all their own from the era of knights in armor including knights, kings, barons, lords and ladies to poor peasants.

They gather not only to do battle, but also to demonstrate their artistic talents, including bobbin-lace making, bardic tales and to prove that chivalry is not dead.

The participants in the battle will be the people of Ansteorra representing Texas and Oklahoma while the Outlands army consists of people from New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming.

The SCA is actually divided into 13 kingdoms spanning from California to Germany with each kingdom having its own king and queen. The royals reign for six months and the new prince and princesses are chosen through trial by combat. The crown at this upcoming event will be the King and Queen of Ansteorra while the Outlands will be represented by Barons and Baroness-es. The park is open to the public and you are invited to witness the war and see what life was like during the era of knights and chivalry.

Students named on honors lists

Tonya Castillo, daughter of Raymond and Oralia Castillo of Hereford, was recently included on the Dean's Honor List at South Plains College in recognition of her outstanding academic performance.

Miss Castillo is a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School and is presently pursuing a legal secretary associate degree at South Plains College.

Kelly Dawn Davis, daughter of Jeanette Rogers and granddaughter of Liz Walterscheid of Hereford, has been named to the Dean's Honor Roll at McMurry University in Abilene with a GPA of 4.0.

Mrs. Davis is currently a senior with a major in multidisciplinary studies in education. She is married to Jimmy Davis of Stamford. They have two children, Paityn Lynn, 2, and Dustyn Dawn, 9 months.

Local students receive awards

The Amarillo Area Foundation has awarded scholarships and awards to area students for the 1995-96 academic school year, announced Sandra Gililand, chairman of the Foundation's Scholarship Committee.

The Senator Grady and Andrine Hazlewood Scholarship Fund was established in 1992 in honor of Senator and Mrs. Hazlewood.

Graduating seniors from Hereford High School who were selected to receive this year's award are Leslie Armendarez who will attend West Texas A&M University and Sarah C. Perrin who plans to attend Texas Tech University.

Pierce ousted in 2nd round at Wimbledon

By STEPHEN WILSON
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Mary Pierce's first Wimbledon didn't last long.

The fifth-seeded Pierce was beaten in the second round today by Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

The 20th-ranked Tauziat, coming off a victory in last week's Wimbledon warmup at Eastbourne, outplayed Pierce from the baseline in the decisive third set.

It was the first match on Centre Court for Pierce, who was born in Canada, lives in Florida and plays out of France.

It was also the first meeting between the Fed Cup teammates.

Tauziat appeared headed for an easy win when she broke for a 3-2 lead in the second set, but Pierce started connecting with her serve returns and won four straight games to take the set.

Tauziat regained command by winning the first four games of the final set. Pierce broke for 4-1, but Tauziat served out the match two games later.

It was a quick exit for Pierce, who had pulled out of Wimbledon at the last minute the past two years. Winner of the Australian Open this year, she had been considered a possible title contender here.

Two-time men's defending champion Pete Sampras overcame a stiff test from Britain's Tim Henman to move into the third round with a 6-2, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) victory.

Two-time Wimbledon finalist Goran Ivanisevic served 28 aces in a straight-set victory over Jonathan Stark of the United States.

The fourth-seeded Ivanisevic, who had 21 aces in his opening match, moved into the third round with a 6-4, 6-2, 7-6 (7-5) victory.

While Wimbledon has introduced new balls this year to try to curb the power game, Ivanisevic said the move would not affect his huge serve.

"I'm still going to hit my 20 or 30 aces if I'm mentally OK," he said.

"It doesn't matter what they do. You can't slow the game here. This is Wimbledon. It's grass, it's always fast. If you want to see slow tennis, go to the French Open ... or go watch women's tennis."

Stark, ranked No. 71, was up 4-3 in the third set and had three break points at 0-40 on Ivanisevic's serve. But, the Croatian served his way out of trouble and proceeded to close out the match in a tiebreaker.

Sixth-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov of Russia posted his second consecutive straight-set win by downing Bern Karbacher, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5. Unseeded Aaron Krickstein won 6-0, 7-6 (7-5), 7-6 (8-6), over Karol Kucera.

In women's play, defending champion Conchita Martinez eased into the third round with a 6-4, 6-3 triumph over Jana Kandarr, an 18-year-old German newcomer ranked No. 101.

Eighth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini beat Silvia Farina, 6-2, 6-2, avenging a first-round defeat to the Italian at last year's French Open. Anke Huber, No. 9, was a 6-2, 7-6 (7-5) winner over Beate Reinstadler.

Two former champions were ousted. Ninth-seeded Michael Stich, the 1991 champion, lost in straight sets to Jacco Eltingh. And 1987 winner Pat Cash, a part-timer these days, retired with an ankle injury after losing the first set to Dick Norman.

Mavs look for big man in draft

Rockets, Spurs will take whatever they can get

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Mavericks would love to find a big man in today's NBA draft, even though they realize it's unlikely.

The San Antonio Spurs and Houston Rockets would love to draft anyone who could contribute next year, even though they also know it's unlikely.

That's the pretty much the case throughout the NBA going into this year's draft, which is heavy on underclassmen and light on impact players.

Few of the soon-to-be rookies appear to have the apparent pizzazz of last year's co-Rookies of the Year, Grant Hill of Detroit and Jason Kidd, who made a 23-victory difference to the Mavericks.

Drafting Kidd with the second-overall pick in last year's draft capped a three-year stretch in which Dallas built its foundation. Jim Jackson was first with the fourth pick in 1992 and Jamal Mashburn went fourth in 1993.

This year, the Mavericks are picking 12th, giving little opportunity that they'll be able to choose an immediate starter.

They also have the 24th pick and hope to find another role player. They used the 19th choice last year to take Tony Dumas, who didn't earn many minutes.

The best chance Dallas has to find an impact player would be making a trade. As bait, player personnel manager Keith Grant is dangling six more first-round picks over the next three years and Roy Tarpley, if anyone would take him and his huge contract.

"If you look at our club, we need help in the front court," Grant said. "If we can get a major contributor, that's great. But a team isn't going to give up the opportunity to get a major contributor just because they can have multiple picks. Quantity does not equal quality, especially in the draft."

Most mock drafts have the Mavericks taking Arizona State forward Mario Bennett, a junior from nearby Denton for whom Mashburn has lobbied. Another name on many lists is TCU's Kurt Thomas, who last year became only the third person ever to lead the NCAA in rebounding and scoring.

With their second pick, Dallas likely will look for someone who can fill the lane.

Some of the names to watch here include Kansas' Greg Ostertag, a Duncanville native and a personal favorite of Mavericks owner Donald Carter, or maybe UCLA center George Zedek.

Should Dallas move up, there's speculation Grant is after high school phenomenon Kevin Garnett. He'll need several years of seasoning and the Mavericks could provide it as they're still several years from being top contenders.

"I'm working the phone every day trying to do things to make our club better," Grant said. "Keep in mind, the ultimate goal is a couple of years down the road to become an elite team."

Houston and San Antonio have already moved into the elite class. The Rockets are the two-time defending NBA champs and the Spurs had the best regular-season record last year.

But both are bottom-dwellers in this draft. San Antonio picks 29th and Houston doesn't have a choice until the 41st overall pick, midway through the second round.

