Two men still missing after three weeks

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

Ray Morgan shook his head a lot last week when discussing a search for two local men who disappeared three weeks ago today.

"Everyone is concerned," the police captain said before turning his head, back and forth, in a discouraged manner. "Everyone is doing what they can, but we're all up against a brick wall until someone comes up with some solid information."

The night of Sunday, May 13 is the last time the two were positively seen, according to Morgan. The whereabouts of 25-year-old Jose Elizondo and Tomas Valdez, whose 20th birthday is Monday, is a major concern for both the Hereford Police and Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Departments.

It is also a major worry for the family of each single man. Nancy Arellano, Elizondo's sister, is offering $500 to anyone who can provide information which will lead to the discovery of her brother. At least two of Valdez' relatives from the Graham and Brady areas have come here to see what progress is being made.

Very little headway has actually been made. Morgan admitted Friday afternoon. There have been three reports of Valdez having been seen since the 13th, but they have not been confirmed, the captain said. No one has told either law enforcement department he has seen Elizondo.

According to a police report filed May 16 by Patrolman R.V. Tackitt, Elizondo's mother had last seen the two men at approximately 10 p.m. on May 13. They had come by her 401 Irving St. house, Petra Remona Elizondo said, and told her they were going to spend the night at the Milo Center home of Valdez' mother.

Lupe Lopez, the mother of Valdez, had her last contact with the men described in another May 16 missing person report. "She stated that he (Valdez) and Joe Elizondo had been by her house on Sunday," police Corporal Ted Campos wrote, "that they had spent most of the time in a room and that she had not heard what was said."

A friend of the two men, Amarillo resident Nina Villarreal, had earlier told Patrolman Kenny Sifford the two men left Milo Center at approximately 11 p.m. May 13. They said they were planning to come to her 3706 E.

15th address, but never showed up.

Elizondo and Valdez worked for a swimming pool construction firm in Amarillo. According to Villarreal, neither has said they were quitting, tried to claim paychecks owed them or picked up money in their Amarillo bank savings accounts.

Friday, five days after their disappearance, the 1977 Ford Pinto they had taken out of Milo Center was discovered abandoned in the Buffalo Lake area. Elizondo's wallet was found in the vehicle, according to Sheriff Joe Brown, though it contained no money. No blood or any other sign of foul play was evident, he added.

The first reported sighting of Valdez was learned of earlier in the week by Pat Michael. The police sergeant had talked with David Roman, a 14-year-old Hereford boy who said he encountered Valdez outside the Star Theatre at 10 p.m. Monday, May 14.

"He said that Tommy (Valdez) was by himself with the Pinto stationwagon," reported Michael on May 18, "and talked about getting an apartment in Amarillo. David said that Jose (Elizondo) was not with him, but that Tommy seemed to be okay, and did not appear to have any problems."

Ten days later, police Lieutenant Ted Langgood had a conversation with Elizondo's brother, Rodrigo Elizondo. Mary Zapata of Brady, Rodrigo Elizondo said, had been contacted by a friend of Valdez' who reportedly saw the missing man in Graham.

The friend, Romana Cedio of Brady, told Zapata she had seen Valdez and his grandfather getting into a pickup truck. Furthermore, she claimed to have heard the grandfather say to someone, "I wish Tommy would just turn himself in and get this over with."

Another person reportedly saw Valdez and his grandfather, Bartolo Valdez, together. Through an interpreter, Mary Solis told Morgan she had seen the two May 20. That according to a report Morgan, the assistant chief of police, filed this past Thursday.

When contacted Friday, Morgan said little more had developed. An aunt of Valdez', Mrs. Buddy Nipp of Graham, when contacted by telephone said she was unaware her nephew was missing. She said she would find out what she could, however.

Brown, meanwhile, said he and his department were trying

Galindo, Hall only Walcott grads

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Eusebio Galindo Jr. and Johnny Hall attended their last day of classes at Walcott School on Thursday. Friday night, they graduated from the eighth grade.

Galindo was the valedictorian and had his three-page speech prepared well in advance. He talked about his nine years at the tiny school and of the friends he made there.

The two boys made up one of the smaller graduating classes at Walcott; last year there were four students who completed the year. They expected to have classmate John Arias march down the aisle with them, but Arias' family moved to Friona recently. He, like Galindo, had attended Walcott since kindergarten.

For Hall, his last year at Walcott was also his first. His family moved to the country from Hereford, where Hall spent his seventh grade year at Stanton Junior High.

He said he likes Walcott but misses his friends from Stanton. "I'll be glad to go back to Stanton except for riding the bus," he admitted. Blond and blue-eyed, possessed of the quiet good manners that seem only to be taught in Western Texas, Hall was a study in diplomacy as he spoke well of Walcott and fondly of Stanton as well.

"I like the teachers," he said with a smile, "but I didn't get used to the idea of such small classes."

Galindo said he will miss Walcott. "I think I got more attention here than I would have in other schools," he said. "Getting used to a bigger school will be hard, but I don't think making friends will be all that hard."

Were four last year

Both boys played on the basketball team, in starting positions. They said they had a "fair season," competing against such schools as Wildorado, Grady, Vega, Texline and Hartley.

Hall, who said he likes living in the country, plans to work on the farm this summer. His father, Larry, works for a Walcott farmer. His mother Jackie is a nurse at Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Galindo's parents are Manuala and Eusebio Galindo Sr. His father ranches. He said he likes riding motorcycles and getting together with his cousins.

The guys agreed it was "boring" not having girls in their class. They foresaw that having female classmates will be one change for the better at Stanton.

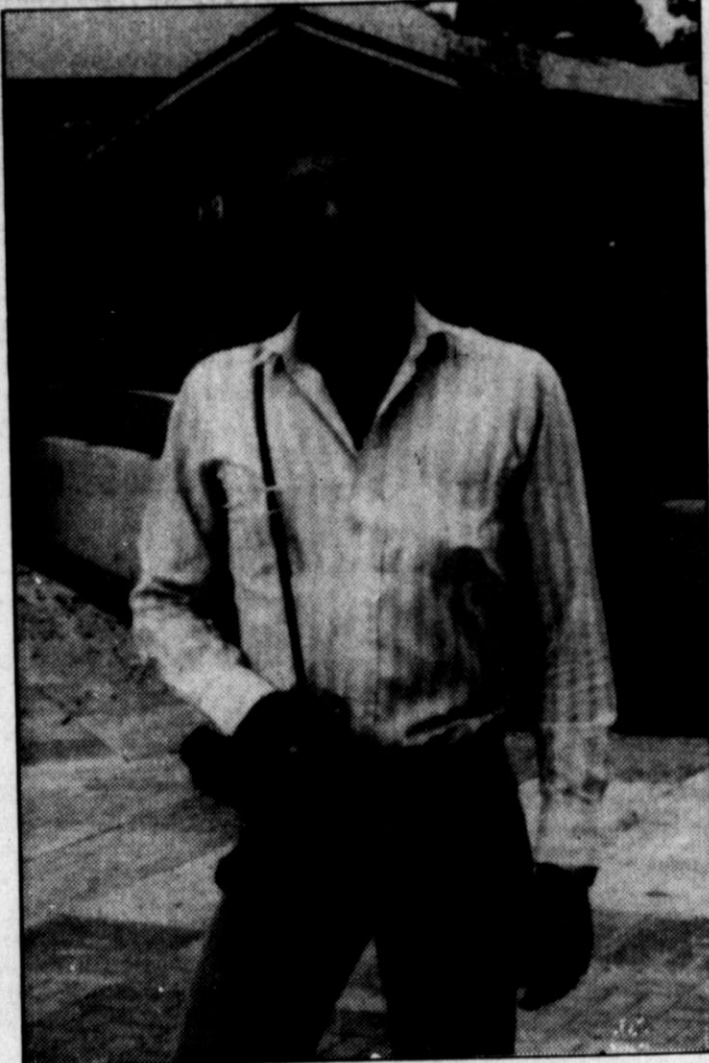

Asked if they would like for their own kids to go to Walcott, Hall thought a minute and answered, "Yeah."

"I think they would get a better education," Galindo said firmly.

The basketball team was coached by John Morrow, who also teaches American History, science, speech and health. His wife drives one of the buses.

"I like it here," Morrow said. "It's a nice change of pace from high school." He taught high school in Poolville most recently and was familiar with Walcott because he once taught in Friona.

Reward Offered

Five hundred dollars is being offered to anyone who provides information which will lead to the recovery of this man, 25-year-old Jose Elizondo. He and a younger male have been missing for three weeks. Any information concerning their whereabouts should be given to either the police or sheriff's departments.

Krueger helps out with Hance visit

By KIM THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Kent Hance supporters turned out Friday night to see their Democratic Senatorial candidate make one of his final campaign stops—but it may have been Bob Krueger who stole the show.

Wednesday, Krueger announced his endorsement of Hance, saying he "has demonstrated higher character during the campaign" than Lloyd Doggett. Hance and Doggett were to face each other in Saturday's primary runoff elections,

Both at local airport Friday with results not yet available at presstime.

Krueger, who finished a close third on May 5 but decided against demanding a statewide recount, accompanied Hance on his last-minute tour of West Texas and 6:30 p.m. stop at the Hereford Airport.

"There's only one reason why I endorsed Mr. Hance," Krueger told the gathering of nearly 50 people. "I made my decision on moral grounds."

Krueger said he was convinced Hance "is the best candidate we've got" when he decided to support him. "It would be easy for me to stand on the sidelines," he admitted, "but I want Texas to have good representation."

The one-time candidate criticized Doggett's campaign strategies, including his now well-publicized stunt of pulling a plastic spine out of his pocket and accusing Krueger of having no backbone.

"When Kent and I disagreed, we disagreed on issues," Krueger insisted. "We didn't talk personalities."

Thanking Krueger for accompanying him, Hance pointed out, "It takes some courage for him to get out and campaign for me."

"The only time I've ever taken up for an opponent is when Doggett pulled the spine out of his pocket," Hance said at the close of his brief remarks. "I ran against this guy, and I can assure you he has a backbone."

Sunday's Local Roundup

Zoning changes requested

Four zoning change requests face Hereford City Commissioners at their regular meeting slated Monday at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall, 224 N. Lee Ave.

Businesses requesting the changes - all from "D Local Retail" to "E Central Business" - are, in agenda order, Taylor Petroleum, Tice Grocery, Stillwell & Stillwell Investment Company and Lloyd Pool (Pak-A-Sak).

To follow is bids on a truck, then a request for a taxi permit. Concluding the meeting are to be matters pertaining to the disposition of park property on Moreman Street and regulations on building setback lines on state and federal highways.

Firemen answer 25 alarms

Hereford Volunteer Firemen answered 25 calls during May, a drop of three from April but enough to keep the department 23 percent busier than last year.

Through May, firemen have answered 129 alarms in 1984. After five months last year, the figure stood at 105. Of the calls last month, 15 came from within city limits while the rest were out of the county. There were six inspections and three apiece of business inspections, fires in buildings and home inspections.

Golden K Club cleaning

The Golden K Kiwanis Club is working this week on its "civic pride" project: re-landscaping a triangular divider near Stanton Junior High School.

The club is one of several that has pledged to assist the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce in its "Take Pride Today for a Proud Tomorrow" cleanup campaign.

Chamber Executive Vice President Mike Carr said Friday there are other targeted areas that could be assigned to any organization willing to help out. The chamber is also suggesting that homeowners take part by doing yardwork at their own residences.

Jay Spain completes course

Hereford Fire Marshal Jay Spain has completed what he expects to be the last phase of his training as a certified arson investigator.

Spain graduated earlier this month from the Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy in Amarillo. Completion of the eight-week course and subsequent state examinations makes Spain a certified peace officer, required by the Texas Commission on Fire Protection Personnel Standards and Education before he can be certified as an arson investigator.

Until now, Spain has gone to the fire scene to evaluate suspected arsons and determine if state investigators should be summoned to Hereford.

Others taking the course with Spain were Albert Garza and Murray Hazlett of the Hereford Police Department, Joyce Rinn of the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department and Alan Mongold and Betty Garcia of Hereford.

Spain finished fifth in the class and was voted class president.

Murders cleared by Lucas interviews

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Police have cleared 140 killings through statements issued by self-proclaimed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas, who has claimed responsibility for hundreds of slayings nationwide, a prosecutor says.

Lucas was formally sentenced to die Friday for the 1979 slaying of an unidentified female hitchhiker near Georgetown. A state district court jury ordered the sentence in March after convicting the 47-year-old drifter of a capital murder charge.

Prosecutor Ed Walsh said during Friday's hearing that police have cleared 140 killings through Lucas' confessions.

"For whatever reasons, Mr. Lucas is sincere about wanting to help authorities, and we owe it to the families of the victims to clear as many of these as we can," Walsh said.

Residents must show proof of legality

DALLAS (AP) — A letter demanding that residents of an East Dallas apartment complex provide proof they are legal U.S. residents is "discriminatory" if it was aimed only at Hispanics, a legal aide attorney says.

The management of Le Chamonix Apartments on Tuesday distributed a half-page warning on behalf of the Commonwealth Property Management of Dallas, which purchased the complex two weeks ago.

The letter said the complex's management would conduct document checks within 48 hours and residents without the required proof would be reported to federal immigration officials.

Jonathan Vickery, an attorney for the North Central Texas Legal Services, said that if the warning letter was distributed only to Hispanic tenants, then federal fair housing and civil rights laws have been violated.

Increased school spending voted

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education was to take a final vote Saturday on recommendations that both the state and local school districts increase spending for improved public schools in Texas.

The recommendations were tentatively approved Friday when the board considered legislative recommendations of state Commissioner of Education Raymon Bynum.

The 27-member elected school board, sitting Friday as a committee of the whole, approved 22-1 a recommendation by Bynum that state payments to local districts for teacher salaries and other operation costs continue to be based on personnel units — the number of teachers, administrators and other staff.

Hundreds searching for escapees

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — More than 200 law enforcement officers today searched for four death row inmates after two of their comrades were captured and police in Virginia traded gunfire with two men they believe were among the original six who escaped from a Virginia prison.

