Area packer, employees want to work on comp costs By JOHN BROOKS Managing Editor

Inflated workers' compensation costs and false or inflated claims could force Excel Corporation to curtail operations or shut its beef processing plants in Friona and Plainview.

Excel, like all Texas companies, is faced with super-high costs for workers' compensation coverage. Excel said it paid $20 million in workers' compensation insurance premiums for the 3,000 employees in its Texas plants in the fiscal year ending May 1, 1989. Excel's four other plants, outside Texas, have 14,000 more employees who are covered for a total of about $4.5 million in premiums.

Busy season for graduates

Busy season is here for Hereford High School seniors as they count down the days towards graduation.

That, by the way, is 14 days away, at 2:30 p.m. on June 3 at Whiteface Stadium.

The big rush for the end began Saturday night with the annual senior banquet and prom. The banquet was at the Bull Barn, and the prom was at the Hereford Community Center.

The annual senior assembly, where scholarships will be awarded and the top graduating seniors will be named, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at whiteface Gymnasium at Hereford Junior High.

The H-Awards assembly will be held at 9 a.m. on May 23 at the HHS gymnasium.

Baccalaureate will be held at 8 p.m. on May 20 at Whiteface Deaf Smith County's Adult Probation Department has a new name, and a new chief. Larry Sheffield started as chief of the Community Supervisions and Corrections Department on May 7, replacing Bob Hughes.

Sheffield pointed out the name change because it was mandated by Texas law. Seeing to such 'minor' details is only one aspect of Sheffield's work as an administrator.

Most of Sheffield's job, however, deals with grittier issues. His office supervises adults who are on probation in Deaf Smith and Oldham counties. At the end of April, the office was supervising 638 people: 295 for felony convictions and 343 for misdemeanor convictions.

It's a heavy workload and Sheffield doesn't do it alone. Two adult probation officers, a bookkeeper and a secretary also help carry the load. The department is also looking for another adult probation officer and a community service representative. Sheffield's job is to oversee the office and to keep abreast of current developments in probation while making sure the office complies with state regulations. He has served 17 years in public service. Sheffield started out in the United State Air Force as a military policeman, then became a police officer in Tyler. Later, Sheffield worked in city management administering state and federal grants. He was with the Dallas County Probation Department as a probation officer before coming to Hereford. Sheffield's wife, Mary, is a fourth grade teacher and is finishing the school year in Dallas with their 13-year-old son, Samuel. Sheffield looks forward to having them join him in Hereford in June.

A bachelor's degree in Sociology and Law Enforcement and a master's degree in Public Administration from East Texas State University in Collins add to Sheffield's qualifications.

So, when Sheffield says, "I know every aspect of the criminal justice system," he's not kidding.

Just what exactly is probation? With his background, Sheffield seemed the perfect person to ask.

Sometimes, when a criminal is convicted, the law allows the judge to probate the sentence instead of simply sending the criminal to jail. The fact that the criminal is free to walk the streets does not mean he gets off scott-free. The terms of probation, which are set out in the criminal code of procedure and are ordered by the judge in the case, place restrictions well so we'll all work together on the offender. Terms of probation sometimes also assess additional penalties. If an offender violates the probationary terms, the probation department tells the court and the court holds a hearing to decide whether to revoke his probation and send him to jail.

What kinds of things are "terms of probation"? Restitution, or repaying the victim of the crime, is a common term. Paying the costs of administering the probation, honoring curfew restrictions, submitting to substance abuse testing, undergoing treatment in out-patient substance abuse programs, sending the criminal to the county jail and undergoing counseling are also common.

Sheffield said there are other considerations.

"Is he (the offender) gainfully employed? What skill level is he at? If he's illiterate, we'll try to find him a school that will teach him the basics of reading and writing. If he has a very low skill level, we'll try to get him into a GED program. If he needs counseling, we'll try to find him an avenue where he can receive counseling."

It's all geared towards helping rehabilitate the offender so he can become a useful member of the community while relieving taxpayers from having to pay to house people in institutions, according to Sheffield. 'The cost of housing (in prisons) runs anywhere from $30-$55 a day," Sheffield said. "So this is very important when the taxpayer is having to donate funds to incarcerate people. There are other programs that can be implemented to alleviate pressure on our correctional facilities.

"And many times if you think about it, if an offender has...well, if he's harmed a victim or stolen from someone, he owes those people," Sheffield said. "If he stole $10,000, then he should repay that. So another important aspect of the community supervisions and corrections department is to try to keep this person out of jail and working, where he can repay the injured party. This is under restitution.

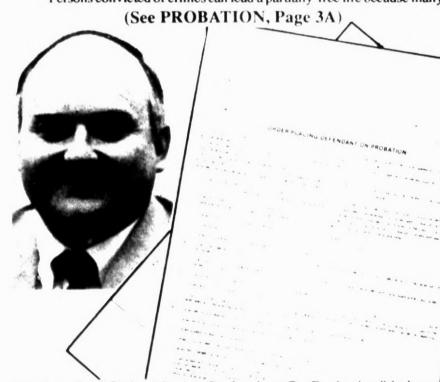

Restitution can involve much more than simply repaying a victim for damages to property or a theft. The newest rage in restitution is called Community Service Restitution. In a famous example, Zsa Zsa Gabor is in trouble with a California court for inadequately fulfilling the terms of her community service probation.

Deaf Smith County has jumped on the bandwagon. Sheffield is applying for a grant to develop a Community Service Restitution program here. How does community service restitution work? That depends.

"Someone has offended the community; if it's monetary, he will pay monetary restitution," Sheffield explained. "If it's some other aspect of violation, he should do something in the community that will aid the community. It could be a volunteer agency; it could be working on a community park; it might be cutting shrubs...anything that will aid and support the community that has been offended.

Exactly what type of community service restitution the offender will contribute will be determined by Sheffield's office, which will also supervise persons who serve 'hard time' in a state correctional system, many times that or federal prison usually never again become a useful member of society.

"Our objective and goal is to try to keep the offender from falling into the mindset of: 'I'm a criminal, always will be. I'm no good and there's no individual does go into the Texas mindset is adopted.

"This is a last-step deterrent for people, to try to keep them a gainful part of society. I think the judicial system has adopted probation from the standpoint of they're trying to help," explained Sheffield. "Once an help this person and it's really his last chance before he's incarcerated.

"Once they get in that (penal) system, their chances for being a repeat offender are very high. So, if we keep them out of the correctional system, I think we've done our job to rehabilitate them where they can be productive members of society."

Sometimes the crime is so terrible that Sheffield agrees that the criminal should be put in prison without parole, but that is unusual.

There is a level of offender that's not heinous; it's not a to a level where they're unredeemable. There's still a place where they can be brought back," he said. Another objection to "throwing away the key" is the burden it puts on the taxpayer.

"Look at the costs. The burden, the tax burden, falls on the people; Sheffield said. "It's coming out of their pockets and they're having to pay for it, not the offender."

But Sheffield is not all work and no play. He's looking forward to living in Hereford and getting away from three and four-hour traffic jams in Dallas. And he's enjoyed the reception he's gotten in Hereford.

"I would be the first to say that West Texas does live up to its hospitality and its reputation for friendliness," he said, smiling. "I've really been invited and I've really enjoyed the friendliness. Very friendly town; I look forward to living here with my family and taking advantage of the resources of the community."

"The Bank That Banks With You!"

In addition to the huge economic impact of such a facility in the community, the psychological benefits could really provide the hustlin' spirit that has been dampened a little the past few years. It's a prime time for Season's Prime--the marketing name selected by Larry Malamen for the proposed company.

As detailed in Friday's Brand, plans call for a $7 million facility, with a 56,000-square-foot plant to be located on one of three sites near Hereford. Malamen hopes to complete financing arrangements and break ground next month, with operations to start in December. Projections call for producing 90 million pounds of frozen products a year at the plant, which would have a payroll of about $3 million a year.

The industrial development committee of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce has envisioned Hereford as a food processing center. "Food production is obviously a very solid fit for Hereford," it was noted Thursday by Jon Krebs, director of economic development for Southwestern Public Service.

"Larry Malamen's entrepreneurial spirit is a must in making this happen. Others can help but it depends on the individual to make it happen," Krebs added.

When this project becomes a reality, Hereford and Deaf Smith County may be taking the first step toward making the area the food production capital of Texas!

Reforms for LSC?

BY CONGRESSMAN LARRY COMBEST

Fictional attorney Perry Mason should have it so easy: a law firm with deep pockets; no worries about expenses when a client loses; and the psychological advantage of a powerful financial backer.

