Mrs. Owens tells jury about shooting husband

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

Helen Owens admitted Tuesday afternoon in 222nd District Court in Hereford that she fired the shots that killed her husband, Charlie, on July 5, 1989.

Mrs. Owens was very slow and deliberate in answering questions posed by her attorney, Jerry Smith. She would hear the question, then wait 10, 15, 20 seconds before giving her answer.

Smith retraced the steps of the Owens family through the events of July 4-5, 1989, when Mrs. Owens fired the shots with a .38 caliber handgun that felled her husband of 40 years.

Mrs. Owens said that beatings her husband would inflict on her intermittently before May 1989. The beatings, with his open hand, closed fist and feet, became more frequent.

She recounted the activities of July 4, focusing on the evening after Mr. and Mrs. Owens, their grandchildren Jennifer and Joshua Owens, and the grandchildren's cousin, Salem Wiecek, shot fireworks out in the country.

After Josh had gone into his grandfather's room to go to bed, Mr. and Mrs. Owens watched a movie together on television in the den, then Charlie went into his bedroom to go to sleep.

Mrs. Owens said she then remembered that she had hidden a gun, given her by a brother, in a dresser drawer in her bedroom. Saying she was afraid that Jennifer and Salem might find the gun and decide to play with it, she went into the bedroom, got the gun from the drawer, and put it in the bottom of a slipper. She put another slipper over the top of the gun, then put the slippers in the corner of the hallway near her husband's bedroom door.

"I then went into the bedroom to check on Josh," she said. "I went into the bedroom and saw Josh was asleep. Charlie was coming from the bathroom. He stopped and got angry. He said, 'What in the hell are you doing in my bedroom?' I said I was checking on Josh, but he said nothing was wrong so I went back to the den."

She said she stayed there for about 10 minutes before worrying that Charlie might harm his grandson, so she decided to either put Josh in the bedroom with his sister or cousin, or let him sleep on the couch in the den with her.

She said she went back into the room, where Charlie became violent with her.

While fingering her gold necklace, she slowly told what happened.

"He came toward me and started hitting me with his fists," she said. "He hit me harder. His eyes were like what I would imagine an insane person's eyes would look like and his face was distorted like a nightmare."

"I knew he would beat me unconscious if necessary to keep me from getting Josh out of his bed. He beat me up against the wall and closet door, and I fell. He started kicking me, three or four times as hard as he could."

"What did you do when he finished kicking you?" Smith asked.

"I crawled out into the hall and got the gun. I just stepped back into the bedroom and Charlie was coming toward me. He saw the gun in my hand and he said, 'You crazy -----, you don't know anything about guns.' I said, 'I don't have to take your beatings anymore, I can defend myself.'"

"He started toward me, and I pulled the trigger so he would know it was loaded. It went off, and Charlie moved around and went into his bathroom. He just kept screaming at me, 'I'll kill you! I'll kill you!' He went into the bathroom. Everything is so confusing. I just stood there and listened to him, so I pulled the trigger in that direction."

"I was completely terrified because I knew he would, I knew he would. I didn't want to kill Charlie, I was just letting him know I could protect myself.... I knew any moment the bathroom door might open and he would kill me.... I just fired in the direction of his voice, I didn't know if I shot him or if I killed him."

"I saw Josh, I heard him screaming, 'No, no Mimi! No, no, Mimi!' I just fired (Mrs. Owens flexed her hands three times). He kept screaming that he was going to kill me, I kept pulling the trigger of that gun. I just stood there. I was terrified that he would open the door and come out. I felt that if he did he would use that gun to crush my skull. I know he would

Loving the heat

This yucca plant at Mam Tyler Real Estate on West U.S. Highway 60 in Hereford has thrived in the hot temperatures during June. The yucca bloomed last week and has been one of the few items to enjoy the desert-like heat, and lack of moisture, this month. There is a very slight chance for rain this evening, but temperatures are expected to remain near 100 degrees for quite some time.

Early summer heat wave sears vast southwest area

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - A searing early summer heat wave covering a vast area of the Southwest from Texas to Southern California has left Midland in the middle of the inferno with 18 days of 100-plus heat so far in June with no relief in sight.

Forecasters are saying it may be one of the hottest summers ever at Midland where the mercury climbed to 105 Tuesday for the 17th day of 100-plus readings in June.

With July and August still to come, forecasters say there is no relief in sight.

The mercury climbed above the 100-degree mark Tuesday at 23 of the state's major reporting points. The state's hot spot was Presidio with 111, followed closely by El Paso at 110. It was 109 at Lajitas, 108 at Childress, 107 at Amarillo and Wink, 106 at Laredo and Wichita Falls and 105 at Lubbock, Midland-Odessa.

It was 104 at Waco, 103 at Abilene, 102 at Dalhart and Del Rio, 101 at Cotulla, Junction and Mineral Wells, and 100 at Alpine, Austin, Beccville, Fort Worth and Hondo.

Noting that it's been abnormally hot since May, National Weather Service meteorological technician Ron Brown said Mother Nature's desert blowdryer appears to be aimed at West Texas through August.

In May, there were three days when the mercury climbed to 100 or above.

The hottest day so far this year was Monday, with a blistering 109-degree high that broke the record for the day and tied the all-time record for the month. The previous record for the date was 105, set in 1953, while the 109-degree mark has only been reached before on June 20, 1951 and June 29, 1946.

Brown said 1990 is shaping up to rival 1964 as the hottest summer on record. In that year Midlanders suffered 52 days of 100-plus temperatures, 13 of them by June 25. The city this year already has 20 of the superhot days under its meteorological belt.

There were 33 days of 100 degree heat in 1989, 21 by the end of June. The previous year was cooler, with only four 100-plus days that summer.

1987 had 14 100-plus days, and 1986 had 12.

"There's no real relief in sight as far as the hot, dry weather goes," Brown said. "The charts show high pressure dominating through the week with only widely scattered shower activity."

The heat has kept air conditioners going and forced up the consumption of electricity.

Dryland cotton crops are withering in the heat, and ranchers have started feeding programs for their cattle "because the grass just plumb dried up," according to Earnest Kiker, Midland County's extension agriculture agent.

"It's strictly a waiting game for rainfall at this point," he said. "We've got to have it."

At Phoenix, Ariz., where the mercury climbed to 122 Tuesday, the hottest day or record for the city, NWS meteorologist Craig Ellis said the high temperatures were caused by a strong high-pressure area in the upper atmosphere and the sun beating almost directly down on the Earth.

Bush's concession on taxes angers GOP conservatives

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congressional Democrats say President Bush's concession that taxes must be raised to cut the federal deficit blunts an issue that has skewed their party's candidates over a decade of campaigns.

Many conservative Republicans were angered after the president announced Tuesday that he believes "tax revenue increases" are a necessary part of any deficit-cutting package for next year.

The statement contrasted sharply with Bush's "no new taxes" campaign vow of 1988. Some GOP lawmakers said they still will oppose tax increases as part of a plan to shrink the government's mounting shortfall, while others pledged not to abandon the issue in upcoming fall campaigns.

The search by White House and congressional negotiators for a way to cut the mounting deficit was resuming today. The 1991 shortfall could exceed $200 billion - well above the $74 billion limit set by the Gramm-Rudman law.

Bush did not specify which taxes he would consider boosting, and White House officials insisted that would be up to negotiators. Nonetheless, lawmakers agreed that the president's comments will help the talks, which have dragged on fruitlessly since mid-May.

"It opens the door to serious negotiations at the summit," said

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Many Democrats said Bush had done them a political favor as well. They said he blurred an issue the GOP has used successfully against Democrats across the country since President Reagan's campaigns.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee and a former head of his state's Democratic Party, said it would be "implausible" for Republicans to use the issue in campaigns.

"What are they going to say when the president comes to their district to campaign for them?" Sasser said. "Or will he come?"

"He's not only neutralized the issue for 1990, but perhaps stewed up in the Republican Party a question about a lack of identity," said Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill.

Bush's statement also called for cuts in defense, domestic programs, budget process changes and "growth incentives," often used to describe the capital gains tax reduction that Bush wants.

But it was his support for tax increases that outraged conservative Republicans. By Tuesday evening, 90 of the 176 House Republicans had signed a letter to Bush saying they were "stunned by your announcement" and calling such an increase unacceptable.

"Tax increases at the present time would undermine the economy and substantially weaken it," said Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., who circulated the message.

Other Republicans insisted that in an effort to boost the stalled budget talks, the president had merely restated his longstanding promise to consider all options for saving money.

"I don't see how it's a change in anything," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, said Bush's remarks did nothing to eliminate the tax issue.

His Senate counterpart, Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said the president's statement "may cloud the issue a little bit." But Nickles, who heads the National Republican Senatorial Committee, said most Republicans still would use the tax issue.

"Most of our challengers are more opposed to taxes than the incumbents are," he said.

One of those GOP challengers, Rep. Lynn Martin of Illinois, wasted little time in releasing a statement reiterating her opposition to new taxes.

"I will not support a tax increase, period," said Martin, who is opposing Democratic Sen. Paul Simon for re-election.

Flag-burning issue sore point with voters

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senators who defeated a constitutional amendment against burning the American flag say the uproar may have eased slightly in recent weeks but the issue remains a sore point with many voters.

"It's still a tough issue," Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., said Tuesday after the Senate's 58-42 vote for the measure fell nine votes short of the two-thirds margin required.

He said the dispute has "opened a wound in this nation," but voters are seeing "that the fabric of American society has not been threatened by flag burners ... and in the end I think that's what turned this debate."

On the roll call, 38 Republicans voted for the amendment and seven opposed it. Among Democrats, 20 were for it and 35 against.

The vote was largely symbolic because the amendment, which had President Bush's backing, also fell short of the necessary two-thirds vote in the House last week. Democratic leaders attacked it as an infringement on freedom of speech.

