Court rejects election stay

State to seek Justice approval

AUSTIN (AP) - A U.S. Supreme Court justice today refused to block a court order threatening last Saturday's 1st District special congressional election, and Texas officials said the state will seek Justice Department approval of the voting.

"We'll submit the request (for approval), and we'll appeal our case," said Elna Christopher, spokeswoman for Attorney General

Democrat Jim Chapman defeated Republican Edd Hargett in the northeast Texas conressional district in a runoff election Saturday. The runoff was required because no candidate received a majority in a special election on June 29.

Before Saturday's election, the Reagan administration challenged the June special election and runoff ordered by Gov. Mark White, contending that state officials did not get needed clearance from the Justice Department. Justice Department officials said clearance was required under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which bars voting changes in Southern states without federal approval. Department lawyers said the election dates to fill the 1st District vacancy were

Texas law for such cases.

A special three-judge federal court in Austin agreed with the Reagan administration's position. It ordered Texas officials to ask the Justice Department for its approval of the election procedures by Friday or the three-judge court said it will nullify Chapman's victory.

Justice Byron R. White, without comment, denied the emergency rejuest made Tuesday by Texas officials who asked the Supreme Court to overturn the three-judge panel.

Texas Secretary of State Myra McDaniel, saying the request for approval would be filed with Justice Department today, said the Supreme Court's ruling left the state with little

"I suppose one has a choice if one doesn't mind being in contempt of court. The court said it would void the election if we did not make the submission. That is not a desirable outcome," Ms. McDaniel said.

White, who has been attending the National Governors Association meeting in Idaho, was not immediately available for comment.

Chapman defeated Hargett by less than 2,000 votes in the election to pick different than those specified by a successor to Democratic Rep. Sam

Hall, who resigned to become a federal judge.

The election attracted nationwide attention because of the possibility it might herald a shift in party alignment. No Republican candidate has won election in the 1st District since

Accusing Reagan administration officials of playing politics with the 1st District voting, Mattox on Tuesday argued that Texas doesn't need federal permission for such elec-

"Clearly, the attempt by the Justice Department to force the state to submit its plans was political," Mattox said.

"To submit to this type of intimidation ... could give the federal government an excuse to step in and try to interfere with our elections anytime they, or the current Republican administration, think they're going to

Mattox argues that Texas special elections don't need preclearance from the Justice Department because they aren't a change from regular voting procedures and are governed by state law.

"To require preclearance in this instance would emasculate the governor's statutory authority because it would undermine his ability to deal with an emergency to replace a representative in the United States Congress," he said.

Mattox noted that the Justice Department didn't ask Republican Gov. Bill Clements to get federal approval when he scheduled the special election former U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm won after resigning his U.S. House seat, switching from the Democrat to Republican Party and running again.

was about at the midway point here. A combination of factors have contributed to depressed prices. Fisher said there were no "gaps" in the harvest around the country this year. When the market got flooded, the prices started dropping. "The top just fell in on us," said Fisher. Market prices are better on onions, which are also being harvested in the Recent rains did little to slow the harvest, and the moisture will benefit other crops as well as slacken the irrigation demand.

Views conflict on cause of Delta crash

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) - Two federal investigators have offered contradicting views on whether the death toll from the crash of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 was increased by two water tanks the doomed jetliner skidded into.

At a news conference Tuesday night, National Transportation Safety Board member Patrick Bursley said, "It's not impossible the catastrophe would have been worse in terms of fire and so on if the tanks hadn't been there, and the 31 people who survived would not have surviv-

But in an interview with the Dallas Morning News, NTSB investigator

Terry Armentrout said the front half of the plane may not have disintegrated had the water tanks not been there.

"Had it been a level, flat, hardsurfaced terrain field - no water, no rain, no obstructions an ... aircraft as strong as the 747 or the L-1011 could sustain that," Armentrout said of the Friday crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Asked if that meant the main body of the plane might hve emerged intact had it missed the water tanks, Armentrout replied, "Yes."

Contacted today, Bursley said he didn't challenge Armentrout's comments, "but I'm not certain I would accept the context that nakedly. That plane was on the ground in a place driver.

where it is not normally going to be." He said it was true the tanks caused the plane to break up. But on the other hand, had they not been there, the aircraft could have hit two or three other airplanes parked beyond the water tanks or a warehouse where people could have been working, Bursley said.

A collision with other planes would have meant even more jet fuel and a worse fire, and a warehouse collision could have added to the death toll, Bursley said.

