Sheriff Brown, Rhodes file Wednesday

BY KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

"I've enjoyed what I've been doing, and I think I can run the department pretty well," Sheriff Joe Brown said today.

Wednesday he became the first person to file for Deaf Smith County Sheriff and plans to run as a Democrat in the May 5 primary elections.

Another announcement Wednesday created the second race for a County Commissioner's chair. Democratic County Chairman Roy Dale Messer said Tex Rhodes, 39, has announced his candidacy for the Precinct 1 post now held and being sought again by Bill Brady.

County Commissioners named Brown to fill the unexpired term of Travis McPherson, who resigned earlier that month after serving as Sheriff for 12 years. The 40-year-old Hereford Police Department lieutenant was chosen over six other candidates who applied for the post.

"I've been in law enforcement 12 years, and I'm now in a position to head a department," Brown stated. "I feel that I have support from my staff and that we get along well."

Among the changes he has made since being sworn in Sept. 6 are "cleaning up the offices, painting them and ordering new uniforms." Brown said he felt it was important for the officers to be similarly dressed.

"I'm also working on getting more of the vehicles marked. When I came only two of the seven cars were marked. I'm getting three more of them marked," he said.

"I feel that I have the knowledge needed to work criminal cases in the county and I think I can do the job," he concluded.

Rhodes is a lifetime resident of the county and has lived 21 years in Precinct 1. He has been the owner of LTD Motors since 1978, before that working for the postal service.

"Upon being elected to the county commission," he said Wednesday, "I feel that I could respond to the needs and wants of the people better. I have great concern

Shultz says no progress made

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today said he made no headway in trying to persuade Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko to resume nuclear arms control talks.

But Shultz, in a news conference while flying from Stockholm, Sweden, to Oslo, left open the possibility that the Soviets would end their suspension of East-West negotiations to reduce conventional forces in Central Europe.

To bring Soviets back to arms talks

NATO sources in Stockholm said Gromyko has signaled Moscow's willingness to resume the talks on conventional arms as early as March.

Another possible policy shift from Gromyko, the sources said, involved combining and renaming the two presently suspended nuclear weapons negotiations in Geneva. "They have not made up their minds on the continuation of START (long-range weapons talks), but they might consider combining them with INF (medium-range weapons talks) under a new name, Forward-Based Systems," one source said.

In addition, they said, Gromyko has indicated the Soviets would not stand in the way of the worldwide ban on chemical weapons Shultz proposed in a speech this week to the European Disarmament Conference.

The sources, who refused to be identified even by nationality, said the indications came in meetings Gromyko held Wednesday with Shultz and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

Shultz indicated his five-hour meeting with Gromyko on Wednesday at the Soviet Embassy in Stockholm laid the groundwork for a continuing U.S.-Soviet dialogue despite the impasse on nuclear weapons.

"I think the meeting was worthwhile," Shultz told reporters traveling with him on his Air Force jetliner. "Exchanges in the right kind of spirit can be helpful."

Shultz, en route back to Washington, stopped in Oslo for a six-hour courtesy visit with King Olav and Norwegian government officials.

Standing in the aisle of the jet, Shultz gave an account of the meeting with Gromyko, which he had hoped would thaw the chilled relations between the superpowers.

On the most vexing issue, the breakdown in nuclear arms control talks, Shultz said, "We made no headway on that subject."

The Soviets suspended the discussions in Geneva in late November to protest NATO's deployment of new U.S.-built Pershing 2 missiles in West Germany and cruise rockets in Britain.

Last month, parallel talks in the Swiss city to cut back longer-range rockets also stalled.

Asked whether the Soviets had agreed to end the stalemate, Shultz replied flatly: "No."

The unidentified NATO sources later said the Soviets might consider merging the two sets of talks, although they had not decided to restart negotiations.

The United States has been basically opposed to merger of the talks, because of the complications involved in dealing with long and intermediate range missiles in one negotiation.

Shultz was evasive about the talks in Vienna, Austria, on reducing NATO and Warsaw pact troops and armor. Those discussions ended before Christmas.

"We discussed a wide range of arms control issues but the thrust of the discussion varied from one to the other," Shultz said.

Swedish and other diplomatic sources in Stockholm reported they had been advised by Gromyko that the Soviets want to resume the 10-year-old parley on conventional forces as soon as possible but that no date had been fixed.

"It was a straightforward, businesslike atmosphere," Shultz said of his talk with Gromyko — their first since September, when they had a heated disagreement in Madrid, Spain, over the Soviets' downing of South Korean jetliner with 269 people aboard.

Financial firms release numbers

Of recent deposits, loans

Five local financial institutions had total deposits of more than $233 million on Dec. 31, 1983, according to statements of condition issued after the start of the new year.

This record amount of demand deposits and savings accounts reflect a healthy financial picture for Hereford and Deaf Smith County, despite the cost-price squeeze being felt in the agriculture industry.

Both Hereford banks showed increased deposits and assets in their published statements, but Hi-Plains Savings & Loan provided the biggest hike—showing $39.5 million more in deposits at the close of 1983 than in 1982. First National Bank continued to lead the way in deposits and loans. Deposits at FNB totaled $83,407,000 on Dec. 31, 1983, and loans were $54,819,000. This compares to $83,013,000 and $49,430,000 a year ago.

	DEPOSITS	LOANS
First National	$83,407,000	$54,819,000
Hereford State	55,173,000	37,421,000
Hi-Plains S&L	69,473,000	63,658,000

ed deposits of $55,173,000, compared to $49,713,000 at the end of 1982. Loans were $34,291,000 a year ago and rose to $37,421,000 at the end of 1983.

Security Federal S&L showed deposits of $12,632,000 for the Hereford office, and loans were listed at $5 million. Deposits at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union totalled $12,461,000 at the end of the year, and loans were listed at $7,065,000.

Deposits at the two banks totalled more than $138 million, and total deposits at the five financial institutions added up to $233,147,000. Loans at the five institutions at yearend totalled $167,963,000.

One banker attributed the healthy growth in deposits to the "diversity of the economy in the area." Despite low grain prices, the Payment-in-Kind program helped soften the blow for many farmers.

Several of the financial officers here feel that interest rates may be fairly stable. With an election year, the chances of interest rates going down is more likely than an increase in rates.

By G.C. Speed, Newman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says bitterness is a prolonged manner of suicide.

A young mother who had given birth to a baby boy in the hospital elevator told a nurse how embarrassed she felt about it. "Don't feel bad," consoled the nurse. "Why, three years ago a woman gave birth to a little girl in the hospital parking lot."

"I know," wailed the unhappy mother. "That was me too!"

I should have used better judgment. In last Sunday's paper, I wrote about marriage, using my 32 years of experience to explain how a successful marriage is put together.

Then, I almost blew the whole thing Monday. It didn't concern an argument over money, which psychiatrists tell us is the number one cause of divorces, but it had to do with what may be the second leading cause—wire coathangers!

After the wife had finished washing and ironing my shirts and hung them in my closet, I noticed one of the shirts was on the coathanger wrong. It was no big deal, but I casually mentioned that the shirt should hang with the buttons out, like all the rest.

There is really no good time to casually mention something like that, and the worse timing for such a suggestion is immediately after your wife finishes the ironing!

"If you don't like the way I hang your shirts, you can wash and iron the (R-rated) things yourself," she proclaimed.

Those wire coathangers, like cigarettes, should carry a warning: "These can be injurious to your health."

Come to think of it, the last tiff we had before that was also over coathangers. I came home from work one evening and took off my trousers to hang them in the closet. However, I couldn't find a hanger because she had ironed that day and used all the hangers on the newly-pressed pants and shirts.

I casually mentioned, in what I thought was a sweet manner, that it would be nice to have one hanger to place my trousers upon so that I could wear them again. I don't remember her exact suggestion on what I could do about those coathangers, but it should have warned me that those things are deceptive.

I'd had my personal battle with hangers on numerous occasions, trying to untangle them from a rod in the crowded closet. But it hadn't dawned on me that they were not a topic for negotiations with your mate.

We got the toothpaste issue settled early in our marriage. I casually mentioned that the tube should be "rolled up" as you use it, not just squeezed from all angles. She bought me my own tube to squeeze as I pleased, and has continued to do so through the years.

So, I've decided not to be "picky-picky" about those wire coathangers in the future, and I should caution other men who have not run into this dangerous situation: Beware of those innocent-looking coathangers, they are not compatible with a safe and serene marriage!

Hance, Stenholm to speak Friday

Apparently stolen sometime that morning from a farm located about seven miles east of town, a tractor was found Tuesday afternoon in an alley between the 500 blocks of Avenues G and H, the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office reported.

The $15,000-$20,000 piece of farm machinery, property of Ross Latham, was not damaged.

Hereford police, meanwhile, have recently investigated one incident apiece of attempted burglary, burglary of a building and a fight. Two arrests were made Wednesday, one for no liability insurance and the other for violation of probation.

Fight over estate settled

WACO, Texas (AP) — An out-of-court settlement has been reached in a man's challenge of the changes his parents made in their wills shortly before their death last month that left the bulk of their estate to the television ministry of Jimmy Swaggart.

McLennan County Judge Stanley Rentz on Wednesday dismissed the challenges raised by Larry Neale Baugh after a lawyer for Swaggart brought in a motion, signed by Baugh's lawyer, requesting the action.

The dismissal order said "all matters of controversy between the parties herein have been compromised and settled." Rentz said he did not know any details of the settlement.

Rentz said Baugh's lawyer, Tony Duty of Waco, had called earlier Wednesday and left a message asking that the will challenges be dismissed.

A news conference was scheduled for 10 a.m. today at a Waco hotel to elaborate on the action, said Dennis Brewer, an attorney representing Swaggart.

Longer school days proposed

DALLAS (AP) — Texas public school children should be in school for a minimum of nine hours a day, suggest members of the state's Select Committee on Public Education.

The state panel's subcommittee on child education recommended extending the school day to nine hours — 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. — and reserving the last two hours each day for extracurricular activities.

"The body of human knowledge has grown so dramatically that it takes that amount of time to deal substantively with the subject matter that should be taught," said subcommittee chairman John H. Fleming, president of Texas Wesleyan College.

He told Gov. Mark White and committee chairman H. Ross Perot that the final two hours should be before extracurricular activities and that all students should be required to participate in some "life-enriching" activities during the two hours.

Pennzoil matches Texaco's offer

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co., which has sued to stop Texaco Inc. from taking over Getty Oil Co., has offered to match Texaco's offer of $125 a share if the giant takeover deal falls through.

