Other state reps review battles with DOE projects

By JERI SHIRE
Managing Editor

A Hereford minister transplanted to Texas from the Bronx said his back hurt on Friday night after six speakers from other states told of their experiences with Department of Energy projects. The speaker admonished that the DOE trail of broken promises has come to Texas.

Er Joe Egan was among approximately 180 citizens who heard from the speaker Friday evening at the Hereford Community Center.

Each told of DOE mishaps and deceptions and accused the community to fight in a pro-DOE event.

Environmental hazards with major concerns, the speaker shared with Texans, but the primary worry from all was not that DOE projects would be built, but that the Department of Energy would pay for site characterization of the construction of a nuclear waste repository.

Just as they did in Texas, what they did in Nevada, said Bob Fulkerson, director of the Nevada in that state. Fulkerson said that repeatedly the DOE denies any wrongdoing, even in cases where police have ruled an error of their part.

Some of the biggest battles from Nevada concern nuclear testing which is done there, Fulkerson said when DOE professor first proposed the site for testing hearings were held in Salt Lake City, Utah, and in Maryland. When testing was begun, Fulkerson said radio broadcasts would warn people downwind to go inside, but with a disclaimer that nothing was wrong. Fulkerson said that now radiation levels in these areas of Utah, Nevada and Arizona are higher and that cases of cancer, leukemia and birth defects are greater.

DOE is the only funding for independent studies in Nevada, he reported.

Attorney Barbara Johnson from the Miramas Estero Interest Research Group, empathized with Texans that the DOE seems to be picking prime farmland. Several of the eight sites considered for state wide prime agricultural lands what he termed as a fine result to injury during a farm crisis. One site considered was 10 miles from the headwaters of the Mississippi River.

She said residents in Minnesota were basically opposed to having a waste for the same reasons opponents in Texas are. Availability of money for the waste should be better method, she said, versus land contamination of ground water. She said more research needs to be done for waste storage.

Although Minnesota was out of the picture, she said, for a second opportunity, she noted that the DOE is now planning work on a grant of about $100 million north of the border.

Best suggestions for fighting DOE in Texas was to work for a moratorium for nuclear energy and to sue as many political buddies as possible for the DOE.

Bearessner of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense League said DOE's acceptance is rampant in his lack in transportation centers.

He said the DOE advertises that the storage is of solid waste. But the transport cask used has a space between the fuel and cladding which holds gases. The casks, he said, have safety valves which are set off by puls or heat to release the gas. Santha Latis has published studies on the casks and warns that if even 1 percent of the gas emitted in an urban area, their health problems would increase.

He noted that transportation would be a concern even before the repository shipments begin because the 100 lbs. of spent fuel waste which is legally allowed for testing at a site equals 200 rig loads.

Oak Ridge, Tenn., is not comparable to Hereford, Texas, despite what the DOE would like Texans to believe, says Louise Gorenflo.

Her town in Tennessee, she said, is the only place in the world which is considered for a temporary dumpsite for high level nuclear waste.

That attitude is because 77 percent of the population works for DOE or contra for Martin Marietta and 87 percent of the property is owned by DOE, Gorenflo reported. The city is dependent on DOE for jobs and is addicted to DOE funding.

With the affection the town has for the government projects comes the highest property tax in the state because DOE doesn't pay property tax, she said. Yet the city has never criticized DOE.

Annie Brinklow said Washington State farmers and citizens suspicious of emissions from the many nuclear projects in her state are beginning to become less tolerant of the DOE. A statewide referendum last November showed a clear cut opposition to the nuclear waste repository, she said.

"We've had little success in getting DOE to tell us the truth about any of it," she said. "We know that we don't

From Oak Ridge

Louise Gorenflo told local repository opponents Friday night that Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Hereford were not as similar as the Department of Energy would like it to be believed. She was one of a panel of out-of-state activists who had had dealings with DOE.

Hispanics defeating unity by separation, caller says

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Following recent articles in a Dallas newspaper concerning the racial situation in Hereford, and in particular the alleged discrimination of anglos against the Hispanic community, Brand staff members received numerous telephone calls from people in the Hispanic community who took exception to the viewpoint expressed in the Dallas paper. One caller said, "I am glad those drug dealers are off the streets. I don't care what color they are."

After taking many phone calls expressing a different viewpoint than the out of town paper gave, we agreed to meet with one of the callers for a more extended interview on some of the subjects of concern.

Over a kitchen table in the home where she completed the interview, the aged woman had a friend join her as she shared points and views her opinions on the differences and similarities of the Hispanic and Anglo people of our town. Her views as expressed here reflect many of those we received from other members of the Hispanic community.

Q: Do you feel that the white population in Hereford has discriminated against you or your family?

A: No, they have worked with us and helped us. My concern is the Spanish people who try to create a problem where there is none.

Q: Which Spanish people?

A: What I hate is these Spanish people who want to separate us.

Q: Separation in what way?

A: I'm completely against those programs which divide the Anglos from the Spanish. We wanted some leading Spanish people to help us become a part of the community and then they just want us to start our own groups. I want to be involved with everyone. I don't just want to be in a group of Spanish.

Q: What groups are you referring to?

A: Well, they started their own chamber of commerce, separate churches of the same faith, and even want to start separate Boy Scout troops. We should all be in these things together. We need to get the doors and join together to support our community.

Q: What effect do you think starting separate groups has had?

A: I really feel like the Mexicans are putting themselves down, when they start their own organization rather than join the already established group. We are telling ourselves that we are different and we are teaching our children that they are different and that is not right.

Q: What about the migrant workers, how do you feel about them?

A: Good families that live here all the time can't get help when they need it, but migrants come in and expect everything and get everything.

Through major powers' agreement

Foreign exchange markets quiet

NEW YORK (AP) — The major industrial powers' agreement to work for stability in currency rates has helped quiet the foreign exchange markets, even in the face of events that normally might depress the dollar.

Yet some analysts say that even without central bank support of the dollar, recent economic and political events would not have generated enough force to pull the currency down from its recent, narrow trading range.

Finance ministers of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France and Canada indicated at their Paris meeting a week ago that they were ready to intervene in the currency markets to stabilize exchange rates at roughly current levels.

At the same time, Japan and West Germany agreed to take measures aimed at stimulating their economies, thus presumably increasing demand for foreign products and shrinking their big trade surpluses.

Negative news about the U.S. economy and a renewal of publicity over Third World debt problems gave traders ample opportunity to test the accord.

For example, Brazil announced late on Feb. 20 that it indefinitely would halt payments on $67 billion in commercial debt.

U.S. banks hold a $23 billion chunk of Brazil's $108 billion total foreign debt, and any significant halt in payments could wreak havoc with the balance sheets of some major banks. That in turn would tend to weaken the dollar, if investors fled the currency on concerns over the potential impact on the U.S. financial system.

In addition, the U.S. government and trade groups pumped out a stream of reports indicating the nation's economy was showing no signs of a sustained upturn.

Separate reports indicated that orders to U.S. factories for durable goods plunged 7.5 percent in January, the biggest drop in almost seven years, and sales of existing homes plunged 14.5 percent in January after spurring higher in December.

A weak economy increases the chances of low interest rates, which reduces the attractiveness of returns on dollar-denominated assets.

More importantly, the U.S. trade deficit for January jumped to $14.78 billion from $10.66 billion the previous month, with Japan holding the biggest surplus in trade with the United States.

A lower dollar has been a key weapon in the Reagan administration's attempts to shrink the U.S. trade imbalance. The markets often react to poor trade figures by pressuring the dollar lower in speculation that the Federal Reserve Bank will attempt to depress the currency.

"These are things that should be weighing very heavily on the dollar," said Lawrence L. Kreicher, an economist for Irving Trust Co. in New York. "(But) it's just not ready to take on the central banks yet."

Throughout the past week the dollar held a narrow range against major foreign currencies after spurring higher on Monday against the West German mark.

"The reason the market isn't taking the dollar a whole lot lower is that it's just petrified at what the central banks might do," said Kreicher.

NWTF chief urges citizens not to split over issue

By SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

I want to urge you, very much, not to be a part of polarizing your community," Delbert Devin, president of the Nuclear Waste Task Force told an anti-dump citizen group which met here Friday night to hear DOE protestors from other states.

Devin's concluding remarks at the session, added that "I would urge you to be diligent and alert in your resistance to DOE and to affirm the truth at every opportunity."

Devin said all of the protest groups were formed to unite communities, not divide them. He told the crowd on several occasions that he was in an "upbeat" mood because of the national meeting of task force members. He brought several of the people from other states to share their experiences in dealing with DOE.

Delbert Conkright, spokesman for a newly-formed local protest group, urged the audience to contact and write their congressmen and state officials. He asked them to give Washington at least three messages: "1. We want Congress to cut all funding for DOE site characterization in Texas for the coming fiscal year. 2. We believe the entire site selection process to be faulty so the program should be scrapped and started again from square one, focusing on scientific data rather than political pressure, and 3. We want Congress to reprimand the Department of Energy for failure to follow the Nuclear Waste Policy Act and force DOE to include eastern site consideration as the act dictates.

The battle will be won in Washington, D.C.," said Conkright. He added that the DOE meetings held in the area the past few days "seem to have been designed to allow us to let off some steam." He added that all the protest groups need to keep up their attack against DOE's using the democratic system which protects our freedoms under the constitution.

Conkright also urged the audience to support the Nuclear Waste Task Force (STAND) POWER, and the newly-formed local group. He said some fund raising events will be planned soon to help support the fight. He also reiterated Devin's statement about working to unite the community and not doing things that would be divisive.

Dab Kleuskens, a member of the local POWER group, told a reporter after the meeting that his group did not condone un-Christian tactics. "We don't agree with some of the things people in the business community are doing, but I don't believe in burning bridges behind me."

Kleuskens added that "some folks need to realize how important a patch of ground is to a farmer, and others need to realize that the businessman is also fighting for survival."

Police report

Hereford police issued 11 citations on Friday and responded to two minor accidents and a false alarm fire call on Avenue A. One 41-year-old man was arrested for violation of probation and a 17-year-old was arrested for minor in consumption and driving without a driver's license.

Offenses reported were a theft of several jackets from The Range, burglary of a habitation in the 200 block of Avenue C, and theft of a spare tire and wheel from a pick-up bed parked in the 500 block of Avenue G.

Other offenses included four reports of harassing phone calls, two domestic disturbance calls, assault by threat in the 100 block of Avenue H and a broken window in the 500 block of Avenue H.

Officers also responded to a disturbance call at a business in the 300 block of North Main, no charges were filed, and a prowler call on East Highway 60.

Clara Jackson, first place; Jamie Gallagher, second; Connie Jackson, third; Chuck Lindeman, fourth, and Richard Sanderson, alternate.

Families of slain postal workers demand more information

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Relatives of 14 postal employees shot to death by a fellow worker accused of the Postal Service of a cover-up, and a union leader vowed to go to court if necessary to get the full 7,000-page report on the massacre.

The Postal Service on Friday released a 25-page version of its report with some passages blacked out.

A 10-page summary was given members of Congress last week at the urging of U.S. Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., and the 25-page version was released only after the postal union and several news organizations demanded it under the Freedom of Information Act.

"We hope legal action will not be necessary, but it probably will be to get an accurate and complete report," said Cliff Guffey, a postal union representative from Washington.

"We cannot correct what has happened, but we can learn from our experiences," he said at a news conference attended by about 100 survivors and relatives of victims.

Patrick Henry Sherrill, 44, clocked in at the Post Office on Aug. 20 carrying a mail satchel containing three pistols and ammunition.

He methodically shot to death 14 co-workers and wounded six before killing himself. Terrified employees hid or fled as Sherrill stalked the building.

Friday's report portrayed Sherrill as a man "unable to deal adequately" with confrontations with his supervisors but also noted that the inquiry "failed to disclose any significant acts of violence by Sherrill" before the massacre.

The investigation by the postal inspector's office in Fort Worth, Texas, concluded that the acts committed by Sherrill "were totally inconsistent with the behavior he had exhibited throughout his life."

The summary was based on 7,000 pages turned over by the Postal Service earlier this month to the U.S. attorney's office in Oklahoma City.

"All I have seen is the summary. The Postal Service hasn't made any decision on releasing the whole thing as far as I know," Richard Carleton, general manager of postal services for the Oklahoma City Division, which includes Edmond, said late Friday.

Linda Brundage, whose brother-in-law was one of the first slain, charged that the Postal Service had promised the comprehensive report, "and the substitution of a brief summary is reprehensible." She said at the news conference that she was speaking on behalf of the families involved.

"Surviving family members believe that this information or lack of information from the Postal Service has been the rule, both on the incident and on the benefits available and that the withholding of the total report is not an exception," Ms. Brundage said.

She cited a need for information "to aid in the recovery, mental well-being and healing process of all."

Guffey said he believes the full report contains information about doors with deadbolts that could be opened from the inside only with keys, doors that opened inward, and no keys to the supervisors' gallery where police could have gone to look for and fire on Sherrill.

Five people were gunned down while they huddled next to a door they thought was an emergency exit.

"We're not here to condemn the post office but to correct some problems. Some of these may be design problems that exist in other buildings," Guffey said.

The Postal Service will try to correct specific problems, Carleton said.

Colleagues and relatives said their demands for full information would be taken to Congress. A House committee is scheduled to begin hearings March 18.

DPS sets training school

The Texas Department of Public Safety announced that July 7, 1987, has been selected as the beginning date for a recruit training school for the position of State Trooper according to Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander for the Department of Public Safety.

Entrance exams and agility tests will be given at the Lubbock, Amarillo and Wichita Falls Department of Public Safety offices every Tuesday and Thursday beginning on February 24, 1987. The final day for testing out-of-state applicants will be March 19, 1987, and for Texas residents the final testing date will be April 23, 1987. The testing will begin at 8:30 a.m. on each above mentioned days and will take most of the day to complete.

Selected applicants will attend an 18 week police training school at the Texas Department of Public Safety Academy in Austin. Recruit trainees will be paid a monthly salary of $1,515.00 while they are attending the school.