The Lockheed L-1011 jumbo jet bounced off the ground and smashed a car on a highway before it clipped the water storage tanks and exploded. The crash killed 132 people aboard the plane and the car's

Reports of hostage release unconfirmed "We haven't been officially

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -French, American and Lebanese officials say they have no information to confirm a Kuwaiti newspaper report that American and French kidnap victims in Lebanon would be freed soon.

The newspaper said Tuesday that Syria would arrange the release of five Americans and three Frenchmen to steal the limelight from an Arab League summit opening in Morocco today.

Syria and other leftist-governed Arab countries are boycotting the summit.

The independent Kuwaiti newspaper quoted an unidentified Western diplomatic source as saying the release of the hostages "would come a few minutes before the Arab summit opens" in Casablanca.

There was no way to confirm the report independently. Lebanon's police chief, Maj. Gen. Osman Osman, told The Associated Press, "We've heard the report, but we've got nothing whatsoever to corroborate or substantiate this."

"Police forces have nothing to indicate an imminent release of the hostages," he said.

Edward Djerejian, a White House spokesman, said in Washington on Tuesday: "We have no confirmation of this report. The Syrians obviously do have a position of influence on this matter and may or may not be able to do something at a given point in time. But it is speculative to make any further comment."

Protesters camp on railroad AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - Peace protesters have camped out on the railroad tracks leading to the Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant. The demonstrators began their blockade on Tuesday, the 40th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, Japan. They say they plan to leave Friday.

"Our action is to put our bodies, our hearts, on the line to prevent any more bombs from going out, and to call the bombs home," said Cindy Evans of Llano, a sit-in coordinator.

Authorities say they will let the demonstrators stay on the railroad spur as long as the nearby Atchison,

"I can't put all those people in ail," said Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed, who met with demonstrators Sunday to make ar-rangements for the blockade. "They promised they won't do any damage.

4 indicted on buying, selling babies

DALLAS (AP) - A Dallas lawyer, his wife and a Cedar Hill couple have been indicted on charges related to the alleged buying and selling of babies for adoption.

The indictments were returned by a Dallas County grand jury Tuesday against attorney Robert I. Kingsley and Mary Zoe Kingsley, and against Larry Thomas Blanton and Donna Lou Blan-

Kingsley, 59, was indicted on three counts charging him with buying a child and his wife was indicted on two similar counts.

The Blantons were indicted in connection with the alleged sale of a 7-month-old Rachel Marie Hagge to Kingsley for $1,210.45, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

Authorities have not been able to locate the child.

The indictments against Kingsley also deal with alleged offers to buy newborns from two Dallas teen-agers

The Kingsley's attorney, Tom McCorkle, said his clients did nothing illegal.

"It's not a crime, as far as I'm concerned," he said. Kingsley was arrested on July 16 during a raid at the North Dallas office where he practices family law. The Blantons were arrested July 26 in California but later releas-

In Europe, members of the Common Market said they were recalling their ambassadors to South Africa for consultations as a sign of sure with the white-minority government.

Under the new rules, a borrower's monthly housing expenses cannot exceed 25 percent of gross monthly income, and housing expenses plus installment debt cannot go higher than 33 percent.

The old standard of 28 percent and 36 percent, respectively, still applies to home loans made with larger down payments.

In spite of the mortgage association's action, the concern isn't shared universally. In fact, William O'Connell, president of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions has issued a statement seeking to downplay the issue.

"There is no significant increase in residential mortgage payments 60 days or more delinquent at the nation's savings institutions," said O'Connell. This, he said, is "contrary to the misconceptions created" by other reports. One of those reports is from the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, which surveyed 9.28 million loans in the first quarter of the year and found a 6.19 percent delinquency rate, highest since records were begun in 1953.

That percentage, which represents a moderately sharp increase from 5.47 percent six months earlier in the third quarter of 1984 includes all loans 30 days or more overdue, a time period that O'Connell feels is too brief

The U.S. League's own survey showed a delinquency rate of 1.82 percent for June, up from 1.68 percent in May but, nevertheless, the second-lowest monthly rate this year. In January its survey showed a 2.22 percent rate.

The league's survey differs in methodology from that of the mortgage banker's. It is based on loans overdue 60 days or more, rather than just 30 days. And, unlike the mortgage banker survey, whose percentages are based on the number of delinquencies, the league's figures are based on dollar amounts.

