It was an exciting evening as Mary Herring was announced "Woman of the Year" and Amy Quillen was crowned Miss Hereford during the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division quarterly meeting and annual installation banquet held Tuesday evening at the Hereford Community Center.

Former recipient of the estimable award and past Women's Division president, Georgia Sparks, presented Herring with an engraved silver tray and a dozen red roses in recognition of her accomplishments in the organization and church and local activities. Margaret Formby, last year's honoree scheduled to make the presentation, was unable to attend the function.

Also, highlighting the banquet was the crowning of the new Miss Hereford, Amy Quillen, by Keith Ann Gearn, Miss Hereford pageant director and a member of the pageant steering committee. Quillen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Quillen, was also presented an engraved plaque. She is replacing Dana Cabbiness Ketchersid who relinquished her crown when she recently married.

During this time new officers and directors were installed by Olivia Denning, past president. Betty Drake will serve as president; Lanette Leasure, vice-president; Linda Daniel, secretary; and Jane Coplen and Peggie Fox, both board directors. Two directors retiring are Jane White and Donna Jones.

Out-going president, Arvela Lauderback, reflected on her tenure as division president by saying, "Board members as well as each member of the Women's Division met the challenges that were presented to them and worked side by side to help achieve the goals that were set during the year. They not only helped me but were a tremendous asset to the organization.

"I feel like I'm the winner to have gotten to know everyone connected with the division," she concluded. "It's been a wonderful year and I hope we continue to make Hereford the best place in the Panhandle to live."

Plaques of appreciation were presented by Drake to retiring board members and the past president. Special recognition was also given to Carolyn Killough and Toni Shakocius, secretaries at the Chamber of Commerce office.

In accepting her position as new president, Drake commented, "Two goals I would like to see materialize are the organization of a Fourth of July celebration and getting division committees more involved with the community. I also welcome any ideas or suggestions during my term as president and hope to work closely with the board and members."

Various desserts and finger sandwiches were provided by Herring and Lois Lemons to members and guests. Scott Hamby, pianist, provided background music during the evening and also accompanied Quillen as she sang "Send in the Clowns."

Committee chairmen to serve under Drake include Lanette Leasure, Miss Hereford steering committee; Fox, membership; Lauderback, public affairs and publicity; Bettye Owen, tour; Mary Ann Nunley, welcome; White, animal action and pet show; Avis Blakey, beautification.

Also Sidney Kerr, beauty spot of the month; Betty Taylor, blood bank; Teresa Munoz, Christmas lighting contest; Sue Malamen, Christmas tree ceremony; Jena Rawley-Whitaker, decorations;

Several hundred attend DOE session

By REED PARSELL
Managing Editor

Shaking off microphone troubles, Department of Energy officials were able to conduct a "primarily tutorial" briefing Tuesday evening in Deaf Smith County Bull Barn.

An estimated 400 to 500 people attended the event, which had been conducted in similar form but to a far sparser crowd Monday night in Tulia. Both Hereford and Tulia are the seats of counties - Deaf Smith and Swisher, respectively - being considered by the DOE for a high-level nuclear waste dump.

The difference in crowd size could be attributed to Deaf Smith having one of three "preferred" sites for the repository, while Swisher has "for all practical purposes" been eliminated from the search.

Technical woes endured

Bill Bennett, deputy director of DOE's Office of Geologic Repositories, was beginning his presentation Tuesday when the sound system started to moan loudly. At first he thought the entourage of media microphones might be causing the feedback, but he later amended it was a problem with the Bull Barn's system.

Twice Bennett strolled down the aisle to speak, as attempts to read-dress the microphone proved unsuccessful. "I'm sure this has strengthened your confidence in our ability to build a repository," he quipped.

"Are you radioactive?" a woman queried.

Eventually the audio problems were solved and the briefing continued. Following Bennett's speech, which was basically the same one he delivered in Tulia Monday, a short question-and-answer session was conducted by Bennett and Jeff Neff, manager of the DOE Salt Repository Office.

The first question raised was what safeguards will be enacted to help protect the Ogallala Aquifer from contamination. Bennett replied he felt it was "probably the single most important" factor to be considered over the next few years, when extensive research is to be done.

Should a 90-day public comment period which ends March 20 not cause candidate rankings to change, Deaf Smith would be subjected to a $1 billion detailed site characterization study. That research would conclude by 1991, DOE officials have said, when the president is to nominate one of the three preferred locations for hosting the dump.

Bennett, both Tuesday night and during a meeting with area officials earlier that day, stressed the nominated state's governor or legislature could veto the selection. A majority vote by both houses of Congress, within 90 days, would be the only way to override the veto.

Such an action by Congress, in light of "valid objections" by the state, was described by Bennett as "unlikely." He told the Brand he "felt comfortable" with Congress possibly being faced with the final decision. Among the factors it must weigh is the federal government has contracted to accept the waste in 1998 regardless of whether a repository has been constructed.

One woman Tuesday night said she wondered why the DOE was not trying to "clean up" radioactive waste where it's produced rather than ship it "all over the country."

"Let me tell you we don't know a way (to clean it up)," Bennett said. "We're not alone," he added, explaining none of the countries producing nuclear waste know how to render its radiation immediately negligible.

Asked whether a lawsuit against DOE last month by state officials could slow down the dump selection process, Bennett said it has "the potential to affect that decision."

During the afternoon meeting with area officials, Neff said objections by Texas politicians to the dump being placed here were not a factor in selecting Deaf Smith as a preferred site.

Also Tuesday afternoon, the DOE representatives were asked why the town of Vega was not mentioned in explanations of why Deaf Smith's location was chosen over that of Swisher County. Bennett had earlier said the primary distinguishing factor was Hereford is farther from the Deaf Smith site - about 20 miles - than Tulia is from the Swisher location (about 4 miles).

Neff answered that Vega, about 10 miles from the Deaf Smith site, was not considered in the population discriminators since it contains fewer than 2,500 people. Approximately 800 people live in Vega, located just north of the Deaf Smith County line in Oldham County.

After the evening briefing, attendees were allowed to ask questions to DOE experts placed at eight different tables. There was one table apiece for engineering, environmental, geology, issues tracking, performance assessment, site selections, socioeconomic and transportation.

The purpose of the evening session, Neff stressed several times, was to help people understand the draft environmental assessment prepared for the Deaf Smith site. This "tutorial" approach was to ameliorate the public comment period, which is to gather opinions exclusively about the EAs.

No comments made Tuesday night, Neff said, would necessarily be part of the comment period's legal record.

Those wishing to state their views on the EAs may do so either by writing DOE offices in Washington, D.C., or speaking out at three public hearings slated in Texas later this winter. Tulia is to host a hearing Feb. 26, Hereford on Feb. 28 and Austin March 1.

Comments or requests for EAs can be made by writing to the U.S. Department of Energy at 1000 Independence Ave., S.W.; Washington, D.C. 20585. Either "Attention: Comments-EA" or "Attention: EA" should be the second line used in addressing the envelopes.

Final environmental assessments are to be released this coming summer, according to DOE documents. Bennett said Tuesday he anticipates there will be another round of hearings following publication of the final EAs.

President Reagan is to subsequently approve three sites - most likely the ones now designated as preferred - for detailed site characterization studies. Construction of exploratory shafts would begin in the spring of 1986 at Hanford, that summer in Yucca Mountain and the following spring in Deaf Smith County.

Draft environmental impact statements are to be released in 1990, a year before the president is to recommend a site for the repository. Construction is to begin in 1993 or 1994 following a review of the program by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Phase 1 construction is to be completed in 1997 and Phase 2 in the year 2000. Storage is to begin on a limited basis in 1998, with the dump to be in full operation by 2002.