Interested persons should contact the recruiting coordinator in either Lubbock, Amarillo or Wichita Falls for employment qualifications and application forms. All necessary paperwork must be completed prior to taking the entrance exams. With ties to Col. North

Special counsel probes fund raiser

WASHINGTON (AP) — The independent counsel in the Iran-Contra affair is looking into a network of conservative organizations run by "Carl Spitz" Channell, a fund-raiser with ties to Lt. Col. Oliver North, a source says.

Channell, whose tax-exempt groups also are reportedly under investigation by the Internal Revenue Service, spent Friday being interviewed by the staff of the court-appointed special counsel looking into the Iran-Contra matter, said a source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The session took place at the office of Channell's attorney, Alexia Morrison, who has said only that her client is cooperating with the independent counsel's inquiry, the source said.

Ms. Morrison and Channell did not return a reporter's calls Friday.

The independent counsel is investigating, among other things, the alleged diversion of profits from the Iran arms sales to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

In other developments Friday: —President Reagan chose former Sen. Howard Baker to replace Donald T. Regan as his chief of staff, a day after Regan was faulted by the Tower Commission report for management failure in the Iran-Contra matter. Baker said that in accepting the job he was ending his efforts to win the Republican presidential nomination in 1988.

—Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said his informal survey of 20 or 30 senators indicates Reagan's nomination of Robert Gates to be CIA director is "in deep trouble" because "a lot of senators feel they've been lied to by this administration in this whole Iran affair and Gates will pay the price."

—Vice President George Bush noted in a Bedford, Mass., speech that the Tower report said the Iran arms deal was meant to win the freedom of Mideast hostages. Bush said, "arms for hostages is wrong, and at this stage the implementation of the policy failed the American people and it failed the president."

—White House spokesman Marlin

Fitzwater said Reagan "is rightfully angry about the mismanagement described in the report and he intends to take action as soon as possible. ... I would say he is determined and eager to set the administration back on course."

—In the wake of lawsuits challenging the constitutionality of the role of independent counsels, the Justice Department said it was examining possible legal avenues to allow their investigations to continue. Meanwhile, The Washington Post and The New York Times reported today that the Reagan administration is considering plans to re-appoint Lawrence E. Walsh, independent counsel in the Iran-Contra affair, as an employee of the executive branch to undercut the lawsuits. The Constitution reserves prosecutorial powers to the executive branch of government and the status of the independent counsel, who is appointed by a special panel of judges, is at the heart of the legal dispute.

Questions have been raised about Channell's ties to a central figure in the Iran-Contra case, fired White House aide North. Links between Channell-run organizations and North's private network to aid the Contra rebels are suggested in a diagram that was included in the Tower commission report.

Channell was assisted by North in a nationwide campaign to generate public support for Reagan's pro-Contra policies and target congressional opponents. The fund-raiser also has paid expenses for Contras to make speaking tours.

The IRS notified Channell in January that it was auditing several tax-exempt foundations he heads, according to lobbyist Dan Kuykendall who works for Channell as a political consultant. The groups include Channell's multimillion-dollar National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, as well as his lobby group Sentinel, the American Conservative Foundation, and Western Goals and Western Goals Foundation.

The IRS would not comment on whether an investigation was under way.

To measure support as CIA director

Dole polls colleagues on Gates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole is canvassing his colleagues to measure support for CIA director-nominee Robert M. Gates in the wake of questions about Gates' role in the Iran-Contra affair.

"I think if there's an early vote, he's in trouble," the Kansas Republican said Friday in a reference to Gates, who is now CIA deputy director.

Gates was nominated by Reagan to replace William Casey after Casey resigned following surgery for a cancerous brain tumor.

Dole said he planned to do a "little checking around over the weekend" to see how much support Gates has in the Democrat-controlled Senate.

Dole said he conveyed his assessment earlier Friday to Reagan at a meeting in the White House, but the president didn't respond. The senator said he wouldn't yet recommend that Reagan withdraw the nomination.

No vote has yet been set by the Intelligence Committee on Gates. If the panel does approve him, the nomination would go to the floor for a vote by the full Senate.

Dole's conclusions were similar to those of Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., former vice-chairman of the Intelligence Committee.

"I've never seen anything unravel quite as fast as support for the Gates nomination," Leahy said in a telephone interview from his Vermont office. "Two weeks ago, he would have been confirmed easily.

But now, it's in deep trouble and it goes beyond just whether Gates is qualified or not."

"A lot of senators feel they've been lied to by this administration in this whole Iran affair and Gates will pay the price. It may or may not be fair to Gates, but the sins of everybody else are going to be visited on him," he said.

The Tower commission's report does not criticize Gates, although it says Casey incompletely described events to congressional investigators.

During two days of public hearings last week by the Intelligence Committee, Gates was queried about what he knew about U.S. arms sales to Iran and the subsequent diversion of money to the Nicaraguan guerillas. One committee member, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said Thursday after the Tower report was issued that Reagan should withdraw Gates' nomination.

Leahy, noted how quickly support for Gates has ebbed, said, "Two weeks ago, just sitting around on the floor chatting with other senators, they said Gates is qualified and it makes sense to put him in for the last two years of Reagan's presidency

Garms to speak at economic development meet in Littlefield

Nancy Garms, attorney-at-law and president of the Amarillo Bar Association, will be a featured speaker at the Economic Development Conference "Planning Economic Development for Rural Areas and Small Cities", on March 12 in Littlefield, sponsored by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Program slated to provide staff

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Baltimore's Roman Catholic Archbishop William Borders has launched a pilot project as part of efforts to develop alternative ways to staff parishes in the face of declining numbers of clergy.

As one step, he assigned the Rev. Edward Hemler to be pastor both of St. Anthony's parish in Emmitsburg, Md., and Our Lady of Mount Carmel parish in Thurmont, with a permanent deacon to assist him.

Efforts also are being made to develop the roles of lay and religious personnel to take greater responsibility for the church's ministry.

Last December, the archdiocese assigned Sister Jane Coyle to administer Corpus Christi parish without a resident priest-pastor.

MEETING

need another nuclear project in Washington."

Bringloe, who has worked for five years as a Sierra Club volunteer, said the state itself has felt the nuclear projects provided jobs and were accepted because they were in the national interest, but whistleblowers have been "fed up with lies and deception" of the DOE and are speaking up.

One incident she described was of Gov. Booth Gardner who toured one of the nuclear projects. DOE had not cleaned up a spill of an accident, but took down markers where it was and escorted the governor through the contaminated area.

It was near the 7th cleanest lake in the world that DOE planned for a site in Maine, according to Bonnie Titcomb with Citizens Against Nuclear Trash (CANT).

The deception she recalled was that a commercial water spring owned by Perrier wasn't on the maps DOE produced and the aquifer was drawn, but not indicated at the point where the site would be.

She also noted that first reports were that DOE would need 6,000 acres of land. Next it was 7,000 to 10,000, then 11,000 to 20,000 acres. Two months later it was 30,000 acres of land the DOE wanted.

It is time to become "professional Americans" Titcomb said, by becoming aware of issues and practicing democracy by writing the officials involved in the decision making process.

"Nuclear waste is the Achilles heel of the nuclear industry," Titcomb said, urging a moratorium on production of the waste at nuclear reactors.

Defunding for exploratory shaft construction was a political victory, according to Caroline Petty with the Southwest Research and Information Center in Washington, D.C. She urged the opponents to pull political strings and cut off DOE at the pass with a chop at its pocketbook.

that is real discrimination.

Q: Do many of you feel this way?
A: I know a lot of people who feel this way.

Q: Have you had to have help and been refused?

A: I am proud of myself, I have raised seven children by myself and I took food stamps only a few times, when I really needed them. I didn't want to set a bad example for my children and taking food stamps teaches them to be lazy.

Q: What do you think about accusations that Hispanic children are treated badly in school?

A: Some teachers are hateful to kids, regardless of color.

Q: Why are some of the Hispanic children not working at a high level in the school work?

A: Well, I can tell you this. One of my children deliberately failed because he was taunted by kids from the labor camp. They told him, "If you're in the top group then you're just a griengo and you can't be a part of us." He wanted to be part of their group so he purposely did poor work so he could be in a lower class.

Q: So you feel that some of the children are defeating themselves to feel that they belong to a particular group?

A: Yes, it is the migrant kids who bully the others, not the school and not the teachers.

Q: Why do they have the idea that they need to fail this way to show they are not Anglo?

A: They get this bad Viva la Raza stuff from that Moya man.

Q: What about the high rate of school drop outs?

A: It isn't the school programs.

Q: What is the problem?

A: I understand this problem because I was 15 years old and still in the fifth grade. Because of the moves my family made to find work I couldn't keep up and I didn't know what was going on in the classroom.

Q: What did you do?

A: I quit school. Many of these children have a high intelligence but they have been moved around so much that they can't keep up with the school work. The children then give up and drop out because they can't keep up, it is easier for them to quit and go to work.

Q: What about parental support?
A: Many of the kid's can't get help with their schoolwork at home because their parents don't know how to do the work. They need outside tutors to help with questions and most can't afford that type of help.

Q: What is the solution for all of these problems?

A: As I said, we need to work together, they are problems we all have and we need to quit separating ourselves so we can bring ourselves up.

Q: I understand you would like to conduct this interview without releasing your name to the public.

A: Yes, I hate to put my name in because some of the Spanish people will turn on me.

During Texas Education Week

Student essay entries describe Hereford

An essay contest on the topic "My Home Town" was sponsored recently by The Amarillo Globe-News, and more than 100 Stanton Junior High students, grades 7 and 8, entered.

Since March 2-6 is being observed as Texas Education Week, The Brand thought it would be appropriate to publish some of the essays. Carolyn Waters, Stanton teacher, submitted about a dozen of the essays.

"We learned once again that our students are proud, caring and sensitive," said Mrs. Waters. "Very few negative comments were found in the essays about their home town. They are certainly goodwill ambassadors!"...and a little child shall lead them," concluded Mrs. Waters.

MY HOME TOWN

Hereford is a great place in which to live. Here in Hereford a great deal can be done if you try.

The schools in Hereford are wonderful. They have things other schools don't have.

The community sometimes has problems, but we all get together and solve those problems.

I moved here because my father got a job here in Hereford. I, myself, thought that I was not going to like it here, but I was wrong. Hereford is a great place to live.

Hereford has many activities students can enjoy. They have parties, dances, ballgames and many other things to do.

Hereford IS a great place to live!

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is Hereford, Texas. Hereford is not a very big town. It has many nice people, especially when you are nice, too.

The school I go to is Stanton Junior High. Stanton is very big, and it has many nice teachers and many cool kids.

When the Hereford Whitefaces go into battle, we mean business!

Hereford has quite a few churches. We also have a recreation area called the YMCA. They help keep kids off the streets.

The citizens are very helpful when you need help. You can rely on the Hereford Fire Department and the Police Department, as well as your neighbors.

Thunderbirds scheduled to fly at Reese AFB

The U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds Aerial Demonstration Team will visit Reese AFB on Sunday, March 22, 1987.

The Reese visit marks the only stop in the West Texas-New Mexico area that the Thunderbirds will make this year. This is in part due to an overseas deployment that the team will make during September-October 1987. In all, 69 shows are scheduled for 61 sites in the Continental United States.

The Thunderbirds visit to West Texas will be relatively brief as the team is scheduled to arrive at Reese an hour prior to the base's gates being opened to the public at 11 a.m.

About 25 aircraft from Reese and Tactical Air Command bases from around the country will be on static display on the flightline when the gates open.

A number of aircraft including Reese's T-37 and T-38 training jets will fly-by in formation prior to the start of the Thunderbird show opening ceremonies at 2:30 p.m.

The Thunderbirds last appeared at Reese in 1985. They will be flying the F-16 Falcon during this year's show.

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is Hereford, Texas. It is a great place to be. There are many things to do here.

In the summer, for instance, I go swimming, it is hard to decide because there are so many swimming pools of different sizes. Skating is fun, too.

Then comes winter. In the winter, I have snowball fights with my friends. We go sledding down hills. It is so much fun.

When school starts, the teachers treat and teach you with respect.

In Hereford, you have lots of fun and there are so many things to do. It is a great place to live.

Gloria Mendoza

MY HOME TOWN

My home town, Hereford, is a nice town to visit. It has some of the best sports competition in the country.

For living, it has some really beautiful homes, that are big and spacious.

When you want to keepin shape, you can go to the YMCA and work out or go to Veteran's Park and jog a few laps.

When it is eating time, how about going to the great restaurants in Hereford?

The churches here are good to attend and there are many civic activities.

Some of the best events happen here in Hereford.

Julius Roman

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is Hereford. Hereford has land that stretches out into Deaf Smith County.

The major livestock for the Hereford area is the cattle industry. Hereford has a variety of businesses that includes shopping malls, grocery stores and convenience stores.

Many activities in Hereford are in the schools, communities and clubs. School activities have much support—especially football and basketball games.

Parents and teachers encourage and try to persuade students to do their best and to do more in life.

Each year we have a jubilee celebration with a parade that represents school, community and agricultural interests.

Hereford is a great place to live.
Chad Brummett

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is Hereford, Texas. It is a very neat town to come and visit or even to live in.

The museum is a very interesting place to go to on field trips or on the weekends.

The two biggest schools are Stanton Junior High and Hereford High School.

A very good time to come to Hereford is in the summer for the Lions Club Carnival. We also have several swimming pools. Another great thing is the YMCA.

One great thing is the Church of the Nazarene, where a lot of great activities are always going on.

So come visit the great town of Texas-Hereford!

Philip Gonzales

MY HOME TOWN

If you would like to live in a peaceful, quiet town, Hereford is the place. There is a little bit of everything here.

We have our museum that is very interesting, and the library is right next to it. We have a shopping mall and several other stores.

There are a couple of nice parks here, too. One of them has a lake where you can see turtles swim.

A new theater and mall are opening here soon.

And with you here, it would be even better!

Toni Sustaita

MY HOME TOWN

The history of Hereford, my home town, is exciting and adventurous. The first lodging along Tierra Blanca Creek was a simple dugout. The original town was located farther north from the present location. The town moved to this location because the Santa Fe railroad came through this area.

