Senators say Clements plan just stingy

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate's approval of a $39.97 billion state budget has senators and Gov. Bill Clements swapping charges.

Senators voted 28-3 Wednesday to pass a spending plan that is about $3 billion higher than Clements has said he would approve. The lawmakers said Clements' proposal is too stingy.

Clements blasted the lawmakers as "budget busters."

Senate action in passing a $39.9 billion budget is a giant step in the wrong direction... Such a tax increase will hurt, not help, our state's economy," Clements said.

The Senate plan calls for spending about $2 billion more in 1988-89, an increase of 5.4 percent over current state spending levels.

It would exceed the $36.9 billion, two-year budget Clements proposed, a plan that already would require a $2.9 billion tax increase to fund.

Clements has vowed to veto any spending bill that exceeds his "bottom line," and on Wednesday the governor said the Senate bill would require a $6 billion tax hike that voters don't want.

"The average working men and women of our state are saying no to that tax increase. The budget busters prevailed today in the Senate. But I am confident the people of Texas ultimately will prevail," Clements said.

"We will keep spending under control, adequately fund essential services and turn our efforts to what the people of Texas really want — jobs, jobs and more jobs," the governor said.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple, the bill's sponsor, began the debate by acknowledging that the plan exceeds the governor's limit. But Jones argued, "The proposals the governor is making for spending will not adequately meet the needs of Texas."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, the Democratic leader of the Senate, said that despite exceeding the governor's spending limit, the Senate-passed budget still had shortcomings. But it is about all that can be expected, given the state's current economic problems, he said.

"What's bad about it is it doesn't adequately address human services or education," Hobby said. "It's the best that can be done under adverse economic conditions."

Some lawmakers suggested that passage of the bill put the Senate on a collision course with the House and the governor.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said the Senate's budget probably was too high to win approval in his chamber.

"I just think it's in excess of what we need. And I think it's a great deal higher than will be passed here in the House," Lewis said.

House Appropriations Committee members said they hoped to complete work on their spending plan weekend, and Lewis said he has discussed the budget fight with the governor.

He (Clements) said again, 'I will veto any tax bill beyond the $2.9 billion.' I believe him," Lewis reported.

Bob Davis, Clements' budget director, said the governor's plan still is the only one that will balance.

North's papers giving investigators more info

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North's secretary, Fawn Hall, turned over to him documents she removed from his White House office the day North was fired, sources familiar with the investigation into the Iran-Contra affair say.

Investigators for both independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh and congressional committees now have copies of those documents, along with a wealth of other material, according to sources familiar with the investigation who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Among the other items obtained by investigators is a calendar record of North's telephone calls, meetings and other contacts maintained by Miss Hall. One source described the record as "90 percent accurate" and said it included North's travel arrangements.

With congressional hearings into the sale of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels set to begin in three weeks, there were these other developments:

—North and his secretary destroyed so many documents in a brief period before President Reagan fired North that their White House shredding machine backed up and jammed under the load, a source familiar with the investigation said.

—Investigators have located original versions of four memos written in March and April 1985 by North and which Miss Hall altered for North shortly before he was fired, sources said. Investigators now have copies of both the originals and the altered versions.

Sources said the alterations appeared to be an attempt to conceal North's program for raising money and supplying arms to the rebels opposing Nicaragua's leftist government.

—Congressional investigators are discussing the possibility of having former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane as the lead-off witness when their hearings begin.

McFarlane has been spending a great deal of time in recent weeks meeting with investigators for the special counsel and House and Senate committees in preparation for those hearings, one source said.

—Investigators are negotiating with lawyers for Albert Hakim to obtain his testimony, including records of his financial dealings in the arms-for-Iran, money-for-Contras affair, it was learned.

Hakim, an Iranian-born businessman, has been named as a key figure in the military supply operation to the Contras. He has been linked to North and retired Gen. Richard Secord as one of the joint holders in a Swiss bank account.

—The Swiss government has rejected attempts by two companies and five individuals to keep U.S. investigators from seeing bank accounts linked to the Iran arms sale. The Washington Post reported today.

The Post quoted Justice Ministry spokesman Juerg Kistler as saying that if there are no appeals of Wednesday's decision by May 13, or if the country's highest court upholds the ruling, the accounts will be open to U.S. investigators.

Kistler said North was not among the people involved, but he declined to name any who were. Other Justice Ministry sources told the Post that Hakim and Secord were among those whose appeals were rejected.

—An official and a former employee of a company linked to Secord have been granted immunity by the independent counsel. The New York Times reported today.

John Cupp, security chief of American National Management Corporation of Vienna, Va., and Cynthia Dondinger, a former accounting officer for the company, were granted immunity in exchange for their testimony and cooperation, according to their lawyer, Michael Abbell, the newspaper said.

Crackdown on ATV violations planned by city

A police crackdown on misuse of all terrain vehicles in several parts of town has been prompted by "a tremendous amount of complaints," according to City Manager Darwin McGill.

"We feel like we've had enough complaint to enforce it," McGill said.

Residents in the main areas where the ATVs are ridden have voiced concern about safety and are irritated by the noise made by the machines.

Mopeds, dirt bikes and three-wheelers are not made for street riding and racing in alleys is a violation because the alley is considered a street and vehicles must be registered and meet state standards. The vehicles do not have the correct exhaust or lighting for street riding. Residents are concerned for younger children playing where the drivers are going.

Many of the riders violate by riding the vehicles to a filed or county road. Riding off road is okay, but police warn the drivers to walk the ATV to the off-street track to avoid tickets.

Police will now start issuing citations for violations to drivers 17 or over, and will take minors home and cite the parents for allowing the child to violate the traffic rules.

Lt. Pat Michael said police may issue tickets for illegal vehicles on the streets or alleys or for disturbing the peace if noise is "unreasonable." He said a lot of the noise complaints come from residents who live near the popular riding places.

Three main sites noted by Michael are northwest sections near the end of Morfman around Hickory and Kingwood, north of 16th near Avenue J, and close to Tierra Blanca School on what is called "Knob Hill."

Embassy in Moscow has major problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The uncompleted U.S. Embassy in Moscow, besides being riddled with Soviet listening devices, has important structural problems that must be fixed before it can be occupied, a federal study shows.

After a six-month congressionally mandated study of the building's structural soundness, the National Bureau of Standards concluded that the embassy probably could be suitably repaired in less than a year and without major reconstruction.

If the building were in the United States, repairs probably would cost about $1.5 million, the agency estimated, but costs could run substantially higher in Moscow.

Among the problems found by the agency's structural experts were joints and reinforced concrete columns and walls which were not completely filled with the concrete needed for them to reach their full design strength; cracked walls in several places; and the potential for "progressive collapse" in the floor system.

Floors were designed in some instances without an adequate margin of safety, raising the possibility that failure of one structural member could lead to a chain reaction of collapses, the report said.

"It's not normal building practice," bureau spokesman Matt Heyman said Wednesday. "Some of the problems were clear-cut and should have been obvious" to the builders. In some cases, he said, joints left unfilled were later covered over with a layer of cement that hid the defect.

The bureau's study focused on the eight-story chancery building at the center of the $191 million embassy

Maria Zuniga, who appeared at the school board meeting Tuesday night to complain about dress code violations, called to take issue with the manner in which we reported the story in Wednesday's Brand. Mrs. Zuniga wants it made clear that she didn't say any Anglo students were sent home to change their attire. She believes only Hispanic students were sent home to change because of wearing "jams" which were considered too short.

Raymond Schroeter, La Plata principal, reported that two or three Hispanic and one or two/Anglo students were sent home because of the dress code. "Actually, we've had more problems with Anglo students about wearing short jams," said Schroeter. Mrs. Zuniga claimed that the rules were not being administered fairly and Hispanics were being singled out.

As a result of the discussion at the school board meeting, John Fuston, board president, appointed a board committee to study the dress code situation and come up with a recommendation.

In San Angelo last week there was a timely bumper sticker in view of the income-tax deadline. It read: "Fight Organized Crime—Abolish the IRS."

With the filing deadline yesterday, it might be appropriate to relate the story told by Sen. Harry Byrd.

The senator stopped at a small town where a circus barker was offering a curious group $100 if they could get a drop of juice from a lemon after a strong man had squeezed it. Several tried but none succeeded.

Finally a man in a business suit stepped up and got two drops of juice from the lemon. The winner was paid his prize and was then asked to tell the audience his occupation.

"I'm an IRS agent," was his reply.

Another story comes from Roy McQueen, publisher of the Snyder Daily News. He knows a businessman who has made the IRS an ally in his collection process.

After repeated attempts to collect a debt, the business has a "last resort" policy. The businessman writes off the debt to clear his books, but sends the customer a 1099 for the uncollected debt.

A copy also goes to the IRS. Said the businessman, "I may not get paid, but the IRS will find a way to get their half."

