MUSEUM AT CANYON HAS EXHIBIT ON DISPLAY AT PRESENT TIME

CANYON-If you wish to know what life was like along the Canadian river five million years ago, take a look at a new habitat case Historical Society museum here by Prof. C. Stuart Johnston.

The attention of visitors is first er killing a three-toed horse. Near- night, by, eager for the scraps after the tiger has had his fill of horse flesh, are hyena-like animals. The models were made and the landscape fabricated by Prof Johnston.

Forming the sides and back of the case are paintings which were drawn under Prof. Johnston's direction by Ralph Shead of Norman, Okla., a profissional artist skilled in this type of work. The Canadian river is shown, as are herds of mastodons, horses, camels, hornss rhinos, and dogs. The paintings were made possible by O. S. Lambie of Amarillo.

Indirect lighting brings out the colors and makes the models stand out in realistic fashion. The case, Prof. Johnston said, is an original restoration based on fossils on display at the museum. It is one of a number which will interpret for the layman the pictures which are formed in the minds of the paleogists as they study the middle Pliocene and other eras of life on the plains,

Excavations of paleontological aftes are being carried on by about 40 men in a WPA district project and by nearly a score of men in the WPA archaeological project. The local museum is the beneficlary of both of these pieces of scientific research, which are being carried on in several counties.