Pennzoil announced Wednesday it is willing to buy 30 percent of Getty's outstanding shares of Texaco and withdraws its offer, is legally prevented from the takeover or if a Delaware court forces Getty to honor an earlier deal with Pennzoil.

Pennzoil officials announced their subsidiary, Holdings Inc., was filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission a revision of an earlier offer of $110 a share for 43 percent of Getty's shares.

In the suit filed Tuesday, Pennzoil called Texaco Inc.'s takeover bid a display of "sheer financial power" that threatens to limit discovery of new petroleum reserves.

Response to Soviets being formed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new U.S.-Israeli committee will be meeting next week to discuss how the two countries can work together on military exercises and planning and other actions that will demonstrate a mutual response to Soviets operating in Syria.

An official, who spoke only on condition he remain unidentified, also said the committee will exchange intelligence and other information on Soviet activities in the Middle East. He said an agreement on exchange of military medical personnel to examine one another's medical facilities may emerge from the meetings.

The full committee, which meets for the first time Monday and Tuesday, is to gather every six months, alternately in the United States and Israel.

Arctic air hits states

Brutal arctic air camped out across the north-central states today, sending wind-chilled temperatures to 70 below zero, while work crews in the Northeast dug out from a snowstorm that snarled traffic.

The bitter cold clenched an area from the northern half of the Rockies into Minnesota and Wisconsin, and was not expected to loosen its hold until at least the weekend, according to Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"Temperatures were in the 20-below range from Minnesota to Montana overnight, and it won't get above zero across the north-central states today," said Duke. "It looks like readings nearly that cold will be the rule for the next couple of days over the Plains, most of the Midwest and moving into the Northeast."

Egypt invited to Summit

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP) — An Islamic summit conference has invited Egypt to rejoin the family of Moslem nations on condition it endorse Arab and Islamic positions on Israel and the Middle East conflict.

The invitation was extended as a compromise after moderate African and Asian countries demanded an end to the three-year-old exclusion of Egypt resulting from its Camp David peace agreements with Israel.

The debate was the most heated of the summit, which ends today.

In Cairo today, President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt met to discuss the proposal with his prime minister, defense minister, interior minister and foreign minister.

Last Japanese miners found

TAKADA, Japan (AP) — Rescue workers today recovered the bodies of the last three miners trapped 700 feet under the ocean floor by a fire that filled one of Japan's largest coal mines with carbon monoxide and killed 83 workers.

Throughout the night, hundreds of relatives waited in snow at the Mitsui Mining Company's Miiki mine site to learn the fate of those below, shouting and converging every time rescue workers brought a blanket-covered body to the surface.

Company spokesman Shosuke Ueda put the final death toll at 83. He said 13 of the 96 miners initially trapped by the fire were rescued from the mine, on Japan's southern-most island of Kyushu.

Paul Harvey News

Women could decide who will be the next president of the United States. In 1980 more women than men voted. They may again in 1984.

President Reagan's refusal to endorse ERA hurt him politically with some women; his perpetuation of military draft registration is resented by others.

Is it possible this handsome, charming president is getting a bum rap? He thinks he is. He says the issue of his attitude toward women has been surrounded with "a fog of demagoguery."

Let's see, if we can, through the fog.

From historical perspective this president has done nothing more significant than reducing inflation to 2.4 percent last year, the least in 17 years.

He believes that women should appreciate that.

The prime interest rate is down from a Carter administration high of 21½ percent to about half that.

In just the past year two million new jobs have been added to our economy, dropping the unemployment rate for adult women from 9.2 percent to 7.9 percent.

The administration believes we of the media have been ignoring constructive accomplishments which benefit women: virtual elimination of the widow's tax, reduction in the marriage tax penalty.

When IRAs were expanded, women benefited most.

As when larger tax credits were allowed working mothers for child care.

Retirement and pension plans no longer penalize women.

Three million women now own businesses and that number is growing faster than the number of men-owned businesses.

For the first time federal job training was specifically targeted to women.

The president authorized "flextime" work schedules to accommodate working mothers, so that they could adjust their work day to their children's school day.

Women still do not receive equal pay for equal work despite laws which provide that they should. The average working woman takes home about one-third less than the average man who is similarly employed.

But President Reagan is supporting changes in 112 federal laws which discriminate against women and has established a project to assist governors who are willing similarly to modify discriminatory state laws.

Then, of course, this president has placed more women in top policy-making positions than has any other president in a comparable period of time.

They include the familiar ones plus 1,200 other women in executive positions. So the potentially decisive women's vote in the next election could go either way.

One of the things this president has going for him is his mutually respectful working partnership with his own wife.

This may be unrelated but...

There's an old Ron Reagan movie still on late-night TV in which an Oriental says, "In my country a man tells a woman what to do!"

And Mr. Reagan replies, "Oh? And how is your country doing?"

To Handle Persian Crisis

Reagan wants force

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Morning News reported today that the Reagan administration wants to renew a request to equip a Jordanian strike force to deter upheaval in the Persian Gulf.

The News, reporting from its Washington bureau, quoted unidentified sources as saying the administration will secretly request $220 million either as part of the 1985 fiscal defense budget or as a request for additional fiscal 1984 funds.

"There's no doubt that it's back in the budget," the administration source, reported to have participated in deliberations to fund the proposal, was quoted as saying. "The question, obviously, is how much leg do you show."

Under the program, the funds would provide two Brigades of Jordanian troops, about 8,500 men, with C-130 transport aircraft, the News said.

It said the rest of the program would include communication equipment, tracked vehicles, including armored personnel carriers, anti-tank weapons and training to enable the force to put down insurrection or any other crises in Gulf states.

"The great preponderance of the program is all logistical support stuff," one source was quoted as saying.

Another source told the newspaper the administration was also considering providing Jordan with more sophisticated weapons, particularly anti-aircraft missiles. But the source said this request would be separate from the one to equip the task force.

Congress originally authorized the program for the task force last year. However, it refused to provide the funds for it after the plan was made public by Israel radio and was reported in the U.S. press.

Israel opposed the plan then and still does, saying it presents a danger, coming from a nation that is still legally at war with, sources told the News.

The issue has been controversial and led the Senate to pass an amendment prohibiting funds for a such a force unless Congress openly approved it "in an unclassified manner." But the amendment was never enacted.

"There's nothing this (proposal) would provide for them that they already have," said another source.

According to the News, the reason for the secrecy is to avoid advertising its precise capabilities to those who it might be used against and to avoid embarrassing King Hussein of Jordan.

"We felt from the very beginning that the advantage of the program was not having it made public," said one source. "Anybody planning a coup in Bahrain, for them to know that the Jordanians have this or that capability would be helpful to them."

The sources said Hussein also wanted the strike force to be kept a secret to preserve his image in the Arab world.

"Being aligned with the gringos in the region is not the kind of thing you want to do publicly," a source was quoted as saying.

Jury Finally Selected

Jones trial begins today

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Eleven parents and a microbiologist who spent five years testing intravenous solutions will decide whether Genee Jones is an innocent defendant or a nurse who used her skills to kill a baby.

Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old Kerrville girl, died in September 1982 during a frantic ambulance ride. Prosecutors say Ms. Jones, 33, killed the girl with a powerful muscle relaxant.

Testimony was to begin today, and the infant's grandmother and great-grandmother planned to be in the courtroom. Robin Alexander of Tow, the girl's grandmother, said, "I've always felt like I had to be here. I'm no good sitting in the house waiting."

Hester Turner of Longview, a 72-year-old great-grandmother of four, predicted the trial would be an emotional roller-coaster for her.

"It's like a wound that you keep opening and pouring salt in," she said of the death of her great-granddaughter.

The seven-woman, five-man jury was sworn in Wednesday at the end of three days of jury selection. All have children, except for the microbiologist.

The case could hinge on the testimony of a Swedish scientist who developed a test he said can detect the drug Ms. Jones allegedly injected into the McClellan child.

Throughout the jury selection, attorneys on both sides asked potential jurors about their knowledge of science, and whether they had relatives in medicine.

State District Judge John Carter asked reporters not to use jurors' names. He said, "We are not a big city" and identifying the jurors could "place an undue hardship on those people."

Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton was more specific about the possible problems.

"There may be some crazy in the middle of the night call up and say, 'You better do this, that or the other,'" he told reporters.

The microbiologist said she worked in cancer research at the famed Mayo Clinic in Minnesota before moving to Central Texas, where she worked in quality assurance at a laboratory where intravenous solutions are made. She said her degree in medical microbiology involved the study of "microorganisms that cause disease."

The jurors are a varied lot, including a pastor's wife and the wife of a retired Air Force fighter pilot.

Mrs. Alexander, whose daughter Petti was Chelsea's mother, said she thinks a parent can better understand the "special bond" between parents and children. She said her daughter will testify here.

"It's been tough on everyone since the day she died," said Mrs. Alexander, who last saw Chelsea six days before the girl died.

Asked what she thought when looking at Ms. Jones, Mrs. Alexander said, "I went to all the pretrial hearings. I've looked at her. There's no definable word for it. I just look."

Does she think Ms. Jones murdered her granddaughter?

"I won't answer that because I don't know," she said.

The Jones trial was moved to Georgetown from Kerrville because of extensive publicity. Ms. Jones was indicted in the September 1982 infant death after an investigation of a series of mysterious illnesses of young children in San Antonio and Kerrville. She also faces charges of injuring several children in her care.

The McClellan child died in an ambulance after suffering a seizure at the Kerrville clinic where Ms. Jones worked.

Ms. Jones also is charged in Bexar County with administering life-threatening injections to a month-old boy at the pediatric intensive care unit of San Antonio's Medical Center Hospital, where she was employed before moving to Kerrville.

GROMYKO

This time the two men discussed issues of arms, the Middle East, Central America and Africa, but did not scheduling another session.

Shultz said he and Gromyko would meet in New York in the fall if both attend the U.N. General Assembly session. Last fall, to protest the shooting down of the jetliner, the governors of New York and New Jersey barred Gromyko's Soviet plane from landing at New York area airports. Gromyko then stayed away from the meeting.

Of Wednesday's meeting, "Gromyko said it was a necessary session," according to Shultz. "We each expressed our views very frankly."

Asked if he was able to settle anything with Gromyko, Shultz said, "It wasn't that kind of meeting." He added that there were "no formal agreements."

In their meeting, Shultz and Gromyko shook hands, toned down the hostile U.S.-Soviet rhetoric of recent days and conferred at length about arms control and other sensitive issues, U.S. officials said.

"There were even smiles. There were more smiles after," said a senior adviser to Shultz of Wednesday's meeting, which lasted two hours longer than expected.