Local Roundup

Police report

All five offenses reported to Hereford police on Wednesday concerned vehicles.

Police have filed charges on a resident in the 1100 block of Grand for allowing a junked vehicle to remain on his property after being warned to move it.

Police checked, but no official report was requested for a golf cart and car accident at the golf course.

Two reports of suspicious vehicles were made, one in the 900 block of Miles and one in the 200 block of the alley between Elm and Douglas.

A woman reporting an accident that allegedly occurred several days ago was given instructions on how to report the incident to Austin.

Police issued 28 citations: Nine were for speeding, seven for seat belt violations, six for insurance violations and six miscellaneous.

Holder's contract on agenda

A special meeting of the Hereford Schools board of trustees has been called for 10 a.m. Saturday to consider an agreement on Superintendent Harrell Holder's contract. The meeting will be in the administration building.

The agenda item reads: Consider and act on termination by mutual agreement of Superintendent's contract and payment to Superintendent for balance of said contract.

Holder's contract expires June 30, 1988. He is paid an annual salary of $53,588.

State Open meetings law revision approved

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have approved a change in the Texas Open Meetings Act that would require governmental bodies handling the public's business to keep records of their closed-door meetings.

The Senate voted 31-0 for the revision Wednesday and sent the bill to the House.

"It's not as strong as originally introduced, but most important it was agreed to by all concerned," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, author of the measure.

The bill was sponsored by Texas Media, a coalition of seven print and broadcast groups in the state.

Efforts have been made since 1977 to tighten provisions of the act that guarantees the public's right to know what goes on at state and local governmental sessions. Under certain conditions, such as discussions of personnel or real estate transactions, officials can meet in executive sessions.

Caperton said the most determined opposition to recording closed sessions came from associations representing school boards, county commissioners and city councils.

But he said changes in his bill "have now met the consensus of those three groups."

The Senate-approved bill would allow proceedings of an executive session to be kept in permanent closed files either as a tape recording or as a "certified agenda."

"All the presiding officer has to do is certify that this was the subject matter talked about in the executive session," Caperton said.

Sen. Bill Sarpalis, D-Amarillo, asked how a county commissioners' court would be protected after discussing matters of personnel in a closed meeting. Caperton said his bill calls for the records to be sealed unless a district judge decides there is sufficient reason for them to be made public.

Another change would allow open meetings of governmental bodies to be covered by television. The original act said only that open meetings could be covered by reporters taking notes or with still cameras or tape recorders.

Some governmental bodies have refused to allow their meetings to be televised because that was not provided for in the original act.

Beer craze brews sign vandalism

NORTH RICHLAND HILLS, Texas (AP) — City maintenance workers here have gotten a sour taste for a popular Mexican beer after having to replace at least 50 pilfered street signs along Corona Drive.

A craze for imported Corona beer, billed as "la cerveza mas fina," has turned the brew's name into a status logo and spawned a thriving industry in hats and T-shirts emblazoned with the name.

And it apparently has turned the street signs into coveted prizes for a pack of persistent vandals in northeast Tarrant County.

"This is not a funny situation," said Public Works Supt. Jimmy Cates, who routinely tours the nine intersections along Corona Drive on Monday mornings to find a fresh batch of street signs missing.

"Maybe it's high school kids around here, or maybe it's college kids playing some game, but it's giving me a pain," he said.

As a last-ditch measure, the city last week sent letters to the residents along the quiet street, asking them to keep an eye out for the thieves and to jot down license numbers of suspected vandals. If that doesn't work and the signs are gone Monday morning, Cates says he's giving up.

National No unescorted visit for Hinckley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. lost his chance to leave a mental hospital unescorted to spend Easter Sunday with his parents following an uproar over revelations that he corresponded last year with triple-murderer Theodore Bundy.

St. Elizabeths Hospital withdrew its request Wednesday for a 12-hour pass for Hinckley, who was committed to the mental hospital after his 1981 attempt to assassinate President Reagan.

The hospital said it wanted to take a detailed look at documents taken Tuesday night from Hinckley's room "to assess the clinical significance of writings and other materials belonging to Mr. Hinckley which were heretofore unexamined by the hospital staff."

Hospital officials gave no indication what the writings were, but they apparently are in addition to the correspondence with Bundy, who is awaiting execution on Florida's death row for the slayings of a 12-year-old girl and two sorority sisters.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker accepted the hospital's decision and also agreed to a request by the U.S. attorney's office to seal documents and writings taken from Hinckley.

Amy Carter acquitted in CIA protest

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Amy Carter, acquitted along with 1960s radical Abbie Hoffman and 13 others in an anti-CIA demonstration, plans a lifetime of civil disobedience, and her father, the former president, says he's proud.

The jury returned innocent verdicts on all charges stemming from the Nov. 24 demonstration against CIA recruiting at the University of Massachusetts. The defendants had argued that CIA actions justified an illegal protest to try to stop the agency.

Miss Carter, 19, a sophomore at Brown University in Providence, R.I., was one of three defendants accused of disorderly conduct. Hoffman was among a dozen defendants accused of refusing to leave a school building.

Each defendant had faced up to six months in jail and a $500 fine.

Former President Jimmy Carter said in an interview Wednesday night in Decatur, Ga., that he was proud of his daughter.

"Amy is a very shy girl, contrary to the image you see projected in the news media. But she believes very strongly in what she's doing," he said.

"She has been, reluctantly I would say, involved in issues of importance to her. Amy's been arrested four times, three times for protesting apartheid and this last time for what she considers, and I consider, illegal activity of the CIA in Nicaragua," the former president said.

International Reports of radiation leak denounced

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said allegations that it was the source of recent high radioactivity levels in Europe are groundless, but West German officials said they still believe a Soviet nuclear accident may be to blame.

The higher readings were noted in five European countries for varying lengths of time in early March, and European officials and scientists said they probably came from the Soviet Union.

"Charges in the West that a certain increase in airborne radiation detected there was due to a radioactive leak in the Soviet Union are utterly groundless and bear the hallmark of a provocative fabrication," the official Soviet news agency Tass said Wednesday.

In Bonn, West German officials said Wednesday the Soviet denial did not change their opinion that the radioactivity most likely came from a Soviet nuclear accident. But an Environment Ministry spokesman, Detlef Diehl, said it could have escaped during a Soviet underground nuclear test or during the cleaning of a nuclear reactor.

ANSON, Texas (AP) — Dancing is legal now, but there won't be any dancing in the streets over the change.

The Anson City Council, meeting in emergency session, passed the ordinance legalizing public dancing for the first time since 1933, Mayor Gene Rodgers said.

Rodgers said the ordinance replaced an outdated, discriminatory one, which allowed certain dances but not others.

But members of Footloose, a group of parents who support allowing supervised dancing for students, are upset about restrictions placed on dances and the way the ordinance was passed Tuesday.

The six-page ordinance, which passed unanimously, sets up guidelines for dances, the mayor said. Restrictions include a stipulation that no dances be conducted within a certain distance of a church, he said, and that no one dance after 12:01 a.m.

And no dancing is allowed on city property, including the streets, in the West Texas town north of Abilene.

"You've got to have guidelines," he said. "You've got to protect the people."

Footloose president Mercy Torres said, "I think it (the ordinance) is worse than the one we had before. There are too many restrictions, too many 'don'ts' and not enough 'dos.'"

Paul Davidson, a musician and Footloose member, said he disagreed with some provisions in the new ordinance.

Banning dancing on city property limits the facilities available for dances, he said.

"If the city lets the Chamber of Commerce rent a building for its banquet, then I should be able to rent that building for the same price and should be able to hold a dance," he told the Abilene Reporter-News.

The ordinance makes it tough on public dances, but allows private dances without admission charges, which would force Footloose to foot the bill, he said.

"It's unfortunate that a few parents have to take the burden of protecting our children (by sponsoring dances) and keeping them off the streets," Davidson said. "The city is not cooperating."

Davidson said the emergency meeting "took everybody by surprise." He said he was told there would be three readings of the ordinance at council meetings.

Rodgers said an emergency session was called so that the ordinance could be passed quickly so the city could get on with other business.

He said national media coverage portraying the city as divided over the issue was not true.

"I think this has been blown completely out of proportion," he said. "We have other things we need to do."

Passing the ordinance in an emergency session puts it into effect immediately and bypasses the usual three readings.

Davidson said the new ordinance makes it easier for private dance hall operators than for those holding a public dance in Anson. Neither Footloose members nor residents want dance halls in Anson, he said.

According to the ordinance, Davidson said, before a permit is granted for a public dance, the city secretary must determine if the applicant is "of good moral character" and must inspect the building where the dance is to be held.

Mayor Rodgers said it is possible for a private dance hall to open.

"It's legal if they want to," he said. "Personally, I don't look for them to last long."

