Hot races face voters in Tuesday election

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
 Local voters will select a new governor and at least one new county commissioner in the general election on Tuesday.
 A variety of races spice up the ballot in one of the most heated campaigns in the state's history. Locally, voters will have a choice in the county treasurer's race and for commissioners in precincts 2 and 4.
 Kyla McDowell is challenging incumbent Vesta Mac Nunley in the treasurer's race. In commissioner, Precinct 2, Democrat Lupe Chavez faces Republican Larry Malamen for the right to replace Austin Rose, who was defeated by Chavez in last spring's primary. In precinct 4, incumbent Democrat Johnny Latham is being challenged by Republican Ken Rogers.
 Polls will open at 7 a.m. Tuesday for persons who didn't take advantage of the early voting period. Over 1,500 county voters voted during the early voting, which ended Friday. That is about 20 percent of the registered voters in the county, and election officials expect a heavy turnout on Tuesday.

 Voters in Precinct 1 will have a new polling place this election. Instead of the Bull Barn, they will vote at Aikman Primary School, 15th and Ave. K. Other polling places remain unchanged: 2, Commissioners Courtroom; 3, Hereford Junior High; 4, Hereford Community Center; 5, Palo Duro Baptist Church; 6, Ford Community Center; 7, Dawn Community Center; 8, Walcott School; and 9, Simms Community House.
 In an informal telephone poll conducted last week by the Brand, local voters favored Clayton Williams as the new governor of Texas over Ann Richards, although many voters were still undecided.
 Among persons who are likely to vote or who have already voted,

Williams picked up 49 percent of the vote while Richards was named by 19 percent of the respondents. There were still 26 percent who were undecided.
 Some voters didn't like either choice, and six percent said they would vote but wouldn't vote for Williams or Richards.
 Many of the respondents in the confidential survey said they weren't enamored with either choice. Several said they were voting for Williams because of his stronger stance against abortion, and others felt the first-time candidate would better serve the state than Richards, who was a Travis County commissioner before being elected treasurer eight years ago, because he has been a businessman and entrepreneur instead of a career politician.
 By the same token, others were voting a straight Democratic ticket or felt that Richards would better work with other state agencies and the legislature because of her experience. Voters surveyed who will be voting in a commissioner's race favored Malamen over Chavez, while they were evenly split between Rogers and Latham. The size of the sample, however, was too small to make more than a general comparison. Other races include most state offices, but local voters have a rarity: neither state Rep. John Smithee nor US Rep. Larry Combest are opposed on the ballot.

Friday Night Highlights

Friday was an eventful night at Whiteface Stadium besides the Herd's 26-7 win over Caprock. Gloria Mungia, left, was crowned 1990 Football Queen and was introduced with her court before the game. Just before the kickoff, hundreds of yellow balloons were launched in remembrance of the soldiers stationed in Saudi Arabia. The HHS Student Council sponsored the project, and Jason Barrett and Jeri Ann Parker, below, led the launch from midfield.

Richards wants to take back capitol

TYLER (AP) - Working her way across the state wooing voters, Democrat Ann Richards tells them she will win the governorship and invites them to a victory march in Austin on Inauguration Day.
 "We are going to take the Capitol of Texas back for the people of this state," she says.
 She signs autographs, poses for pictures, presses hands and listens to insurance woes from people interested in her vow to reform that industry.
 In city after city, she flashes her broad smile, although her voice has more than once slipped into hoarseness.
 The expensive and often negative campaign has been hard work. But it's the only way to get where she wants to be.
 "It's not that I dislike campaigning, because I don't dislike it at all. But it is what I must do, to do what I think I do best, and that is govern," she said.
 Richards pounds on the need to improve education, ensure fair insurance rates, keep violent criminals behind bars, protect the environment and maintain women's right to choose an abortion.
 "I'm very seriously in this race because I think I can make a difference in people's lives," she said.
 As the state's treasurer, Richards also touts her knowledge of government as necessary for someone who wants to lead Texas.
 That stand was bolstered when her Republican opponent, Clayton Williams, appeared ignorant of a proposed constitutional amendment that he'd voted on affecting gubernatorial appointments.

Williams 'happy not a politician'

MIDLAND (AP) - The hot glare of television lights burns a path through the crowd as Clayton Williams greets one well-wisher after another, a ritual of the campaign trail that fits him like his favorite boots.
 The Midland oilman-rancher began his march in 1989, and defeated six opponents in March's Republican primary before climbing into the ring against Democrat Ann Richards.
 After weeks on the jet-propelled political circuit, a hometown rally was a chance for Williams to tip back his cowboy hat and savor the moment.
 "I do enjoy people," he said, flashing his trademark grin. "I think I'm fortunate in that I'm not a politician. I am, for the most part, very comfortable in a crowd."
 Although he is a multimillionaire, Williams, 59, fashions himself as an average guy who entered politics because he believed he could make a difference.
 The political arena has been both a classroom and a shooting gallery.
 He said his nationally publicized gaffes - one comparing bad weather to rape - taught him some painful lessons. And his battle against Richards became so nasty that it became a national example of dirty politics.
 "No, I didn't know it'd be this bad," he admitted.
 "But I feel dedicated... I've had so many parents come up to me and say, 'My child's on drugs. I hope you can get your boot camp through where I can save them.'
 "I don't think it's surprising that when I've battled through the group of foes that I have, that I'd have a few battle scars to show for it."

Medical Miracles

Medicine has been encroaching on death for years now, pushing existing technology to the limit. But now, out of the laboratory, comes a new approach using two new technologies that can alter our own bodies and instruct them how to beat the bumps that nature deals out.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
 BETHESDA, Md. (AP) - Imagine killer cells, coded to make them more potent, that go to the heart of cancers and make them bleed to death, a kind of microscopic dum-dum bullet that saves lives.
 Also think about cells equipped with missing genes that are injected into humans to thwart those deficits of nature that leave numberless humans to suffer shortened lives.
 Then consider:
 -In September a child began to receive cells reaped from her own body and genetically altered to cure a disease that would otherwise have left her at the mercy of infections that would only deal normal people a glancing blow.
 -So far 10 melanoma victims, each of whom had barely three months to live, have been given altered cells that proved for the first time that foreign genes could be introduced into humans safely and could remain biologically active in the human body. Coincidentally, three of the first five showed dramatic shrinking of their tumors and one had complete remission.
 -And the same scientists who conducted these tests are ready to introduce altered genes into humans to enhance the potency of killer cells to tumors to help them fight a variety of cancers that would otherwise overwhelm their immune systems.
 Two different therapies are coming together - immunotherapy, helping the immune system to fight established cancers, and gene transfer, in which a debilitated cell is corrected by inserting a healthy gene for a defective one.
 It's as if a door is opening and a small shaft of light is reaching into the very processes that control our lives.
 There is evidence right here and now that mankind can instruct its own genes, tell them what to do.