But Perry Mason does not work for the Federal government's Legal Services Corporation. As a pseudo-governmental entity that enjoys federal funding of more than $300 million a year, LSC is free from essential monitoring and controls on how that money should be spent. Many times it appears that legal services lawyers have overstepped the bounds of reason in pursuing a case.

Folks around Hereford will remember a petition they sent to me in 1984 withing weeks of my election to the House that was signed by 3,000 citizens protesting the actions of the local LSC office. In December of 1985, local officials there estimated at that time about $400 million and 400 jobs were lost due to the harassment of producers targeted by logal services lawyers.

Since then I have received numerous complaints of similar runaway actions by the LSC offices on the South Plains and Panhandle. Tactics used against growers intimidate them into the limited option of expensive settlements or going broke proving their innocence. Instead, LSC success should be measured by true assistance given to the poor.

Last week, I offered testimony before a subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee about the need for reform in the Legal Services Corporation. Under legislation I have introduced, HR-2884 would prohibit LSC lawyers from soliciting clients, engaging in political activity while on the job, or lobbying for legislation or changes in the structure of government. Instead, my reorganization of the LSC would direct its offices to help the poor with legal assistance in employment, job discrimination, wage claims, custody, divorce, spouse abuse, Social Security benefits, landlord-tenant disputes, and family matters such as licenses and wills.

The poor and lower income people of this country have a need for legal help. The poor and the taxpayer who provides that legal help have the right to expect LSC to be a well-run operation from the boardroom to the courthouse. What I advocate are long overdue reforms that will help ensure that legal services are delivered to the needy and unfair tactics are not used against defendants.

No one is served when the rights of honest, law-abiding people are trampled in the stampede to help the poor. A new LSC would target its resources toward the needy, respect the rights of defendants and exhibit greater responsibility to the taxypayers of this country.

Bob St. John, a popular columnist of the Dallas Morning News wrote about one of our favorite cookies, Oreo's, in a recent issue of that newspaper. The story was so unique and funny, we've just got to pass it along:

"Eric Davis, a trainer for the TCU athletic department, is a husky young man who has an easy-going disposition. But you just never know when a person can be pushed too far.

"Eric was in New York, waiting for his flight back to D/FW. He bought a newspaper and gave in to his eternal craving for those Oreo cookies--his life, his passion. He bought a package. The place was crowded but he found an empty table and sat down to enjoy the good life.

"He started reading a section of the newspaper, placing the rest in his lap. Soon this little guy came up and sat down at his table. Eric, much larger than the guy, nodded at him and continued reading his paper. Eric that?" glanced up again just in time to see the little guy reach into the package the woman."

An AP news analysis

Bentsen not running, or is he?

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen's potential campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination is at that awkward age - too promising to preclude, but with too many uncertainties to begin this soon.

1992. And in the breath after that, a lot of people come to see him to suggest that he run for the Democratic presidential nomination two years

"If anybody had told me I'd get in a race for vice president and get my tail beat and come out of it better than I went in, I'd never have believed that," Bentsen said over a salad in his hideaway office at the Capitol.

An office in that warren near the Senate floor is one of the perquisites of seniority and legislative power. That is station of the senator from Texas, 69, a senator since 1971, chairman of the Finance Committee. vice presidential nominee who came away from the 1988 campaign regarded as the stronger figure on the defeated Democratic ticket.

There is a parallel, 20 years back. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, No. 2 on the Democratic ticket with Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, starred as the understudy on the 1968 ticket and seemed the man most likely to succeed to the 1972 nomination. He tried, but his campaign collapsed before the season was half over.

Too bad, said Bentsen. "A good man." But he sees no bearing on his circumstances.

And those circumstances are good ones for a man who might run, because he doesn't have to. "I enjoy the responsibilities I have," said Bentsen, who heads the Senate's tax-writing committee. "And I can make a difference where I am."

Age would have to be a factor; Bentsen will be 71 when the next round of presidential primaries begins in the winter of 1992. That's older than Ronald Reagan when he started, but not when he finished. Reagan's presidency defused age as an issue.

And with the eclipse of Gov. Michael Dukakis, now limping toward the end of his term in Massachusetts, Bentsen is the survivor of 1988, in demand as a campaigner and fund-raiser for Democrats.

Coming up: North Carolina, then Kentucky, then "I've forgotten what other states. They just point me and I go." But Bentsen said when he was pointed toward New Hampshire, he declined the invitation, because it would have prompted speculation that he was getting a head start in the first 1992 primary state.

"If I was seriously interested in the race, I would be out there trying to pre-empt the deal right now, and raising all the funds right now, getting all the commitments right now," Bentsen said.

He said he's doing none of that. "I have no plans to, either."

At this point, neither is any other Democratic prospect, at least not visibly. Bentsen said a candidate without a national reputation would have to be active by now to stand a chance, and a name candidate would have to get started no later than next

Can a Democrat defeat Bush? "As of today, no," said Bentsen. But 1992 is a long way away politically. One day can be a lifetime.'

Bentsen said his role in trying to change those odds will be in urging No, he's not running, Bentsen says a consensus on moderate lines, to in one breath. In the next, no, he's broaden the appeal of a future never been one to shrink from the Democratic ticket. "So far we kind of odds that would favor haven't had a candidate that could President Bush for re-election in appeal to mainstream America," he

But again, he said he doesn't plan to try to be that candidate.

Still, he's tried national candidacy twice before.

column. Some of you take pains to point out any littl mstake i make. I'm sorry you're offended. I'll try to be perfect like you.

But my mom likes them all. So I'm going to write another column because today is Mother's Day.

It may be the most important holiday ever created by man. Sure, other persons for whom we

Day and Martin Luther King Day, were important in all of our lives gotten there without mama.

I know I would be nothing without

I may have told you this story before, but I'm going to tell it again. You see, I had to learn to be pretty independent at an early age. My father died when I was seven and my mother had to go to work to support me and my sister. There might have been food stamps or AFDC or some of this other stuff back in the mid-1960s but we never saw a drop of welfare. Between the pretty small pension we got and what we needed, my mother had to work to make ends

We had been driving a 1953 Mercury for forever (literally all of my seven years) and mother decided right away we needed another car. We went to Phoenix and got a new the transmission went to pot. My mother took me and my sister out of the car and we walked what seemed like 100 miles to the next me how to learn the rest. She taught house to call someone.

She called the car dealer. I learned from my mother that day the lesson of tact when needed, firmness when necessary, and a harsh word when absolutely called for to get action taken. We got the car towed, fixed free. Didn't even have to pay two hours' overtime each for four mechanics to get it done. That shows you how effective mothers can be.

There's no one in the world happier for you when you do something well than your mama. Speaking from a lifetime's experience of covering sports, I can say that not even a football player's daddy is as we can win." Bentsen sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, but it didn't go well. He dropped out after gaining little support in the first round

Then as in the 1988 vice presidential

He jokes that it was like the veterinarian who went into partnership with a taxidermist under the slogan "Either way you get your dog back."

His Senate term runs through 1994.

Some of you may not like my proud of a perfectly executed block, tackle, run, pass or catch as that player's mama. Why do you think all those football players say "Hi, mom!"? It's not because they hate their dad, it's just that mom has earned it.

Of course, it's not just sports accomplishments. I wasn't an athlete. I participated in athletics as a manager/trainer, and in speech and have special days, like President's choir and journalism. Every time I went to some speech tournament or sang a solo or whatever, mama was (whether we want to admit it or not). always there with a hug as big as a But none of these guys would have universe. She was proud of her baby and let her baby know it.

I've never been half as good to my mother as what she deserves. Even if I were a good son I couldn't be as good to her as the good she has earned.

Besides, mama never was too strict. She knew I was going to go out and do things. All she really asked of me was not to break the law (And if I did, she implied several times, don't do anything too heinous and don't be stupid enough to get caught. I never did anything too bad, I guess. I've never have been to jail.). Overall, mama taught me goodness. I'm not the only hell my mama ever raised, but darned near.

Mama gave me the gift of common sense. I ain't got no degree, so common sense and schooling are what I rely on 'cuz I ain't got no education. Mama ain't got no education either. She was, however, a top honor graduate of the Class of 1950 at Mobeetie High School, and passed along what she knew and told me that the lessons you learn along the way are just as important as what some professor can impart. Sure, education is great, but like Mark Twain said, I'd rather meet a man that was well-schooled than one that was well-educated. I've met some who are and road-ready within four hours. For both, and others who don't let their education get in the way of their schooling. If mama had wanted, she could've been a PhD.

My mama is a PhD. She is a doctor of philosophy, education, medicine, psychology, physiology and more. My mother is a great, great lady, and I'm glad God gave me to her and her to Thank you, mama.