The Senate pushed ahead with a vote on the amendment even though House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., had said he would not schedule a new vote in his chamber regardless of how the Senate acted.

Sponsors said they would keep campaigning for the amendment nevertheless.

"We'll see what happens in the days and weeks and months ahead," said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

He said Americans were pained to see protesters show disrespect for the nation by burning the flag and had been counting on Congress to settle the issue once and for all with a constitutional amendment.

"In the heartland of America, some folks just can't understand what Congress is up to," Dole said.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said the issue was "so important that it should be sent to the states where the American people can decide whether they want to protect the flag."

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., another amendment supporter, said, "Americanism cannot survive unless it has nationalism ... Americanism must have sacred symbols."

Critics of the proposed amendment said the Senate vote was designed primarily to put them on record on an emotionally charged issue in a way that could be used by conservative challengers in fall election campaigns.

"Stirred by fears of sound bites and 30-second spots, members of Congress who should know better are expressing a willingness to sacrifice the Bill of Rights for what they hope will be a benefit in the polls," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said his mail had turned against the amendment. And Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said heavy debate over the issue in recent weeks may have changed some minds. "The more people learn about this, the more they hear discussion and hear all of the ramifications, the less likely they are to go for the amendment," he said.

Kerrey said after the vote that it "doesn't feel like a victory, it doesn't feel as good as it ought to" because "a wound has been opened in America, a real wound."

The highly decorated Vietnam veteran said many veterans feel strongly about the measure and as a result of his opposition "they are disappointed, they are disillusioned."

Police probe young man's death here

Hereford police are investigating the death of a 19-year-old Hereford man whose body was found behind a residence in the 200 block of Catalpa in Hereford.

The body of Steven Chavez, 19, of Hereford, was found behind the house in the garage at 11:50 a.m. Tuesday. He had suffered a single gunshot wound to the head.

No ruling has been made on the death. Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine pronounced Chavez dead at the scene and ordered an autopsy. A ruling will likely not be made until after the autopsy, to be performed by forensic pathologist Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Amarillo.

Police speculate the death may have occurred as early as Sunday. Police recovered a .22-caliber handgun at the scene.

At that point, Mrs. Owens asked for a glass of water. As Smith was retrieving it, Mrs. Owens broke down, sobbing on the witness stand. Judge David Wesley Gully then recessed the trial until this morning.

Earlier on Tuesday, Dr. R.D. Brittain, a psychologist from Amarillo, testified Tuesday morning that during their 25-year doctor-patient relationship, Helen Owens never mentioned that Charlie Owens had hit her.

Dr. Brittain said the first mention Mrs. Owens ever made of physical abuse was on August 11, 1989, five weeks after the shooting.

"Did you feel prior to August 11, 1989 that she had been fully confiding in you?" asked District Attorney Roland Saul.

"Yes, but it's apparent that she did not in certain respects," Dr. Brittain said.

The August 11, 1989, examination was ordered to determine whether or not Mrs. Owens was sane at the time of the July 5 shooting, and whether she was competent to stand trial.

"I found no evidence to sustain an assumption she was insane," Dr. Brittain said. "She may have been in a state of altered awareness after the shooting began."

"Did she know right from wrong?" asked Saul?

"Yes."

At the August 11 examination, Mrs. Owens told the doctor of the physical abuse her husband had been subjecting her to for many years. She also told the doctor that her husband had been sexually abusing young females for several years before she finally confronted her husband.

Dr. Brittain had detailed the medication he prescribed for Mrs. Owens. He said that because she had been taking the medications for a long period of time, "the medication does not affect her alertness or awareness or judgment."

Dr. Brittain detailed many aspects of his work with Mrs. Owens over the years, including his conclusions of her relationship with her husband. She had frequently visited the doctor in the late 1960s and early 1970s to help deal with the death of her son, Richard, in 1968, and has continued seeing the doctor regularly since that time.

The doctor said Mrs. Owens had

Gubernatorial candidates move closer to debates

AUSTIN (AP) - Gubernatorial candidates Clayton Williams and Ann Richards appear to have moved closer to a debate, or two.

Republican Williams on Tuesday proposed two debates, a proposal Ms. Richards' campaign called "sound."

Williams, accused by Ms. Richards of ducking debates and joint appearances, proposed the faceoffs for the candidates' hometowns, Midland for Williams, Waco for Ms. Richards, on Sept. 27 and Oct. 11, respectively.

A letter from Williams campaign manager Zack Dawes suggested two one-hour "sit-down discussions" assisted only by a mutually agreed upon moderator, and hosted by a mutually agreed upon sponsor.

Richards campaign consultant Glenn Smith said "perhaps we could expand on your idea and offer Texans a series of Town Hall meetings" to allow citizens to ask questions.

That brought an accusation from the Williams campaign that Ms. Richards, a Democrat, was dragging her feet. Williams people said he would "not wait indefinitely for an answer" because Ms. Richards herself "has been beating down the doors for debates."

Smith replied, "Yes, we will debate - more than twice, all over Texas."

He said the Richards campaign had "tried for months to initiate joint appearances and discussions, and we are ready to begin today to negotiate times and places for future joint events."

In other political developments Tuesday:

- Railroad Commissioner John Sharp said he'll aggressively audit school districts to search for waste if he wins the race for state comptroller.

The state's new school finance reform law allows the comptroller to review the effectiveness and efficiency of school district budgets and operations, a provision Sharp said he worked on.

"I think there's fat in the system. I think there's fat in the bureaucracy. I think it's time to cut the bureaucracy and put our money where it ought to be - in the classroom," said Sharp, a Democrat.

He said the audits, performed by outside accounting firms, would identify where money is going and suggest ways to save.

His Republican opponent in the state comptroller's race is Warren G. Harding Jr., a financial adviser from Grand Prairie.

The campaign manager for GOP state agriculture commissioner candidate Rick Perry said current and past employees of the department have been telling Perry that Democratic incumbent Jim Hightower and his top aides are under federal investigation.

"The problems at TDA are spreading like the fire ant problem," said manager Ken Luce.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am not one who writes "letters to the editor;" in fact, this is my first one. I do so at this time to extend my approval, my thanks and my commendation to the Hereford City Commission for its very wise investment in the youth and adults of Deaf Smith County and Hereford when it made the $20,000 funding aid to the YMCA.

Most folks have taken for granted that the YMCA provide the vast programs of recreational, physical fitness and family value nature. This not an east task on a limited budget and modest membership fees and program charges. The YMCA is one of the crown jewels of Hereford.

I am not a resident of Hereford now but, having spent over a year and a half of very happy time there a couple of years ago, I still tell people in Tulsa that my heart is back home in Hereford. I am a one-person C of C for Deaf Smith County, 400 miles removed. Folks here get tired of hearing me sing Hereford's praises.

I spent time on the Hereford YMCA staff developing a new fitness program in 1987-88 after officially "retiring" from the YMCA career, where I had served in Houston, Dallas, Tulsa, Amarillo and Lubbock. I am back in Tulsa as a fulltime volunteer in several phases of the YMCA.

I feel that the Hereford YMCA staff and board of directors have earned the support now extended by the city. If one added up the load the city would have to carry if there was no YMCA to serve--the result would be staggering.

As I stated, I am pro-Hereford and want to see the best for it. I still subscribe to The Brand, keep up my membership in the Whiteface Booster Club, contributed to the stadium expansion fund and to the YMCA. I even came back to buy my new GMC in Hereford last month from John Stagner. Bartley Dowell mails me the Kiwanis Club bulletin each week so I can keep up.

As you said in your column, "time will tell"--I think it will say: "Bravo, City Commission" for the help extended to the YMCA.

Sincerely,
Jack Johnson

The events will include "East Comes West to Give a Party" beginning at 7 p.m. Friday at the CHOF, with hors d'oeuvres, visitation with the honorees, and a concert by Luce Amen and Patsy Montana.

At 10:30 p.m. Friday, the first event of the Feedyard Challenge, the ladies paint gun target shoot, will be held.

Feedyard challenge events will continue throughout the day Saturday.

On Saturday evening, there will be a ranch supper, trick roping by Joan Wells, 1989 Cowgirl honoree, and presentation of Feedyard Challenge awards and trophies. Luce Amen will perform throughout the evening.

Tickets for the two nights' events are $50 per person and are available at the CHOF office in Hereford.

SHELLY BURMEISTER 1990 Cowgirl Honoree

An active promoter of rodeo, Shelly Burmeister got her first horse at the age of 13 and began competing in 4-H and quarter horse shows, English riding and jumping and rodeos. Today, Shelly is a rodeo consultant and actress. She also serves as vice president of the National Cutting Horse Association and has won many non-pro cutting competitions.

Shelly focuses much of her energies on the telecasting of rodeo and related activities. She began her television career as Miss Coors Rodeo, the rodeo representative for the Adolph Coors Company, a job which she created and sold to Coors.

Since 1980, Shelly has traveled more than 90,000 air miles per year coordinating Coors sponsored rodeos. She has appeared in numerous radio and television interviews.

A licensed Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) arena announcer, Shelly is a former co-host of The Nashville Network's weekly "Mesquite Rodeo" show and has been instrumental in obtaining televised coverage of many Women's Professional Rodeo Association (WPRA) and PRCA rodeos.

Shelly has many rodeo queen titles to her name and was first runner-up in Miss Rodeo America 1978. Shelly contributes her expertise in rodeo pageants as a board member of the Miss Rodeo America pageant. Shelly has also created a video entitled "Capture the Crown" which provides young women interested in competing for Miss Rodeo titles with information on improving horsemanship, appearance and personality. She is also proud of persuading the pageant to return to Guthrie, Okla. from Las Vegas where it had been since 1984.