Belgian company filming POW show

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor
 A Belgian film production crew will be in the Hereford and Dimmitt area for a week beginning Tuesday to film a documentary on the Hereford Prisoner of War Camp, south of the city on the Deaf Smith-Castro county line.
 The production effort has already started with Kalindi Dighe and Giorgio Serafini, the show's producers, in the cities for the past two weeks to interview former camp personnel that settled in the Magic Triangle.

Police arrest eight

The Hereford Police Department arrested eight persons Friday, including three men, ages 25, 29 and 30, for public intoxication; a man, 18, for driving while intoxicated; a man, 19, for resisting arrest and on a county warrant; a man, 27, on a county warrant; and a woman, 20, for second offense no liability insurance.

Reports included felony criminal mischief in the 200 block of Harrah where a vehicle intentionally ran into a house; telephone harassment; criminal mischief; aggravated assault; and a purse stolen in the 300 block of Main. Police issued 14 citations Friday.

Crimestoppers offers reward

Hereford police are investigating three burglaries at a pipe company on East U.S. Highway 60, and Crimestoppers is offering a reward of up to $300 for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the case.

Items taken included $55 in cash, numerous tools, and a complete tool box taken from a pickup.

If you have information about this or any other crime, call the Clue Line at 364-2583 (CLUE). You may remain anonymous by using a code name or number. Final rewards are determined by the Crimestoppers board.

and members of the Hereford Hustlers, the goodwill ambassadors of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. The store features over 8,000 videos and entertainment items.

Dropout program Tuesday

J.E. Saucedo, an Amarillo attorney, will address the importance of staying in school during an assembly Tuesday at 9 a.m. at Bluebonnet School in Hereford.

The program is part of the dropout prevention program in the Hereford public schools, and all interested persons are urged to attend.

City will meet Monday

The Hereford city commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at City Hall.

The agenda includes discussion of traffic signals; authorization of bids for a new street sweeper and two new pickups; the city audit; consideration of the plat for the Newlife Addition west of Centre on 15th; and consideration of an appointment to the Criminal Justice Council Board.

Founders' Association dinner set Thursday

The King's Manor founders Association will hold its 25th Annual Founders Dinner on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Lamar Room of King's Manor Methodist Home in Hereford.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Charles K. Dilgard, president and chief executive officer of Otterbein Homes headquartered in Lebanon, Ohio. Dr. Dilgard is currently board chairman of The United Methodist Association of Health and Welfare Ministries.

The evening's agenda includes entertainment by Dee Anne Trotter and Steve Sobczak, and several special presentations including lifetime memberships and Founders Donor awards. Association President Mark Hicks will preside at the dinner, which will be catered by K-Bob's Steak House and served by members of the Hereford Key Club.

Membership and reservation information is available at King's Manor or by calling 364-0661.

DOCUMENTARY

The production of a documentary that will last at least one hour and be shown early next year on European television is well underway. Serafini and Dighe have already interviewed and filmed many of the Italians who were prisoners at the large camp.

The camp held as many as 50,000 prisoners of war from 1943 to 1946, when they were repatriated. Some of the former prisoners have returned to Hereford twice for reunions. The reunions have centered around the chapel built by the Italians which has been restored.

Serafini became interested in the camp after reading a book by one of the Italian ex-prisoners.

"Five years ago I discovered the book," Serafini said. "I am a screenwriter and I wanted to write a screenplay but it was too expensive to do by myself.

"The project rested for sometime, then I met Kalinde and we worked on other projects. I talked to her about it, and we approached the European Screenwriters Fund (a project of the European Community)."

The result will be a documentary, "Walls of Sad," and there may be a movie in the near future.

"We're working on our Texas dialect for the screenplay," said Dighe, a Michigan native. "We also get a different perspective on the camp and the voracity we need for the screenplay."

They have interviewed many area residents, including Grant Hanna, Bill Phipps, L.J. Clark, Fred Wall, Truman Thurston, Wayland Smith and other persons who worked at the camp. They also spent several hours with Joe D. Rogers, who has spent thousands of hours researching the history of the camp.

"Some of the stories told by the Americans are different from the stories told by the Italians," said Dighe. "Of course, after 45 years all stories change a little.

"It was so very important for us to come see the place where all of this took place. That was also important for many of the officers who were kept here, they didn't get to work in the fields and do things the others did. For many of them the first contact they had with regular Americans was in 1988 or 1989 (at the reunions). Then they finally knew what the people here were really like.

The documentary, which will be shown in most European countries, will not use narrators but will instead be told by the people who actually lived the events. While people are talking, the production will also focus on buildings, documents and papers to help reinforce the speakers.

"It is so easy for a narrator to manipulate what a person says," Serafini said. "Without a narrator it is more objective."

Serafini and Dighe were impressed by the restored chapel, which stands in a field now farmed by Charles Schlabs. The chapel was in near ruins until the restoration effort began in 1987.

"We would never have accomplished any of this without the fine cooperation of all of the people we have talked to on both sides," said Dighe. "It is so wonderful that you all have seen fit to restore the chapel. I know the Italians are so touched by that. The understanding and cooperation that have evolved between so many of the Italians and Americans is what has made it so appealing to so many of the countries in Europe that have no direct bearing in it."

In fact, the only national television company that has refused to show the documentary is Italian TV, but viewers there will likely be able to see it from the Swiss television companies.

On average, Salt Lake City, Utah gets 17 inches more snow a year than Fairbanks, Alaska.

About 7 billion plastic soda bottles were produced in 1989, double the amount of 1980.

GENE

How many thousands of currently doomed human beings will be saved is not yet ours to know. But it is hard to hold back the breathtaking possibilities.

"You have to remember that last year in the United States cancer killed 495,000 people," says Dr. Steven Rosenberg of the National Institutes of Health. "That means that one of six Americans now alive is going to die of cancer. That's in spite of our best available treatments, and we have good treatments. We can cure half of everybody who develops the disease using surgery and radiation and chemotherapy. But the half that can't be cured is more Americans every year than died in World War II and Vietnam combined.

"So we are in desperate need of new cancer treatments and these biological approaches I'm hoping will become a fourth way to treat cancer. They can join surgery, radiation and chemotherapy.

"They are intrinsically different. Biological therapies don't directly attack the cancer. Rather they try to alter the host so that the host's own natural defenses will lead to the rejection of the cancer. That's the avenue we are pursuing."

And there is a sense of urgency. Dr. W. French Anderson, a gene therapy researcher at NIH and editor of the new journal of Human Gene Therapy, wrote recently that he remembered "the anguished words" at a public forum of one Ola Huntley, three of whose children have the inherited disease called sickle cell anemia.

She said, "I resent the fact that a few well-meaning individuals have presented arguments strong enough to curtail the scientific technology which promises to give hope to those suffering from a genetic disease."

That was in 1983. In an editorial this summer, Dr. Anderson asked rhetorically, "What's The Rush?"