The Spurs likely are looking to fill several holes on their bench. Seldom used guard Willie Anderson was lost in the expansion draft, they made forward Terry Cummings a free agent and Moses Malone likely isn't the answer as David Robinson's backup.

Houston became an elite team because coach Rudy Tomjanovich found future stars Robert Horry and Sam Cassell late in the first round. Both contributed immediately and became big-game players.

But even Tomjanovich is hard-pressed to do anything with the 41st pick. Just in case, Houston has hosted workouts for several players.

Blazers swap picks with Pistons

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - The Portland Trail Blazers traded their three picks in Wednesday's NBA draft to Detroit today for the Pistons' top selection, the No. 8 overall choice.

Portland gave Detroit the 18th and 19th picks in the first round and the final selection in the second round, the 58th choice.

Portland has not had a lottery pick since the system began in 1985. The No. 8 pick would be the Blazers' highest since they chose Sam Bowie over Michael Jordan with the No. 2 selection in 1984.

A source close to the situation told The Associated Press that the team is talking with four other teams about moving up even higher.

Sonics trade Gill to Charlotte

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) - The Charlotte Hornets' search for backcourt help led them back to Kendall Gill, who left the city 22 months ago to a chorus of boos.

The Hornets reacquired Gill on Tuesday in a trade with the Seattle SuperSonics, who got shooting guard Jersey Hawkins and journeyman swingman David Wingate from Charlotte.

The Hornets made Gill the fifth selection in the 1990 draft, and he spent three seasons in Charlotte before asking to play elsewhere, a request that made him a target for many people in the city.

Broken-bat homer lifts Red Sox over Jays

By The Associated Press
There are signs that let teams know things are not going their way. The Toronto Blue Jays were clubbed over the head with one.
Boston Red Sox backup catcher Bill Haselman hit a broken-bat home run in the 11th inning Tuesday night for a 6-5 victory, the Blue Jays' eighth consecutive loss.
"It was the longest ball I've ever seen hit off a broken bat," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said.
To make it hurt just a little more for the two-time defending World Series champions, it was Haselman's first homer of the season and the only hit allowed by reliever Woody

Williams (0-2) in 4 1-3 innings.
"I got good wood on it. Whatever good wood there was, there was just enough to get it out of here," Haselman said. "I don't know how a ball could go that far with a bat splitting like that."
The ball cleared the screen above Fenway Park's Green Monster, while the barrel of the bat, split diagonally across the label, landed in the infield.
"I've never seen that before in my entire life," Boston's Jose Canseco said. "That was amazing. That was an awesome win right there."
Lee Tinsley, Mo Vaughn and Troy O'Leary all hit solo homers for the Red Sox, who opened a 5-1 lead. The Blue Jays scored three in the seventh on Angel Martinez's first career homer and tied it in the eighth on John Olerud's RBI single.

Roger Clemens allowed four hits with five strikeouts and one walk in seven innings - his longest outing of the season.
"He (Clemens) is getting closer and closer," said Mike Macfarlane, Boston's starting catcher. "One of these days he's going to go out and throw nine shutout innings."
Rangers 10, Angels 6
Mickey Tettleton had two homers and Ivan Rodriguez had a go-ahead two-run double in the fifth among three hits as Texas pulled into a first-place tie with California in the AL West.

Rangers starter Bob Tewksbury (6-3) hung on after giving up five runs and seven hits in the first three innings.
Angels starter Mike Bielecki (3-5) has lost five of six decisions. Tim Salmon went 4-for-4 with two solo homers for visiting California.
Yankees 7, Tigers 1
Tony Fernandez had four RBIs, including a three-run homer in the seventh, and three long relievers combined on a seven-hitter as New York won its season-best sixth straight.

Scott Bankhead, Bob McDonald (1-1) and Joe Ausanio, who earned his first major-league save, were used by manager Buck Showalter instead of starting Jack McDowell on three days' rest.
Kirk Gibson hit a solo homer for visiting Detroit, while starter Brian Bohanon (0-1) got his first decision in his 17th appearance, allowing six hits and four runs in 4 2-3 innings.
White Sox 8, Twins 6
Rookie Ray Durham had a three-run triple in the seventh as Chicago extended its season-best winning streak to five games. It was Minnesota's 12th loss in 13 home games.
Dave Martinez and Ron Karkovice homered for the White Sox, who lost slugger Frank Thomas with a stiff back midway through the game, although he was expected to play today.

Steve Sparks (3-3) allowed seven earned runs on eight hits in 5 2-3 innings as Milwaukee lost its fifth straight.
DeSilva allowed five hits and three earned runs in 5 1-3 innings for the visiting Orioles.
Indians 7, Royals 1
Eddie Murray moved within four hits of 3,000 with three of Cleveland's 15 as the Indians raised their team batting average to .292.
Mark Clark (3-2), called up from Triple A Buffalo earlier in the day, allowed five hits over eight innings for the visiting Indians, who also got three hits from Manny Ramirez and Tony Pena.
Chris Haney (3-2) started for Kansas City, which has lost three straight and is 0-5 against Cleveland this season, scoring only five runs.

Bucs' Neagle hits grand slam, wins 9th

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
Though he's big, left-handed and became successful after being traded, no one ever confused Denny Neagle with Steve Carlton.
This season, though, Neagle seems to have something in common with Carlton - he's pitching on a team that only wins regularly when he pitches.
Neagle hit a grand slam that helped him become the NL's first nine-game winner as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 6-5 Tuesday night.
The Pirates are 23-32, and their starting pitchers have won just 14 games. Neagle (9-3), in his fourth season since being traded by Minnesota, has most of them.
In 1972, his first season since being traded from St. Louis to Philadelphia, Carlton went 27-10 for a Phillies club that was 59-97.
"I believe in myself and I knew I could do some good things this year," Neagle said. "A lot of it has to do with my manager showing confidence in me. He looks at me and says, 'This is your game.'" Neagle became the first Pirates pitcher to hit a slam since Don Robinson on Sept. 12, 1985. He last homered last July 25.

"If I ever do that again, it'll be something freaky," he said. "Something must have been in the coffee."
Carlton, who reached the Hall of Fame with a hard slider, hit .201 in his career with 13 home runs. Neagle, whose best pitch is a changeup, began the game with two hits in his last 33 at-bats.
Neagle won his fourth straight decision. He homered off Jim Bullinger (4-1), putting the Pirates ahead 6-2 in the sixth inning.
Astros 6, Cardinals 2
Doug Drabek struck out 11 and won for the first time in six decisions at the Astrodome, while Danny Jackson dropped to 0-8 for St. Louis.
A pair of throwing errors helped the Astros take a 5-0 lead in the first inning. Jackson lost in his first appearance since going on the disabled list because of a lack of stamina.
Drabek (4-5) allowed one run in 7 2-3 innings. In his last start, the Cubs tagged him for nine hits and seven earned runs in 2 2-3 innings.
Reds 12, Phillies 3
John Smiley, playing in front of a large hometown contingent from Phoenixville, Pa., starred on the mound and at the plate.