Convicted murderers Derick Lynn Peterson, 22, and Earl Clanton Jr., 30, were taken without incident here Friday night as they dined on red wine, bread and cheese in a coin-operated laundry, authorities said.

The laundry is about 25 miles from the Mecklenburg County Maximum Correction Facility, where six inmates donned guard uniforms and fooled guards with a bomb hoax Thursday night and escaped in a prison van.

Attorneys told to improve decorum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John De Lorean's lawyer labeled the government's star witness a "liar" who is cool on the stand because he "doesn't care" about untruths, and promised to grill him one more day in the automaker's drug trafficking trial.

Defense lawyer Howard Weitzman made the statement after the mounting tension in the courtroom prompted a scolding from the judge and a warning for lawyers to stop sniping at each other or go to jail.

"I'm not running a nursery school," U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi told the attorneys Friday after the acrimonious session.

"I believe in courtesy to counsel. If you think that's a sign of weakness, test me," he told defense attorneys and prosecutors after jurors had left the courtroom.

Shultz meets with Ortega

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz made a surprise visit to Managua Friday, and he and the top leader of the Sandinista junta announced an agreement to hold meetings aimed at easing Central American tensions.

Shultz made the stopover in Managua on the way home to Washington after attending the inauguration in El Salvador of President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

He met at the Managua airport with Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the ruling leftist junta, for two hours and six minutes.

At a news conference that followed, Shultz said there would be future meetings between President Reagan's special envoy for Latin American affairs, Harry Schlauderman, and a Nicaraguan official who was not identified by name.

He did not say when or where the meetings would take place.

Dutch government sets conditions

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The government agreed to deploy 48 U.S.-built cruise missiles in the Netherlands, but not until two years after NATO had planned and only if NATO still does not have an arms reduction agreement with the Soviets.

The decision by the Cabinet to deploy the missiles in 1986 was the first breakdown in NATO's schedule for deploying 672 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe. The Cabinet also said the deployment will take place if the Soviet Union adds to missiles it currently has in place.

The action was designed to placate nuclear arms foes in the country while going along with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's deployment plan.

The government expressed "disappointment," saying the Netherlands should adhere to the original schedule, which called for the Netherlands to in-

Presidents heralds close U.S.-Irish ties

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

GALWAY, Ireland (AP) — President Reagan, returning to Ireland in search of his ancestral roots, is heralding the close ties between the United States and this country.

In remarks Saturday at National University of Ireland, the president was to touch on the common themes underlying the relationship between the two countries.

The 8,000-mile trip will also take him to the 40th anniversary ceremonies of the Allied D-Day landings in France and the seven-nation economic summit in London.

On his first stop, the president arrived in early evening on Friday at Shannon, Ireland. And he immediately made it clear this part of his trip will be a sentimental look at his heritage.

In his arrival remarks, the president said, "I want you to know that for this great-grandson of Ireland, this is a moment of joy. And I'm returning not only to my own roots, I'm returning to America's roots."

Yet, the president's visit wasn't expected to be entirely a celebration of his ancestral past.

Protest groups planned demonstrations to show their dislike for U.S. policies in Central America and on nuclear arms.

One group passed out leaflets in Galway to reporters traveling with the president, saying several people intended to give up their honorary doctorates from the National University of Ireland.

They would do so, the press release said, because they "do not wish to find themselves having something in common with Mr. Reagan."

But angry protesters were far from evident in the first day of his journey.

Indeed, the Emerald Isle offered Reagan lush green fields, friendly people, pipe bands, grazing cows and sheep — and even an Irish wolfhound to welcome him at his hotel.

The sun, too, cooperated, breaking through overcast skies just before the president's plane landed at the airport.

He was welcomed by Patrick J. Hillery, Ireland's president, who gave him the traditional greeting of 100,000 welcomes. The Irish prime minister, Garret FitzGerald, also was there.

After the ceremony, the president and his wife, Nancy, went to Ashford Castle in County Mayo, where they are spending two nights. The castle, built by Anglo-Norman conquerors more than 750 years ago, now is a luxury hotel owned by Irish-American millionaire John A. Mulcahy.

Employees of the grey, stone hotel — including chefs wearing tall, starched white hats — gathered at the windows and along the driveway to wave to the president.

Also on hand was Slevin, a 5-year-old Irish wolfhound, the largest breed of dog.

His owner, Maeve Jordan-Gavagan, joked that the stoic animal was likely so impressed by seeing the president that he "will never talk to anybody again, I think."

Flood threat eases in East as thunderstorms pummel Plains

By JIM PENSIERO
Associated Press Writer

Thousands of New England residents driven from their homes after a week-long storm packing up to 9 inches of rain deluged rivers looked to the gradually clearing skies with hope as thunderstorms hammered the Plains early today with high winds and hail.

In the West, meanwhile, volunteers continued to stack sandbags from Utah to Arizona to protect homes and farms from streams swollen by melting mountain snows.

In New England, rivers were receding despite a light rain which was expected to continue until late this morning as a storm system which killed 18 people nationwide this week moved out to sea, the National Weather Service said.

In Connecticut, where the raging Connecticut and Housatonic rivers forced the evacuation of 1,300 people, 23 state roads were closed late Friday night and 244 National Guardsmen remained on duty in flood-stricken sections of Middletown and New Milford.

But Gov. William O'Neill, who earlier declared a state of emergency, said Friday the "critical period" had passed and state officials said some residents could return to their waterlogged homes during the weekend.

The Connecticut River was expected to crest at about 22 feet — 14 feet above flood stage — later today in Middletown, its highest level since 1938. The Housatonic, which crested Friday at 22.4 feet in New Milford, was expected to drop to 14 feet by today.

In Massachusetts, hundreds of farms, roads and homes remained under water early today after the Merrimack and Connecticut rivers crested late Friday.

An estimated 4,000 people were driven from their homes at the peak of the flooding and many have not returned yet, Massachusetts Civil Defense Director Tom P. Rodgers said. He said about 35 people were spending the night at Red Cross shelters in Northampton and Methuen, while others were staying with relatives and friends.

Rodgers said the week-long deluge flooded about 55,000 acres of farmland, causing an estimated $20 million in damage.

Elsewhere in the East, rain-swollen rivers were receding into their banks in eastern New York, northern New Jersey and New Hampshire.

In the Plains, a storm system packing hail and winds up to 70 mph dropped nearly an inch of rain on Fort Collins, Colo., before gradually losing strength early today.

A tornado touched down briefly about 20 miles northwest of Denver and funnel clouds were spotted near Limon, Colo., and Alexander, Kan., but no injuries or damage was reported.

In the West, flood warnings remained in effect until later today in western Colorado along the East, Arkansas and Gunnison rivers as warm temperatures melted deep mountain snowpacks.

In Arizona, officials strengthened levees along low-lying areas below the Hoover, Parker and Davis dams on the Colorado River in anticipation of stepped-up water releases next week.

Settling For Hance

Bob Krueger, who barely missed qualifying for Saturday's U.S. Senate Democratic primary runoff, was in town Friday night with candidate Kent Hance.

Krueger was backing the Dimmitt native over Lloyd Doggett. Seen with Krueger is local resident Jim Conkwright.

Injured in accident

Man's eyesight restored

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors say a 23-year-old man injured in an industrial accident had his sight saved by a "human SuperGlue" that was used to plug his leaking eye.

"His vision now is about 20-400, enough to read the big 'E' at the top of the eye chart," said Dr. James G. Keatts, an ophthalmologist. "But that's better than it was. Before all he could see were hands moving right in front of his face."

Keatts said Friday he learned of the procedure, in which the glue is made from the patient's blood, from a

West German eye specialist and thought it might help Tracy Hammon from losing the sight in his right eye.

European ophthalmologists have used the same procedure for years, Keatts said.

Two weeks ago Hammon, an industrial engineer, was injured when a heat sensor exploded in his face. A jagged piece of corrugated aluminum perforated the cornea of his right eye and lodged in the pupil, which allows light to pass into the eye's lens.

"The fragment of metal was so irregular that it had made W-shaped cuts in the cornea that looked like a zipper," Keatts said.

Removing the fragment was "pretty simple," Keatts said. For Hammon, the ordeal was not as easy.

"It was a pretty scary thing when you think you might be blind, believe me, but for a couple of days after the first operation I felt I couldn't see out of my good eye," Hammon, the father of a 2-month-old girl, told the Houston Post.

It may be three to four months before a final evaluation can be made and there is a "good chance" that Hammon may need a corneal transplant to restore his 20-20 vision, Keatts said.

Official says

Squad leaders given notice

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A top government official says two prominent security men for former presidential candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson have been warned that they may be prosecuted for death-squad killings after a newly formed commission completes its investigations.

The two, Hector Regalado and Jose Ramon Gonzalez Suvillaga, had been told by the government of former President Alvaro Magana last fall that they were suspects in a series of killings and kidnappings by rightist death squads last October.

The official said there was "no proof" of the alleged activities, but noted the killings declined after security officials talked with the two men and with several security chiefs at government ministries where a number of bodyguards were suspected of being involved in the squads.

The official, who has access to the highest sources of information available in San Salvador, asked that he not be named to avoid reprisals.

Following the December visit of Vice President George Bush to El Salvador, the U.S. Embassy reportedly requested that Salvadoran authorities send Regalado and Gonzalez abroad.

Citizens cannot be exiled under Salvadoran law, but the men reportedly were given the choice of leaving the country or facing criminal charges. Both chose to stay and work with d'Aubuisson, former national assembly president and unsuccessful presidential candidate for the ultra-rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance in last month's elections.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte, who defeated d'Aubuisson, was inaugurated Friday.

WALCOTT

The Walcott School yearbook, "The Cat" was dedicated this year to Ernest Brown. Recently named school board president, he has served on the board for 14 consecutive years.

Brown's children went to Walcott, where his grandson now attends. Nobody could be accused of caring more about Walcott School than Brown.

"His continuing interest in and dedication to the improvement of Walcott School has helped make it the school we all are proud of," reads the dedication to Brown at the front of the 48-page hard-cover volume.

Yearbook sponsor Bernice Blasingame recruited a three-member yearbook staff from among the 60 or so students attending Walcott School last year, one each from the fifth, sixth and seventh grades.

"We'll always have a yearbook," she said. "It's a tradition." Blasingame said the February deadline was a little tough, but the yearbook was ready in time for the awards ceremony earlier this month, when Brown was surprised by the announcement that he had been chosen.

"That was great," said Brown, who was lured to the ceremony under "false pretenses." Brown described it as one of those moments that "brings tears to your eyes."

Brown said he is "gun-ho" on keeping the school at Walcott, and believes maintaining a positive attitude is the key to making it work.

"It's an idea situation," said Blasingame of the small enrollment at the school. "You have time for each child."

ing to get in touch with Valdez' grandfather. It was at first believed Bartolo Valdez lived in Graham, but now Brown and Morgan believe him to rather be in Mineral Wells.

Like Morgan, Brown has been increasingly frustrated with the case. "Hell, I'm worried," he said during a brief telephone interview last Friday afternoon. "Really, you get concerned after three weeks and no positive information."

Anyone with any knowledge about the recent whereabouts of either Elizondo or Valdez should call either the police or sheriff's department, Morgan urged. Nancy Arellano, who has personally posted the award money for her brother, made the same request.

Baby elephants to come to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Along with the pin-striped suits and rallies touting the promises of the Republican Party, a dozen baby elephants will help play host to the Republican National Convention in August.

Mickey Hunt, executive vice president of the park, said several groups and businesses think it's a great idea.

"We are receiving calls almost daily from groups and businesses who want to incorporate a real live baby elephant into their themes," Hunt told The Dallas Morning News.

Meanwhile, the pack has its trunks packed in Zimbabwe, Africa, for its trip to Dallas, which is scheduled to end June 10.

Planting Shrubs

Students in Virginia Jackson's reading class at Bluebonnet School used proceeds from their monthly newspaper, Bluebonnet Times, to purchase 14 flowering shrubs for the front of the school. They also made a $50 contribution to the Save Our Statue Fund from the $216.97

People really can make difference

Many of us have probably come across a passage in a book that struck home so hard we've never forgotten it. One of our favorites is this:

"I have drunk from wells I did not dig and I have been warmed by fires I did not build."

The statement rings true when you stop to think we receive a lot of things in life that we really haven't had to earn. Put another way, we often take out more than we put in.

A lot of folks in Hereford have "been warmed by fires" they didn't build—they've taken more out of the community than they've put in. They receive benefits from the YMCA, Senior Citizens Association, a civic or study club, Kids, Inc., or other organizations—even their church—without putting much money or toil into the actions of the groups.

Or, how about some children who have grown into adulthood without remembering that their parents provided them with "water from wells they did not dig.?" The list goes on and on.

We are fortunate, however, that Hereford and Deaf Smith County has had a lot of "well-diggers" and "fire-builders." Our community has grown and prospered over the years because of these people, but we need some more folks to fill these jobs.

Applications are being accepted in your home, church, job, worthwhile community organization, or charitable agency. It's not too late for YOU to make a difference in lives you touch.

JULIAN BOND

Brown plus 30

By Julian Bond

The best words written to describe what "Brown" meant are found in Richard Kluger's book, "Simple Justice." For the American Negro, Kluger wrote:

"No more would he be a grinning supplicant for the benefactions and discards of the master class; no more would he be a party to his own degradation. He was both thrilled that the signal for the demise of his class status had come from on high and angry that it had taken so long and first extracted so steep a price in suffering."

"Brown," of course, is legal shorthand for the Supreme Court decision whose 30th anniversary was celebrated earlier this month — more properly it was Brown vs. the Board of Education, Topeka, 347 U.S. 483 (1954).

The cases that became "Brown" — from Topeka; from Clarendon County, S.C.; from Prince Edward County, Va.; and from New Castle County, Del. — had their legal origins seven years before in Jordan, S.C. That's when Levi Pearson appealed, by petition, to the Clarendon County Board of Education for school buses for his three children "and other Negro school children similarly situated."