"The rush is the daily necessity to help sick people. Their (our) illnesses will not wait for a more convenient time. We need help when we are sick...So...ask the cancer patient who has only a few months to live, ask the AIDS patient whose body is shriveling, ask Ola Huntley. The 'rush' arises from our human compassion for our fellow man who needs help now. It will take many years of clinical studies before gene therapy can be a widely used treatment procedure. The sooner we begin, the sooner patients will be helped."

It has begun. And in coming years it could explode.

There are plans for clinical trials at research institutions all across the country. Dr. Malcolm Brenner at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., is designing a clinical trial to fight juvenile leukemia and certain solid tumors. Dr. Ken Cornetta at the University of Wisconsin is doing the same for adult leukemia and some solid tumors.

Dr. Mike Lotze at the University of Pittsburgh is planning a clinical trial similar to the ones being done at NIH, using tumor infiltrating lymphocytes (TILs) to goad the immune system into throwing off cancers. There are half a dozen other experiments planned.

"All of us have cancers in us all of the time," Dr. Anderson explains. "We have about 50 trillion cells in our body and occasionally something is going to go wrong. But our immune systems recognize that and keep it down. Only when a group of cells is dividing out of control and overwhelm the immune defenses do you get a cancer. What Steve Rosenberg's approach has been for 15 years is to help the immune system fight back."

In the first wave of experiments in immunotherapy against cancer, the TILs have been the weapon of choice. The scientists readily admit they were lucky with the first five patients. While the experiment was designed basically to demonstrate the safety of inserting foreign genes into human cells, the byproduct was lives saved.

Pieces of tumors were excised from the five and minced and grown outside the body with interleukin-2, a substance that encourages lymphocyte growth in the body.

The active cells mass-produced, doubling and redoubling in days. The idiosyncrasy of these cells is that they home in on tumors from which they were derived. The cells were then reinjected into the patients.

Three of the five patients showed anti-tumor effects. One patient, a 27-year-old mother, had over 30 melanoma tumors in her lung, skin and mouth, a particularly virulent cancer untreatable in advanced stages. They have all disappeared and she is back at work.

A second patient's tumor was completely arrested, stopped in its tracks. She is back at work teaching aerobic dancing. A third patient had 95 percent to 98 percent reduction in his tumors, but it failed to hold for 30 days. He was re-treated and this time the tumor was arrested. But after a year he slipped back again and died last Sept. 14.

That same day the NIH team used a different technique on against infection and cancers.

These children, who used to be called "bubble babies" after the extreme isolation required to protect them from disease, can be maintained by giving them a missing enzyme called adenosine deaminase. And in fact being on that therapy is a requirement for the current gene transfer therapy. There are fewer than 20 SCID patients in the world.

The 4-year-old's blood was taken and the T-lymphocytes were given a gene for the missing enzyme. They were grown in profusion outside the body and then a billion of them were infused into the child.

The treatment will continue, but it may be months before appreciable results can be seen. One reason is caution. Some people are still worried about tinkering with human genes and perhaps creating Frankenstein diseases that could run rampant. But the protocols under which this work is done have been carefully designed.

"The worst case scenario?" muses Anderson, the father of gene therapy who with other scientists has spent three years thinking of the worst that can happen. "I don't think anything that could happen could surprise us. Short of a meteor coming through the roof."

For years they will test for the chance that a recombinant virus would emerge that is infectious and pathologic. But the chances are so slim. After all the animal studies, Anderson says it would be a "tremendous surprise because there is no place it could come from."

"The things that could happen, the thing that is most worrisome, the thing that keeps me awake at night is that she (the 4-year-old patient) could run into a major problem which has nothing to do with the therapy."

An air embolus during reinjection could get into the lung and she could "gasp three times and die. Unrelated to anything."

"It would be a major setback for gene therapy," he says.

Another possibility is that the therapy could unlock a cancer-causing gene or stymie a cancer-inhibiting gene. The other possibility is that the treatment could work too well and instead of giving her gene-corrected cells in a uniform way would give her spotty protection, leaving holes in her protection. As a result they made the rules of the game "so safe that it will be a year before we know if we've done anything to help at all."

Dr. Michael Blaese, another member of the team, latched onto lymphocytes as a vehicle for altered genes when work with blood marrow cells proved too tricky. "Until we have other tissues to work with besides lymphocytes, the number of diseases we can work with will be minimal," he says. "When the bone marrow puzzle is solved, then there will be many more diseases, but still a relatively small number."

They tried originally to alter the genes in stem cells of the blood marrow which would follow more natural pathways of immune cells. But stem cells are quiet and reproduce only spasmodically. Not enough of a response could be built up quickly or consistently.

Which led to the lymphocyte approach.

Which led to the next step which is to harness tumor necrosis factor cells, some of the most potent killer cells in the immune system. A gene transfer would make these cells multiply in the body and greatly enhance the body's response to tumors.

And the future for gene transfer? With further progress the treatment of a number of gene-defective diseases — hemophilia, cystic fibrosis, diabetes, to name a few. All stem from a genetic deficiency in which nature failed to program the cells to produce needed enzymes or proteins. Gene transfer can correct those deficiencies.

The most immediate weapon will be the use of altered genes in lymphocytes to fight cancer, and facing the question of why some patients respond and some do not.

"It's a very hard question to answer," says Rosenberg. "People's cancers are different. Every cancer differs from every other cancer and people are different...So the nature of their tumors and the nature of their immunological responses are relatively unique."

"Right now we are at the infancy of understanding what those interactions are.

"I sort of put the development of these biological therapies to where the Wright Brothers were in 1903. You know we've shown the plane can get off the ground... But they weren't carrying passengers, they weren't carrying mail. They only went 75 yards. But they showed it was possible. What we've shown right now is that it is possible.

"The challenge now is to make it more potent, more widely applicable."

How do flies walk on ceilings?

The amazing little insect we know as the house fly actually has a remarkable body, which gives it the ability to do things no human can do.

Most amazing of all is the house fly's three pairs of legs, which are attached to the middle section, or thorax, of the fly's body. Each leg is divided into five parts, the last being its foot.

On the underside of each foot are two tiny claws on which the fly walks in a tiptoe manner. Under the claws are pads which cling to the surface on which the fly is walking. With these claws, the fly is able to walk up walls and upside down on the ceiling without falling off.

However, the same sticky pads which help the fly move about with such ease are also what make it such a deadly insect.

Flies land on rubbish and sewage which are full of bacteria that cause many diseases. The bacteria clings to the sticky pads as the fly travels. When the fly lands on food, the bacteria spreads.

The bristling hairs covering the fly's body, including its legs, also serve as carriers of bacteria.

An African Violet, given enough food and light is likely to reward you with beautiful blooms all year long.

Even big business is getting tired of junk mail, according to a recent news article. Everybody knows about junk mail--it's those unsolicited advertising brochures, letters, catalogs, contests, and introductory offers that clutter most mail boxes.