Smiley (7-1) hit a two-run homer, the second time he's connected this season. He also won for the sixth time in seven starts.
Reggie Sanders, Bret Boone and Craig Worthington also homered for Cincinnati. The Reds chased Philadelphia starter Michael Mimbs (6-2) with a six-run sixth.
Expos 3, Braves 0
Butch Henry and Mel Rojas handed Atlanta its first shutout of the season, leaving Boston as the only team in the majors that hasn't been blanked.
Henry (3-5) gave up four hits in 8 1-3 innings and Rojas got his 12th save.
Wil Cordero and Moises Alou hit solo home runs in the first inning off Steve Avery (2-5). Avery pitched a complete game, striking out nine and retiring the last 18 batters.
Montreal won for the third time in 13 games. The host Braves had won three in a row.
Mets 2, Marlins 0
Bill Pulsipher, hit hard by Houston and Philadelphia in his first two starts, earned his first major league victory at Florida.

Pulsipher (1-2) limited the Marlins to three hits in 7 1-3 innings and struck out nine. The 21-year-old left-hander led the International League in strikeouts when he was called up this month.
John Franco got Andre Dawson to ground into a double play that ended the eighth, and got his seventh save. Bobby Witt shut out New York on four singles for seven innings, but the Mets scored twice in the eighth off Rob Murphy (0-2).
Padres 14, Dodgers 3
Ken Caminiti hit a grand slam and Andujar Cedeno hit a three-run shot in San Diego's romp at Los Angeles.
The Dodgers, who won their previous six, also lost right fielder Raul Mondesi, who left the game after bruising his left knee when he banged into the wall chasing Caminiti's slam.
Glenn Dishman (1-1) won for the first time in the majors, making him the first rookie left-handed starter to win for the Padres since Eric Nolte on Aug. 29, 1987. Ramon Martinez (7-5) gave up nine runs and 10 hits in 5 1-3 innings.
Rockies 5, Giants 1
Bill Swift won in his first appearance against his former club, pitching seven shutout innings in San Francisco.
Swift (3-2), who signed with Colorado in the offseason, did not allow a runner past second base.
Dante Bichette hit a pair of RBI singles. Jose Bautista (2-4) was the loser in San Francisco's fifth straight defeat.

Cowboys' Williams not indicted

By TERRY WALLACE
Associated Press Writer
McKINNEY, Texas (AP) - A Collin County grand jury declined to indict Dallas Cowboys offensive tackle Erik Williams and a college friend today on allegations they had participated in a sexual assault.
Williams and Roderick Carson, both 27, had been accused of sexually assaulting the 17-year-old girl two months ago in Williams' north Dallas residence.
Both men had said the teen willingly had sex with them not only on the night in question, but four days earlier.
Williams had dated the girl since meeting her in January at a club where she was a topless dancer.

The grand jury had continued its investigation into the allegations despite a settlement reached by the victim and her request that the charges against Williams and Carson, of Madison, Wis., be dropped, her attorney, Charles Caperton, has said.
Details of the settlement have not been disclosed.
Caperton did not immediately return a telephone message left at his office after the grand jury's decision.
Prosecutor Linda Britton said that the case was taken to the grand jury, despite the settlement, because it is common for the alleged victim to withdraw her complaint either in cases involving domestic disputes or when a restitution agreement has been made.

"Our reaction is that that is not the point. A person was put in jail, a felony case was filed and the grand jury is going to look at that case. Checkbook justice is not something we buy into," Ms. Britton said.
Three of Williams' teammates had been called to testify during the grand jury proceedings.
Cowboys receiver Michael Irvin, along with Cowboys players Charles Haley and Leon Lett all were questioned on how often they had seen Williams with the girl, whether they had ever seen them in a sexual situation, and what the girl had told them about herself and her life.

Woman says she trusted Rodman

ATLANTA (AP) - Lisa Beth Judd's romance with NBA star Dennis Rodman survived his marriage to another woman, then came to an abrupt end when she learned he had herpes.
Judd, 24, is suing the basketball player for unspecified damages, claiming that Rodman, whom she'd dated since April 1991, gave her herpes on Jan. 14, 1993, when he came to Atlanta as a member of the Detroit Pistons.
The former Atlanta Hawks cheerleader told a federal jury Tuesday that she was so impressed by Rodman that she kept a memento box filled with souvenirs of their time together: plane tickets, ticket stubs and cards.

Judd, who now lives in Orange County, Calif., described herself in testimony as a trusting young woman who never asked Rodman if he dated other women and believed him when he told her he did not have a sexually transmitted disease.
"He was sweet. He was a gentleman. He was a kind person," she said of Rodman.
She was shocked to learn that he got married in the fall of 1991, and agreed to see him again only when he told her he had separated from his wife, she said.

"I thought he was special. I thought our relationship was special," she said, saying Rodman was the only one of her sexual partners with whom she never used a condom.
But she admitted that she had never asked Rodman whether he continued to see other women.

Biggio leads all NL 2nd basemen in All-Star voting

NEW YORK (AP) - Craig Biggio of the Houston Astros has overtaken Mickey Morandini of the Philadelphia Phillies and moved into the lead at second base in voting for the All-Star game.
Balloting ended Monday but votes continue to be counted. Final totals will be released Sunday. Biggio has 361,795 votes to 309,435 to Morandini.
In totals released Tuesday, Fred McGriff of Atlanta leads at first with 439,409 votes, just ahead of Houston's Jeff Bagwell, who has 407,268. Matt Williams of San Francisco is ahead at third with 341,553, followed by Scott Cooper of St. Louis with 310,895.
Ozzie Smith of St. Louis is way ahead at shortstop. He has 884,373, followed by Cincinnati's Barry Larkin with 650,037. Mike Piazza of the Los Angeles Dodgers has a seemingly safe lead at catcher with 698,418 votes. Darren Daulton of Philadelphia is second with 461,746.
Barry Bonds of San Francisco leads outfielders with 683,478. He is followed by Lenny Dykstra of Philadelphia (624,547), Tony Gwynn of San Diego (585,307) and David Justice of Atlanta (528,753).

Police believe skeleton found in Brownsville area is remains of Laura Lugo

By JOSH LEMIEUX
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Tearful but smiling, Laura Lugo declared victory when she won back the 2-year-old son she claimed had been stolen from her at birth by the woman who raised him.

"Everything is great. He's ours," Ms. Lugo said in October when a judge sided with her in a stranger-than-fiction custody battle. "Now, definitely, it's over."

With TV cameras rolling, Ms. Lugo spoke eagerly about getting ready for her first Christmas with little Jorge Daniel Alaniz.

"He's going to be loved very, very much," she said.

Then, four days before Christmas, the 28-year-old Brownsville woman vanished, opening new chapters of a convoluted mystery in which police have questioned the credibility of all key players except the curly haired toddler.

Brownsville detectives are waiting on lab results to determine whether an unidentified skeleton, discovered June 4 in a wooded area of the border city, is the remains of Ms. Lugo.

The skull was riddled with six bullets. Investigators insist the bones may have belonged to someone other than Ms. Lugo and they won't be sure for weeks.

"We are not ruling out anybody and we have not come to any conclusion," said Lt. Orlando Rodriguez, head of criminal investigations.

It was Dec. 21, 1994, about nine weeks after Jorge Daniel was reunited with his mother in her modest Brownsville apartment. She was planning a Christmas Eve party with relatives.