If a 60-day standard were used, the mortgage banker survey would show a deliquency rate of 1.98 percent, not greatly different from the league's findings, but still higher than a 1.78 percent reading a year earlier.

A third survey is made by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which each month analyzes the dollar amount of mortgage loans delinquent 60 days or more. Its June rate was 2.61 percent, up from 2.02 percent a year earlier.

Whatever the merits of the three surveys, and despite differences in methodology, all have one thing in common. That is, the latest reports show higher delinquencies han were shown earlier, even if increases

And one consequence of this is that lenders are becoming stricter on making loans to borrowers with small down payments.

David Wells, spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety, said authorities on Tuesday raided three pot patches east of Lufkin that yielded 71, 33 and 26 plants respec-

Two of the raids were in San Augustine County and the third in Angelina County, he said. An investigation is continuing, but no imminent arrests are expected.

Monday night, authorities raided five patches near Nacogdoches where scores of plants had just been pulled up, he said.

Although Texas authorities have been conducting organized searches since the spring, Wells said the latest raids are part of a national crackdown designed to force up the plant's cost and prevent harvesting on federal land.

Lawmen have seized 46,000 plants in East Texas this year. Statewide, they have confiscated more than 495,000 plants - potentially more than $23 million in street value from more than 120 different plots of land, he said.

Ann Landers How very true!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your column about the burglar who fell through a school skylight, sued the school board and ended up with a big settlement hit on a vital problem.

A judicial system is only as good as its juries. Too often juries ignore common sense and award enormous settlements for two reasons: (1) it isn't their money they are giving away, and (2) they feel sorry for the plaintiff even though they know he was responsible for his injuries.

Recently in our area, a high school football player was injured during a game. Films showed that he was the ball carrier and just before he was tackled he deliberately smashed his body into the defender. A serious injury resulted. He sued everybody in

What did the jury do? They awarded him $6 million. The defendants appealed, but before the appeal could be heard, they settled for $4 million. They were afraid another jury might award the plaintiff even more.

So don't blame the judges and the lawyers, Ann. It's the juries that go wacko. Jury members don't have the courage to say, "You were responsible for your own injuries. Nobody owes you a penny." The result of enormous, unjust settlements is translated into higher insurance premiums for you and me.-CODYWEST (SEATTLE)

DEAR POLLY - Several years ago, I bought one of those plastic mustard dispensers with the long tapered "nose" on the screw-on-top. With scissors, I cut off enough of the "nose" so my dishwashing machine detergent flows through it easily. This is wonder-ful for filling the machine without spilling detergent all over the place. It's also easier to control the amount I want to put in, so there is no waste. The bottle is easily refilled from the pour spout of the detergent box. — MRS. B.N.S.

Power, posturing are baseball strike causes

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

The baseball strike barely had begun when an interested third party, attorney Richie Phillips of the umpires' union, offered a pertinent observation.

"Let me ask you a question," he said. "The owners are doing well. The players are doing well. So how come there's a strike?"

How come, indeed?

Part of it is power. Part of it is posturing. All of it is a dreary replay of what happened four years ago.

Perhaps what they didn't learn was the danger inherent in

And this after they said they had brinksmanship. On the eve of the strike, the urgency of the situation generated one brief, informal, morning meeting. On the day of the strike, they found the time and need to talk for 11 hours. It was the longest negotiating session in nine months, but it came too late to avoid the strike.

"I'm frustrated," Rod Carew said. "Why do they have to get this thing down to the last minute?"

It is especially frustrating in this year of Carew and his 3,000th hit, of Tom Seaver and his 300th win, of Nolan Ryan and his 4,000th strikeout, especially frustrating in this year of Pete Rose's final pursuit of Ty Cobb's hit record, of Dwight Gooden's mound mastery.

Both sides were bloodied in 1981. Both, we were told, had come away from that strike with increased respect for the other. If there was a benefit, that was it.

The respect lasted until it came time to bargain again last November, and suddenly the same signals surfaced - power and posturing.

For nine months they haggled, ouch of the time over just how much money management was losing, just how terrible an investment this baseball business really is. And much of that time was spent with management insisting the players acknowledge those economic facts.

Never mind that baseball draws well over 40 million fans a year and that attendance is running 12 percent ahead of that pace this year. Never

Acting, basketball are 'performing arts'

HONOLULU (AP) - Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the highest-scoring player in NBA history, finds little difference between playing on the basektball court and acting on the film set.