A permit will cost $25, Mrs. Torres said, and the fine for violating the ordinance is $200, compared to $15 under the old ordinance.

The law also includes steep liability insurance requirements.

"It's hard to tell if we won anything, lost anything or are back to square one," Davidson said. Most people in Footloose believe they were not treated fairly, he added.

Davidson, who penned a song "There Ain't No Dancin' in Anson" two years ago, said the ordinance might be cause to write another verse to the song.

March cold snap expected to put chill on wheat harvest

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Farmers' hopes to cash in on the state's annual $337 million wheat crop this year have been put on ice.

Record low temperatures that hit Texas in late March caused unprecedented freeze damage to the state's wheat crop, agriculture officials say. About half of that crop is planted in the High Plains and Panhandle regions.

Reports from area county extension agents show that in some areas, up to 95 percent of the estimated 3.5 million acres have been destroyed.

As the June harvest period approaches, farmers must decide quickly whether to salvage the crop's remains or plow it under, Texas Agricultural Extension Service officials said Wednesday during a media briefing north of Lubbock.

"Wheat is a major crop in our county and we were expecting to harvest 7 to 7 million bushels," said Swisher County extension agent David Gibson. "If we've lost 50 percent, you could see what would happen to our economy which already is depressed."

Dr. Travis Miller of College Station, extension agronomist, said the freeze damage is widespread across the state, but the destruction varies from field to field.

In terms of acres, wheat is the No. 1 crop in Texas, Miller said.

"We've got a major loss on our hands," Miller said. "And there may be even more seen as lodging — when the plant falls over — at harvest."

Damage was severe in late March, the extension specialists pointed out, because the winter dormancy period of the fall-planted crop was ending and the wheat was beginning to grow.

Because water was flowing through the plants, destructive ice crystals formed to induce damage.

Extension economist Dr. Jackie Smith of Lubbock added that farmers must decide whether to graze damaged wheat fields with livestock, cut and bale the damaged wheat for feed, take the loss and not incur additional expenses, or plow it under and replant another crop.

"We want the farmer to know where he is before he puts any additional cost into it," said Lubbock district extension agent Bob Robinson. "Farmers can't afford to put good money into a loss situation."

First Abilene reports earnings

First Abilene Bankshares, Inc., reported consolidated earnings of $1,306,381 or 65 cents a share for the quarter ending March 31, 1987. This compared to $1.6 million and 80 cents per share for the same period in 1986.

The Abilene-based holding company is the parent company of First National Bank of Abilene, Bank of Commerce, Abilene; Hereford State Bank, First National Bank of Sweetwater, and Eastland National Bank.

Kenneth T. Murphy, chief executive officer, reported that the decreased earnings in the first quarter were primarily the result of lower net interest income reflecting a decline in the volume of loans outstanding and lower interest margins.

The annual shareholders' meeting for First Abilene Bankshares is scheduled April 28 at 10:30 a.m. at the Abilene Civic Center.

West won't make instant response to Soviet proposal

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz said today the West will not make an "instant response" to a Soviet proposal to eliminate hundreds of short- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Shultz commented at a news conference after he briefed 10 NATO foreign ministers on his three days of talks in Moscow.

"We have examined alternatives" to the Soviet proposal, he said. "We will make a decision promptly about our next steps."

But in a jab at the Soviets, Shultz said, "For some reason they think there should be an instant response from us."

He said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies were discussing arms reduction but they "were not going to jump to any quick conclusion." Even so, he said the NATO ministers provided "a universal welcome of the results of my Moscow visit."

NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington said, "What has got to be done now... is an overall assessment of (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev's proposal and our possible response."

He said the NATO allies agreed to "begin immediately to consider the implications to allied security of the proposals under negotiation."

Shultz, who arrived in Brussels from Moscow on Wednesday, said the Soviet proposal would have a significant impact on NATO's defenses.

A treaty based on the Soviet proposal would eliminate hundreds of American medium-range nuclear missiles NATO considers essential to deter aggression.

The Soviets in turn would eliminate, over a five-year period, all their medium-range nuclear warheads except 100 to be retained in Asia. They also would scrap immediately about 50 shorter-range missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Another 80 shorter-range missiles in the Soviet Union would be dismantled over a year, with the precise terms of an agreement with the United States still to be worked out.

"We are very close to a deal," a senior U.S. official told reporters at a midnight briefing after Shultz arrived from Moscow.

Shultz met early today at NATO headquarters with Lord Carrington, then jointly with the foreign ministers of Canada, West Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Spain and Belgium.

Other NATO nations were represented by senior representatives.

Reagan said Shultz's talks in Moscow helped pave the way for a superpower agreement on medium-range weapons "in the not-too-distant future."

But the president, vacationing at his ranch outside Santa Barbara, Calif., said in a statement that much remains to be done and that agreements in longer-range missiles and space-based defenses "will be more difficult."

Shultz was to fly to California later today to brief Reagan.

complex, which has been under construction for eight years.

The findings come on top of revelations that the building also is riddled with listening devices planted by Soviet spies during construction. Some members of Congress have suggested that the structure probably can never be cleaned of all the bugs and may have to be bulldozed. The agency did not examine the costs or feasibility of "de-bugging."

Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J., a frequent critic of the government's handling of the embassy matter, said Wednesday he would ask Congress to pass a resolution urging the State Department never to occupy the chancery. He said the structure should be demolished at Soviet expense.

And on the security issue, Courter said he would renew a push for the department to replace citizens of communist bloc countries who work at U.S. embassies in Eastern Europe with American citizens.

Work on the chancery building was halted in 1985 and its Soviet contractor removed from the site. The structure remains three years from completion, with most work on the interior not begun.

Students from Bluebonnet School are busy preparing for their Spring Carnival planned from 5:30-8:30 p.m. Friday, April 24, at the school. There will be numerous booths set-up for the public's entertainment. All proceeds from the event will be used to purchase books for the school's library. Fifth graders, Tommy Escamilla and Christina Barrera, are making confetti eggs that their class will be selling.

Ann Landers

All kinds of teens

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 38-year-old college instructor and never thought I would find myself writing to you, but your column may be the best forum for an observation concerning the destruction of the English language by the youth of America.

I was sitting in a fast-food restaurant yesterday and overheard two teenage girls talking at the table next to mine. Their conversation went like this:

First girl: "So I said to him, like Whuddaya mean, ya know, when ya say like you're too busy to see me. And he says like, I got things to do. And I says like what do that mean? And he goes, I don't wanna talk about it. So I go, if you're gonna be that way we can like wrap it right now and he goes, 'That's fine with me ya know.'"

Second girl: "The same thing happened with my boyfriend last year, like he started seeing this girl and he didn't know I knew, cause like my friend Vicki tol' me she seen them together at the movies, and I'm really ticked off so I asked him about it and he like, you know won't admit it. Well I'm sure it's true I said because somebody I know seen you two together, and he like still hangs tough but I know it's true so I like dumped him."

Get the picture, Ann? It went on that way for 30 minutes and I am not giving you an exaggerated transcription. For some reason the word "like" has come to be used almost as a form of punctuation.

I even hear college students around my campus who speak the same way. Would you please tell them, Ann, that when they talk like this they sound like, ya know, morons?—Appalled on Long Island

DEAR LONG ISLAND: You heard a 30-minute conversation, but I gotta read like a couple of hundred letters a day, Buster, and I can tell you that a lot of kids write like they talk ya know and it's like murder until they get to the problem. So don't like come to me lookin' fer sympathy.

In all fairness, however, I must say I receive many letters from teenagers who are bright, insightful and much kinder than we were—and infinitely more articulate. So let's not generalize. There are all kinds of teens just as there are all kinds of adults.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband, "Sam," is a police officer. I respect him for the risks he takes in attempting to make this city safe for all children. The problem is that because of Sam, our own house is not safe for his 2-year-old son.

When my husband comes off duty he puts his gun and holster in the desk drawer but he forgets to lock it. No matter how many times I remind him he cannot seem to remember. When I yell at him he says, "You're right. I'll be more careful."

The very next evening I find his gun in the open drawer.

Almost every day Sam witnesses the destruction that can be wrought by a gun. What can I say to him to get the message across that when he leaves his gun in an unlocked drawer he is jeopardizing his son's life? I am—Terrified in New Orleans

DEAR N.O.: Stop nagging Sam to lock the desk drawer. Here is a simple solution. Insist that Sam remove all the bullets from the gun and hand them to you the minute he walks through the door.

You can then put the bullets in the gravy boat on the top shelf in the cupboard and let Sam get them before he leaves for work.

What's the story on pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, downers, speed? Can you handle them if you're careful? Send for Ann Landers' all-new booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." For each booklet ordered, send $2, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Salad supper, Easter parade plans made by lodge members

A salad supper and an Easter parade was the order of business when members of Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met Tuesday evening.