Rodriguez said that Ms. Lugo went out at 10:40 that night. Jorge Daniel and his three older half-sisters - ages 10, 8 and 4 - stayed behind.

Ms. Lugo's sister Lupita Alaniz and mother Ofelia Alaniz initially told Brownsville police that Ms. Lugo had left with an unidentified man and woman on Dec. 23. They said Ofelia Alaniz stayed to care for her grandchildren.

But police said Lupita Alaniz failed a polygraph.

According to Rodriguez, investigators learned that Ms. Lugo had left her children alone; that she left with one woman, not a couple; and that the disappearance occurred two days earlier than initially reported by her sister and mother.

"She left her children unattended. This is apparently why they misled us," Rodriguez said.

The Christmas Eve party went ahead without Ms. Lugo. She hasn't been heard from since, the family told police.

Ofelia and Lupita Alaniz now have custody of the children.

The strange tale sounded like a soap opera or tabloid story.

Ms. Lugo claimed that on Sept. 1, 1992 - when she was 8-1/2 months pregnant - she crossed from Brownsville into Matamoros, Mexico, with two sisters who had recently befriended her.

Ms. Lugo said she agreed to go with Paulyna and Rosa Botello because they promised to stop at a store in Brownsville so she could buy some things.

Instead, Ms. Lugo claimed, the three went to a Matamoros clinic where a doctor sedated her and performed a Caesarean section.

"I tried to get up and they put me down and they strapped my arms ... and the next thing I know, the nurse tells me that I had a baby boy," Ms. Lugo testified last year.

She said she heard the infant crying but never was allowed to hold him. Nurses told her that Rosa

Dates in Lugo case

By The Associated Press

Important dates in the case of Laura Lugo:

- Sept. 1, 1992 - Laura Lugo of Brownsville goes to Matamoros, Mexico, with Paulyna and Rosa Botello. Her baby is delivered by Caesarean section at a clinic.
- Sept. 2 - Ms. Lugo signs a statement giving Rosa Botello permission to leave the clinic with the baby.
- Sept. 3 - Ms. Lugo's mother files a missing-persons report in Brownville.
- Sept. 4 - Ms. Lugo returns to United States and refuses to talk to Brownsville police about incident. Her mother tells police that Ms. Lugo said her baby was given up for adoption, according to police report.
- Sept. 7 - Ms. Lugo files complaint with Mexican authorities, saying that the Botellos tricked her into going to clinic, doctors drugged her, and the Botellos took her baby.
- Sept. 10 - Ms. Lugo tells same story to detectives in Brownsville but also admits that she had considered an abortion or giving the child up for adoption.
- Oct. 24 - Paulyna Botello is jailed in Mexico on child-trafficking charge. The boy stays with Ms. Botello's relatives.
- Feb. 2, 1993 - A Mexican judge sentences Paulyna Botello to three years in prison.
- March 25, 1993 - Paulyna Botello's conviction is overturned based on trial errors and she is freed.
- June 30, 1994 - FBI agents in McAllen, Texas, arrest Paulyna Botello on Mexico's extradition warrant for a second trial. The boy - who Paulyna Botello claims is her natural child - is placed in foster care.
- Sept. 29 - U.S. district judge orders Paulyna Botello returned to Mexico.
- Oct. 7 - Texas district judge grants full custody to Ms. Lugo, proven to be the real mother by DNA tests.
- Oct. 28 - Paulyna Botello is deported to Mexico.
- Nov. 3 - Paulyna Botello freed on bond in Mexico.
- Dec. 21 - Ms. Lugo is last seen leaving her Brownsville apartment.
- June 4, 1995 - Unidentified bones discovered in Brownsville. Police are trying to determine whether they are Ms. Lugo's remains.
- June 14 - New judge in Mexico convicts Paulyna Botello a second time but gives her the equivalent of three years probation.

Botello, who paid the bill at the clinic, had taken the baby.

The Botellos would later say that Ms. Lugo had agreed to give her baby up for financial reasons. They contend she concocted a sensational baby-snatching tale when she decided she wanted him back.

One day after the delivery, Ms. Lugo had signed a document authorizing Rosa Botello to take the child from the clinic. Ms. Lugo later explained that she expected Rosa to return the boy once she recovered from the surgery.

"I trusted Rosa because I didn't really know the procedures in Mexico," she said.

But Ms. Lugo would not hold her boy for two years.

Two days after the Sept. 1 delivery, Ofelia Alaniz filed a missing-person report in Brownsville. Ms. Lugo returned from Mexico the next day and refused to speak with police about the incident.

Her mother told police officers that Ms. Lugo had said her baby had been given up for adoption.

On Sept. 10, however, Ms. Lugo gave a detailed complaint to Brownsville police alleging that the Botello sisters, especially Rosa, had stolen her baby. She had lodged the same allegation with authorities in Matamoros.

Rosa Botello told Mexican investigators that she had given the baby to a couple from Dallas - a story that was later discredited.

Ms. Lugo, characteristically outspoken, admitted at the time that Brownsville police were skeptical about her own version.

A high school dropout who married at age 17, Ms. Lugo had her first two children by her now-estranged husband and two others by different men. She had money problems. She quit a waitress job because her youngest daughter was often sick from hydrocephaly, an abnormal increase of fluids in the head.

Ms. Lugo told Brownsville police that she was seeing a man named Arturo and a man named Antonio when she became pregnant with Jorge Daniel.

"I do not know their last names, nor which of them caused me to get pregnant," she said in a signed statement to police.

But in testimony in federal court last year, she changed her story about the boy's father: "As far as I know, his first name is Manuel. His second name, if he mentioned it to me, I don't remember."

She is quoted in a police report as saying that she had considered an abortion and had discussed the idea of an adoption with the Botellos.

"I never said 'no' to them, but I never said 'yes' to them either," she said.

Brownsville police could do nothing with Lugo's account because the alleged abduction occurred in Mexico. Rosa Botello did serve three months in the county jail in Brownsville for assaulting Ms. Lugo's sister, Lupita, in 1992.

Based on Ms. Lugo's complaint, Mexican prosecutors charged the Botello sisters with child trafficking. Paulyna, who raised the boy until last year, was convicted earlier this month and given the equivalent of three years probation. Rosa's case is pending before a state judge in Matamoros.

The custody case was settled in Texas.

The FBI arrested Paulyna in McAllen on June 30, 1994, on a fugitive warrant from Mexico. The boy was placed in foster care, with Paulyna Botello and Ms. Lugo each claiming him as her biological child.

A DNA test proved Ms. Lugo right. It also disproved Rosa's claim that she had given Ms. Lugo's baby to the Dallas couple.

State District Judge Robert F. Barnes granted custody to Ms. Lugo on that October day in which she emerged so victoriously from the courthouse.

Ironically, it is with the same DNA test results that detectives are hoping to determine whether the skeleton is Ms. Lugo's remains.

Clown says laughter can be good medicine

By MEGAN CLARK
The Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas - Laughter can be as much exercise as running three miles for Max Reneau.

Studies show good, hard belly laughter provides an adequate amount of exercise and releases tension and emotions associated with good health, Reneau said.

Reneau, "Tommy D. Clown," and his fellow clowns in the Permian Basin chapter of the Texas Clown Association Permian Basin, use the therapeutic power of laughter to bring health and happiness to others, he said.