Congratulations to Mary Herring on being selected as "Woman of the Year" by the Women's Division of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. Best wishes, also, to Amy Quillen who takes over the Miss Hereford crown! The Women's Division plays a very important role in the programs and activities of the chamber, and we salute the new officers and directors as they embark on a new year.

Two big annual banquets are on tap and we urge you to plan to attend one or both of the events. Although the Sugar Beet Banquet, scheduled Saturday night, is a farm-oriented program, a number of business people usually attend the affair. All interested citizens are invited and tickets are $7.50 each. "Tumbleweed Smith" is the featured speaker and should appeal to all citizens.

The other big event is the annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet, scheduled Feb. 7. Tickets are on sale

Hereford man kills himself

A 61-year-old Hereford man died Tuesday evening in Amarillo after having shot himself in the head earlier in the day.

Hereford Police Lieutenant Ted Langgood said the death of Esequiel Mendoza, 210 Harrah, was ruled a suicide after an autopsy was performed by pathologist Dr. Ralph Eardmann.

Hereford police were summoned to the Mendoza home at 1:38 p.m. Tuesday by Mrs. Mendoza and another woman visiting at the time of the shooting. Langgood said the women told police Mendoza went into a room of the house, closed the door and shot himself with a .22-caliber revolver.

The women also told police that Mendoza had been depressed lately, but had given them no indication he was thinking of suicide.

Mendoza was taken by ambulance to Deaf Smith General Hospital, then on to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, where he was pronounced dead at 6:20 p.m.

Tuesday story contained error

There was a substantial mistake printed in Tuesday's Page 1 lead story titled, "Public hearing scheduled for Feb. 28."

It was incorrectly reported detailed site characterization studies at the nuclear waste dump candidate sites of Yucca Mountain, Nev., and Hanford, Wash., would cost $700,000 to $800,000 apiece. The correct amount, as stated Monday by DOE official Jeff Neff, is $700 to $800 million.

The story was correct in quoting Neff as claiming the Deaf Smith County study would cost approximately $1 billion.

December police tallies told

Two hundred eighty criminal offenses occurred within city limits last month and were reported to the Hereford Police Department.

Theft was the most common crime, as it happened 38 times. Also popular were vandalism (25), traffic violations (21), assault (15), burglary (13) and harassment (10). Though 190 cases were cleared in December, not all of them occurred during that month.

Adult arrests totaled 88, with 33 of them for driving while intoxicated and another 27 for drunkenness. There were six juveniles picked up on criminal charges, two of those for theft.

Ten people suffered injuries in 37 motor vehicle accidents. Thirty-two of the wrecks were on public roads. There were 354 moving and six parking violation citations handed out within city limits.

Reaction mixed to White speech

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White's call for a more efficient state government without new taxes got a cautious reaction from lawmakers, with several saying it would be tough to achieve White's goals without more money.

White, in his state-of-the-state address to the House and Senate on Monday, said trimming the state workforce, reducing expenses and increasing user fees are better ways to deal with the state's financial troubles.

"We could raise taxes. But I think there is not a person in this room — myself included — who intends to do that," White said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said White should be commended for seeking to streamline state operations.

"The thrust of his proposals, advocating cost-saving measures in state agencies, while augmenting health, welfare, corrections and higher education, sets the tone for austerity with compassion," Hobby said.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said White's proposals "are going to be very difficult goals to achieve without some new taxes and solely on the basis of budget cutting and raising fees."

Pension system said troubled

DALLAS (AP) — Federal policies have pushed the private pension industry into a crisis that may threaten millions of American workers' pensions, according to a professor at the University of Texas at Dallas.

Edward Harpham, in a study released today, says that while the crisis arose in the private sector, it was created largely by federal policies that promoted flawed practices over the past 60 years.

The government is encouraging companies with healthy pension plans to terminate them while urging firms in financial trouble to dump their pension liabilities on the government, he said.

The federal government is already the trustee for over 1,000 private pension plans, and the number is steadily growing, Harpham said.

The private pension industry is in a crisis that "threatens the health of all major corporations and the retirement security of their workers," Harpham said.

Mother of dead child probated

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman whose infant died of malnutrition probably didn't realize her daughter couldn't live on a diet that consisted mostly of sugar water, attorneys said.

The mother, Charlene Mae Spoonemore Martinez, 28, pleaded no contest to a felony manslaughter charge and was sentenced on Monday by State District Judge I.D. McMaster.

Mrs. Martinez' attorney, Ray Montgomery, said the woman didn't know enough to feed the child properly.

"I think this is nothing more than a case of ignorance," said Montgomery.

The dead child, Rosa Linda Spoonemore, was born in October, 1982, and died in January, 1983. An autopsy showed she had no food in her stomach at death and a medical examiner ruled starvation as the cause of death.

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers said the child, who weighed less at death than she did at birth, was fed primarily sugared water and did not receive enough nourishment to sustain life.

Plans made for special park

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — No hair-raising turns or spine-tling drops would lure riders to this roller coaster. But its gentle hills could keep children clinging to wheelchairs as it whooshed down the rails at an amusement park for the handicapped.

Welcome to the wish park envisioned by a Des Moines pressman who spends his free time making life happy for handicapped children. The merry-go-round will welcome wheelchair riders. Skycars suspended on cables will be programmed to halt at each stop long enough to let slower kids board.

David Steiner, 33, founder of the Kids With A Wish Foundation, unveiled a proposal Tuesday to build the nation's first amusement park designed for the handicapped.

"When I see a little girl get a smile on her face, I think how beautiful it would be to see a child go to an amusement park," Steiner said. "They can ride the merry-go-round, drive boats, play games. They can do anything you could do."

Steiner said he has already found corporate contributors in Des Moines, but wouldn't identify them, and he said a non-profit corporation is being formed to accept donations and run the project.

Lower interest rates foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker is trying to reassure Republican senators that action to slash government spending by $50 billion next year likely will be rewarded with lower interest rates.

Across the Capitol, Democratic and Republican House leaders appeared to agree that efforts this year to reduce federal budget deficits will not include increased taxes.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas is trying to build a consensus among GOP senators for a plan to achieve President Reagan's target of reducing the deficit to less than $100 billion by 1988 — a level roughly equal to 2 percent of the gross national product.

Acknowledging that the budget Reagan sends to Congress on Feb. 4 will not meet the target, administration officials say they are cooperating with Dole's efforts to cut the deficit.

White House Budget Director David A. Stockman has estimated that without action, deficits will be $225 billion to $240 billion in each of the next three years.

Roadblocks cleared in Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Snipers and rock-throwers harassed police and soldiers overnight as they tried to clear roadblocks put up by demonstrators protesting increased fuel prices. At least three people were killed in violence that spread across the island.

Winter is peak tourist time in Jamaica, but authorities said none of the estimated 12,000 foreign visitors to the Caribbean island were reported injured in any of the disturbances Tuesday. Police said the situation at most tourist resorts was close to normal.

Police said that officers killed one man in Kingston after he fired on police at a roadblock and that a motorist in Kingston was shot and killed by someone in another car. A third fatality was a man killed by gunfire from a van in Maypen, 30 miles northwest of Kingston, police said.

Unconfirmed reports said as many as six people had been killed and several others were hospitalized, including a small girl hit by rocks at a roadblock.

A police officer in Kingston, speaking on condition of anonymity, said hundreds of people spent the night at police stations.

Skillern executed today

Inmate asks family to rejoice

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Doyle Skillern asked his family to "rejoice and forgive," then was executed by injection early today for a killing in which the confessed triggerman may soon go free.