As an actress, Shelly worked with Victoria Principal in "Dallas" and with Slim Pickens in "Cowboys and Buckaroos." She has starred in the television movies "Shadows on the Wall" and "The Rape of Sarah Quinn." Shelly also has plans for a television series about the lives of rodeo personalities.

Shelly is listed in "Notable Women of Texas" and "Who's Who in the Midwest." Her home base is now in Aledo, Texas.

BETTY LOUISE SIMS SOLT 1990 Cowgirl Honoree

Growing up on her family's ranch 20 miles from Santa Rose, N.M., Betty Louise Sims Solt worked alongside her father and five brothers and learned the basic skills of horsemanship. At her first rodeo in 1950, Betty Louise was forced to withdraw from competition because an accident nearly severed one of her fingers.

Over the objections of her high school principal Betty Louise competed in many rodeos in such events as breakaway roping, cutting and barrel racing. She set a record in breakaway roping at the 1953 New Mexico High School State Rodeo and graduated valedictorian of her class in 1954.

Betty Louise lettered in rodeo for each of the four years she attended New Mexico A&M where she competed in National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association events. She was named the Southwest Region All-Around Cowgirl and barrel racing champion as well as the NIRA champion in Barrels in 1956, and in 1957 and 1958 she was the Southwest Region All-Around Champion, NIRA All-Around Cowgirl and NIRA National Queen Attendant. In 1958, Betty Louise was also named the Southwest Region Association Barrel Champion.

Plans to return to the Sims Ranch after graduation from NMSU changed when drought forced the family to sell during her senior year in college. Betty Louise turned down job offers in the East and returned to college to earn her teaching certificate.

As an outstanding reading teacher in Roswell, N.M., Betty finds the time to contribute her expertise as a 4-H leader. She also conducts training sessions on horsemanship and rodeo events. Betty Louise continues to enjoy calf roping and rides weekly near her home in Roswell.

ELSA SPEAR BYRON 1990 Western Heritage Honoree

Memories of photographer and historian Elsa Byron about her childhood on the Spear Big Horn Ranch just after the turn of the century include her mother developing and printing pictures by the light of a kerosene lamp. At the age of 12, Elsa continued her mother's tradition of developing and printing her own pictures.

Some of Elsa's best work is of the Crow Indians that occupied a part of the Spear Brothers Cattle Company spread. This work was published by Persimmon Hill magazine in 1982 and is on permanent display at the Museum of the Rockies in Bozeman, Mont.

Elsa served as a guide for 14 years on pack trips into the Big Horn Mountains after the ranch became the Spear-O Wigwam Dude Ranch. While guiding a group of women into the Big Horn Mountains, they were surprised by a sudden blizzard. The sale of her pictures chronicling their survival of this ordeal began her career as a professional photographer.

As a historian, Elsa was a founding member of the Wyoming State Historical Society in 1924 and served 14 years on its board of directors. For over 55 years, she has worked to preserve historic sites at the Fort Phil Kearny/Bozeman Trail Association Board of Directors. The association republished three of her early books in one volume entitled The Books and Photos of Elsa Spear. National Geographic Society named her "Queen of the Bozeman Trail" in their publication Trails West. In 1982 the National Cowboy Hall of Fame gave Elsa the Trustee Award as a historian, writer and photographer.

By proclamation of Wyoming Governor Ed Hersher, Wyoming celebrated Elsa Spear Byron Day on June 2, 1984, in her honor. Elsa Spear Byron makes her home in Sheridan, Wyo. near the Big Horn Mountains.

RUTH HACKENBERG THOMPSON 1990 Western Heritage Honoree

Ruth Hackenberg Thompson was instrumental in the development and registry of the American Albino horse. The American Albino breed, also known as the American White and the American Creme, had its beginnings on the Thompson's White Horse Ranch. The breeding stock included a string of Morgan mares and a magnificent stallion known as "Old King" as the foundation sire.

Ruth also helped to establish the breeding standards for the Albino, and to organize the American Albino Horse Club in 1937. Although known as "albino" until 1970, American White or Creme horses must not have pink eyes. The club collects, verifies, preserves and publishes pedigrees of American Albino horses.

In 1938 the Ranch in White Training and Riding School opened with summer sessions for underprivileged children invited to learn to ride and care for the white horses at the ranch. The ranch motto is "Learn To Do By Doing."

After learning to care for the white horses, all of the children learned various riding feats. Some of the children went on to perform in the "White Horse Troupe" and later the "All Girl Review" which toured the United States and Canada.

The Thompson's White Horse Ranch was featured in the Aug. 15, 1945, issue of Life magazine and in Warner Brothers' Studio movie shorts in 1946 and 1951. True Romance magazine honored Ruth in 1949 with their "Heart of Gold Award" for her work with the underprivileged children who come to the ranch in the summers.

In 1951 the Thompsons provided 10 pure white three-year-old colts in exchange for three tons of Purina feed as prizes in a General Mills sponsored Children's Coloring Contest with the Lone Ranger as a featured celebrity. Children living at the ranch gentled the prize horses, teaching them to kneel for their new owners.

Ruth Thompson died May 31, 1990, knowing that she had been selected as a Western Heritage Honoree of the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center. She is buried next to her husband on the White Horse Ranch in Naper, Neb.

Pilot Club representative to attend annual convention

Peggie Fox, president and, official delegate of the Pilot Club of Hereford, Inc., will attend the international organization's 69th annual convention at the Opryland Hotel, Nashville, Tenn. The convention will be held June 30-July 4.

The event will draw more than 2,000 Pilot members from around the world. President Dorothy Saari of Jasper will preside at the event and Sue Trautwein of Owensboro, Ky. will be installed as 1990-91 International president at the close of the convention.

Important changes in the worldwide organization will be discussed and voted upon at the convention. One highlight of the event will be the presentation of the 1990 Disabled Professional Woman of the Year Award to Joanne Giese of Leavenworth, Kan., and First Runner-up

Helen Page Laugisch of Supply, N.C. The DPWY Awards are sponsored annually by Pilot Club International, the President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities, and Sears, Roebuck and Co. This year marks the 21st anniversary of the program.

On behalf of the organization, President Saari will present a check for more than $100,000 to a representative of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, Memphis, Tenn. These funds are earmarked for pediatric AIDS research. The Pilot Club of Hereford donated $100 toward this total by local fundraisers including pecan sales, Mexican stack suppers, and holiday cake sales.

Also, at the convention, a representative of Lifeline Systems, Inc. will present a $5,000 Lifeline grant to the Pilot International Foundation and Edward R. Morgan, executive vice president of Corporate Relations for the Allstate Insurance Co. will present a $25,000 safety and health grant to the organization. Pilot Club of Hereford supports the local Lifeline Program by sponsoring five units.

Pilot Club International is a worldwide civic/service organization with 20,000 executive and professional members in more than 600 clubs in seven countries. It was founded in 1921 in Macon, Ga. The Pilot Club of Hereford was founded in 1984.

McEnroe gets early exit at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - His confidence shaken and his once-glorious game in tatters, John McEnroe realizes he must start all over.

"I'll try to get my act together," a somber McEnroe said after his earliest Wimbledon exit since 1978. "You know, this is a long-term project. There's a lot of act to get together."

The fourth seed was crushed 7-5, 6-4, 6-4 by Derrick Rostagno, ranked 129th. McEnroe was one of a record six men's seeds who didn't make it past the first round.

"I feel pretty strongly that this is just the beginning" of a comeback, he said. "But if I take a couple of steps in the wrong direction, in my opinion I'll be out of the game in six months."

Though he argued a few line calls, McEnroe's problem Tuesday was not his infamous temper. It was an absence of the famous talent that led him to three Wimbledon titles in the early 1980s.

The loss to Rostagno marked only the eighth time in McEnroe's 14-year career that he has bowed out of a Grand Slam tournament before the fourth round. Six of those early exits have come since 1986, and McEnroe has now played 14 consecutive Grand Slams without a title, his longest such drought.

"I don't think 31 is real old," he said. "It's not too late for me, as far as I'm concerned. And so it's a matter of doing it - it's that simple."

McEnroe was joined on the sidelines by four other men's seeds, including No. 5 Andres Gomez and No. 6 Tim Mayotte.

Gomez, a clay-court specialist from Ecuador who won the French Open earlier this month, was sluggish in a 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 loss to American Jim Grabb. Mayotte, who usually is at his best on grass, lost 4-6, 7-6, 7-5, 6-3 to South African Gary Muller.

Other seeds eliminated Tuesday were No. 12 Pete Sampras and No. 14 Petr Korda. Third seed Stefan Edberg and No. 13 Michael Chang each needed four sets before advancing into the second round.

While American veterans McEnroe and Mayotte are out, the future looks bright for young Floridians Monica Seles and Jennifer Capriati.

Capriati, 14, became the youngest winner in Wimbledon history by blasting Canada's Helen Kelesi 6-3, 6-1 on Centre Court, "a moment I'll never forget."

Seles, 16, the third-seeded Yugoslav who now lives in Florida, won the last 10 games of her match against Maria Strandlund to win 6-2, 6-0 in 51 minutes, overpowering the Swede with her two-fisted shots.

The two women seeded above Seles, two-time defending champion Steffi Graf and eight-time winner Martina Navratilova, also had easy afternoons.

Graf needed 51 minutes to defeat fellow West German Claudia Porwik 6-1, 6-2 in 51 minutes - exactly the same time as Seles used - while Navratilova was quickest of all. She defeated Sophie Amiach of France 6-1, 6-1 in just 45 minutes.

But while the results were strikingly similar on the court, the thoughts racing through the minds of the top three seeds varied greatly.

Seles was keeping tabs on the Yugoslavia-Spain soccer game at the World Cup while winning her 33rd consecutive match. A friend in the stands kept her informed as Yugoslavia won 2-1.

Graf was pounding groundstrokes while trying to forget the controversy swirling around her father, who has been linked in published reports to a topless model.