"I never put on my makeup and costume and not get back more than I gave," he said. "To see the looks on people's faces when they interact with a clown is a rewarding experience."

Reneau, of Midland, is area director of the Texas Clown Association. He has spent one night a week for the past 28 years sculpting balloons, performing with puppets and visiting birthday parties as a tramp clown.

He also has performed with the Shrine Circus and other shows that come through the area, he said.

"I got my start when a clown named Ho-Ho took me to a children's hospital in Oklahoma City with him and helped me make a child who is completely paralyzed smile with his eyes," Reneau said. "I realized this was a chance to do something for others and give something back to the community."

Clowning is an old profession that requires love, dedication and patience, he said.

"Clowns have been with us for a long time," Reneau said. "Plato and our other great thinkers of that time speak of fools who are essentially clowns. They were spokesmen of the people."

"That role evolved into the court jester who used humor to tell kings what the people wanted."

The jester then progressed into three different types of clowns, including the white face, Auguste and tramp clowns, each with a unique personality, Reneau said.

"There is a hierarchy to clowning," he said. "Each character portrays a different type of person. The white face is the thinker, the Auguste clown completes all of the action and the tramp, which is an American-style clown, is at the bottom rung of clowns, who is constantly in some kind of conflict."

All types of clowns from throughout the Permian Basin talk about their experiences, learn new tricks and sharp makeup and costume tips at the association meetings, he said. The meetings are held at 7 p.m. the second Thursday of each month at the First Baptist Church of Midland.

Kay Veale of Odessa, known as "Klynky the Clown," a charter member and past president of the association, said the group's goal is to promote clowning and what its effects can provide to the community.

Clowns from Dallas, Houston, Kerrville and other Texas cities united in 1982 and decided clowns needed a formal group to exchange ideas and help one another, Veale said.

The association was created, and the Permian Basin chapter began accepting members in 1986, she said. The association sponsors a convention each year in a different city in Texas and includes competitions and clowning classes, she said. Veale, a former school nurse, became interested in clowning after she and her husband retired. She has been a professional clown for 14 years.

"My husband wanted to become a wedding photographer, and I was going to be his go-fer," she said. "We read about a clowning school in Houston, and we realized we might enjoy it. We signed up."

She has participated in clown camps in Wisconsin and conventions across the U.S. and in England, and taught clowning classes at Odessa College. She also visits the Hospice of the Southwest as "Klynky" and serves as southwest regional vice president of Clowns of America International.

"I feel like I'm doing something good in my golden years instead of sitting around doing nothing," Veale said. "I see more people with problems than I can shake a stick at. I know if I make someone like that smile or laugh, then my day has not been wasted."

Veale said people of all ages should consider becoming a clown if they love people and appreciate live entertainment.

Robin Salars, "Sailor the Clown," a 15-year-old Midland resident, has been a clown for three years. She became interested in clowning after she attended a class at Midland College.

"I always thought it would be interesting to create another person, so I became 'Sailor the Clown,'" she said. "I think a lot of people my age could really have fun being a clown. I like making people smile and laugh."

Clowning costumes can be expensive, but results justify the costs, Reneau said.

"Everybody laughs in clowning, there are no differences," Reneau said. "There is no language barrier and no difference in race, color or creed. I wouldn't trade this for anything."

Adaptive chachalaca thrives in McAllen area

By JOHN FLORES
The (McAllen) Monitor
McALLEN, Texas - Chachalaca. It sounds like a spicy dance step or a wildly exotic beverage. It is neither.

This woodland fowl, also known as the Mexican pheasant, is loud and wily, like a cross between a grackle with a sore throat and a roadrunner. Obnoxiously raucous, the chachalaca must have learned centuries ago that its chances for survival increase when a bird is heard - but not seen. They hide in underbrush and perch on high tree limbs. Experts say they rarely venture more than a few yards onto open ground. And they have a definite attitude.

Gary Waggener, an area manager for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, is a noted Rio Grande Valley expert on chachalacas.

"The chachalaca has always been kind of a curious critter," he said. "And a lot of people like to have them on their ranches. As a rule, the typical South Texas ranch does not provide enough habitat."

Despite its noisy behavior, the chachalaca manages to avoid being the target of human wrath. Experts say the bird is flourishing in areas where it can be comfortable. While rapid urban sprawl may be taking its toll on the bird's habitat, they are adapting well.

"They're definitely not an endangered species," Waggener said.

Longtime McAllen resident Bill Lavender, who lives at a condominium complex adjoining the McAllen Country Club golf course, said the birds often gather in the early morning, like street-corner jammers hell-bent on having the most cacophonous concert possible.

"You can see as many as 100 together at any given time," he said.

"They love to feed in a loquat tree; they devour the fruit ...," Lavender said. "They also eat hackberries. People will throw bread out for them as well. This is their home, this small section of wooded area on the edge of town," he said.

A recent building boom has stretched McAllen's urban limits farther and farther south, forcing the chachalaca onto smaller and smaller parcels of natural habitat.

Still, the bird prevails. "Their population has increased out here in the last three years," Lavender said. "They're very good eaters, and there's not a whole lot of them to be seen other than in this immediate area of McAllen."

U.S. Parks and Wildlife field scientists say the chachalaca is an anomaly in the Valley, with a range that normally extends from northern Mexico all the way to South America.

But they do not venture much beyond the Rio Grande in Texas. No other state in the country can boast of chachalaca sightings.

Frank Schultz, owner of Quinta Mazatlan, a 50-year-old adobe mansion on the southern edge of town, said he has seen chachalacas around his home for decades.

"The (chachalaca) population has grown tremendously in the last 50 years," he said. "I've lived here for about 30 years, and they've always been here. They come out early in the morning and at sundown picking up bugs and things in my courtyard."

"Spring is their courting season (which accounts for that horrible screeching sound they make), and I've seen a male chasing two or three of the females at one time," Schultz said.

Hunting season on chachalacas extends from October to February.

"And they are good to eat," Schultz said. "Last year at Thanksgiving I had some. Got 'em right out in my back yard."

Justin Roach, a refuge operations specialist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department in the Valley, said the chachalaca we see here is a nonmigratory game bird known at the Plains Chachalaca.

Hunters can bag five in one day during the season, he said.

"They are quite loud," he said. "They make quite a chorus in the early mornings between March and April. They are quite social in wintertime, gathering in large groups, especially when getting fed," Roach said.

Roach described the chachalaca as a wood species, found only in the brush.

"They rarely, if ever, venture out in farmers' fields or open ground," Roach said.

They most often live in hedgerows and trees, usually keeping to very dense brush and feeding on berries and fruit.

The male and female chachalaca have two distinctive calls as if they were genetically "wired for sound" by God Himself, Waggener said.

"Mother nature has constructed their tracheas in such a way," he said. "The male's call is very deep. The female's is shrill. Usually, the deep (call) comes first, followed immediately by the (female's) shrill one."

Waggener said the female's trachea goes straight from the mouth to the lungs, similar to the human anatomy. The male's trachea is circuitous, traveling in a loop between the skin and body cavity. It is a strange, yet effective, biological arrangement, experts say.