Its real origins, however, lie in historic American racism. "Does segregation," Chief Justice Earl Warren asked in Brown, "of children in public schools solely on the basis of race, even though physical facilities and other 'tangible' factors may be equal, deprive the children of the minority group of equal educational opportunities? We believe that it does."

At the close of that decision, Warren wrote: "We conclude that in the field of public education the doctrine of 'separate but equal' has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal."

Those who celebrate Brown's 30th anniversary have largely forgotten the second decision which followed a year later. In a masterpiece of ambiguity, the affected school systems were ordered to "admit to public schools on a racially non-discriminatory basis with all deliberate speed the parties to these cases."

All deliberate speed. For many black children the 30 years from then until today have not been fast enough. The 1955 decision did not set a date for school integration, as the plaintiffs and their NAACP lawyers had hoped. They did not ask for desegregation plans from the school systems within three months, as the federal government had asked.

But in Kluger's words: "Not until the Supreme Court acted in 1954 did the nation acknowledge it had been blaming the black man for what it had done to him. His sentence to second class citizenship had been commuted; the quest for meaningful equality — equality in fact as well as law — had begun."

No one would argue, 30 years after Brown, that absolute equality has been won. An optimistic report on school integration published last week by the National Education Association gives a sober assessment.

"Racial isolation persists in the nation's largest cities; and in the states with the heaviest concentrations of Hispanic students, these students remain segregated," the NEA reports in "Thirty Years After Brown."

But there is progress too. "In 29 states, fewer than one-fourth of the Hispanic students were in predominantly minority schools in 1980. In the nation as a whole, from 1968 to 1980, black students in schools with 90 percent to 100 percent minority enrollment dropped from 65 percent to 35 percent."

"The fact is," the NEA report says, "many communities throughout the nation have successfully integrated their schools."

Thirty years later, with success hidden behind tall tales that insist, against all evidence, that busing is a failure and that school integration means disruption and decay, the issue of Brown remains overwhelmingly simple.

The NAACP brief put it so well in 1954. It said: "These infant appellants are asserting the most important secular claims that can be put forward by children, the claim to learn and grow, and the inseparably connected but even more important claim to be treated as entire citizens of the society into which they have been born. We have discovered no case in which such rights, once established, have been postponed by a cautious calculation of convenience."

That's what Brown meant then. That's what Brown means today.

SMORGASBORD GOVERNING

Big Brother is saving us again. In the near future funeral homes will be required to list a price for each service they offer and families will be able to pick just the items they want. It will be sort of Funeral by Smorgasbord. If the family wants the use of a limo then they choose that item on a long list. Maybe they should give us a choice of how deep to be buried. A three foot deep hole should cost only half of a six footer. This means the family must make even more decisions than before at a time when decisions are hard to make.

Somehow the funeral directors got singled out for this kind of scrutiny. Someone decided they were all crooks ripping people off while they were under duress. The truth is the funeral directors are an easy target to pick on. There are only 25,000 of them and they are not a strong voting block. To pick on them as the cause of the high cost of death is like fighting a mosquito in a rattlesnake pit. My mother-in-law died in 1981. It cost $1800 to bury her. We did not put on the most elaborate affair, but it was nice. We did not have to choose between a bunch of services, the whole deal was one package for $1800. Her hospital bills for the last months of her life were $55,000. How about requiring some smorgasbord deals for hospitals. I could tell you about the lawyer

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

Criticism of tax cuts unjustified

WASHINGTON — Those who opposed the 1981 tax cut began their attack by claiming that the Economic Recovery Tax Act would be wildly inflationary. As the tax cut was phased in over three years, however, inflation fell from its double-digit levels of 1979 and 1980 to less than 4 percent.

The "tax cuts cause inflation" argument was then set aside, only to be replaced by the assertion that "it won't work," meaning that the tax cut would not generate economic growth. This argument fell apart when the recovery dropped unemployment rates from 10.8 percent to 7.8 percent, and more than 5.4 million new jobs were created in 16 months.

It soon became clear that these folks were opposed to tax cuts per se and were looking for any argument. The tax cuts had brought us neither runaway inflation nor a recession — and for a little while our liberal friends were arguing for both.

As a last resort, the liberals decided to bring out the heavy artillery — the "fairness issue." It certainly seemed like a sure winner. Everyone wants to be treated fairly. Indeed, successful political movements in this country, from the American Revolution to the civil rights movement, have been fueled by the American quest for fairness. Fairness is also part of our cultural heritage.

So, the battle cry of the liberals became the "fairness issue." Tax cuts, labeled "Reaganomics," were unfair because they "took" from the poor and "gave" to the rich.

Let's examine that charge. The 1981 tax cut reduced the marginal tax rates on individual income taxes by 25 percent across the board.

Every single taxpayer saw his or her tax rates drop by 25 percent. And in 1985, tax brackets will be indexed for inflation to eliminate bracket creep.

Now, at first glance, that seems fair. It treats all taxpayers the same. The discussion, one would think, is over.

But liberal politicians have done an interesting thing to the word "fairness." Tax reform packages are held to be "fair" only if they shift the tax burden from lower-income to higher-income Americans. Recognizing that our liberal friends have an odd definition of fairness, let's accept their premises for a moment and take a look at how the tax burden shifted as a result of the 1981 tax cuts.

Even the "soak the rich" liberals should be happy.

It appears that the charge that tax cuts are unfair may have to be replaced by a new, as yet to be discredited, argument against tax cuts. I look forward to hearing what they come up with.

Public housing failed venture

It seemed a good idea 25 years ago to provide "decent housing" for slum dwellers.

So public money was allocated to build modern high-rise apartment buildings over what had been tar-paper shacks.

What went wrong? Urbanologist Pierre de Vise calls these public housing facilities "the worst institutional source of environmental blight in the nation."

Chicago has huge public housing facilities where transplanted poverty is worse off than before.

Huge buildings in which elevators seldom run. Those that do are frequently used as toilets. Or tenants are required to pay tribute to young gangsters if they want to ride.

Crime of all kinds of abounds. Mr. de Vise says six of Chicago's public housing facilities are among the 16 worst in the United States.

Chicago's Mayor Harold Washington proposes the usual politicians' response: more money.

Sociologists argue that public housing does it backward; we've tried to take people out of the slums without first taking the slums out of the people.

If numbers bore you, heed these anyway. It's your money.

The Census Bureau reports 7 million Americans living below the "poverty level" income of $9,826 per year.

That suggests if we could give each poor family $10,000 we could eliminate poverty in America.

It would cost taxpayers $70 billion to do it — but surely it would be worth that — to eliminate poverty.

If we wanted to be a bit more generous than that we could give each poor family $12,000 a year.

That would cost us $84 billion.

If we want really to be generous we could give each poor family $15,000 a year in cash.

That would cost us taxpayers $105 billion a year.

It would not really cost that much because most poor families have at least some income.

But just think, we could lift everybody out of poverty — give all poor people $15,000 a year in cash if we were willing to spend $105 billion a year for that purpose.

You're not willing? Oh, yes, you are!

Economist Walter Williams has figured out that our nation's poverty agencies — HHS and HUD and all federal, state and local social welfare — all these agencies are now spending on poor people a total of $500 billion per year!

For about one-fifth that expenditure we could make them all rich!

Former Texas Ranger

Honeycutt tears up new league

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After riding his sinkerball to the American League earned-run title last year, left-hander Rick Honeycutt is becoming just as effective as he was with the Texas Rangers last year, despite the fact he's in a new league and a new city.

Honeycutt, whom the Dodgers obtained from the Rangers last August, raised his record to 7-2 by scattering six hits and striking out three in Los Angeles' 6-2 National League victory over the Houston Astros Friday night.

"I'm still pitching my type of game," said Honeycutt, who has now won three of his last four starts and whose 1.87 earned-run average ranks second in the league.

"I'm doing the same type of things I did in the American League. Fortunately for me, they're still effective."

After spotting Houston a pair of runs in the first inning on a sacrifice fly by Jose Cruz and an RBI-single by Jerry Mumphrey, Honeycutt went on to help Los Angeles post its third win in a row and maintain its hold on first place in the N.L. West Division.

His teammates tied the score in the bottom of the first when Mike Scioscia hit a two-run single off Astros ace Nolan Ryan, then took command of the game in the sixth by scoring three unearned runs off loser Vern Ruhle (0-3).

"I got the job done with my sinker," Honeycutt said, "but I struggled a little with it early. The other guys just gave me some runs to work with, which is always good."

Even so, the two clubs might still have been playing if Ryan hadn't developed a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand in the fourth inning.

"It's just something that comes from throwing fastballs. I've been bothered with blisters my whole career," said Ryan, who has had to leave two of his last three starts early for that reason. "I thought I was pitching pretty well, but Honeycutt did a pretty good job, too."

The end came for Houston in the sixth when, with runners on first and third, Ruhle threw Bob Bailor's suicide-squeeze bunt into right field, allowing two runs to score. Bailor, who had gone to third on Ruhle's error, then scored on a single by Dave Anderson.

In the eighth, Los Angeles' Candy Maldonado hit his second home run of the year off Houston reliever Joe Sambito.

"We didn't play very well in that one inning and it cost us," said Astros Manager Bob Lillis. "Losing Ryan hurt us. It's just a problem that seems to bother him from time to time."

Los Angeles raised its record to 29-23 with the victory. Houston, which is in fifth place in the N.L. West, dropped to 20-29.

The two clubs battle again tonight as the Dodgers' Jerry Reuss (2-2) opposes Houston's Joe Niekro (2-7).

Expos 2, Pirates 0

The difference in the game was one pitch — a wild one in the ninth inning by Pirates' reliever Rod Scurry with Montreal runners on second and third. It struck out Jim Wohlford, but by the time the dust had lifted both runs had scored — the second when Scurry muffed catcher Tony Pena's throw back to him.

"Nine times out of 10, Tony catches that ball," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "Rod had a great curve ball tonight. It took something like that to beat him because they weren't going to hit the ball."

Charlie Lea won his ninth game, joining St. Louis' Joaquin Andujar as one of two nine-game winners in the NL. He allowed five hits in eight innings, allowing one runner to second.

Rick Rhoden, 4-4, gave up leadoff singles to Tim Wallach and Andre Dawson in the ninth before exiting for Scurry.

Cards 5, Mets 1

Tito Landrum, back in St. Louis after a stint in Baltimore that included a 10th inning home run that won last year's American League Championship Series, broke a 1-1 tie with a single as the Cards erupted for four ninth-inning runs.

"I don't waste my time on the bench. I watch everything that is going on and I stay competitive," said Landrum. "When Whitey (Herzog, Cardinals manager) calls on me, I'm ready. Once I get up to the plate, I'm aggressive and I look for a pitch I can hit."

Landrum hit for Joaquin Andujar, 9-4. Jesse Orosco, 4-2, was the loser.

New York's Hubie Brooks had a seventh-inning single to extend his hitting streak to a 24 games, longest in the majors this year. It also broke a club record.

Giants 11, Padres 7

Chili Davis and Brad Wellman, recalled from Phoenix on Friday, had three hits each for the Giants and Jack Clark had his 10th homer.

But the most important factor was sloppy play by the Padres, who contributed three errors in a four-run second that gave San Francisco a lead it never relinquished. Later, San Diego pitcher Floyd Chiffer had two wild pitches in the Giants' two-run sixth.

San Diego used six pitchers and San Francisco four in the 3-hour-38 minute contest.

Dodgers 6, Astros 2

Rick Honeycutt allowed only six hits and shut out the Astros after a two-run first inning and Los Angeles took advantage of two Houston errors in a three-run sixth to break a 2-2 tie.

"Every pitcher wants to get off to a start like this," said Honeycutt, whose ERA is now 1.87 after a slow start when he came over to the National League last season. "But I'm even happier about pitching well. I wanted to show I'm a better pitcher than I showed last year."

North Korea to boycott Olympics

TOKYO (AP) — North Korea announced today that it will not send a team to the Los Angeles Olympics, according to a report by the official state news agency.

A terse, two-line statement from the official Korean Central News Agency, monitored in Tokyo, made no reference to the Soviet-led boycott of the Summer Games.