The economy of Hereford, in these troubled times, is relatively good. We grow vegetables, grains and sugar beets, and have one of the largest cattle producing areas in the world.

My favorite thing about Hereford is that it is in the Bible belt of the panhandle.

Hereford has excellent medical facilities, including several specialists.

Hereford is a nice place to live!
Jim Bret Campbell

MY HOME TOWN

In my opinion, Hereford, Texas, is the best place to be in Texas. It is not too big and not at all small.

Hereford offers many activities in which to involve its citizens. The YMCA has various individual activities and team sports. We have 4-H, FFA, Kiwanis Club and more.

The schools are good because the teachers, coaches, and principals are exceptionally nice. We, the students, may not always like their rules, but we abide by them most of the time.

My dad is a gas station manager. He said that he likes Hereford, as Hereford has the nicest people you can ever meet.

Javier Gutierrez

MY HOME TOWN

Hereford is a good town with great schools. We have a nice hospital and good doctors.

Many different clubs and activities for both kids and adults are available. We have FFA, 4-H and the YMCA, and we have much more.

There are many nice homes and good neighborhoods. Churches of all faiths are located here along with a newspaper and many good stores for shopping.

Our town is a friendly progressive place to live.

Brandi Hutson

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is Hereford, Texas. I have lived here for about seven years. I think it is the best town anybody could live in. It is located in the panhandle of Texas.

There are a lot of big churches in Hereford which many people attend.

Well, I am a Mexican American. The lady from Dallas who said the Mexican Americans in Hereford do not have much of an education—well, she was wrong. You can have a good education in Hereford. Everybody in Hereford, no matter what color they are, is treated fairly because of the nice people in Hereford.

Joe Riojas

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is in the best part of the Golden Spread. People here in Hereford are the friendliest people in the spread. People here, from generation to generation, have passed on traits and customs.

Most of the people here are very active in community activities, such as Lions and Kiwanis Clubs, Red Cross Volunteers, school and church activities.

Hereford has about forty churches which represents almost all religions.

Everyone gets along great, without prejudice towards one's race, color, sex, religion or national origin. Everyone looks at each other as friends.

That is why Hereford is what it is—one of the best towns in the Golden Spread!

Joanna Robles

MY HOME TOWN

My home town is not exactly Paris, France, but to me it is pretty close. There are many things a person can do here—go to the mall, a dance, or just "hang out" with some friends.

We also have an excellent school system. I go to Stanton Junior High. To me, we are the best. We have excellent school spirit. That sets us apart from many schools.

Another thing good about Hereford is the community's recreational opportunities. We have many different organizations, also.

Hereford is not the biggest city in Texas, but maybe the friendliest. And I'm glad to be "stuck" here.

Thank You

We have found the enemy

Apparently frustrated by DOE's plans to move into the community, a few folks lashed out in blind anger this past week as they tried to intimidate business owners and threatened to start a bitter split among residents.

Leaders of STAND, POWER and a newly-formed protest group here in Hereford all told us Friday night that they were not promoting nor encouraging such actions. Delbert Devin, president of the Nuclear Waste Task Force, said the groups were formed to unite, not divide, the community.

The problem is that some folks won't listen or read. They need to know that they are burning bridges behind them by resorting to intimidation or terrorist-type threats against their neighbors. It appears they have vented their ire against a business group that made a trip to Columbus, Ohio.

Many members of these protest groups were unhappy that the local group chose to make the trip at this time, but they realize that this was not meant to show any support for a waste repository. The trip had more to do with showing pride in the community than the perception of a few that it was motivated by lust for the dollar.

Even if some of these folks had dollar signs in their eyes, it's their right as Americans. Before some folks accuse others of greed, they need to search their own motives. We have a right to do business where we want, but harassment and intimidation should play no part in that choice.

The business group is not welcoming a repository; it is saying to people who will be working in Hereford: 'We may not agree with what you are doing, but we will treat you as neighbors if you choose to live in Hereford.'

As Jim Conkwright, spokesman for a local protest group, said Friday night, 'Our battle will be won in Washington, D.C.' Instead of cussing your local businessman, write letters of protest to your congressional representatives. Maybe that businessman has already written letters to protest the selection of Deaf Smith County as a site.

Most citizens in this county are against a repository. Not all agree on how the fight should be waged, but it would be tragic and unnecessary for us to become divided. It would be akin to the statement made by Pogo, the cartoon character: 'We have found the enemy and they is us.'

No cure, just prevention

There is no cure for AIDS. There is only prevention. Doctors once spoke of high-risk groups. They now speak of high-risk behaviors. They once called it an outbreak. Then it was called an epidemic. Now it is threatening to become pandemic...

What can be done now to prevent millions of people from being exposed to AIDS?

One approach teaches junior and senior high school students about AIDS, and how not to get it.

Teen-ages need to know about AIDS because they are coming of age in an era of sexual danger unprecedented in modern times. Groups concerned about the moral impact of AIDS-prevention education on youth should weigh the danger of letting children not know what mortal danger they may face...

AIDS is 100 percent fatal. The threat of death is a powerful inducement for teens to remain virgins and drug-free, if they are told the facts.

Capitol Report

By John Smith

When the economy is suffering and deficits are soaring, much discussion in the Legislature centers on a Texas lottery. The idea is that profits from such an activity would rescue the State from its economic woes.

Presently, twenty three states have lotteries. Together these states netted more than $4 billion in 1985, and no state lost money on its lottery. However, because of the expense in starting and maintaining a lottery, it cannot be viewed as a fiscal "cure all."

Instigating a lottery in Texas would require a constitutional amendment, which takes a two-thirds vote of the Legislature and a majority vote of the people. In addition to the amendment, the Legislature would need to pass an enabling bill to establish a lottery administration, which would designate the state's share of gross receipts and set penalties for violations of lottery regulations.

Once approved, it would take from four months to a year to establish a lottery. Staff would be hired and procedures to run a lottery would be put into place. A Texas lottery could require a workforce of 100 to 150 employees. The total cost for the lotteries initiation is estimated at $4 million.

Critics question lotteries on ethical grounds, arguing that the government has no business promoting games that exploit bettors' weakness, take their money and stack the odds against them. Opponents also accuse lotteries of breeding crime such as illegal gambling, fraud and forgery. Since the state spends lottery profits on public purposes that taxes would pay otherwise, critics state that lottery proceeds should be evaluated just as if they were taxes.

Lottery supporters maintain that, since participation is strictly voluntary, a lottery ticket is not a tax at all, but a consumer item, advertised and sold in the market like any other product.

Four bills have been filed by the House of Representatives concerning the lottery. HJR 7, HJR 10, and H.B. 11, H.B. 12. These bills and Resolutions are currently being considered in the Urban Affairs Committee.

I have always opposed a lottery in Texas and question the amount and dependence of any revenue stream that would flow from a lottery.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek looks at Star Wars this week, more or less.

Dear editor:

I haven't been able to figure out a proper stand on Star Wars. I don't know anything about it and am not acquainted with anybody who is. My ignorance is almost Congressional.

Some scientists say it'll work, some say it won't, like one psychiatrist saying the ax murderer is crazy, the other saying he's sane.

As I understand it, the idea is to put up a shield, a sort of umbrella, consisting of orbiting satellites capable of identifying and shooting down with laser beams any incoming Russian nuclear bomb.

In case Russia then puts up an umbrella above our umbrella, I suppose we'd put up an umbrella above theirs, and so on till everybody ran out of umbrellas.

I don't know of anybody who knows how long orbiting satellites will stay up, but if eventually they lose their momentum and have to be replaced every so often, without a tax increase, that's a cause for serious thinking. It's claimed a full umbrella will cost a trillion dollars or so, give or take a couple of national bankruptcies.

Now assume we borrow the money and get the first umbrella up. There the laser-armed satellites are, circling around waiting to spot an incoming bomb and blast it out of the sky.

As I understand it, the laser beams and aiming devices are controlled by on-board computers. There's the rub. What if they're made by the company that makes computers that'll send you an electric bill for $23,114.12?

What if it gets confused and mistakes a TV satellite beaming television programs back to earth for a Russian missile? And blasts it out of the sky.

And how much confusion and panic will arise nation-wide if that satellite at that very moment happens to be beaming back to earth "Wheel Of Fortune?"

Is the country prepared to take that risk?

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

The Penultimate Word

LOOKING OUT THE WRONG WINDOW

My daughter had a baby Thursday. It was a girl, which is the only kind of child to have. I told my son-in-law, who wanted a boy, that God never sent a boy to a home unless there was a need for a man in the home.

I had four girls. There was man enough at our place. My son-in-law was gazing at his new daughter in the nursery. A lady standing nearby remarked about the weather, and how dismal the day had been. The new father said, "Lady, you looked out the wrong window." Good statement. Even better philosophy.

I checked into a motel the other day. When I got to my room it was not ready. The maid had just stripped the beds and removed the used towels. She was a little frustrated at my inconvenience. I had some errands to run, and left the motel.

When I returned I had a very short time to take a shower and dress for a speaking engagement. The room was not finished and the maid was working feverishly, trying to finish. I sat down in the room and watched her work.

My first impulse was to tell her to let the rest of the work go and let me get ready. I would have done so, but I began to watch her work. She was making the bed with the greatest of care. She worked first one side and then the other, trying to get the spread to lie just right. I became more and more intrigued by her concern. She told me the spreads were new and it was difficult to get them to do just right. She then said a remarkable thing. She said, "I am very picky about my beds."

I wish I had not been in such a hurry. I would love to have sat down for a long talk with this remarkable lady. In a world of shoddy and slipshod, how does a person keep pride in their work? In a job of mundane and repetitious as maid work in a motel, how can a person find the secret of being picky about beds?

She may only be a maid in a motel, but she is one of the more important people I have met in a long time. What she has should be bottled and sold. If it could be bottled it should be required drinking by everyone of us every day. I would drink a quart of her spirit for breakfast every morning for the rest of my life.

This lady has found one of the great secrets of life. She has found out how to look out of the right window. WOW...

Warm fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor:

For the past six months, I have been serving the first part of a two-year commitment with Athletes in Action, a branch of Campus Crusade for Christ. In that the western half of Texas is my area, with Texas Tech's athletes and International Students the main effort, I haven't been around Hereford as much as I was formerly.

So I would like to use this means to thank all of those who have stood by the heritage which we inherited from the far-sighted and courageous pioneers of Deaf Smith County. When we observe the actions of the Department of Energy, it is easy to understand how we have loaded more debt on the backs of our children in the past six years than was added through eight wars and the first 204 years of our nation's history.

We have become so accustomed to fighting the latest bureaucratic insanity that we may have lost sight of the fact that this whole issue is but a part of the Corporate Welfare State that has been taking over our nation the past six years. The 200 largest corporations, which have created no net new jobs, often paid no taxes on tens of billions of dollars in profits, received multi-million dollar rebates, and are now apparently running our government, now control 60 percent of the corporate wealth of America.

Sen. Barry Goldwater said, just before his recent retirement, that "We are no longer a government of the people but of the moneyed interests." He was referring, in part, to the giant corporations who are involved in the heavily subsidized nuclear power field, which has been a disaster to bond-holders, rate-payers and tax-payers alike.

We are having to fight an unprecedented concentration of money and power. But we can win. Jesus turned over the money tables with a whip made of ropes. John wrote, in Revelation, Chapter 11, that the first thing Christ will do when He returns is "Destroy those who have destroyed the earth."

All of us know that the producers of all raw materials, especially agriculture, have been hurt badly over the past few years. But we must never lose sight of the fact that we are but stewards of this fine and fertile land. While it would help if our political leadership would fight for us half as hard as the city and state leaders of Nevada have fought sifting this deadly poison in the desert of Nevada, we can win with enough grass-roots effort. It is simply not ours to sell out our land for a mess of temporary pottage.

Sincerely,
Frank Ford
Chairman of the Board,
Arrowhead Mills, Inc.

Dear editor:

Just this Wednesday, our heroic District Attorney, Roland Saul, and our sensitive, wise and assertive Justice of the Peace, Johnnie Turentine, set their minions in the police department to the task of protecting the young innocent future citizens and unsuspecting adults of our community from dangerous magazines and videotapes. Yes, they jailed a local family businessman who was only trying to improve his living by catering to what he deemed to be "inevitable," viz. demand for a product he had for sale.

Perhaps those officials, our popular new county judge, and the other rulers and protectors of Hereford and Deaf Smith County will muster the further courage to actively and openly prevent the arrival of the DOE's insidious nuke-waste-dump army, who will cause much more lasting and terrible destruction of our lives than explicit pictures of sex. They might even use their positions and influence to investigate, prohibit and rehabilitate the unethical opportunists among us who are trying to profiteer from that seductive money which the "inevitable" site characterization program is trying to foist on us.

In sincere love,
Alfred E. Dziuk

Dear editor:

The people of this farming-ranching community should stand united against the DOE. Do people not realize it is the farmer-rancher that keeps this town running? Don't farm dollars spent in Hereford keep the banks, merchants and the community alive? The cycle goes on and on with farm dollars.

The local people who went to Ohio to tell the people there how great Hereford is ought to realize they went on farm dollars. The very same farm dollars that are trying so hard to keep their livelihood by fighting with DOE. Those few people may think they are bargaining for a gold mine but it will be fools' gold.

If the people will look back and think about this, they will see that it is the farm dollar that keeps this town going and they should stand united to help the hand that feeds you instead of biting it off.

A farmer's wife,
Kathy Urbanczyk

Dear editor:

During the oil boom days in East Texas, my grandparents' fresh spring water that they used for drinking, household and stock water was turned to salt water because of drilling oil wells near by. From that time on they hooked the team to the wagon and hauled all of their water in wooden barrels from the muddy stock ponds at the back side of the pasture.

Site characterization is different, you say. But is it? Can we dare take that chance with this huge body of water stretching under so many millions of acres of farmland that raises the food for our tables, the grain that feeds the beef cattle, other livestock, and dairy herds of our nation?

You bankers, doctors, lawyers, merchants and other businessmen in Hereford...are you naive enough to think that a short-term profit from site characterization will outweigh any longterm losses of productive land and good water? Chamber of Commerce people, what do you want for your Fun Breakfast-nuclear scramble and salt biscuit or sausage and pancakes? Who feeds you? Come on-get with, not against us!