These birds are dark brown in color and weigh from five to 10 pounds. They have an average life expectancy of three to five years.

"Chachalacas are difficult birds to hunt because they never flush out, the way quail do," Waggener said. "They'll just start running through the brush, or else will sit still, and you can walk right by them without knowing it."

The chachalaca female will lay three or four eggs at a time, with an incubation period of 28 days. Unlike many other bird species, this breed is born fully functional.

"They are ready to roll as soon as they hit the ground," Waggener said.

The chachalaca is from the genus Ortalis, species vetula. They are bun birds, taking advantage of nests abandoned by other birds.

"Nobody has ever seen a chachalaca nest under construction. They'll use other nests, or rest in thick vines," Waggener said.

Chachalaca has place in Mexican mythology

McALLEN, Texas - The strangely humorous chachalaca has woven its way into Mexican folklore, as a figure that can change shape and assume the shapes of witches, flying overhead, screaming as they cast evil spells.

One local legend believes only certain Catholic prayers can bring the demon birds back to the ground where they revert to being ordinary birds.

"This is old history the people used to talk about in the Valley, before there were TVs," said Rosalba Martinez, office manager of State Rep. Roberto Gutierrez.

"When I was a little girl we would all sit outside at night and look up at the stars and listen to the stories about the birds ..."

Martinez said the old Mexican legends have been replaced by modern conveniences like television and movies - electronic storytelling.

"People believed a lot of the witchcraft associated with (birds like the chachalacas), but now we're a lot more educated," she said.

Jane Kittleman, an avid Valley birdwatcher, said the chachalaca almost disappeared from the Valley for a few years due to pesticide and herbicide poisoning.

Legends surrounding animals, like those about people, are by their nature unofficial tales spun from threads of truth with imagination and sometimes religion thrown in for color, experts say.

Egypt experiencing rejuvenation with store, saloon

Folks travel from miles around to enjoy small town's friendliness, music

By ROGER CURTNER
The Victoria Advocate
EGYPT, Texas - Take a trip to Egypt. But forget about the queen of the Nile, although you might encounter "Cleopatra, queen of Denial," coming from a jukebox in a saloon a few miles from the banks of the Colorado.

Egypt, Texas, is located on State Highway 102 between Wharton and Eagle Lake and has a population of about 300.

The town once boasted only a tour of a former sugar cane plantation, but what was once just a small spot in the road has been a happening place for about a year.

The transformation occurred after Debbie Krenik and her stepfather Paul Holub took over management of the 95-year-old store that had been open, only occasionally in the past several years, and the adjoining Northington Land & Cattle Co. Saloon that was built in 1874. It hadn't been open at all for many years.

When the saloon has a live band, a disc jockey, or the increasingly popular karaoke nights, folks come from as far as Houston, some 60 miles away, to join the locals in kicking up their heels.

Krenik noted that one night, when there were about 300 people at the saloon, someone from outside the community approached her and expressed his surprise at what he was witnessing. He told Krenik: "I can't believe this. You've got blacks, Hispanics and whites. You've got all different types of people and nobody is angry. I haven't heard a cross word between them. Everybody is dancing with each other, acting crazy and buying each other drinks. This is really something."

It's that Mayberry-esque atmosphere that appeals to Krenik and Holub.

"It's neat here. I love it," said Krenik, who is a graduate of El Campo High School. "The stories you hear them tell when they're having their coffee in the mornings. They raise most of their own food. When someone is going to have a hog slaughtering, they all gather to help their neighbor."

"When someone slaughters a hog, they'll bring the back strap or some sausage here to the store, and we'll put it on the pit and then set it out on the table for whoever wants it," Holub added.

Krenik also recalled how the community pitched in to help someone in the community whose house was destroyed by a tornado.

"We got down there and found about 150 people there helping. We gathered up briskets and cold drinks and took them down there for the workers," she said.

The saloon is a gathering place for community card games such as "bid wisk," "tunk" and "pidy pat."

"In the winter, people are waiting in line (at the store) to play you next," Krenik said with a smile.

Also in the winter, folks gather in the saloon to watch Monday Night Football. Holub and Krenik serve up a big pot of chili or stew on those occasions.

In addition to entertainment, the store-saloon also provides a kind of employment service for the area. Because many of the community residents don't have any means of transportation, they walk to the store where they sit on the porch to wait for someone to come by needing day labor.

"The farmers and ranchers know they can come to Egypt to find day labor," Krenik noted.

The store was where the plantations' hired hands could redeem the script and chips they received as pay.

But it also used to get a lot of customers who were travelers between Wharton and Eagle Lake. "This was almost dead in the center. It was a day's horseback ride from either point, so people would stop here," Holub said.

He agreed with a visitor that if the "walls could talk" in the saloon, volumes of stories could be amassed from the early days of the establishment. Today, the walls are covered with memorabilia from Egypt's past. It was not all rosy.

Photos in the saloon show two accused horse thieves and two accused murderers hanging by the neck from the rafters of a barn that used to be behind the saloon, as well as the Texas Rangers who caught them and strung them up. "Then they had a party in the saloon," Holub said.

In all, some historians say, Egypt is the most historically significant town in Wharton County.

The community was named following the drought of 1827, when pioneers of Stephen F. Austin's colony came to this fertile region to get corn. They called it "Going down into Egypt for corn," from the Biblical passage Acts 7.

This is where some of the most important men in the life of the Republic and state of Texas first made their homes. They include William Menefee, signer of the Declaration of Independence; Gail Borden, newspaper editor and inventor of canned biscuits and milk; W.J.E. Heard, leader of Citizen Soldiers; and Eli Mercer, producer of sugar cane.

The Mercers, Heard and Northington were the principal settlers for many years.

George H. Northington Sr. built his store, the one in operation today, in 1900 after he and the heirs of Green C. Duncan divided up a partnership in a mercantile store in 1881. That original store is now an antique shop.

Northington added a meat market in 1914. Equipment for making ice was installed, and the store was equipped with a cold storage meat room. People came from Wharton, Eagle Lake and other communities to buy meat.

Northington and Green gave Cane Belt Railroad right-of-way property and $2,500 to build a station in Egypt. In 1903, Santa Fe Railroad bought the Cane Belt Railroad. That original depot is now a museum.

Another reminder of Egypt's past is the home built by Capt. and Mrs. J.E. Heard. It was completed in 1850 and is built of native brick made from the mud on the banks of the Colorado River. The hardware and lumber came from Galveston on oxen cart.

Heard had 1,685 acres. After Mentor Northington married Elizabeth Heard, the acreage was expanded to 18,000 acres.

George H. Northington Jr. later lived in the red brick home, and today, George H. Northington III's widow, Anita, allows people to tour the house.

So by going down into Egypt, you can take a history lesson and a quick course in the art of simple living.

Religious schools give students more than ideological lessons

EDITOR'S NOTE - It used to be that religious schools were considered harshly disciplined places where religious dogma came first and courses in the humanities, arts and science, came second. But today they have new appeal and they've adjusted to a growing and religiously diverse student body.

By JOSEF FEDERMAN
Associated Press Writer

Religion isn't the only thing attracting more people to religious schools these days. Many parents like the wholesome atmosphere.