Viewpoint

In reference to the last paragraph of your May 8, 1990 front page article which read "... commissioners agreed that Brownlow might have a point (to purchase a small pickup instead of a large one for the City Inspector) but authorized the purchase anyway because it is a budgeted item ..

Thanks, Emory, for speaking out! Does money have to be spent just because it is budgeted? What's wrong with saving budgeted funds, if possible?

I would like to ask each city commissioner as well as our city manager and mayor to ask himself or herself, "Did our voters overwhelmingly veto the sales tax proposal because they don't have confidence in our ability to appoint a commission who will spend a $350,000 annual budget in a wise, businesslike manner?"

I have not heard people say they voted "No" because they don't want economic development! They feel that a lot of money has been spent-with no positive results.

We must grow! We must progress! To do this effectively, our elected officials must spend and save exactly as they would if it were coming out of their very own pockets, because it is!

Mr. McGill showed me by his actions in the last city commission meeting what I was against in Proposition 1. Elected and appointed officials forget how hard it is to pay all these taxes, therefore spend our money foolishly. They say, trust us. Mr. McGill will give Amarillo a bid over Hereford business, claiming to save us money, yet turn around and spend our money because it was budgeted that way!

What is wrong with our officials that when they see so-called "free money," they have to spend it?

Stay in there, Emory! At least we have one one our side. Maybe we can add another one later to help you. By the way where did we get this Mr. Gaddy and why are we paying him? L.F. Shannon

Dear editor,

Mr. McGill's comments and actions reported in your Tuesday article on the city commission meeting gave a prime example of what I think the votes were voting against. Voters are fed up with elected and appointed officials spending our tax money foolishly: Surely having an item budgeted for certain amount does not mean a more economical one (which could do the job efficiently) could not be substituted.

Bandera Downs, located about 45 miles northwest of San Antonio, has had non-wagering horse racing since 1985. It received its pari-mutuel license from the Texas Racing Commission in April 1989.

It now is undergoing a $4 million renovation that includes building a clubhouse, new grandstands, barns, jockeys quarters and an infield park.

The Class 2 track will offer thoroughbred and quarter horse races Friday through Sunday through Oct. 28, said Essary, who predicted average daily attendance will be 3,000 and the average handle will total more than $300,000.

The Bandera Downs announcement came just days after officials at G. Rollie White Downs in Brady said their operation was insolvent.

But Essary said that doesn't worry him because there is a population of 1.4 million in a 50-mile radius of Bandera, compared with fewer than 100,000 around Brady, which is located farther to the north of Bandera.

"The people of Brady worked

Ryan's smoke bad for batters' hea

An AP Sports Analysis By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON (AP) - There's just a split second to decide if the ball is going to break. Is it a curve, or is it a 95 mph fastball?

It's a white blur streaking toward your left shoulder. If it doesn't break and your reflexes fail, you'll be in an ambulance soon.

Hitting against Nolan Ryan isn't good for your nervous system. It also could be damaging to your health. a ball over the centerfield fence 400

Last year Bo Jackson guessed right. He waited for Ryan's fastball and his powerful, perfectly timed swing sent a shot into the stands that was measured at 440 feet. The ball was still rising when it landed.

Gerald Perry, another member of the Kansas City Royals, got a fastball out over the plate this week and hit the first grandslam homer of his career. Perry didn't think he could hit

What's frightening about hitting against Ryan is that he can kill you if he makes a mistake, and the batter compounds the error with slow reflexes.

Ryan owns the all-time major league record for walks, meaning he doesn't always know where the ball is going.

There's a morbid curiosity watching Ryan pitch.

He won't let a batter dig in against him. If a hitter does, Ryan will zing

Bob Welch must have gotten all the bad pitches out of his system in spring training.

Welch had an 0-3 record and 17.72 ERA in exhibition games, but turned almost unhittable once the Oakland Athletics began playing for real. He pitched his second shutout in three starts with a five-hit 5-0 victory over Baltimore Friday night as the A's won their fifth in a row.

Welch lowered his ERA to 1.41, edging past teammate Dave Stewart's 1.46 to take over the American League lead as the A's won their 10th in 11 games.

"I'm concentrating on every pitch, pitch by pitch," said Welch, who admitted that he's been plagued by a lack of concentration for much of his 12-year career. "With our team, we always seems to get a couple of runs before the other team. That always makes the job easier.'

Mark McGwire made life easier for Welch on Friday with a pair of solo homers, his second two-homer game against the Orioles this season.

In other AL games, it was Chicago 6, Kansas City 4; Boston 3, California 2: Toronto 4, Detroit 2; Milwaukee 6, Minnesota 3; New York 8, Seattle 4; and Cleveland 4, Texas 4 in a game suspended by rain in the sixth inning. Athletics 5, Orioles 0

Despite his ERA, Welch is only 4-2 on a team with a 22-6 record, the best in the majors.

There haven't been many bad starts by Oakland pitchers. They've allowed just three runs during the 10-1 with five shutouts and a 1.16 ERA in the last 11 games.

La Russa is not ready to claim greatness despite the 22-6 start, tying the franchise mark set in 1981.

McGwire homered in the second off Bob Milacki (1-1) and again in the eighth off Brian Holton.

White Sox 6, Royals 4

Oakland's fast start isn't making things any better for Kansas City, which saw high-priced relief ace an RBI single by Chris James and Mark Davis blow his fourth save in nine chances this season as Chicago rallied for five runs in the eighth.

Davis was handed a 4-2 lead with a runner on first and two outs in the eighth. Three batters later, his record had dropped to 0-2 as Ron Kittle Saturday night.

homered, Scott Fletcher reached on an error and Ivan Calderon doubled in the go-ahead run.

Eastern Europe seen as a big meal market

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department analysis says Eastern Europe's market-oriented drive toward greater livestock output could help boost U.S. exports of high-protein meal. 1

Brian J. Clouse has joined Holly Sugar as an agriculturist in Hereford. Clouse is a native of Renville.

Minn., and attended Willmar Technical College in Willmar, Minn. He is a past member of the Future Farmers of America and was a Boy Scout leader in Renville.

Clouse was a roller operators and shop supervisor for Cenex at Renville from 1977-83. He was in manufacturing for three years, and worked as a research intern for Southern Minnesota Beet Sugar Cooperative at Reville before joining Holly.

Clouse and his wife, Julie, have two children, Krista and Brandon.

But the department's Economic Research Service also cautioned that there are some big question marks.

"Eastern Europe is a protein-deficit region, yet has a developed livestock sector that serves and established export market and supports high per capita meat consumption," the agency reported

Led by Poland, East Germany and Romania; the region is among the top higher." five users of oilseed meal, which includes meal from cottonseed. rapeseed, sunflowerseed and other sources.

The largest are the United States. the European Economic Community, the Soviet Union and China.

"Behind exporter optimism are expectations that widespread popular demands for improved living standards, so evident in Romania last December, will force officials to increase protein imports," the report need for soybean meal.

Thus, oilseed imports "could rise modestly" over the decade by about 3 percent annually from the 1 percent rate of the late 1980s. But the report added that "it's uncertain whether political and economic reforms can imports, South American competistimulate significantly higher" growth than that.

"With or without economic reform, the region still must service its sizable foreign debt," the report said. "Debt service requirements will constrain overall import growth, as they have throughout the 1980s."

Looking at Poland, the biggest user of oilseed meal in Eastern Europe, the report said the country's comparative advantage lies in expanded production of pork and other livestock

Farmers headed for bright wheat harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers are headed for a whopper of a wheat harvest this year, perhaps enough to boost the nation's depleted stockpile of bread grain by 70 percent or more.

The bright outlook is based on the Agriculture Department's forecast Thursday for winter wheat, which accounts for three-fourths of the U.S.

As of May 1, surveys showed that 1990 winter wheat production could be a nine-year high of 2.09 billion bushels, up 44 percent from last year's harvest of 1.45 billion bushels. Average yields were forecast at 41.1 bushels per acre, compared with 35.1 bushels last year.

In Kansas, for example, winter wheat production was estimated at 460.2 million bushels, more than remainder of the growing season. double the shriveled 1989 harvest of 213.6 million bushels. Both the acreage and average yield were up.

Overall, farmers are expected to have about 50.8 million acres of 23 percent from 41.5 million in 1989, bushels in 1989. the report said.

and harvested the next year, accounts wheat stockpile will be drained to a for about three-fourths of the U.S. 15-year low of 442 million bushels total wheat production. The remain- June 1, the beginning of the new der is planted in the spring.

Carl Schwensen, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the larger harvest will "put us in a stock-building mode" for some time in the future - at least until something can be done about worldwide capacity for producing too much grain.

