Bagging Potatoes

Potato harvest is winding down, although baggers in a local shed remain busy. Potato prices were at about $12 a carton this year, causing some farmers to contemplate the price of digging.

County money denied for memorabilia

After a staff member with the State Attorney General's office said he would be "a bit leery of it," Deaf Smith County Commissioners decided Monday not to loan money to the local Sesquicentennial Committee to purchase an inventory of memorabilia items.

Garth Thomas had appeared before the court during its regular meeting Monday morning, to ask for a fund of approximately $2,500 to buy such items as ink pens, T-shirts and Texas flags that could be sold during the upcoming Town and Country Jubilee and other such functions.

Thomas said profits from the sale could go to purchase a permanent memorial of some sort that could be enjoyed by the entire county. He also mentioned that if the local committee does not sell the items, out-of-town vendors may come in and market them.

Commissioners gave their approval to Thomas, who is chairman of the local Sesquicentennial Committee, but suggested the inventory be funded through another source, such as a bank.

Jail deficit funded

In other business, each commissioner transferred $50,000 from his precinct road and bridge fund to the jail construction budget. The court had issued certificates of obligation in the amount of $1.5, but the lowest contract bid was for $1.56.

Other expenses such as the eight percent architect's fee and ground work furnished by the county will drive the cost of jail renovation up as well, according to County Treasurer Vesta Mae Nunley.

Commissioners also passed a resolution regarding Senate Bill 449, a bill endorsed by Texas county treasurers and passed by the 69th Legislature.

Effective Sept. 1, county government offices that collect fees would be required to deposit the proceeds with the county treasurer on a daily basis. Counties with a population of less than 50,000, however, were given a choice of waiving that schedule in favor of making deposits once every 30 days. The court decided in favor of the 30-day option.

County Clerk David Ruland ask the court to consider splitting two of the county's voting boxes used for countywide elections, because they currently have more than 2,000 registered voters assigned.

Ruland suggested that the Precinct 1 box be split, with part of the residents continuing to vote at the county's Bull Barn and a new polls opened at Aikman School for the remainder of the area.

The Precinct 2 box could also be split, he explained, with part voting as usual at the courthouse and a new group at Tierra Blanca School.

Ruland said it would also be more cost effective to eliminate small

Suit filed against city's commission seating

Claiming that requests made of the City of Hereford to institute a single member district election system were "refused and ignored", plaintiffs represented by Texas Rural Legal Aid have filed a class action complaint against the city, the mayor and the four city commissioners.

The suit, filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Amarillo, seeks a declaratory judgement "that the existing at large scheme of electing members of the city commission...violates plaintiffs' civil rights in that such method illegally and/or unconstitutionally dilutes the voting strength of Mexican-American electors."

The complaint seeks a permanent injunction prohibiting the calling, holding, supervising or certifying of any future city commission elections under the present system, and asks for the formation of a city commission whose members are elected from single member districts.

According to TRLA, there has been only one Mexican-American elected to the city commission although several Hispanics have run for a spot on the commission.

They claim the current political process is not equally open to participation by the plaintiffs in that they have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to elect representatives of their choice.

Representatives of the local TRLA office had appeared twice before the Hereford City Commission asking that the single member system be abandoned.

Listed as representatives of the class are Hereford residents Flora Agüero, Domingo Landin and Criselda Landin.

Named as plaintiffs attorneys along with TRLA are Dallas lawyer William Garrett and Rolando L. Rios, an attorney with the Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project in San Antonio.

Tax review board booked solid today

The Appraisal Board of Review convened at 10 a.m. today in the Deaf Smith County Courthouse to hear protests from taxpayers who think their property was valued too high in the recent reappraisal program.

The three-member board is booked solid throughout the day and is scheduled to be in session again Wednesday, according to an official from the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District office. The board is composed of Wayne Phillips, Lloyd Sharp and Raymond Schlabs.

Unhappy taxpayers were supposed to file an application to be heard by the board, but tax appraisal officials are expecting a number of citizens to show up anyway. "We'll try to meet with them or schedule them for an appointment Wednesday," said one of the appraisal officials.