Warden Jack Pursley ordered that the execution begin at 12:18 a.m. Skillern coughed and retched seconds later, then lay still. Dr. Luther Masters, a prison physician, pronounced him dead at 12:23 a.m.

Skillern, 48, was "very much" resigned to his fate and was "cheerful all the time," he was with the Rev. Cornelius Ryan Tuesday, the Roman Catholic priest said immediately after the execution.

Phil Guthrie, chief spokesman for the Texas prison system, said that after prison officials informed Skillern that Gov. Mark White had declined to grant him a reprieve, Skillern responded "A lot of people will still have their troubles tomorrow, and mine will be over."

White's action followed a 6-2 vote of the Supreme Court not to block the execution.

Skillern had been on Texas' Death Row longer than all but two other inmates.

He was executed for the Oct. 24, 1974, shooting death of Patrick Randel, an undercover narcotics agent for the Texas Department of Public Safety. The two were trying to sell about $1,000 worth of Quaaludes to Randel the night of the killing.

Skillern was convicted of capital murder although a co-defendant, Charles Victor Sanne, 51, testified he fired the six shots that killed Randel. Skillern was in a car nearby, Sanne said.

But a jury decided Sanne was not a continuing threat to society, and gave him a life sentence, while Skillern, who had killed his brother earlier, was determined to be a threat and was sentenced to death.

Sanne is being considered for parole soon.

Skillern was convicted under Texas' "law of parties," which allows juries to convict accomplices of the most severe crime involved.

Sixteen official witnesses, including five reporters and Skillern's brother-in-law, prison employee William Sparks III, watched the execution.

They were led into the death chamber at 12:16 a.m. Skillern lay strapped to a hospital gurney, the lines which were to carry a lethal dose of poison into his system already pumping a saline solution.

Pursley asked Skillern if he cared to make a last request or statement. "I just pray that my family will rejoice and forgive. Thank you," Skillern said quickly. He did not appear to address any of the witnesses.

Pursley gave the order for the execution to begin at 12:19 a.m.

Perhaps 10 seconds later, Skillern coughed violently and sat up as far as the straps across his torso would allow.

He then fell back. His mouth opened and he lay motionless.

Prison physician Masters entered the chamber. The doctor used a flashlight to check each of Skillern's eyes for dilation and listened to several areas of his chest for a heartbeat.

He placed his hand on Skillern's chest, then examined the inmate's eyes with the light again.

Asked by Pursley what he had found, Masters answered, "The pupils are both dilated and fixed. There is an absence of respiration, an absence of heartbeat and an absence of carotid pulse."

Pursley pronounced Skillern dead at 12:23 a.m.

Ruling may help restore schools' order

By LEE MITGANG AP Education Writer

The U.S. Supreme Court has given what some regard as long-overdue relief to teachers, principals, parents and youths fed up with the drugs and violence in many schools: the right to search students without a court-ordered warrant.

A 6-3 ruling by the court Tuesday was almost universally praised by educators, and even by some civil liberties lawyers, as balanced and needed.

From the 1960s on, the high court expanded student rights in case after case. First it was the right to wear what they wished and say what they pleased. Eventually student rights extended to protection against personal searches unless school officials had a warrant from a judge.

Those earlier rulings, in the opinion of many educators, created a climate that invited a kind of lawlessness that some students couldn't resist and which principals and teachers often feared to combat because of the threat of lawsuits.

The result: In poll after poll over the last decade, the lack of discipline has consistently headed the list of what the public sees as education's chief failing.

Tuesday's ruling may give schools the legal ammunition necessary to regain control over troublemakers.

In a case involving a Piscataway, N.J., high school student who was found by a vice principal to have drug paraphernalia in her purse and was later convicted of selling marijuana to fellow students, the court ruled teachers and school officials do not have to have "probable cause" for searching a student and may now do so without a warrant.

The decision did not strip students of their Fourth Amendment right against unreasonable searches.

"We've had so many cases in the last 10 years increasing student rights. In practicality what they did was make many principals afraid because of the threat of civil suits. I think this ruling corrects the balance," said William Honig, California's Superintendent of Public Instruction.

A leading civil liberties lawyer found little fault with the ruling.

"The truth is, (civil libertarians) can't always play Chicken Little. This ruling is not going to change very much," said Burt Newborn, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "The point is that the special circumstances of the school setting requires some tailoring of the Fourth Amendment to students."

The case of the 14-year-old New Jersey girl, identified only as T.L.O. in court records because of her age, drew national attention. The Reagan administration filed a brief last year siding with the vice principal who searched the girl's purse. Citing a "growing lack of discipline" in schools, the Justice Department brief urged the court to limit student rights in searches for drugs and weapons.

What the ruling will or won't change in school life isn't clear.

Some educators, including Honig and Sandra Feldman, executive director of the United Federation of Teachers in New York, said some school districts might be more likely to search lockers or use metal detectors to keep drugs and weapons out of school.

"If anything," said Joseph Scherer, an official of the American Association of School Administrators, "administrators have become overcautious with respect to student rights. Even with this ruling, administrators will be very respectful of due process. Schools learned very hard lessons in the 1960s in dealing with students. We don't want to turn back the clock."

for this dinner program which features Dr. W.C. Newberry as the speaker and Johnny Ray Watson providing special entertainment. Another banquet highlight is the presentation of the "Citizen of the Year" award.

How about that price tag put on the site characterization study for a nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County?

At a press conference Monday in Amarillo, DOE official Jeff Neff said an exploratory shaft would cost between $225 and $250 million, and the total price of the tests and study, concluding in 1990, would run around $1 billion!

According to the DOE official, we're looking at a site characterization cost of $1 billion here, compared to $600 million each at the other two sites. At this stage, we are told that there's not much difference in the three sites as far as all the guidelines are concerned. Why not put it where the government already owns the land?

Even if we were begging for them to put the site here, DOE should save some money and put it at one of the other sites. On, well, there's just a difference of $200 to $300 million! Unless we have some salt domes several thousand feet down that are proven to be, beyond a doubt, the best possible place for the waste; unless it can be proven beyond a doubt that it will not endanger our underground water supply, then it makes no sense to select Deaf Smith County.

A DOE official said Tuesday night that "we consider it very unlikely that Congress would override a veto." Under the guidelines, the Texas governor can veto a site in Texas and it would require a vote in both houses within 90 days to override.

Gov. White has already declared that he will veto a Texas site. It is unlikely that White will be governor when that time comes, but chances are that any governor will veto the site if the people continue to oppose.

'Woman of the Year'

Mary Herring wins award

By LISA BALL
Staff Writer

"This year's Woman of the Year recipient is happy, loving, caring of others and very efficient. She is always willing to do a good job for the Women's Division or any other organization," Georgia Sparks, past Woman of the Year and former Women's Division president, emphasized. "The Woman of the Year is Mary Herring."

After Sparks presented Herring with a silver engraved tray and a dozen red roses, the recipient was quoted, "I think Georgia overstated what I have accomplished, but I'm very appreciative to the board for this honor. Thank you very much."

The prestigious award was made during the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division first quarterly meeting of the new year Tuesday evening at the Community Center.

Herring, a native of the Panhandle, came to Hereford in 1950 with her husband, Dean, and their small son. Since that time, she has taught Sunday school classes for many years and has served in all offices of the Women's Missionary Union.

She is currently chairman of First Baptist Church's benevolence committee through which church members take care of bereaved families. She has also served on other church committees.

"When her children were young," Sparks elaborated, "she was extremely involved in their activities but also found time to be active in her own right."

In 1971, she joined the Women's Division and immediately became active. She has spent many hours and hard work as chairman of the Little Miss and Miss Hereford pageants. Herring also served on numerous committees of the Women's Division.