If the Ogallala is polluted during site characterization, even the DOE people can't drink the water and they will be gone. Then, pray tell, where are your big bucks going to come from?

I was happy to see the large turnout of people at the DOE meeting Tuesday night. But, I was appalled at what I saw and overheard in just a short walk through the crowd.

The Realtor-welcoming each DOE personnel and slipping them one of his cards...a longtime resident closely connected with agriculture. Shame! Shame!

The doctor-welcoming DOE personnel; how sterile will your hands and tools of trade be washing in contaminated water?

The man of God-will he some day ask, "From whence do I get the grain to make my bread?"

A citizen hoping to continue living in an unpolluted Deaf Smith County.

Daniels to perform with Symphonic Band

EDDIE DANIELS

The Symphonic Band of West Texas State University will perform in New York's Carnegie Hall March 16, but that's only part of the news. Another part is that world-renowned jazz clarinetist Eddie Daniels—Quincy Jones calls him "the Monster Clarinetist"—will perform with them. The rest of the news? Daniels and the Symphonic Band will stage two preview performances at WTSU, March 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. in Northern Recital Hall.

This will be the second Carnegie Hall appearance by WTSU's Symphonic Band, the first being in 1983. Daniels, on the other hand, is no stranger to any of the world's great music halls.

The 45-year-old Daniels started learning saxophone at the age of nine and picked up the clarinet at 13. He majored in clarinet at New York's prestigious High School for the Performing Arts, then moved on to Brooklyn College before finishing his formal training with a master's degree in clarinet from Juilliard.

After winning Vienna's Jazz Competition for saxophone, Daniels joined the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Orchestra and held down a reed seat for six years. Since that time has been a featured soloist all over the country and has premiered a number of new works, many of them attempts at spanning the distance between liquid, melodic classical music and hard, driving, infectious contemporary jazz.

His latest album, Breakthrough, has received rave reviews in the major jazz magazines and has been nominated for a pair of Grammy Awards.

"The clarinet was such a beautiful sounding instrument to me, I couldn't get over the fact that everybody who played it played it like Benny Goodman," says Daniels, commenting on his innovative approach on the Breakthrough album. "I kept thinking that I would one day want to do an album that would show everybody how to use this instrument differently, because its potential is enormous."

Daniels will perform Etler's Concerto for Clarinet with Chamber Ensemble with WTSU's Symphonic Band on all three programs. This work, written in 1962, shows off the virtuosity of the clarinetist against a "quasi big band" instrumentation.

The Symphonic Band, conducted by Dr. Gary Garner, will perform four other works on the program: Prokofiev's March, Op. 99; Hindemith's Symphony in Bb; Copland's "Emblems"; and Corigliano's "Gazebo Dances."

"Emblems" suggest musical states of being ranging from noble, aspirational feelings to playful, spirited feelings. "Gazebo Dances" captures summer joy and exuberance as found in the gazebo bandstand in rural America's town squares. It even includes a peg-leg waltz, in which the oom-pah-pah sometimes lacks a path.

Eddie Daniels' appearances are being underwritten by the Meadows Foundation. All admissions proceeds from the March 6 and 7 performances at WTSU's Northern Recital Hall will help defray the costs of the band's New York trip.

EMOTIONAL SUPPORT IS IMPORTANT

ATLANTA (AP) — Emotional support plays an important role in the well-being of people with arthritis, says the Arthritis Foundation.

It says studies have shown that something as simple as a regular telephone call from a health professional can not only make people with arthritis feel better psychologically, but also may have a positive effect on how well they function.

When the psychological effects of arthritis, such as depression and anxiety, are lessened, pain and functional impairment may also be reduced. The foundation points out that people's personalities and moods can have an effect on the physical aspects of arthritis.

School's anti-drug project gets response from inmate

HOUSTON (AP) — A fifth-grader who joined fellow students to send aloft 900 balloons bearing an anti-drug message received a response from an authoritative source — an inmate who blames his imprisonment on drug abuse.

Eric Boudreau, who attends Holmsley Elementary School, sent the balloon several weeks ago and received in return a page-long letter from 20-year-old Kenneth Hicks.

Hicks, a trusty who rides a horse and watches cattle, found Eric's balloons and the attached card, emblazoned with the "Just Say No" anti-drug message, in a cattle pasture.

"Hi Eric," Hicks wrote back. "I thought I'd write you and tell you a few things."

"No. 1, I am in Sugar Land. I'm in the Central Unit Prison."

"No. 2, the reason I'm in prison is because of drugs."

"No. 3, I was a drug addict and did a lot of drugs and they have really messed my life up."

Hicks, who said his drug use began in high school in Denton County, explained how he took loot from a burglary to a drug dealer for methamphetamines. Conviction on the burglary netted him a 10-year prison term.

"That's what really did it," Hicks said of his drug use. "I got hooked on that. When I was on them, I really didn't care about anything."

The students sent the balloons aloft about two weeks ago.

"There were these three balloons with a card attached," Hicks said Wednesday. "I almost rode by, but I decided to see what it was."

Hicks said he carried the card for about two weeks before writing to Eric. He also asked fellow inmates — many whose drug problems resulted in prison terms — to sign the letter. Thirteen did.

"This ain't no place for nobody to live," Hicks said of prison. "If it (his response) made a difference for a few kids, that's what really counts."

Eric says his classes had discussed drug use.

"But I hadn't really thought about it," he added. "I didn't really know what to believe. I was surprised to get a letter. I was surprised even more when I found out where it was from."

School counselor Debbie Pollock read the inmate's letter over the school public address system.

"I think it has made the children realize the seriousness of it," she said. "We don't teach right and wrong. We just give them the facts. It kind of backed up what we had to say."

May not have if SMU fought NCAA investigation

'Death penalty' came despite cooperation

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Wednesday, Feb. 25, 1987 will forever be college football's Sunday, Dec. 7, 1941.

The NCAA effectively killed major college football at Southern Methodist in the 1980s by abolishing it in 1987.

The NCAA announcement seemed like a Pearl Harbor sneak attack special to school supporters. Especially after the Southwest Conference school threw itself on the mercy of the NCAA Infractions Committee and unearthed a secret slush fund.

By granting anonymity to the key players in the drama, it was SMU that discovered and reported a booster paid 13 football players some $61,000 — not the sleuthing of the NCAA.

If SMU had fought the latest investigation into its program, the NCAA would only have had the word of David Stanley, a disgruntled former second-string linebacker who was once hospitalized — with the school's help — to treat an addiction problem.

It likely would have taken stronger stuff to really nail the Mustangs with the "death penalty" under the new repeat offender law passed at the 1985 NCAA convention.

The NCAA praised faculty representative Lonnie Kliever, a religion professor, for his integrity and thorough investigation, then ordered the gallows for 1987.

"It was like giving the captain of the Titanic a commendation medal," Kliever said.

In the wake of the growing scandal over recruiting violations late last year, the school lost its president, its athletic director and football coach, who all resigned.

Not even the NCAA enforcement staff headed by David Berst recommended the abolishment of football for SMU's rogue booster sins.

"We wouldn't have had the information we had if SMU hadn't cooperated," Berst said.

Five law professors and an athletic director at tiny LeMoyne College ignored Berst's pleas to the infractions committee.

It's the second time an SWC school has felt gutshot by the NCAA after visiting the Shawnee Mission, Kan., confessional.

Texas Christian tried to cooperate with the NCAA by giving the organization a complete list of bad boosters and players on their payroll, including All-American running back Kenneth Davis. Coach Jim Wacker kicked the offenders off the team.

The NCAA responded by crippling the Horned Frogs' scholarships, bowl and television appearances. Wacker was stunned.

Wacker felt sympathy for SMU, saying, "We were hoping for more leniency in SMU's case ... because the university did fully cooperate with the NCAA in its most recent investigation."

"The signal is out to violators now," said Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles. "Stonewall it."

It's certainly a lesson to be learned by the SWC which appears to be target ground zero by the NCAA, although all major conferences have had their problems with illegal inducements.

Texas Tech awaited word on sanctions after going before the NCAA on Feb. 15. Tech conducted an in-house investigation into recruiting violations and extra benefits.

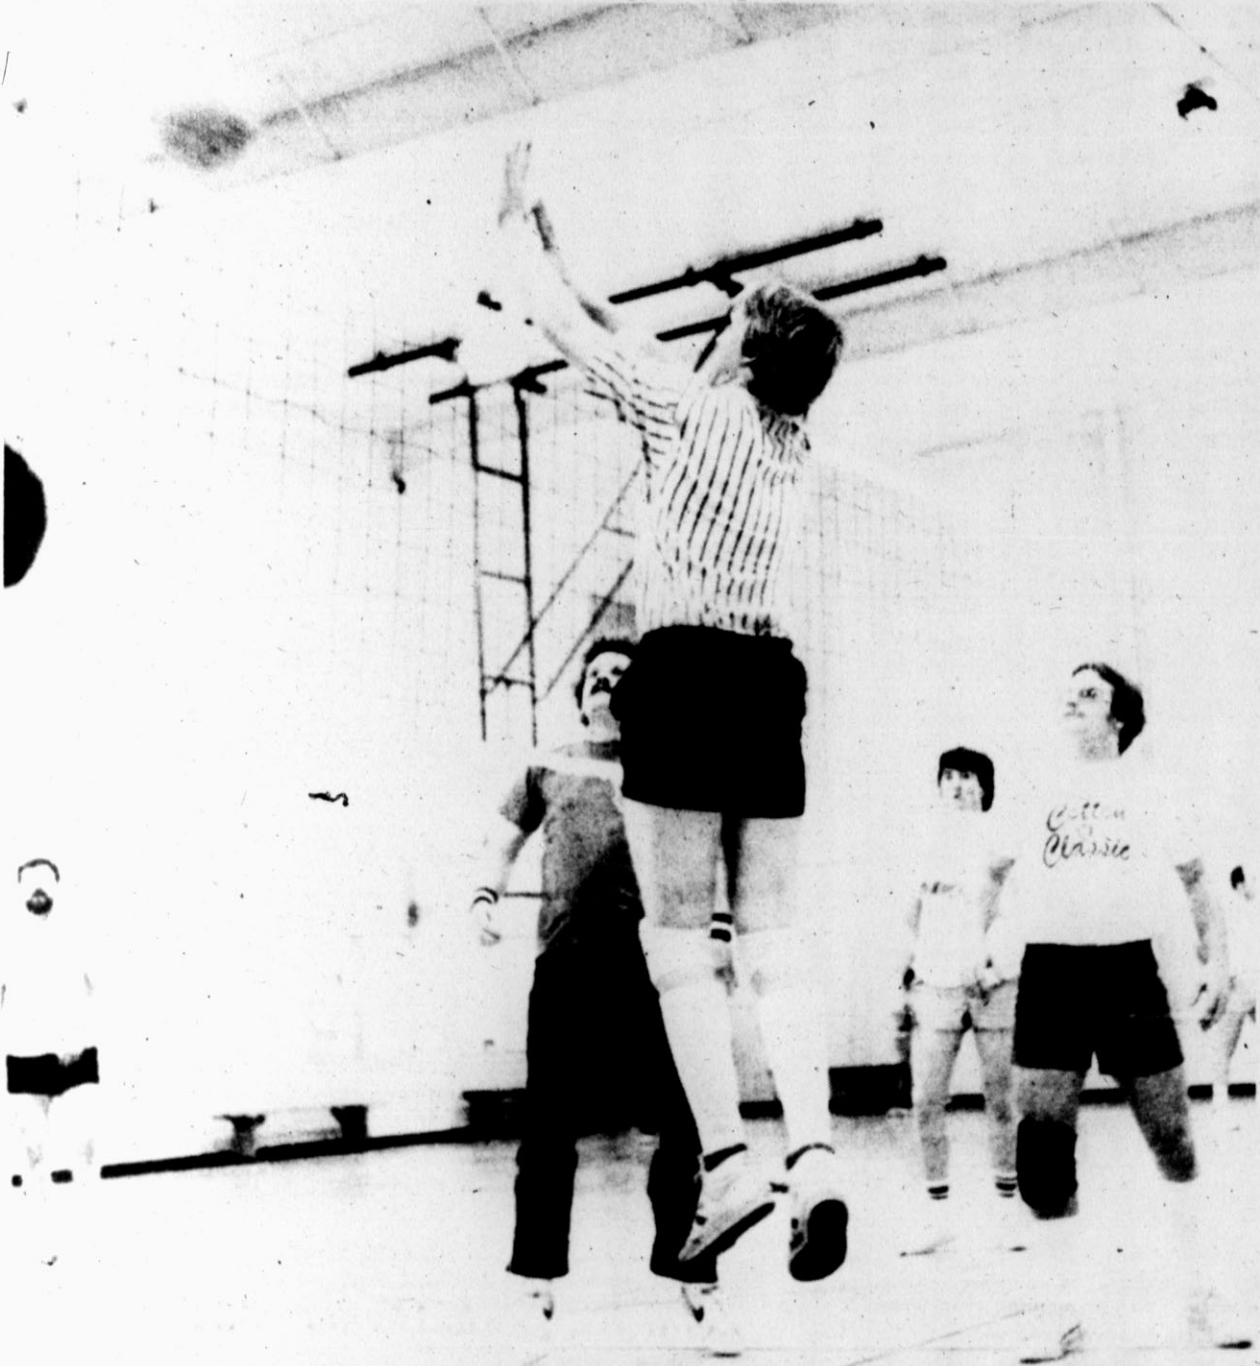

Texas and Texas A&M have yet to receive official notice of an investigation into football rules violations, although both have conducted in-house probes.

Houston has completed an in-house investigation into violations of extra-benefits rules and is awaiting the NCAA findings.

This NCAA business is a long way from over in the SWC. So far Rice, Arkansas and Baylor are the only conference schools not expecting a house call from Berst.

After what happened to TCU and SMU, all the volunteer help may have been scared underground.

"You're better off trying to hide something than to cooperate," Broyles said.