According to Direct Marketing Association, total direct mail has increased 56 percent to more than 65 billion pieces in the last five years. Part of that increase may be due to letters from politicians begging us to send them money for television commercials!

A major company in Austin has started to fight back with a policy of refusing to deliver junk mail in its offices. Now, thousands of letters, catalogs, and other sales pitches go directly into the trash basket. The company says that it has neither the time nor the space to deliver the non-business mail. Those close to the direct mail business say the number of firms and households who toss out junk mail without even a consideration is growing.

A poll done by the newspaper industry several years ago supported a long-standing argument that items that are wanted and paid for by the consumer--such as paid subscriptions to newspapers and magazines--have a much higher readership rating than those mass-mail pieces that overwhelm us all.

Here at the newspaper, we may get as many as 10 issues of the same trade publication. These are generally addressed to various departments in the organization and are sent by firms who maintain controlled-circulation postal permits. Besides getting a favorable postal rate, the publication's total circulation figure allows it to demand a higher advertising rate.

That's all fine and good--except more and more of that mass circulation of unwanted mail is going straight into the company's trash dumpster. Waste is waste, whether printed or otherwise!

American taxpayers are getting tired of the budget crisis and the lip service being paid by our members of Congress on reducing the national debt. We scream for expense cuts, but Congress just can't come to grips with the painful act of cutting expenses.

But we who elect them are to blame, too. We elect them to seek out spending cuts in other states, not in Texas. Our state has two of the most powerful U.S. Senators in Congress and, even though from different parties, they join hands to preserve federal spending in Texas.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration spends about $4 billion in the state and supports some 30,000 jobs. The NASA center pumped $973 million into the Houston area last year. Do you think that senators Phil Gramm or Lloyd Bentsen would stand still for a cut in the NASA budget? Our senators also joined to preserve the spending of some $7 billion on the Supercollider project in Texas. The Supercollider is nice to have, but is it essential at this time?

If Congress were really serious about cutting spending to handle the deficit, it might do without a lot of things in many states across the nation. Such as $5 million for a regional park in Dade County, Florida; a $221,000 expenditure to send 21 congressmen and other "officials" to the Paris Air Show; a $107,000 grant to study the sexual preferences of the Japanese quail (the study concluded that male quails prefer female quails over male quails)...and the list goes on. All of this adds up, but is small compared to foreign aid such as $130 million for Egypt and $2 billion for Israel.

Is it impossible to cut this kind of spending? Apparently taxpayers will never get together and demand spending cuts that also include their favorite projects.

An AP News Analysis

Tax rates always issue in Congress

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democrat Jimmy Carter used to call the income tax system a disgrace to the human race. Republican Ronald Reagan said it was so complex, frustrating and unfair as to be un-American.

Then the system was overhauled, and when Reagan signed a tax reform bill the Democrats helped fashion, he said equity and certainty had been restored.

Not for long.

Four years later, the fairness issue is back, sharply drawn by Democratic insistence that the rich haven't been paying their share. The sole surviving certainty about the reformed tax system is that there will be more pressure for changes, meaning increases, next time the government faces a budget crisis.

That next time is almost inevitable, and in fewer than the five years the 1990 deficit deal was designed to cover. The $500 billion in deficit reduction it is supposed to produce is based on economic forecasts so optimistic as to be almost euphoric.

That includes a forecast of sharply declining interest rates, especially after 1991. Economic growth would have to surge over the same period to meet its revenue estimates, and inflation would have to decrease steadily.

Budget negotiators insisted the numbers are not phoney, even though they may not prove correct. By now, that's the pattern. Deficit forecasts have been far from results during the past five years. Those estimates were computed one year at a time, not five, and the major reason they missed was that economic estimates were overly optimistic.

Sen. George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, the majority leader, said nobody could look people in the eye and claim to know what's going to happen over the five-year span. Nor, he said, could there be any guarantee that the government won't have to address the same problem again.

Safer to guarantee that it will be back for another round over taxes, spending and the federal deficit. The economy is slumping, not surging. In the best of circumstances, the projected five-year plan would only reduce the rate of increase in the national debt, not the debt itself.

Explaining his grudging agreement to accept tax increases, Bush said Tuesday that Reagan had to compromise, too, because he also had to deal with Democrats in Congress.

"...President Reagan found, same thing, 1982, go back and look at the record, the rhetoric was about the same," Bush said during a campaign stop in Manchester, N.H. "That in spite of his aversion to taxes, the only way to govern was to accept a compromise."

"But Reagan swallowed hard and the economy moved, and interest rates came down... when he did what he had to do," Bush said.

His own administration had struggled to avoid compromising on tax rates, trying to hold one of the lines Reagan left, a 28-percent top bracket, set in the 1986 tax reform law. Instead of raising the rate, Republicans wanted to restrict deductions, a disguised, and more complex way of imposing more taxes.

Both a higher rate and deduction limits on the wealthy wound up on the table.

Governors in both parties complained about restrictions on

It's almost Election Day, which means we'll finally get more of those Christmas record commercials instead of all the political commercials.

The Christmas record commercial of the year, so far, is the Mitch Miller commercial. Yes, Mitch sits up there and does funny things with his hands at waist level as these guys sing Christmas songs very loudly. "Silent Night" becomes "SILENT NIGHT!" "O Little Town of Bethlehem" becomes "O LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM!!" which it becomes anyway because people want to bomb all of the Christians who would like to see the manger on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day or whenever.

At least we have all of these Christmas record commercials on there instead of Zamfir, the pan flute player, or Roger Williams. Williams has a great voice, but after hearing him sing the same songs on the same commercials, it's rather boring; and Roger isn't exactly burning up the TV with charisma.

Since it's almost Election Day, and we have all of these TV record commercials vying for time with the election commercials, perhaps we should make a few song dedications to our politicians.

"I Had You Right On The Tip Of My Finger": To Ag Commissioner Jim Hightower, who lost a finger tip the other day when he stuck it under a still-mowing lawnmower.

"Na Na Hey Hey Goodbye": To Congress. While they're out of Washington, let's change the locks on all of the doors so they can't get back in.

"Yakety Yak (Don't Talk Back)": To Bill Sarpalus and Dick Waterfield. Golly, I wish we were voting in that election, not that we want either one representing us. But isn't it fun to sit back and watch all of their commercials and read their stories and laugh some big belly laughs?

"I Wanna Hold Your Hand": To Ann Richards. She wanted to shake Clayton Williams' hand recently, but Clayton said he didn't shake the hand of anyone who lied about him.

"The theme from 'The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas'": To Clayton Williams, who admitted to having visited the place while attending Texas A&M.

"Stick It To The IRS": An old Johnny Paycheck song, to Nikki Van Hightower, the Democratic candidate for state treasurer who apparently overlooked $800,000 in withholding taxes a few years back.

"Take this Job and Shove It": Another Johnny Paycheck song, this one to retiring Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. Hobby finally got sick of Austin and retired one rung from the top.