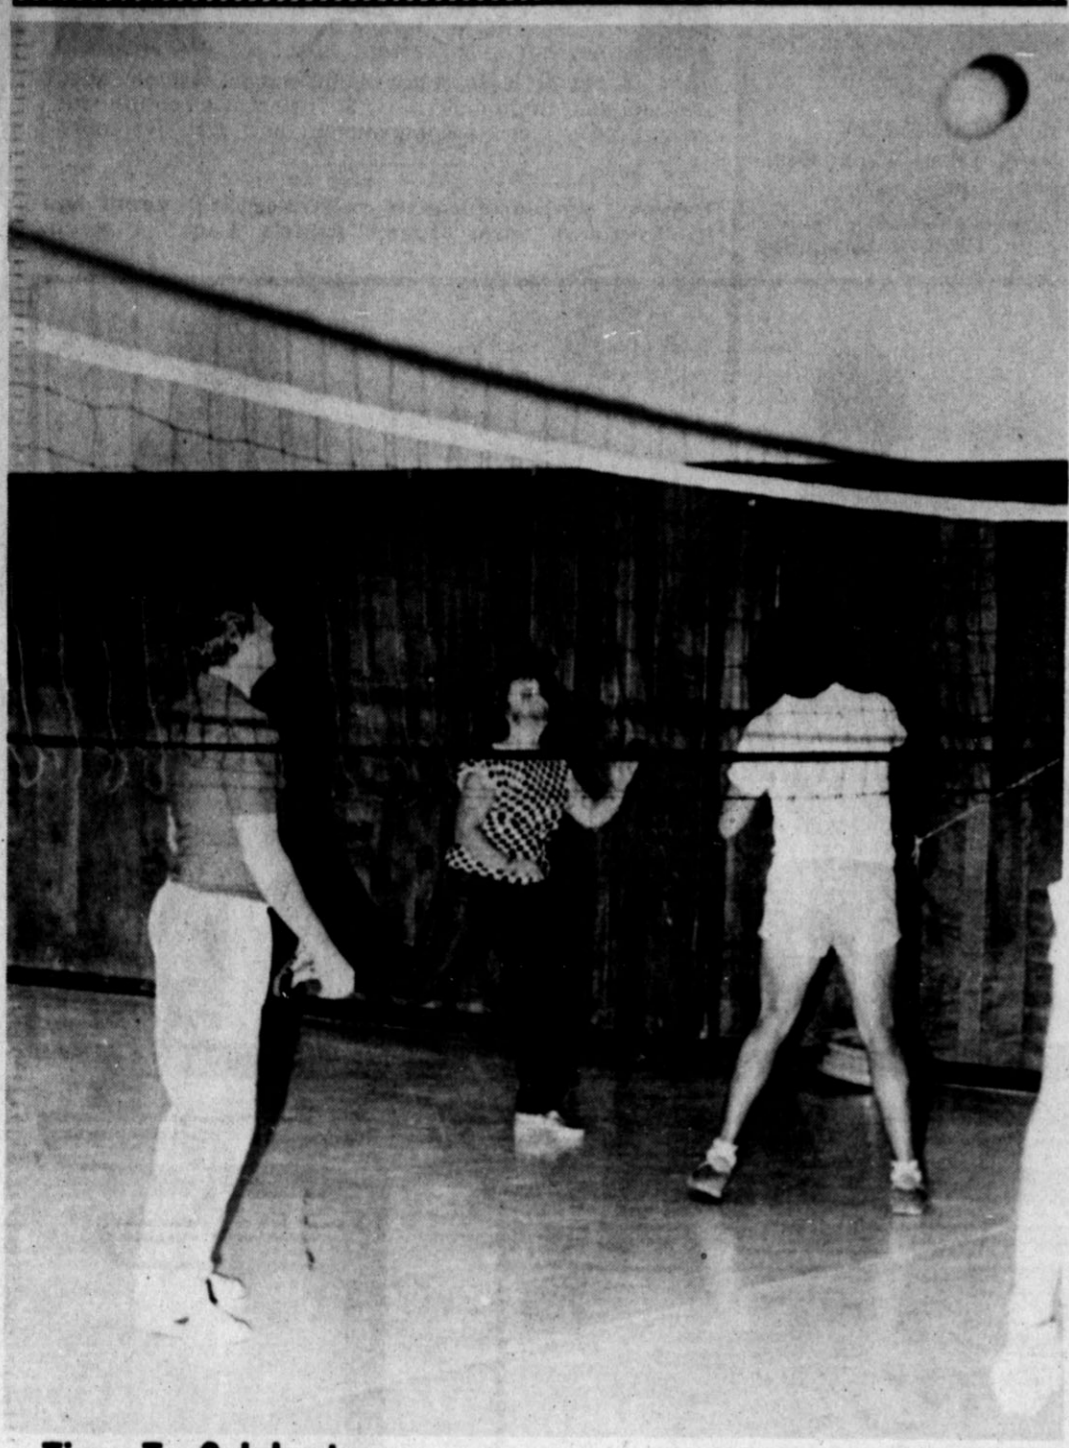

"The Olympic Committee of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea decided not to send its sports team to the 23rd Olympiad," the KCNA report said.

"It is announced in the statement of the DPRK Olympic Committee made public on June 2," the report said.

The announcement came one day after a scheduled meeting between South and North Korean officials on forming a joint North-South Olympic team failed to materialize when officials from the North failed to attend.

Today is the deadline for countries to announce their participation in the Games.

The North Korean decision brought to 15 the number of countries that have announced they will not attend the Games. Thirteen of those nations did so by following the lead of the Soviet Union, which said it would not send a team because of a lack of security in Los Angeles. Iran pulled out before the Soviet decision.

I don't know about you all but 10 months of National Basketball Association seems a little ridiculous.

Thursday the Boston Celtics tied NBA championship series at one game apiece with a 124-121 win over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The NBA season begins in September and will conclude sometime this month. The reason for this is that most of the teams are invited to the playoffs even if their record is below .500.

Who's to blame? Why it must be the fans. Nearly every playoff game has been a sellout.

What happened to the good ole days when basketball season took place during the fall and winter?

"The Natural," now most people will relate this title with a movie starring Robert Redford but here in Hereford a man has acquired this nickname through his feats on the softball diamond.

To demonstrate his awesome ability I'll set the stage at Veteran's Memorial Park Friday evening:

- We're in the second inning of the opening game of this weekend's Hereford softball tournament. St. Anthony's is battling Mision Bautista. There's two men on base. Reed Parsell steps up to the plate and grinds some dirt into his palms.

- Here's the pitch - KABOOM!!!

- It's a long drive deep left-centerfield. It's gone. Over the fence.

- For the game (Babe) Parsell knocked in six runs as St. Anthony's went on to win the contest, 18-2.

Later in the evening St. Anthony's played another match under the lights in at the Kids Inc. field. Once again Parsell gave a hitting clinic by going three for four and blasting the ball to every part of the field.

But due to occasional defensive lapses by his teammates, St. Anthony's lost by a good 10 runs. "If everyone could play like me, we'd never lose," Parsell must have thought to himself.

Two games remaining

USFL playoff spots to be decided

By The Associated Press

Despite six straight losses, the expansion Oklahoma Outlaws remain in contention for the United States Football League playoffs. And Coach Woody Widenhofer knows how the Outlaws can make it — simply cut down on turnovers and force a few of their opponents.

The Outlaws, who play host to the Chicago Blitz tonight, have given up the ball by fumble or interception 26 times in those six losses while forcing only two turnovers. Still, their 6-8 record puts them only one game away from a Western Conference wild card spot with four games left.

So in practice this week Widenhofer tried to make his runners fumble-conscious by instructing his defenders to try and strip the ball from offensive players. They tried, but there were no fumbles.

"There are not going to be any more fumbles," he said.

The Outlaws-Blitz game is one of two USFL contests tonight. In the other, Jacksonville is at Oakland.

On Sunday, Arizona is at Birmingham, Houston at Denver, Los Angeles at Washington and New Jersey at Tampa Bay.

On Friday night, Memphis edged New Orleans 20-17 and Michigan beat San Antonio 23-17 in overtime.

Alan Duncan kicked field goals of 45 and 52 yards in the final two minutes to lead the Showboats over the Breakers. His second field goal cleared the crossbar with two seconds remaining. The winning kick was set up by an interception by Mike Thomas of a pass by New Orleans quarterback Johnnie Walton.

Oliver Davis returned an interception 27 yards for a touchdown just 22 seconds into the overtime to lead the Panthers over the Gunslingers. Michigan had tied the game with 46 seconds left in regulation when Whit Taylor hit Anthony Allen with a 4-yard touchdown pass.

In Tulsa, Oklahoma will be trying to stop its losing streak against a new Chicago quarterback.

Ron Reeves will start in place of Vince Evans, who was 2-of-10 for 19 yards and two interceptions in last week's 21-17 loss to the New Jersey Generals. The Blitz is 4-10, but has won four of its last eight games after losing its first six.

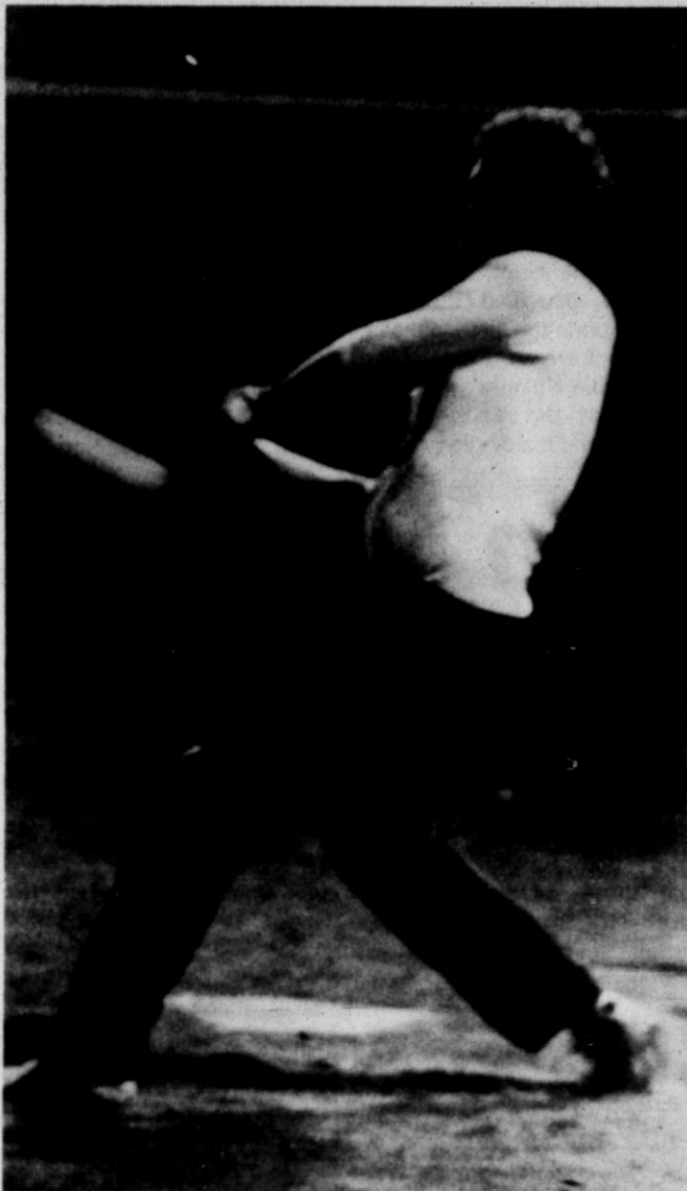

Widenhofer, meanwhile, is more concerned about getting his team together than about who plays quarterback for the opposition.

"There are several reasons why we were winning games earlier that we're not winning now," he says. "We were coming off a tough pre-season camp, our players were hungry and didn't know how good they were. We won two or three games we probably shouldn't have. We were healthy and now we've lost some guys."

And those fumbles. "People who are involved in turning over the ball are frustrated and feel badly about it," he says. "I'm frustrated too."

Oakland, meanwhile, is going in the opposite direction, albeit belatedly.

Tigers feast on world champ Birds, 14-2

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer
It was billed as the big showdown in Detroit. The Baltimore Orioles might as well not have shown up. "No more than a win. That's all it is. You can't make it any more than that," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said after the Tigers bombed the Birds 14-2, riding home runs by Alan Trammell, Chet Lemon and Lance Parrish and the combined seven-hit pitching of Dan Petry and Doug Bair. The game was the first of 14 in a row for the Tigers against Baltimore and Toronto, their two closest challengers in the American League East. Detroit, 38-9, is 5½ games ahead of the Blue Jays, who battered the New York Yankees 10-2 Friday night, and 1½ over the Orioles. "Sure, there's pressure," said Joe Altobelli, the Orioles' manager. "You can't go on a 12-game road trip and come home 2-10. You'd better do a little better than that. So far, we're 6-4. Being 1½ out is a big problem — but we're hoping we can climb back."

"We know we're not going to make up 10½ games overnight," added Cal Ripken Jr., the Baltimore shortstop. "It's a long season. We lost tonight. We'll just have to bounce back and beat them tomorrow. We've still got over 100 ballgames. If we're not in a pennant race with 100 ballgames, the Tigers deserve to win it."

Anderson, who has spent the season downplaying his Tigers' extraordinary start, observed: "You reporters might misinterpret this, but Baltimore is no more important than Seattle — and they (the Mariners) beat us three straight! All the standings are going to say tomorrow is that we're 38-9. It ain't gonna say who we beat."

"We beat Baltimore eight out of 13 last year," Anderson added. "You think they cared after they were in the World Series? All I care about is getting wins."

In the rest of the AL, Kansas City mauled Minnesota 7-1, Boston beat Milwaukee 3-1, Chicago beat Oakland 6-4, Seattle trimmed Texas 5-3 and California shaded Cleveland 5-2.

Blue Jays 10, Yankees 2
Doyle Alexander remembers all too well the stinging assessment of him by Yankees owner George Steinbrenner a little more than a year ago, when the boss called him "dangerous to the safety of his infielders."

Alexander couldn't convince the Yankee brass he still had anything left. They let him go, Toronto picked him up — and on Friday night he paid them back, spinning eight innings of five-hit, shutout ball. A couple of other Yankee castoffs provided the Blue Jays' punch. Cliff Johnson, who once wore the pinstripes, and Willie Upshaw, who used to be in the Yanks' farm system, each slugged two-run home runs. Toronto pounded Ray Fontenot for four runs in the first inning, then the two homers highlighted a five-run fourth. Royals 7, Twins 1

Willie Wilson has hit only 16 career home runs — and 13 of them have stayed in the park. "It just seems these guys keep diving for balls," he said after Dave Meier's futile attempt allowed him to circle the bases for a three-run homer in the third inning off Minnesota's Mike Smithson in the Metrodome.

One out later, George Brett hit a more conventional homer — over the wall. "When George got in the dugout I told him I wish I could go around the bases like that," Wilson said with a grin. "He said it's easier, but I said mine's more exciting."

Charlie Leibrandt, in his first major-league game since playing for Cincinnati in 1982 and his first AL game ever, scattered six hits over eight innings. Red Sox 3, Brewers 1
Bruce Hurst matched Don Sutton's five-hit pitching — and Hurst gave up a home run to Bobby Clark. But it was Sutton's misfortune to allow Mike Easler's two-run triple in the fourth jinning. "I'm staying ahead of the hitters and I'm getting my breaking ball over — just throwing strikes," said Hurst, who has won his last three starts and gone the distance each time. "That always helps anybody, I think."

White Sox 6, A's 4
Harold Baines, Vance Law and Greg Walker hit two-run homers in Chicago to offset Joe Morgan's solo shot and Bruce Bochte's two-run blast for the A's off Tom Seaver. Lary Sorensen gave up all three of the homers by the White Sox to absorb his eighth consecutive loss. Mariners 5, Rangers 3
Ken Phelps' sixth homer of the season, a tie-breaking shot in the eighth inning, and 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief by Dave Beard helped the Mariners beat the Rangers in Texas. Dave Tobik gave up Phelps' blast and another run in the ninth on Spike Owen's double and Phil Bradley's single.