During the meeting, prizes were awarded for various Easter bonnets displayed by those present. Also, games were played and additional prizes given.

Several upcoming events were discussed. A School of Instruction to be given by Lodge Deputy Kee Ruland was set for April 21. Also, Noble Grand Jo Irlbeck will preside over a surprise meeting April 28.

Plans were made for a bazaar, garage and bake sale Saturday, May 2, and for a Mother's Day Dinner, Sunday, May 10.

Members and guests present at the meeting included Anna Conklin, (hostess), Ben Conklin, Susie Curtsinger, Cecil and Eunice Boyer, Faye Brownlow, Lydia Hopson, Petty Lemons, Ursalee Jacobsen, Rosalie Northcutt, Dora Lee Howell, Marie Harris, Tony and Jo Irlbeck, Jim and Erna Loving, Dorothy Landry and Ada Hollabaugh.

Making collars explained to Young Homemakers Club

Explaining how to make collars was the topic of a program presented by Treva Blair when members of Young Homemakers met recently in the homemaking department at La Plata Junior High School.

Blair brought patterns and explained how to sew lace on the collars and still make them reversible. The speaker has sold her collars in numerous bazaars and craft shows.

During the business session, members discussed their Mother's Day Luncheon set for noon May 9. Catering the affair will be Mary Herring and Lois Lemons of Something Special.

The next regular meeting was set for 7:30 p.m. May 12 in the home of Melinda Henson at which time the group will have a stuffed baked potato meal and elect new officers.

Club offers scholarship

A $500 scholarship, courtesy of Hereford Pilot Club, will be awarded to a senior girl who will graduate from Hereford High School this spring.

Applications may be obtained from the high school counselor's office and must be returned by May 1.

Further information may be obtained from Donna West, Pilot Club president or Berta Ottesen, chairman of the education committee.

Traveling church preceded St. Thomas

By JANE JORDAN POLLARD

On Lanny Avenue just off Lubbock Road in Brownfield, the "little brown church," (Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd), stands alone. Surrounded by vacant lots, one might suppose that the church rose there on the prairie and the city grew up around it. But its presence is woven into the history of area people and places.

The fact is the small but beautiful house of God has been a mobile, traveling church "on wheels". It stopped over in Brownfield in 1955, having traveled 284 miles from Spur, Texas by way of Hereford.

Sometimes referred to as the, "the little brown church of the plains," this is a slight misnomer for it was born in the break country of Spur in the 1920's. It was moved to Hereford in 1949.

When the little brown Episcopal Church was built about 66 years ago, in Spur, European Syndicates owned the huge Matador and Spur Ranches. The scenic building has been rumored to have been a cowboy church, located out on the range. Though some cowboys may have attended services there, it was built on a street in the center of Spur, then and now a center for ranching.

Mrs. C.H. Senning, an Episcopalian, came to Spur in 1909; before the town was organized. He started the movement for his denomination. The group met in a Presbyterian church while building their own. Senning never realized the physical aspect of his dream as he died in 1918 before completion of the building.

A Spur rancher, banker and later president of Texas Tech, Dr. Clifford Jones, was also an active Episcopalian there in the 1920's. He brought an organist to the church later, when he married Audrey Barber, who could play the instrument.

Occasionally, in those early times rectors came from Dallas and Stamford to conduct services in the picturesque "little brown church." Bishop Eugene C. Seaman once traveled by horse and buggy, from Dallas, to hold services. There was no hotel in Spur at the time, so the bishop stayed in the home of Mrs. Kate Senning. On a bad winter day in early times, the story is told of a rector's visit from Stamford, (90 miles away). He and Dr. Jones were the only ones present it seems. So instead of "one to preach and one to pray," they decided to tour the unique town of Spur for inspiration.

Hereford Days

Mrs. Frances Hennen, of Hereford, says that the possibility of "Little Brown's" moving to Hereford was mentioned in 1947. That year she had helped organize St. Thomas Episcopal Mission there. When they were admitted to the district in 1948, Bishop Quarterman offered them a small unused building at Spur to house the mission-if they could raise money to move it. They did.

Hennen tells about the exciting day that "little brown" rolled up highway 385 and was set on a foundation laid by men of that flock. "We celebrated with a picnic on the grounds that day," she says "and on Palm Sunday 1949 our first services were held."

Mrs. Hennen's daughter, Jane Houston, and Terry Kirby were later married there, in the cathedral-like chapel, in the days of "the congregation is invited." Sylvia Phelps Emerick was the first baby baptized during the Hereford era.

Moving To Brownfield

With poignancy, a few years later, Hereford members having outgrown the building, watched the church house take wheels" again and move on to bless others, in Brownfield.

Brownfield Days

The churches Brownfield Days began in 1955, where Episcopalians had been meeting in various small places. Moving wheels called "little Brown" again. Enduring all, it weathered another jolt of change. Imagine the splendor and inspiration as the small brown church, accented in white, moved grandly down highway 385 in a sandstorm or sparkling in the sun. That was a 118 mile trip.

Brown shingles make up the exterior walls of the church, while the high peaked roof is tan. The trim is white. A flat white cross adorns the red arched entrance and another finishing the simple spire high above, seem to lift one's spirit toward God and beckons one to prayer. It is thought by many to be the loveliest sight in Brownfield.

Inside where stained glass windows look down on an ornate solid cherry wood alter, worship comes easy. The beautifully carved and very old alter was fashioned from cherry wood donated by Rev. Willis P. Gerhart. The wood was a valuable possession of Gerhart's, which had been in his family many years. The alter cloth now being used was made by Brownfield ladies of the church. Pews, where worshippers sit or kneel, are the original ones.

In the spring and Easter season, with its color and new life, the "little brown church," (Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd), seems to take on a new glow. Certainly its history is symbolic of the constancy of God's love and peoples' desire to worship him in their own way. Hereby these people of Spur, Hereford and Brownfield have claimed that freedom.

(Mrs. Pollard is a teacher in Brownfield. She grew up in Lamb County, graduated from Amherst High School, and earned a degree at Wayland Baptist College in 1953. She has written feature articles for The Brownfield News and is a member of the West Texas Writers Association).

Bob Wills Day set in Turkey

The 16th Annual Bob Wills Day will be held in Turkey on Saturday, April 25 with the Seventh Annual Reunion of the former Texas Playboys featured.

The event kicks off at noon Friday, April 24, with an Old Fiddlers Contest. A dance at the Bob Will Center will last from 9 til 12 that night. Several former Texas Playboys will be featured.

A parade will begin Saturday's events at 10:30 a.m. in downtown Turkey. Barbeque will be served starting at 11 a.m. at the Bob Wills Center.

Special entertainment will begin at 2:30 p.m. at the old football field east of the center as the largest groups of Texas Playboys will be assembled. The life and music of Bob Wills and Texas Playboys will be featured.

A dance begins at 7 p.m. with Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys entertaining.

All day events will include concession stands, arts and crafts booths, Bob Wills movies, and a tour of the Bob Wills Museum.

The outstanding delegate to the Constitutional Convention was James Madison of Virginia. The Philadelphia proceedings were secret but James Madison kept a diary of the discussions that summer of 1787. The Daughters of the American Revolution suggests that you read a biography of James Madison.

Little Brown Church

This Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd is now situated in Brownfield, but has a traveling history as it formerly made its home in Hereford and Spur. It was born in Spur in the 1920s, moved to Hereford in 1949, then moved to Brownfield in 1955.

Landscaping concept discussed by club

The Hereford Garden Club met recently with Mary Stoy as hostess and Meredith Wilcox as co-hostess. Billee Johnson explained planterly landscaping, which is a new concept.

The difference between landscaping and gardening was discussed. At one time, landscaping referred to lawns and evergreen shrubs while gardening meant growing flowers and vegetables. Yet these terms are outdated as a new kind of planterly landscaping is sweeping the country.

"No longer does such a clearcut distinction exist between the two," said Johnson. "We are now finding masses of flowers and clumps of grasses where they never used to be—among the evergreens and foundation plantings."

Stoy explained that hedges were often used instead of fences for privacy and also provided a good background for flowers and swimming pools.

Jerry Jackson asked the club to consider use of miniature trees and vegetables, which does not necessarily mean dwarf-size. These plants can be used for decoration as well as for food.

Bessie Hill said that the first colonial gardens had lot of evergreens because the first settlers gathered the plants from the woods. They then fenced their chickens in and planted fruit trees and later small cottage gardens. The Texas soil required deep planting and watering in the fall and spring.

Others present were: Mozell Childers, Lucy Fay Cocanougher, Lois Ethridge, Ursalee Jacobsen, Corene Smith, and Elizabeth Wilson.

Energy policy needed

The acid rain problem straining U.S.-Canadian relations will defy solution until America devises a comprehensive national energy policy, according to Houston oilman George P. Mitchell.