After the meeting, Shultz telephoned his report to President Reagan, who had joined Shultz in urging a thaw in the chilled U.S.-Soviet relationship. Gromyko and Shultz met after delivering tough speeches to delegates of the 35-nation conference on European security, which opened in Stockholm this week.

Gromyko's speech Wednesday morning was vitriolic. He called the U.S. arms buildup a "pathological obsession," condemned the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada and the presence of American troops in Lebanon, and reiterated that the Soviet Union would not resume arms control talks unless NATO missiles, recently deployed in Western Europe, were removed.

But the invective was missing when the veteran foreign minister met Shultz at the Soviet Embassy, according to members of the U.S. delegation.

"It was a very substantive series of discussions on both sides," a member of the delegation said. "Nobody was talking only for effect."

The delegation member, like the other advisers and officials, spoke on condition of anonymity.

Worldview '84 expo features technologies

A unique exposition, expected to draw over 4,000 business leaders, scientists, educators, and statesmen to Washington, D.C. next summer, will feature a wide array of new technologies that offer hope for mankind's continued progress through the next decade and beyond.

The World Future Society will present the exposition as part of its fifth general assembly, "WorldView '84: A Global Assessment of Problems and Opportunities," to be held June 10-14 at the Washington Hilton.

The exhibits will feature exciting displays and opportunities for hands-on experience with such varied technologies as computers, solar energy, robotics, advanced communications systems, appropriate technologies, alternative fuels, new architectural marvels, and much more. Over 70 companies will demonstrate their advanced models to the many thousands who will tour the exhibit hall.

Interest in the WorldView '84 conference and exposition is growing around the world. Representatives from over 25 countries are already scheduled to attend. Approximately 15 senators and congressmen are expected to participate, along with a number of domestic and foreign government officials.

The World Future Society's last conference that featured a comprehensive look at global problems and prospects drew 5,000 participants to Toronto, Canada, in 1980. Over 3,000 attended the more sharply focused conference on "Communications and the Future" in Washington, D.C. in 1982.

The World Future Society, a 30,000-member association based in Washington, D.C., publishes The Futurist, a bimonthly journal of forecasts, trends, and ideas about the future. The Society takes no official position on what the future should or will be like, but seeks to stimulate discussion of future options as a means of helping people to make wise choices in building the world of tomorrow.

Ann Landers

Public record

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My young son has been living with a girl for two years. Although it broke my heart, I said very little about it. Maybe I am old-fashioned, but their living arrangement was an embarrassment to me.

Last month the girl had his baby. He was born prematurely and lived only a few hours. The local newspaper ran the item in the obituary column, saying the infant was survived by his mother (giving her maiden name) and his father, bearing our family name. They also included the names of both sets of grandparents, maternal and paternal.

I feel it was not necessary to run the obituary at all and surely, under the circumstances, they did not need to publish the names of the grandparents. My son says he did not give the newspaper the information, nor did his girlfriend. How do newspapers get these items? Am I wrong to feel as I do?—Disconcerted In Va.

DEAR VA: Births and deaths are a matter of public record. Newspapers have access to such information.

It might surprise you to learn that some unmarried mothers want the births of their children to be announced to the press. Also the deaths.

Since the infant you are writing about lived only a few hours and was born out of wedlock, I question the propriety of publishing the names of the grandparents.

DEAR ANN: This is for "Petrified in Texas," who stated that in five years he probably will be wearing full dentures because of his fears of dentists. I know a few other nuts who think the same way. Just where does he think he will eventually get these dentures...from the corner tavern, the supermarket, or perhaps the gas station?

Before he gets dentures he must have all the rotten stubs removed from his mouth. Then he needs to have an impression made. After the teeth are fitted, he must return for adjustments. All this must be done in the dentist's office—and it will involve a certain amount of discomfort.

So, "Texas," and all the other fraidy cats out there, take your choice—now or later.

I wish someone had educated me early on the importance of taking care of my teeth. They are precious gems.

Treasure them.—Denture-Wearer In New Jersey

DEAR DENT: Thanks for putting the problem in proper focus. And thanks, too, for reminding us of something we all need to hear again and again.

DEAR ANN: You have written extensively and often about drunk drivers and said they should be treated like the criminals they are.

I wonder how many people are aware of the other deaths caused by drunkenness? Here are some figures from columnist Dr. Timothy Johnson:

Seventy percent of choking victims are intoxicated; 70 percent of all drowning victims; 70 percent of all burn victims, and 50 percent of "freak accidents." Makes you stop and think, doesn't it?—Cape Cod

DEAR COD: Sure does. More and more I see the wisdom of my decision, at age 15, never to touch the stuff.

Can drugs be a friend in time of stress? If you keep your head together can they be of help? Ann Landers; "all-new" booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope," separates the fact from the fiction. Get it today. ## HHS cagers to host rival Caprock Friday

By STAN GODEK
Sports Editor

Hereford's boys and girls varsity basketball teams are to host Amarillo's Caprock High School in District 3-5A action Friday.

From all indications, the Whiteface girls should have an easier go of it against the hapless Longhorn girls than will be HHS boys.

Caprock's girls are winless on the season. HHS trounced CHS earlier in the season, 61-43, in Amarillo. Caprock was routed by Plainview Tuesday, 64-37.

The Whiteface boys face a tougher task in trying to upend the Longhorns. Caprock is seated in third place in the district, but is coming off of a 58-42 defeat to Plainview Tuesday.

After beating Lubbock, 61-51, Tuesday, the Herd will be trying for its third consecutive victory. Boys coach Bobby Decker believes his team has a solid chance to move up in the standings.

"We're playing better ball, and Plainview beat them (Caprock), so they're not playing quite as well as earlier in the season," Decker said after Wednesday's practice.

The Whitefaces lost to Caprock earlier in the season, 69-46. "We let them get out to a quick lead real early in the game and couldn't battle back," Decker said, reflecting back to the earlier contest.

"I expect a better game this time," Decker added.

One of the keys to beating the Longhorns will be containing 6-foot-7 center Troy Fry.

"Troy Fry is one of the best ballplayers in the district," Decker said. The senior is the district's second leading scorer, averaging more than 21 points a game and Fry is the top rebounder, pulling down over 12 caroms per game.

In other district play Tuesday, the Amarillo High School boys remained atop of the pack, winning their 14th consecutive game, 60-56, over Palo Duro. Coronado upended Tascosa, 53-49, and second-place Monterey was idle.

In girls action, Palo Duro dropped its first district game, 49-44, to Amarillo High School. The Dons and Sandies are now deadlocked in a first-place tie. Tascosa downed Coronado, 87-59, and the Monterey girls were also idle.

Other games scheduled for Friday are: Lubbock High at Amarillo High, Palo Duro at Tascosa, and Coronado at Monterey. Both boys and girls teams will play in these contests. Plainview is idle Friday.

Virginia falls short of upset, 69-66

No. 1 North Carolina is 13-0

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked North Carolina still is unbeaten, although Virginia again did its best to wreck the Tar Heels.

Michael Jordan scored 23 points as North Carolina withstood a furious Virginia rally for a 69-66 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory Wednesday night in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Last year, the Tar Heels had to overcome a 10-point Virginia lead in the final 4:12 for a one-point victory. In 1982, North Carolina trailed the Cavaliers by nine points before rallying to win.

North Carolina seemed to be in charge this time, holding a 58-37 lead midway in the second half when Otell Wilson sparked a Cavalier charge. Wilson scored 13 points as Virginia outscored the Tar Heels 21-1 to pull within 59-58 with 5:24 left.

"Othell was shooting from very far out," Jordan said. "In the zone, that's what we wanted. But he was pretty hot."

Jordan, however, snapped the streak with a jump shot with 4:50 to go. Later, he added a foul shot to boost North Carolina's lead to 62-58.

Virginia did pull within 68-66 with 45 seconds remaining, but Rick Carlisle missed a shot that would have tied it and North Carolina's Sam Perkins was fouled while grabbing the rebound. He made one foul shot, giving the Tar Heels their 13th victory and fourth in ACC play.

Virginia now is 11-2 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

Four other ranked teams were action Wednesday night, and all four managed to win. Sixth-ranked Georgetown beat Providence 80-76, No. 16 Boston College topped Northeastern 81-78 in overtime, No. 18 Memphis State breezed by South Carolina 75-58 and No. 20 Oklahoma downed Colorado 100-89 in double overtime.

Top Ten

Patrick Ewing and David Wingate scored 18 points apiece to pace Georgetown over Providence in Big East action. The Hoyas, 14-2, took control with an 11-4 spurt that gave them a 64-53 lead with nine minutes remaining. Providence then narrowed the gap to four points in the final minute.

The game was moved from the Capital Centre to the 4,000-seat McDonough Arena on campus because of a snowstorm that hit Washington, D.C., during the day.

tinued its 20-year domination of Northeastern. Jay Murphy, who led BC with 30 points, made two free throws with one second left to seal the victory in Newton, Mass.

Northeastern's Mark Haspel, who scored 23 points, made a layup with 4:32 left in regulation to tie it at 73. Neither team scored again before the overtime.

BC, 12-3, has beaten Northeastern 19 consecutive times since 1964.

Phillip Haynes scored 19 points to pace a balanced Memphis State attack in Columbia, S.C. The Tigers led South Carolina 33-24 at halftime and went on to raise their season record to 12-3.

Wayman Tisdale scored 36 points and Jan Pannell hit eight straight free throws as Oklahoma battled Colorado and the Buffalo fans in Boulder, Colo.

Playing before 10,649, Colorado's second-largest home crowd, Oklahoma, 14-2, called a timeout with nine seconds left in the Big Eight game. When play resumed, the Sooner players gathered at halfcourt and traded insults with the Colorado fans.

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs made an obscene gesture toward the crowd, which responded with a hail of debris. As the Oklahoma players left the floor, they threw some of the debris back.

Theismann quite a celebrity on and off playing field

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Lights, camera, action. It's center stage at the Super Bowl, the biggest sports festival of the year, and Joe Theismann's star is burning bright.

Author, radio personality, entrepreneur and movie-maker, Theismann seemingly moonlights in his spare time to play quarterback for the defending champion Redskins.

"Sometimes I wonder how he finds time to play with us, he has so many things going on," said Redskin safety Mark Murphy.

"I play football to relax. It gives me a chance to forget the other things," Theismann said half-kiddingly.

To those critics who say he is obnoxious and a phony interested only in marketing himself, Theismann is ready.

"What you see is what you get. I am a businessman first and then a football player. The world championship to me was a goal and an obsession. To repeat again this year would boost my business career," Theismann said.

His typical work week includes a twice-weekly radio show, the taping of a weekly television show, overseeing operations at a restaurant that bears his name, and publication of a weekly newspaper.