"Our school is free of drugs, free of violence, and free of sex," says Sulaiman Alfraih, principal of the boys' school at the Islamic Saudi Academy in Washington, D.C.

"Regardless of their ideology, the parents love to see their kids in a very safe, clean environment."

The atmospheres of religious schools were once considered stifling. Now they appeal to parents seeking morality and values for their children, parents disillusioned by public systems that by law shun spirituality and often are held hostage to violence.

The Saudi Arabian-financed academy, which runs separate programs for boys and girls, has had its enrollment grow from about 800 students in 1990 to about 1,250 today, Alfraih says.

Christian and Jewish educators also say their enrollment is growing, with many students coming from other faiths.

"A lot of parents told me they're enrolling in private schools because of all the violence in public schools," said Joseph E. Zins, an expert on school violence at the University of Cincinnati.

School violence last year killed or seriously injured students in 41 percent of 700 cities surveyed by the National League of Cities.

"Our schools have a sense of order," said Sister Catherine McNamee, president of the National Catholic Education Association in Washington, D.C.

"Parents feel their children are safe, especially in urban areas, and they will develop a sense of moral values."

Numbers at Roman Catholic schools remain far below the early 1960s, when the urban baby boom generation pushed attendance up to 5.6 million students, according to the association.

But, after bottoming out at 2.6 million students in 1988-89, enrollment at the country's 8,345 Roman Catholic schools has grown by 26,000, or 1 percent, over the past two years.

Many of the rejuvenated Roman Catholic schools have altered their programs, McNamee says.

Rote learning, in many cases, has been replaced by thought-provoking discussions on religion, and Roman Catholic students have been joined by children from other religions.

"We have more ethnic and religious diversity than we had just 10 years ago," McNamee says.

Nationwide, about 13 percent of students at Roman Catholic schools are not Roman Catholic, and about one-fourth are minorities, according to the education association.

Similarly, more than half the students at Lutheran schools aren't Lutheran, said Carl Moser, director of schools for the Lutheran-Church Missouri Synod.

Enrollment at the synod's 2,129 schools has grown from 228,865 to 265,068, 15 percent, since 1988, he said.

At Orthodox Jewish schools, where the study of Torah and Hebrew is mandatory, nearly one-third of the students come from nonobservant Jewish homes, said Joshua Fishman, executive vice president of the 560-member National Society for Hebrew Day Schools.

"To parents who aren't religious, the attraction is the excellence of education, and the sincere interest of involving their children in the Jewish community," Fishman said.

At the Islamic school in Washington, students include Arabs, diplomats' children and immigrants from non-Arab Muslim countries, Alfraih said.

"We're not here to convert students," she says. "We're here to teach faith-filled people and to help them achieve potential in all their areas."

At Catholic High School in Charleston, W.Va., and its sister school, Sacred Heart Grade School, about half the students aren't Roman Catholic, says Principal Debra Sullivan.

"We're not here to convert students," she says. "We're here to teach faith-filled people and to help them achieve potential in all their areas."

Mary Kay Bond, a Presbyterian, sends three children to Sacred Heart.

"Ironically, in the parochial school, I feel a greater sense of freedom," Bond says. "I like the idea that they have permission to discuss values."

"I think our children have learned about the Catholic religion, but not in an indoctrination sort of way. What they're taught is we have responsibilities in the world around us."

Birth control, abortion and homosexuality are all open to discussion at Charleston Catholic, says student body president Katie Scharf, 18, a Roman Catholic who heads to Yale University in the fall.

"I think the things we have talked about are things a public school teacher would be afraid to talk about. We try to study a lot of things objectively, then bring in the Catholic point of view."

Both Scharf and Bond said safety is a recurring concern among students and parents.

"We live in a safe environment in Charleston, but even more so at Charleston Catholic," Scharf said.

NEW YORK (AP) - The case of Peter Falk's mother is headed for a happy ending.

Madeline Falk, 92, who was bilked out of more than $1 million in cash and valuables by a man who befriended her, will get most of her property back, prosecutors announced Monday.

Alfonso Cacace, 50, has pleaded guilty to fourth-degree grand larceny, admitting that between 1992 and 1994 he stole cash, jewelry, furniture and securities from Mrs. Falk. He has returned jewelry, bonds and more than $416,000 in cash, and has signed papers saying he owes her another $670,000.

Cacace had insisted that Mrs. Falk gave him the money and property as gifts after he befriended her at the opera and became her companion.

Falk, best-known as television's "Columbo," put his mother in a California nursing home in April 1992. Three months later, without Falk's knowledge, Cacace arranged to have Mrs. Falk discharged from the home and returned to New York, prosecutors said.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) - As he toured a new children's science exhibit that bears his name, Michael Jordan was asked if he could toss stuffed "bugs" into the mouth of a toy Venus flytrap.

"If I can't, I'm in trouble," Jordan said. Then he calmly sank the shot.

The basketball superstar was the initial donor to the Michael Jordan Discovery Gallery at the Cape Fear Museum. Saturday night's opening was his first public appearance in his hometown since a stretch of highway was dedicated in his honor four years ago.

Along with interactive displays such as the flytrap and a mini dune-making machine, the gallery includes a display of old Jordan jerseys and other memorabilia from his high school and college days in North Carolina.

WINK, Texas (AP) - Roy Orbison became a hit in the rock 'n' roll world with his soaring voice and three-octave range, but as a kid he never opened his mouth wide enough. "He would always sing real tight-lipped," said Bill Beckham, a former classmate of Orbison's at Wink High School in the 1950s.

The choir teacher made Orbison put three fingers in his mouth when he sang, schoolmate Barbara Slaughter said.

Orbison would go on to be one of the greatest of the early rock 'n' roll singers.

U.S. SENATOR
KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON

Welfare Reform Plan Must Include the Growth Factor

No one ever said fixing our abysmally flawed welfare system would be easy. While the 104th Congress has made historic progress on this repair project, the finishing touches remain to be drawn.

I am convinced that the block-grant approach, which both the House and Senate have approved in principle, offers the best hope of accomplishing what we've set out to do. It is designed to provide states with the flexibility to create programs that meet their individual needs — programs which will encourage their welfare recipients to make responsible choices.

But there remains to be settled an issue of basic equity. Simply put, there is no reason why the federal government should subsidize poor children in fast-growing states less than those in slow-growth states. The block grant funding formulas, as now written, do not take into account the needs of fast-growing states such as Texas.

The current reform plans would freeze Texas welfare funding at the current level over the next five years despite the fact that Texas is expected to witness a population increase of nearly 20 percent over that same period of time.

Meanwhile, states with stagnant or negative population growth would receive, in effect, more funding for each child on public assistance than would states that are growing.

The Senate has not yet finalized its welfare block-grant formulas. But under the House-approved bill, Texas' allocation for family assistance would equal current federal welfare spending in Texas — about $440 million annually. That amount would increase by only $11 million over the five-year period of the program.

It is unfair to force Texas or any other state to bear the burden of disproportionate population growth. The needs of high-growth states must be part of the equation.

One way we see to achieve this would be for the Congress to set aside, out of the overall welfare block-grant pie, supplemental grants to high-growth states.

And I've been working with other senators from high-growth states to develop a better basic formula, one which includes credit for state's growth rates and the number of children they have living in poverty. We have succeeded in getting the Senate Finance Committee to adopt a formula that increases Texas basic block grant from $440 million to $507 million — an increase of $67 million a year.