Schwensen said the United States has "made a real accomplishment" by putting millions of acres of marginal land in the Conservation Reserve Program, which takes it out of crop production for 10 years. He said about 11 million acres of that land has come from nation's wheat

"No other major producing and exporting nation has even attempted to take the initiatives that we've had to set aside marginal lands specifically from wheat production, Schwensen said in a telephone

In the early and mid-1980s U.S. wheat surpluses grew rapidly, rising to a peak carryover of 1.9 billion bushels on June 1, 1985.

Schwensen said he doesn't see that happening again soon, "but we are going to be getting up to a billion (bushels), I would think, over the next couple of seasons."

Ideally, he said, the association would like to see year-end U.S. wheat stockpiles maintained at around 800 million bushels, although some others, including USDA experts, say a billion bushels would be all right. "Preference for soybean meal However, Schwensen said much tion, the fate of currency depends on how the Soviet Union and China continue to perform as wheat export credit guarantees will markets, and on the way the U.S. export subsidy program shapes up in the 1990 farm bill.

The USDA's first official estimate of 1990 production of all wheat will be issued July 12, with the first estimates for corn, soybeans and some other major spring-planted crops scheduled for Aug. 9, along with revised figures for wheat.

Although no official estimates based on field surveys were included, except for winter wheat, department analysts in a related supply-and-demand report did project highly tentative" 1990 production of all wheat at more than 2.69 billion bushels, up from less than 2.04 billion last year.

Projections for all wheat and some other crops were based on yield trends and an assumption the crop would have normal weather the

The 1990 corn harvest was projected at 8.1 billion bushels, up from 7.53 billion harvested last year. Soybean production was projected at 1.925 billion bushels, virtually the winter wheat for harvest this year, up same as the crop of 1.927 billion

According to the Winter wheat, planted in the fall supply-and-demand report, the U.S. wheat marketing year.

But with the expected larger 1990 harvest, the wheat stockpile could be rebuilt to about 765 million bushels a year from now. That would be close to the 800 million bushels Schwensen and the wheat growers say is desirable.

The projected larger 1990 wheat harvest could put pressure on market prices, which were indicated in the range of $2.90 to $3.30 per bushel in 1990-91, compared with an estimated $3.71 this season.

If corn production turns out at the projected level of 8.1 billion bushels, it still wouldn't be quite enough to match domestic and export demand, the report showed. Thus, the U.S. corn stockpile, which may be around 1.33 billion bushels next fall, could edge lower by Oct. 1, 1991.

An Excel/UFCW Joint Focus on Employee Safety & the Workers' Compensation Crisis

Excel Corporation's Texas plants have a big problem with abuses of the state's workers compensation system by a small number of employees. The problem is mushrooming and must be turned around quickly. We must act immediately to prevent that problem from jeopardizing the continued economic viability of the Friona and Plainview plants.

The company has implemented a variety of safety programs to deal with the causes of injuries that trigger workers' compensation claims. In the last decade, Excel has introduced numerous equipment improvements and safety-training programs, including a voluntary ergonomic-safety plan in conjunction with the United Food & Commercial Workers International Union. These programs are among the most progressive in the industry.

Excel and the UFCW are committed to providing a safe workplace and thorough treatment and rehabilitation of injuries resulting from work accidents. The company encourages the reporting of legitimate on-the-job injuries early so they can be treated promptly and professionally.

Excel will continue to compensate fully employees with valid work-related claims. But, it will pursue aggressively those individuals -- inside and outside the company -- who attempt to abuse the system.

We know the majority of Excel's workforce does not condone false or inflated workers' compensation claims. Excel and the UFCW met recently with union members to explain the magnitude of the problem with invalid or inflated workers' compensation claims. Employees were told that significant progress must be made in the next 60 days on eliminating false or inflated claims.

We need your help to end abuses of the workers' compensation system. We are seeking help from members of our communities because the problem is out of control.

We're concerned about worker's compensation in Texas because government surveys show that employees are not receiving benefits in proportion to costs incurred by employers.

- Texas ranks in the top 10 in terms of cost to employers.
- It ranks 47th of the 50 states in benefits to employees.
- That means the system is not serving effectively those it was meant to protect.

One conclusion that could be drawn from this combination of facts is that the system is being abused by a relatively small number of employees and their legal and medical consultants.

Excel cannot continue to devote more than $20 million annually to Texas workers' compensation costs. That's over 4.5 times more than combined costs for the company's four beef slaughter and fabrication plants of similar size outside Texas. Those plants have basically the same workers' compensation coverage and 1,400 more employees than our Plainview and Friona plants.

It is important that our employees and the people of the community know the seriousness of this problem. The solution is two-fold:

- Reduce accidents, which Excel has continuously pursued as a top priority.
- · Eliminate abuses of the system.

The company is anxious to work with employees to reduce workers' compensation costs. Eliminating invalid or inflated claims is in the best interest of everyone associated with our processing plants. The future of our Friona plant depends on getting workers' compensation costs under control immediately.

If you want to discuss the situation or share information that may help us get this problem under control, call our Friona Hotline Number: 806/295-8477. Any help will be appreciated.

PAMPA & CELANESE

City divided by loyalty to employer, pollution fears

By CHIP BROWN Associated Press Writer

PAMPA (AP) - For 38 years, thousands in this small plains city Celanese chemical plant for their livelihood. No one questioned the city's No. 1 corporate citizen, the only major industry in miles of farmland.

But now more than 550 people accuse Celanese of sickening the populace with toxic pollutants, causing everything from coughs to cancer by releasing chemicals into the air and ground water.

Their lawsuit, now being heard in Houston, also could provide the country's first legal test of the theory that toxic chemicals could cause Down's syndrome.

The allegations have shaken residents who have known few controversies in Pampa beyond the high school Harvesters losing a basketball game.

"This city is divided right now, but I don't think the community will be split when they see the proof come out in court. Their health is at risk," says Dick Smith, one of the hundreds suing Celanese. For 26 years he treated chemicals at the plant before retiring in 1988.

"The people have a right to know what they are breathing," he said.

Celanese officials have refuted all the claims, saying there's no medical evidence linking the plant to health problems. And they point out the plant has received only one safety citation in 38 years, and it's under appeal.

The plant produces acetic acid and 10 other chemicals for use in dyes, paints, adhesives and solvents.

don't criticize the plant, and many refuse to talk of it at all. Some say they're silent out of disdain for the lawsuit. Others say the silence is rooted in fear.

One owner of a small business said he believes "Celanese has been getting away with a lot more than we know," but said he couldn't give his name because he fears Celanese will blackball his business.

They (Celanese) are all alone out here and people don't raise much of a fuss," the business owner said. All this talk about sickness has got a lot of people really scared."

It has others really mad, like Pampa City Commissioner Robert Dixon.

Last month he started campaigning for a city resolution backing Celanese against the lawsuit.

There has been nothing positive about this," Dixon told the city council in April. "It does everything to destroy our economic development programs. You see these things in the paper and people say, 'What is going on here?'

> Celanese is an economic cornerstone of Pampa, the largest Panhandle town outside Amarillo, 55 miles away across wheat and cotton fields.

Celanese is the city's largest employer with 450 workers. Its taxes underwrite the school system, the hospital and the library, It builds steel structure and blew out windows in downtown Pampa, six miles away.

Even then, the city was quick to back the company. With oil and agriculture in a slump, Celanese jobs were precious. Three weeks after the explosion, a rally in support of rebuilding the chemical plant drew nearly 14,000 people to the high school football stadium.

The plant reopened in the summer of 1988 and returned to full production a year ago.

Doubts began with the explosion on Nov. 14, 1987. It killed three men, injured 37 persons. It mangled steel at the plant, shattered windows six miles away, and began to raise a few doubts about overall safety at the plant.

plaintiffs who lived near the plant. Many of them belonged to an anti-pollution group called Advocates Against Acid Rain and blamed Celanese for health problems dating to its opening in 1952.

Department of Health and the federal Centers for Disease Control said it was very unusual to have six babies with the syndrome born in Pampa between 1980 and 1985.

A report by Dr. Gerald H. Holman, a former associate dean of the Texas Tech Medical School in Amarillo, said that "in all medical probability," the number of Down's syndrome cases "is related to the environmental pollutants from the Celanese site."

Upchurch held a "town meeting" and signed up more plaintiffs. He's now asking state District Judge Eugene Chambers to give the case class-action

Plaintiffs say they think the company has ignored health concerns. They point to one internal memo, for example. that said the plant would have stop using chrome because of continued land contamination. The memo was titled "Chrome - Pampa's Death Warrant."