With her extraordinary amount of interest in improving the community, she has also found time to open a catering business, Something Special, with Lois Lemons. The two women began catering functions in their homes in May of 1983. With their culinary skill and aptitude, they have watched their business flourish.

She is an active charter member of La Madre Mia Study Club and has served twice as president. She has also been elected to each of the other offices in the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Herring have travelled over the United States and to some foreign countries. Through her travels, she has increased others' awareness of Deaf Smith county.

Herring is the mother of five sons and a daughter, and the grandmother of nine.

Quillen crowned new Miss Hereford

By KIMBERLY THOGMARTIN
Staff Writer

Nineteen-year-old Amy Quillen says she is "ready" to serve the community as "Miss Hereford."

The West Texas State University freshman, who has served as first runner-up to the title since the pageant last August, Tuesday night was crowned Miss Hereford at the Chamber of Commerce Women's Division quarterly meeting. Crowning Quillen was Keith Ann Gearn, Miss Hereford pageant director and a member of the steering committee.

Quillen replaces Dana Cabbiness Ketchersid, now of Plainview, who gave up the crown to be married on Dec. 29.

A three-time entrant in the local pageant, Quillen was named Miss Congeniality during her first pageant and in 1983 captured the third runner-up honor.

An honor graduate of Hereford High School, the new Miss Hereford is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Quillen. She is studying television broadcasting at WTSU.

Even though her predecessor served nearly five months of her reign, Quillen will still wear the crown for more than a year. The Women's Division has made some changes in the pageant, and the next event will not be held until February of 1986.

Lanette Leasure, Miss Hereford steering committee chairperson, explained that the Miss Hereford Pageant was changed to February so that there would no longer be a conflict with the Miss Wheatheart Pageant which is slated at the same time.

"Another reason that we changed the Miss Hereford pageant date to February," Leasure explained, "is that we felt that there would be more interest among the high school girls if we had it during the school year."

Quillen's honors during her high school years included serving on the student council and as a class representative, as a twirler and member of the band and three years as a member of the National Honor Society.

She is also a twirler at WTSU, where she says she "loves dorm life."

The new Miss Hereford lists snow and water skiing as her hobbies, "and singing, now." After twirling the baton during the talent competition of the pageant the first two years, Quillen last year switched to singing. She said she plans to stick with that talent, and will sing in the "Miss Wheatheart" contest next August in Perryton.

"I would like to represent Hereford well, and now that I did the best that I could," Quillen lists as a goal for her reign. "I would like to be active as Miss Hereford, and encourage more girls to enter the pageant next year."

Community supper scheduled

A community chili supper has been scheduled from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday at the Hereford High School cafeteria with proceeds being used to feed the hungry in Ethiopia. The event is being held during the 1985 Week of Prayer for Christian Unity which will begin Friday and continue through Jan. 25.

Tickets are priced at $3.50 for adults and $2 for children under 10 years of age and may be purchased at the door, from any Key, Kiwanis or Lions Clubs members and at most church offices.

The menu will consist of chili, pickles, crackers, milk, coffee and various desserts.

Marvin James is overall chairman of the supper and Bobby Owen is chili supper co-chairman. Coordinator of desserts is Nancy Wilcox and members of the Noon Kiwanis Club will be serving during the meal.

All meat for the event was donated and aluminum pans for desserts were contributed by Frosty's Meat Market and Moore's Jack 'n' Jill. Dessert dishes were prepared by women of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, First United Methodist Church, First Baptist Church, Church of the Nazarene, First Christian Church, First Presbyterian Church and Community Church.

A special treat during the meal will be entertainment which will be provided by various local groups. The

Arts Club learns to improve art

The Hereford Fine Arts Association held its monthly meeting at the Community Center on Jan. 8.

Sixteen members and guests were present.

Charles Lyles, local artist, gave a program on "The Magic of Painting". He pointed out to the group the basic steps to improve creative art. The steps were: plan a painting, plan how to create illusion of depth and dimension, and plan where to have the most detail, color values.

Jolene Bledsoe won the door prize of a $15 gift certificate to the Caison House.

Frances Frazier and Dorothy Mayfield were the hostesses for the evening and served refreshments to the group.

Nazarene youth group will give a preview of the Broadway production of "Snoopy," and scheduled to sing are groups from both San Jose Catholic Church and First United Methodist Church, and the Golden Age Quartet.

The next scheduled meeting will be Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. at the Community Center, and the club is open to new members who are interested in any kind of art.

Abundant Life

Bob Wear

WE HAVE some degree of the capability of being effective in our speech and our behavior and, with most of us most of the time, it is our desire to attain this effectiveness. The key to such accomplishment is in the full understanding and application of "discretion". We are capable of developing this life-giving quality. This is the quality which will bring the maximum benefits from our efforts, we will become increasingly encouraged and built up as we permit "discretion" to have its full influence upon our thoughts, talk and actions.

THE BASIC MEANING of "discretion" is mind-possessing, to have understanding, sound mind, self-controlled in the most wholesome sense. It is not involved with that which is dishonest, or cowardly, or deceitful; but, at the same time, when wisely applied, it will enable us to avoid many or most of the pitfalls of careless thought, talk and action. We are more likely to keep our thinking straight, our talk prudent, and our actions constructive.

DISCRETION is the life element which enables us to make the best use of the knowledge we acquire, to be most productive with the ability and the skills we may possess, to establish and maintain the best relationships with others (including loved ones and friends) and will probably do more than any one thing to fashion a good self-image. "Great ability without 'discretion' comes almost invariably to a tragic end."—Gambetta.

MANY OF the avoidable problems and difficulties in daily living are prevented, when employment of "discretion" is recognized as the key that opens the way for more effective and satisfactory personal conduct of life.

The L.I.F.E. program is structured with the teens working in teams. Each of the teams competes with the others, with the winning team awarded a trip to Denver, Colo. The winning individual who brings the most people will win a Big Sur waterbed donated by Big Sur in Amarillo.

Have more understanding

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a hairdresser who wishes to speak my piece. My remarks are for the women who think they are paying too much for a haircut and those who try to save money by cutting their own hair.

The reason haircuts are rather costly these days is because so many people ARE cutting their own hair and others wait three months between haircuts.

To the ones who are cutting their own hair: That's O.K. with me, but after you have given yourself squared-off bangs or whatever and someone asks, "Who cut your hair?" please don't give them my name. Believe me, honey, they aren't asking because they admire the job. They want to know who to stay away from.

And now a word to the dummies who want to save a buck and let some friend cut their hair: When you look at the back and the sides in the mirror and almost die, and cry for two days because it is too short, I will do my best to fix up the butchered job, but I cannot make your hair grow

I love my work and wouldn't do anything else, but I do believe the public could be a little more understanding. You can help by printing this.—No Miracle Worker In Fla.

DEAR FLA.: Thanks for a letter that is sure to be taped to the mirrors in lots of beauty salons for the next several days.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All the reasons given by your readers for men wearing earrings are wrong. Here are the facts:

In the 1800s sailors wore a heavy gold earring in either ear. In case the ship was wrecked and the sailor's body was washed ashore, the earring would pay for a Christian funeral.—An Authority In Wilmette, Ill.

DEAR WIL: Sounds reasonable. Who's your source?

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in response to your question, "What has happened to the truckers?"

This is why I am no longer the nice-guy trucker I used to be. My company has put a recorder in my truck that tells my bosses what I am doing every minute of the day. They have determined how many minutes it should take me to get from one place to the next, and if I do not make it in the required time, they want an explanation. My boss says, "Time is money." The less time it takes to make my run, the more money in his pocket because I am paid by the hour.