"That isn't making it easy; that gives me a tough time," she said. "Right now I just want to talk about tennis, and that's it."

Navratilova was smiling and clearly enjoying her time back at the tournament she loves.

"Just before the match, I had the biggest grin on my face," she said. "I was just tickled that all the work has been done and I can enjoy the ride."

NCAA plans cutbacks

CHICAGO (AP) - The NCAA Presidents Commission has always had the clout, but sometimes lacked the answers to the problems of college athletics.

Now the presidents think they may have both. Ending a two-day meeting in Chicago today, the 44-member body was expected to unveil at least partial plans for across-the-board cutbacks in most NCAA sports.

"There is a feeling among commission members that this is the most urgent thing we must do," said Asa N. Green, president of Livingston University. "I think we will be looking at some specific proposals to come forward."

When the commission last attempted such reductions at a special NCAA convention in 1987, it suffered a stinging defeat. This time, the presidents have been careful to elicit suggestions from athletic administrators.

"Everybody thought the presidents should be able to wave a magic wand and solve these problems," said Green, a commission officer. "The truth is, some aspects of the problems are better addressed by athletic directors and coaches. But the presidents need to provide the leadership and incentive to keep them working on it."

The time-reduction proposals would be decided at the January, 1991 convention, which could be one of the most tumultuous in years. One reason for the presidents' optimism, Green said, is that they are beginning to close ranks.

"Historically, presidents just did not pay much attention to athletics," he said. "But they are now. They realize that if we're going to change athletics and put it in perspective, it's the presidents who have got to do it. And I think they're prepared to do it."

Green and other commission officers launched their meeting Tuesday with a lively give-and-take with three members of what everybody agrees is the most under-represented group in college sports, the student-athletes.

Their 90-minute exchange, closed to reporters, was the first formal meeting between athletics and policy-makers in NCAA history.

"We told them athletes don't even know what the NCAA is, what it stands for," said Leslie Daland, a swimmer from the University of Southern California. "We told them most athletes think of the NCAA as just an evil institution that makes rules."

Their reply was, "Well, we're used to being the scapegoats."

David Berkoff, a swimmer from Harvard, Kristi Groteke, a track athlete from Manhattan College, and Daland were picked from a 16-member student-athlete advisory committee that was created at the 1988 convention.

"We've been making history this morning," Groteke said. "We're happy about that. It's a good start."

The athletes said they made several basic points:

- Toughen penalties for drug use because drugs "are everywhere."
- Provide athletes with at least a small monthly stipend.
- Let freshmen remain eligible.
- Let student-athlete delegates speak at the conventions.

- And don't try to lump all non-revenue sports together when writing the time-reduction legislation.

"They're talking about across-the-board rules that say you can't spend more than 20 hours a week playing or practicing during your season," Groteke said. "And only eight hours a week in the off-season. We told them we're in sympathy with the idea. But it's just impractical to try to treat every sport the same."

English fans draw more notice than team at World Cup

ROME (AP) - They came to root for England. Unfortunately, they have taken the spotlight away from their team.

Even on a day of one of their country's most dramatic victories, the English fans were stealing the headlines with yet another confrontation with authorities and other fans.

In Rimini, about one hour's drive from Bologna - where England edged Belgium 1-0 on David Platt's sensational goal with one minute left in overtime - 246 fans were taken into custody Tuesday morning. A few hours later, they were sent home on an airliner chartered by the Italian government.

"It's the worst incident involving English fans. It's the highest number of people involved," British Embassy spokeswoman Kay Coombs said.

The latest incident happened after Italian fans started celebrating Italy's 2-0 victory over Uruguay in Rome on Monday night.

English fans drinking in a bar "started throwing bottles at the Italians and car windows were smashed," Coombs said.

The fighting spread throughout downtown Rimini and onto the waterfront and beaches. Shop windows were smashed and cars damaged before police restored order, but not before Rimini police called in reinforcements from surrounding towns.

It's not the first clash with police and locals for the English fans, who also were involved in confrontations during the first round, on the island of Sardinia. This time, claimed one Englishman, the other side was to blame.

"The scariest part was you wanted to get out of there and you couldn't because there were so many groups of Italians with knives and things," said the fan, who identified himself only as "Hugh."

He added that the Italians chanted ethnic slurs to provoke the English.

Another British supporter said the mistreatment by Italian authorities - which continued even in the air - would stop him from ever returning.

"When we were arrested we were held in a garage and treated very roughly," Michael Vincent said upon landing at London's Gatwick Airport. "We were punched and kicked by the

Pair of Sox heat up in AL division races

By The Associated Press
The rest of the American League is having trouble trying to keep up with Barry Jones and the Chicago White Sox.

The streaking White Sox blew a 9-1 lead built on home runs by Ron Karkovice, Ivan Calderon and Ron Kittle Tuesday night, then beat the California Angels 11-9 on two-out RBI singles in the ninth inning by Ozzie Guillen and Lance Johnson.

And although Jones gave up the tying run - it was unearned - the victory boosted his amazing record out of the bullpen to 9-1.

"We were up by so much, it was just a matter of taking things for granted," said Bobby Thigpen, who pitched a 1-2-3 ninth for his major league-leading 25th save. "The Angels are capable of scoring a lot of runs, like we did. They came back and made it interesting, but we didn't give up. We haven't all year."

It was Chicago's sixth straight victory and kept the White Sox one game behind first-place Oakland in the American League West. The Athletics edged Detroit 3-2.

Elsewhere, Boston took a 1 1/2-game lead over Toronto in the AL East with a 3-0 victory over the Blue Jays, Cleveland defeated Baltimore 5-3, New York beat Milwaukee 8-2, Minnesota nipped Texas 5-4 and Kansas City downed Seattle 4-1.

Mark Eichhorn (0-4), California's fourth pitcher, struck out Steve Lyons to start the ninth, but Scott Fletcher and Karkovice singled. Sammy Sosa forced Fletcher at third but Guillen, whose error led to four unearned runs in the Angels' six-run seventh, singled to break a 9-9 tie. Johnson followed with his fourth single for another run.

Scott Sanderson checked Detroit on two hits and two unearned runs over six innings and sacrifice flies by Mark McGwire and Mike Gallego off Sanderson (9-4) came in the second inning, when the Tigers took a short-lived 2-1 lead.

Sanderson, Todd Burns and Dennis Eckersley, who pitched a perfect ninth for his 24th save, outdueled Jack Morris (6-9), who pitched a four-hitter.

Red Sox 3, Blue Jays 0
Carlos Quintana hit a two-run homer and Wes Gardner held Toronto to two hits in six innings as Boston won its fifth straight.

Gardner (2-4) struck out eight, walked one and didn't give up a hit until two were out in the fifth inning. Rob Murphy pitched two innings and Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

The Red Sox tagged David Wells (5-2) for three quick runs and went on to their ninth victory in 11 games. Indians 5, Orioles 3

Sandy Alomar's two-out single scored pinch-runner Stan Jefferson with the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning.

With one out, Ken Phelps drew a walk off Baltimore starter Pete Harnisch (7-4). Jefferson, running for Phelps, stole second and Brook Jacoby walked. After Jefferson stole third, Cory Snyder fouled out but Alomar blooped a single off Joe Price, who walked Felix Fermin and Jerry Browne to force in another run. Yankees 8, Brewers 2

Steve Balboni singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and hit another RBI single during a five-run eighth.

Balboni's hit off Dennis Powell (0-2) broke a 2-2 tie and pinch-hitter Matt Nokes' three-run homer highlighted the eighth against Chuck Crim.

Lee Guetterman (5-2), who relieved Andy Hawkins and struck out Bill Spiers with a runner on second to end the seventh, gave up one hit in 2 1-3 innings. Twins 5, Rangers 4

Minnesota rallied for two runs in the bottom of the eighth on Dan Gladden's double, Gene Larkin's triple and Gary Gaetti's sacrifice fly.

The rally against Kevin Brown (9-5) came after Pete Incaviglia hit his 12th homer in the top of the eighth off Juan Berenguer to give Texas a 4-3 lead.

Despite yielding Incaviglia's homer, Juan Berenguer (5-1) got the win with two innings of relief. Royals 4, Mariners 1

Tom Gordon pitched a six-hitter over eight innings for his third straight victory and Bo Jackson hit a two-run homer.

Jackson hit his 10th homer in the first inning off Brian Holman (8-6) with two out and Kurt Stillwell on base after a one-out double.

Mets take 8th straight

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The New York Mets are rolling, finally living up to a preseason script in which they were favored to win the National League East.

But Howard Johnson didn't feel like he'd made much of a contribution recently, and his .226 average all but proved it. So, when he came to the plate in the 11th inning Tuesday night, Johnson was determined to do something about it.

"We'd come too far to not win the ballgame," he said. "I wanted to make sure I got a good pitch."

That he did, rifling the offering from Ken Dayley for a two-run double that gave the Mets their eighth straight victory, 8-6 over the St. Louis Cardinals.

No one was happier about the turn of events than manager Bud Harrelson, who has guided the Mets to an 18-7 record since replacing the fired Davey Johnson on May 29.

"Hojo really needed that," Harrelson said. "Stuff like can really get you to relax. This is one of those Alka-Seltzer games that turned out good."

How good? Well, they not only hit and ran and pitched their way to victory. They actually threw out Vince Coleman of the Cardinals, who was 57-for-57 against them in career stolen base attempts.

"I finally got that son of a gun," catcher Mackey Sasser said. "I knew I'd get him. It was the right day and the right time and I threw the ball right there."

Coleman, who later stole two bases, was unmoved by his failure in the first inning.

"It's no big thing," Coleman said. "It's not going to put any more money in my pocket."

Nor is the play of the Cardinals likely to result in dreams of postseason play.