In 1979, Celanese expanded the employee physicals to include drug tests, respiratory tests and electrocardiograms, Stephens said.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration investigated the explosion and said one cause was 'willful violation" of safety procedures. OSHA levied a $10,000 fine, the maximum penalty.

The company disputes the violation and the case is again before OSHA for review.

It's the only OSHA citation in the plant's history. The only environmental citation against Celanese, from the Environmental Protection Agency and Texas Air Control Board, was for a late report.

In 1987, Celanese notified the Texas Water Commission that benzene had seeped through 400 feet of soil and clay and contaminated the Ogallala aquifer, the region's principal source of water. The concentrations of benzene in the water were measured at 40 parts per considered safe by the federal government.

Tests from seven monitoring wells indicate that benzene has not spread beyond the plant's boundaries, Stephens said.

Employees who worked with the chemical benzene before it was classified as a carcinogen and banned from the plant have been monitored closely, Stephens said.

"We have - extensive health monitoring data and we have not shown any problem associated with benzene in the workers," he said. "And if there were a problem, certainly it would be more likely in the workers than ... in the communi-

The lawsuit is costing Celanese tens of thousands of dollars to fight, but Stephens said he is sure the plant will be found free of any wrongdoing.

"I am very confident that the facts in a proper court of law will be there to show there is no connection between our plant and any alleged' illnesses," Stephens said. "It creates undo concern in the community. It's a waste of people's time in the community as well as Hoechst Celanese.

West, Reel nuptials exchanged in Amarillo

Wedding vows were spoken by Glena Sue West of Laurel, Md. and John Steven Reel of Columbia, Md. during an early afternoon ceremony Saturday in San Jacinto Baptist Church in Amarillo.

The bride is the daughter of Bill and Dixie West of Route 4, Hereford, and the bridegroom is the son of Donald and Martha Reel of Arp,

The marriage was officiated by Gordon Benson of San Jacinto Baptist Church.

The church altar was decorated by a 15-arch candelabrum flanked by two seven-branch candelabra holding red candles and covered with ivy.

Matron of honor was Roxanne Lincycomb of Amarillo and best man was Stephen Kitchings of Arp. Bridesmaids included the bride's sisters, Polly Bryant and Carla West, and Linda Blount. Kate Riha was junior bridesmaid. Groomsmen were Mike Kitchings, Mark Nestlen and Tracy Blount. Guests were escorted by the bride's cousins, Jeff Neal and Craig Neal; and the bride's brother-in-law.

Go Unbroken."

Flower girl was the bride's cousin, Kayla Altman, daughter of Kenny and Beth Altman, and ring bearer was Stephen Kitchings Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Kitchings.

Candles were lit by the groom's cousins, Lincoln and Lyndsay Turner. Marcia Anderson and Larry Lincycomb, accompanied by pianist Beth Altman, sang "Endless Love", "I Will Be Here" and "The Vow Will

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional white satin and taffeta wedding gown designed with a high wedding band neckline and a fitted bodice with sheer net covering the V-shape front and back. The bodice, which was accented with dangling beads, formed a basque waist which was marked by a decorated back bow. The short puff sleeves were adorned with rolled rose accents and the full skirt swept into a chapel-length train.

The fingertip-length tulle veil, made by the bride's mother, was attached to a beaded headpiece enhanced by miniature scattered pearls.

The bride carried an all-silk cascading bouquet of stephanotis, roses, camellias, and baby's breath accented with white streamers, pearls and lace. It was created by the bride's aunt.

Bridal attendants were attired in red taffeta tea-length dresses. Each was fashioned with a fitted bodice with a shaped dropped waistline, short puffed sleeves and a fullgathered skirt which was marked with a tie bow at the V-shaped back. They carried red and white all-silk colonial nosegays of stephanotis, roses and camellias.

Lori Yokum invited guests to register at the reception held in the church parlor.

Cake was served by Angie Airhart, Lori Yokum and Elaine Reinart, and Jennier Hicks poured punch and coffee. Also, assisting was Michelle Vowcheck.

The bride's white cake featured a flowing fountain at the center with stairways leading to the wedding couple figurines. The groom's yellow cake with chocolate icing was made in the shape of Texas.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico, the bride wore a red and white polka dotted cotton dress which featured a fitted bodice, short, puffed sleeves and a straight

BRANDed Women

By Sandy Stagner

Well, Mom, today is Mother's Day. Did you ever think you would get your three children raised? And you did it without having the benefit up of a psychiatrist!

I never really appreciated all of your years of efforts until I, too, became a mother. Why didn't you warn me? All you ever told me when I was growing up was that someday I would get paid back for the grief I dealt you and Dad.

Actually, until my children got older, they were really great kids. But something happened as they began to reach their teens. A: metamorphosis occurred, my once alien beings. The personality change in my 18r-old son, Tim, happened the day he passed his driving test. It was like he had gotten his first taste of real freedom. (It was party time or so he thought.) On the day he received his license, he asked me if he could borrow my car that evening. about my "baby" driving, I decided the milestone should be celebrated. He was told to be home that Friday by II p.m.

As the minutes ticked past his curfew, I began getting antsy. Finally at 11:30 p.m. Tim called his dad explaining there was a problem and he needed a ride home. Apparently, my son and his friends decided to take a joy ride up and down the hills at Veteran's Park. I guess they thought they were riding in a Land Rover instead of a 12-year-old Comet.

Okay, Mom, was I getting paid back just because I ran completely through the back of the garage on the day I received my driver's license? I can still recall the look on Dad's face when you told him he now had a drive-through garage.

As Tim gets older, his curfew, naturally, has been extended. When his father and I tell him to be home at I a.m., we don't mean 1:15. Recently, our son crept into the house at 2:30 a.m. Although he was late, it The date for the fund raising will be was do to circumstances beyond his announced later. Members present control. worried sick. I got dressed at 2 a.m., went outside and paced up and down the driveway until I saw him driving

Was this also a "pay back"? Believe me, Mom, I didn't realize that you were so worried that night when I came home at 2 a.m. from a high school dance. I mean time just kind of got away from me. When I drove up with my date, I was soooooo embarrassed! You were sitting on the front porch steps in your housecoat waiting to greet me. (Some greeting! You took one look at me and said, "You are grounded for eternity.")

Although my daughter isn't quite precious little angels transformed into a teenager, she's close enough to act like one. She began exhibiting all the symptoms of a teen when she turned paid much attention to the phone until a few months ago. Now, it's her "lifeline". If I need to make a phone call, I have to first check with her to see when the phone will be available. The other night she informed me that Although I was very apprehensive the line would be free from 7-7:30 because she would be taking a shower. (How thoughtful of her!)

Pay back time, right? Remember, Mom, all the arguments we had about my phone calls when I was a senior? I thought you were so "uncool" when you found me on the phone one night about II. I had only been talking for a little over five hours. After all, I did have to organize my social life. My daughter has also approached the age when she simply cannot be seen in the same outfit more than once a month. Consequently, she goes to my closet and helps herself. If I can't find a sweater, a top, belt or jewelry, I have to rummage around in her room. Thank goodness we don't have the same shoe size. But I'm sure that will change within in the

Yes, Mother, I know what you're thinking. I admit that on occasion I "borrowed" from you without your seen in the same clothes either. Yes, I'm getting paid back for the aggrevation I caused you.

Oh, well, I guess the moral to this story is what goes around comes

Anyway, Happy Mother's Day. I hope I'm just half as good a mother to my children as you have always been to me. (Of course, I have to see my psychiatrist three times of week.)

Running West, based on historical fact and real people, is an epic tale of harrowing adventure in the 1700 Canadian North.

James Houston begins his story in the Highlands of Scotland and the treacherous world of Queen Ann's London, then moves across the Atlantic to the desolate west coast of Hudson Bay. William Stewart, a Scottish clerk banished from his homeland, meets Thanadelthur (Thana), a young Indian woman. Thana, of the Dene Nation, was taken into the Hudson's Bay Company York Factory after her family had been massacred.

James Knight, the company's governy, would like to see the fur trade expanded, and in this endeavor he sends the resourceful William and Thana to find their way back to her homeland to collect fur and valuable metals. The heroic trek into the uncharted wilderness will test William and Thana as they endure deprivation, violence and starvation.

William explains, " As we set off from the fort, I did not realize the 16th of January, A.D., 1715, would be one of the hardest days in all my life. I didn't even notice the cold as I hurried right behind Captain Kelsey, followed by four Cree and two toboggans....Kelsey began to increase his pace....My shin muscles were already drawn tight as bowstrings and the muscles on my inner thighs were throbbing.