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from Texas newspapers:

Oct. 24

The Brazosport Facts on prison construction:

Two new prisons (have been authorized) by the Texas Board of Criminal Justice - a $68.4 million maximum security facility at Beeville and a $19.8 million prison in Dilley.

Together the two facilities will house 3,250 prison inmates - and none too soon. Prison overcrowding in Texas and the subsequent early release of dangerous prisoners had diluted the integrity of the Texas judicial system and placed every Texan at risk.

The news of the two new prisons coincided with the release of a study by The Dallas Morning News that found people sentenced for violent crimes are serving only a fraction of their terms.

Among the findings: Violent criminals such as murderers and rapists typically serve about three months in prison for every year of their sentences. Non-violent criminals such as burglars, thieves and forgers only served about six weeks for each year of their sentences. ...

The statistics are horrible and the answers to the problem are elusive. Certainly parole and probation have value, but the system is not working the way it should.

If there is anything certain about the criminal justice system it is the fact that people held in prisons do not put the public at risk. We see no ready solution except to build more prisons to keep violent people off our streets. ...

Criminals must know that Texas is taking a tough stance. This is the only way we will survive the scourge of crime in our communities. It is our way of saying crime will not be tolerated. We have no option.

Oct. 28

Austin American-Statesman on gubernatorial appointees:

The race for governor of Texas has boiled down to personalities. But the next governor will appoint and reappoint more than 700 individuals to state boards and commissions that will set standards for air quality; regulate utilities; establish rules governing toxic waste; establish standards for the banking, insurance and transportation industries; authorize highway projects; manage state parks, lands, fisheries and other properties; and oversee human service programs, among others.

Oct. 29

Houston Post on increased enrollment at Texas universities:

More people than expected are seeking higher education in Texas colleges and universities. That's good news because in our increasingly technological age more education than ever is needed to fill the higher-paying jobs, attract new industry and make Texas more prosperous.

In recent years college enrollment in Texas has been growing almost twice as fast as in the nation as a whole. The U.S. Department of Education says the nationwide growth rate in the 1978-88 decade was 15.8 percent, while in Texas it was 29 percent. ...

Texas' enrollment expansion is attributed to the state's population growth, the return to school of many older people seeking more education for better jobs, and increase in minority enrollments. The growth is occurring despite the fact the baby-boom generation has passed college age and the age group of high school graduates is shrinking.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serves people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

US, USSR issue joint stamps

Anyone who loves peace, art, animals or stamps should be pleased to learn of a recent occasion combining and celebrating all four worthwhile subjects.

At the National Aquarium in Baltimore, Assistant Postmaster General Thomas E. Leavey unveiled the designs for four commemorative stamps featuring Creatures of the Sea which were recently issued jointly by the U.S. Postal Service and the U.S.S.R. Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications.

Said Leavey: "These stamps...focus worldwide attention on the beauty and significance of marine animals inhabiting the earth's oceans. This historic joint stamp issue is a shining example of the United States and the Soviet Union working together for a common good."

The first day of issue ceremony, which was held Oct. 3, 1990 at the aquarium's new marine mammal pavilion, focused on the works of Soviet and American artists in paintings of a common dolphin, killer whales, northern sea lions and a sea otter. All four populate American and Soviet territorial waters.

The denomination of the U.S. stamps is 25 cents and the Soviet stamps 25 kopecks.

In addition to being the theme issue for National Stamp collecting Month, the four beautiful stamps can be a good way to put a stamp on the end to enmity between the two working on ways to save the world's wildlife together.

Herd stampedes past 'Horns

By SAM WALLER
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces took the bull by the horns Friday and moved into the District 1-4A lead with a 26-7 win over Amarillo Caprock in the home finale at Whiteface Stadium.

The win clinches a playoff spot for the Herd (4-4-1 for the year, 3-0-1 in district) and dropped Caprock (3-6, 3-1) from first to third entering the season's final week.

Herd coach Don Cumpton said clinching a playoff spot with a week to go for the second straight season will make things easier.

"It's nice to be able to do that," Cumpton said. "It takes a little pressure off. The kids can relax and really play and have fun."

But, the Herd mentor added, there is plenty of incentive to win next week's game at Borger.

"We've got to win next week," he said. "Our goal is to win the district. We haven't won the district here since '81. Every other time, this is the fifth time we've been there, we've been in second place. We'd like to go in as the district champions. I think our team really would like to do that."

"At this point in time momentum is important and we need to finish well. I think we'll get ready to play Borger."

Hereford rolled over the Longhorns for a season-high 510 yards of offense, 462 of which came on the ground. The Herd stampede was so efficient the team attempted only seven passes out of 63 offensive plays.

Hereford never punted in the game, lining up in punt formation only once with upback Chris Blair taking the short snap for 13 yards and a first down.

The numbers could have been even more impressive had not the Herd been flagged 11 times for 105 yards, 85 of which came with the Herd on offense. Hereford had two first-quarter touchdown runs, 15 yards by Leo Brown and 30 yards by Matt Bromlow, called back because of penalties. Both possessions ended scoreless and left the game tied 0-0 after the opening 12 minutes.

Cumpton credited the offensive line with being the main reason behind the output.

"To be honest," he said, "we felt like our offensive line could handle

Making a Longhorn sandwich

Hereford Whiteface linebacker Oscar Garcia (56) and defensive end Mark Kriegshauser (84) put the wraps on Amarillo Caprock fullback David Davis during the Herd's 26-7 win Friday at Whiteface Stadium while Herd defenders Mark Daniel (50)

them up front, and they did. Our offensive line really has improved the last couple of weeks and that makes a big difference.

"The way our plays are designed for cut-back runners, you have to block the back side, and we hadn't been doing that very good. That really makes a difference. When you get the backside people down you have a chance to make some big plays."

The big plays came from all over as three members of the Herd backfield rushed for their highest yardage totals of the year.

Tailback Bromlow led the charge with 245 yards on 32 carries, his most of the year. Bromlow scored on a 2-yard run and ripped off a 61-yarder on his second carry to put him over the 1,000-yard mark for the season.

The senior has now totaled 1,171 rushing yards in nine games, leaving him 196 short of the regular-season school record he set last year and 379 off his total-season mark. Bromlow has rushed for 2,721 yards for his career.

Adding to Friday's production were fullback Greg Urbanczyk and quarterback T.J. Head. Urbanczyk finished with 100 yards on 12 tries with two touchdowns and a 53-yard rumble that set up a score while Head ran for 78 yards on eight carries, including dashes of 42 and 36 yards.

Head also completed four passes, each to a different receiver, for 48 yards and a touchdown.

Head said that for the Herd, it was just a matter of staying with what worked best.

Monroe Timberlake (61) and Stephen Banner surrounded the play. The Herd defense limited the 'Horns to 166 yards as the Whitefaces clinched a third consecutive playoff trip.