"I can't believe the things we did tonight," said Manager Whitey Herzog of the Cardinals, losers in 13 of their last 18 games.

Elsewhere, it was Pittsburgh 1, Philadelphia 0; Cincinnati 3, San Francisco 2 in 12 innings; San Diego 7, Houston 0; Atlanta 4, and Los Angeles 2, and Montreal 6, Chicago 5.

Keith Miller and Dave Magadan singled off Dayley (1-2) before Johnson drove the ball to left-center to score both. Johnson also had a sacrifice fly in the first.

Reliever Alejandro Pena (2-2) worked two scoreless innings, sending St. Louis to its third straight loss despite a 5-for-6 performance by Terry Pendleton.

Todd Zeile's leadoff homer off New York reliever John Franco tied the game at 6-6 in the ninth.

Light-hitting Kevin Elster hit his first career inside-the-park home run and drove in two runs for the Mets.

Pirates 1, Phillies 0

Bob Patterson and two Pittsburgh relievers ran sinking Philadelphia's scoreless streak to 22 innings and Jay Bell's eighth-inning single drove in the only run against Bryce Ruffin (5-7).

Patterson allowed three hits over seven innings. Scott Ruskin (2-1) was the winner while Stan Belinda got his second major-league save.

Reds 3, Giants 2

Matt Williams' throwing error let Herm Winingham score the winning run in the bottom of the 12th inning.

Williams fielded Jeff Reed's sacrifice bunt toward third base and threw wildly to first.

Three Cincinnati pitchers combined on a four-hitter with Randy Myers (3-2) allowing one hit over the last two innings to get the win. Padres 7, Astros 0

Dennis Rasmussen pitched and hit his way to his sixth consecutive victory over Houston, and Bip Roberts had three doubles among four hits and two RBIs for San Diego.

Rasmussen (7-4) pitched his third complete game, two coming against Houston, and his first shutout of the season.

Rasmussen, who had two hits and an RBI, has a 7-1 career record against Houston. Braves 4, Dodgers 2

Steve Avery, a first-round draft pick making his third major league appearance, scattered four hits over seven innings.

The Braves scored on two double-play grounders by Dale Murphy, a sacrifice fly by Murphy and a bases-loaded walk to Dave Justice. Expos 6, Cubs 5

Rookie Jerry Goff led off the ninth inning with a pinch home run, his first in the major leagues.

Goff's homer came on a 3-2 pitch off Les Lancaster (5-4) and made a winner of Dave Schmidt (3-0).

police for no reason. I have never known anything like it and will never go back to Italy again.

"Even on the plane they (Italian police) treated us like animals. We got one glass of water and were told to keep looking ahead and not to turn round to talk to anybody. Otherwise you would get a smack across the head."

News reports said police used tear gas, baseball bats and rowboat oars to restore order. Hugh said the same thing.

England's supporters were being watched closely at this tournament. English clubs have been banned from European competitions since 1985, when 39 fans, mostly Italians, died during riots at the Cup of Champions final at Brussels between Juventus of Turin and Liverpool.

The fans who were expelled missed a great moment. The English seemed content to play out the clock toward the end of extra time in the heat of Bologna. Then Paul Gascoigne broke free down the middle and was fouled.

"Gascoigne floated up the free kick perfectly and you saw what David Platt did with it," Coach Bobby Robson said. "I told the boys it would take something extraordinary."

Platt's effort was just that. He twisted as he volleyed the ball and sent a sharp kick to the opposite side of the net. Goalie Michel Preud'homme had no chance.

"Obviously, there is great delight for me, this was a tremendous thing to do," Platt said.

"England was playing for penalties," said Belgian midfielder Enzo Scifo, who had another brilliant game. "I just cannot believe that we lost because Belgium was outplaying them."

The Belgians also hit the goalpost twice, one by Scifo.

"We had bad luck," Coach Guy Thys said. "I believe we outplayed the English."

Staggers stands by statements

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - A former Texas-El Paso recruit maintains that his statements to the NCAA regarding possible rules infractions at UTEP were reported accurately by the news media.

John Staggers Tuesday reaffirmed his allegations that he was given housing, transportation and meals during a brief stay in El Paso. The allegations were reported over the weekend in the Los Angeles Times.

UTEP coach Don Haskins denied the allegations Tuesday and said he wants proof of the allegations from Los Angeles Times reporter Danny Robbins, who wrote the article.

"He needs to prove this is what he needs to do. And then I guess if he can't prove it, he'll say John Staggers told him," Haskins said.

Bill Dwyre, Los Angeles Times sports editor, said Robbins is considered one of the top sports investigative reporters in the nation.

"It's a predictable reaction of a coach who has been rightly or wrongly accused of something," Dwyre said. "The 'kill the messenger' theory is the most predictable route that coaches and sports figures seem to take."

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has been investigating UTEP for the past six months after published reports quoted former players as saying they had been loaned cars or had been given favors by area families.

The NCAA has not formally announced any allegations against UTEP. Haskins said the basketball office is not conducting its own investigation nor has it hired outside attorneys.

Staggers said he told the NCAA he received free lodging, housing and meals from UTEP assistant coaches while living in El Paso for six weeks in 1988.

Home health care coverage can make recovery more comfortable.

Full recovery from a serious illness can take much longer than a stay in the hospital... especially if the patient is elderly. Recuperation at home can be more comfortable and secure. It can also cost your parents or your family a lot of money for which Medicare does not reimburse you.

That's why the CNA Insurance Companies, one of several major companies our independent agency represents, created a new Home Health Care Plan. It provides coverage your parents and your own family may need to help pay the costs of professional health services performed at home.

Contact our agency for a discussion that can make your whole family more comfortable about the future.

Dallas obtains McCray from Kings

Trade leaves Sacramento with four first-round selections

DALLAS (AP) - The Sacramento Kings' stockpile of first-round draft selections grew to four with the trade of veteran forward Rodney McCray to the Dallas Mavericks.

The Kings now have the No. 7, No. 14, No. 18 and No. 23 picks in tonight's NBA draft - the most any team has ever had in the first round.

Dallas had its own pile of first-round picks, but unloaded No. 9 on the Denver Nuggets last week for All-Star guard Fat Lever and Nos. 14 and 18 for McCray late Tuesday night.

The Mavericks, who also got a 1991 second-round pick from the Kings, now have just one selection in tonight's NBA draft, the 49th overall pick from Sacramento.

The Mavericks also sent backup center Bill Wennington to the Kings.

"We thought Rodney could give us more than a rookie who will develop maybe two or three years from now," said Rick Sund, Mavericks vice president of basketball operations.

"Approaching the age of 29, he is just coming into the prime of his career," Sund said. "Teams become real successful with players in the prime of their career."

"With the acquisition of Fat lever last week and tonight, Rodney McCray, and our continued intention to sign Sam Perkins, we feel our team will be improved next season," Sund said.

McCray said he was happy to be headed to Dallas.

"I consider the Mavericks to be one of the best teams in the West, even if they hadn't picked up Lafayette and myself," McCray said. "To be as good as you can be, a team has to be lucky and stay healthy. If we can do that, we'll be fine. Things look pretty good," he told The Dallas Morning News.

Kings officials said they're optimistic about tonight's draft possibilities and about the future.

"We are very excited to gain two more first-round draft picks and an additional proven center," player personnel director Jerry Reynolds said in a statement. "Obviously, we hated to lose a terrific and talented player like Rodney McCray, but it gave us the opportunity to add three players for one."

Dallas' going for a known commodity this year is a break from the past, when the Mavericks pinned their hopes for the future on youth.

Of the 13 picks the Mavericks have had since 1987, only Randy White, their top pick in 1989, and Steve Alford, their second selection in 1987, remain with the team.

Alford didn't start a game, and White averaged fewer than 13 minutes last season.

McCray, 6-8 and 235 pounds, was traded from Houston to Sacramento after being named a first-team All-NBA Defensive selection in 1988. He has a career average of 13.1 points and 7 rebounds.

He averaged a career-high 16.6 points and 8.2 rebounds last season. He played in 82 games in 1989 and was voted the Kings most valuable player by Sacramento fans.

"McCray is capable of playing three positions," Mavericks coach Richie Adubato said.

"He's very durable and has a very consistent game. He proved to us that he's capable of playing well in big games because most of our games with Houston were either a rivalry situation or a playoff situation," Adubato said.

McCray gives the Mavericks some insurance against the failure to sign power forward Sam Perkins and the loss of Roy Tarpley, who has two strikes in the NBA's anti-drug program.

Perkins becomes an unrestricted free-agent July 1.

When asked if McCray was signed to fill a void which may be left by the departure of Tarpley or Perkins, Sund demurred.

"He gives us some flexibility. There are some real pluses with Rodney being 6-8. He can play small forward or power forward and allows us to move some people around and pick up some slack," Sund said.

McCray will receive $1.1 million next season and is signed for the next three years, The News reported today.

The Kings got McCray on Oct. 11, 1988, along with Jim Petersen from the Rockets in exchange for Otis Thorpe. McCray was selected by the Rockets with the third pick in the 1983 draft out of Louisville, where he played on the 1980 NCAA championship team.

In five seasons in Dallas, Wennington averaged 3.6 points and 2.9 rebounds. In 1989-90 he averaged 4.5 points and 3.3 rebounds in 60 games. He was selected by Dallas with the 16th overall pick in the 1985 draft.

The Kings have also been busy, acquiring Bobby Hansen and Eric Leckner from the Utah Jazz on Monday.

Little-known players may go high in draft

NEW YORK (AP) - Every year, players on nobody's top 10 list in April are hits in the NBA draft in June.

The NCAA tournament is one way a prospect can show scouts that he has what it takes in big games. Another chance for a final jump in status is in three pre-draft camps - at Orlando, Fla.; Portsmouth, Va.; and Chicago.