I used to stop to assist a motorist in distress, but I don't stop anymore because I would have to explain my delay.

Another reason so many truckers are in such a big hurry is the new trucking deregulation. Instead of large trucking companies with professional drivers, there are many independent owner-operators on the road and they are all competing with each other. It comes down to who will haul the load for the least amount of money and who will have no work. When a trucker accepts a run at cut-throat rates, he has to drive like a maniac to make money on it.

So, you see, Ann, greed has replaced kindness and consideration, and it's a darned shame.—Former Knight

DEAR FORMER: Thanks for your input. Tomorrow we'll hear another point of view. Stay tuned.

Are you, or is someone you care about messing around with drugs—or considering it? Are all drugs bad? What about pot—in moderation? I know many people use an angel-food cake tin to catch the corn when cutting it off the cob. But have you tried cutting it with an electric knife? It certainly speeds up the process. A big time-saver! —MARIAN

DEAR POLLY—I had some cards I wanted to use, but over the years, the envelopes had sealed themselves shut. I put them in my microwave oven on high for one minute, just enough to get the glue warm. (This was quite a few envelopes; you may need less time with just a few.) It worked. I was able to open them, put in my cards and reseal the envelopes. Make sure you open the flaps right away while the envelopes are still hot or they will reseal. —JANE

Toddler fights rare enzyme deficiency

MORRISDALE, Pa. (AP) — Unraveling a roll of toilet paper or fibbing about who dumped a drink on the floor are happy milestones in the life of D.J., a 3-year-old who cannot yet truly eat or talk and until recently could not play or walk, due to an extremely rare, potentially fatal enzyme deficiency.

"It's good in a sense. I like it when he does things like that. It shows me he's thinking," said his mother, Linda Rinehart, recalling with a smile how her blue-eyed, tousled-haired son had recently pointed to his younger brother, Jesse, after D.J. had spilled a drink.

"My aunt says a little boy who can blame something on somebody else, there's nothing wrong with him," she added.

Plagued since birth by a lack of dehydrogenase, an enzyme essential to burn fatty acids, D.J. relies on a special liquid diet high in carbohydrates and low in fat to provide him with the energy that his body cannot.

He must take the life-saving sustenance five times a day through long tubes down his nose due, in part, to a tracheotomy that enables him to breathe.

Able to utter little more than high-pitched gurgles and grunts, he's designed a sign language to make his needs known, bouncing up and down for a ride in his father's truck, sticking a finger in his ear to talk on the phone, touching his tongue when he's thirsty.

He cannot laugh or cry but has learned to express emotions, wringing his hands when he's happy, shedding crocodile tears when he's sad.

He's truly a miracle child, a medical trail blazer of sorts who stands a decent chance of leading a long, nearly normal life, said Dr. Charles A. Stanley, an endocrinologist at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

Only three youngsters, with D.J. the first, have been diagnosed as suffering from long-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency, a little-known metabolic disorder that takes its name from the generic form for fatty acids linked to the coenzyme A, Stanley said. The condition is much more severe than medium-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency, which has afflicted about 25 youngsters worldwide.

The second child with the long-chain deficiency, a girl from Baltimore, died at 6 months of age. The third, a 1-year-old girl from New York State, is alive but has brain damage.

Doctors were far from optimistic after the Oct. 25, 1981, birth of Donald James Rinehart, the first child for Mrs. Rinehart, 42, and her 35-year-old husband, Larry.

"He was a mystery to begin with," said Stanley, who's chronicling D.J.'s progress for a medical journal. "Now we understand a lot more."

"Obviously, there's not very much experience (with the deficiency). The future is a bit of the unknown," he added.

Bishop urges exploring peaceful path

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — It was just before Christmas. Handbells tinkled in the choir, children sang carols, and the British and American ambassadors read scripture about the birth of Jesus. The Rev. Eliya Khoury presided over a congregation packed into the aisles.

A month before, another crowded hall in the Jordanian capital echoed with speeches demanding struggle, by words or weapons, to regain the land where Jesus was born.

At that meeting, Eliya Khoury, assistant Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, was elected to the ruling body of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"A church leader is not here to sit all the time in church folding his hands like this, closing his eyes, praying," Khoury said in a recent interview. "I believe the church has to live within its own people ... and not put itself aside."

Many Palestinian Arabs are Anglicans because Britain controlled the area until after World War II, and Khoury, who studied theology in London and at the University of Colorado, has served his church as a priest since 1953 and as a bishop since 1979. The bishopric of Jerusalem includes the West Bank and other areas outside Israel, including Amman.

He has been a member of the Palestine National Council, the Palestinian parliament-in-exile, since 1969, a few months after Israeli authorities jailed him and then kicked him out of Jerusalem. He said he was permanently exiled because he opposed Israel's occupation.

Khoury, 62, is a soft-spoken man with thinning white hair. But when he speaks of Palestine and Western perceptions of the PLO, his voice rises in frustration.

"I do not encourage terrorism and the PLO is not a terrorist organization," he said. "We are a national resistance movement trying to defend the national rights of our own people within our own land, which was usurped illegally by the Israelis."

Khoury was a 25-year-old teacher when the United Nations carved Palestine into Arab and Jewish sectors. Arab nations, angered by the division, attacked the better-prepared Jewish forces.

He fled from West Jerusalem to the eastern, Arab sector of the city in 1967, when Israel seized Jerusalem, the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip in the third Arab-Israeli war.

Khoury served on the PLO's executive committee in 1974-76. When the Palestine National Council elected him this time, he said, he tried to resign because his church frowned on political involvement by priests.

But PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat told him he would have to resign to the council, which was no longer in session, he said.

As a member of the executive committee, he is a leader of an organization that formally advocates armed struggle to reclaim all of Palestine. Khoury himself urges exploring a peaceful path to the creation of a Palestinian state; his life has been threatened because of that stand.

In 1981, there were 581,000 television sets in the State of Israel.

Moses 'mortified by events'

Solicitation ordeal still in limbo

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An hour after Edwin Moses, an Olympic hero set on defending his reputation, denied charges of soliciting and drug possession at a press conference, the charges weren't charges anymore. Moses, reading from a prepared statement, said Tuesday "he was mortified by events the events of the last few days" and that he had strived to build a positive image throughout his life. One of 82 people arrested during a weekend sweep of Hollywood by police, the two-time gold medalist also said he was confident he would be cleared of criminal charges. However, Deputy City Attorney Mike Wilkinson said just over an hour later that criminal charges in the incident that occurred early Sunday morning had not yet been filed. Wilkinson had announced erroneously Monday that Moses, 29, was charged with soliciting a female police officer for prostitution and for possessing a small amount of marijuana. "As of now, the case is still being investigated for filing," and no decision has yet been made on whether to charge Moses, Wilkinson said Tuesday. "Cases like this are generally handled in a few days from when we get them. We expect a decision (on whether to file charges against Moses) within a few days." Explaining the decision process, Wilkinson said, "The prosecutor, in this case the city attorney, must feel convinced the person committed the act before filing criminal charges, since it's a serious matter for any person to be accused of a misdemeanor crime." Although Moses' agent, Gordon Baskin, had indicated the two-time Olympic gold medalist and his wife would talk extensively at the press conference about the events that led to his arrest, Moses merely read a brief statement and neither he nor his wife would answer questions. "Due to the advice of my attorney, I can't say more," Moses said at his meeting with the media which lasted only a couple of minutes. Saying, "I'm truly mortified by the events of the last few days," Moses added, "After an investigation, authorities will see they're mistaken. I've worked hard all my life to build a positive image and reputation... I know I've done nothing wrong." However, Commander William Booth, chief spokesman for the Los Angeles Police Department said, "I have absolutely no doubt that all the elements of the violation were there, were committed." Meanwhile, ABC-TV first called off its award presentation to Moses as "Wide World of Sports" athlete of the year, scheduled for Sunday prior to the network's coverage of the Super Bowl, then later decided to go through with the presentation. In Moses' hometown of Dayton, Ohio, Mayor Paul Leonard said the arrest would have no effect on the dedication of a street in the athlete's honor. "The dedication of the street was a tribute to his athletic achievements and the message he delivers to young folks," Leonard said Monday. He said the arrest should be "handled through the courts."