Williams finds the second day just as difficult and lonely for as he awakens he finds himself left behind once again. I think you will find this gripping adventure a book to treasure.

Every since the Alar and apples scare last spring, the American public has expressed a rising concern with regard to pesticides in the food supply. While scientists feel that the pesticide risk to the American public is negligible, they will admit that all the facts may not be in and that certain questions remain unanswered.

ture and the Environmental Protection Agency suggests taking the following steps if you are concerned about pesticides in your food:

* Peel or remove outer layers of produce. It is possible that wax coatings of such produce as apples, cucumbers and green bell peppers can trap pesticide residues. Outer leaves on lettuce and other leafy vegetables contain higher pesticide residues. However, remember that peeling

Cultural practices control lawn weeds

Four simple but important steps will do more to provide homeowners an attractive, weed-free lawn than an arsenal of weed killing potions, says an agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. And now is the time to begin those four steps, he adds.

When weeds invade lawns, many homeowners seek quick solutions through the use of herbicides," said Dr. Brent Bean, the agronomist. Herbicides are only one tool and have only temporary effect on weed control unless other management practices are used, he said.

The best weed control practice is maintaining a dense, actively growing lawn," Bean said. A well maintained lawn minimizes weed competition and helps prevent establishment of new weeds.

"Turfgrass vigor is generally effected most by four cultural practices: selecting a good grass variety, mowing, nutrition and irrigation," the Extension Service specialist said.

When choosing a turfgrass variety, select those with a history of doing well in this area, he said. "Use mixtures and blends, rather than a single species," he recommended. "This helps the turfgrass compete under a wide range of conditions and lowers the chances of weeds invading the lawn."

Proper mowing is often overlooked for maintaining a healthy lawn, he said. Mowing height and frequency should be adjusted according to the type of grass and time of year.

Cool season grasses, such as Kentucky bluegrass and fine fescue, should be mowed at one-and-a-half to three inches in summer. "Higher cutting height in the summer helps insulate the grass crown from high temperatures," Bean explained.

In general, bermudagrass performs best at mowing heights of an inch or less, the agronomist said.

Regardless of the type of grass, it is best to not remove more than a third of the leaf area with any mowing,' he said.

A properly fertilized lawn may not be weed-free, but it will be better able to compete with weeds than an undernourished lawn, Bean said. The most effective way to determine a lawn's fertility needs is to take a soil sample and have it analyzed, he said. ir county extens you how to take the sample and suggest where to send it for inexpensive testing, he noted.

Kentucky bluegrass and fescue lawns should receive the bulk of their fertilizer in April/May and September. A total of five pounds of nitrogen for 1,000 square feet should be sufficient for most cool season lawns, with a third to a half of the nitrogen applied in the spring and the rest in the fall.

"For best results, use a combination of fast and slow-release sources of nitrogen, with not more than half being fast-relief," Bean suggested. Adding iron will help give the grass a darker green color, and other nutrients should be added if the soil test indicates a need, he said.

Bermudagrass should receive between four and six pounds of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn each year. "A split application in May and September is generally best, as with cool seasons lawns, a mixture of fast and slow release nitrogen is best," Bean said.

Watering is the final cultural practice that will help a lawn compete with weeds. Irrigating deeply and infrequently is preferred over light, frequent waterings which lead to shallow root systems, the agronomist said.

Bluegrass and fescue require significantly more water than bermudagrass during the heat of summer, Bean said. "In some cases, up to two inches a week may be needed to maintain a cool season lawn through the summer," he said.

By watering early in the morning, less water is lost to evaporation. Watering at night should be avoided, Bean said, since it tends to make the grass more susceptible to disease.

Training clinic scheduled

A Buster Welch Cutting Horse Training Clinic will be held on May 17 at the Amarillo Tri-State Fair Grounds Coliseum from 6-9 p.m., honoring Cowgirl Honoree Fem Sawyer.

The event will be held in conjunction with the non-pro cutting horse competition. Net proceeds from the clinic will benefit the National Cowgirl Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Hereford.

Admission is $15 and tickets can be purchased at the following locations in Amarillo and Canyon: West Texas Western Wear, Boots N Jeans, Luskey's, Oliver Brothers Saddle Shop, Berry's W-W Trailer Sales, and Easley Trailer. Great Room Two Stories High With Balcony Above

INTERIOR TOUCHES TYPIFY QUALITY AND ELEGANCE

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

Every amenity was addressed when this luxury residence was designed: Quality features are a two story great room, first floor master bedroom suite, a daytime bath as well as a private master bath included on the first floor, deck access from the master bedroom, great room and breakfast room, a formal dining room and three bedrooms, three baths, and a bonus room upstairs.

A private open foyer is an entrance to the elegance of the modern day lifestyle. The kitchen, breakfast room, great room and master bedroom are arranged to take maximum advantage of the outdoor deck area. The master bedroom is embellished with two identical walkin closets and a compartment bath with garden tub and shower stall as well as two separate vanities.

The European exterior is embellished with ornately trimmed multi-lite windows, multiple roof breaks, stucco finish and a side entrance to double garage.

This is a computer generated plan. The plan is Number 2934. It includes 2,964 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include special construction, details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet 'FHA and VA requirements. For further information write to W.D. Farmer, P.O. # Home improvement always good investme

By POPULAR MECHANICS For AP Newsfeatures

If a volatile stock market isn't your idea of sane investing, consider putting your money into a solid, familiar investment you can keep track of every day - your home.

Whether you're remodeling a dingy kitchen or bath, adding an extra bedroom or boosting the "curb appeal" of your house by installing new siding and replacement doors and windows, you can often increase the market value of your house by the full amount and more than you spend on a home improvement.

comfort and enjoyment, you don't have to worry about what you spend. But if you're doing it as an investment, you want to make sure you don't outprice other houses in your neighborhood.

For example, if you own a house worth $90,000 in a neighborhood where the top houses sell for $100,000 and you sink $50,000 into an elaborate renovation, your chances of getting $140,000 at resale are remote at best. People looking for $140,000 houses don't buy in $100,000 neighborhoods. A good rule of thumb: Make sure

If you're remodeling for your own the current market value of your house plus planned improvements doesn't exceed the value of the better houses in your area by 20 percent. That would mean limiting the renovation on the $90,000 house above to about $30,000

In general, the longer you stay in your home after remodeling, the better your chances of recovering an improvement's cost. If you think you'll sell your house within two years, stick to cosmetic fixups, such as fresh paint inside and out, replacing floor coverings with new but inexpensive ones and repairing cracked siding and crumbling

Improvements that bring your house up to par with the rest of the neighborhood should earn better returns than those that put you above the crowd.

Adding a second bath to a one-bath house almost always returns 100 percent or more of its cost - as does expanding a two-bedroom house to three bedrooms if that's the norm for the neighborhood. But add a third bath or a fourth bedroom and you might recouponly 70 percent or less of your investment.

A local real estate agent should be able to tell you whether your planned improvement is too ritzy for your neighborhood. An agent can also tell you which remodeling projects excite today's home buyers enough to raise. their bids and which provoke an ambivalent or even a negative reaction to a house.

There's also a new emphasis on architectural design in home renovation. Aesthetics and good design are more important to today's 35- and 40-year-old homebuyers. Not only must the individual project be well thought out and executed, but it has to fit in with the rest of the house. This is especially important in exterior renovations of post-World War II suburban homes. Many such houses were erected quickly without much regard for architectural appeal, and now they are being given a contemporary look with new siding, roofs, higher-impact entries and better landscaping.

Thus, if you're a little weak on design skill, it may pay to hire an architect or designer to help plan a major addition.

The quality of work also determines how much value the next buyer places on any improvement - or, in the case of a shoddily done job, how much the buyer actually detracts from his or her bid for the house.

Homemade materials can help keep your home

For AP Newsfeatures Q. - I use a shallow-well jet pump for watering my garden. The problem is that it pumps too much air. The point is located 20 feet below the surface and there's always about 8 feet of water standing in the pipe. I attached a 30-gallon tank to the pump to hold reserve water for priming the pump. Every week I must release 10 pounds of air from the tank. Why am getting all the air?

A. - Since you mention that there's a point at the end of the well piping, I assume you have a driven well and not a drilled or dug well. The pipe that's driven is the pipe through which the water flows. The problem with removing the pump and measuring the water level is that it's being measured under static conditions. When the water is being drawn up the pipe, the level will drop.

You can check the level of water in the pipe when it's being pumped by connecting a vacuum gauge to the suction line after the check valve. The gauge is calibrated in inches of mercury. One inch of vacuum will pull up water 1.13 feet. If the gauge reads 20 inches, the pump is lifting water 22.6 feet. This includes the effort needed to overcome the friction of the water against the inside wall of the pipe.