Striped bass take anglers to new depths

By BOB HOOD
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
WHITNEY, Texas (AP) — Fisheries biologists put the wrong label on the striped bass back in the early 1970s. And fishermen have been confused ever since.

So far, the striped bass, a saltwater species that has been stocked in freshwater lakes, is everything the biologists said it wouldn't be. They said the species would stay in deep, open waters, eat only shad, and be easy to catch.

The latter, of course, is only true sometimes. It all depends on how adept you are at finding them when they are feeding.

But an open-water fish that dines solely on shad it isn't. And that's where a lot of the confusion comes in.

"Lots of people just can't get it through their heads that the striped isn't just a deep-water fish," said Lake Whitney fishing guide Don Bohne.

"All they can think about is that stuff they read when the stripers were first put here. They were told the stripers would stay in deep water and they believed it."

The present wintertime pattern is a great case in point.

Many Lake Whitney, stripper fishermen have been concentrating their efforts in deep, open waters, using either live bait, Sassy Shads or jigs. And searching for that one giant school of stripers they figure is stacked up somewhere in the depths.

Bohne and John Holman, his partner in the Lake Whitney Guide Service, won't be found in the open. Instead, they are fishing the same places black bass fishermen are trying their luck.

"The best stripper fishing right now is in the creeks," Bohne said. "The stripers are shallow. And they are there for a reason."

The reason is that's where the bait-fish are — in the creeks where the water temperature is three to four degrees warmer than in than in the lake proper.

"We usually start fishing at the mouth of a creek and begin casting for stragglers," Bohne said. "You may catch a fish or two and then all of a sudden a big school of stripers will move in."

The stripers are after baitfish entering the creek. And the marauding stripers will chase them all the way to the back of the creek and back out again in short order, Bohne said.

striped bass in 1973. It has been stocked an additional six times, and has received a total of 1,312,352 stripers.

The heaviest stocking was 351,581 fish in 1984. But Texas Parks and Wildlife Department plans for 1987 call for a stocking of more than twice that number.

"We are scaling down the number of lakes we will be stocking stripers in, and that will enable us to have more fish for those lakes which we will stock," said Parks and Wildlife Department inland fisheries chief Nick Carter.

As Bohne and Holman discussed the wintertime stripper pattern, they chunked white bucktail jigs with chartreuse worm trailers toward a row of stumps lining the banks. Both used conventional bait-casting rigs.

It was an hour after daybreak and the water below the boat was about 15 feet deep. The mouth of the channel was just behind us.

The white jig-chartreuse worm trailer combination has been one of the most effective stripper baits on the Whitney lately, and Bohne proved that within minutes when he hooked a 9-pound stripper.

The stripper hit his lure as it was falling in the shallower water toward the bank.

"We've done real well on these jigs," Bohne said. "And they are easy to fish. You want to work them just like you would a plastic worm off the bottom, only faster."

By faster, Bohne means lifting up on the rod tip more rapidly, giving the lure a couple of quick jerks, then let the bait settle quickly back to the bottom.

Bohne and Holman believe the Whitney stripers will continue the same pattern until spring.

"The water temperature in the creeks now is about 47 degrees and that won't change unless we get a lot of severely cold weather," Bohne said. "And I don't think we will."

When spring arrives and the water temperatures begin to warm, the stripers will be more numerous in the creeks. And that's the time of the year Holman and Bohne love best.

"You can catch them on top-water lures then," Holman said, "and it can be really exciting. Can you imagine a 20-pound stripper blowing up on a top-water lure?"

At SMU by Internal Revenue Service

Slush fund may be probed

DALLAS (AP) — A spokesman with the Internal Revenue Service said the $61,000 booster-financed slush fund for varsity football players at Southern Methodist University could lead to an agency investigation.

Marlene Gaysek, a public affairs officer with the IRS in Dallas, said Friday that federal law prohibits discussion of specific cases, but the agency is legally bound to "address any areas of non-compliance (with federal tax laws) that come to our attention."

"We find it within our scope to see that the tax laws are being applied even-handedly and that all individuals file accurate returns," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"What if a business person claims a business expense on his return that is, instead, a remuneration to an athlete going to his alma mater?"

That could be a case of willful fraud, and that is a concern," she said.

On Wednesday, the National Collegiate Athletic Association banned football at SMU for one year because of repeated major recruiting violations. The NCAA report cited a slush fund that operated between September 1985 and December 1986 and said unnamed members of the SMU football staff and athletic administrative staff took part in running it.

David Berst, NCAA director of enforcement, said Wednesday that the money in the slush fund was supplied by a single booster. Thursday, the Dallas Times Herald identified Sherwood Blount, a Dallas businessman and an SMU alumnus, as that booster. Blount denied any involvement in the slush fund.

The NCAA report said 13 unidentified players received illegal cash payments in 1985-86 and eight players received payments last season. Monthly payments ranged from $75 to $750 per month, the report said.

Ms. Gaysek said that "unless specifically exempted by law," all income, including that in the form of goods and services, is taxable.

"In the case of (free) apartment use, the fair market value (for rent) is construed as taxable even though it is not a cash payment," Ms. Gaysek said.

Ms. Gaysek also said that if money from a tax-exempt institution is used for improper purposes, the IRS has the authority to revoke the institution's tax-exempt status. SMU is a tax-exempt institution.

There is no fixed procedure for deciding if and when the IRS begins a tax-fraud investigation, Ms. Gaysek said.

Miami Grand Prix to be aggressive race

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Doc Bundy might be a bit prejudiced, since he won his first IMSA Camel GT race here, but the veteran sports car driver is a big supporter of the Miami Grand Prix.

The race, held over a 1.87-mile circuit that runs along the downtown Biscayne Boulevard and through the waterfront Bicentennial Park, pays $250,000, the richest purse on the IMSA circuit.

In the five years since it started, the course has been changed and upgraded continually.

"Even though it runs through the park now, this race still is in the street-circuit category," said Bundy, who combined with former IMSA champion Brian Redman of Britain in a Jaguar prototype to win the Miami race in 1984. "It's certainly one of the better ones from an organizational standpoint."

Referring to Ralph Sanchez, the president of Miami Motorsports, which promotes the race, Bundy said, "Ralph was the first promoter to pay us reasonable money and the fans in South Florida are really excited by this event. Both of those things are important."

"Not many of us (drivers) really, really like what we call cement circuits or tunnel circuits, where you have those concrete barriers on both sides of you. You make a mistake and it costs you a car. But this is the fun one of street circuits, and Ralph keeps improving it every year. "Passing is almost always tough on temporary circuits like this one, most of which are narrow and treacherous. Miami is no exception," added Bundy, who will drive one of two Chevrolet Corvette GTP cars entered here this weekend. The other will be driven by Sarel van der Merwe of South Africa.

Bundy expects to see plenty of aggression Sunday in the three-hour main event, which will be televised on a same-day delay by ESPN beginning at 3 p.m. EST.

"You're going to see a very aggressive race," he said. "There are a whole lot of Europeans here. The Europeans come in here with a different attitude. They don't care about their cars. They're hired to drive and they just get in the cars and go."

The 10 fastest qualifiers in European-style time trials — groups of cars on the track with each car timed on each lap — will compete for the top 10 spots in a special "Run for the Pole."

Each of the prototypes will be timed for four laps and a pit stop for a two-tire change. Total time will determine their starting positions Sunday.

Van der Merwe, in a Corvette GTP, won the inaugural four-lap competition last year with a total time of 5 minutes, 37.819 seconds, including a 13.12-second pit stop.

Fisher sees fun in going from Yanks to Pirates

By The Associated Press

Victory is not the only barometer of happiness, according to Pittsburgh Pirates reliever Brian Fisher.

"I know I'm going from a winning team to a team that's been losing, but the way I see it, this is going to be fun," Fisher, a key member of the six-pitcher deal last November in which the Pirates sent Rick Rhoden to the New York Yankees, said Friday.

The 24-year-old Fisher is going from a team that won 90 games last season to one that lost 98. But he says the low-key atmosphere in the Pittsburgh clubhouse is a pleasant change from the volatile world of New York, where club owner George Steinbrenner was openly critical of many Yankees.

"All the Pirates have told me to do is to relax and get my arm ready to pitch," Fisher said from the team's spring training base at Bradenton, Fla. "There hasn't been much pressure. When a team has an owner like George Steinbrenner, there's always pressure on the players, always something to stir things up."

After establishing himself as one of the American League's top relievers in 1985, when he was 4-4 with a 2.38 earned run average and 14 saves, Fisher was 9-6 last year but slumped to six saves and a 4.93 ERA.

"I kept putting pressure on myself and it kept getting worse," he said. "I wasn't relaxed, comfortable."

Grand jury report criticizes University of Maryland

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — The grand jury investigating the cocaine death of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias issued a tough report late last week, criticizing the school's athletic program and the way it enforced drug use on campus.

The university was "less than honest with the public" about the importance of academics at the school, according to the report by the Prince George's County grand jury.

Maryland was running an athletic program based "to a large extent on the talents of students who had a less than reasonable chance of graduating," said the report, which was issued Thursday.

Many of the athletes recruited by the university had poor academic records in high school, the report said, and coaches and administrators often used "questionable tactics" to keep them academically eligible.

The grand jury report was written after the 23-member panel heard 130 hours of testimony from 90 witnesses about Bias' death, illegal drug use on the College Park campus and the academic affairs of the university's athletes. The report was edited by Circuit Court Judge Joseph S. Casula.

Many of its recommendations also were made by a university task force formed by Chancellor John B. Slaughter after Bias' death. Some grand jury suggestions, including a shortening of the men's basketball season and changes in the athletic department's drug-testing program, already have taken place.

The report also criticized the university for not enforcing laws against illegal drug use by students.

The report accused the campus police of doing a poor job in arresting and prosecuting drug offenders on campus. It says that only four students out of an enrollment of 35,000 are arrested on average each year for illegal drug use on campus.

"Worse yet, the administration has policies which indirectly permit rather than discourage continued illegal drug use," the report said. To remedy this, the grand jury suggested that the university increase the number of campus police, increase their salaries and establish a division within the campus police whose sole responsibility would be drug cases.

As of Friday, the university issued no comment on the report.

Concerning the transferring to other SWC schools

SMU football players await SWC decision

DALLAS (AP) — It will be next Saturday before a decision is made on whether Southern Methodist University football players will be allowed to transfer elsewhere in the Southwest Conference without losing eligibility, league commissioner Fred Jacoby said.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in its Saturday editions that, in a telephone conference call Friday afternoon, SWC faculty representatives voted 5-3 to permit the transfers.

However, the vote was not binding and a decision will not be made until the representatives meet March 7 in Dallas, Jacoby told the newspaper. SMU participated in the conference call, but abstained from voting.

The three schools voting against allowing the transfers to other SWC teams were Arkansas, Texas Tech and Texas Christian, the Star-Telegram said.

SWC athletic directors discussed the SMU transfer situation in a similar conference call Friday morning, the Star-Telegram reported.

Conference officials discussed the possibility of SMU transfers Friday for the first time since the Mustangs football program was suspended Wednesday as part of NCAA sanctions against the school.

Much of the hour-and-15-minute discussion among the faculty representatives was spent arguing the interpretation of an article in the SWC by-laws regarding transfers, the newspaper said.

The article, designed to discourage intra-league transfers, requires two years of ineligibility. NCAA rules require the athlete to sit out one year, but conferences may enact rules more restrictive than those of the NCAA.

Jacoby confirmed a difference of opinion among league members. TCU, Texas Tech and Arkansas voted against any SMU players becoming immediately eligible within the conference, sources told the Star-Telegram.

TCU faculty representative Dr. Tom Badgett confirmed the school's opposition to permitting the transfers.

"The intent of the rule when it was enacted was to discourage transfers between conference schools for any reason," Badgett said. "If it was a good rule then, it's a good rule now."

"I see no reason why any other Southwest Conference school should directly benefit from another school's misfortune. And I don't think this is the time for the Southwest Conference to appear to be a pack of vultures."

Assistant coaches from many schools swarmed the SMU campus after the announcement Wednesday that SMU would not be permitted to field a team in 1987. Several SWC assistant coaches and recruiting coordinators were among them.

According to conference rules, the only time a player can transfer to another SWC school without losing eligibility is a) if the athlete's grant-in-aid has been withdrawn or reduced in value and b) if the "sport or sports in which the student-athlete participated has been discontinued at the first conference institution."

The debate centered on the interpretation of the word "discontinued" and whether it carried a contingency of being a voluntary action, the Star-Telegram said.

In announcing the NCAA-imposed sanctions on Wednesday, director of enforcement David Berst said "this program is terminated" for the 1987 season.

"Much of the discussion was about that word," Tech faculty representative Dr. Robert Sweazy confirmed.

"(The majority Friday) interpreted 'discontinued' to mean the same thing as 'suspended.'"