Americans win in French Open

PARIS (AP) — Everyone complained, John McEnroe was penalized and the soft red clay of the French Open tennis tournament continued to play a big role. The top-seeded American men — John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Jimmy Arias — are still in the race for the Grand Slam title after victories Friday.

But no American man has won the French Open singles title since Tony Trabert successfully defended his crown in 1955. The "book" on today's U.S. pros is that their game — perfected on cement, fast artificial surfaces and hard-packed American clay — simply isn't suited to the slow-motion bounces of European clay.

Connors, seeded third here, says it would take him "five or six weeks" of practice on the soft surface to prepare properly to play the French. "Unfortunately, with my family and my other commitments, I don't have the time," he said. Connors was scheduled to face qualifier Martin Jaito of Argentina today in a third-round match.

In other matches today, second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd played Larissa Savchenko of the Soviet Union, while Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, No. 2 seed in the men's draw, met Paul McNamee of Australia.

Arias, seeded fifth and considered America's best all-around clay court player, beat Italy's Claudio Panatta 7-6, 6-3, 6-3 in their third-round match Friday, but later conceded that the mushy ground at Paris' Roland Garros stadium is "probably not my favorite surface."

U.S. SOYBEAN OIL EXPORTS may get a boost as the result of work being done on a new variety by scientists at Iowa State university. The problem, according to the Iowa researchers, is that linolenic acid can cause soybean oil to have an off flavor. This is prevented in the U.S. by processors use of the hydrogenation process. In countries where hydrogenation is not used, this flavor problem has resulted in decreased exports from the U.S. The Iowa team reports on a natural soybean oil they have found which contains less linolenic acid. The new line reportedly has a linolenic acid level below three percent. Tests have indicated a three percent level was acceptable. This development could open up new European markets for U.S. oil as well as new uses for soybean oil in domestic markets.

Norman builds golf lead

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — A red-hot Greg Norman says he's going to put the first two rounds of the $400,000 Kemper Open behind him and play like everyone's even. He better keep an eye on rookie Brad Faxon.

Norman, the Australian who has won 29 titles around the world but none on the American PGA Tour, fired his second 68 over the 7,173-yard, par-72 Congressional Country Club course Friday to build up a commanding eight-stroke lead until the 22-year-old Faxon, who turned pro last July, caught fire late in his afternoon round to pull within four strokes of the leader.

For a while, it appeared that if Norman were to have rounds on Saturday and Sunday in which he didn't have anything to complain about in his game, he would have run away from the field. "I hit the ball better from tee to green today but I didn't putt as aggressively as I would have liked," he said

Farm industry still plagued by drought

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Drought conditions continue to plague much of Texas' agricultural industry although recent rains have boosted crops and pastures in some sections of the state, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Agricultural conditions have improved greatly over southern, coastal and eastern areas, and pastures as well as late planted crops are responding to rains that fell about a week ago.

However, some early planted corn and grain sorghum was too far along to benefit from the moisture, he said. Some drought-stressed corn and grain sorghum in coastal areas has already been cut for hay or grazed out by cattle, Carpenter said.

In the parched western areas and plains, many farmers continue to look for rain to plant cotton and grain sorghum. In west central and central counties, farmers need rain to plant peanuts.

Most of the irrigated cotton has been planted in the South Plains and in Far West Texas. While some dryland farmers will wait for rain to plant, others are "dusting in" seed, hoping that rains will come soon, Carpenter noted.

The state's wheat harvest is making good progress, with some harvesting now under way in West Central Texas and in the Rolling Plains. Yields have generally been fair to poor due to the spring drought. Much of the wheat acreage has been baled for hay or grazed out this year due to poor grain prospects and the need for livestock feed.

Harvesting of early peaches is under way over much of the state, with the crop looking good. Onions, green peppers, cantaloupes and melons are moving to market in the Rio Grande Valley.

Ranchers in western areas are continuing to battle drought conditions, said Carpenter. That means a continuation of livestock feeding and marketing.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Wheat is maturing, with prospects good on the irrigated crop but poor on the dryland acreage. The corn crop is off to a good start and is being irrigated. Farmers have planted some cotton and grain sorghum, but most are waiting for rain. Baling of alfalfa and wheat hay continues. Most cattle are in good shape.

SOUTH PLAINS: Planting of cotton and grain sorghum continues. Most of the irrigated cotton crop has been planted but dryland planting is lagging due to dry conditions. Some farmers are "dusting in" seed with the hope that rain will come soon. Wheat is maturing, with the irrigated acreage in good shape. Most ranges remain in poor condition.

ROLLING PLAINS: Most farmers are continuing to wait for rain to plant cotton. Wheat is maturing rapidly, with some early harvesting under way. Early yields are averaging 10 to 15 bushels per acre. Much of the wheat acreage has been grazed out or baled for hay. Stock water is extremely short and livestock have little grazing.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat harvesting is under way and yield prospects are generally good. Most crops and pastures need more rain. Some first cuttings of hay are under way. Early peaches are ripening and the crop looks good. Most livestock are in good shape.

NORTHEAST: Recent rains gave a big boost to crop and livestock conditions. Wheat harvesting is about to start; crop prospects generally are good. Hay baling is resuming after rain delays; hay yields and quality remain low. Early peaches are being harvested.

Supplies dipping

Soybean boom might come

COLLEGE STATION — Continuing reductions in soybean supplies could create active trading and push prices up.

"Total available soybean supplies now stand at 735 million bushels," according to Johnny Feagan, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "Prices should stay strong until demand is reduced by higher prices and new soybean crops start moving to market."

However, competing grains such as corn and wheat could keep bean prices in check. In fact, Feagan said, corn supplies and use alone could lower soybean prices in the near future.

Soybean meal stocks are up by 15 percent over a month ago, which indicates that both domestic use and exports are down. Higher prices per ton have forced users to reduce or shift to other forms of protein in their feeds, the economist said.

"The strong dollar also provided a basis for importers to shift to other countries for FAR WEST: Scattered rains of a week ago have boosted ranges in a few locations, but a general rain is still needed. A little cotton remains to be planted along with a few vegetables.

WEST CENTRAL: Drought conditions continue to plague farmers and ranchers. Most farmers are still waiting for rain to plant cotton and grain sorghum as well as peanuts. Wheat is maturing; a few fields have been harvested, with poor yields. Feeding and marketing of livestock continue due to lack of grazing. Stock ponds and city lakes are extremely low. Early peaches are being harvested.

CENTRAL: Farmers are continuing to plant hybrid sudans for a potential hay crop. Wheat harvesting continues, with fair to poor yields. Irrigated peanut farmers are watering their land in preparation for planting while dryland farmers are looking for rain. Most crops and pastures continue to need rain.

EAST: Recent heavy rains and some hail damaged vegetable crops. However, the moisture gave a big boost to pastures and crops. Oats are maturing and crop prospects are good in some counties. Early peaches are being harvested. Livestock conditions generally are good.

UPPER COAST: Heavy rains a week ago boosted late planted crops and pastures but came too late to help early planted corn and grain sorghum. Farmers are planting peanuts and soybeans as fields dry. Wheat harvesting is winding down, with good yields in some counties. Pastures are improving rapidly.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Wheat harvesting is about complete, with fair to poor yields. Corn is tasseling and grain sorghum is heading; recent rains helped some fields but more moisture is needed in other locations. Cotton is making good progress. Pastures have improved due to the rains. Early peaches are being harvested.

SOUTHWEST: Drought conditions persist despite some scattered rains. Rainfall for the year is 30 percent of normal. Most dryland crops have not been planted due to dry conditions; about 70 percent of the dryland peanut crop will not be planted. Harvesting of onions and cabbage is in full swing. Livestock feeding and marketing continue.

COASTAL BEND: A few counties have good moisture but most of the region remains dry. Cotton is setting bolts. Grain sorghum has headed. Most soybeans have been planted and are up to stand. The corn crop has been hard hit by the dry spring. A general rain is still needed for late crops and pastures.

SOUTH: Crop and range conditions have improved with recent rains. Corn, cotton and grain sorghum are making good progress. Cattle conditions should improve as more grazing becomes available. Harvesting of onions, green peppers, cantaloupes and melons is active.

Costs remain steady

Product payments begin to drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — After seven months of rising or steady prices, farmers are seeing a decline in the amount paid for their products.

Costs for farm supplies and living expenses, however, are remaining steady, according to preliminary figures for May in the Agriculture Department's latest monthly price report.

Farmers experienced a 1.4 percent drop in prices for their crops and livestock in May from April's record high, though they were an average of 5.1 percent above last year at this time. Farmers' costs were unchanged from April, which was 3.1 percent higher than May of 1983.

In terms of the index the department maintains, the prices farmers received were 144 percent of a 1977 base price average used for comparison, down from 146 percent in May. The prices-paid index was 166 percent of the 1977 base.

Prices farmers receive, as shown by the index, rose or remained steady every month since October, when the index was 134 percent, until turning around in May.

Department officials said they did not attach much significance to a single month's report, especially after a string of increases.

Much of the decline was the result of lower prices for eggs, cattle, onions, tomatoes and milk — and higher prices for oranges, soybeans and cotton were not enough to make up for the declines.

Prices for fuel, fertilizer, chemicals and family items all rose during May, but these were offset by lower prices for replacement livestock to leave the prices-paid index unchanged.

Among specific product categories, livestock and livestock product prices fell 4 percent during the month but overall still were 0.7 percent above what they were in May 1983. Crop prices as a whole were up 2.9 percent during May and averaged 12 percent above the year-ago mark.

The poultry and egg index fell 14 percent following a 4 percent increase for April. That left those prices still 20 percent higher than they were a year earlier.

A big part of that decline came in the prices of eggs at the farm, which averaged 68.9 cents per dozen, down 22.5 cents from April.

Vegetables also showed a big drop, with the index 17 percent below the April figure and 20 percent below the May 1983 level. Carrots and sweet corn were, along with onions and tomatoes, pushed down vegetable prices.

Fruit, however, rose for the second straight month, jumping 20 percent in May to leave the index 25 percent ahead of what it was a year earlier. Oranges led the way while lemons and strawberries also commanded higher prices in the market. Grapefruit and pears were lower.

Summer color tips offered by expert

COLLEGE STATION — With the heat of summer, the gardener and many plants tend to go on vacation, often leaving the landscape void of color.

However, some outstanding colorful summer annuals and perennials will provide color and beauty with a minimum of care during the hot days of summer, said a landscape horticulturist.

The vinca or periwinkle is one flower that thrives where many would perish, according to Everett Janne with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. This robust summer annual demands little attention, yet provides a mass of color all summer. The All-American variety "Polka Dot" will serve as a summer ground cover with its low mass of blooms while the deep lavender "Little Linda" and the pink and red "Delicata" provide variety.

Zinnias have a sure summer heat tolerance and ability to grow under adverse conditions, Janne noted. Even though zinnias have been around for many years, many new and improved varieties offer vivid colors and durability. Zinnia blooms now range in size from tiny border hybrids to giant Dahlia types.

The Gloriosa daisy is a summer perennial, returning each summer to open its typical daisy blooms of rich orange, yellow, pink and mahogany. The large graceful heads of the Gloriosa daisy are supported on strong stems which are excellent for cutting, the horticulturist said.

Portulaca is unsurpassed as a summer border or rock garden plant, adds Janne. Often called moss rose, this summer annual prefers the sun and will tolerate dry, hot conditions to produce warm, vivid blankets of color. For continuous summer production, sow seed at six-week intervals.

Salvia is a persistent annual with bright scarlet or blue spikes of bloom throughout the hot summer until cut down by frost. The rich red varieties are most showy when displayed against a background of green or white, Janne suggested. Cut faded blooms often to encourage more growth.

Summer or late cosmos produces rich yellow or orange blooms from mid-summer to late fall and demands little or no care. "Sunset" and "Goldcrest" varieties produce brilliantly colored blooms. Cosmos may need staking in windy areas.

Marigolds may be planted from early spring well into summer. Many improved varieties offer a wide range of plant and bloom sizes as well as color variations.

Congress asked to help

Long-life milk bombs on market

WASHINGTON (AP) — About two years ago, a few U.S. dairy companies introduced a new product they hoped would win quick approval from consumers — milk specially treated to stay on the shelf for months, without refrigeration.

But the product — known as UHT milk, for the ultra-high-temperature process used to treat it — has been slow to catch on. Sales have been adding 1.5 percent to 2 percent to sales of regular milk products in most markets, instead of a hoped-for 3 percent, according to one maker, Dairymen Inc. The cooperative's Savannah, Ga., UHT milk plant is operating at just half its capacity.

Faced with that problem, the company's lobbyists approached members of Congress for a favor. Would they add to a farm bill then being drafted a provision requiring the federal government to buy up some of the surplus milk and donate it to needy third-world countries?

Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., agreed to offer the provision, and in March won passage on the Senate floor and in a House-Senate negotiating committee. Dairymen Inc. is based in Louisville, in Huddleston's home state, and has been generous in its campaign giving to members of Congress.

The provision set up a two-year pilot program under which the government bartered dried milk from its stockpile in return for 40,000 metric tons of UHT milk for donation to needy countries. That's about 5.1 million gallons a year.

Huddleston and other supporters said his amendment would help reduce the Commodity Credit Corp.'s stocks of nonfat dry milk, bought up as part of the dairy price support system, and would help alleviate malnutrition in countries where finding clean water to reconstitute dried milk is a problem.

But the Reagan administration objected, saying the measure would be ineffective and wasteful.

Agriculture Department economist William Leshner noted that 150,000 tons of dried milk already are being shipped abroad each year for hunger relief under the "Food for Peace" program. Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., attacked the idea, saying milk shipped in liquid form would cost far more to transport. "It's going to turn out to be $2.89-a-gallon milk," he complained during the House-Senate negotiations. "It's a bad idea, and it's going to come back on us."