The appointments with taxpayers today are scheduled every 10 minutes. If all the taxpayers who want to protest cannot be handled today or Wednesday, they will probably get an appointment for the next session Aug. 8.

The latter date was set up for rural property owners, but the board of review will hear anyone who has applied.

A significant increase in residential property values has created the problem. Many homes in Hereford were doubled in value. Fred Fox, chief appraiser for Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, explained the revaluation program resulted in "a shift of the burden from farmland and business personal property to residential and commercial property."

The appraisal notices will not become official until the Board of Review sets the certified values. Pre-hearings on the appraisals was held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday last week and ended Monday.

voting precincts such as the one at Dawn, but admitted that could "create a fuss."

"Anything we do has to be cleared by the Justice Department," he told the court. "They like to have a lot of publicity about such things. They would probably call a public hearing, which would allow folks to complain if they don't like the idea."

Reagan, Li to discuss nuclear agreement, Soviet policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in his first high-level diplomacy since his cancer surgery 10 days ago, was receiving Chinese President Li Xiannian today to discuss a nuclear cooperation agreement and basic strategy toward the Soviet Union.

Officials said the long-stalled nuclear agreement probably will be signed this week, although not by the two presidents.

Reagan's schedule for his meeting with the 76-year-old Li has been somewhat abbreviated because of his surgery.

White House South Lawn welcoming ceremonies for the Chinese leader — normally heralded with trumpeters, military bands playing national anthems and booming cannon and gun salutes — were to be cut back by about five minutes from the normal 30 minutes.

The two leaders were to meet afterward in the Blue Room, a formal reception room on the White House first floor, accompanied by their top advisers.

Reagan will host a formal state banquet in Li's honor in the evening, but in order to shorten the normally scheduled four-hour event, the Chinese leader and his wife, Lin Jiamai, will arrive about 15 minutes later than usual.

Reagan planned to deliver a toast in Li's honor after the state dinner, but would not remain for the entertainment that follows such functions, said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

A senior administration official said the nuclear cooperation agreement, first initialed during Reagan's visit to China 15 months ago, would be discussed by the two leaders, but they would spend most of their time on broader issues "like basic strategy of how we are both going to approach the Soviet Union."

Sino-Soviet relations have improved considerably in recent months. The two communist giants recently concluded a major trade and economic cooperation agreement. However, the official, who insisted on anonymity, said the Reagan administration sees no cause for alarm.

He said a reduction in tensions between Peking and Moscow "makes sense for them just as our current effort to engage the Soviets in a dialogue makes sense for us."

The official said he saw nothing to block signing of the nuclear cooperation agreement. (See REAGAN, Page 2)

Americans retiring earlier

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study conducted for Congress concludes that age 65 is no longer the standard retirement age for most people with private pensions.

Instead, the median age for workers to start drawing private pensions is 62, according to an analysis of Census Bureau records by the General Accounting Office.

"Almost 60 percent start receiving private pensions) before reaching 65," according to Richard Fogel, director of the GAO's human resources division. "Thus, 65 no longer appears to be the retirement age chosen by most Americans with private pensions."

The GAO studied the retirement question at the request of Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on civil service, post office and general services.

Stevens sought the information to help guide his panel's work in drafting a new pension plan for federal workers hired after Dec. 31, 1963, who are all covered under Social Security, as well.

Workers hired before then have their own pension plan that allows them to retire at the age of 55 after 30 years' service. The Reagan administration has argued that this is out of sync with private sector practices and that the retirement age for full benefits should be raised to 65 for all federal workers.

Most Social Security beneficiaries also claim reduced benefits before 65. They can get 80 percent of full benefits at age 62, with the amount increasing each month that they wait until 65.

The GAO cited a government survey of those collecting Social Security benefits for the first time in

Quarter horse reported stolen

The theft of a registered quarter horse valued at $1,500 was reported to the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's office over the weekend.

Owner Debbie Noland, Rt. 5, said the horse was apparently taken from a pen that it shared with several other horses. She did not believe the animal could have escaped the pen. Sheriff's deputies also took reports of dog bite, criminal mischief, and theft of gas from the Texas Grant Council bus.