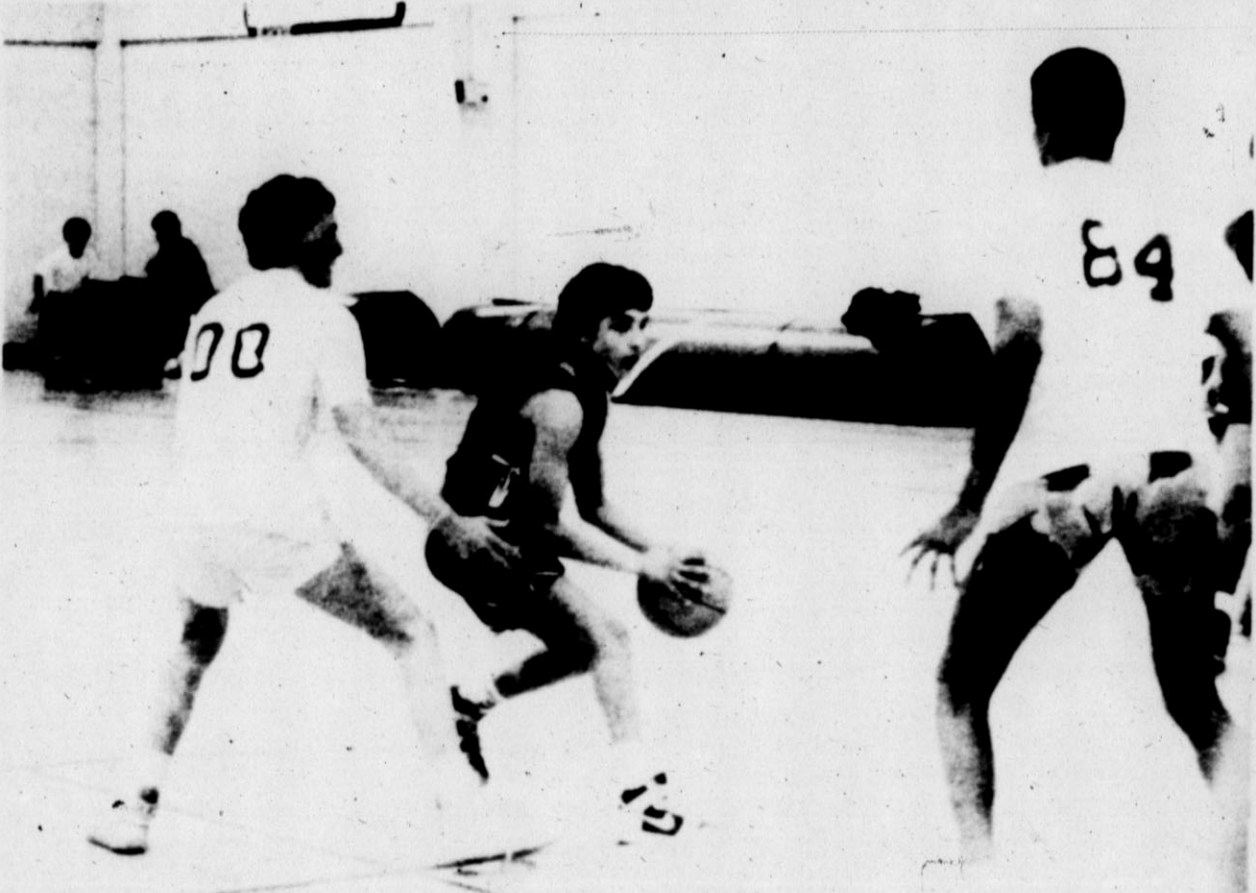

"Texas Tech voted against the motion," Sweazy said.

Baylor faculty representative David Guinn said, "My interpretation was that (the NCAA action) involved an involuntary discontinuation of the program."

"Consequently," he said, "the youngsters should be permitted to transfer."

There was some sentiment among member schools for distinguishing between SMU players depending on the amount of eligibility they had remaining.

"If they have three or four years (of eligibility remaining), they may have a year or two to play at SMU," Houston faculty representative Dr. Michael Johnson said. "Of those with shorter terms remaining, I'm definitely in favor of them being able to transfer."

Pregnant women being sought to participate in research

Pregnant women are being sought to participate in research aimed at predicting the onset of labor. The research is being conducted in the Texas Tech University Psychology Department's Due Date Lab.

The project involves measuring discomfort thresholds throughout pregnancy with the use of an automatic blood pressure cuff, said psychology Professor Rosemary Cogan, Due Date Lab director.

"We and other researchers have found that pregnant women experience a dramatic increase in pain tolerance two to three days before the onset of labor," said Dr. Cogan. "We're studying this phenomenon to try to predict when a woman will go into labor."

The technique involves inflation of the blood pressure cuff on the woman's non-dominant arm until the woman indicates the pressure is uncomfortable. Women are asked to come in several times during mid-pregnancy and then several times a week during the latter weeks of their pregnancies so that their normal thresholds can be charted to allow observation of the threshold increase.

Cogan said that most babies are born within a week—either late or early—of their predicted due date, but many women and their families would like to know a few days in advance that the birth will take place soon.

Women who take part in the study will have access to the lab's literature and all information collected on their pain thresholds.

Interested women can receive further information about the project by calling (806)742-3737.

WATERCOLOR ARTISTS

TORONTO, Ontario (AP) — An exhibition highlighting the work of Alexander and John Robert Cozens, two English watercolor artists of the 18th century, is on view at the Art Gallery of Ontario through March 29.

The museum says the two had a significant role in the development of English landscape art and influenced such great later artists as Turner, Girtin and Constable.

Much of the work by the Cozens, who were father and son, consisted of valleys with winding streams, plains scattered with towns and villages surrounded by rolling hills and framed by trees.

To do the best in the beef cattle industry, a cow-calf producer must maintain a top-notch cow herd. Selection of top replacement heifers to take the place of poorer-producing cows is mandatory urges Dr. Larry L. Boleman, beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agriculture Extension Service. In selection of top heifers Dr. Boleman believes a producer should pay particular attention to pedigree, performance information and, of course, visual appraisal. Boleman reminds the producer that the most economically important beef cattle production trait is that of reproduction. A young heifer has to sexually develop and calve as a two year old and to continue each year of her productive life. Dr. Boleman believes an efficient and functional cow must also wean off a calf whose weight at seven months equals 60% of the cow's weight and the cow should wean off at least 360% of her own body weight by her eighth birthday. The cow should also have maternal instincts to bear, protect and mother the calves with little or no assistance.

Texas Crops

Adverse weather deters operations

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — An assortment of adverse weather hit Texas farmers and ranchers the past week as rain, sleet, hail and snow fell over different parts of the state.

Weather conditions kept most farmers away from field work, further delaying preparations for spring planting, and brought some increase in livestock feeding, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Land preparation for spring crops is behind schedule in some areas, and some farmers will be waiting until after planting to put down fertilizer, Carpenter said.

Wet fields also are causing some delays in incorporation of herbicides to control weeds.

Some corn and sorghum planting is under way in the Rio Grande Valley, and early corn planting has started in parts of South Central Texas and the Coastal Bend where fields are dry enough. Planting of melons, tomatoes and peppers remains active in the Valley. Sugar beet planting has started in the Texas Panhandle. Truck farmers are planting early season vegetables in north central and eastern counties.

The recent cold weather is keeping soil temperatures in check over the state, and Carpenter urged farmers to stay abreast of soil temperature readings as provided by the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University.

Average soil temperatures at the 4-inch depth the past week were as follows in southern locations: Beaumont, 52 degrees; Beeville, 55; Dilley, 57; Eagle Lake, 53; Robstown, 53; Uvalde, 55; Victoria, 55; and Weslaco, 64. Minimum soil temperature averages recommended for planting by the Extension Service are 50 degrees for corn, 55 for sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Some cotton remains to be harvested in the plains, mainly in the Rolling Plains, and last week's rains again delayed harvesting of spinach, carrots, broccoli, greens, cabbage and onion transplants in the Winter Garden of Southwest Texas. Harvesting of oranges, grapefruit, sugarcane, broccoli, cabbage and carrots remains active in the Valley, Carpenter noted.

Wheat is making good growth over the state but needs open weather. Farmers are topdressing the crop with nitrogen to boost growth where field conditions permit. Stocker cattle are making good to excellent gains on wheat, with some daily gains approaching two pounds in the Rolling Plains, Carpenter pointed out.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Rain and snow hampered field work; a little cotton still remains to be harvested, with quality poor. Cattle are getting good grazing from wheat but there are some bloat problems. Some sugar beet planting has started in Deaf Smith County.

SOUTH PLAINS: Rain and snow continued to plague field operations. The cotton harvest is virtually complete, and farmers are looking for open weather to get land ready for spring crops. Wheat is making good growth but greenbug problems are increasing. Recently seeded oats are emerging.

ROLLING PLAINS: Field work continued to lag due to rain and snow. Up to 30 percent of the cotton crop remains to be harvested in some counties due to continued wet conditions. Also, 25 to 30 percent of the wheat crop was never planted in some locations due to the extended wet weather. Small grains are making excellent progress, and some grazing stocker cattle are making daily gains approaching two pounds.

CHUCK GILL

REC bringing national officer

Charles (Chuck) Gill, governor and chief executive officer of the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation (CFC) will be the featured speaker at the 1987 annual membership meeting of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative.

Gill began his career in the rural electrification program in 1961 when he was employed by REA. While he was with REA, he completed the course requirements for a master of arts degree in economics. He left REA in 1972 to join the staff of CFC. The 1987 annual membership meeting is scheduled for Saturday, March 14. The meeting will begin at 5:00 p.m. at the Deaf Smith County Bull Barn in Hereford.

Capital credit checks totaling $400,000 will be returned to those members of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative who purchased electricity during 1972 and 1973.

There will be a fish, chicken, and beef dinner served and entertainment will be provided by James Storie and Gentle Country. The business meeting will begin immediately following the meal.

Eldred Brown, chairman of the board, will call the business meeting to order. Jerry Roberts will present the secretary's report. Following these reports, members will elect two directors.

At the conclusion of the meeting, door prizes valued at $1,000 including a color television set, will be given away.

Winter grains in good condition during February

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wheat and other winter grains were in generally good-to-fair condition in late February, a report by the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility says.

"Snow cover was limited in most states, leaving winter wheat vulnerable to freeze damage," the report said Wednesday. "In Texas, cattle were being moved off wheat pastures, and some fields (wheat plants) were jointing in the southern areas. Recent precipitation improved condition of the wheat."

MORRIS LOUIS
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The first full-scale exhibition in nearly 20 years of the work of American artist Morris Louis is on view at the Fort Worth Art Museum through April 12. "Morris Louis" consists of the largest group of the artist's mature paintings ever to be shown together. It features 45 paintings produced between 1954, the date of Louis' first "Veil" paintings, and 1962, the year of his death at age 49. The museum says that "within this period, Louis created a unique late form of Abstract Expressionism, then radically transformed it, creating works that foreshadowed the space minimalism of art in the '60s."

Charter club members give history

"The Golden Oldies" was the program given by Mary Herring, Georgia Sparks and Bettye Owen when members of La Madre Mia Study Club met in the home of Gladys Merritt with Jenna Simons serving as co-hostess.

After President Lucy Rogers introduced the speakers, the women gave a history of the club which was formed by them in 1953. It was explained that club members had raised money through bake sales, benefit dances and a toy parade.

Members have supported many community projects including serving as drive chairmen for the Mother's March. They have also assisted with the American Cancer Society Crusade and the American Heart Association's Fund Drive.

Proceeds from the club's fundraising events helped furnish two waiting rooms at Deaf Smith General Hospital. Also, the Hereford Day Care Center and the Opportunity Plan have benefitted by their various projects.

When the club was first formed, the focal point of study was children. As members' children grew older, the club changed to a general course of study.

Following the history presentation, the speakers showed a slide of past club years.

Members answered roll call with a fond memory of the club. Also, President Rogers announced that the club's Anniversary Tea will be held from 2-4 p.m. March 29 in the E.B. Black House. The event will honor study club women in the community. Those in attendance included Joyce Allred, Carolyn Baxter, Francine Bromlow, Merle Clark, Mary Herring, Betty Lady, Betty Martin, Gladys Merritt, Lavon Nieman, Bettye Owen, Lucy Rogers, Jenna Simons, Mysedia Smith, Georgia Sparks, Betty Taylor, Pat Walsh, Marline Watson, Mary Beth White and Judy Williams.

A flag ceremony, which honors the American flag as a symbol of this country, is an important part of all Girl Scout programs and ceremonies. It helps to instill respect and love of country. Displaying the flag are members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 288. From left are Melanie Morrison, Jennifer Rampley, Lori Wilburn, Rosemary Estrada and Mercy Sample.

Lecture series planned for students, public

West Texas State University has announced the inauguration of a distinguished lecturer series designed to provide a positive enrichment experience both for WTSU students and the community at large.

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecturer Series, which will begin this April, will bring nationally-recognized figures to the university campus on a regular basis. The first confirmed lecturer is John Naisbitt, author of the international best seller "Megatrends", on April 9.

WTSU President, Dr. Ed D. Roach was inspired to re-establish a lecturer series while reading about the Lyceum Series in J.A. Hill's book, "More Than Bricks and Mortar." The Lyceum Series brought notable speakers to West Texas State during its first decades, including William Jennings Bryan in 1916.

T. Boone Pickens will work in conjunction with a committee of faculty and student representatives from WTSU's four colleges, as well as the college deans, administrators, and representatives from the community in selecting and bringing speakers to the Panhandle. In order to join The Friends of the Library, come by at 211 E. 4th St. Memberships are divided into the following classifications: individual, $2 per year; family, $5 per year; organizational, $10 per year; business, $10 per year; lifetime, $100 per year; and contributions, $15 and up, entitling donor to membership.

The Friends sponsor the family film which is shown the third Thursday of each month at the library free of charge to the public.

Other projects that have been sponsored by the Friends of the Library are the supplying of decals for T-shirts during the Summer Reading Club, purchasing audiovisual equipment for the children to view a filmstrip and tape in the library, and the purchasing of back files of The Hereford Brand.

New projects being sponsored in 1986-87 include the purchasing of books-on-tapes for patrons to check out and listen to as they travel or at home. The group also supports various events at the library.

The Friends have two projects to make money each year, the membership drive and the annual book sale held each October.

Pelvic inflammatory disease serious adolescent problem

Multiple sexual partners and fear of parental discovery are among the issues that make treating adolescents for pelvic inflammatory disease (PID) difficult, according to the February issue of Texas Medicine. PID is a sexually transmitted disease that can result in infertility and chronic pelvic pain.

peer pressure, and less developed menstrual cycles, state the authors. The study also revealed that half of the patients did not return for follow-up care after discharge from the hospital. The authors conclude that long-term follow-up with the patients is a key to successfully treating these patients.

Sexually active adolescents have a ten times greater chance of developing PID than do women age 24 and older, according to the official journal of the Texas Medical Association. Some reasons for this difference include the expense of medical care,

The gross domestic product of Brazil jumped 8.3 percent in 1985 after growing 4.5 percent in 1984, causing per capita income to surge 7.8 percent in those two years, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. If Brazil is excluded, the region grew by less than 1 percent in 1985.

Tom T. Hall to be honored March 26

LEVELLAND - Plans are shaping up to assemble what organizers hope to become the World's Largest Bluegrass Band to honor country music artist Tom T. Hall when he visits South Plains College in Levelland, March 26, for the dedication of a $500,000 recording and production studio in his honor.