To travel fast overland, the penguin lies on its stomach and slides over the ice, using its wing flippers to push off.

SG 688 offers needed characteristics for today's farmers. Earlier maturity with high yields, make it a competitor to longer maturing varieties. After 2 years competition in the fields, SG 688 has shown its outstanding yieldability against all comers, dryland or irrigated. Especially bred for the severe weather conditions of the Southwest, this hybrid will be a favorite in those areas where water is a limiting factor. If you want yields to rival what you have produced in the past, in less time, with less irrigation water, here's your hybrid.

Cabin owners must vacate Apache land

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

HAWLEY LAKE, Ariz. (AP) — This quiet White Mountain resort is witnessing the birth of a new business: the cottage-moving industry.

One by one, summer cabins and year-round homes snugled among the aspens, firs, pines and spruce trees in an 8,200-foot-high corner of the 1.6 million-acre Fort Apache Indian Reservation are disappearing.

Two homes have been hauled out by professional house-movers, the vanguard of an expected exodus as residents' 25-year leases — some costing as little as $40 a year — start to expire, beginning today.

The White Mountain Apache Tribe, citing "staggering" losses, has refused to renew the leases, and the homeowners have no legal recourse. Their choice is simple — move 'em or lose 'em. Moving costs are expected to average $7,000 to $8,000 a house.

Of the 410 homesites, 65 leases with 63 homes expire this year. Another 44 will be up in 1985. By 1988, 290 will expire. The last comes due in the year 2001.

Helen Johnson, a middle-age college guidance counselor who has seven years left to go on a lease of the house that she shares, said: "I don't regret one minute we've had here — but I do regret that I can't have more."

Non-Indians have lived around the picturesque 250-acre man-made lake in east-central Arizona since June 1959, when the Apaches issued the first leases.

Both residents and Tribal Chairman Ronnie Lupe describe the resort as a "paradise."

"It's a beautiful place...it compares with any resort in the country, in the world," Lupe said.

Stocked with trout, the lake has been the focal point for the people who put up humble cabins initially and, in many instances, gradually converted modest dwellings into luxurious structures, some in the $150,000 to $200,000 range.

Homeowners said that they invested their time and money at Hawley Lake because they had verbal or written assurances that the tribe would renew the leases.

"The crux of the whole thing is that at the time we signed the lease, we were told that it would be renewed at the end of the 25 years, nothing to worry about," said Howard Rose, 73, president of the Hawley Lake Homeowners Association and one of a handful of year-round residents.

"We all feel that we're getting a real raw deal out of it," he said.

But Ellsworth Hanson, who has several years remaining on his lease, said he was grateful to Lupe "for the privilege of living up here — the garden spot of the world.

... Even if I have to move off I'm thankful for the (five) years I've had up here."

Lupe said the fixed-rate leases — which initially ranged from $40 to $130 a year — don't "say anything about renewal."

Losses to the White Mountain Apaches have been "staggering," he said. Lease fees initially averaged $32,000 to $50,000, and only recently, with reassignment of some leases, produced annual income of about $87,000.

Tribal attorney Robert C. Brauchli estimated the investment loss to the tribe as "probably in the millions of dollars," considering that privately owned lakeside lots in nearby Pinetop sell for $50,000 to $60,000.

Lupe is angry because the homeowners hired a lawyer and because some tried "a tactic that I do not think has any decency or respect" — lobbying to get Congress to take the resort from the tribe and give it to whites living there.

The association last year proposed raising average annual rental per lot to $702, for a total of $365,000, if the leases were renewed. The tribe declined.

For eight years the tribe offered to renew residents' leases, but revoked its offer in 1977, saying the leases were "not in the (tribe's) best interests, both culturally and financially."

Rose said a former president of the homeowners' association never informed the members of the tribe's offer. But Lupe contends the association in fact rejected the tribe's offer.

"They've got no beef coming... They lived up there for nothing for 25 years. To me, that's a lifetime," Lupe said.

"It's not the White Mountain Apache Tribe chasing off a bunch of white people. This is not the case. It's just the economics of a lousy arrangement for 25 years that have really killed my tribe."

What will happen to the resort? Lupe said options range from letting the land revert to its natural state for benefit of both Indians and tourists to full-fledged resort development.

"But just to have that land and walk in the quiet pine trees with nobody around is a priceless million-dollar feeling to an Apache," Lupe said. Residents whose homes can't be moved could donate them to the tribe for a tax writeoff or try to sell them, Brauchli said.

Although homeowners could present their case to a tribal court, which has jurisdiction over contracts between the tribe and non-Indians, no one has pursued that course, Brauchli said.

On the whole, he said, he doesn't think the residents have had a very good relationship with the Apaches. "Basically it's been their private Shangri-la," Brauchli said.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, June 3, the 155th day of 1984. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 3, 1963, Pope John XXIII died at the age of 81, ending a reign marked by innovative reforms in the Roman Catholic Church.

On this date:

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands, now known as New York.

In 1808, Jefferson Davis — who would become the only president of the Confederacy — was born.

In 1937, the year after he abdicated as king of Britain, the Duke of Windsor married Wallis Warfield Simpson in a ceremony in France.

In 1965, astronaut Edward White became the first American to walk in space during the flight of Gemini 4.

In 1981, Pope John Paul II left a Rome hospital and returned to the Vatican exactly three weeks after he was shot in an assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square.

Ten years ago: Former Nixon aide Charles Colson pleaded guilty to a charge of trying to obstruct justice and influence the trial of Daniel Ellsberg.

Collier, Reddinger vows exchanged Saturday

Dana Stephanie Collier and Rodney L. Reddinger were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at Wesley United Methodist Church with the Rev. Jesse Hodge, pastor, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doyal L. Collier of 406 W. Third and the bridegroom is the son of Ray Reddinger of 741 Ave. H and Annabelle Reddinger of Lebanon, Pa.

The church altar was decorated with two baskets of lavender and white silk roses, mixed with white stephanotis and greenery, and seven brass candlesticks with lavender tapers lining each side of the altar rail.

The unity candle stood on a wood pedestal which was encircled with purple violets and greenery with purple and lavender streamers. Two small, white tapers flanked the candle, and the family pews were marked with lavender pew bows.

Serving her niece as matron of honor was Mrs. Terry Collier, Donna Scott was bridesmaid.

Clifton McElhaney was best man and Jerry Funk was groomsmen. Escorting guests were Terry Collier, the bride's uncle, and Trace Taylor.

Deilya Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Olson, was flower girl and Mitchell Wagner, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Wagner, was ring bearer.

The bride's brother, Colton Collier, and Dawn Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Olson, lit candles during the ceremony.

Mrs. Phil Coker and Tim Riley sang principal wedding selections, "Flesh of My Flesh," "You and I" and "The Wedding Song." They were accompanied by Mrs. Larry Boston, organist, and Francis Rikenbaugh, pianist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of nylon organza and re-embroidered chantilly lace over bridal taffeta. It was designed with a Victorian neckline, empire waist, long bishop sleeves and skirt.

Inserts of lace, enhanced with tiny seed pearls and sequins, complemented the neckline, bodice, sleeves and skirt. A ruffle encircled the hemline and the full back ended in a sweeping chapel-length train. The bridal gown was borrowed from Mrs. Terry Collier.

She had the traditional something new, something blue, something borrowed and two pennies in her shoe made in 1964 and 1967, the couple's birthyears.

Her chapel-length veil of bridal illusion was trimmed in scalloped imported lace attached to a bandeau of re-embroidered lace enhanced with seed pearls. The veil was made by her mother and grandmother.

She carried a silk cascading bouquet of lavender and light purple roses with white stephanotis and greenery. It was accented with a white lace bow with white lace and lavender and purple silk streamers.

The bride's jewelry consisted of a diamond necklace and earrings belonging to her grandmother.

Bridal attendants were attired in mid-calf lavender dotted Swiss dresses with lace trim decorating the flounced off-the-shoulder sweetheart necklines. The hemlines ended in gathered ruffles and lavender satin ribbons were tied at the waistlines.

They also wore white picture hats trimmed with lace that matched their dresses and small knots of lavender roses attached to the lavender streamers. They each carried long stemmed lavender roses with white stephanotis secured with satin streamers.

The flower girl and candle lighters dresses were of lavender dotted Swiss, fashioned with flounced necklines, puffed sleeves and ruffled hemlines. They also wore matching headbands of dotted Swiss with lace bows.

The flower girl carried a basket of lavender roses and carnations and white stephanotis.

The male candlelighter wore a blue suit, white shirt and blue tie.

Sandy Cagle invited guests to sign the guest book at the reception held in the church fellowship hall. The table was decorated with the bride's throw-away bouquet the wedding book and white plume pen. A basket of net rice bags was also placed on the table.

Mrs. David Wagner served cake and Mrs. DeWitt Olson poured punch and coffee. Others assisting included Eleanor Hudspeth, Shaundale Beavers and Mrs. Ronnie Wagner.

The reception table was covered with a white lace cloth and lavender overlay. It was centered with the bride's bouquet and matching silver candlesticks holding lavender tapers. Coffee was served from the bride's family's silver service and lavender pineapple punch was served from a crystal punch bowl.

Lavender roses decorated the two-layer white cake which was arranged above a fountain by pillars above the bride and groom's cake which was adorned with miniature bride and bridegroom figurines standing in front of a lattice work background with a gold cross. Stairways ran down from the top layer to two separate cakes and figurines graced the stairways.

Leaving for a wedding trip to points of interest in Texas and New Mexico, the bride wore as her traveling costume a cotton lavender and white striped shirtwaist dress with white accessories and a silk corsage of lavender and white roses with lavender ribbons.

The couple will make their home at 210 Ave. H.

The bride will be a junior student at Hereford High School this fall and her husband, a 1982 graduate of Lebanon High School in Lebanon, is employed by Hereford Uniform and Linen Supply and is a Hereford volunteer fireman.

Out-of-town guests represented Purcell, Okla., and Scottsbluff, Neb.

Color failure problem in fabrics

COLLEGE STATION - A national textile laboratory found color failure to be the number one problem of fabric manufacturers.

Garments and fabrics show signs of color failure when they become faded or streaked, according to Becky Saunders, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Bright or dark colored material loses its luster and color transfers from prints onto backgrounds or other designs. Changes in color will be most noticeable along garment edges, folds, creases or areas of wear.

"Home sewers should prewash all washable fabrics before sewing," says Saunders. Any loss of color can be detected early and then the fabric can be discarded or used in another way.

When buying completed garments, keep in mind that the garment may not retain its original color.

Saunders recommends following the instruction on the care label to help prevent the problem from occurring.

TRAVEL

Along with

Joan Coupe

If you have a reservation on an international flight, most airlines require that you confirm it at least 72 hours before departure. This is required only on scheduled flights. Reconfirmation is generally not required on charter flights. If you fail to reconfirm, your reservation may be cancelled and your seat sold to someone else. This may be an unnecessary warning for a Tuesday afternoon flight during the offseason but, for a weekend flight during the height of the summer, losing your seat is a real possibility. Also, if you get "bumped" because the airline sold more tickets than it had seats, you will be compensated if you have a reconfirmed reservation.

Check prices for high and low season, especially if you can be flexible in your travel schedule.

Today with so many new airline schedules and rates appearing almost daily travel arrangements have become even more confusing than ever before. At HEREFORD TRAVEL CENTER we can take all the guess work out of your travel plans so see us first...you'll be glad you did. We are located at 144 W. 2nd, 364-6813. With each airline ticket purchased through us the traveler will receive $25,000 life insurance coverage at no additional cost. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8:30-5:30, Sat. 9-12.

Louise's Latest

By LOUISE WALKER
County Extension Agent

About a month ago, I got the urge to learn to fly. That was my goal for the summer of '84. The very day I got my urge, my husband was talking to my soon-to-be flying instructor. As I mentioned my yearning during the middle of chicken-fried steaks, my husband was anxious to set me up for lessons. After dinner, with dirty dishes on the table, we journeyed to the airport and made arrangements for my new endeavor.

Let me remind you I had 3.8 hours of instruction in 1973. My instructor did not charge me for the lessons. He also taught in my husband's little plane. How much better deal can you get? But I was dumb and didn't take advantage of the opportunity. Now I'm interested when I have to pay.

Conservatism is a milk word describing my theory of economics. David (husband) was very deceiving when telling me how much a pilot's license would cost me. He missed the cost of my instructor's fee by $5 per hour. He forgot to tell me I had to have another 20 hours of flying time after soloing. Financially, I was one quarter of the way into the program before I found out I had to pay for a check ride and written test.

Let me tell you about the flying experience itself. It's the hardest work I've ever done. My friend said, "but they make it look so easy on television." I hope someday it will be easy for me. But there are about fifty things for three of the senses to do - you, feel, or touch, see, and hear. Don't know why they don't taste while flying.

Touch - all I hear is fly by the seat of your pants. Well, I'm having a hard time telling my seat what to do when I don't even know myself. Back to touch, the calves of my legs were throbbing one night from so much touch of the rudder pedals and brakes. My shoulders hurt about an hour of touching controls and instruments.

Not to hear - if an engine is running, it's running and that's it. Now I'm learning it sounds different when it's idling or in full power. You can also hear and feel a stall (that's when you're making all the preliminaries to crash). My theory, if you're gonna crash, you surely want to hear and feel so you can get right with the Lord on your way down.

Now to seeing, you wouldn't believe all you're supposed to see at one time. Gotta keep the wings level, the horizon level, airspeed at such and such, altitude at a certain spot, then you look at a geismo (instructor like to call it a directional gyro) as you make a 45 degree turn, then you'll set a radio, and then a look at rate of decline or incline.

As I work so hard trying to get it all together, each lesson my instructor gives me one more thing to do. Know map reading while flying is coming and only the Lord knows what else.

The few times I have had her on my own, the motion of the propeller has a tendency to pull the plane to the right (they call it torque). I have a tendency to turn the plane to the right so we have real problems. I have landed her hard because I didn't bother to use the rudder pedals.