Even if speech isn't

Marino's style ready

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dan Marino was meeting the press. And for one fleeting moment, the supremely confident, record-breaking quarterback of the Miami Dolphins faltered. He had faced the fiercest of pass rushes through the 16 games of the season and had beaten them with aplomb bordering on arrogance. He had been confronted with sophisticated defenses and had pulled them apart like just so much taffy.

Now, on Tuesday, at the Dolphins' Oakland Coliseum practice site for Sunday's Super Bowl, Marino was being asked to explain his demeanor in general and specifically his almost placid acceptance of his phenomenal success. He knotted his brow. The answer came with far less ease than, say, a 50-yard touchdown pass against 4-6 coverage. "Something my father used to tell me," Marino began, "is, when things are happening to you, you don't..." He paused for a moment, then continued. "Whether you're winning or losing, you don't want to take winning or, uh..."

He stopped again. "How'd he say it now? Let me think about it for a second." Then, his thoughts composed, he offered: "You don't want to get too high when you're winning and you don't want to get too deep down when you're losing. You kind of try to keep it in the same plane because if it's the type of thing where you're winning a lot of games and you're real enthusiastic and then you go out and lose..." He stopped again, as though the prospect rarely enters his mind. "You've got to deal with them both the same way," he concluded.

No one seems to marvel at Marino's accomplishments and ability as much as his coach, Don Shula, who all but threw away his "pass only if you can't run" playbook when the young man from Pitt arrived to replace the "pass only if you have to" ability of David Woodley. "The guy is so amazing in the way he handles things. I don't feel I have to take him aside and tell him how to act. It all just seems to come within the framework of his ability and personality," Shula said. "He's extremely sure of himself and he's sure of that arm," Bill Walsh, the San Francisco 49ers' coach, said. "He knows the ball will be right where he wants it." Walsh has his own gunner in Joe Montana, whose emergence was much like Marino's, albeit less spectacular. Like Marino, Montana quarterbacked his team into the Super Bowl (a 26-21 victory over Cincinnati) in his first full year as a starter and was the game's Most Valuable Player. "Yeah, he came on faster," Montana said. "He had size and strength and they changed the system for him, to what he does. I kind of fit in but when I arrived there were definitely people playing better than I was." Three years ago, Montana was the coverboy quarterback. Now, with Marino the focal point, Montana is something of an afterthought here. "He's had a great year and I wouldn't expect anything less than this," Montana said. "I think it's great, what's happening to him. It doesn't bother me." "In the long run, as long as those guys out there know I've done a good job, that's all that means anything to me," he said, gesturing toward his teammates and coaches. But he did admit to a bit of envy. "If I was as big and strong as he is," he said, "maybe I'd last a few years longer." The week preceding the Super Bowl has driven some players, including veterans, to distraction. "I don't know," Marino said as he gazed over a squadron of writers and broadcasters, "I think it's kind of interesting, something I've never had to deal with before, so we'll see how I handle it. I'm not at all awed by it. It's new for me and I think it's kind of fun."

As was baseball's commissioner pick

USFL boss former Olympic organizer

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Football League has followed the lead of major league baseball in picking a commissioner from the management hopper of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee. Harry Usher, executive vice president and general manager of the LAOOC, accepted the USFL's top post on Tuesday. He was selected by a unanimous vote of the league's 14 owners. Usher was the top assistant to Peter Ueberroth, who left after the 1984 Olympics to become baseball commissioner. "This is a tremendous challenge and one I am looking forward to with great anticipation," Usher said in a statement released by the league office. "A challenge as stimulating as the 1984 Olympic Games is difficult to match. However, there is no question that the USFL will be equally demanding and interesting." The 45-year-old Usher, a Beverly Hills, Calif., lawyer, replaces Chet Simmons, the spring-summer football league's commissioner since a month after its founding almost three years ago. Simmons resigned Monday. Among those on hand to welcome Usher was Donald Trump, owner of the New Jersey Generals and one of the leaders of a movement to oust Simmons. Several owners became disenchanted when Simmons failed to negotiate a new, larger network television contract and also blamed him for the league's continued financial losses.

The USFL signed a two-year contract with ABC before Simmons became commissioner. After Simmons came aboard, the league signed a two-year contract with ESPN, a cable network. That contract was renewed for three years, beginning next month. ABC had two one-year options in its contract and picked up the option for the 1985 season. But the network informed the league that it wasn't interested in televising USFL games when the league moves to a fall schedule in 1986 in direct competition with the National Football League. Usher was given a three-year contract, effective Feb. 1. Usher, a specialist in entertainment law, said he planned to devote the next several weeks to becoming familiar with the USFL's operation. He played baseball and football at Brown, where he was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate in 1961. "This is an extremely important day for the USFL," said A. Alfred Taubman, chairman of the committee which decided on Usher. "Harry Usher is the right man at the right time. He is the person who will lead the league to the realization of its full potential as a major force in sports in this country." In the makeup of a track sprint relay team, the No. 1 man is the quickest starter, No. 2 is good at the baton exchange, No. 3 is excellent running on the turns, and No. 4 is the fastest.

At NCAA convention

Grid powers gain autonomy

By DOUG TUCKER AP Sports Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Coaches of so-called "minor sports" and schools with Mormon students were gearing up for battle as a sometimes-confused NCAA convention drew to a close.

About 1,500 delegates labored Tuesday through two-thirds of the 145 legislative proposals. Most significantly, Division I-A schools, the major football powers, gained a measure of long-sought voting autonomy and a controversial drug abuse measure was tabled for a year.

At least two proposals figured to draw heated debate today. Many schools were expected to oppose a complicated plan aimed at limiting playing seasons in many sports, including baseball and tennis.

And several Western schools promised a bitter fight against taking away the exemption to the five-year eligibility rule now enjoyed by athletes on church missions. Fifty-two members of Brigham Young's No. 1 football team this past season had served on two-year missions for the Mormon Church and used the waiver exemption.

The controversial drug proposal was expected to draw the most debate. Backing away from the issue was a painful decision, said many delegates.

"A lot of people are going to think that either we don't know how serious the problem is or we don't care," Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said. "That's very unfortunate. The legislation as written simply had too many things wrong with it."

A motion to refer it back to committee for a year was virtually unopposed.

Many schools opposed the plan because it banned only performance-enhancing drugs and not "street drugs," such as marijuana. Others argued that substitutes were readily available for every drug the proposal would have banned.

As expected, there was almost no opposition to giving Division I-A broad legislative autonomy. The football powers will be able to vote independently of the smaller schools on such issues as size of coaching staffs, number of scholarships, recruiting rules and academic standards.

It was only a partial victory, said many of the football powers. Any action taken by I-A will be subject to rescision by majority vote of the entire Division I membership.

There was much confusion over an amendment to lower the number of sports a school must sponsor in Division I-A. The schools believed they were voting to require each institution to reduce the requirements to six sports for both men and women — or to leave the requirements as they are — eight for men and six for women, with the women slated to go to eight in 1988.