Two blazes doused

Hereford volunteer firemen made a run over the weekend, to the said Hicks residence five miles west of Ford. Firemen extinguished trash fire, which destroyed some plastic irrigation pipe.

Over oil prices

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC oil ministers, divided on a strategy for regaining control of the oil market, resumed urgent talks today on a Saudi Arabian proposal for cutting the price of some crudes.

The 13 ministers had little to say as they entered the ballroom of a Geneva hotel where they convened their third session since the talks started Monday.

Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, who is president of the organization, told reporters the group would discuss in depth the Saudi proposal for a price cut. He declined to offer any details of the plan.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the influential Saudi oil minister, said Monday he believed most of the 13 member nations saw the need to cut prices for lower-grade oils.

But other ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries made it clear to reporters on the first day of the group's summer conference that they think price cuts would hurt OPEC.

"We must defend the price," said Fawzi A. Shakshuki, the oil minister of Libya.

Yamani did not say how big the cut should be.

OPEC is divided between a faction that thinks the solution to OPEC's problems is a further cut in production and another group that believes lower prices are the answer.

Industry analysts say neither action is likely to halt a trend toward lower oil prices and waning OPEC power and wealth in the last half of the 1980s.

Fledging hero appears before his public

By DANA FIELDS Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's first astronaut refuses to call himself a national hero, but to children and teen-agers he is, at the very least, a figure of fascination.

The Nov. 27 flight of NASA's new space shuttle Atlantis, urged the hundreds of young people packed into a meeting hall at to study hard above all.

fiction as a boy but had never intentionally pursued a career that would someday take him into space.

Both satellites were built by Hughes Aircraft Corp. in California, and Neri was asked if he thought it wise for Mexico to enter the space age with U.S.-built and -launched equipment.

Neri disagreed that Mexico was in any way conceding its rights by buying the services of Hughes and of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Once launched, he pointed out, the satellites will be controlled from a new space station in Mexico City. Moreover, he argued, it would take Mexico "many, many years" at great cost to develop the technology that he said would soon begin benefiting the country.

As for having women aboard space shuttles, he said to appreciative giggles from the audience, "I'm delighted to be working with them."

RETIRING

1980 and 1981. It found that 76 percent of the men and 84 percent of the women were under 65, the report said.

Two years ago, President Reagan and Congress raised the normal Social Security retirement age to 67 in the next century to help keep the system in the black.

The GAO report said a separate study by the Department of Labor also supports the conclusion that most people with private pensions stop working before 65.

Fogel said that private pension coverage has expanded rapidly since World War II. "Pension coverage increased from 24 percent of private wage and salary workers in 1960 to 49 percent in 1979," he said.

The Social Security Administration has reported in the past that many of those who take early retirement do so for reasons of poor health.

But the GAO, based on its analysis of data from the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey, concluded that only one-third of the men age 50 to 61 getting private pensions were also drawing Social Security disability ty, Supplemental Security Income welfare payments or workmen's compensation.

"As a result, we conclude ... that about two-thirds of male private pension recipients younger than 62 are, in fact, receiving regular retirement benefits rather than disability benefits from their employers," Fogel said.

Some 36 percent of men age 66 and 19 percent of men age 62 had private pensions in 1983, according to the GAO analysis. Among women, 7.5 percent had private pensions at age 62, 16 percent at age 65 — the peak year — and 13.5 percent at age 66.

Hereford police make five alcohol related arrests

Hereford police made five alcohol related arrests over the weekend and Monday, also arresting two persons on disorderly conduct charges and one on a DPS warrant.

Investigations included taking a report from a feedlot employee who claimed two men who gave him a ride to town held a gun to his head and robbed him of his clothes and wallet.

Police talked to a young boy accused of starting a fire in his back yard and met with a 12-year-old who said a 13-year-old acquaintance cut him on the arm while they were at the carnival. The youth received five stitches at Deaf Smith General Hospital, the police report said.

Brett Barrick, 233 Aspen, told police a side window and the windshield of his car were broken out during the night. Damage was placed at $400.

A man complained that someone has been living in his vacant trailer house without his permission, and a local motel was ripped off for $85 in long distance telephone calls.