"That's during the season," says Theismann, who admits to carefully parceling his time to include football practices and the games.

A self-promoter, Theismann once wrote a book on quarterbacking in the NFL. What was surprising was that he wrote it before he ever played in the league.

As a motivational speaker, he earns up to $10,000 for a single appearance. At the same time, he will donate his time to help promote Children's Hospital in Washington. His one major financial mistake, it would appear, was a four-year contract he signed with the Redskins. The pact, which ties Theismann to the Redskins for another two years, pays him $315,000 this year, 18th among NFL quarterbacks.

It's been tougher for him in his second year, much tougher, but he put forth All-Pro performances in helping the Raiders trounce Pittsburgh 38-10 and whip Seattle 30-14 in playoff action this

Former Heisman winner 'in class by himself'

Allen and Raiders peak together

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders seem to have peaked at the perfect time. And so, it appears, has running back Marcus Allen. Chances are, that's no coincidence.

"I firmly believe we're a better team than we were three years ago when we won the Super Bowl," said Los Angeles quarterback Jim Plunkett. "There are many reasons, one of the main ones is Marcus. He's in a class by himself."

Allen, the Heisman Trophy winner two years ago while attending Southern Cal, enjoyed a brilliant season as a rookie in the National Football League, earning first-team All-Pro honors during the strike-shortened 1982 campaign.

It's been tougher for him in his second year, much tougher, but he put forth All-Pro performances in helping the Raiders trounce Pittsburgh 38-10 and whip Seattle 30-14 in playoff action this season with Al Davis, the Raiders' Managing General Partner, about carrying the ball more often.

"It was just a statement," Allen recalled. "I was walking with Mr. Davis. I said I'd like to run the ball more, he told me to take a few laps after practice. That's the way the conversation ended."

Allen knows it won't be easy Sunday when the Raiders face defending Super Bowl champion Washington.

The Redskins led the NFL in rushing defense and in their 18 games so far, only one running back has gained more than 100 yards.

"They have an awesome front four," said Allen.

"Hopefully, I can contribute in some fashion."

Allen says his main attributes as a ball-carrier are quickness and vision. What does he think about?

"I just try to avoid the guys in the other jerseys," he said. "I don't know what I'm doing most of the time, just reacting to what's in front of me. It's mostly instinct."

Grimsley's Sports World Super Bowl has drama

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP
Special Correspondent

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — It was a day depicting one of the interesting sideshow dramas of next Sunday's Super Bowl XVIII, an event which paralyzes a nation.

There was Lyle Alzado, the big, bearded linebacker of the Los Angeles Raiders, almost smothered by newsmen, standing on the lush Tampa Stadium turf and regaling his audience with his lion's roar and raunchy humor.

Minutes earlier, less than 30 yards away in the endzone, had stood John Riggins, ball-carrying demon of the Washington Redskins, in full football regalia and cowboy boots, arms folded, frozen like an abandoned Greek statue.

"No interviews," said the hulking line smasher. "This is picture day. Tomorrow is the day for talking."

Thus opening salvos were fired earlier this week in the "Media War" — the infighting for newspaper, radio and TV space.

Alzado and Riggins are both "flakes," or odd-balls, with a flair for the theatrical and a lust for public attention. They have dominated — in picture, story and electronic exposure — the period leading up to the big game.

With Riggins refusing to throw a punch in the first public appearance of the Super Bowl rivals, Alzado got in the first licks with his wild blither and bombast.

Riggins, who even created a furor with his statue act, plunged into the fray Wednesday when he appeared on stage attired in the uniform of a paratrooper.

"Hi, fellows, what's going on?" he asked when the buzzing had subsided.

"Last year the Redskins marched on Miami," he added. "This year we will fly over L.A."

The uniform, he said, represented Air National Guard of Washington, D. C. He wore a patch which said "Commander, Riggo's Rangers."

"Be careful what you say to me or you may be attacked by an F4 Phantom fighter," he warned.

Loud laughter. One newsman fell out of his chair.

The question-answer session turned into a burlesque.

Somebody asked if he cared what people thought of him.

"Let's not get too cerebral, OK?" he said.

Asked why he maintained a stolid silence Tuesday while Alzado was getting all the attention, Riggins replied:

"I wanted a soft space for my head to fall when he knocked my block off, as he said he was going to do. I hoped he's be enough of a gentleman to pick it up and hand it back to me."

More raucous laughter. Riggins had his audience in the palm of his hand, and he was loving every minute of it.

On another question, he said, "Give me something I can sink my teeth into," and, when somebody asked about all the pleups, bangs and bruises he receives on his plunges into the line, he quipped:

"That's intimidation."

In a serious vein, somebody asked him if he had dreams — as he said a year ago — of smashing through the opposing lines to victory, he soberly responded:

"I'm always as good as my offensive line or as good as their defensive line allows. I'm only as good as their dreams."

Riggins is a pleasant, personable man of 34 out of the University of Kansas, now completing his 12th pro season.

He always has had a penchant for the unusual. With the New York Jets in the 1970s, he came to camp with one of those Mr. T, Mohawk hairstyles and wore it all year. He would roll up his white shorts in practice so he would look like a diapered Mahatma Gandhi.

They said the reason he left the Jets was that he was jealous of all the attention lavished on Joe Namath.

Originally, he was denied membership in the "Hogs," the Redskins' rugged offensive line, but later was admitted. He showed his appreciation by throwing a dinner for the Hogs and presenting each with a high-powered Weatherby Rifle, designed for elephant and rhino hunting in Africa.

A 6-foot-2, 235-pound powerhouse who broke all of Gale Sayers records at Kansas and this year rushed for 1,374 yards and 24 touchdowns, Riggins said he welcomed the confrontation with Lyle Alzado and his ram-paging Raider buddies, adding:

"When it's over, I hope they will invite me over to their showers."

Don't make book on it. There hardly seems room for the two of them.

Centers pull down 37 rebounds as Pistons lose to Nets, 124-115

By The Associated Press

They play with only one ball at a time in the National Basketball Association, and when the New Jersey Nets met the Detroit Pistons it was usually in the hands of either Buck Williams or Bill Laimbeer.

"There are only so many rebounds to be had, so there are going to be collisions and bodies flying around," said Detroit's Laimbeer, who scored a career-high 33 points and also grabbed 17 rebounds Wednesday night. "Unfortunately, we did not win the ballgame."

The Nets did, with Williams scoring 23 points and pulling down 20 rebounds in a 124-115 triumph over the Pistons.

"I think overall the game Buck Williams played for us was a joy to watch," said Nets Coach Stan Albeck. "He was going after the basketball on every rebound and felt he was going to get it. It was a great show of rebounders. Neither one would back down. Laimbeer was just sensational."

In other games, the Philadelphia 76ers nipped the Cleveland Cavaliers 109-107, the Milwaukee Bucks downed the Atlanta Hawks 99-90, the San Antonio Spurs whipped the Denver Nuggets 148-127, the Seattle SuperSonics turned back the Dallas Mavericks 114-107 and the San Diego Clippers defeated the Washington Bullets 110-101.

New Jersey's Williams had help from Otis Birdsong, who scored 22 points as the Nets won for the sixth time in their last seven games. Kelvin Ransey added 18 points, while Isiah Thomas had 24 points and eight assists for Detroit and Terry Tyler contributed 20 points.

76ers 109, Cavaliers 107

Andrew Toney scored 28 points, but the Philadelphia 76ers needed a pair of missed foul shots by Cleveland's Cliff Robinson with one second left to hold on. Toney hit an 18-foot jump shot with 1:32 remaining to give the 76ers a 109-103 lead. Robinson then canned a pair of 10-footers to pull Cleveland within two with 32 seconds to go. After Moses Malone, who scored 23 points for Philadelphia, missed a shot, Robinson grabbed the rebound and Cleveland called time out with two seconds remaining.

Robinson got the inbounds pass and was fouled by Julius Erving. He missed the first free throw, then intentionally missed the second shot in hopes of getting the tying basket off the rebound. Phil Hubbard scored a career-high 31 points for Cleveland. Bucks 99, Hawks 90

Marques Johnson scored 31 points and Milwaukee survived a 12-point second period. The Bucks trailed 76-69 after three quarters but cut the lead to 80-78 on Johnson's 18-footer with 7:58 remaining. After Atlanta's Mike Glenn hit an 18-footer, the Bucks went on a 9-1 spurt for an 87-83 lead and held on to reclaim sole possession of the Central Division lead. Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 23 points.

Spurs 148, Nuggets 127

San Antonio took an 11-0 lead and scored 26 of the first 30 points in capturing its third straight victory. George Gervin had 25 of his 37 points by halftime and San Antonio had an 84-55 lead. Artis Gilmore had eight rebounds and two blocked shots in the Spurs' big opening quarter and finished with 13 points and a season-high 21 rebounds, while John Lucas scored 16 points and doled out 18 assists. Rookie Howard Carter started his first game of the season for Denver and led the Nuggets with 25 points.

SuperSonics 114, Mavericks 107

Jack Sikma and Gus Williams each scored 13 of their 24 points in the fourth quarter as Seattle notched its sixth straight victory. The triumph was No. 500 for Coach Lenny Wilkens against 417 losses in his 12-season career. At 46, Wilkens is the youngest coach to reach the 500-victory plateau.

The Sonics broke an 89-89 tie on Tom Chambers' three-point play and Sikma added a jumper and free throw to give Seattle a 95-89 lead with 5:26 to play. Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks with 25 points and Rolando Blackman added 24. Clippers 110, Bullets 101

Ricky Pierce scored 11 of his 15 points in the fourth quarter.

Seven NHL players score hat tricks

By The Associated Press

It's no trick to get a three-goal hat trick in the National Hockey League.

Seven players scored three goals Wednesday night — yes, Wayne Gretzky was one of them — but scoring honors went to the New York Islanders, who swamped the Chicago Black Hawks 9-1 as coach Al Arbour changed his lines and Mike Bossy and Billy Carroll each got a hat trick.

"Coach Arbour switched my line by putting Butch Goring at center and put Bryan Trottier on a line with John Tonelli and Duanne Sutter," said Bossy, who has 38 goals this season. "He must have known something because Goring, Greg Gilbert and I accounted for five goals and nine points altogether."

"As for me personally, I don't mind being the second best goal scorer in the NHL behind Wayne Gretzky. Gretzky is a great player and deserves everything he gets. I'm glad we have players such as Goring, Trottier, (Clark) Gillies and the rest of the guys who have won four straight Stanley Cups. That to me is more important than being the No. 1 goal scorer or the biggest point producer."