"Ultimately, basketball is a performing art, and so is acting," said Abdul-Jabbar, who led the Los Angeles Lakers to this season's National Basketball Association cham-

Abdul-Jabbar, 38, expects to have more time for acting after he retires at the end of next season. He has appeared in "Airplane" and "Fletch," and hopes his height won't limit future roles.

"I won't ever have the problem that Alan Ladd did - standing on boxes, talking to his leading lady," said the 7-foot-2 all-star, who wrapped up a vacation here on Tuesday.

mind that the network television contract zoomed from $250 million to $1.1 billion.

That TV revenue bonanza fascinated the players. It could push their pension plan to the federal limit, $93,000.

Just why athletes making average salaries of $363,000 a year need that much puzzles some oldtimers. "If I made $10 million for six years like some of these guys, I'd take care of my own pension," noted Hall of Famer Early Wynn, who collects $6,000 a year from the program.

Management decided that instead of providing that pension windfall for their capitalist players, the athletes would supply the remedy for all of baseball's economic travails.

The owners even had the method, casually tossing around a salary cap and pension contributions that could shrink to zero if payrolls continued to zoom. Those ideas were not greeted enthusiastically.

So now we have another strike in a sport where everybody was doing pretty well.

Why? Because, once again, there was power to be sought and posturing to be done.

First serious bargaining takes place

By BEN WALKER AP Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP) - The first day of no games also produced the first serious bargaining.

Now, negotiators for players and owners are looking to the second day for clues as to how long the second baseball strike in four years will last.
"We are hung up still," Don Fehr, head of the players association, said Tuesday night. "If the matter proceeds very long, the players won't be willing to settle for what they would have settled for earlier."

The strike wiped out all 13 games Tuesday, and today's 12-game schedule was in equal jeopardy. Already, some players have cleaned out their lockers and begun to scat-

But Fehr and Lee MacPhail, chief of the owners' Player Relations Committee, scheduled another negotiating session for 9:30 a.m. EDT today. And both indicated they were more concerned about salvaging the rest of the season rather than losing a day or two worth of games that could conceivably be made up

The idea, they said, was to avoid a repeat of 1981, when a strike eliminated seven weeks of play. "The object now is to find a way to end it as fast as we can," Fehr said.

Fehr and MacPhail squared off for about 10 hours during four separate meetings Tuesday - by far the most intensive bargaining since both sides began meeting nine months ago.

"Lee expressed the opinion that they had made some progress, not overwhelming, but some progress, especially in the area of salary arbitration and the benefit plan," said Bob Fishel, a spokesman for Mac-Phail, after Tuesday's final meeting ended around 11 p.m.

"I think there's an attempt being made, but we ought not to minimize where we are, and where we are is we've got a strike," Fehr, appearing tired, said shortly before midnight.

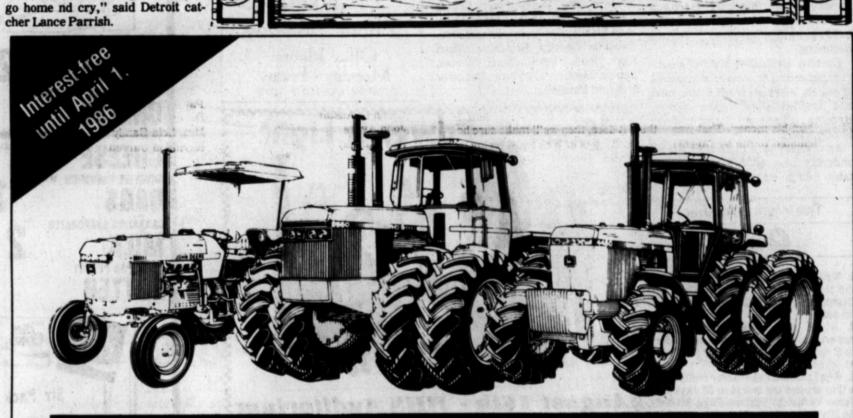

All day the central issue remained salary structure, particularly the rules governing salary arbitration. On that issue, "at the moment, I don't see a way out," Fehr said dur-ing the evening. "We've tried every

A settlement seemed to hinge on salary arbitration procedure, even though the two sides insisted the issue of the owners' yearly payment to the players' pension fund was also important.

