Tax Collections Fall Far Behind

Percentages of taxes paid in bethe delinquent period began ary 1, as released by the tors this week, show the lowest returns Deaf Smith county citizens have ever witnessed.

The Hereford independent school district leads all others with 47 er cent of taxes lue being paid d about four per cent still to me in before July by reason of split tax payment plan offer-by the school board.

The rural school districts were so fortunate in the percentof taxes collected, the average among the several schools represented being about 33 per cent. State and county tax payments were about on a par with rural shool districts, as nearly as can be determined they were 33 per cent paid. Poll tax payments ran in a similar proportion, 640 buying the right to vote as compared with 1775 last year. City taxes took an upturn over rural schools and state and county receipts, with 45 per cent being paid and an indication of more sing paid before August 1, because of the split tax plan offerel by the city commission.

Automobile license plates stopped completely in their sale when the Bate legislature began special efforts to extend auto license payments until April 1, which bill was

SIDELIGHTS

By MARVIN JONES Member of Congress from Texas

I feel that the people of our section would be interested in the program on which a number of us have been working during this session of Congress,

We have been doing everything possible to get the members of the House and the Senate to realize just how serious condit-Jons are. Ordinary remedies will not be sufficient, for these are not ordinary times. We are face to face with grim facts which call for emergency action.

In the first place, there should be a stay of foreclosures until such time as the necessary legislative program can be worked out. The House has already pass-ed a measure of this kind. I hope the officials of the various states will take such action as is necessary to supplement the work of Congress.

Her Technique

T'S a lie! The wicked don't flee and they aren't punished.

Clarice Mackay burst into the room and dug her little fingers from screaming.

"Have you lost your mind?" sked Alice Daimain, calmly looking at her roommate. "For a bachelor girl you certainly lack the polse that is part of our creed." Clarice merely gave her friend a chair by the window. "But it's the third time this week!" she said after a moment's

"What's the third time this week?" asked Alice, glancing across at the slender little figure. Clarice was a lovely girl, Alice reflected, but terribly lacking in poise and so utterably dependent upon Jack Withers for her happiness, Alice amended more fairly.

"You know that little widow, Mrs. Holcombe?" Clarice went on. "Well, she was at the dance Halloween night and I, like an idlot, introduced Jack to her, and the minute she spoke to him I knew it was all up with me. I could see him failing for her right on the spot. She has that pitiful little girl oh-oh-I'm-too-little-and-frightened-to-crossthe street-alone manner about everything she does. Oh, her technique is perfect. Don't fret, she's got him bound and gagged. I've seen her with him three times this week, and I'll bet he's spent more money on her already than he has on me in all the two years he's known me. She's deadly. That's the dreadful part of it. If it were some little lonely girl I could almost resign myself thinking about how happy Jack was making her, but that and simply ignores my lcy manner. It's impossible to squelch her. Oh. Alice, I'm so wretched I could die! And the worst is she's so attractive and vampish she could marry any-

"Get over it!" sneered Clarice. "You ought to see the adoring way he looks at her. He's head over heels in love with her, and she's just pulling him along for all she's worth.

"I wouldn't be too sure," said Alice, "and I'd let him see me with other men every chance I got. I'd go to dances and movies and anywhere I could."

"What heart have I to do anything?" said Clarice with exaspera-"I only want to die!"

But all the same she did take Alice's advice and a few weeks later found herself one evening at a party, one of a dozen guests, among them Jack and Mrs. Holcombe. Jack's manner was strained and he seemed embarrassed in Clurice's presence, but the little widow was ber usual gay, playful self. When she saw Jack talking to Clarice she went over to him and tugged at his arm.

"Naughty boy," she teased. "Come away. You brought little Evelyn to this party and not Miss Mackay. I won't love oo any more, ever, ever Jack flushed and looked silly.

Somehow he felt that she had made a fool of him in the presence of his erstwhile sweetheart.

"Isn't he naughty, naughty, Miss Mackay?" she asked, looking mischievously at Clarice.

"I don't think so," the girlanswered in her most cheerful man per. "I think he's nice."

"Thanks, Clarice, you always were a trump!' said Jack warmly For the first time in Mrs. Hol combe's shallow little life she felt defeated. With a toss of her golden head she turned away from the two and joined another group across the Clarice was happier than she had been in weeks. She put a gentle hand on Jack's arm.