Edmonton, with Gretzky getting three goals and two assists and stretching his record point-scoring streak to all 47 games this season, downed Vancouver 7-5. Also, the New York Rangers whipped St. Louis 6-2, Toronto crushed Minnesota 9-4, Calgary beat Detroit 4-2, Buffalo blanked Los Angeles 4-0 and Winnipeg edged Pittsburgh 5-4 in overtime.

The heartwood of a tree is the oldest, hardest wood in the trunk.

WHO AM I?

A native of Brooklyn, I was my club's No. 1 pick in the college draft after I graduated from North Carolina. At 37, I became the team's head coach. I split my 11-year playing career between the NBA and the ABA.

Let us review your Insurance Program.

Because time changes insurance aims and costs, a review of your overall insurance program should be made every few years.

We will be pleased to make a survey of your insurance needs compared to the insurance you now carry. After the survey you can better evaluate whether your insurance dollar is being spent most wisely.

Often, insurance is bought "piecemeal" over a period of time. Many times, in reviewing programs, we have found that essential coverages are not insured at all or inadequately. Meanwhile, money may be spent on insurance which we would consider optional, that is, nice to have but not at the expense of more essential coverages.

Author says LBJ knew Vietnam War unwinnable

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the first days of his presidency, Lyndon Johnson was told the war in Vietnam might be unwinnable, but he still made a "knee-jerk decision" to continue it, says a book about LBJ to be published on Friday.

Johnson wasn't drawn into the quagmire of Vietnam, writes author Vaughn Davis Bornet, but "knew from the very beginning that even a great American effort centered in Saigon would have a very slow payoff — and might not have any."

The book, "The Presidency of Lyndon B. Johnson," is part of an American presidency series published by the University Press of Kansas.

In an interview, Bornet said his book tries to show the major accomplishments as well as the major failures of the Johnson presidency.

"It's like oil and water, they won't mix," he said. "Here you have a man who is both good and evil and you have to treat him that way."

Bornet, a retired professor of history and social science at Southern Oregon State College, says it is virtually certain that at the time of his assassination John F. Kennedy was not on a course of withdrawing from Vietnam.

Johnson, he says, "clearly did not think his way through his Vietnam inheritance in November and December of 1963. His knee-jerk decision was made in hours, not even in days. From the outset, the vice president of the Kennedy years, facing the 1964 election, was determined on the necessity to carry on. He was even willing to enlarge on his inheritance."

As a result, Johnson "kept making unqualified public and private promises of support to South Vietnam, essentially a state in chaos," Bornet writes. "The American public simply had no idea that in the winter of 1964 their future had already been committed."

Bornet contends that Johnson had decided in 1965 not to run for a second term because of his poor health. He says the president's unexpected announcement in 1968 was not prompted — as convention wisdom has it — by his unpopularity.

"Outwardly, Lyndon Johnson was an impressive masculine specimen who wore a shirt with a 17½ collar and 37-inch sleeves and stood 6 feet 5¼ inches tall," Bornet writes. "The huge body deceived observers but not its owner."

Johnson had fully recovered from a heart attack in 1955 and as a president without a vice president, was determined to quiet the slightest public suspicion about his vigor, Bornet says.

But, he adds, Johnson "almost feared to close doors, to be alone; would there be another attack, with no one to help?"

Johnson died Jan. 22, 1973, of a heart attack.

"Long before the preparation period for the election of 1968, the Johnsons, husband and wife, knew that in the national interest as well as their own there should be no further years of arduous labor as chief executive after Jan. 20, 1969," Bornet writes.

"So Johnson's withdrawal from candidacy for another term could have been — but clearly was not — due to Tet, the war in general, rival challengers in his party, the protesters, the polls, the 'system' working, any alleged mental quirks or supposed tendencies toward avoiding conflict, or the fear of losing."

Summing up, in the final chapter, Bornet says that Johnson's major domestic program, his war on poverty, had results that were neither spectacular nor permanent.

But, he adds: "This presidency made a difference

... What President Johnson achieved would look better if he had not promised so much more, so frequently, and without reservations. He wanted desperately to be — and to appear to be — a great, not just a good president."

Despite crop loss

Texas Citrus Fiesta opens

MISSION, Texas (AP) — The citrus judging event has been cancelled and the fruit floats will be made of paper or plastic, not grapefruit and oranges.

But with or without citrus, the Texas Citrus Fiesta will go on.

"I don't think we've ever had an experience like this before," said Gerald Cook, president of the association that sponsors the event, referring to the December freeze that completely destroyed this year's citrus crop.

How can you have a citrus festival without citrus?

"I guess the answer is that the fiesta is to honor the citrus industry and the character and strength of those involved in growing and marketing citrus and doesn't celebrate a particular crop," Cook says.

Cook admits that there is little for the citrus industry to celebrate this year. Rio Grande Valley growers are having one of the worst years in a half century following the destruction of the Valley's $30 million grapefruit and orange crop.

The freeze also damaged an undetermined number of trees and industry experts say next year's crop may be 90 percent smaller than this year's pre-freeze crop.

"But citrus will be back. Just give the growers a couple of years and they'll be back on top," Cook says.

Meanwhile, the fruit judging event has been cancelled and citrus floats in the parade will roll bedecked with substitute materials.

Cook says that although this is the first time since the fiesta began in 1931 that a damaging freeze has occurred before the event, it is not the first time Mother Nature has played her tricks on Mission.

"In 1949 there was a freeze on the day of the parade," he says. "And another year we had a hurricane just before parade day."

Despite the setbacks this year, Cook says that none of the hundreds of people involved ever thought of cancelling the event, Jan. 19-29.

Even without the citrus judging or fruit floats, the 10-day fiesta presents many attractions including a quilt show, a Noche Folklorico, a coronation with a crowning of King Citrus and Queen Citrianna and a style show of clothing adorned with Valley products, like corn husks and citrus pulp.

Hundreds of people attend the style show and the parade, which will be on Jan. 28 this year, has drawn 100,000 spectators in previous years. But attendance this year is uncertain.

"We're holding our breath right now to see what the weather will do. It has never rained on our parade, but the weather is lousy right now."

"If it gets nice next week, people will be enthusiastic and we'll have a good crowd. This year, we just don't know what will happen next."

Johnson had fully recovered from a heart attack in 1955 and as a president without a vice president, was determined to quiet the slightest public suspicion about his vigor, Bornet says.

But, he adds, Johnson "almost feared to close doors, to be alone; would there be another attack, with no one to help?"

Of record red

Caterpillar thinks black after two years

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Caterpillar Tractor Co. awash in red ink for a record second straight year, says a growing U.S. recovery should offset global sales headaches and bathe it in black this year.

"We're very optimistic that 1984 will see the company return to profitability," Treasurer Charles Rager said Wednesday after the firm announced it lost $345 million in 1983.

The earthmoving-equipment maker never had marked two consecutive years of loss. Its $180 million 1982 deficit was the company's first loss since 1932, in the midst of the Depression.

Caterpillar said it employed 58,000 people worldwide at the end of 1983, with 43,000 in the United States. The total labor force was a decline of 3,200 from 1982, and the firm said 600 of the reduction was made among hourly workers, the rest among salaried.

Of nearly 20,000 U.S. Caterpillar workers on indefinite layoff at year's end, the firm said 1,900 would be recalled during the first quarter of 1984. Of those, 275 would be in the Caterpillar-dominated Peoria area.

The company said it was hampered in 1983 by price-cutting overseas forced by a flexed U.S. dollar, reduced sales to oil-exporting and developing nations and stiff, one-time costs from closing five U.S. factories and one in England.

Despite the record loss, Rager told a news conference at corporate headquarters that U.S. and Canadian sales progressively improved each quarter of 1983. He said the trend would continue.

This year's foreign sales picture was mixed, he said, but improving economies in the United States and in industrialized nations should more than offset the sluggish foreign markets.

Potential thorns in 1984 include continuing Middle East tensions, sliding revenues for oil-exporting nations and drives by developing countries to repay old debts before taking on new ones, said Rager.

"We expect that sales will gain momentum throughout the year, with the latter half of the year (1984) being much stronger than the first half," he said.

Rager emphasized that Caterpillar's overall sales increased, and losses decreased, in each consecutive quarter of 1983, showing a positive trend. For example, the company reported a first-quarter loss of $172 million, but the second quarter showed a loss of $92 million. Similarly, third-quarter losses were $70 million while fourth-quarter losses fell to $11 million.

Last year's sales totaled $5.42 billion, down $1.05 billion from 1982, the company reported. The loss per share was $3.74, compared with a $2.04 loss per share of common stock in 1982.

The company also said a seven-month strike by United Auto Worker members — from October 1982 through last April — "had an indeterminate adverse affect" on 1983 performance because of lost sales.

Ticket slowdown could cost money, lives

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Charles Rodriguez says he's examining the number of traffic tickets being issued, which dropped significantly the past two months, to determine if disgruntled officers have started an informal ticket slowdown.

"If there's a deliberate effort to drop productivity, we're going to have to look at it," Rodriguez said. "If a man can't do the job, we should probably replace him, transfer him."

In December 1983, 7,642 traffic tickets were issued — well below the December 1982 figure of 13,739, city records show. Only 8,959 traffic tickets were issued last November.

Johnson had fully recovered from a heart attack in 1955 and as a president without a vice president, was determined to quiet the slightest public suspicion about his vigor, Bornet says.

But, he adds, Johnson "almost feared to close doors, to be alone; would there be another attack, with no one to help?"

Group honors fathers on Confederate Heroes Day

DALLAS (AP) — Thursday is Confederate Heroes Day, an official state holiday. For most people, it is an obscure tribute to a distant chapter in American history.

But for a small and dwindling group, the day is special. It is a day to honor their fathers.

"To most people, the day means nothing. They don't pay a bit of attention to it. But I always think about my dad, and I try to imagine what would have happened if the South had won," said Dawson Schnittker, 88, of Dallas, whose father fought in at least three major battles of the Civil War.

Dallas resident Grady Turner, 88, son of Confederate veteran Stephen W. Turner, said many people are surprised to find there are still surviving sons and daughters of Civil War veterans.

"Any time I mention something about my father fighting in the War between the States, people always stop me and say, 'Excuse me, don't you mean your grandfather or great-grandfather?'" Turner said.

"There aren't many of us left," said Willa Stephenson of Dallas. "When I first joined the United Daughters of the Confederacy in about 1931, we were almost all real daughters of veterans. But so many have passed away."

Harold B. Simpson, director of the Confederate Research Center at Hill Junior College in Hillsboro, Texas, said, "It's hard to estimate, but I would say there are probably less than 100 real sons and daughters of Confederate veterans in Texas. They're all up in their 80s or 90s. It's a rapidly diminishing group."