Also during the weekend, a babysitter was frightened by a window peeper, and a 24-year-old man was asked to leave the city swimming pool for misbehaving.

There were two harassment incidents reported to police involving persons who have been indicted by a local grand jury and are out on bail awaiting trial.

Volunteer fire departments face declining membership

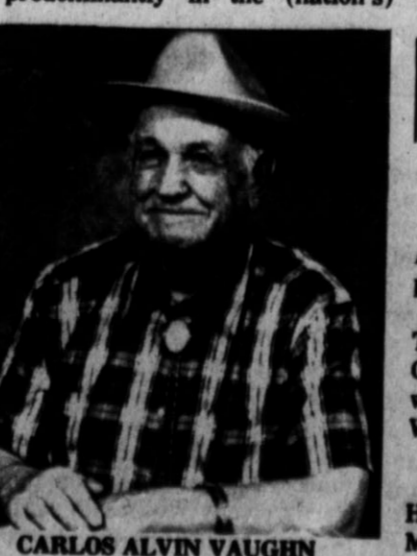

By STEVE COSTELLO Associated Press Writer WINSTED, Conn. (AP) — When the fire bell went off years ago, Walter D. Miller recalls, workers from the factories and small businesses in town would stop working and go fight the fire.

In those days, said Miller, a 25-year veteran, as many as 45 members of the volunteer Winsted Fire Department would show up for a weekday fire. Last spring, when the bell went off for a fire in the basement of the Gilbert School, nine volunteers turned out, Miller said.

Miller, who has been his department's fire chief since 1979, owns a heating equipment business himself. From small working-class towns like Winsted to white-collar bedroom communities like Farmington and large cities like Stamford, volunteer companies in Connecticut are having a hard time finding people to fight fires, especially on weekdays.

"Times have changed," said Clinton Hughes, 58, a member of the Wethersfield volunteer fire department for 37 years, the past 11 as chief. "Years ago, out of 30 guys in a company, 24 were married. Today, I have 18 single guys. The married guys have to work two jobs to survive."

"Part of it is society," said Vincent DiPietro, assistant fire chief of the Farmington Fire Department. "There are too many other things going on: fathers taking a bigger role in raising their kids, video games, summer homes, summer vacations."

metropolitanized areas." "It doesn't appear to be as bad in the rural areas," said Monihan, whose organization represents 1.5 million volunteer firefighters in 27,000 companies nationwide.

"It's more typical in the bedroom community," he said. "They don't come from a background of the volunteer. They come out of a city, and (to them) fire protection is just something that happens."

Monihan said that in some places where volunteer turnout is a problem, combination forces using several people from neighboring companies have been developed.

In other places, the county government or the fire company itself pays a skeleton daytime crew to ensure fire protection.

Winsted, a town of 12,000 in northwestern Connecticut, once had many locally owned factories. To belong to the volunteer force was a matter of prestige, and the bosses had no hesitation about freeing workers for fighting fires.

"Now we have an industrial park way down at the end of town ... and they're not so hot about letting people go," Miller said. "They do in most cases, but it's not as liberal as it used to be ... when all of these factories were owned by Winsted people."

Statewide, there are 29,000 volunteer firefighters in Connecticut, down from 31,000 a few years ago, according to Hughes, a past president of the Connecticut State Fireman's Association.

By contrast, there are about 4,200 firefighters in 43 paid fire companies statewide. To provide paid fire protection, a town would have spend at least $100,000 a year, according to Winsted First Selectman James D. O'Meara.

Because of its mix of urban, suburban and rural neighborhoods, Stamford is the only one of the state's five major cities with volunteer companies in addition to a 215-member paid force, which covers the downtown business district.

tion agreement during Li's visit to Washington, which continues until midday Thursday. The signing would be conducted by high ranking officials from the two nations, officials said.

Signing was planned later today for three other agreements, on education, cultural affairs and a fisheries accord that will make it possible for Chinese to fish in American waters.

The nuclear agreement would clear the way for the sale of American nuclear reactors and other nuclear technology that China wants for an ambitious nuclear power electricity program. The official said the maximum potential for American sales would be between $10 billion and $12 billion, but that the actual amount would probably be considerably less.