"A hodgepodge of government energy regulations has resulted in a system that favors inefficiency, pollution and imports," says Mitchell, president of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp.

"The cleanest fuel of all—natural gas—has been under various price controls and usage restrictions for years, which means that we've had to burn more coal and invest in expensive nuclear plants that are sending electric bills skyrocketing," Mitchell says. "Even after expensive 90 percent scrubbing, coal is nearly 10 times more polluting than natural gas and is a major culprit when it comes to acid rain," he notes.

"Up to now, energy decisions have been made largely on the basis of front-end fuel costs, which tend to favor coal and nuclear power," Mitchell says. "But when you factor in the capital, operating and maintenance costs—including environmental protection and decommissioning expenses—natural gas is the hands-down winner."

Mitchell believes it is vital for the United States to formulate a national energy policy and weighs the costs and benefits—environmental and otherwise—of all energy options and promotes research into alternative, renewable resources.

Mitchell says action on such a policy should include repeal of the Fuel Use Act, which restricts gas usage, an end to the windfall profit tax and imposition of import tariffs on oil, gas and petrochemicals, among other measures.

Wild horse adoption set for May 15-17

Wild horses on the western ranges have become so numerous that their survival and the survival of other wildlife is threatened. To protect the existing wild horse herds, and to keep the wild horse population at a manageable level the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) has been rounding up and offering the excess animals for adoption.

The BLM will be bringing a load of wild horses to the Sweetwater Cattle Auction, Sweetwater May 14-17 for adoption.

The animals will be available for viewing Friday, May 15. The adoption will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Bureau employees will be available to explain the adoption procedures.

To qualify to adopt a horse you must be 18 years of age and able to provide adequate care and facilities for the animals you adopt. Up to four animals may be adopted within a 12-month period by an individual. The adoption fee is $125 per horse. Cash, money orders, cashiers checks or VISA will be accepted.

To find out more about the Adopt-A-Horse Program and how you can apply, contact the Bureau of Land Management, (505)988-6231 or the Liberty Hill Adoption Center at (512)778-6041.

Hospital Costs

Price of an average stay

In 1986, the average patient stayed in the hospital for 6.4 days, at an average cost of $3,840. (These figures include U.S. hospitals that are primarily short-term care facilities and that are not operated by the federal government.)

Crash course necessary for consumer awareness

Every year, thousands of Americans fight cancer with their checkbooks when they make charitable donations to organizations devoted to finding a cure for the disease. In recent years, however, that fight has become increasingly difficult for contributors, as many questionable organizations compete for their cancer dollars and siphon off funds intended for more reputable institutions. For those taking part in this "war against cancer," a crash course in consumer awareness is a necessary weapon.

"Whenever you contribute to a charity, it makes good sense to find out exactly where your money is going and how it will be spent," said Carolyn Andrews, President of the American Cancer Society's Deaf Smith County Unit. "Contributors have a right to expect that their donations will be spent in the most effective and efficient manner."

According to Andrews, a number of "look-alike" cancer organizations have proliferated throughout the nation and use questionable tactics to raise funds—funds that often do not go toward cancer research or patient services. "Very often, these 'look-alikes' will have as part of their names the words, 'American' or 'National' or 'Institute' in order to confuse the giver into thinking that he or she is contributing to the American Cancer Society or the National Cancer Institute," Andrews said.

These groups, she added, often will include surveys or invoices with their solicitations.

Andrews stressed that there are many reputable organizations that sponsor legitimate cancer research and offer services to cancer patients. "We do not wish to discourage people from giving to these organizations," she said. "We just want contributors to be more aware of where their funds are going, and to be wary of fundraising gimmicks."

According to Andrews the following questions should be answered before a contributor writes out a check for a charitable organization. These guidelines are recommended by the American Cancer Society and the National Charitable Information Bureau (NCIB), a charity-rating agency based in New York.

-Are the organization's fundraising efforts cost-effective? The NCIB recommends that a charity spend no more than 30 percent of each dollar on fund raising; according to Andrews, the American Cancer Society spends about 16 percent.

-Does the organization have an annual report, including an independent audit by certified public accountants? This report will tell the consumer exactly how much of each dollar is spent on research, fund raising, and other costs.

-What are the organization's administrative costs? The NCIB says these costs should not exceed 15 percent of the budget. The American Cancer Society spends about 10 percent in this area.

-Does the group have an identifiable management and board? For health care charities, the board should have several members who are medical and scientific professionals. According to Andrews, about half of the Society's board members are physicians and scientists.

-Does the group meet the standards imposed by the NCIB?

In addition, the giver should know whether the organization's work is well-respected in its field. According to Andrews, the American Cancer Society is the oldest and largest private nonprofit cancer organization in the country. "We rely on our annual Cancer Crusade for about 70 percent of our funds. We receive no money from the government." Last year, the Society spent more than $78 million to support cancer research throughout the nation.

The only U.S. president buried in Washington, D.C., is Woodrow Wilson.

Names in the News

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Tennis star Chris Evert showed up two days early to complete her divorce from British tennis pro John Lloyd.

Her appointment had been set for Thursday but she went to Broward Circuit Judge Joseph Price's office Tuesday morning accompanied by her lawyer and a residency witness, said judicial assistant Bunny Costantino.

"They had a waiver from Mr. Lloyd," and the business was completed in about five minutes, Ms. Costantino said.

Bob Kain, agent for Evert, said the financial agreement at the end of the eight-year marriage is being kept confidential.

"Chris Evert Lloyd has gone back to her maiden name," he said in a statement. "Both parties are very amicable."

HOUSTON (AP) — Country singer Mickey Gilley has filed suit against his longtime business partner seeking to strip the "Gilley" name from the nightclub made famous in the movie "Urban Cowboy."

The lawsuit filed Tuesday in state District Court against Sherwood Cryer, owner of Gilley's Club in Pasadena, a Houston suburb, also seeks 50 percent of Gilley's Enterprises' assets. A hearing was set for May 5.

"I just can't get along with him anymore," Gilley told The Houston Post from Reno, Nev. "We disagree on everything."

Cryer said that Gilley still works for him under a management contract.

"He just wants to take his $2 million (that Gilley makes on the road each year) and high-roll with it, and he's determined to break up everything we've spent all these years building up. He's not going to do it, because I'm going to fight him on it," Cryer said.

The two teamed up in the 1970s and Cryer dubbed the nightclub Gilley's, made famous in the 1980 movie starring John Travolta.

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Manilow's former producer alleges in a lawsuit that the singer owes him $1.2 million from a settlement when they broke their partnership.

The lawsuit by Ron Dante asks for $2 million in compensatory damages and $1 million in punitive damages, attorney Leonard Marks, the producer's lawyer, said Tuesday.

Dante was Manilow's producer for seven years when Manilow broke off their long-term contract in 1980, Marks said.

Manilow's attorney, Sanford Frankel, declined comment on the suit, which was filed Monday.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randy Travis, who won four trophies in the Academy of Country Music Awards, says he had early inspiration from George Jones, Hank Williams, Merle Haggard and Lefty Frizzell.

"I started singing in clubs when I was 14," he said. "I was singing songs sung by the traditionalists. They sing with emotion and soul."

Travis last week was given "Hat" trophies for best male vocalist, best song and single record of the year for "On The Other Hand," and best album for "Storms of Life," the fastest million-seller in country music history.

He isn't forgetting that in 1984 he was a dish-washer and part-time singer in a Nashville club, and says that at age 27 he wonders what "got into me" during his teen years.

"I was into drinking, drugs and fighting," he said.

LONDON (AP) — Rolling Stones bass guitarist Bill Wyman says there have been "many gross lies and so many libelous things" written about his three-year relationship with 16-year-old Mandy Smith, who he said is just a friend.

"It's disgusting, but I have not bothered to sue," the 50-year-old Wyman said. "They have written rubbish about the Stones since 1963. You get used to it."

Asked about his relationship with Miss Smith, who is building a career as a pop singer and model, Wyman said, "We are great friends. We always have been. We never were anything else."

Wyman made his comments Tuesday as he announced plans to give teen-agers with a musical itch a chance to use a 48-track mobile recording studio as it tours Britain.

PARIS, Tenn. (AP) — Hank Williams Jr. will be grand marshal of the parade April 24 at the annual "world's biggest fish fry."

Williams, of Paris, was voted entertainer of the year last week at the nationally televised Academy of Country Music awards.

"I'm very proud to be asked to be grand marshal," he said Tuesday, a day after returning from deep-sea fishing in Mexico. "Besides, I get more fish this way."

Williams, the son of a country music legend, is known for his hits "Mind Your Own Business," "All My Rowdy Friends Are Coming Over Tonight" and "Family Tradition."

Accent on Health

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) has joined other agencies and associations nationwide in observing National Cancer Control Month in April.

President Ronald Reagan proclaimed the observance to draw public attention toward a better understanding of cancer, its prevention and treatment.