But NCAA President John Toner explained after the vote that the requirement would be eight men's and only six women's sports without a scheduled increase for women.

The error was finally reversed by jumping ahead 26 proposals and rewording a measure intended to deal only with women's field hockey and softball, then going back to the original measure.

Division I-A wound up committed to eight men's and eight women's sports, effective immediately.

NBA roundup

Lakers learn lesson, Bucks' style

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

The Milwaukee Bucks taught the Los Angeles Lakers a valuable basketball lesson — that it isn't how well you shoot, but how much.

Los Angeles made 60.5 percent of its shots Tuesday night, compared to only 44.9 percent for the Bucks, but Milwaukee used a 22-8 advantage in offensive rebounds to take 22 more shots than the Lakers en route to a 115-105 National Basketball Association decision.

"They were shooting only about 40 percent in the first half," said Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who led the Lakers with 32 points. "But they were getting so many second opportunities. I don't care what you shoot. When you get second and third shots, it's not going to hurt you."

Milwaukee forward Terry Cummings equalled a career-high with 39 points, while Sidney Moncrief added 28 for the Bucks. Cummings also scored 39 points against the Lakers in his rookie season two years ago.

Philadelphia whipped New York to win its 12th straight game and pull even with Boston in the Atlantic Division with a league-best 32-6 record.

Portland knocked Houston out of first place in the Midwest Division as Jim Paxson scored 40 points and Mychal Thompson 28 to offset the efforts of Twin Towers Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson.

Resurgent Cleveland got 22 points from Phil Hubbard and outscored

Kansas City 27-15 in the fourth quarter to win for the ninth time in 15 games since a 2-19 start.

Dallas handed Golden State its eighth straight defeat as Mark Aguirre scored 25 points and Rolando Blackman 23.

Rookie Alvin Robertson scored a season-high 27 points, 10 of them during a run of 20 straight San Antonio points in the second half against Utah.

Dominique Wilkins scored 32 points and put Atlanta ahead to stay with a fourth-quarter basket against Indiana.

The lead changed hands seven times in the first six minutes of the fourth quarter before Wilkins' 10-footer gave the Hawks a 103-102 advantage. Sly Williams then scored seven points in the final 2:48 to keep Atlanta in front.

Seattle won for the third straight time and stopped Los Angeles' four-game winning streak behind Tom Chambers' 24 points.

In competition Friday

Brown finally gets chance at Harris

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Brown says he still loves competition and Franco Harris, though he relishes the challenge, says he's in a no-win situation.

Two of pro football's all-time leading rushers will go head-to-head Friday at an Atlantic City hotel in a four-sport competition called "I Challenge You."

This made-for-television event is an offshoot of Brown suddenly finding himself back in the spotlight in 1984 as both Harris and Walter Payton went after his all-time National Football League rushing record.

Brown showed that his competitive fires had not been banked when he briefly suggested he might come out of his two-decade retirement to regain the rushing mark after it was broken.

Brown gained 12,312 yards and averaged 5.2 yards a carry in a career that began in 1957 and ended in 1965. He played in 118 games, all with the Cleveland Browns.

Payton, in his 10th season with the Chicago Bears, did in fact pass Brown in 1984, running his total to 13,309 yards. He has averaged 4.4

yards in 146 games. Harris, who was released prior to the start of the 1984 season by Pittsburgh, where he played for 12 seasons, played eight games with Seattle before being released. He stands third at 12,120 yards, having averaged 4.1 yards a carry in 173 games.

Brown, now a movie actor and at 48 still a rugged-looking man, said, "People wanted to talk about the (rushing) record and I responded in an uncharacteristic way. I didn't agree with everything everybody said and we started talking about it."

"I said I'd run Franco in the 40 (yard dash) and he accepted."

They will vie in the 40-yard dash, as well as competing in basketball, racquetball and a special version of one-on-one football.

"We agreed on the four events," Brown noted. "We wanted to get some football into it, but the best we could do was to get Phil Simms (of the New York Giants) to be a quarterback and we're going to alternate being receivers and defenders. So you'll get a chance to see who can catch the ball and defend and who is still maneuverable."

There will be stands for 1,500 people on the makeshift playing field, and the competition will be televised live in New York and Los Angeles and syndicated on film to 139 other stations to be shown throughout the weekend.

At Fort Worth Zoo

Birdman keeps friends in fine feather friends

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Not everyone can talk to a swan or a cockatoo and have it pay attention.

But when Ronald Kimbell tells Tornado the swan to straighten up and fly right, the creature lifts his graceful head to the sky and croons like a folk singer.

And gossips at the Fort Worth Zoo have long maintained that Cookie the Cockatoo is madly in love with Kimbell and shamelessly ignores her mate to flirt with him whenever he's in the neighborhood.

Kimbell has a way with birds. Lots of birds. Nearly 400 of them, as a matter of fact. As supervisor of the zoo's bird department, he is responsible for keeping all of them well-fed and feathered.

It's a job that has changed markedly since Kimbell joined the zoo as a fresh young high school graduate more than 20 years ago.

"I was looking for a temporary job," Kimbell said. Except for a two-year stint in the Army, the Fort Worth Zoo has been his only employer. Neither Kimbell, a bachelor who has devoted his life to his art, nor the zoo would have it any other way.

These days, a person would have a hard time getting a job at the zoo without a college degree in the field, Kimbell said. "But when I started I'd never worked with birds before and I'd never studied them. I've taught myself as I went along and learned from experience. Sometimes experience is the best way to learn about birds."

There have been many changes in the way birds are cared for since Kimbell started at the zoo.

"The techniques have changed. We have better foods and medical care," he said. "Also many of the birds used to be so easy to get, we didn't worry when one of them died. Now some birds are so rare, you'd better really take care of them."

Kimbell still mourns the loss of 177 birds that died Christmas Eve in 1983 when the birdhouse at the zoo burned down. Some of them were quite rare and some were on the endangered species list.

"We had 10 Bali mynas in the birdhouse that we hoped to release back into the wilds of Bali," Kimbell said. The endangered mynas were part of a breeding program at the zoo and their loss was particularly heart-breaking.

Along with many other zoos in this country and around the world, the Fort Worth Zoo regards propagation of rare and endangered species as one of its major functions.

"Zoos working together may be the best hope some of these animals have," Kimbell said. "A lot of our purpose is to propagate and release back into the wild. Unfortunately, in some cases, there is no wild to release back into, so zoos are trying to help some of these species survive in captivity at least."

Fortunately, not all the Fort Worth Zoo's breeding programs were damaged severely by the fire. Many birds were housed in other cages or in the large outdoor aviary, and the zoo has had good success in breeding African gray parrots, waterfowl such as swans, cattle egrets and roseate spoonbills.

"Right now, we have 44 roseate spoonbills, and we just shipped 12 to Walt Disney World. Normally, zoos breed the ones they're the best at breeding, and then we swap around with each other. We'll be getting some scarlet ibis back for our spoonbills."

The spoonbill breeding program has been so successful that it garnered a Silver Propagation Award for the Fort Worth Zoo. The award is given by the American Association for Zoological Parks and Aquariums in recognition of 25 successful nestings. (That's nest, not birds.)

"Our spoonbills are really in demand. Every major zoo in the country has asked for some," Kimbell said.

But for Fort Worth's zoo to become one of the leaders in the field of bird propagation, a new indoor aviary is vital, he added. Plans were being drawn for one even before the fire.

The projected aviary would cost more than $3 million, said Elvie Turner, director of the zoo. Funding has been sought from some of Fort Worth's major foundations.

"Right now we don't know where we stand," Turner said. "We were told that no funding was available last year, but we were asked to reapply this year. That's what we did, but we haven't heard anything yet."