"You'd better go back to her. dear," she said kindly. "After all, you are her escort tonight!" "Yes, but darned if I'll ever be

The next day he called Clarice Mackay up for a date, and now certain that she had won him back she told Alice all about the little incldent of the night before. "It seems to me the wicked gen-

The Holy Hour was conducted Friday from 3 to 4. It was an withering glance, flung her hat on hour of praise or adoration, of the table and herself into the deep love, thanksgiving, reparation and petition. It was holy hour for when the congregation rose to sing those old hymns of praise and love to the divine heart of Jesus, it was an echo, shall we say?, but plercingly sweet, of that thunderous flood of praise ceaselessly poured forth before the heavenly throne of the Lamb. When priests and people knelt to present to our Heavenly Father their needs and hopes and desires in those petitions of the church's Litanies, they felt very close to that altar on. high, "where Jesus ever liveth to make intercession for us," for each prayer ended with the humble and trustful supplication "through Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Lord." Then there were moments of silent prayer when human hearts speaking intimately with the divinely human heart of their Saviour were unburdened

As the congregation poured forth from the church, their countenances bespoke peace and joy, and youthful hearts were once again strengthened in their love and loyalty to Christ the King, even to the innocent little ones, and with God's benediction upon them all went forth refreshed to take up anew life's burdens the more corageously because of their hour's sojourn to Heaven's courts.

OF COURSE the old Mordaunt place had a garden. Beth remembered coming there years ago with her mother, before Uncle Jaffrey died. The flowers were so marvelous and the gardens so weedless that they appeared almost unnatural to the young girl and her mother, who lived in a small cottage

When Uncle Jaffrey died, Beth and her mother found that his beautiful property had been left to them, but there was not money enough to keep it going. Every year Mrs. Mordaunt divided the tiny income so that there was just enough to live on carefully, and nothing was ever left for the garden. People whispered that there must have been more money, for Uncle Jaffrey was very rich, and grew quite miserly in the last year of his life, and they declared that somewhere about the old place he had hidden either one large sum or many smaller ones.

One day a good looking man came to the door. Mrs. Mordaunt met him and greeted him pleasantly.

"Mr. Smith, who said he was your lawyer, suggested that I come and see you about clearing up your garden and lawns in return for my board," he said to her frankly. "I had pneumonia in the late winter and I really need light outdoor work to keep me outside-regular farm work is too vigorous just now-I am studying medicine at Blank university, and I cannot afford to spend money for a vacation." Then his pleasant voice grew wistful as he scanned the delightful old neglected garden. "It would be a wonderful opportunity for me," he added, "but you may have other plans."

Mrs. Mordaunt did not hesitate. "If Mr. Smith sent you here, you are certainly welcome-my daugh ter and I were just discussing the needs of the garden." Then she introduced Bruce Wayne to Beth.

"Mother," said Beth, one August morning, "everything is so beautiful -do come out and witness the cleaning out of the large fountain. Bruce is going to do that next."

Bruce whipped off his old hat and grinned affectionately at the woman who had been so kind to him for several months. He had brought a deep wicker chair from the front veranda, and soon Mrs. Mordaunt was comfortably settled and watching those two young peo ple who worked together so harmoniously. She was wondering whether her daughter, Beth, cared at ali was in his fine eyes, whenever he glanced at the lovely girl. There was no doubt that Bruce Wayne had lost his heart to her gentle Beth, and sighed a little as they worked so happily together, because she was thinking about the lack of money and the years they would have to walt.

Bruce had a large hammer and was prying off the fitted boards of the "tent-like" protection. "Hurrah." he shouted when the last section had been removed and the rusty. stained proportions of the fountain were revealed.

"Are you going to paint the fountain, Bruce?" asked Beth's mother. "It should be painted, don't you think, Mrs. Mordaunt?" And then. bending over the deep basin he lifted out a dry and rusty steel box. "Why, what the dickens do you suppose this can he?" he queried. "Buried treasure?" He set it at Mrs. Mordaunt's feet.

"Oh, Bruce, smash it open," begged Beth, .- "Perhaps there is where poor Uncle Mordaunt hid his money!

A few blows of the stout hammer opened the rusty box. Inside of that was a huge rubber pocket which held the missing wealth of Uncle Mordaunt. They sent Bruce for Mr. Smith, and during his absence, Beth confessed to her mother that she and Bruce loved each other and that he had asked her to marry him. "And I want to, mother darling," sobbed the girl, "even if we are quite poor at first! You understand, don't you?"

Mrs. Mordaunt nodded happily. and then the two men appeared and Mr. Smith checked up the contents of the old box. "The missing se-curities," be said. "You see, there was about a hundred thousand miss ing-and here it is!"

Bruce Wayne looked very glum. After the lawyer had left, Beth's mother said to him:

"Well, Bruce, aren't you happy over our good tuck?"

"Oh, yes. Mrs. Mordaunt-of course. Only-you see- well, Pm so poor-and Beth's a rich girl now." "But, Bruce," said Mrs. Mordaunt, smiling understandingly, "the money's really part yours -you found it." And she went off to the

THEY TURN TO THE

When the people get tax conscious they turn to the newspapers. When they want to know just exactly what the national political situation is, they turn to the newspapers.

When they want to be economical in household expenses, they turn to the advertising columns of the newspapers.

When they want to be truly informed on the actual fluctuations in the price of anything that they might have occasion to buy, they turn to the newspapers.