"We moved the ball doing what we were doing, so why change it," he said. "You can't get beat with 400 yards rushing."

"We just played as a team. We knew we could do it. We knew we were good at the start of the season, it just took us a while to get the wheels rolling."

"It was just kinda how the game went," Cumpton said of the play selection. "Leo (who finished with 19 yards on one carry) didn't carry it but a couple of times and he had one or two of those called back."

"We tried to go with our quarterback a little bit more and he did a great job. I thought he had his best game of the year. And Urbanczyk had another good game running and blocking. And, like I said, all that isn't possible without that offensive line."

"I would have liked to throw the ball a little bit more, but the wind (which was a steady 30 mph from the south) was a big factor with that. And really they didn't force us to throw a whole lot.

"I think going into the wind was critical because of the punting part of it. We needed to move the ball, and we were able to do that. And then in the third quarter they gave us the ball and the wind and that's when we got ahead by three touchdowns."

Caprock coach Preston Smith, who has the 'Horns on the verge of making the playoffs in his first year with the team, said the decision to kick into the wind to open the second half was a gamble that simply didn't pan out.

"We knew it was a gamble all the way," Smith said. "When you're playing a better team, you take a chance or two."

"We thought if we could come out and play good defense and use up some of the clock in that quarter and win up with the wind in the fourth, we might have a chance to win. We knew if they had the ball ad the wind at their back

Herd backs turn Longhorns into ground beef

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

There have been lots of rules changes, different ways to play the game, throughout the history of football (aka History of Football, depending on how big a fan you are).

It has not, for instance, always been legal to throw the football. The first forward pass came as a shock. It was a fluke. It was outlawed, hamstrung and hammered. Three things can happen when you throw the football, rasped Bear Bryant or some other old coach, and two of them are bad.

It has, however, always been legal to run the football. Until just a few years ago, a football was not designed as a streamlined spheroid the sail through the sky. It was instead tailored to tuck in one's arm and run like the devil out of a Baptist revival.

What's the key to the game, any sportswriter asks any coach. Dollars to donuts, any coach will eventually tell you you gotta run the ball. We have to establish the run, our ground game's gotta go good, and who knows what else, but the run is tops.

So when you run the ball for over 400 yards in a team, when you have one back with 100 yards and another with 250 yards each, you should win big.

Like, say, 26-7, as Hereford did over Caprock on Friday at Whiteface Stadium.

The Longhorns had scouted the Whitefaces for four games before they met Friday. The Longhorns knew the Herd might pass some, but they had to know they would have to stop Matt Bromlow, Greg Urbanczyk, T.J. Head and Leo Brown.

Five hundred and one yards later, the Longhorns are still trying to figure out how.

Sure, there was passing, 48 yards including a 25-yard touchdown from Head to Derek Mason. But it was 462 yards rushing that delivered the death blow to Caprock.

"The offensive line executed great," said Bromlow, who had 245 yards on 32 carries and a touchdown. "It really feels great to have a night like that. The whole offense has started to get going and we're beginning to peak at a good time. We have the opportunity to do a lot of good things, and we know that great effort makes great things happen."

The biggest shock provided by Caprock's defense was some trashy talk, but the Herd put that out of the way.

"We didn't let that stuff bother us," Bromlow said. "We just went out there and hit them pretty good. School was out and they quit talking."

"On one play they said 'I'm gonna stop that little (expletive)," said Head, who had 78 yards on eight carries. This was while the play was going on. "We just kept after them. It makes you feel great when we have a team game like this. We finally got the motor running and we have just got to keep it up. It's all a matter of being consistent now."

Head said he was successful, in part, because Caprock bit so hard on the faked reverse to wingback Brown. Head instead kept the ball for the big gainers.

"Everytime Leo lined up outside they yelled reverse," said Head. "It was duck soup because they were keying on Leo so hard."

For Urbanczyk, the big thrills of the game were two touchdowns and clinching a playoff spot.

"It feels great to be going to the playoffs two years in a row, and beating the team that was No. 1 in the district coming into here," the fullback said. "We knew what to expect from them but I don't think they really did. We just strapped it on and laid into them. I admit they're a good ballclub, but we just played ball, did what we had to do, and went from there."

"Next week we go out to win district. That's something Hereford hasn't done in eight years. We want to go win ourselves a big ballgame and go into the playoffs for once as the district champions."

Steppin' out

Hereford Whiteface tailback Matt Bromlow (39) bounces to the outside during Friday's 26-7 win over Amarillo Caprock in the home finale at Whiteface Stadium. Bromlow led the Herd attack, which amassed a season-high 510 yards of total offense, with 245 rushing yards on 32 carries. Providing blocking for Bromlow is Herd tight end Derek Mason (89), who apparently got his thumb snagged in the jersey sleeve of Caprock's Dominic Martinez (82).

A&M edges Tomball, 7-2

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

The head coach of A&M Consolidated, Ross Rogers, went through much discomfort in the final minutes of a 7-2 victory at Tomball that kept the Tigers unbeaten at 9-0 and atop Texas' Class 4A rankings in high school football.

Mark Anderson intercepted two of Gary Porter's passes, one of them in the end zone, and Mike Woodward recovered a Porter fumble inside the 10 as A&M Consolidated turned back three Tomball threats in the game's final seven minutes of Friday night's game.

The victory clinched the district championship for Consol, and it was the Tigers' first victory in Tomball in 14 seasons.

In other schoolboy action, the other No. 1-ranked teams also won. Class 5A Aldine crushed Aldine Eisenhower 48-7, Class 3A Vernon steamrolled Bridgeport 57-6, Class 2A Groveton belted Lovelady 56-7, Class A Munday rolled past Crowell 68-0, and Fort Hancock thumped Sierra Blanca 51-6 in six-man football.

Consol's only touchdown against Tomball came off the two-minute offense late in the first half. Quarterback Tommy Preston connected with Mike Pearce on a crossing pattern on third-and-10 from the Tomball 37. Pearce, who had six catches for 146 yards, cut up the left sideline, getting into the endzone with 1:27 remaining until intermission.

The 7-0 lead was barely enough. Porter took Tomball on a 13-play drive to the Consol 9 midway in the fourth quarter. But on the next play, Anderson intercepted Porter's pass in the end zone.

On Tomball's next offensive play, with 5:38 to play, Anderson made a diving interception at the Consol 14 after Porter threw from midfield.

But with 3:23 to play, the door was opened again. Preston fumbled at the Consol 34, and Tomball recovered.

Porter completed passes of 21 and 5 yards, putting the Cougars on the Consol 8.

With penetrations tied 2-2 and Tomball ahead on first downs, 15-13, all Tomball had to do was tie the game, 7-7, to be co-champions with Consol and become the league's No. 1 playoff team.

But Porter fumbled and Woodward came up with the ball.

Preston fell on the ball three times and, with eight seconds left, the Tigers took a safety rather than punt from deep in their endzone. Tomball had time for just one play, and an incomplete pass ended the game.