In Texas, TDH and the American Cancer Society are assisting local public awareness programs, emphasizing the dangers and detection of breast cancer in women, cancer attributed to tobacco use, cancer screening among older adults, and other programs.

One recent statewide public information campaign, conducted primarily through local television stations and newspapers, attracted some 108,000 responses from persons concerned about breast cancer. Part of the campaign was low-cost examinations and mammograms conducted in some metropolitan areas.

In addition, TDH's Adult Health Program has begun a pilot project to teach cancer preventive nutrition for black adults in East Texas (Wood County).

At the heart of TDH's programs to prevent cancer is its Cancer Registry, which compiles records from Texas hospitals of the many factors involved in cancer incidence. Analysis of registry data since 1976 has begun to show characteristics of the more than 100 types of cancer suffered by Texans. Such information includes demographics, age, ethnic origin, previous illnesses, types of treatment and other pertinent facts that may indicate why some people are more at risk than others. An example of the registry's finding is that Hispanics appear to have a higher incidence of stomach, liver, and gallbladder than do Anglos. Such facts help researchers in their quest for specific causes of the diseases.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health, said, "The combined efforts to prevent cancer have come a long way in recent years. We are steadily learning some of the specifics about how cancer occurs and which Texans are likely to have it. In doing so, we are able to help the public better understand ways to avoid the second most common cause of death in the state."

TYPING AT HOME

NEW YORK (AP) — If you are a good typist you can work at home and earn a decent salary, but you must remember you are a "service" and consider what that service entails.

Family Circle magazine says your customers will be paying for error-free pages and expect you to know proper business procedures, grammar, style and spelling. If you have those basics down, here are some tips to help you get started.

— Buy or rent a good, modern electric typewriter. The rental cost will be a tax deduction.

— Consider specializing. Potential clients often find it easier to trust someone who specializes in the kind of work they need to have typed.

Dodgers claim Astros' pitcher was scuffing the ball

Scott hurls shutout over Los Angeles, 4-0

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Dodgers in the dugout kept grabbing off foul balls and meticulously examining them for Mike Scott markings.

That was, however, the only way the Dodgers were able to get ahold of anything the Houston Astros' splitter fastball artist threw Wednesday night.

Scott held Los Angeles to one hit and one walk, while striking out as the Astros downed the Dodgers 4-0.

Scott, off to a 2-0 start with a pair of victories over Los Angeles, wasn't bothered by the Dodgers' checking the ball and complaining to the umpire.

"It doesn't matter to me, but it just makes the game longer," he said.

Dodger pitcher Rick Honeycutt, who wasn't in the game, examined the ball a number of times after fouls.

"The scuff marks (on the balls) were all identical," Honeycutt said. "I don't know what grade of sandpaper he (Scott) was using, but it was a finer grade."

Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda, meanwhile, didn't want to downplay the fine pitching performance by Scott.

"He pitched a heckuva game; you can't do anything about that one. The guy was too tough for us," Lasorda said.

"We thought a lot of balls may have been sanded up," added the Dodger manager, who said he collected about 12 balls and they were all scuffed on about the same spot.

"But that's not the reason he beat us. I'm not using that as an excuse. I don't want to take anything away from the guy ... He certainly knows how to pitch."

Scott gave up just a single to Mariano Duncan, who hit a sharp liner to left-center in the third inning, and a walk to Mike Marshall in the fourth.

Duncan stole second, but was stranded there as Scott quickly ended the inning.

Billy Hatcher, meanwhile, provided the bulk of the Astros' hitting as he continued his strong start. Hatcher homered, doubled and singled to account for half the Houston runs. He's hit safely in all nine of the Astros' games.

His solo homer in the fourth off Alejandro Pena, 0-1, gave Scott all he needed as the Astros ran their record to 7-2, equalling the best starts in the club's history — in 1972 and 1980.

"I hope we keep it up and I keep it up," said Hatcher, who is hitting .472 so far with 17 hits in 36 at-bats.

"This is the best start I've ever had, and my confidence just keeps building."

While virtually everyone else at Dodger Stadium was impressed by Scott's outing, Houston catcher Alan Ashby said the right-hander wasn't as dominating as he was at the end of last season, when he wound up with an 18-10 record that included a no-hitter against San Francisco Sept. 25.

"I don't think he's as overpowering now as he was then," Ashby said. "Stuff-wise, this game didn't compare to his no-hitter."

"He just had them hitting the ball at people the whole game this time. But the results were outstanding. He's still mighty good right now and I think he'll get even better as the season goes on."

Houston Manager Hal Lanier chuckled when told that Ashby thought Scott wasn't overpowering.

"He looked pretty overpowering to me," Lanier said. "He gave up one hit, retired 15 in a row, was in complete command of all of his pitches.

"I don't know how he could have been any better unless, of course, he had pitched a no-hitter."

Scott, who beat the Dodgers 4-3 in the season opener, said a fast start was important to him this season.

"My one goal I had when I went into spring training was to have a decent start this season," he said. "As long as I've played, I've never gotten off to a very good start. I had a terrible start last year."

He pitched against the Dodgers with just three days' rest, one less than usual, since Houston has a day off today.

The one-hitter was the first thrown against the Dodgers since Dave Dravecky of San Diego did it on July 30, 1984.

Giants 1, Padres 0

While San Francisco continued its torrid start behind the three-hit pitching of Kelly Downs and a home run by Candy Malonado, the Padres continued to falter.

San Diego, 1-8, is off to the worst start in the 19-year history of the franchise. Counting spring training games, the Padres have won only once since March 27 and have lost 16 of 17 since then.

The Giants improved their record to 8-2, their best start since 1979, and moved into first place in the NL West.

Downs, 1-0, outlasted Padres starter Storm Davis, 0-1, who allowed only four hits in eight innings. Downs struck out seven and walked one.

Mets 4, Phillies 1

The Mets used the long ball and stingy pitching by Sid Fernandez, David Cone and Doug Sisk. Gary Carter and Darryl Strawberry hit consecutive home runs in the seventh inning off Kent Tekulve to break open a tight game. Strawberry has hit in all seven Mets games, including four home runs and 11 RBI.

Fernandez, 2-0, worked six innings, giving up two hits, walking five and striking out five.

Pirates 3, Cubs 1

After Chicago's Jody Davis homered in the ninth inning to tie the game, the visiting Pirates came right back with two runs in the 10th to win it. Andy Van Slyke led off the 10th with a single, went to third on a single by Johnny Ray and scored on Jim Morrison's single to center. A balk by reliever Les Lancaster scored Ray with the third Pirates run.

Pittsburgh starter Rick Reuschel had a three-hit shutout when Manager Jim Leyland pinch hit for him in the ninth. Reliever Don Robinson, 2-0, gave up the game-tying home run to Davis.

Braves 4, Reds 3

Braves shortstop Andres Thomas, hit a three-run homer and started four double plays. Thomas connected for his first home run of the season in the third inning off Reds starter Tom Browning, 1-1, following a walk to Glenn Hubbard and a single by Dion James.

The decisive run came in the sixth when Hubbard scored Ted Simmons from third on a squeeze bunt.

CORRECTION

In an article Wednesday announcing the employment of a new girls' basketball coach at Hereford High School, The Brand erroneously reported that the contract of Coach Larry Sowers was not renewed by the board.

This is incorrect. Sowers resigned his position several days after the close of the basketball season. The resignation is effective at the end of the school year. The Brand apologizes to Mr. Sowers for this misstatement.

Frank Belcher of Groom was selected Wednesday as the new girls' basketball coach and he will assume the position at the start of the new school year.

Rangers suffer 7th defeat in 8 games

By The Associated Press

In 1982, as director of baseball operations for the New York Mets, Lou Gorman fell in love with a young pitcher drafted off the University of Central Arkansas campus and sent to the minor leagues to develop as a relief pitcher.

Now they're together at last, Gorman as general manager of the Boston Red Sox and Wes Gardner healthy and ready for a key role in the bullpen.

Gardner, who pitched just one inning last April before being sidelined for the season with a torn cartilage in his right shoulder, returned his first dividend to the Red Sox on Wednesday, striking out seven in three innings in Boston's 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers.

With Gorman calling Boston shots, Gardner was acquired with Calvin Schiraldi in a multi-player deal which sent southpaw Bobby Ojeda to the Mets after the 1985 season. Schiraldi blossomed unexpectedly into an outstanding short reliever in 1986, but, with Gardner disabled, the Red Sox appeared to have come out on the short end of the trade.

"It hurt not having him, but we felt sure he could come back, the same as Roger Clemens did from similar surgery," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "The key was patience. We had to bring him along slowly this spring. Now, hopefully, this was the real Wes Gardner out there today."

While McNamara and the Red Sox remained confident, skeptics wondered if Gardner would ever be the same again as he was pounded in spring training.