Willie Burton of Minnesota, Most Valuable Player in Orlando; Dave Jamerson of Ohio University, MVP in Portsmouth, and Jerrod Mustaf of Maryland, a standout in Chicago, are among the names expected to show up in the first round of tonight's draft.

"I averaged 27 points and 7-8 rebounds in four games down there," said Burton, a 6-foot-6 forward for the Gophers who is expected to move to guard in the NBA. "It gave me a chance to prove myself."

Burton averaged 19.3 points as a senior at Minnesota and scored 35 points in an NCAA tournament game against Georgia Tech. But there were doubts about whether his ball-handling skills were suitable for an NBA backcourt.

"I answered that question in Orlando about the transition to guard," Burton said. "Before that, it looked like I would go 15-25 in the draft. I had talked to Denver and Portland. Since Orlando, I've been hearing I might go to Miami (No. 9)."

Marty Blake, chief of NBA scouting, said the pre-draft camps "give scouts a chance to see good players going against other good players. There aren't enough matchups like that in college."

Blake said Sherman Douglas' decision to skip the pre-draft camps might have cost him a first-round spot last year. Douglas was taken by Miami early in the second round and went on to become a top rookie in 1989-90.

Jamerson, a 6-5 guard, probably made himself a first-rounder with his performance at Portsmouth.

"Teams aren't enthralled with the Mid-American Conference, even when you're the Player of the Year and average 30 points like Jamerson did," Blake said. "But when he averaged 30 points at Portsmouth, he did it against good players."

Blake said Mustaf and Travis Mays of Texas, an all-tournament selection at Orlando, also improved their standing.

Syracuse forward Derrick Coleman is the probable No. 1 pick tonight, provided the New Jersey Nets don't trade the choice.

"The last couple of days, the phone has been ringing for our No. 1, so things could happen," Nets vice president Bob Casciola said.

The 6-10, 235-pound Coleman set an NCAA record with 1,537 career rebounds and the Syracuse scoring record with 2,143 points. And he's considered an outstanding passer for a big man.

But he's been criticized for lack of consistency.

"I think sometimes he played to the level of competition," coach Bill Fitch said.

Following New Jersey, the next three picks belong to Seattle, Denver and Orlando, and it's expected that three perimeter players - Gary Payton of Oregon State, Dennis Scott of Georgia Tech and Chris Jackson of

HSA seeks teams for summer league

The sixth annual Hereford Softball Association summer league play begins Sunday, and registration is now underway.

Entry fee will be $100 per team. Several local businesses are looking for teams to sponsor, according to Joe Soliz Jr., league chairman.

Practice games will be held Sunday, beginning at 11 a.m. with a contest between Holly Sugar and Barret-Fisher. All games will be played at the VFW Park and the league will last 6 to 8 weeks.

To sign up a team or for more information, call Soliz at 364-9023.

UTEP

"I just wanted everybody to get it right. I wanted to set it straight ... I want everyone to know what they did," Stagers said.

Stagers has said he never had to use his own money and that received rides and meals from former UTEP assistant, Russ Bradburd, now at Ball State.

Assistant coach G. Ray Johnson, who Stagers also implicated, said Stagers stayed in an apartment that belonged to basketball player Antonio Davis and former football player Rickie Evans.

"Rickie took care of the apartment and paid the bills and John was supposed to pay his share," Johnson said. Davis was out of town during the period Johnson stayed at the apartment, he said.

Stagers was a top college recruit during his senior year at a California high school, but never graduated. He signed a letter of intent with UTEP, but never played because he failed to pass a General Equivalency Diploma exam.

He later got his GED and now attends Columbia Community College in California.

Stagers said he is not seeking revenge on UTEP.

"I have no beef with them. What happened, just happened. I didn't ask them to help me," Stagers said.

Haskins said he understands why the NCAA is investigating UTEP.

"If you go back and read that story, it sounds like we're doing a lot of things real bad. I don't think they'll (NCAA investigators) find that. I really don't," Haskins said.

Misconceptions about dentures revealed

John started wearing dentures about two years ago and has not visited his dentist since. "I didn't really think I had to," he said. "I didn't think they required continual attention, like natural teeth."

Unfortunately, despite the fact that one out of every eight people wears full or partial dentures, over the years many myths about them have evolved into accepted fact.

Contrary to what John and many others believe, since the mouth is constantly changing, it still is necessary for denture wearers to see a dentist regularly. Oral tissues can reveal signs of disease, such as diabetes, that first manifest themselves in the mouth. In addition to checking the fit and condition of an individual's dentures, the dentist also examines the gum ridges, tongue, joints of the jaw and checks for precancerous lesions or tumors.

Some people are embarrassed about wearing dentures because they fear others might notice. But, new dental materials allow today's dentures to appear very natural looking. Dental esthetics is a highly developed science. In fact, correctly fitted dentures may actually improve one's appearance and enhance self-esteem by restoring proper support to the mouth area, reducing facial creases. People who have worn the same denture for a long time with adjustment often go through facial changes that accentuate aging, such as creasing skin and sunken cheeks.

Another misconception denture wearers have is that they cannot eat normally. But this is often because the dentures no longer fit well, or are worn out. Eating certain foods might be frustrating at first. But well-fitting dentures help maintain good health, allowing people to comfortably eat foods which contain needed vitamins and nutrients.

Another common myth is that using a dental adhesive is necessary to make dentures fit. Dentures are made to fit precisely and most denture wearers should not have to depend on the regular use of an adhesive for comfort. Denture adhesives, however, can be used to keep the dentures stable until the next visit to a dentist, but prolonged use can hide infections and cause bone loss in the jaw. A poorly-fitting denture which causes constant irritation over a long period may also contribute to the development of sores and tumors.

Some people believe their dentures will last indefinitely. But eventually a denture may not be totally functional. It can become stained, odorous, loose, change color and lose its ability to chew due to wearing of the teeth. Prolonged use of dentures that do not fit correctly can irritate the gums, tongue, and cheeks, and even cause the ridges of the mouth to shrink to the point where it will almost be impossible for an individual to be fitted with normal dentures. The ability to chew may decrease, and an individual's face may acquire deep aging lines and wrinkles.

It is important to treat dentures like natural teeth, and to have regular checkups. By doing so, a dentist can catch a problem early and save a patient time and money by avoiding the potential need for a new denture. Adjustments to dentures usually require only a few minutes and can save a patient the inconvenience of giving up his or her dentures for lengthy repair.

ALPENA, Mich. (AP) - The makers of the Bruce Willis action sequel "Die Hard 2: Die Harder" are ready to forgive Alpena for the rain.

The movie will be shown here July 3, a day before its national release.

The 20th Century-Fox film originally was planned for release in June.

Shooting had to be moved in March to the Alpena airport after warm weather melted the snow in Denver and Moses Lake, Wash. Then rain plagued filming in Alpena.

Director Renny Harlin ended up using refrigerated sound studios in Los Angeles to simulate a Christmas blizzard for the movie, which has Willis struggling against terrorists at an airport this time around.

ATLANTA (AP) - The 19-year-old son of Mayor Maynard Jackson apologized for knocking down his girlfriend on a street, but it wasn't enough to keep him out of jail.

Municipal Judge Harvey Moskowitz on Monday upheld a charge of disorderly conduct and ordered Maynard Jackson III to complete a 45-day sentence.

Jackson has been in jail since soon after the June 18 incident involving Maria Norma Duarte, 30. He was charged with pushing her to the ground after trying to grab her car of Mace. It was his third arrest this year.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 30-year-old male and have had an acne problem since I was a teenager. Over the past five years I have seen two dermatologists and my regular physician. The strongest treatment has been an antibiotic and Retin-A which seems to help some. However, the problem still exists and is now worsening on my back, chest and shoulders. This can really hurt a person's confidence and self-esteem. Are there any new treatments available for people with stubborn acne?

DEAR READER: Acne over the back and shoulders is often the most difficult to treat. The typical inflamed lesion or "pimple" is caused by an accumulation of sebum in a pore of the skin. Sebum is the natural oil produced by special glands in the skin, usually attached to a tiny hair so small you can't see it. Sebaceous glands that form sebum develop with puberty.

The sebum is then acted on by bacteria that live at the root of the hair, which breaks it down into irritating products to cause the inflammation.

That leads to three factors important in treatment: decreasing the production of the oily sebum, opening the pore in the skin to permit normal drainages of the sebum and antibiotics to eliminate the bacterial action. Retin-A is a good peeling agent. It needs to be used regularly long enough to cause peeling and drainage. At first it may make acne worse because it is allowing involved areas to surface and drain that were not apparent. It is particularly useful in treating blackheads and whiteheads. It is most effective when there is no inflammation. Another peeling agent that is often used is benzoyl peroxide. It also has an antibacterial action and you might do better with it.

There are things you can do yourself that help control acne and I have included these in Special Report 100, Acne and Rosacea, which I'm sending you. Others who want this report can send $2 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/100, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. For acne on the shoulders and back be especially sure to avoid oily hair. Shampoo every day if necessary and keep your hair short. Never add oily substances to your skin.

For more resistant cases that have not responded to treatment, Accutane can be used. It is a more difficult treatment but is highly effective. It should never be used by females who are or may become pregnant because it can cause birth defects.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 31 years old and since I was 20 I have been using regular isopropyl rubbing alcohol to take off my makeup about five times a week. Is this OK or will it hurt my skin? I have large pores and somewhat oily skin. The alcohol seems to close my pores.

DEAR READER: After you have removed all the makeup you can, and soaked the face well with a warm washcloth, there is nothing really wrong with doing a final cleansing with isopropyl alcohol. It will help to dissolve and remove the remaining oil that might otherwise not be removed.

The drawback is that alcohol will dry your skin. That is fine for a person who has a skin that is too oily and may have acne problems. A person who has a dry skin may want to use a moisturizer after cleansing with alcohol. Alcohol does tend to penetrate the skin and helps to kill bacteria.