COUNTY

Commissioners took no action on the matter, but indicated they would solicit opinions on such a change. Ruland said a statute to be adopted Aug. 25 makes it clear that there should not be more than 2,000 voters served by one precinct.

Game plan good but....

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Regarding the letter from the wife who finally learned of her husband's infidelities:

It is not a question of forgiving the errant husband. She can forgive and even wish the poor fellow well, while rationalizing that she does not care to spend the remainder of her life with a liar and a cheat.

I would hope, however, that she would not waste any time wondering how she could have been deceived. Natural tomcats invariably pick trusting, straightarrow mates and are diabolically clever at covering their tracks.

Most wives of these aging Romeos were reared to be loving and supportive helpmates and mothers. When they learn what the bum is up to they suffer in silence. My advice is, don't get mad. Get even. Hold your tongue and get your ducks in a row while you clean out all your joint accounts. Buy an extensive wardrobe and a good car. Get some job training while you kill him with kindness. And don't worry about being deceptive. Remember, being a good liar is the trait he admires most.

When the time is ripe, sit back and enjoy the look on his face when your lawyer hands him the divorce papers.

It can be a great big, wonderful world when you are a free woman. Remember that living well is still the best revenge.—BEEN THERE IN HOUSTON

DEAR HOUSTON: Your game plan sounds good but it will work only if the woman handles the checkbook and hubby pays no attention to what is spent.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wasn't crazy about your advice to "B.T.," the 32-year-old guy who gave up trying to write his uncle a letter because he couldn't spell the words he wanted to use to express himself. He urged kids to learn the fundamentals in school and warned that if they didn't, they would never catch up.

You said you checked with several educators in Illinois and were told the self-taught method is best. "Buy a good dictionary," you said, "and some books on grammar and construction." In my opinion you blew it.

I'm 30 years old and had six years of college, but no degrees. I cannot write or spell. I volunteered for special testing and discovered I have a learning disability which has nothing to do with intelligence. I simply do not process written material the way normal people do. I now use a computer and am being tutored nights in the Lab School of Washington, D.C. My progress has been terrific and I'm going to make it.—TOM C.

DEAR TOM C.: The experts with whom I checked did not entertain the possibility that the writer was learning-disabled, and neither did I. The Writer simply said he was a lousy speller and I took him at his word.

I received many letters from readers who suggested that the man write to Literacy Volunteers of America, Inc., Department A, P.O. Box 6255, Syracuse, N.Y. 13217. They will be pleased to send literature. Sally Smith of the Lab School of Washington, D.C., suggested that anyone interested write to the National Headquarters of A.C.L.D. (Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities), 4156 Library Rd., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15234.

These are both superb groups. I recommend them highly.

4-H Around the County

By SUSAN N. RANEY
 County Extension Agent

By the time this article appears in this issue of the Hereford Brand I will no longer be a Texan! I will be a Midwesterner (not a Yankee!) living in Chicago, Ill. What a change from the Southwest I've lived in for 24 years. Anyway, back to the 4-H business at hand.

Plans are already underway for the fifth Annual Hereford Lady's Lead Line Show which will be held on Saturday, Aug. 17 at the Jubilee Junction in Dameron Park.

Yes, this is quite a change from the previous Lady's Lead Shows which were held in conjunction with the Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show in January. I realize summertime is not exactly the time of year to be thinking of wool garments or woolly sheep, but due to the consensus of participants and sponsors of the show, it was moved.

"Saturday in the Park" is appropriately the theme of this year's show and as I stated before the show will be held under the shady trees of Dameron Park on Saturday afternoon.

All 4-H, FFA, and FHA members are invited to participate in the contest and may pick up rules and entry forms at the county extension office on the third floor of the County Courthouse.

Now, for those of you reading this article wondering what in the world a Lady's Lead Line Show is...wonder no more!

The contest is designed to promote the use of wool in sewing, combine the two areas of agriculture and home economics into one contest, and provide an opportunity for contestants to proceed to the National Lady's Lead Contest held in Louisville, Kentucky in November. Contestants also have the opportunity to enter the Texas Make-It-With-Wool contest held in October. So see, it's not too early to be sewing with wool!