McNamara and Gorman were ready to field any criticism. They moved Bob Stanley, who owns the Boston club record of 123 saves, back into the starting rotation after six years in the bullpen.

The strategy didn't look good when Gardner lost the second game of the season in Milwaukee last week, then was whacked hard by Toronto on Saturday.

But after Evans put Boston ahead by one run with the third grand slam of his career, McNamara didn't hesitate to go to Gardner after Texas put runners on second and third on a walk and an error with none out against starter Bruce Hurst.

On just 14 pitches, Gardner struck out Pete Incaviglia, Larry Parrish and Don Slaught. Gardner was nicked for an infield hit by Odibe McDowell to start the eighth, then struck out two of the next three batters. He retired the side in order in the ninth, two on strikeouts.

Gardner, noted mainly as a sinker ball pitcher, relied mostly on his fast ball, especially the cross-seamer, as he dazzled the Rangers on 40 pitches, 28 for strikes.

The Red Sox, with a 4-4 record after losing their first three games, open a four-game series with the Toronto Blue Jays tonight, sending Clemens, 0-1, to the mound against southpaw Jimmy Key, 2-0.

The Rangers, whose 1-7 start equals their worst in club history, hit the road for Milwaukee.

Brewers 7, Orioles 0

After pitching the first no-hitter in Brewers history, 22-year-old Juan Nieves said he was going to try to relax on the plane back to Milwaukee with a good Spanish novel.

But while Nieves and his teammates relax and enjoy their club-record 9-0 start, the rest of the American League is probably wondering when the Brewers amazing start will end.

The Brewers equalled the third best start in American League history Wednesday night with a 7-0 victory over Baltimore, a no-hitter that was capped by a brilliant diving catch for the final out by Milwaukee centerfielder Robin Yount.

"People think this start is a joke," said Nieves, who became the youngest pitcher in 15 years to hurl a no-hitter. "But we are for real and this is just a taste of what is to come."

We are in a tough division and we're going to go out and go after people."

Burt Hooton threw a no-hitter for the Chicago Cubs against Philadelphia on April 16, 1972 at the age of 22 years, 2 months, 9 days. Nieves is 22 years, 3 months, 10 days. The youngest pitcher to hurl a no-hitter was Nick Maddox of Pittsburgh who did it against Brooklyn on Sept. 20, 1907 at the age of 20 years, 10 months, 11 days.

Brewers leftfielder Jim Pacione, who had his first major-league hit and made a diving catch to rob Murray of a hit in the second, said, "This whole year has just been unbelievable. No one expected us to be playing this well. We're just playing with so much confidence right now."

"I thought I had a mediocre fastball and my slider was awful. After we got a 3-0 lead in the seventh I thought, 'Well I'll just go after them now,'" said Nieves, who struck out seven, walked five and threw 128 pitches.

The no-hitter was the first in the major leagues since Houston's Mike Scott clinched the NL West title on Sept. 25 last season, 2-0 over San Francisco. It was the first in the AL since Chicago's Joe Cowley defeated California 7-1 on Sept. 19 last season.

Royals 2, Tigers 1

Kevin Seitzer might not have a Heisman Trophy at home but he's battling Bo Jackson for the title of Kansas City's outstanding rookie.

The first baseman drove in both runs Wednesday night as the Royals beat the Detroit Tigers 2-1 and Seitzer raised his average to .452, the same mark as Jackson.

"I loved it last night when Bo hit the two home runs and everybody was over there talking to him and I could just go on and do my thing and not worry about it," Seitzer said. "If I don't have to do any talking, that's just more time I have to relax and concentrate on the game."

Jackson, the running back who was the NFL's No. 1 draft choice in 1986, drove in seven runs Tuesday against the Tigers, but Wednesday was Seitzer's turn at glory.

"Seitzer did it again," Royals Manager Billy Gardner said. "He sure has been swinging the bat good. He knows what to do with the bat in any situation."

Kansas City also has to be happy with the 1987 start of Bret Saberhagen, 2-0, who went 7-12 last year. Saberhagen allowed six hits and struck out two in eight innings and Bud Black pitched the ninth.

Twins 5, Athletics 2

Mike Smithson had a no-hitter for six innings and the Twins remained atop the AL West with a 7-2 record.

Smithson, 2-0, wound up with a four-hitter. The no-hitter was broken up by Carney Lansford leading off the seventh inning with a double to extend his hitting streak to nine games.

Reardon earned his third save by getting the final out.

Lansford scored on Dwayne Murphy's two-out double and Oakland added a run in the eighth on an RBI double by Mike Davis.

The Twins scored their first run off Dave Stewart, 0-2, in the third on the first of two RBI singles by Kirby Puckett. Tom Nieto also had two RBI for Minnesota.

Angels 4, Mariners 0

Kirk McCaskill, 2-0, faced 29 batters, struck out nine and walked one and allowed four single.

Brian Downing led off the game with a home run for the third time this season and second consecutive game.

Yankees 4, Indians 3

Dave Winfield's two-run single capped a three-run seventh for the Yankees as the Indians lost their sixth straight.

Cleveland starter Scott Bailes took a four-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the seventh. He walked Joel Skinner, and one out later, Bailes went 2-0 on Rickey Henderson before reliever Tom Waddell, 0-1, took over and completed the walk.

A single by Willie Randolph loaded the bases and brought in Greg Swindell. Don Mattingly lined out to shortstop Julio Franco, but Franco overthrew second baseman Tony Bernazard trying for a double play and the error allowed Skinner to score.

Rick Rhoden evened his record at 1-1.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 0

Jose DeLeon extended his scoreless streak to 14 1-3 innings as he and Ray Searage combined on a four-hitter to snap the White Sox' four-game losing streak.

DeLeon, 2-0, allowed three hits and struck out nine in 7 2-3 innings, while Tim Lulett got three hits and drove in four runs, two in the fourth with a double and two in the sixth with a single.

Dallas beats Houston

113-107 in 'Lone Star War'

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks and Houston Rockets reiterated their distaste for each other again with a fist-flying, body-banging NBA game.

Two players were ejected for fighting and another suffered a cut over his eye in the Mavericks' "Lone Star NBA War" 113-107 victory before a noisy sellout crowd of 17,007 fans in Reunion Arena Wednesday night.

Houston gets the homecourt advantage on Friday night when they do it all again at The Summit.

Dallas has already clinched a playoff berth and the Midwest Division title. Houston is in the playoffs but the Rockets' position hasn't been determined.

"It should be another exciting game," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta.

"This game had enough fire and enthusiasm where the fans got their money's worth," said Houston Coach Bill Fitch. "In the old days, you might not have had this kind of a game at this stage of the season."

Mavericks' guard Derek Harper scored a career-high 31 points in the first meeting between the two teams since Motta accused Fitch of tanking games to avoid the Los Angeles Lakers as long as possible in the playoffs.

Fitch replied by calling Motta some unkind names.

Motta was suspended a game by the NBA office for the statement.

"It was a crazy game," Harper said. "The intensity came from the words the coaches exchanged. That's why we were so emotional."

Harper said he was proud of Al Wood for standing his ground in an exchange of punches with Houston's

Steve Harris in the second period that cleared both benches.

"I told Al Wood he did a good job," Harper said. "I like to see that kind of stuff. I wished I had been in it."

Wood and Harris were ejected from the game at 5:22 in the second period for exchanging punches. Both benches emptied but none of the blows landed. The players will get automatic fines from the NBA office.

Motta downplayed the incident. "I thought it was a very dull game," Motta said. "I expected some real excitement."

Fitch said little about the flying punches.

"There were a few short tempers out there but it wasn't much," Fitch said. "It's an intense series. I thought Dallas' bench played great and Harper really hurt us. We'll try to get them back when they come to our place Friday night."

Houston's Jim Petersen also missed most of the first half when he suffered a cut over his left eyebrow from a flying elbow.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 24 points and Allen Leavell scored 21 points to pace the Rockets.

Harper was backed by Mark Aguirre who had 22 points and James Donaldson who collected 15 rebounds.

"The crowd was in the game from the beginning," Donaldson said. "They were booing the Rockets during the introductions and that started the tempo our way."

"It was a good physical game and just the way I like playing the game," said Dallas' Bill Wennington.

Houston's Robert Reid said the Mavs "are more physical now than they used to be because of Donaldson. He's a force to be reckoned with in the middle."

Lyng says Americans have best meat inspection system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng says he has witnessed some bitter battles over meat inspection but that he is convinced American consumers have the best inspection system in the world.

After Congress tightened federal meat and poultry inspection laws in the late 1960s, Lyng said it was his job as an assistant secretary of agriculture in the early years of the Nixon administration to put the new rules into effect.

The meat industry "didn't like me a damn" in those years, Lyng said Thursday. But after he left the Agriculture Department the industry-supported American Meat Institute hired Lyng as its president, a job he held for seven years.