We must not lose sight of the fact, however, that the underlying objective of welfare reform is to reduce long-term welfare dependency and bring about lower rates of growth in the programs.

Eventually, our overhaul should make the welfare system shrink — successful reform by anyone's definition.

Wish for rain varies with location, crops, say extension agents

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Although some farmers and ranchers welcomed the dry summer conditions after constant spring showers, many are already wishing for a little rainfall in the first official week of summer, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported Tuesday.

Randall Upshaw, district extension director in Dallas, said North Texas received so much rain in the last few months that the hot, dry weather was a welcome change for many crops. However, producers are getting more dry weather than they bargained for.

"It's been wet here for so long," Upshaw said, "that we needed some dry weather. But now we have gone two weeks without a measurable rainfall."

"Just two inches of rain would be a godsend right now for corn, sorghum and basically everything."

Tony Douglas, district extension director in Overton, said spotted showers last weekend helped ease the drying effects of summer, although more moisture would be very beneficial to producers now.

"Anytime we get rain, the pastures will be replenished and things rejuvenated," he said, "but once the water shuts off, things start to suffer. That's what producers expect in June, July, and August."

Douglas said showers are needed to keep any crop lush and green, but in the summertime, moisture is hard to come by and crops will probably dry out after a few days of no rain.

Dale Fritz, district extension director in Bryan, said dryland cotton producers in Fort Bend and Brazoria counties may experience a decrease in yields due to lack of moisture. Many cotton producers in the Brazos Valley are irrigating cotton to make up for lack of rainfall.

"Producers can irrigate their cotton," Fritz said, "but the problem with summertime conditions is they are having to irrigate early and that adds expenses to the costs of production."

Fortunately, the hot, dry weather will probably not affect the corn and sorghum crops in Southeast Texas because they have already developed. Fritz said unless the crops were planted late, they have already produced what they are going to, and weather changes will not make much of a difference.

On the flip side of the coin, clear, sunny days will be very beneficial for rice crops. Fritz said since rice is planted in water, rainy conditions can cause flooding of rice crops. Rice thrives in heat, so producers would rather see hot, dry weather than cool, overcast days.

Jon Zeitler, meteorologist at the National Weather Service Agricultural Service Center in College Station, said hot and humid conditions will continue across the state this week. Widely scattered, afternoon thunderstorms are possible, with the best chances in the High Plains, Low Rolling Plains, and along the Gulf Coast, he said.

Zeitler said high temperatures will range from the upper 80s to middle 90s, while lows will vary from the middle 60s to middle 70s.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by district extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture adequate to short. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Harvesting wheat; yields below average. Corn, cotton, sorghum progressing. Beginning red potato harvest. Livestock in good condition.

SOUTH PLAINS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges improving with recent rainfall in some areas. Cotton behind schedule due to severe weather. Harvesting wheat. Livestock in good condition.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture adequate to surplus. Wheat harvest nearly complete; yields disappointing. Oat harvest nearly complete; harvest acreage lower than expected. Some cotton being double-cropped on wheat ground. Livestock in good condition.

NORTH TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges dry; hot days, warm nights with no rainfall. Baling hay. Corn, cotton, sorghum in good condition. Tomatoes in poor condition due to disease problems. Pecans progressing.

EAST TEXAS: Soil moisture short. Pastures, ranges in fair conditions; some in need of moisture. Hay yields currently good. Corn, cotton in good condition. Harvesting, marketing vegetables. Peach harvest progressing.

FAR WEST TEXAS: Soil moisture very short to short. Pastures, ranges in poor condition in most areas; need moisture. Cutting, baling alfalfa hay. Cotton in fair condition. Harvesting onions, cantaloupe. Pecans in good condition.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition, but drying out. Cotton growing after replanting many acres. Wheat harvest complete. Sorghum beginning to head. Commercial growers harvesting.

CENTRAL TEXAS: Soil moisture short. Summer grasses in good condition; rain needed for continued growth. Grain yields above average. Harvesting hay. Some pest problems in cotton. Planting late season peanuts; replanting some early peanuts.

SOUTHEAST TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges need moisture; hot, humid weather, no rain. Harvesting hay, commercial vegetables, peaches. Irrigating cotton. Peach crop in good condition.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS: Soil moisture adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Cutting, baling hay. Above average yields expected in corn, grain sorghum, cotton. Completing peanut planting. Harvesting cantaloupes.

COASTAL BEND: Soil moisture adequate. Grain sorghum harvest began. Corn is in the dent stage. Insect spraying is active. Pecan crop, soybeans in good condition. Cattle are in excellent condition. Peach harvest underway.

SOUTH TEXAS: Soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges in poor condition. Harvesting grain sorghum. Corn, sorghum in fair condition. Cotton in poor condition; crop will be reduced due to drought, insect pressure. Sugarcane irrigation active.

Poll shows changing attitudes about crime

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) - The results of a newly released poll might indicate changing attitudes about how crime should be dealt with in Texas, a Sam Houston State University researcher says.

Almost one-fourth of Texans responding to the poll said they knew a murder victim and 39 percent said they were crime victims during the previous year.

However, Texans' support for the death penalty appeared to drop, said researcher Dennis Longmire, who conducted the 1994 Texas Crime Poll.

"Perhaps people are beginning to see the futility of a continuation of punishment as the answer to the problem of crime," Longmire said Tuesday. He noted that his results combine with other studies that show Texans are increasingly concerned with a lost sense of community.

"They're seeing the relationship between general decay in the neighborhood and crime and beginning to perhaps realize that ... we need to restore a sense of connection and commitment to the community."

"So perhaps that can help answer what appears to be inconsistent logic in the minds of at least this year's respondents."

Longmire said the poll, with a 3-percent margin of error, was conducted from January through March of last year. Blacks and Hispanics were under-represented among respondents, but their responses were weighted to reflect the state's racial balance, he said.

Of 750 poll respondents, 81 percent said they favor the death penalty, compared with 93 percent in the 1993 poll.

When asked more specifically whether they support the death penalty as a punishment for murder, 86 percent said they did. That's down 7 percent from last year.

Sixty-six percent of respondents said they would support the death penalty if the sentence of life imprisonment without parole were available, compared with 81 percent last year.

Twenty-four percent of poll respondents said they knew of murder victim during the previous year, but Longmire was reluctant to draw conclusions or rely on that result because there weren't more detailed questions on the survey. The question was not asked for the 1993 poll.

"We don't know how well the people knew the victim of murder ... I wished we had asked some follow-up questions to get more information," he said. "We have to be cautious in drawing very much beyond the simple observation."

On questions of actual crime victimization, 39 percent said they had suffered from one of 10 crimes ranging including stalking, burglary, arson and rape. Twenty-nine percent said they were victims in the 1993 poll.

How to Grill Fish Steaks
Grill fish steaks about 6 to 12 minutes per inch of thickness. After the steaks are cooked, cut them into 1/2 inch thick steaks. Separate the steaks gently with a thin knife or metal spatula. Let the steaks rest for a few minutes. Turn over, about halfway through estimated grilling time, and remove from the grill when done.