At the actual contest, a young lady show blocks (cards & combs the wool of a sheep) a ewe and leads it at halter. She is accompanied by a young male escort who shows her ewe as she is modeling a woolen garment. The garment must be hand-made and must contain a minimum 50 percent wool. The contestant is judged on her poise & grooming, how she handles the ewe, how the ewe is groomed, and how well the garment is made. WOW! Sound like fun? You bet!

Actually it's a beautiful contest that everyone should see. Make a point to view the Hereford Lady's Lead Line Show on Saturday afternoon, August 17. Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Hereford wins opener in Babe Ruth state tourney

Pitchers Tim Long and James Hernandez combined to strike out eight Mineral Wells batters to help lead Hereford to an 8-3 victory in the West Texas Babe Ruth League state tournament in Plainview for 14 and 15-year-olds.

Hereford will play Andrews tonight at 5:30 p.m. Andrews defeated Randall County 9-6 on Saturday and beat Levelland 29-15 Sunday. In the other Saturday game, Mineral Wells edged Plainview 2-1.

The game between Hereford and Mineral Wells on Sunday night did not start until 9:45 p.m. because the Andrews-Levelland game lasted more than three and one half hours. The Hereford-Mineral Wells game lasted about two hours.

Driving in one run each for the Hereford all-star team against Mineral Wells were Hernandez, Robby Collier and Raymond Romo. Two of the Hereford runs scored on errors, and other runs were scored on a fielder's choice, a foul pop fly, and a hit batsman with the bases loaded.

Hereford had a pair of baserunners in the first inning but failed to score. In the top of the first inning, Mineral Wells gained a 1-0 lead on a pair of doubles in the top of the second inning.

In the bottom of the second, Hereford loaded the bases as Hernandez and Edward Martinez walked and Romo singled. Collier drove in a run with a single to tie the game at 1-1.

The bases remained loaded when Ross Torres came to bat. Torres was hit by a pitch, and Hereford moved ahead 2-1.

Romo later scored on a throwing error by the Mineral Wells catcher to give Hereford a 3-1 lead.

Long opened the Hereford third inning with a single, and moved to third on a two-base error. Derrell Page walked and stole second.

Hernandez then hit a grounder in the infield, but no throw was attempted to home plate or any base, and Long scored to increase Hereford's lead to 4-1.

A pop fly was hit by Martinez into foul territory behind first base, and Page managed to score from third base after the pop fly was caught.

Romo then hit an RBI double, stole third base, and scored on a throwing error by the Mineral Wells catcher. Hereford's lead stood at 7-1.

Hereford had two runners on base in the fifth inning, but was unable to add to its lead.

Mineral Wells scored a run on two singles and an error in the fourth inning.

The Hereford all-stars scored their last run of the game in the sixth inning when Long singled and scored on a single by Hernandez.

Behind 8-2, Mineral Wells had one inning left at bat. Two singles were hit, and a run was scored by stealing home.

Mineral Wells attempted to steal home for another run, but failed to do so as Hereford recorded the second out of the inning on the play. A ground-out was the final out of the inning and the game.

Long pitched the first four innings for Hereford, striking out five Mineral Wells batters. Hernandez had three strikeouts in three innings pitched. Only one Mineral Wells batter reached base on a walk.

Hereford had eight hits in the game compared to four for Mineral Wells. Six Hereford batters walked in the contest.

Hereford falls 11-1 in Mustang tourney

In the first round of the Mustang League sectional tournament in Amarillo Monday night, Hereford fell to Amarillo American 11-1 in a game that ended after four innings because of the 10-run rule.

The Hereford team, an all-star squad from the Kids Inc. boys' minor league, plays tonight at 8:30 p.m. in a loser's bracket contest against Amarillo National or Amarillo International.

Amarillo American scored six runs in the second inning and five runs in the third inning in defeating Hereford Monday.

The lone run for Hereford came in the fourth inning. Cory Newton singled and stole second, and Jake Head walked.

John Ramirez batted in Newton with a single.

Frank Chance of the Chicago Cubs had the dubious distinction of being the first man thrown out of a World Series game by an umpire. It happened in 1910 in the series between the Cubs and Philadelphia Athletics.