My instructor has also indicated I'm a slow learner because of my advanced years. He seems to think high school kids catch on faster. What does he expect after five hours of instructions?

A fringe benefit of flying, it helps me rid my body of impurities like perspiration. I actually do more than perspire - I just plainly sweat. I'm getting so relaxed now that my palms are the only thing that seats overtime.

Ground school is another ballgame. That's when I'm learning my flying lingo. Every hobby or occupation has its own lingo. I am the only female in the class and the only one over 40 except my instructor (I think). Last week we all stayed about after class. The men told their war stories. That night I couldn't sleep for fear I would stall and spin during my first solo. And if that happens, I won't be around to write another Louise's Latest. I'm not so sure I will ever be able to fly an airplane all alone-with just the Lord and me.

When I'm in total command, maybe I'll have more to tell you. Until then - good day!

MRS. GARY WAYNE RUCKMAN
...nee Pamela Jo Bell

Bell, Ruckman married here Saturday evening

Pamela Jo Bell and Gary Wayne Ruckman exchanged wedding vows at Wesley United Methodist Church Saturday evening with the Rev. Jesse Hodge, pastor, officiating.

The altar table was decorated with a bouquet of gladiolus and red carnations flanked by white candles. Red tiered candles adorned the organ and piano.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy D. Bell and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Ruckman, all of Hereford.

Susan Bell, the bride's sister, served as maid of honor and Jeff Streun was best man. Serving as ushers were Ronny Collier and Keith Birdwell. Jami Bell, the bride's sister, was flower girl.

Mrs. Phyllis Boston, organist, played pre-wedding selections and the wedding march and bridal chorus, and Mrs. Liz Hodge, pianist, accompanied Mrs. Georgia Riley and Jay Hodge as they sang "Wedding Prayer" and "Time for Joy."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long, white, polyester gown borrowed from her cousin, Cincy Keenan. The dress was overlaid with sheer polyester extending to a chapel-length train. It was designed with fitted empire waist, keyhole neckline trimmed with lace, and long leg-o-mutton sleeves ending at the wrists with loop and button closings.

Her fingertip-length veil was attached to a crown headpiece trimmed with beads and lace, and she carried a cascade of red and white carnations and baby's breath tied with red and white ribbons.

The maid of honor was attired in a street-length red dress with white dots featuring a boat neckline and fitted bodice with layered ruffle skirt. The flower girl wore a street-length dress of the same fabric trimmed with white lace.

Jan Harwell registered guests at the reception which followed in the church fellowship hall.

Teresa Anpriester served the three-tiered bride's cake iced in white buttercream frosting and decorated with red roses and bows. The cake was topped with a petite bride and groom surrounded by a lace heart, a decoration from the bride's mother's cake.

Red punch and red and white heart-shaped mints were served by Dawn Wright.

Mary Ruth Hamman served the chocolate groom's cake which was decorated with red trim and the groom and bride's monogram surrounded by red roses.

The couple will make their home in Hereford.

The bride is a junior at Hereford High School and the bridegroom, a 1984 HHS graduate, is currently employed at Champion Feedyard.

Out of town guests included the bride's grandparents, the Rev. and Mrs. Noah Anpriester of Falls City, Neb., and the groom's grandparents, Virginia Bedford of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. J.J. Ruckman of Petrolia. Other guests represented Friona, Lubbock, Amarillo and Vernon.

Gollehon, Walser wed in Dimmitt

Kinsey Parlor at First Baptist Church was the setting for the wedding Saturday evening of Oleta Gollehon and Guy Walser of Summerfield.

The Rev. Joe Higgs of Dimmitt, pastor of First Baptist Church of that city, performed the ceremony before two marble columns topped with floral arrangements.

The bride wore a claret-colored chiffon dress with ultrasuede trim and carried a pink rose and white daisy bouquet accented with baby's breath.

Four of the couple's children provided music for the wedding. They were Mrs. Ken Walser, Ben Gollehon, Mrs. Bill Murphy and Mrs. John Poer. The musical selections included "The Hawaiian Wedding Song," "Let the Rest of the World Go By," "When I Look at You" and "Be My Life's Companion."

The registry and reception tables featured spring floral arrangements in pastel colors with guests being registered by the bride's grandson, Ron Rankin of Amarillo, son of Kathy Poer.

The serving table at the reception was covered with an ecru lace cloth and centered with a silk spring floral arrangement placed in a crystal vase.

The two-tiered wedding cake was topped with a Precious Moments figurine of a bride and groom with small pink silk rosebuds, greenery and baby's breath accenting the first layer of the cake.

Serving the cake was the bride's granddaughter, Tricia Touchstone. The burgundy colored punch was served by Deann Harris, the groom's granddaughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Walser will make their home at 707 Maple St. in Dimmitt.

CANCER American Cancer Society

ANSWER LINE M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute

QUESTION: Is research close to finding the secret of how cancer begins?

ANSWERline: Recent findings from studies of the genetic factors in malignancy suggest that an understanding of the mechanics of cancer may be rapidly developing. The recent identification of certain genes—called "oncogenes"—in normal cells is one of the promising new discoveries. Oncogenes appear to be involved in the production of cancer by somehow eluding normal cell controls and triggering the uncontrolled growth which is characteristic of cancer.

QUESTION: What new treatments are under development for the control of cancer?

ANSWERline: Now in the experimental stage are "hybridomas," hybrid cells that can be programmed to produce antibodies that seek out foreign substances or cancer cells and destroy them. Researchers are also devising ways to put anticancer drugs into antibodies which then become "guided missiles" carrying anticancer drugs directly to cancer cells without affecting normal cells. Work also is progressing with "biological response modifiers" like interferon, which is still in the experimental stage. Interferons are natural body substances which can cause at least partial regression in some forms of malignant tumors. These natural products have a different mode of action than the anticancer drugs now in use, and are not as toxic.

Summer hours go into effect at the Deaf Smith County Library beginning Monday. During the months of June, July and August the library will open at 10 a.m. rather than at 9 a.m. Closing times will remain the same.

"MAGICAL MYSTERIES"

The arrival of summer signals the beginning of the summer reading club at the library. The theme for the reading club this year is "Magical Mysteries." The club's theme will focus on mysteries, magic and adventure stories.

The program is designed for school age children, but pre-school children are welcome to participate as well. Pre-registration for "Magical Mysteries" will begin Monday and the reading program will begin on Monday, June 11 at 10 a.m.

NEW BOOKS

Mysteries will be featured this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. M.M. Kaye, the spellbinding storyteller, leads the list with her enthralling whodunit named

"Death in Cyprus." Her work has been compared to Agatha Christie. "Death in Cyprus" has the rich blend of romance and suspense, the elegance of style, and the compelling puzzle.

Twenty-year-old Amanda Derington is on an extended cruise with her uncle when she decides to make a short side trip to the sunwashed isle of Cyprus. But even before the ship arrives in port, there is a suspicious death.

Once on the island, a set of ominous circumstances confirms all the worst suspicions; and what Amanda had meant to be a pleasant excursion quickly turns into something else.

In "Death in Cyprus," M.M. Kaye again surpasses all her readers' expectations. Here is everything we have ever wanted in a mystery, and more—a book that proves M.M. Kaye is a master of suspense.

Also available this week is "Woman Vanishes" by Caroline Crane. Pauline had no choice. She had to disappear if she was to save herself and her 4-year-old daughter, Kirby. Sometime during the night her husband had taken his clothes and car and silently left. He told her it would be better if she did not know anything. That evening two strange men came with the explanation. Jarvis owned them $40,000. They said if she did not pay, she might be the "victim" of an accident.

The police could not give protection without evidence of the men's threats. She would have to take Kirby someplace where the terrible, abusive men could not find them. Her best hope was the city, but how long could she exist with only $300?

Here is an engrossing story of a woman whose frantic attempt to vanish led her into a series of shocking surprises.

Ann Landers Checkups cheaper

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If my husband says to me one more time, "As Ann Landers says, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it," I will hit him over the head with whatever is handy. He throws that phrase of yours into my teeth at least once a week and it drives me wild.

The man does not believe in dental checkups for us or the kids, nor does he think it makes sense to see a doctor unless we are sick. He says, "Why go looking for trouble?"

The same goes for his car and mine. He hates to see a bill unless something went terribly wrong and had to be repaired. You would not believe the number of times my car has broken down because the old tightwad refuses to pay for checkups.

I have tried to make him understand it is much cheaper to pay for a checkup than to wait until something goes completely haywire, but it is like talking to a statute in the park.

Would you like to say something to this knucklehead?—Fed Up In Kansas

DEAR FED: Not really, but may I offer you my condolences?

Is it possible to enlist the help of your physician or dentist, or auto mechanic? The best time would be when the last of the big spenders receives a large bill for "services rendered."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I say a word to "Star Witness USA," who observed that "the classier the dame, the bummier the guy she is attracted to"?

I am a 49-year-old woman, classy by the standards of discerning and intelligent people. I'm beautiful, brainy and talented, and came from a well-to-do family. I went with some awful men — rats, bums, the worst. Everyone was baffled by my poor choices. So was I until I went into therapy and found out why I made them.

My father was a rejecting, cold, disapproving, non-smiling, non-hugging person who gave me the clear message that I couldn't do anything right. He made me believe I was unattractive, stupid, inept and worthless.

By the time I was 25, I was alcoholic, and had been fired from my 14th job. I was already divorced and going with another jerk. My father made me believe no decent man would look at me.

Through counseling, I learned that I am desirable, smart and interesting — a special lady who deserves a top-notch man. I'm through with the crummy ones and will settle for nothing less than the best. It took four years of hard work, but now I feel very good about myself and I'm going to make it.—A Winner In Wenatchee, Wash.

DEAR WINNER: The key word is "self-esteem." It is almost always instilled at an early age by parents who make children feel good about themselves. When children are told they are no good, stupid and can't do anything right, they grow up with little or no confidence. They take the dregs rather than aim for the top because they feel they don't deserve better.

How lucky for you to have found a competent therapist who was able to repair the early damage. Three cheers for him (or her) and four cheers for you.

Ann Landers' new booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. For a copy, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (37 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Ink stain won't go

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know what oxygen bleach is. I have an ink stain on a sheet and I read that you could soak it in oxygen bleach. Is there anything else that will take the ink out? I have tried everything under the sun. — M.H.

DEAR M.H. — Generally, when the term oxygen bleach is used, what is meant is an all-fabric bleach rather than chlorine bleach. I'm not sure that this is scientifically accurate, but it does reflect what seems to be the usual usage of the term.

However, if you've really tried "everything under the sun" to remove that ink stain, it may be set into the fabric for good by now. Other things to try are hairspray (this works very well when the stain is fresh), rubbing alcohol and a commercial spot remover. Good luck! — POLLY

Wardrobe may be updated

COLLEGE STATION — Accessories are an easy way to update a wardrobe, but they can become expensive, reminds Becky Saunders, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"They are also a creative way to express your personality, and add versatility to any wardrobe," Saunders says.

She explains that accessories can be used to emphasize your best features, camouflage an unfavorable one, or even just to add some flare to your everyday clothes.

"Today's clothing guidelines are more relaxed than those of the past. This provides us with a wider range of fashion options to fit any lifestyle," Saunders says. "This means we are no longer confined to matching accessories."

When choosing accessories, consider color, texture and shape that can add variety and interest. Work around a central focal point with closely related items to create a pleasing "together" look, the specialist suggests.

"Many accessories are sensitive to change in fashion, so for the sake of your budget, avoid accessories that are seasonal. Also keep a running total of your purchases so they don't overload your budget," Saunders says.

Many outdated accessories can be recycled. For instance, costume jewelry can be restrung, belts recovered, buckles changed, scarves re-sized or re-shaped, in order to create a newer look.

"Don't forget," says Saunders, "that cosmetics and hair styling are important accessories that can be easily changed." In creating your "total look," remember that fashion is a form of art, and accessories can be the tools of an artist.

Health Fair Held

Several free services were rendered by professionals during a health fair held Thursday at Sugarland Mall. Approximately 100 local citizens went through the clinic. Services offered included lung function test, blood pressure check, sugar diabetes test, nutritional counseling, glaucoma screening, hearing evaluation and hearing aid cleaning. Free pamphlets were also distributed to interested individuals.

Let's Dance

Hereford High School graduating seniors and their dates enjoyed dancing at the all-night party held Thursday evening at the Bull Barn following graduation ceremonies. Several dance contests were held with winners receiving prize money.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Ex-smoker wants to breathe

DEAR DR. LAMB — I quit smoking 41 days ago today. I smoked heavily for 35 years. I know I'll never smoke again as I'm already feeling much better. I try to jog at least three times a week, but I get out of breath so quickly I can only jog about three blocks.

Is there anything I can do to improve my breathing? I really enjoy my jogging and would like to increase my running distance. I'm 53 years old.

DEAR READER — Stopping smoking was the most important thing you could have done to improve your breathing. However, not all lung damage involved is reversible.

See a pulmonary specialist and have pulmonary function tests done. You may benefit from medications to dilate your air passages and from breathing exercises.

I don't know what your height and weight are but if you are heavy, losing weight might help with your breathing during jogging.

You can do many useful exercises and not become short of breath if you're willing to give up jogging. Try walking at a pace that doesn't get you breathless, even if it's slow walking. That can do a lot to help your overall physical conditioning and if you need to lose weight it will help.

You'll need to keep your exercise level low enough that your lungs can meet your body's oxygen requirements. If you get breathless or your heart rate gets too fast, slow down or stop. You could also improve your muscle tone with weight training. You can lift one weight or do one exercise and rest and repeat so that you don't do so many that you need to breathe too fast or deeply. You don't have to really push yourself to do strength exercises that will be adequate to develop muscles.

'Sixteen Candles' works somehow

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
"SIXTEEN CANDLES" is a youth movie that somehow succeeds despite its multiple excesses.