For most people, the Civil War is now a matter of mere history, relegated to school books and jocular references to Yankees and Rebels. But for the handful of surviving sons and daughters, the Civil War is still real and personal.

"I was born in the Old South, and I still live in the Old South," Miss Stephenson said. "I don't mean I'm that narrow, but up here in my head I'm still living in the Old South. I can't help it. It's born in me."

For Mrs. Schnittker, a spark of her father's Confederate passion still burns inside her.

"He always felt strongly for states' rights and that the South should have won. And he transferred that feeling to all his children," she said. "When I say 'Yankees,' I still say 'damn Yankees.'"

In some cases, the war years live on in the sons' names. Robert Lee Owen, 90, of Dallas said his father remained a staunch Confederate to the end and named him for the South's famous general.

Grady Turner said his father strongly advocated harmony between the North and South after the war and named him for Henry W. Grady, the Georgia journalist and orator. "Grady made a famous speech at Cooper Union in Brooklyn in which he said, 'There is no North. There is no South.' Dad liked that, so he named me Grady," Turner said.

The stories of the Civil War that survive through the children are, for the most part, not epic tales of battle but gentle reminiscences of everyday life as a soldier.

Mrs. Schnittker's father, Benjamin Green Walker, was small for his age when he enlisted at 17 in Tennessee, so he was first put into service as cook for the officers of his unit.

"He said that on one campaign they ran out of salt. He had been cooking for weeks without any salt when he came across a whole barrel of salt in the smokehouse of an abandoned house. He filled his pockets with the salt.

"That night when the officers tasted the salt in their food, they demanded to know where he got it. My daddy said he was scared to death that he would be court-martialed for stealing the salt. He finally told them where he got it. Instead of court-martialing him, the officers went and got the whole barrel," Mrs. Schnittker said.

She said her father later joined the regular infantry and fought in the Battle of Shiloh, as well as other battles. "He said at one battle they came across the payroll for the northern army. They threw the rolls of money in the campfire. He didn't know how much money was there, but it was northern money and was worthless to them anyway," she said.

Mrs. Schnittker's father moved his family to Texas after the war, and he farmed near the Ozro community in Ellis County until his death in 1911. Mrs. Schnittker, the last of his eight children, was 16 when he died.

Turner has copies of official Confederate States of America documents showing his father enlisted at Tanner's Store in Mecklenburg, Va., on June 22, 1861. Among Turner's most cherished possessions is a tintype photograph of his father in dress Confederate uniform taken later that year in Richmond.

Turner said his father mostly talked about the Yankee victory at the Battle of Fort Donelson in Tennessee in February 1862. He was captured and sent to a prison camp on an island in Lake Erie near Sandusky, Ohio.

"He didn't know a thing about cooking, but he volunteered to be a cook in the prison camp just to keep busy," Turner said. "The first time he tried to make rice, he said he kept adding more and more rice to the boiling water. He ended up with so much rice that they had to eat leftover rice for days."

Turner's father befriended a group of Texans in the prison camp, and after a prisoner exchange in 1862, he accompanied the officers back to Texas rather than join his original Virginia unit.

"My dad's old regiment was decimated in Pickett's Charge at the Battle of Gettysburg. There probably wouldn't be a Turner family today if he had returned to his original regiment," Turner said.

Turner's father remained in Texas for the duration of the war and was involved in one skirmish that occurred after Lee's surrender but before the news reached Texas.

The remainder of his father's family followed him to Texas after the war, when carpetbaggers seized the family's Virginia farm to pay back taxes. "My grandmother brought trunkloads of Confederate money to Texas. Of course, it was worthless. My brothers said they used the money to paper over the cracks in the shanties," Turner said.

His father became a Methodist minister and preached in churches in Tolbert, Waco, Hewitt, Gatesville, Cisco and Quanah. He died in 1916 in Cisco when Turner was 19. "I was the youngest of nine children, and I'm the only one left," he said.

Owen said his father, James Mattison Owen, was 14 years old when he lied about his age and enlisted in Georgia.

"He was a sharpshooter — him and another fellow,"

Owen said. "He said they would climb trees and look for blue uniforms. When he would see a blue uniform, then he would look for brass buttons. He said he never shot at silver buttons because only the officers wore brass buttons."

Owen said his father's favorite story was of the time he came face to face with a Yankee soldier.

"He told of going down to a spring once, carrying about five canteens to get some water. He was bent over, filling those canteens. As he was filling the third one, a bullet was fired right through that canteen.

"He looked up and there was a Yankee standing on the little hill over the spring. The Yankee said, 'Surrender, you damn Rebel, and save your life.' But my daddy wasn't about to surrender to a Yankee. He jumped up and ran, and he got away," Owen said.

"Now that's an old-timey story," he added. "Fact of the business, I don't think that Yankee had any intention of killing him. He had every advantage on him."

Owen said his father was discharged in 1865 at Greensboro, N.C. Later, he moved to Texas and farmed in Johnson County and then in Collin County until his death in 1914.

Owen was the youngest of seven children and is the only one surviving.

Miss Stephenson, who declined to discuss her age, said her father, George Washington Stephenson, joined the Confederate army in Nashville after the war had been under way almost three years. "He fibbed about his age to get in. He told them he was 16, but he was really only 14. He wanted to join earlier, but he had to wait until he grew up some," she said.

Her father was terribly disheartened by the South's loss, Miss Stephenson said.

"He never got over it," she said. "But after it was over, he didn't carry any hatred in his heart. He said, 'I can't go on fighting. I've got to learn to be peaceful.'"

Miss Stephenson said her father remained proud, however, of his service to the Confederacy. After his retirement as a railroad conductor in Tennessee, he moved to Dallas to live with Miss Stephenson, who had graduated from Southern Methodist University and taught history in Dallas public schools.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A record number of foreign tourists visited Mexico last year, according to government statistics.

Guillermo Grimm, tourism undersecretary for promotion and development, said more than 4.7 million people visited the country last year and spent $1.2 billion.

Grimm said the number of tourists represents a 25 percent increase from 1982's 3.8 million visitors.

Meanwhile, he said, Mexicans traveling abroad spent $500 million last year.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican and Spanish energy institutes signed an agreement for technological exchange, the official El Nacional newspaper reported Wednesday.

It said Claudio Boada, director of the Spanish National Institute of Hydrocarbons, and Jose Luis Garcia Luna, director of the Mexican Petroleum Institute, signed the agreement Tuesday at a ceremony attended by Mario Ramon Beteta, head of the government's oil monopoly PEMEX.

El Nacional also reported that Mexico has replaced Saudi Arabia as the leading supplier of oil to Spain. Spain, in turn, is Mexico's second-largest customer after the United States, which buys about half of the PEMEX average daily exports of 1.5 million barrels.

The newspaper said Mexico currently sells 160,000 barrels a day to Spain but expects to increase that figure to 190,000 barrels daily. Beteta said the increase could take place this year.

TUXTLA GUTIERREZ, Mexico (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid has pledged to listen and take the advice of all sectors of the population, a plan he says will help Mexico overcome its problems.

"With this system, I am meeting one of the fundamental tasks of the government, which is to listen, hear what the Mexican towns want ..."

de la Madrid told producers during a meeting Tuesday. De la Madrid said also that Mexico must move ahead using the suggestions of all sectors of the economy.

"It can't, in any form, remain simply in the stage of design," he said during a visit to this capital of Chiapas state, 656 miles south of Mexico City.

Adolfo Hegewisch, undersecretary of commerce in charge of foreign investments, told reporters that a decision will be made after the study is finished. He said that should be in the first quarter of the year.

The government came in control of large quantities of stocks in private companies when the banks were nationalized.

Officers installed at meeting

Leta Kaul served as installing officer when members of Draper Extension Homemakers Club met recently in the home of Tonie Vaughn.

Using quotes from the Bible, Ms. Kaul installed Johnnie Messer as president; Wanice Jones, vice-president; Sherrie Blackwell, secretary; Ruth Romero, treasurer; Anna Messer, reporter; and Carmen Rickman council delegate.

After a barbeque luncheon prepared by the hostess, a brief business meeting was held. New yearbooks were filled out and Ms. Jones was selected the club's nominee for Woman of the Year.

The next meeting was scheduled in February at the home of Martha Paetzold.

Officer spread warning about fugitive

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A deputy sheriff testified that after investigating a reported kidnapping, he broadcast a warning that an Oklahoma fugitive was mentally unstable, armed and should be approached only with caution.

Hours later, other officers fatally shot a ranch foreman they mistook for the fugitive, Hutchinson County Deputy Ricky Morris said Wednesday.

James Grandstaff was killed during the early morning hours of Aug. 11, 1981, after officers chased the Oklahoma man onto the 6666 Ranch and Grandstaff got out of bed to see what the ruckus was.

Michael Lon "Mickey" Blackmon took the stand late Wednesday in the $5 million wrongful death civil suit brought by Grandstaff's wife.

Blackmon was scheduled as the leadoff witness for this morning's resumption of the trial in the court of U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson.

Morris, one of four officers named as a defendant, said he and another deputy went to Fritch, 10 miles west of Borger, after a woman called from Fairbanks, Alaska, on Aug. 10 to report that her future daughter-in-law had been abducted but had escaped from her captor at Fritch.

Morris said after talking to a woman, identified as Jodi Jackson, at the city jail in Fritch, he concluded she had gone with the man voluntarily and that there were no charges he could file.

However, Morris said he also learned of an outstanding warrant from Sayre, Okla., on a charge of grand larceny against the man, Lonnie Cox. Morris said he broadcast a report that Cox was mentally unstable, armed with a rifle and two pistols, was in the area, and should be approached with caution.

Later in the evening, officers became involved in a running gun battle with Cox, who they said fled in a pickup truck onto the ranch that Grandstaff managed.

Morris said he didn't arrive on the 6666 Ranch until after Grandstaff had been shot.

Sgt. Charles Love, a Pampa policeman, testified that he saw Borger policeman Mickey Davis place his foot on Grandstaff's face and shove his head back down to the ground.

At the time, the officers thought the wounded man was Cox, Love testified.

Love said he arrived at the ranch after the shooting had taken place. He drove up to see Grandstaff lying on the ground moaning, his hands handcuffed behind him, he said.

"Davis told him to shut up and then walked over and placed his foot on the side of Grandstaff's face and shoved him back to the ground," Love said.

Davis is not a defendant and has not appeared personally at the trial, although his testimony was read into evidence from a deposition he gave earlier.