Bobby Richardson of the New York Yankees, not considered a slugger, set a World Series record in 1960 by driving in six runs in one game against Pittsburgh.

Reggie Jackson scored 10 runs for the New York Yankees in the 1977 World Series against the Los Angeles Dodgers to set a record.

Eddie Gaedel was the only midget who played in major league baseball. His number was one eighth (1/8).

Springs faces uphill battle for starting job

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Ron Springs believes he will be freed from his legal troubles by Sept. 9 and be the starting fullback for the Dallas Cowboys that night against the Washington Redskins.

The six-year veteran fullback faces trial on a felony assault charge against a police officer for an off-season nightclub incident that involved a Dallas policewoman. The trial date is Sept. 9.

"I'm not going down without a fight," said Springs, during a break at training camp. "I still think I'm the best fullback in the league."

"And I'm ready to go to court right now. They keep moving the trial date around. I'd like to get things settled."

Springs doesn't say a lot about the incident in question only to note: "It's a bad situation. I'm charged with something I did not do. What happened should be made a misdemeanor at the most."

He thought for a minute then said "It's something that happened and now I have to deal with it."

Springs also feels he is a victim of "negative press."

"The positive way I can overcome all this is to play good football and make the fans happy."

Springs could be fighting an uphill battle for a job.

Timmy Newsome is already installed as the No. 1 fullback and the Cowboys raided the United States Football League to sign Todd Fowler.

They also drafted Gary Wilkins of Georgia Tech who has been one of the big hits in camp.

Springs said he felt some other National Football League team would want his services if the Cowboys didn't.

"When it comes right down to it if the Cowboys don't want me I don't think I'll have any trouble getting on somewhere else," Springs said.

Springs said his relationship with

Coach Tom Landry has been a sweet and sour affair.

"Sometimes he doesn't understand me and I don't understand him," said Springs. "I have enjoyed the last six years although they have been up and down."

Springs said although he weighed 220 he felt in excellent condition.

"I feel great," said Springs, who played part of last season with painful pinched nerves in his neck. "I didn't get a lot of credit for doing that but I felt I was needed. I don't like to let anybody down."

Does Springs feel wanted by the Cowboys?

"I have mixed emotions," he said. "I'm just going by what I read and I can't control what is said. I'm just here to give it my best shot."

Gunslinger players all put on waivers

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS (AP) — The San Antonio Gunslingers will play in 1986 despite management's decision to waive the entire United States Football League team, General Manager Roger Gill says.

The team front office announced the waiver of all 46 players late Monday, just minutes before a deadline for owner Clinton Manges to make good on two overdue paychecks.

Manges failed to make the payrolls by the 5 p.m. deadline set by an arbitrator for the USFL Players Association.

The arbitrator's ruling would have ordered the players on the USFL waiver wire at 5 p.m. if the deadline was not met.

"Our intentions are to play in the 1986 season," Gill said. "We've got a year to prepare."

Gill said Manges still intends to pay the players for paychecks due June 11 and 25, but he did not know when.

He would not say why the team decided to waive the players.

Texas park caters to handicapped fishermen

By DONNA FIELDER
Denton Record-Chronicle
McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — The road through Caddo Park leads to one of the most popular boat docks on Lake Lavon. All day the big fishing rigs come and go, packed with the latest gear guaranteed to bring in the big ones.

James Oby doesn't look up from his rod and reel. Shifting his wheelchair to take better advantage of the shade, he casts his line over the fence to the middle of the tank. Let others have the lake. He's pleased to pond fish in the park developed with people like him in mind. It's safe and accessible. And when the catfish are biting, it's a fisherman's dream.

Oby is one of many people with physical handicaps who take advantage of the Corps of Engineers park developed especially for them. He's been coming about once a week for seven or eight years, he said. His wife, Ester, drives him in from Dallas for his favorite sport.

"I'm 76 years old," he said. "I retired in 1974, and I've been steady on the creeks since then. I lost my legs in '79. The doctors tried to replace the veins in my legs, and it didn't work. So they took 'em off. I didn't want to stop fishing, though. That's why I like it here. You can't accidentally fall off. You can just fish and be comfortable."