Those who have acne problems will usually have less trouble if they use NO makeup at all and simply keep the skin clean and oil free. Makeup makes acne worse.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My son works as a lineman and has poison ivy a lot. He knows what poison ivy and poison oak look like and never touches it. His breakouts are terrible looking — very big water blisters over a great deal of his body, and they last a good week. He is treated with prednisone pills. Are there any shots to take during the year to keep him from catching poison ivy?

DEAR READER: The blisters and reaction are really an allergy to a substance in the poison ivy and poison oak — causing a contact dermatitis. If you wash with soap and water within 10 minutes of exposure you may avoid the reaction. Even washing within 30 to 60 minutes may decrease the severity of the attack. Be sure to clean under the fingernails as they are the chief means of spreading the allergic substance to other parts of the body.

Yes, there is an oral antigen of very small amounts of the substance that can be taken over a period of four months to desensitize a person. It is used for those who are highly sensitive to poison ivy or poison oak. It has to be repeated every year. It is used mostly for individuals who cannot avoid contact with the poison ivy or poison oak.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Americans' love affair with autos exposed

Americans are lavishing their cars with gifts. Drivers are dressing autos up with new and trendy items that have become part of our daily driving experience. Today's cars feature everything from phones to portable fax machines to crazy stuffed-animals stuck to the side windows. The car has truly become an extension of the driver's self-expression.

"Consumers want new items for their old cars to help make them seem brand new," explained Norm LaFave, well-known auto talk show host for Los Angeles-based KFI-AM (620). "Today, people are adding more options and gizmos to keep up with the latest trends."

Popular fashion items and accessories include fluorescent-colored windshield wipers, designer car phone pads, customized initials on door-handles and flashing messages on rear-view LED terminals. Some drivers even install high-priced accessories like in-car refrigerators, microwave ovens and solar-power ventilators.

According to auto industry sources, Americans spend more than $365 per year sprucing up their cars. "Cars are becoming more than just a mode of transportation," adds Ed Lapham, managing editor for Automotive News. "Car manufacturers are even searching for new ways to make cars more appealing."

One clever businessman has developed a whole family of products catering to people's individuality and need for comfort. Avi Ruimi, president of Auto-Shade, Inc., and his former partner, created the fashionable sunglasses design on the sunshade, the folding corrugated board that found its way into the hearts and windshields of car lovers everywhere. Now drivers can deflect the sun's harmful rays and reduce interior temperatures, while displaying their personal tastes on the shade designs: beach scenes, Disney characters, sports photography and so on.

"With style and fashion becoming more prevalent on the road, people are looking for the hottest items and gadgets for their cars," explains Ruimi. "Several years ago, we introduced America to the art of blocking the sun from their cars. After selling millions of corrugated sunshades, we feel Americans are ready to graduate to the next level. We offer drivers sun protection and an opportunity to express themselves with hundreds of styles and designs—from conservative to contemporary to sophisticated."

The company's newest offering is the Magic Shade, a deluxe two-piece nylon fabric sunshade sporting an elegant look. A cousin to the corrugated sunshade, the Magic Shade is designed to fit in any size windshield or side windows, protecting against the sun's glare. Also new to the company's product line-up is the Sun-Spot, a reusable plastic sheet which adheres to windows via static cling, blocks out glare and allows visibility to the traffic outside. The Glare Guard, a roller shade for side windows, reduces glare and offers visibility. The Glare Guards, which also include educational designs of Disney characters, are often used to protect toddlers in back car seats.

Whatever your preferences may be, there are now more auto accessories than ever to fit your individuality.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married a lovely widower in 1967. He sold his house and moved into my beautiful debt-free home in the suburbs. Because I loved him, I agreed to spend my inheritance while he saved and invested his money for our old age.

We have taken many beautiful cruises and trips abroad, for which I paid. I take care of all the household expenses and have fed, clothed and nursed him through several illnesses. I have never asked him for a dime nor has he offered to give me anything.

My husband is now 89 years old and I'm in my late 70s. I just learned that all his savings, stocks and bonds are in his children's names and that I am not mentioned in his will. This man is worth a lot of money, but if he should die I would have little more to live on than $227 a month from my Social Security.

I am scared to death, Ann. I have no money for an attorney and don't know where to turn. Please help me. -- Worried Sick in Virginia

My second-grade teacher had a game for choosing the lunch line. Each day she selected a different person to start the line. That person would select someone he or she wanted to sit by.

I remember the first time we played the game. I was really excited and looked forward to being chosen. The game went on and on until I was the only one left. I couldn't believe that not a single person in the class wanted to sit by me.

That game continued day after day. After every session of choosing it was obvious that I was the most unpopular person in the class. I tried to pretend that it didn't bother me but I was really crushed. The memory of those painful days hurts even now.

I wish all teachers would eliminate selections based on popularity. Recognition should go to those who excel in scholastic achievement or demonstrate kindness and consideration for one another. -- Windsor, Ontario

DEAR WINDSOR: You're singing my song and I thank you.

DEAR ANN: You credited a man in Montana for the following. The author is really Ogden Nash. Please run it by your readers again with the proper credit. -- F.V.P., Billings

DEAR BILLINGS: Hundreds of readers knew this and I didn't. For shame. Here it is.

To keep your marriage brimming With love in the loving cup, Whenever you're wrong, admit it. Whenever you're right, shut up.

The Civil War began April 12, 1861, when Confederate forces fired on Fort Sumter in South Carolina.

Decisions listed for window, door purchases

You could be throwing money out the window—and closing the door on savings—if you don't have quality windows and doors for your home.

With over 1,200 brands to choose from, the process of selecting the best windows and doors is far from an open and shut case. It can be quite confusing—not to mention a major investment. To get the most for your money, you should buy windows and doors at a store where you can get answers to some basic questions: "How do I find a contractor?" "Which product will work best in my home?" and "What are all those V- and R-values and special coatings, and do I need them?"

You may find the answers to these questions and more at one of the Pella Window Stores, a nationwide network of stores dedicated to the proposition that the consumer must be fully informed before committing to a major home investment. The stores sell Pella windows, doors, sunrooms and skylights, manufactured and marketed by the Rolscreen Company.

These unique Window Stores, with nearly 500 locations throughout the United States and Canada, are staffed by experts who can help homeowners select the best products for the job and advise them on the installation and maintenance of windows and doors. They offer the consumer the opportunity to see quality and workmanship first hand.

"Our Window Stores are not only showrooms but customer test centers," says Jesse Stevens, Rolscreen Vice President of Sales and Service. "We encourage customers to open and close windows and doors, pull shades and blinds up and down, discuss sunroom options in an actual sunroom and view videotapes of product installations.

"Our trained personnel provide the most comprehensive service in the window and door industry, from answering questions regarding installation and energy efficiency to helping with creative window and door selections and placement and providing estimates and custom design work. Our experts are dedicated to bringing customer ideas to life," says Stevens.

Experts at these Window Stores can also recommend a Certified Contractor to install the product. Selected contractors with years of experience go back to school to become Certified Pella Contractors, where they learn the most effective ways to work with consumers and install the company's products. After meeting requirements in product knowledge, installation and experience, they are approved and recommended by the local distributor.

"Our company is built on a commitment to support design professionals, builders and homeowners in every possible way," says Stevens.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Off-screen items Farrah Fawcett and Ryan O'Neal will star in a new comedy on CBS.

The show, which has not been named, will be a replacement series in the fall.

Fawcett and O'Neal, a real-life couple, will be the same on television.

The program was created by Alan Zweibel, who worked on "Saturday Night Live" and "It's Garry Shandling's Show."

Fawcett's blond mane and cheesecake posters created a sensation during the 1970s, when she starred in "Charlie's Angels."

Vast changes made in 50 years of fire-fighting

During the past fifty years there have been vast changes in fire protection and fire-fighting techniques.

THEN: Back in 1939, dry chemical was almost unknown as a fire extinguishing agent, but it held promise of greater effectiveness on gasoline and other flammable liquid fires than any other agent known at the time. The basic ingredient in the first dry chemical was sodium bicarbonate--baking soda--but substantial research was required to find out how to keep the agent free flowing and discharge it under pressure from a fire extinguisher. That was the year Ansil Fire Protection bought a small dry chemical fire extinguisher company. Ansil pioneered in the research and development of the dry chemical fire extinguisher and in training municipal and industrial fire fighters in its use. The well known Ansil Fire School was founded in 1945 and has trained over 70,000 fire fighters from all over the world.

NOW: Ansil is celebrating its 50th year as a manufacturer of fire fighting equipment and fire suppression systems. Today, fire fighters have a host of dry chemical extinguishing agents to choose from. Sodium bicarbonate base dry chemical is still widely used for fighting flammable liquid fires, but Purple-K potassium base dry chemical is more effective on the same types of fire. Another dry chemical, Foray, which has a phosphate base, is effective both on flammable liquids and on Class A fires which burn with an ember in such materials as wood, paper, rubber and coal. Off-shoots of the dry chemical extinguishing agents are the dry powders which will extinguish fires in combustible metals. In the last 50 years, the versatile and effective dry chemicals have come of age as a sophisticated weapon in man's arsenal against fire.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Marlon Brando's daughter Cheyenne has fled to Tahiti to avoid testifying against her brother, who is charged with murdering her boyfriend, a prosecutor says.

Deputy District Attorney Steven Barshop told a judge Monday he will try to use a recently enacted California law to introduce previous statements from Miss Brando at a preliminary hearing for her brother, Christian Brando, 32.

Municipal Judge Rosemary Shumsky set Brando's hearing for July 23 but did not rule on whether the statements can be admitted.

Miss Brando, who is eight months pregnant with the child of her late boyfriend, has gone to Tahiti and refuses to return, Barshop said. Marlon Brando maintains a home there.