Lyng, in a feisty mood, told a meeting of the National Cattlemen's Association that he was upset by recent reports of widespread salmonella in the nation's poultry supply.

"It's damned unfair to be so critical of our system," Lyng said. "And it's being done by people that don't really make an effort to understand what the system's about."

He told the cattlemen that there have been "some tremendously unfair and non-factual attacks" on federal inspection recently.

Lyng singled out a CBS News television report on "60 Minutes" last Sunday night about poultry inspection deficiencies and how salmonella can result from hurried, unsanitary conditions in slaughter plants.

The USDA has said that nearly four of every 10 chickens reaching consumers is contaminated by salmonella, a group of common food poisoning organisms.

Other news accounts also have focused on the salmonella problem in poultry. The Senate Agriculture Committee has scheduled hearings later this month on USDA's inspection program, and the National Academy of Sciences is expected to release a report on the health-risk aspects of federal poultry inspection.

The Government Accountability Project, which describes itself as "a Washington, D.C.-based whistleblower support group," this week sent Lyng an open letter signed by current or former USDA inspectors, who charged that recent increases in food poisoning are tied to poor inspection procedures.

"It's not enough for me to say that the system is strong and well and operating very effectively. I can say that over and over again, but ... I'll make no headlines with that kind of statement," Lyng said.

He added: "I think we've got the finest meat and poultry inspection system that exists in the world."

Lyng said people who make charges that salmonella can be eliminated by "proper care" in plants should know better. It can be minimized, he said, but salmonella is endemic, a part of the poultry business.

"Anybody who runs a meat or poultry plant knows that we're pretty tough on the efforts to keep salmonella at a minimum," he said.

At around $10 billion

Texas cash receipts have stabilized

COLLEGE STATION — Texas cash receipts from farm and ranch production have remained around the $10 billion level the past few years and farm income has stabilized despite a poor agricultural economy. Educational programs of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, have played a big role in this effort, and adequate funding for the agency is essential if Texas agriculture is to remain a viable force in the state's economy.

"We are continuing to impact farmers and ranchers so that they can survive financially in this time of tight profit margins," says Dr. Zerle

L. Carpenter, Extension Service director. "Our educational efforts are aimed at increasing production efficiency by reducing operating costs.

"We are directing many of our resources to helping agricultural producers make a living and thus contribute to the Texas economy," Carpenter points out. "A strong Texas agriculture is paramount to our state's economy; it is the solution to many of our economic woes. Because the Extension Service can help boost the economy, it is an investment of state revenue that offers a substantial payoff."

Carpenter lists a few of the major impacts the Extension Service has had on Texas crop production during the past few years:

- Blackland cotton farmers have increased net returns by almost $50 per acre through improved production practices, including pest management.
- Cotton farmers in the El Paso Valley saved more than $1.7 million on pink bollworm control.
- Peanut producers increased yields 17 to 35 bushels per acre by following recommended production practices, increasing net returns by almost $100 per acre.
- Wheat leaf rust control practices increased yields 15 to 40 bushels per acre and returned $2 to $2.50 for every $1 invested.

- Cotton farmers in the Rio Grande Valley increased net income by $270 per acre through a cultural program to control boll weevils for a regional impact of more than $31 million.
- A cotton bollworm management program in the High Plains saved farmers about 32 pounds of lint per acre for an overall impact of $7.5 million.
- A boll weevil suppression program in the High Plains increased farmers' net profits by $27 million.
- Cotton producers in the Coastal Bend region increased yields by 200 pounds per acre with new varieties and reduced insect control costs about $15 per acre for a savings of some $2.5 million.

- Improved use of soil insecticides saved Coastal Bend corn and sorghum growers about $9 per acre for a total increase of almost $2 million dollars.
- Effective mite control saved High Plains corn growers about $6.5 million a year.
- A delayed uniform planting program to suppress boll weevils in the Rolling Plains increased net profits in cotton producers by $3.5 to $5.5 million annually.

"The Extension Service has played a major role in these kinds of efforts to help producers reduce their costs and thus add to their profit margin," Carpenter points out. "Given adequate resources, such educational programs can continue to attack problem areas so as to boost the agricultural industry and the state's economy."

customer. Exports to Japan are projected at about the same level for 1987 barring any retaliatory action."

The trade conflict comes at a particularly bad time for U.S. agriculture, notes the economist. Struggling to escape the downturn in exports of the past few years, many analysts were hoping for a modest recovery in volume and a bottoming out in export value. More importantly, some sources were reporting moves by the Japanese to increase access to markets for agricultural products.

"Indications are that the Japanese will make some move to address the concerns of the U.S. before the April 17 deadline," says Paggi. "Hopefully, a major confrontation will be

Agriculture could be loser if Japan retaliates against trade proposal

COLLEGE STATION — Texas and U.S. agriculture could be the big loser if the Japanese retaliate against proposed trade sanctions announced last Friday by the Reagan Administration.

The sanctions, to be effective April 17, impose a 100 percent tariff on some $300 million worth of imports which either contain or were manufactured by Japanese firms that produce semi-conductors, primarily television sets, radios, tape players and other electronic products.

"If Japan retaliates, U.S. agricultural products would be a likely target," points out Dr. Mickey Paggi, marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. "In 1986 Japan imported some $5.1 billion in U.S. agricultural products, by far our number one predatory pricing in the semiconductor market, and that an agreement to allow U.S. firms greater access to Japanese markets has not been honored.

Currently, Japanese microchips are selling abroad at about 60 percent less than their domestic price. A target of 20 percent market share for U.S. firms was set last summer, but the current U.S. market share remains around 8.5 percent.

The tariffs on Japanese imports are being imposed for two main reasons, notes Paggi. The U.S. charges that the Japanese have failed to live up to terms of an agreement which was to have prevented avoided. If not, agricultural interests should brace for a possible shock from our largest customer.

"As trade legislation continues to be formulated in Congress, agricultural interests will have to speak loud and often to keep other industry groups from dominating the discussions," emphasizes the economist. "Otherwise, the potential for conflict over non-agricultural trade issues will likely result in increased damage to agricultural trade."

The tariffs on Japanese imports are being imposed for two main reasons, notes Paggi. The U.S. charges that the Japanese have failed to live up to terms of an agreement which was to have prevented

Here's How Roundup Beats Burndown Herbicides for CRP Acres

ROUNDUP HERBICIDE	BURNBACK HERBICIDES (CYCLONE, PARAQUAT)	ROUNDUP HERBICIDE	BURNBACK HERBICIDES (CYCLONE, PARAQUAT)	ROUNDUP AFTER GRASSES PLANTED	BURNBACK HERBICIDES AFTER GRASSES PLANTED
16 OZ/A	1 QT/A	1 WEEK LATER		3-5 WEEKS LATER
Roundup herbicide can be applied at all growing stages to kill roots and all. With Roundup you can spray and plant when you want.	With Cyclone herbicide you have to wait for boot stage before you spray. Much moisture and nutrients are already wasted.	Roundup translocates throughout the plant to control roots & stop growth within 48 hours. With Roundup you won't have regrowth to compete with emerged grasses.	Cyclone burns down tops but may not kill the roots.	Roundup your one pass herbicide kills roots and all CRP grasses have the best opportunity to emerge and get off to a good start without competition from wheat regrowth.	With burn back only herbicides, wheat may regrow to compete with emerging grasses. No broadcast herbicide can selectively kill wheat regrowth in CRP grasses. You could run the risk of costly replanting.

Use 16 oz./acre of Roundup with 17 lbs. of ammonium sulfate per 100 gals of spray solution plus non-ionic surfactant at 0.5%-1.0% by total spray volume

ROUNDUP HELPS GET PLANTED GRASSES OFF TO THE BEST POSSIBLE START.

- Roundup controls without regrowth in one application
- Roundup gives you flexibility to spray and plant when you want
- Proven performance... performance Monsanto stands behind
- Low 16 oz./acre rate
- New lower price
- Low toxicity, excellent environmental & handling characteristics, not a restricted use product
- Broad spectrum control of many labelled broadleaves & grasses
- Leaves cover crop residue to protect soil & CRP grasses

CLASSIFIED ADS
Classified advertising rates are based on cents a word for first insertion ($2.00 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN.
1 day per word	.14	2.00
2 days per word	.24	4.00
3 days per word	.34	6.00
4 days per word	.44	8.00
5th day FREE

Ten days (2 free) is $15.80 minimum; 15 days (3 free) is $23.80 minimum; one month is $31.80 minimum.

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY
Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines—those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing all capital letters. Rates are $3.95 per column inch; $3.25 an inch for additional insertions.

LEGALIS
Ad rates for legal notices are 14 cents per word first insertion, 10 cents per word for additional insertions.

ERRORS
Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.