Cordie and J.D. Harrelson run the park that's open March 1 to Sept. 30 every year. Equipped with three ponds stocked with catfish, the park is set aside for people who have physical handicaps, but every fisherman may have one person on the docks to help. Each pond is surrounded by a concrete ramp to make access easier for wheelchairs, walkers and canes. Each is guarded by fences, and there is plenty of bench space to sit and sun while waiting for a nibble.

Everything in the park was built with the handicapped in mind, Mrs. Harrelson said.

"We've got several covered picnic areas with barbecue grills. The whole family can come and picnic while the handicapped person fishes," she said. "The picnic tables have concrete benches only on one side, so wheelchairs may pull up to the other side, and even the water fountains are built low, so a person sitting can get a drink."

The park opens at 8 a.m. and closes at 10 p.m., seven days a week, and there is a telephone for emergencies, she said.

Albert Simmons, 81, fishes in the park about once a week. His wife, Lorraine, drives him in from Dallas, and she also must cast his line and pull in his fish. A bad back keeps him from moving about freely, but it hasn't dampened his enthusiasm for fishing.

Simmons was trying to fish in Lake Lavon last summer, his wife explained, when he almost fell in. The man who caught him told him about Caddo Park. He's been coming once a week ever since.

Pat Barnard comes out often from his home in McKinney. An artificial knee keeps him dependent on a cane, but the park's facilities allow him the freedom and safety he needs.

"I went to the coast every year for 30 years," he said. "It's too far to go now, so I come here."

The ponds are stocked several times a summer with catfish, Mrs. Harrelson said, and there are a few crappie in the ponds. A limit of four fish a day is imposed. Fishing and park facilities are free to the handicapped, and no one else may use the park.

Nursing home residents from Farmersville and McKinney visit the park and a special scout troop of boys with muscular dystrophy comes each summer. A Vietnam veteran with a war injury recently has discovered the park and, so far, has visited twice a day. Mrs. Harrelson said. Park rules state the disabled include individuals confined to wheelchairs; those with total blindness or eye impairments, deafness or hearing handicaps; people with palsy from brain, spinal or peripheral nerve injury; those with loss of mobility, coordination, flexibility and perceptiveness due to aging.

The Harrelsons spend the summer in the park in a camper trailer; Harrelson qualifies to fish because of a severe case of diabetes. Mrs. Harrelson is available to chat with fishermen and their families, and admire the fish.

Old age alone does not qualify people to fish at Caddo Park.

Caddo Park is on U.S. 380 just past the lake bridges, between McKinney and Farmersville.

"We'd just like for more people to know about the park," she said. "People have such a good time fishing here, and it's safe for them. We just wish everyone knew about it."

Bank robbing team pleads guilty

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A couple described by police as a "Bonnie and Clyde," who were alleged to have robbed 14 small banks in North Texas, have pleaded guilty in connection with two of the heists.

Lawrence Edward Byrom, 56, and his wife, Alice Elizabeth Marie Byrom, 37, entered conditional guilty pleas Monday before U.S. District Judge David O. Belew.

Their pleas can be withdrawn if the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals rules to suppress evidence that FBI agents gathered during what defense attorneys claim were illegal searches of their home in the Fort Worth suburb of Haltom City and their farm in Wise County.

Sentencing was set for Aug. 9. Byrom could be sentenced to up to 100 years in prison and fined up to $40,000, and his wife faces a maximum of 50 years in prison and a $20,000 fine in the robberies of Fannin Bank of Windom in Fannin County and First State Bank of Milford in Ellis County.

Byrom also pleaded guilty to the armed robbery of Collinsville State Bank in Grayson County and First National Bank of Rhome in Wise County.

In exchange, the federal government agreed not to charge the two with any other bank robberies.

Authorities said $572,592 was taken in 14 North Texas banks over 14 years. The Byroms were arrested at their Haltom City home 14 months ago after a Department of Public Safety officer spotted a black, jeep-like vehicle that matched the description of the getaway vehicle used in a bank robbery in Bosque County in 1983.

Bank surveillance cameras had photographed the robbers dressed in ski masks, cowboy hats, gloves and dark clothing and armed with shotguns and rifles.