If all the joints are tight, then your problem appears to be caused by a low level of water when the pump is running. As the water is pumped, the level descends to the strainer at the end of the point and sucks air from around the pipe. Although there's no guarantee that it will work, you might try driving the point down another 5 to 10 feet.

is necessary, then there's either a leak in the suction line, a faulty check valve, or possibly both.

a loud whistle whenever a faucet is turned on. This occurs with both hot and cold faucets, indoors or out. Can you help? A. - A whistling sound in the plumbing system is often caused by water flowing at high velocity past a constriction. Since you hear a whistle when any tap is opened, the problem probably lies in the section of pipe common to all taps - the inlet water service pipe, which contains the water meter and, in many communities, a pressure-reducing valve. We suspect the problem is in either of these two components.

To check this out, get permission from the water company to bypass the water meter. The meter and reducing valve usually have union fittings for easy installation and removal.

If the water meter is the culprit, ask the water company to repair or replace it. If the pressure-reducing valve is the problem, check for sediment in the strainer that could be constricting the flow. Some older reducing valves have brass strainers that tend to disintegrate. If a replacement strainer is not available. replace the reducing valve. Newer valves have stainless steel strainers that can be cleaned.

You can also try momentarily adjusting the pressure reducer to a higher or lower pressure. This might dislodge sediment buildup.

You may have to lay a weighted board over badly curled shingles. This repair should be done on a warm day when the shingles are pliable. Quicksetting roofing cement is available at hardware or roofing supply stores. If the curling is widespread, you'll have to reshingle to get your white roof.

Q. - We would like to refinish the hardwood floor that's under the linoleum in our kitchen. Is there an easy way to remove the linoleum?

A. - Unfortunately, there is no easy way. If the hardwood floor consists of oak strips and was originally smooth, then the linoleum was probably glued directly to the floor. 12-inch strips with a utility knife. A. - When the corners curl and turn long-edged trowel to pry up the adhesive that remains.

If your hardwood floor had open joints or crevices, it was probably leveled with a quick-setting, plaster-like compound before the linoleum was applied. In this case, prior to lifting the strips, pound on the linoleum with a flat object to crumble the leveling compound and facilitate lifting.

After removing the linoleum, you'll have to sand the floor. Be aware that up until about five years ago, the felt backing of linoleum contained asbestos. Have a sample analyzed. If asbestos is present, the fibers will become airborne when the floor is sanded. In this case, you'd be better off covering your floor with new linoleum.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR Impatience is Hurtful

take the time or have the mind to do our best. Impatience is not a timesaver but is the exact opposite most out of our time. This, in turn, generated by "impatience." contributes to loss of quality in both work and in our living.

Impatience is hurtful because it makes us speak too quickly; anxiety becomes more intense; frustrations increase; disappointments multiply; confusion grows; and it often causes more strife. Our impatience makes view of any life situation because it causes an erosion of our capabilities.

"In all evils which admit a Save remedy, "impatience" should be avoided because it wastes that time and attention in complaints which, if properly applied, might remove the cause."-Johnson

The rush of present day living contributes to "impatience", unless we consciously and constantly protect ourselves. We may not be able to stop or even slow down the

Weight Loss Pill 'Baffles' Scientists

WASHINGTON - Scientists are baffled by a new weight loss formula that causes people to lose weight even though they don't change the way they normally cat.

Studies published in respected scientific journals such as The British Journal of Nutrition say that cyamopsis tetragonolobus, an ingredient often used to thicken ice cream, can cause permanent weight loss without dieting or exercise. Although several explanations for the weight loss are suggested, the most likely according to scientists, is that the ingredient seems to "trap" high calorie fat par-ticles, decreasing their absorption in the intestines.

Scientists at National dietary Research, an organization committed to the research and development of nutritional solutions to world-wide health problems, have successfully isolated and incorporated cyamopsis tetragonolobus into an improved formula that greatly enhances the potential for weight loss over the ingredient alone. Called Food Source One, the revolutionary new formula provides a three-way scientifically designed process to help prevent calorie absorption.

The mechanism by which Food Source One works to decrease body weight is a complicated process called nutri-bonding. When chewed and swallowed immediately before meals, high calorie fats are replaced with lower calorie nutrients, thereby providing optimum nutrition and a minimum number of fat calories as explained in an instruction sheet that accompanies the tablets. The instruction sheet should be followed for optimum results.

Food Source One is unlike any other product on the market and is available immediately because it is not a drug and only contains natural ingredients already known to be safe. Physicians and pharmacists are praising Food Source One as a natural, drug free alternative for the treatment of obesity.
Food Source One is available at:

rush but we can manage ourselves so that we make it all worse by We sacrifice quality by being being "impatience." If we permit ourselves to get caught up in the impatient because we will never rush, we are in trouble. It seems that "impatience" is never able to function as a virtue, but is more often a vice. > One of the greatest drawbacks to success is the common American trait of "impatience." Each of us would like to accomplish great things right away-quick."-Zu

ozone layer

The next time you use an aerosol hairspray, deodorant or household cleaner, you may be happy to know you can enjoy the ease and convenience of its packaging without worrying that the spray will somehow harm the ozone layer. It's all thanks to amazing progress made by the industry since the 1970s, according to U.S. Can Company.

Back then, a controversy developed over using aerosols containing chlorofluorocarbons. Chlorofluorocarbons do not react with other chemicals near the earth's surface-they rise to the upper regions of the atmosphere. There, extremely powerful radiation from the sun causes them to break up and release chlorine atoms, which react chemically and diminish the layer of ozone in the atmosphere. This ozone layer protects the earth's surface from dangerous ultraviolet radiation.

Since 1978, the aerosol industry in the U.S. has reformulated its propellants and no longer uses chlorofluorocarbons. The propellants now used in aerosols in the United States, say scientists, make no contribution to harming the ozone layer of the atmosphere.

The aerosol cans used to package personal care, household and automotive/industrial products are highly effective and very convenient. It's good to know they're very safe as well.

Recital planned today

St. Thomas Episcopal Church, 601 West Park Avenue, Tolzien Music Company, and Allen Organ Company will present Jerry Whitten, MSM, in recital on the church's Allen Organ today beginning at 4 p.m.

Father Charles Threewit, rector of St. Thomas, said, "It is customary for the organ company to provide a recital by one of its staff organists when a church or other organization buys an organ from the company. Although we have had our organ for a couple of years, we never took advantage of the possibility until our organist, Linda Gilbert, and Dr. Duffy McBrayer had the idea that we might be able to present the recital in honor of mothers on their special day. Everything came together, and it is our honor and privilege to offer this recital for all the mothers of Hereford and the vicinity.

Whitten, a native of Oklahoma, holds a bachelor of music from the University of Oklahoma, where he studied with Mildred Andrews. He received the master of sacred music from Union Theological Seminary School of Sacred Music in New York City where he studied with Dr. Vernon De Tar.

He is currently organist/choir-master at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in Pampa. For over 27 years, he has been affiliated with Tolzien Music Company of Amarillo, Tarpley Music Company of Pampa and Lubbock, and Allen Organ Company.

"Everyone is urged to make this outstanding event a part of their Mother's Day celebration. If you cannot bring your own mother, borrow one, and bring her to hear this accomplished musician at the organ," said Rev. Threewit.