SWC grid attendance remains low

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sport Writers

It's been two months and 66 football games since Texas and Texas A&M gave the Southwest Conference a reprieve, saying they would stick with the league.

For now. But there has been little apparent movement at the league's second-tier programs, despite some football success by Baylor, Texas Christian, and yes, even Rice.

Says Rice coach Fred Goldsmith: "It's never been a major issue what happens on the field. That dollar deal is what matters. We need to pick attendance up. But it's going to be hard."

When Arkansas announced it was going to leave the Southwest Conference for the Southeast Conference, speculation immediately began about Texas's and A&M's plans. Rumors flowed that first one, then the other school was headed for this or that conference.

Then on Aug. 25, the two schools announced they would remain in the 76-year-old league "are committed to doing everything possible to strengthen the conference and make it successful."

Texas President William Cunningham and A&M President William Mobley called for expansion or alliances with non-SWC institutions "which substantially enhance televised coverage of football games."

"Without these and other changes, the Southwest Conference cannot be a viable organization for excellence both in academic pursuits and in athletic competition," the presidents said.

So how has the league fared so far this season?

Prior to Saturday, the average SWC crowd was 39,642, essentially unchanged from 39,016 at the same time last year. That average translates into only 69.7 percent of seats filled, trailing all other major conferences.

But Commissioner Fred Jacoby said he thinks the first half has gone well. He noted that Houston and TCU were doing very well without a full number of scholarships.

"I'm pleased overall with the competition and the attendance," he said. "Houston has 70 scholarships, SMU 67 and TCU 80. That's a total of 95. They are doing quite well when you consider they could have 95 without all their probation problems," he said.

"This bodes well. I think this is a dramatic illustration of why I think the conference is on the rise."

"Rice is building its program the right way. They are slowly getting better. They have 93 scholarships but are redshirting a lot of freshmen."

"I can see the conference getting better top to bottom."

Jacoby admits to being worried about attendance.

"I'm concerned about the number of adults attending the games. The attendance has been pretty good. It, of course, is directly tied to competitiveness. But it seems like we have more students than adults at the games."

It's clear that Houston, SMU, Rice, and TCU are aware there could still be another big shakeout in the SWC and are working hard to get their own particular houses in order.

Texas and Texas A&M set no timetable, and a recent concession by SWC presidents that schools can keep their home gates beginning next year has stopped open secession talk.

Following is a tour of some of the conference have-nots, and their experience so far:

HOUSTON

Houston faces the dilemma of being a commuter school with only 2,718 of its 33,117 students living on campus.

Houston had 9,694 students in the traditional college age of 18-21 in 1989 out of a total enrollment of 32,289. Of that total, 8,108 students were over 30 years of age.

The Cougars, despite having one of the most explosive offenses in the nation, a No. 6 national ranking and an unbeaten record, could not sell out the Astrodome's 60,000 seats Oct. 13 for their 36-31 victory over Texas A&M, also nationally ranked.

"It's a deal where we're in a large metropolitan area and we have to compete with the pros," Houston athletic director Rudy Davalos said. "We're going out into the community to the corporations for support."

Davalos says the Cougars are seeking the kind of support the NFL's Oilers received several years ago when they threatened to leave town if they didn't get a larger seating capacity in the Astrodome and other concessions.

"We can't leave town, but we do expect the same type of civic commitment from the community," Davalos said.

Being in a town with the NFL, National Basketball Association and major league baseball, in addition to fellow SWC member Rice, has great disadvantages in competing for the sports dollar.

But Davalos prefers a positive approach.

"It's our greatest disadvantage and our greatest advantage," Davalos said. "We've got to use the size of the city to our advantage. That's something that Texas Tech and Baylor can't do and Southern Methodist has gone another direction (playing in a small on-campus stadium)."

Poor attendance has plagued the Cougars since they joined the conference in 1976.

Houston ranked fourth in attendance that year, when it won the football championship and went to the Cotton Bowl, and was fourth again the next year.

But the Cougars never have finished higher than sixth since then and were last in 1986, a 1-10 season.

Houston's home schedule this season included non-conference games against Nevada-Las Vegas, which drew 20,138, and Eastern Washington on Nov. 17. Davalos wants to develop support that doesn't depend on a glittering lineup of opponents.

"I don't buy that stuff that people come to games because of the schedule," he said. "The bottom line is that people come to see the Cougars play. You certainly can't ask for a more exciting style."

RICE

The Rice Owls haven't had a winning season since 1963. They finished last in SWC attendance four times and eighth six times in the decade of the 1980s, playing in spacious Rice Stadium with its 70,000 capacity.

"I think everyone knows the positives and negatives of our situation," Rice athletic director Bobby May said. "There are a lot of positives right now involving our competitiveness and the reception we are getting with our recruiting."

The entire SWC is beginning to dig out from the effects of NCAA probation that swept through the conference in the 1980s, May said. "Those kinds of problems aren't

Cowboys, Jets improved

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - The record says the rebuilding Cowboys and Jets are succeeding. Dallas won just once last season, its first under coach Jimmy Johnson, and the Jets went 4-12 in their final year under Joe Walton.

Heading into Sunday's game, the first non-strike meeting between the teams since 1978, both are 3-5. Are both clubs that improved?

"We're significantly better from a year ago," Johnson said. "Last year was such a transitional year, with guys coming in and out and our evaluating talent. We made a lot of trades."

"This year, we have better continuity and we've upgraded our talent."

The numbers, and not just in the standings, indicate that.

The defense has 18 sacks and 15 takeaways compared to 11 and nine midway through last season. Eugene Lockhart continues as the Cowboys' top defender, but he isn't out there alone this year. Lockhart has 62 tackles and just behind is another linebacker, Ken Norton with 59.

Cornerback Issiac Holt, the least heralded acquisition in the trade of Herschel Walker to Minnesota, has made spectacular contributions the last two weeks. He blocked a punt against the Eagles to set up a touchdown in last Sunday's 21-20 loss to Philadelphia, and he picked off two passes, returning one for a score, in a 17-13 win over Tampa the previous week.

Norton likes what he has seen from the defense, which has been most adept playing the pass, ranking ninth.

"It's familiarity with the defense, being more confident, being more aggressive, where you know exactly what you're doing so you can let yourself go to make a play," Norton said. "You've got to stay within the defensive framework and not make mistakes. But the more confidence you have in yourself and the people around you, the more plays you can make."

"This year, we just know where the weaknesses are in the offenses we face and where people are going to try and hit us."

The Cowboys have hit best when they haven't had the ball. Offensively, they rank dead last in the NFL.

"Because we're a young team and have so many new players, it takes awhile to adjust to what other people are doing," Johnson said. "They're giving great effort and have had the opportunity to win in the fourth quarter in five games."

The Cowboys succeeded three of those times, against San Diego once and Tampa Bay twice. Those teams are in similar rebuilding situations, as are the Jets, who have had their problems in the final period.