The paper-thin plot centers on Samantha and her miserable day: Her parents forget her 16th birthday; her bust refuses to grow; she is pestered at the high school prom by a wimp called The Geek; she is overlooked by the handsome boy she adores from afar.

John Hughes wrote and directed "Sixteen Candles" with a flair for slapstick and touching scenes. The truce between Samantha and the Geek is sweet and funny, as is a late-night father-daughter talk.

But most of the parents are nitwits, the grandparents are certifiable nerds and the teen-agers rarely escape stereotype.

The music is laid on with a trowel: the "Dragnet" music for portentous moments, "The Godfather" theme for a Mafia family.

Molly Ringwald, who played John Cassavetes' daughter in "The Tempest," is endearing as the beleaguered Samantha, despite some overly vulgar dialogue. Anthony Michael Hall is totally winning as The Geek — he's a teen-age Jack Lemmon.

The rating is PG, with brief shower nudity, pot smoking and boozing by the teen-agers and rough language.

Motion Picture of America rating definitions:
G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age restrictions.

Jay Kerr of Del Rio

Texas actor TV star 'down under'

By DENNY ANGELLE Port Arthur News

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — In the 1860s, Australia attracted thousands of fortune-hungry Americans seeking a country with promise and progress.

Almost 100 years later, Texan Jay Kerr has become another pioneer "down under."

Kerr, a native of Del Rio, is one of four American actors co-starring in "Five Mile Creek," a semimonthly series seen on The Disney Channel pay television service.

Kerr plays Con Madigan, an American working for two women who own a stagecoach line. All episodes are filmed on location about 30 kilometers north of Sydney in French's Forest.

In a telephone interview, Kerr says he believes he is very fortunate to be a part of this ground-breaking series.

"I'm like a good oar," he says. "I go where I'm pushed. I like it here, I think I've made some friends for life down here."

Kerr talks as big as Texas itself.

"When you first get down here, the Australians try to take the 'mickie' out of you, which means to pull your leg. But it was a surprise to everyone — Jay Kerr came down here and had everybody fooled. He had the longest, tallest Texas stories you ever heard," says Louise Caire Clark, one of Kerr's American co-stars.

"Five Mile Creek" is Kerr's first plum role since he left the rodeo circuit to become an actor. He appeared in the 1980 feature film "Hard Country," had a regular role on the CBS soap opera "The Young and the Restless" and a featured part on the short-lived "Wizards and Warriors" TV series.

"I came here because I finally got a chance to do a Western," Kerr said. "I went out to California basically a cowboy and they cast me as a research chemist and a knight. If I could pick two things I wouldn't get cast as..."

Kerr was a state champion rodeo rider in high school and won awards for showing horses. After graduation, he drifted to the pro rodeo circuit but he found little success there.

"When I was rodeoin' I wasn't making too much money," Kerr says. "Happy Sheehan over at Alamo Village (in Bracketville, Texas) told me to go to California, they was tradin' bull for money over there. I headed that way and I've been doin' good ever since."

"He's pretty short on money," said Rod Mullinar, one of Kerr's Australian co-stars. Mullinar, who plays Gentleman Jack Taylor, is actually an Englishman who went to Australia 18 years ago.

"Texans are more like Australians than most Americans, which makes them terrific," Mullinar says. "Texans are really not like typical Americans, but more like Australians. So when Jay came down here he just fit right in."

Filming on the first season of "Five Mile Creek" will conclude in September. After that, Kerr says he plans to stick awhile in Australia.

"I think I'm gonna travel around a bit and stay on a ranch down here," he says. "Then I plan to go back and see if someone will hire me in the States."

Kerr says it will be tough to leave co-workers and friends he's made in Australia. But he admits he gets homesick

EYE CARE UPDATE

Dr. James Simmacher, O.D. Optometrist

EASIER ADJUSTMENT

QUESTION: My older brother had an awful time trying to break in his contact lenses. (He finally gave up.) I am reluctant to get contact lenses because I don't want to go through what he did. Can you give me some encouragement?

ANSWER: Both you and your brother should take heart. The quality, quantity and fitting techniques of contact lenses have vastly improved over the years. Tales of discomfort and teary eyes are becoming extremely rare. For those who have tried contact lenses and failed, as well as for those who have been put off by the experiences of others, the prospects today are extremely good. If you are well-motivated, your chances of success are excellent.

More than 15 percent of population does shift

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer recently completed a two-month stint on an overnight shift.

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Imagine working nine to five. Nine at night until five in the morning, that is.

A lot of people do, working permanent afternoon-evening or night shifts or even rotating schedules from days to nights and back again.

The Department of Labor says 15.2 percent of the full-time, non-farm workforce was involved in shiftwork in 1980, the most recent year for which statistics are available. That was 9.7 million workers, two-thirds of whom were male and 12.3 percent black.

Michael J. Colligan, a research psychologist with the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health in Cincinnati, believes the Labor Department figure is too conservative. He estimates 26 percent of the non-farm workforce is engaged in shiftwork.

"More and more places and more and more things are going to be going around the clock. The only way to make business a profit is to work around the clock," said Donald I. Tepas, a work systems expert with the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago.

"It's one way you can get more out your capital investment. Constant work provides companies with a significant competitive edge. It's not going to go away," said Tepas, a professor of psychology who directs a sleep laboratory.

"There is no doubt that a number of industries has increased shifts," said a spokesman at the Federal Reserve Board, who declined to be identified in accordance with board policy. Among the statistics kept by the Fed are figures on the percentage of manufacturing capacity being used.

The nation's industrial production and capacity utilization has soared during the economic recovery and that means plants have added second and third shifts and extended the workweek through Saturday and Sunday.

Although the Labor Department and the Fed do not have a statistical breakdown showing the increase in the number of shifts, the Fed's most recent figures show U.S. factories, mines and utilities operated at 81.9 percent of capacity in April.

That was up from 81 percent the previous month and put the operating rate 12.3 percentage points higher than the low reached during the 1981-82 recession.

Shiftworkers are mostly service workers, workers who run machines and craftworkers, the Labor Department says.

Industries with high concentrations of shiftworkers include those with continuous manufacturing processes like steel, plastics, chemicals, glass, paper, petroleum refining and mining and some service operations like nursing, air controlling and journalism.

Tepas says that in the United States, who does shiftwork frequently is determined by "bidding," which is figured on seniority, and, as a result, night workers tend to be younger and newly hired people.

The fact that U.S. shift wage differentials are not as great as abroad also makes it likelier that shiftworkers are young and healthy, he says.

But adding additional shifts at plants does "produce labor unrest and produce increasing absenteeism and therefore have a significant impact on company productivity," Tepas said.

"It's kind of a much ignored problem," he added. "They (management) don't even stop to think of health. The average U.S. manager doesn't think of factors such as this before they assign people to a new work shift."

Michael Smolensky, a researcher at the School of Public Health at the University of Texas at Houston, agreed, saying: "In America, companies are not interested in educating their workers too much about shiftwork."

A spot check with several major U.S. employers seemed to support that belief.

Eugene F. Saunders, a spokesman for Corning Glass Works; Frank T. Hausman, manager of public information for Mead Corp.; Robert S. Jewell, manager of public relations for B.F. Goodrich Co.; and Diane Roberts, a system director for in-flight services for Pan American World Airways, said their companies do not have any programs to help their employees adapt to shiftwork.

Many companies do pay wage differentials, but they are not very large. Corning Glass, for example, says it pays 14 to 25 cents more an hour to its shiftworkers.

There is not any such compensation in the armed services. And shiftwork is quite common among the Department of Defense's more than 2.1 million active duty military personnel and about 1 million civilian employees.

"I'm unaware of special programs," said Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, a Defense Department spokesman.

Some companies do have programs, however. Control Data Corp., the computer concern based in Minneapolis, for example, runs a 24-hour counseling hotline called Employee Advisory Resource, or EAR.

"We take an active role in helping them, because an employee who has a problem doesn't leave it in the parking lot," said Dick Reed, a company spokesman.

Yet, Tepas says, despite contemporary increases in the availability of round-the-clock services and work of all types, night workers are people working at night in a society that is mainly aimed at meeting the needs of people who work during the day.

"It is important to remember that this is not expected to change dramatically in the near or perhaps even distant future," he said.

"If we had our druthers, we'd say OK, no night work and everybody works nine to five. But that's not the real world," Tepas said. "So we should minimize the hazards and maximize the benefits."

Experts: shiftwork hazardous

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer recently completed a two-month stint on an over-night shift.
By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Shiftwork can be hazardous to your health, researchers say.

The foremost peril from working nights or rotating between days and nights seems to be disruption of sleep.

Other possible dangers include weight gain, gastrointestinal disorders, higher incidence of injury, moodiness, marital problems.

And then there are the practical hurdles of shiftwork, such as the difficulty of getting public transportation to work at odd hours.

"Numerous studies have associated shiftwork with sleep problems," said Donald I. Tepas, who directs a sleep laboratory at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago, where he is a professor of psychology. "Most of these people have trouble getting enough sleep."

According to the "chronobiological" theory, shiftworkers have problems sleeping because they attempt to sleep at the wrong time of the day.

Other scientists believe shiftworkers sleep less because of social pressures, Tepas says.

"There's considerable reason for that night worker to get up early. A lot of things start happening in the house in the afternoon. Kids come home from school, dinner is served, the news comes on television," Tepas said.

"Since sleep is more of a solitary act than most other behaviors, it is the first to be reduced and reaches some minimal level almost instantly, given the social time demands of some shift schedules," he said.

But the result may not be a disturbed sleep but a more efficient sleep period, he adds.

Studies show that night shiftworkers sleep the least, and afternoon-evening workers sleep the most, Tepas says. This is true for both permanent and rotating workers. Rotators on the night shift sleep less than permanent night workers, he says.

However, acute sleep loss leads to chronic sleep deprivation, then to "microsleeps," or drowsiness, then to lapses — "periods during which responses aren't made" — which leads to impaired performance, Tepas says.

Tepas says impairment is most evident when the workers' tasks are not self-paced, such as assembly lines, and says that workers lose the ability to assess their own performance and the extent of their fatigue.

"Continued chronic sleep deprivation may very well lead to a variety of health problems ... and result in a general decrease in life expectancy," Tepas said.

Michael J. Colligan, a research psychologist with the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health in Cincinnati, surveyed 1,219 nurses on permanent day, afternoon and night shifts and on rotating schedules to assess the effects of the shift worked on sick leave and frequency of worksite clinic visits.

He found that compared to nurses on permanent shifts, rotators exhibited a significantly higher rate of clinic visits and took more sick days for serious illnesses.

Charles Ehret, a chronobiologist at the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois and a private consultant, said: "Shiftwork fatigue is not simple tiredness or simple fatigue of the sort that most workers experience. Shiftwork fatigue is in fact a transient condition of mental dysfunction."

"When you reset your body clock from one time to another time, until the body clock is completely reset, it experiences multiple problems."

He said workers' biological functions are desynchronized, and if they do not resynchronize, that can lead to neuroses such as depression and manic depression.

"Where the worker isn't handling it well you find absenteeism, mistakes. They perform bad work and in the severe condition there are catastrophes," Ehret said.

Michael J. Thorpy, director of a sleep-wake disorder center at Montefiori Medical Center in the Bronx, N.Y., says some shiftworkers complain about feeling irritable, anxious and depressed.

Thorpy says shiftworkers do experience appetite changes. "It can go either way," he said. "Either people lose weight or gain weight, and usually they put on weight."

Tepas says shiftworkers have irregular eating habits that may lead to gastrointestinal disorders.

He says, though, that he has not seen any evidence indicating that night workers drink or use drugs more than other workers.

Permanent night workers have a divorce and separation rate that is 40 percent to 80 percent higher than day workers, Tepas says.

"The initial reaction to that would be working nights causes divorce. The alternative hypothesis is that some single parents prefer to work nights because it makes child care easier, therefore they self-select nights after divorce. Either hypothesis may be true. We don't know yet," he said.

Pat Shields, manager of personal problems counseling for the Employee Advisory Resource at Control Data Corp., says one problem that comes up with shiftwork is a husband and wife working opposite shifts.

"... They have very little contact with each other and they're sharing child care," she said. "So their time off is taking care of kids. For some people, that kind of working arrangement is very stressful."

Then there are the practical problems with shiftwork. It can be more difficult to commute to work via public transportation, and security concerns may arise while traveling and working late at night.

Nevertheless, there are benefits of working the night shift, Tepas says.

"It's real easy to see the doctor. No sweat," he said. "No problem going to the bank. A lot of people like to get involved in continuing education. If you're a night worker you can do that."

"There are other things in life than one's physical health. Who's to say it's not more important to take care of you children or get better educated?"

Suggestions given for healthy shifts

By The Associated Press

Feeling lousy from working nights or rotating shifts? Here are some suggestions from experts on how shiftworkers can improve their health and spirits:

- Monitor your sleep in a log before you begin shiftwork to determine how much sleep you need. Once you are on shiftwork, "Think before you set the alarm," and do not set it too early.

- Make sure you have quiet and dark sleeping quarters.

- Unplug the phone.

- Make sure you family understands the demands of shiftwork and the need to sleep at a different time from the rest of the family.

- Avoid napping and try to get all your sleep at one time.

- Try to sleep at the most favorable time of day, but maintain the same sleep-work-leisure time sequence no matter what shift is worked.

- Do not drink coffee, smoke cigarettes or consume alcohol because they disrupt your natural sleeping habits.

- Avoid overeating; it has been suggested that night workers tend to snack more than people on other shifts.

- Try to maintain an eating schedule of a breakfast meal before going to work, lunch at work and supper when you get off.

MIRACLES STILL HAPPEN!

I thought strenuous exercise and starvation were the only answers to my weight problem until a Pat Walker patron told me of her successful program

Now I have lost 50 lbs. and 6 1/2 inches while eating foods that I actually enjoy.

Everyone is created as an individual at Pat Walker's. My counselors have been most helpful and the exercise is quite pleasant. It is effective but doesn't create a false appetite the way active and rigorous exercise can.

Don't keep putting it off. Try Pat Walker's. I'm glad I did!