The owners would like to increase from two years to three the amount of time before a player can file for salary arbitration, and also would like to limit any arbitrator's award to double a player's current salary. The players insist on no changes in

Dorsett prepared to retire or to be traded

DALLAS (AP) - Holdout Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett told the Dallas Times Herald in a front page story published today that he felt "doube-crossed" by club management and is prepared to retire or ask to be traded if his contract demands are not met.

In a telephone interview from Los Angeles to Times Herald staffer Jim Dent at the Cowboys camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., Dorsett said he was promised by club president Tex Schramm two years ago that his contract would be renegotiated.

He accused Schramm of not fulfilling several promises and of 'spreading my financial business all over town.

Dorsett said, "Right now, I'm prepared to sit out for as long as I have to sit out. If that means retiring, I might have to do that if the Cowboys don't pay me what they promised."

Dorsett, whose problems include an Internal Revenue Service claim of $400,000 in back income taxes and a $250,000 divorce settlement, hinted that he might ask the Cowboys to trade him "so I can bargain in good faith with another team."

The athlete said that Cowboys vice president Gil Brandt told agent Witt Stewart last year that Dorsett's contract was going to be renegotiated and that he would get the same amount of money as defensive tackle Randy White, who signed for some $650,000 a year after holding out of camp last season.

Dorsett, who was to be paid $400,000 this season in the fourth year of a seven-year contract, told the Herald he wants an annuity funded that would pay him $6.4 million over a period of 20 years.

Dorsett also said that he didn't get all of a $662,000 signing bonus promised him in 1977 when he was a Heisman Trophy winner out of Pitt-

He claimed he got only $100,000 of the bonus.

"They have talked about how much they loaned me. But ask them about the $662,000 signing bonus. And ask them where it went. They know where it went. It's still in their pockets," Dorsett said.

Schramm said, "Only three weeks ago did I learn that Tony thought we didn't pay him his money. That was finally articulated to me by (agent) Howard Slusher. I am very sorry that Tony is saying that, but there is absolutely no basis for his

Dorsett continued, "I'm not being greedy. It's just that I want some money. Schramm has said that he wants me to see the light at the end of the tunnel with my money problems, but what kind of light does he want me to see — a low light, a high light, or a Randy White kind of light?"

"Once Schramm found out what my problems were contractually, he leaked my information to the media and made my business public information. We had a talk with the IRS on a Monday and all of a sudden they were besieged with phone calls on Tuesday. The story was planted by Tex," he said.

Schramm refused to comment on Dorsett's charges except to say: "I'm disappointed that he is saying these things, but he hasn't said it to my face yet so I will reserve judgment. I'm just disappointed with the way he is acting."

Dorsett, who last year persuaded the Cowboys to give him $1.5 million in deferred money, lost some of it in stock deals that turned sour.

Dorsett, in his first interview with the media since he failed to report to camp, also said that famed Texas attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes has agreed to handle his "litigation problems" that deal with some bad oil investments.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram also reported today of Dorsett's hiring of Haynes concerning a possible suit against Dorsett's former tax advisers. In a telephone interview Tuesday night from his home in Houston, Haynes declined to disclose to the newspaper the names of any advisers who might be targeted in

The back taxes demanded by the IRS were the result of failed oil investments that were originally intended as tax shelters. A government audit disallowed the shelters, meaning Dorsett owed taxes on the lost investment plus penalties.

"We're going to ferret out the villains and sue them. Mr. Dorsett has been the victim of poor advice. These people failed to advise him he had certain rights to which he could avail himself," Haynes told the Star-Telegram.

"I visited with them (Dorsett and Stewart)a few days ago and from what I can determine, these people are responsible for his financial plight," Haynes said.

"These folks had the responsibility and they didn't measure up. If the law offers him some relief, and I think it does, then we'll make sure he (Dorsett) gets it. We're just trying to put the bell around the cat's neck."

Dorsett played the entire 1984 season without pay after the IRS garnished his wages, the Times Herald

"It's depressing when you are out there playing football and putting yourself through a lot of abuse and all of a sudden the IRS takes your money. It is not worth it. I didn't want to put my body through the abuse, but I had to," Dorsett said.

Baseball strike fouls up fans' vacation plans

By The Associated Press

After a month of preparation, a group of 30 people went on an outing to an Atlanta Braves-Los Angeles Dodgers game. They rented a double-decker bus, they brought beer and a barbecue. The only part missing was the game.

They were 30 of thousands whose planned outings to major league baseball games, but were foiled by Tuesday's strike.