As envisioned by Turner and Kimbell, the new aviary would be a state-of-the-art facility that would make Fort Worth one of the three leading zoo's in the country when it comes to birds.

Little more than 6 percent of U.S. revenue comes from corporate taxes. The average income tax rate for large corporations in 1983 was 16.7 percent, far below the nominal rate of 46 percent, because of various deductions.

Adult bookstore agrees to group's demands

AUSTIN (AP) — An adult bookstore agreed to the demands of a neighborhood association after it pleaded guilty to charges of promotion of obscene material. The guilty plea on Monday, as part of a plea bargain, paved the way for the store, Adults Only, to remain open. Store owners, Old Town Emporium Inc., also were fined $1,000, but three counts of selling obscene material filed in May against store employee Bill Adams were dropped. Under the signed agreement, the store will:

- change its name to Lamar Bookstore;
- agree not to expand;
- agree not to sell such substances as butyl nitrate, also known as "poppers," or "poor man's cocaine";
- agree not to sell "minor-oriented materials";
- fence the store on three sides; and
- confine its signs advertising

the adult nature of the business to a small sign on the door advising minors and unsuspecting adults not to enter. Store owners are well aware the neighborhood association do not welcome them in their neighborhood, said Mary Hausmann, a member of the Walnut Creek Neighborhood Association in northeast Austin. "We don't want this to look like tacit approval. We still have to drive by it every day," said Ms. Hausmann, who also signed the agreement. Austin attorney Hugh Lowe, who represented the bookstore, said the store had never sold butyl nitrate, but had sold books and magazines that are "minor-oriented."

Lowe said the store didn't sell any publications with child models but had magazines of models, made to appear young and books describing sexual acts by minors. Those materials, however, have been removed from the store, he said. Lowe said if his store hadn't conceded to the neighborhood's demands, the store would have to face the wrath of neighbors "who have a legitimate complaint that it does something to their quality of life."

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Texas lawmakers entered the 1985 session of the Legislature last week surrounded by budget deficit forecasts and pressures to reform last summer's school reform law. Compared with other states, the Texas Legislature has always shown up as bottom-line conservative. This new Legislature will probably be even more austere with the tax dollar and certainly more right-wing on some political issues.

The Republican Party presence is now stronger than at any other time since Reconstruction days, and the common expectation is that state agencies will feel the belt-tightening pinch, criminals will feel the slap of the long arm of the law, and businesses will see government back off their pocketbooks. The GOP now holds more than one-third of the House membership and seven state senate seats. Gone are several liberal Democrats, including Lloyd Doggett from the Senate. With his departure liberals lose their top strategist, publicist-maker, and even cult-hero.

The Senate
A new rising star in the Senate was elected president pro tem last week: Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. Farabee is highly respected for his ability to pull various factions into a solution. Senate debate rules are such that one needs a two-thirds majority vote just to get a bill out for a floor vote. Consequently, a block of 11 senators can roadblock any bill. The Republicans need to locate only four allies among the upper chamber's conservative Democrats to effectively bottle up all liberal legislation. The reverse is also possible, but when the traditional logjam peaks near adjournment, expect the liberals to be scraping for budget concessions.

House Revolution
The House of Representatives, meanwhile, is so solidly conservative that after Speaker Gib Lewis was overwhelmingly re-elected last week, he felt strong enough to take potshots at the federal judges who have mandated new prison system spending. Lewis' words were critical and reflected a visceral feeling of House members that federal district judge William Wayne Justice is encroaching on the constitutional right of the Legislature to distribute tax revenues. Speculation promptly started over whether Lewis and House members will actually defy the feds by refusing to write court-ordered expensive prison reforms into the scant budget. Lewis immediately disavowed such thoughts.

Alleged killer visits Beaumont couple

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — He came asking for a glass of water and treated Ruth and Terry Seymour's gift of socks as if it were a brand new suit. Bedraggled and poorly dressed, he made the Seymours nervous by saying things like "I don't beat Daddy anymore."

But Huy Nguong Duong seemed nice enough and later thanked them profusely as staff members of the halfway house from where he'd wandered came to take him away. That was two days before Thanksgiving, and now the Seymours' visitor sits in a jail cell, charged with stabbing a 9-year-old, Houston boy 20 times at a school bus stop. The boy, Shane Smith, died Thursday. "At the time (of the visit in November), he appeared to be someone that needed help," Mrs. Seymour said. She said she hesitated at first before she let the poorly dressed man into her north Beaumont home when he appeared at about 9:30 p.m. and asked for a glass of water.

Once the family fed Duong, 25, and gave him a pair of old socks to protect his feet from the cold, she called Thi Phuong, Duong's sister in Houston. The sister told them to call the Land Manor halfway house from which Duong walked away from earlier in the day. While waiting for the attendants from the halfway house to arrive, Duong told the family of his past. "He was adamant that he wasn't going back to the halfway house," Mrs. Seymour told the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal. "He said the doctors there made him take medicine that made him sick. He didn't want to take the medicine."

Pointing to his head, Duong told the Seymours that he had been sick and in hospitals in the past but that he was fine now. "He said 'I'm OK now. I am not sick. I don't beat Daddy any more,'" Mrs. Seymour said. "He then started slapping his fists together."

She said that was the only time she worried about her family's safety. Duong told the Seymours that he had been sick in Vietnam but that no medicine had been available there. He said he liked his home in Vietnam but had to leave once the communists moved in. "He kept saying he wanted to go to college" in Vietnam to get a job, Mrs. Seymour said. "He said he was smart, that he knew his arithmetic. He then started with his addition, saying one and one is two and all that."

Ms. Phuong said her brother first showed signs of mental illness in 1975 while a student in South Vietnam. The family fled to Hong Kong in 1979 and came to Houston in 1980, she said. Duong had been a voluntary patient in Austin State hospital but was released at his demand two months ago. He stayed in the Land Manor Halfway House only nine days — Nov. 13-22 — before Ms. Phuong took him back to Houston.

Once news broke of the Houston boy's death and the charges against Duong, the Seymours recognized Duong from photographs and remembered their visitor. "When we gave him the socks, he acted like we had given him a whole new suit," Mrs. Seymour said. As Duong left the Seymours' house, she said, "He couldn't thank us enough for what we did."

No Spending Bills
Right now $25 a barrel is a magic number that leaders in the Legislature and the lobby are watching with much dread. Any price falling below it is expected to seriously harm the state's oil industry recovery, even to driving the state back into recession. Loss of revenues in the petroleum industry means loss of tax revenues for state government, and lawmakers are presently in no mood to receive new legislation requiring spending money. State agencies which increase revenues are favored over those which spend revenues to provide citizen services. One state employee group last week went so far to suggest a hiring freeze to avoid massive lay-offs next September.

Tax Constitutional
Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox issued a legal opinion upholding the recent law making the sale of newspapers subject to the state sales tax. Newspapers were exempted under the old law, but Mattox said they were "singled out for special favorable treatment and that is no longer the case."

The opinion was sought by Bullock, who must collect the new tax but describes it as so difficult to collect that "it's more trouble than it's worth."

Bullock, Forecast
But the speculation isn't far-fetched. This session's revenue forecast is not enough for everyone, and Texas lawmakers don't like being forced to spend money by a life-appointed judge who will never answer to voters at the ballot box. The forecast is likely going to get worse before it gets better, warned Comptroller Bob Bullock last week. The price of oil on the world spot market must pick up, or Bullock may be forced to lower revenue estimates. "All I can tell them (legislators, state agencies) is we're scraping the bottom of a $25 barrel of oil and it might even get worse before it gets better," Bullock said.