Hall, his promoter, and college officials have decided to make history and go for the "Guinness Book of World Records." "We are inviting anyone who can play banjo, guitar, mandolin, fiddle, string bass, dobro or any other string instrument that is non-electric to join the fun and come pick in the World's Largest Bluegrass Band," said John Hartin, coordinator of South Plains College's two-year program in country and bluegrass music.

Hartin said his department has already mailed invitations to more than 800 former students who have taken classes in country and bluegrass music at the college since 1975 when the program was initiated. "We are getting some favorable response, but our success will rely on the average guitar picker who wants to come pick with us," he said. Plans call for the group to play bluegrass standards "Fox on the Run," "Cripple Creek," and "Foggy Mountain Breakdown."

Tandy Rice, president of Top Billing, the agency which represents Hall, reports that "we're even talking to the 'Father of Bluegrass,' Bill Monroe, about conducting the band."

According to Guinness, the largest marching band had 3,182 musicians, the largest orchestra ever assembled had 20,100 people, and the largest choir had 60,000 singers.

In addition to the bluegrass jam session, a number of other activities are being planned for Tom T. Hall Day in Levelland. The Country and Bluegrass Music program at the college will host a Country and Bluegrass Music Festival and Open House from 1-5 p.m. Highlights will include informal jam sessions by music groups, a performance by the Maines Brothers Band based out of Lubbock, demonstrations of state-of-the-art recording and video production equipment, and mini-workshops presented by noted banjoist Alan Munde and bluegrass specialist Joe Carr. Carr will also direct a session entitled "Meet the Tom T. Hall Band."

A 6 p.m. dedication banquet is planned to honor Hall and dedicate the recording facility in his name. College officials also plan at that time to award Hall an Honorary Associate of Arts degree in Country Music. Only one other person has ever received such a degree from SPC. Monroe received one from the college in 1979 in bluegrass music as part of the PBS special "Bluegrass Spectacular" hosted by Hall.

Tom T. Hall and the Storytellers will perform a concert at 8:30 p.m. in the Tom T. Hall Recording and Production Studio which can seat about 450 people.

Tickets for the banquet and concert are $10 per person and are not on sale at South Plains College in Levelland and at its branch campus in Lubbock, 1302 Main St.

Self exclusion of high risk blood donations reduces risk

A confidential system where donors can indicate that their blood should be used only for laboratory studies has proved effective in reducing the incidence of high risk donor blood entering the blood supply, according to the February issue of Texas Medicine.

The safety of the nation's blood supply became a critical issue when it was discovered that acquired immune deficiency (AIDS) could be transmitted by blood transfusion. In 1983, concern about this disease led to AIDS blood donor screening recommendations from the Food and Drug Administration. The Gulf Coast Regional Blood Center, Houston, the site of this confidential system, implemented the FDA recommendations immediately. However, in 1984, it expanded upon the FDA recommendations and began requiring donors to apply a pressure-sensitive bar-coded label to a donor card that indicates whether the donor's blood should be used "for laboratory studies only" or "for transfusion." The blood center believed the risk of contracting AIDS through blood transfusion could be further reduced by going beyond the FDA recommendations and eliminating donations from persons at high risk for AIDS, according to the official journal of the Texas Medical Association.

"The hypothesis depended on the confidentiality of the system developed to protect individual rights," according to authors Bill T. Teague, Pablo J. Fortes, John Drury, and Ronald Phillips. All of the authors are with the Gulf Coast Regional Blood Center.

The blood center tests all donations, regardless of designation, for the HTLV-III antibody. From the period of June 1 through November 1985, the center found that 19 percent of the "for transfusion" donations were repeatedly reactive to the AIDS antibody testing. Only .07 percent were positive for the Western blot test which generally is accepted as a reliable test to confirm the presence of the antibody.

"The extremely low number of 'for transfusion' donors who test repeatable positive for the HTLV-III antibody suggests that these donors are, in fact, very low risk and/or did not feel they were at high risk at the time of donation," according to the authors.

Gathering in Westminster Hall after the coronation of George IV in 1821, celebrators consumed 17,000 pounds of beef, veal and mutton, together with a vast quantity of sweetbreads, cows' heels and calves' feet, 160 geese, 1,160 chickens, 1,730 pounds of bacon, 160 dishes of fish and more.

COLD TREATMENTS
 NEW YORK (AP) — There are dozens of cold treatments available on the market and more seem to come out each year.

But, according to Family Circle magazine, traditional methods of bed rest, aspirin and lots of liquids still are in style. The magazine says chicken soup is good for a cold because it has properties that make the nose run. This is a good way to rid the body of germs before they penetrate the nasal mucosa.

It says food spiced with cayenne pepper will help unclog a stuffy nose, adding that if pepper is too stimulating then try a steamy shower instead.

To Sing In Service

Susie Merrick and Jim Haile are to sing a duet at tonight's Christian Unity Service set for 7 p.m. in the Church of the Nazarene. A nursery will be provided and a fellowship time is planned for after the service. The unity service, with the theme of "Reconciled to God in Christ", is a forerunner to more ecumenical events set for the Lenten season which is March 4 through Easter Sunday, April 19.

DR. GOTT Don't believe pregnancy myths

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My boyfriend and I have begun to have intercourse. I've heard that if you have cramps, irregular periods and severe acne after intercourse, it means you can't get pregnant. Is this true?

DEAR READER — No, no, no! Pregnancy results whenever a sperm fertilizes an egg. This can happen at the time of first intercourse — with or without cramps, and with or without acne.

Pregnancy occurs most commonly during mid-cycle, but there is no absolutely safe period. If you choose to have intercourse, make sure that you use contraception. Contraceptive devices, such as condoms, are easily available in pharmacies, or you may wish to have a doctor prescribe oral contraceptives or a diaphragm. In any case, don't trust your luck, old wives' tales or the "right" time of the month to avoid pregnancy.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I want to get involved in aerobic exercise, but every time I try jumping around, doing cartwheels or jogging I feel as if I'm going to fall flat on my face. Could my asthma be affecting my energy? I'm 5 feet 2, and 118 pounds.

DEAR READER — Asthma is acute spasm of the muscular walls of the bronchi, or breathing passages. It is seen with increased production of mucus. The combination of spasm and mucus causes wheezing, coughing and difficulty breathing.

The disease affects physical activity, since asthmatics have trouble exhaling stale air and replacing it with fresh air.

Bronchodilators are the primary treatment for asthma. These drugs release or prevent bronchial spasm, thus allowing patients to breathe.

A Flair for Design

Simple glazed walls are not difficult and give a nice effect in a painted room. Over your base coat, use a thin glaze, and a good glazing brush. Make multi-directional brush strokes, so that your pattern remains random, and soft. Be careful of drips as these could ruin the look you are trying to achieve. If you are using an oil base finish, the glaze may be made of thinned varathane, tinted with a small amount of artist oil colors or universal tinters, to get the color glaze you want. Be careful that the colors are completely mixed since even a tiny speck can become a big streak on your wall.

Trail and error is the name of the game here, so patience is your best asset. The rewards are worth the effort though, so don't despair if you have difficulty at first.

Texas doctors limit services

A third of Texas physicians have limited or stopped performing certain medical procedures because of the high cost of professional liability insurance, according to a recent survey.

Conducted by Opinion Analysts, Inc. of Austin, the survey asked 4,000 Texas Medical Association physician members how professional liability insurance rates have affected patient care and the medical profession. TMA is a professional organization with nearly 27,000 physician and medical student members.

Out of the nearly 70 percent of family physicians who have limited services, most said they are no longer delivering babies. Another 24 percent said they have stopped doing surgery. In addition, of the 47 percent of obstetricians-gynecologists who have limited services, most said they have limited the number of babies they deliver.

While the survey found that Texans are finding some services difficult to find, the threat of a malpractice suit is causing more than half of all physicians to order additional lab tests, x-rays, and consultations. These extra tests and procedures often are referred to as "defensive medicine" because they are used to document a medical diagnosis and protect a physician in the event of a lawsuit.

The cost of medical care for Texans also is affected by the rising cost of professional liability insurance, according to the survey. Texas physicians have raised their fees an average of more than four and a half percent in the past two years because of these costs. At the same time, doctors estimate that more than 13.5 percent of a patient's bill goes towards defensive medicine practices.

Sixty-nine percent of Texas physicians predict they will have to raise their fees for non-Medicare and non-Medicaid patients if professional liability insurance premiums continue to increase. Twenty percent said they would limit the procedures they perform to reduce their liability insurance costs.

Regarding peer review, the regular evaluation of medical procedures and health care professionals, 52 percent said they would be more likely to participate in peer review and 47 percent would be more likely to report a physician to the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners if they were protected from a lawsuit. The TSBME is the state agency authorized to license and discipline Texas physicians.

British election campaigns are limited by law to about three weeks.

Red Cross Update

March is National Red Cross Month. President Reagan issued the following proclamation.

Few events humble men more than natural disasters. Last year in the United States alone, hurricanes, floods, and tornadoes killed 299 people and destroyed property valued at $15 billion. Working to mitigate the human toll of that devastation were nearly 90,000 American Red Cross disaster relief workers—95 percent of whom were volunteers—helping the victims first to survive, then to rebuild their lives.

Disaster assistance speaks to the deepest and purest ideals of the Red Cross movement. It is the reason the Red Cross was formed more than a century ago and it remains the truest example of its continuing commitment to service.

The American Red Cross has responded to recent disasters swiftly and magnanimously, as it always has. Since September, nearly a dozen major disasters—including 8 large scale floods in the South and Midwest—have pressed the American Red Cross into action. But disaster is not the only spur. Social services, health and safety programs, blood and tissue efforts and international activities all galvanize our Red Cross into service.

The organization continues to lead the way in making the Nation's blood supply as safe as possible. It recently introduced testing to reduce post-transfusion nonA, nonB hepatitis, following up its 1985 implementation of HTLV-III testing for AIDS. It also launched its Look Back initiative, a program that notifies people who have been transfused with blood or blood components from donors who later tested positive for the AIDS antibody. Finally, the American Red Cross undertook a massive AIDS public education effort to spread the facts about the disease.

The American Red Cross continues to train millions of students in first aid, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, water safety, and small craft operation.

It maintains vital communication service to the Nation's military through a network of Red Cross posts at 277 domestic and overseas military installations. Every 11 seconds, the Red Cross helps someone in our Armed Forces or a member of the servicemember's family. Last summer, the Red Cross formed the National Bone Marrow Donor Registry, giving new hope to thousands of patients with life-threatening blood diseases. Finally, the American Red Cross continue to aid foreign disaster victims. Its response to the October 1986 earthquake in San Salvador included cash, goods and staff services valued at more than half a million dollars. Work still goes on in the aftermath of the terrible September 1986 earthquake in Mexico City, where Red Cross workers from around the world are helping the victims to rebuild.

No one can predict when the next river will flood or the next storm will hit. No one can foresee the next threat to the Nation's health. What is predictable is that we will face such threats and emergencies, and that the American Red Cross will be there to help, and Now, THEREFORE, I, RONALD REAGAN, President of the United States of American and Honorary Chairman of the American Red Cross, do hereby proclaim the month of March, 1987 as American Red Cross Month. I urge all Americans to continue to give blood, volunteer their time whenever possible to assist in this great service, and to give generous support to the work of the American Red Cross and its local Chapters.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter will celebrate the month by having our Annual Chili Supper March 21 at the Community Center and honoring our Volunteer of the Year. A meeting for a Water Safety Instructors, Aides and interested persons is planned and several classes will be held.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

DEAR POLLY — Is it possible to brew tea in an automatic drip coffee maker? — R.D.

DEAR R.D. — Yes, you can use the automatic drip coffee maker to brew tea. Just place loose tea leaves in the filter and operate the machine as you would for making coffee. Start with a teaspoon of tea for each cup of water, but you may have to experiment to figure out the right proportion of tea to water to get the preferred strength. It may not be traditional, but this high-tech way to brew tea is easy and requires no attention from you. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Helen asked for a good coleslaw dressing. I think she'll like this: Mix one pint mayonnaise, three-fourths cup sugar, one-fourth cup apple cider vinegar and one-fourth cup chopped pimentos. Add salt to taste. Toss with shredded cabbage. — E.G.

DEAR POLLY — When barbecuing, sprinkle chopped onions and garlic over the hot coals. This smells so good and adds flavor to the meat being cooked. — WILMA

DEAR POLLY — Before toasting marshmallows, dip the toasting fork into butter, then put on the marshmallows. The finished marshmallows will be easy to slide off the fork. — GRACE

DEAR POLLY — After addressing letters and packages, rub over the address with a wax candle. This saves the ink from smudging. — MRS. J.E.

'Balancing Your Life' theme of annual event

"Balancing Your Life" will be the theme for the third annual Weekend With Wellness scheduled for Friday and Saturday, March 27 and 28 at West Texas State University.

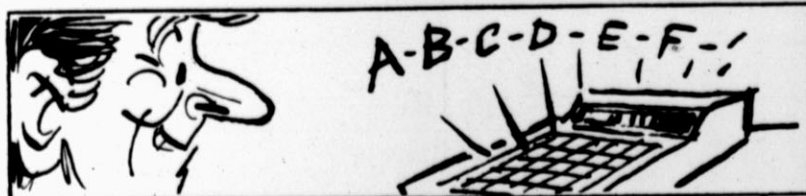

As in the past, top experts in the areas of exercise, fitness, nutrition and stress management will conduct sessions throughout the two-day event. Many of the workshops are geared for the older population, although there will be something for everyone at this year's event, from strength training to water aerobics.

The keynote speaker at the fourth general session on March 28 will be Drew Pearson, former Dallas Cowboy receiver. After his career as one of Dallas' leading receivers, Mr. Pearson has gone on to sportscasting, coaching and involvement in civic projects. Other speakers of note will be T. Boone Pickens, Jr., who will give the address at the lunch session on March 28, Harriett Griffith, the Chair of the Governor's Commission on Silver-Haired Legislation, speaking at the first General Session on March 27, and Dr. Philip Allsen of Brigham Young University, who will start the day at the second General Session on the morning of March 28.