The entire night's schedule of 13 games was postponed by the dispute, and fruitless negotiations threatened to ensure the scene would be repeated across the country. Baseball was closed.

Sam Vickery, one of the organizers of the Atlanta outing, said the group "decided to come out and make the best of it." They played their own mixed version of softball and wiffleball.

Their 30 tickets together formed home plate.

"It's a bunch of rich people fighting one another," Vickery said of the strike. "Nobody's right."

Vickery said the group would probably continue to attend major league baseball games after the strike ended, and a collection was taken up for the striking players. It yielded $1.53.

Evelyn Totten of New Jersey and her three children also had longstanding plans wrecked. Their two-hour drive from Columbus, Ohio to Riverfront Stadium was a waste of "It was supposed to be a highlight of the vacation," Totten said as she stood in front the closed ballpark. "I guess it's a lowlight."

Travelers at Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport were surprised by Minnesota Twins players returning from Oakland, where their game with A's was canceled. The players obliged them by signing autographs.

"It's a short summer," Ed Quinlan, a Boston city worker, said. What I'll miss the most will be the box scores in the paper each day."

Socrates Katechis, a food merchant near Yankee Stadium, prospered Sunday from a crowd of 54,000 that watched Tom Seaver win his 300th game. But, like baseball. Katechis shut down his store on Tuesday. "Sunday it was a full house and I was busy all day," he said. "Today there's supposed to be a game and there's nothing. This is my only job. I only open on game days, but what

Rangers' fans find empty park

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — James Tapp of Fort Smith, Ark., drove more than 270 miles in a camper to bring his family to see the Milwaukee Brewers-Texas Rangers

What they found was an empty stadium thanks to the major eague players' strike.

"I had heard the game might be cancelled, but our vacation plans were already set," Tapp said. "I hate to say it, but, yes, I'll come back. I may be upset for a few weeks, but I'm a fanatic fan and I'll come Tapp and his family were not the only ones who arrived here hoping to see the game despite the strike announced Tuesday afternoon after weeks of haggling between the players and team owners.

Army Capt. Steven Jones of Fort Hood, Texas, said, "I didn't know about the game cancellation. I guess I came out to the stadium hoping they'd still be playing."

Robert Villescas of Pecos said he had looked forward to the trip all A.O. THOMPSON ABSTRACT

"There goes the whole season," Villescas said. "I disagree with the strike concept. We'll probably enjoy Six Flags (over Texas, an amusement park located adjacent to Arington Stadium). But without seeing the Rangers, I still feel I came over 600 miles for nothing."

Late Tuesday afternoon, before the disappointed fans arrived, only an Associated Press reporter and a television film crew stood inside Arlington Stadium

The Brewers never even left Milwaukee to come for the game, and the stadium was empty of its usual maintenance crew.

Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine said the best scenario for the baseball strike would be playing two games tonight against the Brewers, picking up the scheduled three-game

But Valentine, while hoping for a quick settlement, indicated he was worried about a lengthy walkout.

The worst possible development he said, would be "no more baseba this year and perhaps next year."

Barring a quick strike settlement.

Valentine said he would travel to Tulsa, Okla., and Oklahoma City and see the Rangers' top minor league farm clubs in action to "try to prepare for the future."

Valentine said he thought the players "wanted to play."

'The players aren't angry, at least yet," he said. "I think when they're at a movie theater or watching television, they'll begin to get angry and that anger hopefully will manifest itself into some line drives when they get back onto the field.

"The players down to the reserve catcher on every team feel that they should be playing and that this thing should be resolved as soon as possible." Valentine said.

The symposium, like the clinic which sponsors it, will offer a multidisciplinary approach to pain control. The program will preesnt the work of orthopaedic surgeon Robert F. The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are co-sponsoring a Panhandle Sesquicentennial Quilt Block Contest in honor of Texas' 50th birthday.

Thus, each of the top 26 counties will have a representative block, with the remaining four blocks representing the museum, the extension service, the sesquicentennial, and the quilt project itself.

The rules pertain to such things as the size of the blocks, seam allowances, color, type of applique, type of fabric, and so forth. A SEPTEDA

AUSTIN The federal suit against the Texas Department of Corrections. which has hung like a dark cloud over state government for more than a decade. quietly was resolved last week in a Houston courtroom. U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice signed an order approving a compromise reached during this year's session of the Legislature, effectively ending litigation that began in 1972. Though the suit came to an anti-climactic close, the ramilications of the court action won't really be felt for another few years.