When they want to know who came into the world today, who got married, who ran away from his wife and five children, who came to the old home town to live and who died, they turn to the newspapers.

The American people live by and for newspapers. They use them for their own information directly and provide much of the material that goes into them indirectly thru their own private and public lives.

The American newspaper was never so important nor so interesting to the average person as it is today. It is being given a more thorough reading today than ever before. There is no advertising medium that is so close to the people in an intimate social way as the newspaper. It is the only advertising medium that is paid for and welcomed through the front door.

Introduction.

Jesus had just returned to Ca. pernaum at the close of his second | 4 great preaching tour through Gall ; . lee. But he did not for a moment cease his ministry. While the crowding multitudes gathered thick about him in the house and around it, his mother and brethren sought + 6051/4 Taylor St., Amarillo, him. from Pharsaic sources the report that he was insane; so now they sought to get him out of the way of and away from the throngs to a place of quiet and rest. Repairing then to the seashore for more commodious quarters. Jesus attered his remarkable sermon in parables. Matt. 13 and Mark 4. It was a new form of instruction in the presence of foes and friends

ly of concealing and converting truth. These ten parables (eight in Matthew and two additional in Mark), reveal the Kingdom at its various stages from its establishment in the hearts of men, as set forth in the Sower, to its consummation before the bar of God. as set forth in the Net. "And he taught them many things in parables, and said unto them in his teachings." "Parable" is from two Greek words which mean to place beside, that is, to compare. In a parable some object of nature, or some happening of human life is placed beside moral or religious truth in such wise that it throws light upon it. Christ's parables are by far the greatest ever produced. They have entered the mind of mankind and have moved it profoundly. Such parables as those of the prodigal son. the good Samaritan, the ten virgins, and the lost sheep reach the apex of spiritual teaching and of social philosophy.

The Meaning of This Parable. The main teaching of the parable of the Sewer which was repeated later (Luke 8:5-15) was to show that "the harvest is regulated by the kind of soil in which the seeds are sown." The sower represents the teacher or preacher of truth, Christ first of all, and then his followers who were with him and who came after him. The seed is the Word of God as contained in the Holy Scriptures and climaxing in the truth as it is in Jesus. The soils representing the hearers are clearly pictured in two general classes; the one pro-

can't copy Phillips 66 results

WHAT has made Phillips 66 the most talked about gasoline in the industry? Why has Phillips 66 achieved the fastest and most sensational success ever recorded in the history of motor fuels?

How has Phillips 66 made tremendous sales gains in the face of strongly entrenched competition, in a period of distinctly unfavorable conditions?

What is the Answer? It isn't Phillips advertising . . . because others have already imitated our claims and even our phrases. It isn't the courteous service of Phillips driveway salesmen .. because all service station men are trained to be prompt and helpful.

So common sense tells you that the answer lies in something that can't be copied . . . in the dramatic and outstanding results given by Phillips 66, the greater gasoline.

You actually feel the difference the very first time you step on the starter. Whir-r-r! In a fraction of a second, even a cold cranky engine hums into action. And it is smooth, sputterless action. Touch the gas . . . and you're away in a flash with a genuine thrill of extra power and response. Improved pick-up and get-away.

Yes, sir! No question about it, once you have felt that difference! You get far finer performance from old car or new, with the honest high test of Phillips 66. And is it bigh? Right now, Phillips 66 gravity ranges from 65.6° to 80.5°, and DOES NOT cost 3¢ extra per gallon.

This honest bargain is possible only because Phillips is the world's largest producer of natural high gravity gasoline. So watch your gauge, and the next time you need gas, Phill-up with a trial tankful of genuine Phillips 66 at the Orange and Black 66 shield.

What is

CONTROLLED VOLATILITY?

In gasoline, volatility is that quality which makes it deliver perfect performance at any temperature. Since the weather can't be controlled, the only way to insure perfect performance is by CONTROLLING the VOLATILITY—increasing the volatility as the temperature drops. Phillips 66 is the gasoline with Controlled Volatility. That is why it always gives instant action even in below-zero weather . . . faster warm-up . . . flashier acceleration . . . more miles . . . less carbon and crankcase dilution. Phill-up with Phillips and you will feel the difference, because right now—this month—

PHILLIPS 66 HAS 78% MORE VOLATILITY than any other leading gasoline

Judiciary System Revision, Drastic revision of the Texas Judiciary System was provided in a proposed constitutional amendment approved unanimously last Tuesday by the constitutional amendment committee of the House of Representatives.

T. H. McGregor of Austin draft ed the amendment.

The proposal would establish nine-judge supreme court, but contained a provision whereby the number could be increased to 16 by action of the legislature if the press of business became so great that nine judges were unable to dispose of the litigation.

The amendment would also eliminate the I1 courts of civil appeals and the district courts. The duties of the district courts would be taken over by the county courts.