Morris said he and two other officers drove to Grandstaff's house afterward to check out the house and its occupants. When the woman asked where her husband was, Morris said he realized it was Grandstaff, not Cox, that the officers had shot.

26.7%* for your IRA?

Values at September 30, 1983 of $2000 invested each year since 1973.

Oppenheimer Special Fund

As you can easily see, a little difference in the amount your IRA earns each year can make a large difference in the amount you retire with. Happily, the same law that allows you to start an IRA also allows you to switch it anytime you wish, with no extra tax penalty. This law gives you the opportunity to seek better returns for your investment, no matter where it is now.

You could, for example, switch to the Oppenheimer Special Fund. Just compare the average annual return on your IRA with the 26.7 percent average annual return on the Oppenheimer Special Fund as shown above. If you had been able to put $2000 a year into a Special Fund IRA, since its inception, it would have been worth $111,097 as of September 30, 1983. **

* Assuming a $2,000 investment on March 15, 1973 (inception of fund) and $2,000 annual investments on first business day of each year thereafter, with all dividends and distributions reinvested. Past performance is not an indication of future results as net asset values fluctuate due to market conditions. The period shown was one in which common stock prices fluctuated severely and were generally higher at the end than they were at the beginning.

Tip for moonlighters

Some can have Keogh, IRA

By Robert Metz
(Seventh of 14 articles)

Moonlighting taxpayers take note. If you do not have a Keogh plan, you may be missing an opportunity to save taxes.

Many moonlighters do not have Keogh plans because they are misinformed. They accept a widely held misconception that a taxpayer can have an Individual Retirement Account or a Keogh plan, but not both.

The confusion over Keogh-IRA compatibility exists in part because Keogh plans do the same kinds of things IRAs do. In fact, the Keogh plan was the inspiration for the IRA. Keoghs are named after ex-Rep. Eugene Keogh, D-N.Y., who worked for a decade to get Congress to accept the concept. Referring to the number on the legislation, Keoghs are sometimes called H.R. 10 plans.

You should consider setting up a Keogh plan if you are a self-employed plumber, storekeeper, carpenter, doctor, writer, manufacturer's representative or what have you.

Under a Keogh, you're eligible to shelter up to 15 percent of your self-employment income up to a limit of $15,000 a year. This is true even if your full-time employer covers you under his or her pension plan.

TAX TIP: Remember that the income must come from work you perform. It cannot come from investments, or other "unearned" income.

TAX TRAP: Sometimes moonlighting does not bring in a big income, so there are special exceptions in the Keogh rules for those with low incomes. If your total adjusted gross income from all sources is $15,000 or less, and if less than one-third of it came from self-employment, you may deduct up to $750 in contributions to a Keogh, even if that exceeds the 15 percent rule.

TAX TIP: Since you can have a Keogh, an IRA and a company plan, you may be saving for retirement in three places at the same time.

TAX TRAP: Many who are self-employed work alone. But some self-employed people do have employees. For example, a dentist might employ a receptionist, hygienists and a secretary.

Such a self-employed person cannot open a Keogh account without making contributions to the retirement accounts of employees. All full-time employees with at least three years of service with you, the employer, must be covered. The dollar contribution which the employer makes for employees may be less than he or she takes personally, but the percentage of total income must be the same. For more details, consult an expert or "Cut Your Own Taxes and Save."

IRA and Keogh accounts resemble each other in a very fundamental way. Basically, both allow you to set aside income and earn interest on that income until you retire.

Here are other similarities between the two types of plans:

— Funds for either type of account can be invested at a savings and loan, bank, credit union, insurance company or in mutual funds.

TAX TRAP: Investments in "collectibles" such as rare coins, antiques, Oriental rugs, art works, gems and stamps are not allowed.

— For both accounts you can make contributions up to April 15 or even later, if you get an extension for filing your return.

TAX TRAP: It's important to tell your bank, credit union or other sponsor for which year you're making the contribution.

TAX TRAP: There is a difference in the two plans concerning deadlines for setting up the account initially. The distinction makes little sense, but it's in the law. You can contribute to a Keogh as late as the due date of your tax return including extension, but the account itself must have been opened by the previous Dec. 31. Under IRA rules, you are allowed to set up the account initially and contribute to it up to the due date for filing your return including extensions.

TAX TIP: If you are unhappy with the performance of an IRA or Keogh account, you can retain the tax shelter while transferring the fund into another financial institution. But you can only do this once a year unless your funds are invested through a stockbroker. Brokers may move the funds, at your direction, as often as you like.

— With each account you may make withdrawals without penalty after age 59

½. When you turn 70 ½, you must make yearly withdrawals.

TAX TIP/TRAP: In Keogh plans, added sums in excess of the tax-sheltered contributions are permitted out of taxed income — but only up to a point. Penalties are levied if extra contributions exceed the amount justified in your case, so be careful. Employees covered by Keogh plans have long been able to set aside extra income. Self-employed voluntary contributions are subject to additional restrictions. Under the Keogh rules, the contribution itself is not sheltered from income tax, but the earnings on the added contributions are tax-free.

CANCER American Cancer Society

ANSWER LINE M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute

QUESTION: What does difficulty in swallowing and hoarseness indicate?

ANSWERline: These conditions are among the warning signals of cancer. However, they are not necessarily caused by cancer. Only a doctor can make the proper diagnosis by examining one's throat.

QUESTION: What is the best test for cancer?

ANSWERline: There is no "best" test. However, microscopic examination of tissue from the suspicious area is the definitive test for cancer. It is called a biopsy. The diagnosis is made by a pathologist who has been trained to recognize abnormal cells. There are certain other tests that can help to uncover malignancy, such as the blood stool test.

QUESTION: What are the differences between "benign" and "malignant" tumors?

ANSWERline: Although a "benign" tumor may grow in size, it will not spread to other parts of the body. On the other hand, a "malignant" tumor will grow in size and sooner or later spread to other parts of the body through the lymph and/or circulatory systems. A "malignant" tumor generally is called a cancer.

QUESTION: What is meant by early diagnosis of cancer? Does this refer to the age of a person?

ANSWERline: No. It refers to the age of the cancer. An early cancer is one that has just begun to grow and has not yet spread. As time passes, the cancer becomes bigger and spreads to other parts of the body, and it becomes more difficult to control or cure. This is why early detection is of the utmost importance.

QUESTION: Is a teenager of about 15 too young for a cancer checkup?

ANSWERline: Regular health checkups should be a part of everyone's routine. Of course, cancer is not as prevalent among the young as the older people.

There are safeguards one can observe at any age. These include not smoking, avoiding excessive sunlight, avoiding heavy consumption of fatty foods, and practicing breast self-examination.

Narrow escape not first in career

By TOM JORY Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — But for a botched attempt on the life of Lenin, Sidney Reilly might have overthrown the Bolshevik leader and taken control of the Russian government himself.

"I thought I'd done it. I really thought I had it in my hands," Reilly tells a companion as they flee Petrograd with the secret police at their heels. "You did, old boy," the friend agrees.

The narrow escape was not the first in Reilly's extraordinary quarter-century career working for, though not always with, the British Secret Service. It may have been his most daring exploit.

He would dedicate the rest of his life to toppling Lenin and, later, Stalin, and "Reilly: Ace of Spies" — starting tonight on public TV's "Mystery!" — leaves little doubt that the agent was executed in the hills near Moscow while on a surreptitious visit to the Russian capital in 1925.

Yet Reilly, by one account, was seen there, alive, in 1927, and again, in Leningrad in 1931.

"Certainly, throughout the 1930s," says Robin Bruce Lockhart, author of the book on which the classy, 12-part TV series was based, "there were a number of sightings of Sidney Reilly in various parts of the world, and as one of our Secret Service men once put it to me, 'The question of Sidney Reilly is still very much of a hot potato.'"

The $5.7 million Thames Television production does justice to a fascinating story in nearly every respect: most striking is the meticulous attention to costume and period detail, and the director, Jim Goddard ("Nicholas Nickleby" and "Kennedy" on NBC), manages to sustain a tension created near the end of the first episode with Reilly's daring escape from frontier police in the Russian Caucasus.

The cast is superb, with New Zealander Sam Neill ("My Brilliant Career") as Reilly; Leo McKern from "Rumpole of the Bailey" ("Mystery!") as the notorious arms merchant Basil Zaharov; Norman Rodway as Cummings, head of the British Secret Service, and Tom Bell as Felix Dzerzhinsky, chief of the Cheka, the Russian secret police.

ACCEPT YOURSELF AS YOU ARE

But be sure in deciding these matters that you are living as God intended, marrying or not marrying in accordance with God's direction and help, and accepting whatever situation God has put you into. This is my rule for all the churches.

For instance, a man who already has gone through the Jewish ceremony of circumcision before he became a Christian shouldn't worry about it; and if he hasn't been circumcised, he shouldn't do it now.

For it doesn't make any difference at all whether a Christian has gone through this ceremony or not. But it makes a lot of difference whether he is pleasing God and keeping God's commandments. That is the important thing.

Usually a person should keep on with the work he was doing when God called him.

Are you a slave? Don't let that worry you—but of course, if you get a chance to be free, take it.

If the Lord calls you, and you are a slave, remember that Christ has set you free from the awful power of sin; and if He has called you and you are free, remember that you are now a slave of Christ.

You have been bought and paid for by Christ, so you belong to Him—be free now from all these earthly prides and fears.

So dear brothers, whatever situation a person is in when he becomes a Christian, let him stay there, for now the Lord is there to help him.

1 Corinthians 7:17-24

Of Nicaraguan supporters

Anthony Quinton earning respect

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Except for an occasional cartoon in the pro-government media, U.S. Ambassador Anthony Quinton has earned the respect of Nicaraguan supporters as well as critics of the revolutionary government.

But he will be leaving his post this spring, sources here and in Washington say, after serving for two years as the pivotal link between the Reagan administration, which sends covert aid to Nicaraguan insurgents, and the leftist Sandinistas.

Miguel Blandon, director of the government-run Radio Sandino, said Quinton is seen here as a "reasonable" man who avoided confrontation and "at times expressed he was in favor of a dialogue between Nicaragua and the United States."

"He has shown great interest in getting to know the Nicaraguan reality," said

Maria Azucena Ferrey, vice president of the opposition Social Christian Party. "His opinions are adjusted to reality. He recognized some things that the revolution has done that were good. We recognized them too."

The boyish looking Quinton arrived in Managua in March 1982 just as the Sandinistas declared a state of emergency because of what they said was the threat of a U.S. invasion. That state of emergency is still in effect.

It was during Quinton's tour here that CIA support for Nicaraguan insurgents fighting the Sandinistas became known.