Miss Brando's boyfriend, Dag Drollet, 26, was shot to death May 16 at the elder Brando's estate. The actor was home at the time but was in a different part of the house, police said.

Woodard will sell you ringside seat for harvest time

Three lines of equipment offered at Plains Ford New Holland, Inc.

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Pat Woodard sells ringside seats to harvest.

Choice locations are found in the balcony of the air-conditioned threshers but its the swathers and balers that puts you on the cutting edge of performance.

His red and yellow harvesters blended with the blue rigs of the turnrows have become commonplace in here in the breadbasket of Texas where agribusiness boasts a billion-dollar industry.

Though the colorful self-propelled combines and windrowers are the "cinderella" sellers of his business, it's the drawbar rigging and the lugging power of the diesels that's pulling the larger gate receipts.

Historically speaking, "Pat Woodard is the new kid on the block when it comes to farm implement dealerships here in the Golden Triangle. Though his lifelong career in the implement turnrow for the farmer who has everything.

Woodard pointed out that the Ford TW series have become popular among the row-crop farmers across the Golden Triangle of Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer counties and in Eastern New Mexico. Woodard also owns a second such dealership in Clovis which serves the rich farming regions of Quay, Curry and Roosevelt counties of New Mexico.

"Our trade area reaches out at least 100 miles," said Woodard. "Besides about a five-county area around Hereford, we service all of the area around Clovis and Peralta."

While Ford farm implements have been a leader in the smaller row-crop lines since before World War II, New Holland has also paced the nation in hay equipment for more than 50 years. Though Henry Ford will forever be remembered for the Tinney and the model A in the automobile business, he also had a great desire to become a leader in were soon side-lined due to the inconvenience of hauling and handling. The big-rounds on today's hay market are much larger than their predecessors of the 1950s, weighing more than a half-ton and handled with forklifts and hydraulic loaders.

The old side-mounted sickle mowers and side-delivery rakes have made way for the self-propelled swathers which does it all in a single run through the field. Though many cattle feeders still contest the quality of the single-swath haying, there's little doubt that farmers will ever return to the mowing and raking runs of another time. Just as the buck rake gave way for the side-delivery and this one idled for the swather, will the "dchy" dichards trample the swather augers?

Woodard is the first to admit that the red and yellow New Holland combines are not the most popular threshing machines on the High Plains, as they are at many points of the Midwest and Eastern seaboard, but this does not alter his opinion of the big yellow rigs—"I think the New Holland combine is the best combine on the market today. But you must remember that this is a very competitive business...many times, it's who got there first that make the difference in getting a sale." New Holland combines have long been one of the leaders in the midwest corn fields and in recent years have gained popularity on the High Plains wheat fields.

Being a third generation Texas farm boy on the Red River near Vernon, Woodard went to work in the farm implement business shortly after graduating from Hardin-Simmons University in 1971. His first implement job was with the old Sperry Corporation dealership in Vernon and when this dealership was converted to private capital in 1973, the opportunity for him to move to Hereford surfaced in the New Holland Company.

"When the move to private capital was made at Vernon, they gave me the option of moving to Hereford so I came," recalled Woodard.

Woodard was in sales at the Hereford dealership for 10 years and in 1983 he was named general manager of the Hereford operation. When Ford purchased New Holland in 1987, company executives elected to move out of retail sales, thus offering retail outlets to the various managers across the nation.

Woodard bought local dealership in 1988, along with satellite store in Clovis.

Following on this company trend, Woodard in 1988 brought the Hereford dealership along with a satellite store in Clovis—"The Clovis store has been a spin-off from the Hereford store so that we could better service the customers over there in Eastern New Mexico. Both stores are controlled from this central Hereford location."

Woodard noted that a short time

Implement company on south US-385

later Ford also bought a Canadian line of field tractors called Versatile, then moved both, the Canadian line and the Detroit-based Ford, to the New Holland headquarters at New Holland, Pa. While making the moves to private capital, Ford executives recommended that dealerships develop names of local nature. Since Woodard's operation consisted of locations in Hereford and Clovis, he opted for the corporate name of Plains Ford New Holland, Inc.

Woodard explained that under this new Ford dealership arrangement, the Ford company handles the financing, allowing the owner/managers to buy the units in a long-term financing program. The long-range program calls for Ford to eventually get out of the retail end of the tractor/farm implement business. Woodard is president of Plains Ford New Holland, Inc., with three Ford executives on the board of directors. The system is referred to by the Ford company as "dealer development stores."

"For many years, both Ford and New Holland were referred to as specialty companies, but this has changed," said Woodard. "We now offer a full line of tractors and a full line of farm equipment which we believe is second to none."

With vast inventory of parts, company services everything it sells.

Woodard services everything he sells with the service department backstopped with a vast inventory of parts in both, the Hereford and Clovis stores—"We have overnight delivery on almost any part if it should happen that we don't have it in stock."

"Dallas has always been our key point in parts in years past, but it is getting to where we can sometimes get as good or better service out of Denver and Kansas City as from Dallas." Mike Gallagher, a native son of Hereford, is head of Woodard's service department.

Luanne Carter is Woodard's parts specialist, heading up a sizable inventory of implements parts for the turnrow producers. Ruby Lee is in charge of the business of book-keeping, with the total staff at Hereford and Clovis running about 15.

Woodard, who is a 20-year veteran in agribusiness, believes that the Greater Hereford area is the most progressive agricultural center of the United States. In dialogue on economics in big business or small talk on Western lifestyles, Woodard believes that Hereford leads the pack.

"Without doubt, this town of Hereford is the most progressive place I've ever seen," said Woodard, who consistently reflects a positive attitude in actions and in words. "I've had a number of opportunities to move to about any place in the nation, and every time I've turned them down for Hereford. This town, without any doubt, is the greatest place on Earth to live."

Woodard pointed out that in addition to being in the middle of one of the greatest cattle and farming centers of America, Hereford is also a central point in all phases of industry on the Great Plains—"We're about the same distance from Denver, Dallas and Kansas City...then there's San Antonio, El Paso and Albuquerque on the other side. In this time of rapid communications, I guess one couldn't find a better place in the world to raise a family and build a business than in Hereford."

Woodard gears a big chunk of his business to the cattle feeding industry, showing where the beef business has gone through three cycles of highs and lows in the past 20 years.

"When money is tight and interest high, you'll see the cattle feeders move away from the big inventories of silage and go to alfalfa which is frequently bought and sold on a weekly basis. But when there's a lower money market, you'll see more silage go in the pits as sort of an insurance policy against feed shortages." But either way, Woodard will be in the machinery market...some of his more popular lines of tractors and farm implements are designed for feed and fodder production.

"I have never seen a set of farmers who diversify their production as the group around Hereford."

Perhaps the one thing that has most impressed Woodard in the agribusiness circles of Hereford has been diversification—"I have never seen a set of farmers who diversify production as such as the group around Hereford...they went after food corn and got it, oil crops, vegetables, sugar beets and nearly every type of feedgrain in the book...these farmers in this Hereford-Clovis region have built a world of their own."

The son of Cloys and Neta Woodard, the Texas heritage of the Hereford executive dates back three generations on the Red River where his grandfather stopped on a westward trek from the Carolinas. His parents still reside in Vernon.

Woodard and his wife, Lesley, have a daughter, Linzy, and he has a son, Chris, who is a sophomore at Hereford High School. Mrs. Woodard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Euler of Summerfield. As a point of record, Woodard has a twin sister, Patricia...twins in a family of five.

HUSTLE HEREFORD

business has been centered mostly in Hereford, Woodard is now in his third year as owner of Plains Ford New Holland, Inc., located on U.S. 385 on the south edge of Hereford. As result of corporate mergers, he offers three complete lines of farm tractors and implements under one dealership—Ford, New Holland and Versatile.

"Business has been excellent," said Woodard, as he reflected on sales of the past year. "Right now, we're looking at probably the best year since I took over as owner in 1988. Our haying equipment is really going good...it just keeps getting a little better and better."

Though Ford enjoyed international acclaim in pioneering the three-point hitch, the big blue diesel tractors are now numbered among the front-runners of the four-wheeled drives—from the popular TW-35 to the massive 976 that's decked out in a 360 diesel.

"Though a lot of folks think we're new in the four-wheel drives, there's nearly 25 years of experience behind both models of the Versatile series 900 line," said Woodard. "Simply stated, they're the most productive and efficient four-wheel drive units ever."

These big rigs features 49 square feet of tinted glass for 180 degrees of unrestricted visibility. The air-conditioned cab is lined with layers of acoustical foam panels, allowing for quieter operation. The tractors, as other cab equipment at the Plains dealership, have all types of options, such as AM/FM radio or two-way radio...and television at the the farm implement business. But it was a son who followed this success through to maturity...from a beginning with the clumsy Fordson wheatland to the petite 8-N that became the nimble number of the turnrows in the early 1940s. One of the earliest Fordson wheatlands is on display at the Deaf Smith County Museum.

Woodard said the cost of farming went down when Ford came out with the 62 PTO horsepower tractor—"A basic tractor with plenty of strength and all-around versatility for not a whole lot of money." He then led the way past several rows of new Holland hay equipment on display of Plains—using national sales as a yardstick, New Holland leads the pack in haying equipment.

"You seldom ever hear about them or read about them but we have some really good hay farmers here on the High Plains," said Woodard. "They know their business. As a matter of fact, there's one farmer out west of town that has records to show he made more money in alfalfa than in any other crop on his farm."

Woodard has a wide selection of swathers and balers which vary greatly from convenient frills of air-conditioning to the plain-jane drag types. All, however, are built on a track-record of quality performance in the field.

He noted that though round bales are sweeping the country in popularity, the concept is not new. Round balers were first marketed in this region in the early 1950s by Allis-Chalmers but the small-rounds