According to the terms of Justice's final order, current Texas prisons must reduce population from 38,000 inmates to a little more than 34,000 by 1989. More than 2.000 of the remaining inmates will be accomodated by the construction of a $60 million prison: others will be placed in one of 10 new trusty camps or in halfway houses.

The solution, in our opinion, is far from perfect. but it also is the best the state is going to get. Justice clearly was willing to give only so much, and we find it amazing that the state was able to extract as many concessions from the activist judge as it did. It was just six years ago that Justice ordered a sweeping set of reforms for Texas prisons, reforms that would have cost the state untold billions. To wind up with a final price tag of $60 million almost seems a bargam.

Ot course, it isn't. The Legislature will be hardpressed to find a spare $60 nalison when we reconvene m 1987. There is no indica-cial situation is going to improve during the next two years, so the legislative budget writers once again will have their work cut out for them.

Complicating the issue is an expected reform order for the state's mental health mental retardation system. U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders also is inclined toward a sweeping reform of MH/MR, but, like Justice, appears willing to work out a reasonable compromise,

No matter how reasonable we get, the total cost of prison and MH/MR reforms still will be more than $100 million. Our best hope is that we can spread the cost over more than one biennium, thus reducing the need for new taxes.

Few people have seriously questioned the need for reforming MH/MR and our prisons. There are basic problems in both systems which need addressing. The central question instead should be how much, and how quickly.

Like it or not, Justice has provided us with his answer. and Sanders seems close to providing us with his. If nothing else, the 70th Legislature will come to Austin knowing what it has to spend on reforms. That's a vast improvement over the recently completed session, when the federal threat looked as if it was going to shatter a delicate compromise on the state budget. Now, we are close to knowing what the total package will cost, and we can start planning for it well in advance of the coming

Public Utility Commission of Texas

Consumer Update

Two years ago, millions of Texans lost their electricity because of Hurricane Alicia. The most destructive storm in our state's history uprooted countless light poles, knocked out thousands of circuits, and put power lines up and down the coast out of commission. Many were without power for more than two weeks. The storm also severely damaged water and telephone facilities The Alicia experience serves as one more reminder of how destructive hurricanes can be, and how vulnerable the Lone Star State is to these powerful storms. No one can predict the Texas weather, but residents should be ready to take immediate action when a storm threatens. Hurricane Season began on June 1 and extends through November 30. although Texas has never experienced a hurricane after October 31. August and September are the months when most of our hurricanes occur. Even after the eye of a hurricane crosses the coastline, the potential for danger hundreds of miles inland still exists. Hurricaneforce winds and tornadoes can level homes and topple power lines. Sudden torrential rains can turn mildmannered streams into raging rivers that can trap motorists in their cars.

If you live in an area where one of these dangerous storms is expected to strike, be prepared to move to a safer location immediately. Hurricanes are no place for the proud, the curious, or the thrill-seeker.

For those who live in an area where a hurricane strikes, the Public Utility Commission offers the following suggestions:

· Keep alternate lighting sources available, including a working flashlight with spare batteries, a kerosene or propane lantern with extra fuel, extra candles and matches.

· Keep surplus water as the storm may contaminate regular water supplies. Store your extra drinking water in bottles, and fill your bath tub and other containers with water you would use for other purposes.

· Keep enough canned goods and other non-perishable foods to last several days. Use a portable cooler for perishable items so you can keep your freezer closed to maintain its internal temperature if power is

· Have a portable radio with extra batteries handy for news and information.

· Tape all windows to prevent shattering.

· Unplug major appliances if power is lost to protect the appliances from overload when power is restored. If you notice lights dimming and appliances operating improperly during storm conditions, disconnect them immediately.

· When using an emergency power generator, disconnect any wires leading to electric company lines. This helps protect the safety of line crews and will help keep your appliances from overloading when power is restored.

• Do not try to operate household appliances by plugging generators or extension cords into wall sockets. Also, don't try to operate appliances by using extension cords from nearby homes that have electricity Both practices can cause fires, appliance damage and serious injury to those trying to restore power.

· Avoid fallen power lines which may be energized and cause serious injury if touched:

Finally, remember that when a major storm strikes our state, millions of residents share your troubles, and everyone wants to have his electric. telephone and water services restored first. Try to limit your outgoing phone callsespecially to your utilitiesso that all customers in the affected areas can report service problems promptly.