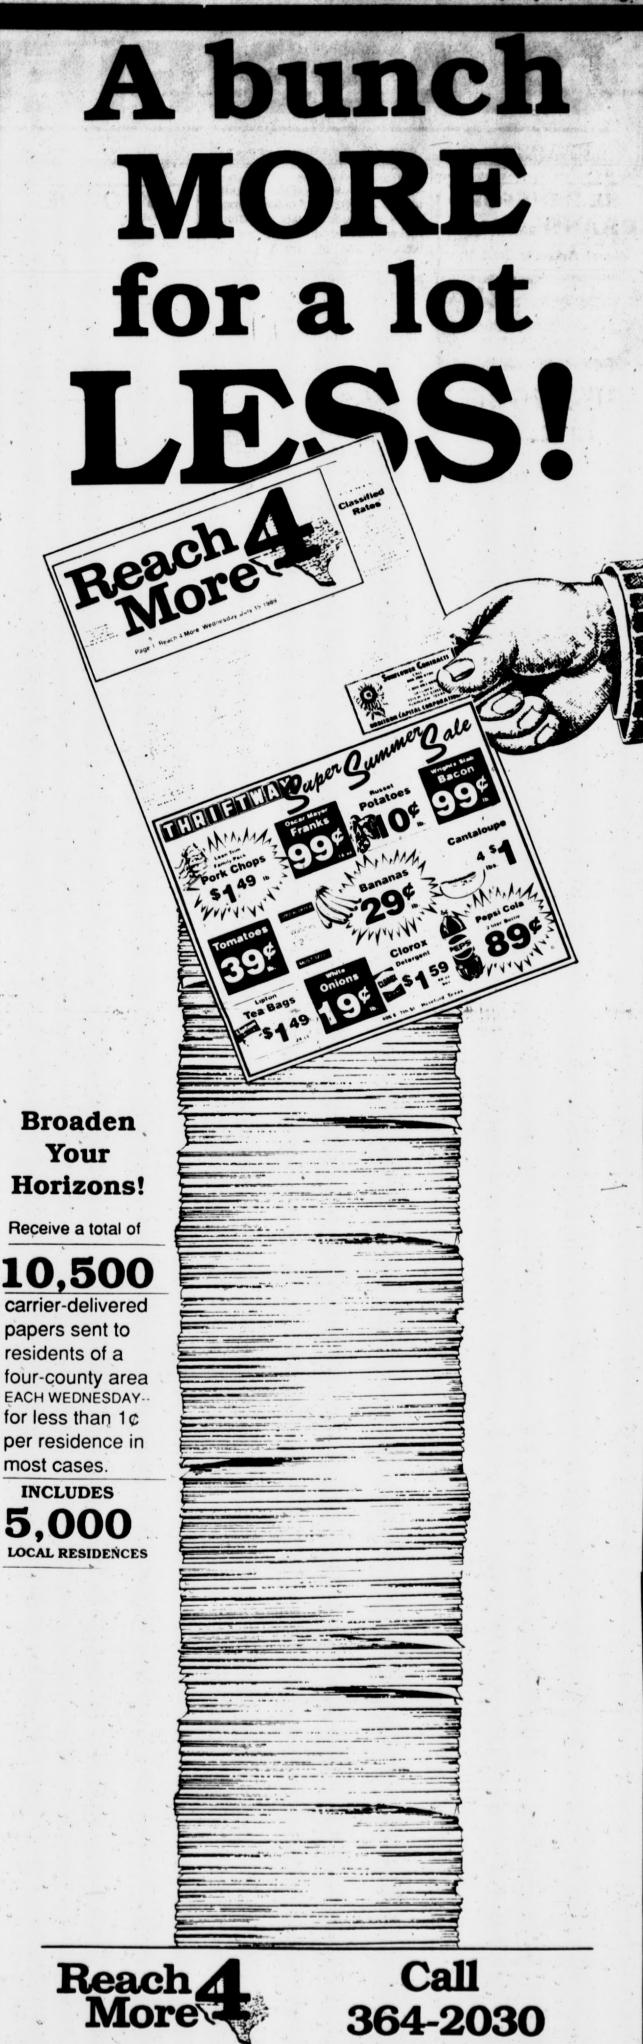

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Luther Campbell of the rap group 2 Live Crew cannot use the stage name Luke Skyywalker until a trademark infringement lawsuit filed by the makers of the "Star Wars" movies is resolved.

U.S. District Judge James Ideman issued the ruling Wednesday. Lucasfilm has filed a $300 million lawsuit alleging the singer, known for his profanity-laced lyrics, had soiled "Star Wars" hero Luke Skywalker's "highly moral, wholesome aspect." That's Skywalker with one "y.

Credit help phone call away

credit improvement is the second most important thing to consumer advocate Professor Daniel K. Berman. The most important is making that information available to the general public.

Berman is a San Franciscobased college teacher and director of the National Institute for Consumer Credit Research. Nationwide media exposure in combination with the expertise he has acquired through more than 10 years of experience in consumer credit counseling have earned him the name "Professor Credit."

"I had credit problems myself," says Berman, author of The Credit Power Handbook for American Consumers. "That's what got me started in this area." Berman was obliged to do his research from few dollars. scratch because "there were no reliable sources of detailed and practical information about credit improvement, just a lot of scams and rip-off artists who sell junk by mail, late-night television commercials and so-called seminars."

After he learned how to help himself, Berman began helping others. There was no shortage of demand for his assistance but he ran into a major stumbling block that he until just recently.

Many consumers with credit problems don't have working credit cards, Berman explains. And even for those who do, the fees for personalized consultation are often more than they can afford.

'My wife said, 'You've got to pry yourself away from that phone and stop doing so much volunteer work or we're going to start having credit problems again ourselves.'

That's when modern technology suddenly made it possible for the nation's leading authority on personal credit to make the benefits his knowledge available to anyone in the United States at any hour of the day or night, for just a

Youths participate

The youths at First Baptist Church recently participated in church, association and state semifinal Bible drill competition. Receiving recognition in semifinal competition were Karen Manchee, superior; Karon Harder, good; and Taylor Sublett, honorable mention. Those entering the competition were, from left, Taylor Sublett, Karon Harder, Karen Manchee, Jana Baird and Amanda McMeen. The purpose of the tournament is to assist youths in developing skills and confidence in expressing their commitment verbally.

Safety stressed for sports

The 4-H shooting sports project stresses safety at all times, and with hunting season coming up, now is a good time for youth to take part in the project.

Shooting safety training for all new shooters and the continued promotion of safe gun handling habits for experienced shooters is the key part of the 4-H shooting sports project, said Wade Shackelford, county 4-H program coordinator with the Texas down or with the action open...into Agricultural Extension Service.

Computer classes offered

St. Anthony's School is offering computer classes for children in grades 1-6 the week of July 9-13.

Proposed projects for the class include basic programming, keyboarding, creative writing, problem solving, and working on difficulty in specific content areas. Cost will be $20 per person.

The class for grades 1-3 will be held from 9-10:30 a.m. and the classfor grades 4-6 will be from 10:30 a.m. until noon. Due to the limited space availability, each class may only accept 13 children on a first come basis.

To enroll your children, please contact St. Anthony's School between 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at 364-1952. Deadline to signup is Tuesday, May

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Nora Dunn, a cast member of "Saturday Night Live," is refusing to perform on this weekend's show because she considers host Andrew Dice Clay's comedy act degrading and repulsive.

'I don't want to be associated with him and I oppose his work,' said Miss Dunn, who has been on the NBC comedy show since the 1985-86

Clay's act, laced with expletives and frank descriptions of oral sex and masturbation, is "hateful," Miss Dunn said in a telephone interview from New York on Monday. Others have called his routine sexist and homophobic.

Clay's management company in Los Angeles did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

Lorne Michaels, producer of the show, said, "We're proud of Nora Dunn's statement and her stand on this. But the show will go on."

YOUR EYES

CATARACTS

There's an old saying among optometrists: if you live long enough, you'll probably get cataracts. Cataracts are a clouding of the lenses that does not allow light to penetrate the eye and reach the retina. According to National Institute of Health statistics, 50 percent of all cataracts occur in people over the age of 65. What about the other 50 percent? Trauma to the eye is probably the foremost cause of cataracts not associated with aging. Usually this is a wound or blow that perforates or penetrates the eyeball. The continued use of certain medications may also cause cataracts. Corticosteroids, used to treat severe allergies and arthritis, may have that effect.

Babies are sometimes born with cataracts, often because the other contracted German measles during pregnancy. Another cause of cataracts in infants is a heredity defect in which the baby is missing the enzyme galactosimia and cannot digest a sugar found in milk. Researchers at Virginia Polytechnic Institute have found that abnormally high sugar levels may damage the lens, causing swelling, water absorption and the eventual loss of transparency.

One-step home pregnancy test helps reduce mistakes

introduced in 1976, can provide an inexpensive, convenient and private way to detect pregnancy. But be careful in choosing a test. Some tests are more complicated than othersincreasing the chances of making a mistake and getting an inaccurate result.

A recent study in the New England Journal of Medicine found that non-technical people get inaccurate results an average of II percent of the time with some popular home pregnancy tests. Most in-home tests require several steps-urine collection, chemical mixing with test tubes, droppers and precise timing.

A new, simpler test can minimize the chances of making a mistake. This one-piece test, Clear-Blue Easy, to improve her baby's health.

Home pregnancy tests, requires only one step-exposing the troduced in 1976, can provide an expensive, convenient and private urine-and the result will appear in just three minutes. A positive result is shown by the appearance of a blue line in the test window. This test requires no mixing and has a built-in control to show that it has been completed correctly.

> "Home pregnancy testing can play an important role in planning a pregnancy, if the results are accurate," says Dr. Mary Lake Polan, chairman of the Department of Gynecology & Obstetrics at Stanford University School of Medicine, Palo Alto, Calif. "Once a woman knows she's pregnant, she should talk with her doctor about changes in lifestyle