In addition to the regular sessions, the third annual Well-Come Spring 5K Classic, sponsored by the American Heart Association, will be run over a flat course beginning and ending in front of Henson Activities Center on the WTSU campus. It begins bright and early at 7 a.m. on March 28.

Brochures with registration forms for Weekend With Wellness and the Well-Come Spring 5K will be distributed throughout the Panhandle, or call 666-3531 for more information and registration forms.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Jack Hincley thought all his son needed to straighten out his life was a good swift kick in the pants. But after John Hincley Jr. shot President Reagan in 1981 the oil man knew he was mistaken.

In 1983 Hincley sold his business interests and he and his wife, Jo Ann, began working as advocates for the mentally ill. Will you please print the warning signs of mental illness and tell people where they can get more information? Thanks a million, Ann-Been There in Denver

DEAR DENVER: Here are the warnings of mental illness as they appear in the booklet put out by the American Mental Health Fund. This information can be extremely useful to people like the Hincleys, who are having trouble with their children and know nothing about the behavioral patterns of the mentally ill. Thanks for sending them on.

Watch Out For—
Marked personality changes
Confused thinking; strange or grandiose ideas

Thinking or talking about suicide
Numerous, unexplained physical ailments; marked changes in eating or sleeping patterns

Anger or hostility out of proportion to the situation

Delusions, hallucinations, hearing voices

Abuse of alcohol or drugs
Growing inability to cope with problems and daily activities such as school, job or personal needs.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My heart went out to "Problem Revisited" because I know what it is like to be a lot bigger than most kids my age.

I am a twin. When we were 12 years old I wore a size 18 dress and weighed close to 200 pounds. My twin sister wore a size 8 and weighed 106 pounds. I was always "Fatty, Fatty, two-by-four. Can't get through the kitchen door." My twin, of course, had a great little figure.

When Mom took us to see Dad (he was stationed at the Air Force base in Kessler Field, Mo.) she asked the airline clerk for one adult fare and two children. The man behind the desk said, "Do you mean to tell me that big girl is a child?" Mom replied, "Yes, in fact those girls happen to be twins." He looked at her and said, "That's one for Ripley's Believe It Or Not."

For years I had to take insults like that, not to mention the trouble I ran into buying clothes that looked my age. Finally I got smart and decided I didn't have to look like a tub of lard.

I told Mom I wanted to go to a doctor and get on a diet. She said OK, and that's what I did. Within a year I weighed 110 pounds and had the figure I wanted. Sign me - Meltdown in Ohio

DEAR O.: What a great success story! Thanks for sharing it with us.

Plans being made for salvage facility

More than 30 Panhandle non-profit groups have formed a coalition to simultaneously stop waste and alleviate hunger in the top 26 counties of Texas and Eastern New Mexico. Hereford Senior Citizens is a coalition member.

Calling themselves the Hands Across America Panhandle Coalition, the group's first project will be to raise funds to build a salvage facility in conjunction with the High Plains Food Bank at 815 S. Ross in Amarillo.

The coalition called a press conference Feb. 18 at First National Bank to announce completion of a grant application to Hands Across America for funds.

Jacinto Alderete, a spokesman for the coalition and director of the Wesley Community Center, said the groups decided to go together in their request rather than apply individually.

"This shows the spirit of working together. We believe that this project represents our best opportunity to obtain a grant from Hands Across America since so much of the money for the national project came from this area," he said.

Amarillo was on the route for the national chain of hands to emphasize the need to fight hunger in America on Memorial Day last year.

The group will ask Hands Across America for $40,000 to be matched by local funds for a project totalling $120,000.

The salvage area would be a portion of the existing High Plains Food Bank warehouse built under specific conditions. To sort and distribute salvage, a warehouse must have a separate entrance and meet all health regulations for salvage operations.

By adding the salvage operation, Melody Wattenbarger, executive director for the High Plains Food Bank, said by being able to accept salvage from groceries and other food industries, the food bank could distribute an additional 30,000 pounds of food per month to its 160 member agencies.

Food from the food bank is never bought or sold, but member agencies pay a 12 cent per pound share contribution to the food bank for storage and handling.

To poor of the world

Volunteers work to provide animals

RUTLAND, Mass. (AP) — No task is too small for Laura Booth when it comes to helping the poor.

She is in the pasture and pens feeding cows, goats and sheep, trimming their hooves, giving them vaccinations and nursing the sick ones. She is in the barn raking hay and shoveling manure. She is at churches, showing off the animals to raise money to buy more. She is in the woods tapping the maples for syrup.

Ms. Booth, a 25-year-old transplant from the industrial valleys of western Pennsylvania, with college training to work with people, now labors 12 hours a day with farm animals in Massachusetts.

She is one of 1,200 volunteers who work for Heifer Project International, a non-profit, ecumenical organization that provides cows and other livestock so the poor from Maine to Managua can feed themselves.

Heifer's charity extends to teaching recipients to breed their gift animals so they can make a living.

But with only 155 full-time staffers in the United States and abroad, the project's lifeblood is volunteers like Ms. Booth, who do everything from soliciting precious dollars to cleaning the barns.

For a monthly stipend of $100, Ms. Booth works from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. at Heifer's Northeast Resource and Livestock Center here, one of nine regional centers across the United States. She lives in a trailer on the farm and is in bed generally by 9 p.m., happily weary from the long day's work.

"I didn't just want to jump into something that was a staid job for the rest of my life," she said. "I wanted to make a difference in people's lives."

"Helping people out is something that I believe very strongly in. I feel like I've dedicated my life to that."

Working with government agencies and churches to find its recipients, the Heifer Project gives away goats, rabbits, swine, bees, chickens and fish, as well as cows. It chooses poor farmers who belong to cooperatives, livestock associations or extension services rather than individual families.

Anne Bossi, a Heifer Project livestock consultant in Maine, said many people who had received cows told her it was the first time they were able to give their kids all the milk they wanted.

It has done far more for Troy Kilby, a 25-year-old divorced mother of three from Bradford, Maine.

Ms. Kilby was unemployed and in debt, living on government aid, and her children, aged 3 to 8, were hungry much of the time.

Heifer gave her a milk cow, which she kept at an old farmhouse she was renting, and materials to fix the barn. With the cow, her children had more fresh, whole milk than they could drink. She sold the extra milk and butter, and the added income eased other expenses and helped her make a $500 down payment on 12 acres of land.

Next, Heifer gave her a second cow and four rabbits, which she bred into 30 and is selling for profit. She is also selling jug milk and butter to neighbors and is raising veal calves.

Her aim is to support herself.

"It helped a lot," she said. "It was a start in the right direction. After I got the cow, I got rid of some bills. I had lived in a house without electricity and running water. Now I've got electricity. We're working on running water. I don't think I could be where I am without everything they've given me."

The Heifer Project, with headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., was started in 1944 by Dan West, an Indiana farmer who as a volunteer relief worker in the Spanish Civil War had fed hungry children with powdered milk. West felt it made more sense to give the needy real cows so they could feed themselves "hout having to take handouts."

The toys in the exhibit include dolls, mechanical, optical and musical toys, tin and wood dollhouses.

'Balancing Your Life' theme of annual event

"Balancing Your Life" will be the theme for the third annual Weekend With Wellness scheduled for Friday and Saturday, March 27 and 28 at West Texas State University.

As in the past, top experts in the areas of exercise, fitness, nutrition and stress management will conduct sessions throughout the two-day event. Many of the workshops are geared for the older population, although there will be something for everyone at this year's event, from strength training to water aerobics.

The keynote speaker at the fourth general session on March 28 will be Drew Pearson, former Dallas Cowboy receiver. After his career as one of Dallas' leading receivers, Mr. Pearson has gone on to sportscasting, coaching and involvement in civic projects. Other speakers of note will be T. Boone Pickens, Jr., who will give the address at the lunch session on March 28, Harriett Griffith, the Chair of the Governor's Commission on Silver-Haired Legislation, speaking at the first General Session on March 27, and Dr. Philip Allsen of Brigham Young University, who will start the day at the second General Session on the morning of March 28.

In addition to the regular sessions, the third annual Well-Come Spring 5K Classic, sponsored by the American Heart Association, will be run over a flat course beginning and ending in front of Henson Activities Center on the WTSU campus. It begins bright and early at 7 a.m. on March 28.

Brochures with registration forms for Weekend With Wellness and the Well-Come Spring 5K will be distributed throughout the Panhandle, or call 666-3531 for more information and registration forms.

Plans being made for salvage facility

More than 30 Panhandle non-profit groups have formed a coalition to simultaneously stop waste and alleviate hunger in the top 26 counties of Texas and Eastern New Mexico. Hereford Senior Citizens is a coalition member.

Calling themselves the Hands Across America Panhandle Coalition, the group's first project will be to raise funds to build a salvage facility in conjunction with the High Plains Food Bank at 815 S. Ross in Amarillo.

The coalition called a press conference Feb. 18 at First National Bank to announce completion of a grant application to Hands Across America for funds.

Jacinto Alderete, a spokesman for the coalition and director of the Wesley Community Center, said the groups decided to go together in their request rather than apply individually.

"This shows the spirit of working together. We believe that this project represents our best opportunity to obtain a grant from Hands Across America since so much of the money for the national project came from this area," he said.

Amarillo was on the route for the national chain of hands to emphasize the need to fight hunger in America on Memorial Day last year.

The group will ask Hands Across America for $40,000 to be matched by local funds for a project totalling $120,000.

The salvage area would be a portion of the existing High Plains Food Bank warehouse built under specific conditions. To sort and distribute salvage, a warehouse must have a separate entrance and meet all health regulations for salvage operations.

By adding the salvage operation, Melody Wattenbarger, executive director for the High Plains Food Bank, said by being able to accept salvage from groceries and other food industries, the food bank could distribute an additional 30,000 pounds of food per month to its 160 member agencies.

Food from the food bank is never bought or sold, but member agencies pay a 12 cent per pound share contribution to the food bank for storage and handling.

To poor of the world

Volunteers work to provide animals

RUTLAND, Mass. (AP) — No task is too small for Laura Booth when it comes to helping the poor.

She is in the pasture and pens feeding cows, goats and sheep, trimming their hooves, giving them vaccinations and nursing the sick ones. She is in the barn raking hay and shoveling manure. She is at churches, showing off the animals to raise money to buy more. She is in the woods tapping the maples for syrup.

Ms. Booth, a 25-year-old transplant from the industrial valleys of western Pennsylvania, with college training to work with people, now labors 12 hours a day with farm animals in Massachusetts.

She is one of 1,200 volunteers who work for Heifer Project International, a non-profit, ecumenical organization that provides cows and other livestock so the poor from Maine to Managua can feed themselves.

Heifer's charity extends to teaching recipients to breed their gift animals so they can make a living.

But with only 155 full-time staffers in the United States and abroad, the project's lifeblood is volunteers like Ms. Booth, who do everything from soliciting precious dollars to cleaning the barns.

For a monthly stipend of $100, Ms. Booth works from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. at Heifer's Northeast Resource and Livestock Center here, one of nine regional centers across the United States. She lives in a trailer on the farm and is in bed generally by 9 p.m., happily weary from the long day's work.

"I didn't just want to jump into something that was a staid job for the rest of my life," she said. "I wanted to make a difference in people's lives."

"Helping people out is something that I believe very strongly in. I feel like I've dedicated my life to that."

Working with government agencies and churches to find its recipients, the Heifer Project gives away goats, rabbits, swine, bees, chickens and fish, as well as cows. It chooses poor farmers who belong to cooperatives, livestock associations or extension services rather than individual families.

Anne Bossi, a Heifer Project livestock consultant in Maine, said many people who had received cows told her it was the first time they were able to give their kids all the milk they wanted.

It has done far more for Troy Kilby, a 25-year-old divorced mother of three from Bradford, Maine.

Ms. Kilby was unemployed and in debt, living on government aid, and her children, aged 3 to 8, were hungry much of the time.

Heifer gave her a milk cow, which she kept at an old farmhouse she was renting, and materials to fix the barn. With the cow, her children had more fresh, whole milk than they could drink. She sold the extra milk and butter, and the added income eased other expenses and helped her make a $500 down payment on 12 acres of land.

Next, Heifer gave her a second cow and four rabbits, which she bred into 30 and is selling for profit. She is also selling jug milk and butter to neighbors and is raising veal calves.

Her aim is to support herself.

"It helped a lot," she said. "It was a start in the right direction. After I got the cow, I got rid of some bills. I had lived in a house without electricity and running water. Now I've got electricity. We're working on running water. I don't think I could be where I am without everything they've given me."

The Heifer Project, with headquarters in Little Rock, Ark., was started in 1944 by Dan West, an Indiana farmer who as a volunteer relief worker in the Spanish Civil War had fed hungry children with powdered milk. West felt it made more sense to give the needy real cows so they could feed themselves "thout having to take handouts."

Local Rotary Club to help with telethon

The Rotary Club of Hereford will be helping Easter Seals during the 1987 telethon by manning a phone center beginning at 8 a.m. on Sunday, March 8.

The 16th Easter Seal Telethon will begin March 7 at 10:30 p.m. on KFDA-TV, Channel 10 in Amarillo. Julia Clark, weekend anchor for KFDA, and Robert and Robyn Hinkle will host the local segments of the telethon. "It is especially exciting this year to have the Rotarians in Hereford helping us," said Jelaine Workman, Regional Director for Easter Seal. "The 1987 Easter Seal Poster Child for the Panhandle area is Dusty Gearn, son of Tim and Keith Ann Gearn from Hereford. Dusty attends West Central School and was born with cerebral palsy. He attended the Rotarians in Borger, Dumas, Pampa, Tulia, Spearman, Perryton, Dalhart and Panhandle will also be answering pledge phones during the telethon in their towns. The Hall County Farm Bureau agents in Memphis, Texas, will also participate.

Easter Seals provides direct services to children and adult with disabilities. These services include speech, occupational and physical therapy; transportation; orthopedic equipment purchase and loan; hearing aids; referral and follow-up.