At high government levels, the ambassador kept a good relationship going although he continued to walk out of state functions or refuse to stand whenever the Sandinista anthem was played because it has a reference to the "Yankee, enemy of humanity."

The 50-year-old Quinton, a graduate of Princeton and Oxford universities, often can be seen wearing a tropical "guayabera" shirt. He appears to go about his business effortlessly, whether it is diplomacy, tennis or participation in a local theater group.

There have been recent reports out of Washington, later denied, that Quinton had angered State Department officials by making statements that could have been interpreted as praise for the leftist-led revolution.

The U.S. Embassy here had rebutted a report presented by President Reagan in Washington that charged Nicaraguan Jews were suffering from anti-Semitism among the Sandinistas.

Blandon, who has had Quinton as a guest on radio debates, said, "To say that he favors the revolution is sheer madness. The ambassador has maintained his position. There has been a confrontation of ideas, but the ambassador has defended his position."

William Baez, leader of the Nicaraguan Development Institute, a private business organization that is not aligned with the government, called Quinton "a right man for the right circumstances during the right time."

Opposition labor union leader Jose Espinoza praised Quinton's diplomatic tact by joking that he got along "with Moors and Christians."

Quinton was vilified in cartoons by the pro-government press which used his Roman Catholicism to portray him as the man who encouraged the local Roman Catholic Church to be more vocal in its criticism of the government.

It is normal for an ambassador to be reassigned after two years in a job with visibility and tension as high as it is Nicaragua, but sources close to the U.S. Embassy here said Quinton could have stayed in Nicaragua longer if the Reagan administration wanted.

Some Nicaraguan officials said they believe Quinton will be reassigned to bring in an ambassador closer to Reagan's views.

A Western source, with access to top levels at the embassy and among the Sandinistas, said the United States and Nicaragua have reached a stage where negotiations could start "about specific bilateral issues" instead of general discussions about their ideological positions.

He predicted that the next six months will be a critical period for determining the future of U.S.-Nicaraguan relations.

Quinton, in the foreign service since 1959, has kept silent on reports that he will be reassigned. The Seattle native's first post as an ambassador was to the Central African Republic, and he was named director of the Office for Combating Terrorism.

For military might

Reagan to sacrifice social good

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty years ago President Lyndon Johnson declared a "war on poverty" and proposed a budget that would offset defense spending cuts with higher expenditures for health, education and manpower training. Today, President Reagan is often represented by political foes as something of the opposite, as a man, that is, who is willing to sacrifice social good for military might, and who has forsaken the poor.

Twenty years ago, Johnson was looked upon as a man who would fine-tune the economy and put it in the service of society, with the costs somehow to be paid by a healthier, more vigorous, more just economy that surely would result.

Today, Reagan is often portrayed as preferring an economy untroubled by social considerations, one free to expand without government interference so as to achieve its fullest potential, with rewards filtering through society.

Such broad-brush representations are unlikely to capture the fine lines and nuances of either man's programs, but for the practical purposes of politics the contrast is becoming an element in presidential election-year maneuvering.

In recent weeks, for example, most Democratic candidates have espoused some form of industrial policy that would direct economic activity to preset social and economic goals—directly opposite to Reagan's hands-off attitude.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale seeks "cooperation to restructure and revitalize ailing industries." Sen. John Glenn of Ohio seeks to "put this country's best minds to work in developing a sound industrial policy for America."

Meanwhile, The Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank, and the Institute For Socioeconomic Studies, have attacked industrial policy, which some scholars view as more government intervention.

The latter's Journal, a quarterly, carries in its latest issue a criticism of accusations that Reagan has dismantled the country's social welfare program, written by Kevin Hopkins, White House director of policy information.

"Hyperbole—indeed outright nonsense," says Hopkins. So much so, he adds, that it "makes it difficult to carry on any kind of rational debate on the distribution of welfare assistance."

Hopkins claims that food stamps went to more people in 1982 than in 1981, that more households received free or reduced price school lunches in 1982 than in 1981, and that the number of needy who received aid actually rose.

Hopkins argues that the Reagan administration's critics have a "dole mentality" in that their criterion of welfare policy is based on the number of recipients rather than on the real needs of society.

Regardless of who is right or wrong, or who the political winners and losers are, the developing economic issues seem to be as sharply defined as at any time in at least a couple of decades.

After three years

Gergen resigns as Reagan's assistant for communications

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Gergen-led coup topples president," the banner headline screamed. It topped a fanciful edition of a Washington newspaper, taking aim at the handiwork of David R. Gergen, who resigned from the White House last week after three years as President Reagan's assistant for communications.

The job, and Gergen's own proclivities, often put him directly between the president and the reporters covering the White House. For him, that was where the White House action was, as he tried to promote the ideas behind the president's programs.

The fake newspapers were distributed at a party for the departing White House aide, a veteran of the Reagan, Ford and Nixon administrations.

Gergen was the guy who was always ready with an explanation of the president's plans. To repeat a phrase he often used to describe his efforts, he wanted to put "the White House spin" on news stories to make sure they portrayed Reagan in the most favorable light.

For one of the first times in his current White House career, Gergen met a deadline ahead of time: his resignation letter to the president was dated Jan. 12, one day before his departure. The text was one of the longest such documents submitted.

In a typed, single-spaced, legal-size page, he produced a partisan history of the Reagan presidency that would serve nicely as a summary of a campaign speech. And it may be the first resignation letter that points out, in a section on Reagan's mastery of the news media, that the president understood "the power of radio."

In Gergen's view, Reagan arrived at the White House "when both the country and the presidency were in decline." Now, he said, as a result of Reagan's tenure in the job, "we have hope the decade of the '80s can begin in a new era of resurgence for the country and the presidency."

Gergen, who is spending the rest of the winter and spring at Harvard University, devoted long hours to Reagan, working deep into the evening and often on weekends—talking to reporters, talking to other White House staff members, talking with the president, thinking about that "spin" and how a Reagan story would play in print or on the news broadcasts.

It was Gergen who, with White House spokesman Larry Speakes and a few other staff members, would play the role of questioning reporter when Reagan went through news conference dress rehearsals. He would pepper Reagan with policy questions, and then, with others on the staff, review the answers, working on them with Reagan until they had just the ideas they thought the president should express.

In Gergen's view, the news conferences "force the government to think through the meaning" of its policies, knowing that weaknesses or differences of opinion within the administration may be brought into the glare of a national spotlight.

Attorney says

Court order helps

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin attorney testing the state Workers Compensation Act says a temporary injunction provides immediate relief for farm and ranch workers.

Austin lawyer Jim Harrington, is chief attorney for 10 injured workers and the United Farm Workers of America, AFL-CIO, who sued the state and the Industrial Accident Board claiming the state law which excludes benefits for farm and ranch workers is unconstitutional.

"This order signed today means the IAB can award injury claims to farm and ranch workers until the trial on merits is held Feb. 21," Harrington told a Capitol news conference on Wednesday.

"Even of more importance, it grants immediate medical aid to farm and ranch workers. All they have to do is check the IAB to see if their employer has insurance on any employees and if he does, they will get medical treatment immediately. That's the best part of it," Harrington said.

Bill Treacy, executive director of the IAB, said medical benefits would be approved only after the IAB had determined there was a relationship between the employer who had insurance and the employee making the claim.

Treacy stressed that the IAB would cooperate fully with the court order.

"We both have the injured worker's interests at heart," Treacy said about Harrington's statements.

Pressure instruments

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife takes several pills for high blood pressure and sees the doctor every few months. We bought a blood-pressure instrument at one of our local pharmacies.

However, her doctor says the instrument is not accurate. I understand that it may not be as sophisticated as the one in the hospital. How good or accurate are the instruments available at pharmacies?

DEAR READER — It depends entirely on the kind of instrument you have purchased. If it's similar to those in doctors' offices and you learn to use it with a stethoscope, it can be reasonably accurate. Of course, that depends entirely on how well you have learned to use the instrument. Some of the electric devices simply aren't as accurate. They are poor in recording a diastolic reading (lower blood pressure).

One way to find out the accuracy of your instrument is to take it to your doctor's office and take your wife's pressure with it at the same time he takes the pressure with his instrument. We even do that with some of the blood-pressure instruments that have a gauge on them rather than a mercury column.

Despite the drawbacks of some of the home devices, I think they do more good than harm. At least they help people screen their blood pressure and become aware of the range of the pressure. They are sometimes helpful in guiding patients during treatment, again depending upon the type of device used and the skill of the person using it.

You will be interested in the normal range and effects of blood pressure, so I am sending you The Health Letter 15-8, Your Vital Blood Pressure. Others who would like this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of his newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

YOU AUTO KNOW

Don Henslee

Q: Could you give a few tips on how to avoid hydroplaning?
A: Hydroplaning occurs when water on the roadway penetrates between the tires and pavement so that, at a critical speed, the tire is completely supported by water. It's then actually floating. In this situation, control is critical and, quite the reverse of what you've heard, increased tire pressure assists in control. First, however, the balder the tire, the more the car will hydroplane, so drive on good tires with deep tread which permits water to escape. Increased pressure will assist in driver control, but over inflation can reverse the effect. Keep inflation within manufacturer recommended limits. Your steering wheel will tell you when you're beginning to hydroplane by becoming "mushy." At this point, remove your foot from the accelerator, but don't apply the brakes. As the car slows, the hydroplaning should stop.

PUBLIC NOTICE

In proceedings pending before the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), local exchange telephone companies are requesting authority to charge AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc., for use of their facilities. These proposed charges are higher than AT&T Communications can pay at current Texas long distance rate levels. To position itself to be able to implement rates that are sufficient to produce revenues that will recover the costs facing the company, AT&T Communications must now file for rate relief to be able to implement rates that reflect the costs of access that are ultimately imposed on the company.

While AT&T Communications does not want to increase its Texas rates, an increase would be required to recover the increased access charges AT&T Communications will have to pay to the local exchange telephone companies under several proposals pending before the Commission. These access charges at the proposed increased levels represent more than 80 percent of AT&T Communications' operating expense in Texas.

Accordingly, AT&T Communications, in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the PUC, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of rates for long distance calls within Texas. The proposed rates will be effective January 28, 1984, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by AT&T Communications' proposed rates.

If higher access charges are ordered, AT&T Communications has no recourse but to pay these charges and recover the costs from its customers as a cost of providing long distance service within Texas. AT&T Communications has filed rates which would mean a maximum overall increase in adjusted test period revenues of $301.4 million, or 27.85 percent. This amount would help recover cost increases due to the proposed level of access charges now pending before the PUC.

A complete copy of all tariffs and rate schedules is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with every municipality in Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.