New York blew late leads in three road games against good teams before holding off Houston last Sunday.

"When the opportunity came, finally our people were able to rise up and make the plays," cornerback James Hasty said. "It was a matter of time until we learned how to win late in a game and pull one out."

"It's a very valuable lesson. We're still learning to play together and how to finish up better. We've had no problem with the first three quarters.

A young team will experience that and, hopefully, we've learned enough from it and now will be well-versed on how to pull them out."

The general perception is that the Jets, 1-7 at the halfway point a year ago, are significantly upgraded. They do have more spirit and a better idea of what they want to achieve.

New York ranks fourth in NFL rushing stats and has an AFC-low 11 turnovers.

The defense, however, has shown little improvement from last season, particularly rushing the passer. But the Jets had a season-high five sacks against the Oilers, who had not allowed a sack in the two previous games.

"I think we've gotten better all along," DE Jeff Legeman said, referring not only to the line and the defense but the team in general.

"We've had some hard-fought games against good teams. We nearly beat Cincinnati, Miami and Buffalo on the road, teams that might have handled us better in the past. The only game we weren't worth a thing was San Diego."

Both teams also realize how crucial a win will be with first-place opponents coming up - the 49ers are at Dallas and the Dolphins visit the Jets?

"How do you get to 3-6?" Cowboys linebacker Jesse Solomon asked. "You don't take care of the Jets."

solved overnight," May said. "We've (SWC) had to overcome some things but I think we've made the turn and now there is an increasing interest in the SWC."

Despite the Owls' low attendance and low victory total, there is no thought of de-emphasizing athletics, May said.

"It's full speed ahead at Rice," May said. "That was made quite clear as a result of the meetings we've had regarding the outcome of all our struggles."

Rice is more competitive, May said, pointing to the Owls last-second loss to Houston, 24-22.

"That was an exciting ball game for both schools," May said. "Houston made a great comeback to win it at the end."

Unfortunately, only 24,130 saw the game.

The Owls are working on marketing plans to attack corporate Houston with ticket sales.

"Some of those plans are premature to talk about but we do have a concept in the planning stages to involve the business community," May said.

SMU
At its first three home games, Southern Methodist had crowds of 18,700, 20,100, 23,250. The average is down from last year's 22,006 to 20,683.

The Mustangs didn't sell out 23,783-seat Ovnby Stadium until Texas A&M came to town this weekend.

"The students don't support us," said SMU Sports Information Director Ed Wisneski. "There is some apathy on campus. We do sell a lot of ticket packages but some of the students don't use them. We'd be a lot better off if all the students who bought tickets showed up."

Wisneski said the Mustangs, 1-6, have to battle the pros for the ticket buying public and not having a winning team hurts.

"We've got to become the in-thing to do on campus, someplace where everybody goes to be seen," Wisneski said.

He said SMU is looking into moving its game against Texas to the 72,000-seat Cotton Bowl next year. "I don't think we'll ever leave Ovnby Stadium totally but we could move the Texas game next year," Wisneski said. "There is some talk about expanding Ovnby to 35,000 seats. It would take a major gift for in the fourth quarter, we wouldn't have a chance to win.

"We took a little bit of a chance there and it didn't work too good for us. Sometimes you have to take a chance."

The Herd defense also turned in another fine performance, limiting the 'Horns to 166 yards. Quarterback Richard Williams led Caprock with 63 yards on 13 carries while fullback David Davis ran for an additional 59 on 19 attempts. Williams also completed five of 13 passes for 39 yards.

"When you play that kind of an offense, you have to be real disciplined not to go for the fakes," Cumpton said of Caprock's Wing-T attack. "And I was proud of our defense for that probably more than anything else. They did their job and then went and helped somebody else."

"The defense is improving, too. They've played awfully well the last three or four weeks. Since the Pampa game they've only given up 13 points, and both of the touchdowns came late in the game."

Defensive end Mark Kriegshauser, who spent most of the night chasing Williams on bootlegs, said Caprock quarterback's speed was the main thing to contend with.

"Once I got a hold of him it was all right," Kriegshauser said. "He was pretty fast. It was just a matter of keeping him contained. I was mainly trying to turn him back inside. I just got caught from behind a couple of times."

Linebacker Oscar Garcia added that after the 'Horns had some early success with the play, Hereford made the necessary adjustments.

"They were doing the same things all game," he said. "On the bootleg they were getting outside and we didn't get out there quick enough at first. We made some adjustments and got out there quicker."

"Sometimes we were sending in the rover to help contain and the linebacker had to get out there in the flat. We contained him pretty good most of the game."

Hereford held Caprock out of the endzone and below 100 total yards until the visitors put together a 12-play, 67-yard drive that ended in Davis' 3-yard score with 2:36 left in the game.

"We were backed off there at the end," Cumpton said. "We didn't want to let them have anything cheap on a big play. And we had them at fourth-and-5 and let them off the hook or they never would have got it in the endzone."

After being stripped of touchdowns on their first two possessions, the Whitefaces put the only first-half touchdown on the board when Head found tight end Derek Mason over the middle for 25 yards and the score. The play capped a nine-play drive that covered 61 yards.

Hereford doubled its lead at the start of the second half, taking the kickoff 68 yards in seven plays. Head scampered 42 yards to the Caprock 1 to set up Urbanczyk's first score.

The Herd threatened to score again on its next turn with the ball as Head carried 36 yards to the Longhorn 19, but a fumbled pitch and a sack led to Head's incomplete pass on fourth down.

The Herd defense forced Caprock's fourth punt of the game and the stiff breeze, combined with a Hereford bounce, resulted in a 10-yard kick. The Whitefaces took over 44 yards away and used seven plays to cover the distance. Bromlow finished the drive on a 2-yard plunge on the quarter's final play.

Caprock opened the final period with another punt, this one carrying 54 yards with the wind, to set the Herd up at its own 30. Urbanczyk ripped off a 53-yard chunk of real estate on the drive's third play and finished the job on the sixth play with a 3-yard blast to put the Herd up 26-0.

bottom line is how much money I'm making off my tickets."

He added, "I feel like this is a pretty good year revenue-wise. I was a little disappointed by the Baylor attendance figures. Sometimes you have to scratch your head and wonder why. I really thought that game was capable of drawing 35,000."

Coach Jim Wacker said he believes the enchantment with leaving the conference has dimmed.

"I don't think anybody will think about leaving the league again," he said.

Wacker said the Hogs have ignored their fans for the television dollar.

"The TV dollar is the most elusive dollar you can find," Wacker said. "Arkansas has blown off its fans, which could travel to all the conference games in Texas. Now, they'll blow a million dollars on travel."

Windegger said, "I wish even at this late date they'd see fit to come back."

Windegger said TCU could finish with a cash register-ringing rush.

"Texas looks like a sellout and Tech could approach 30,000 because of homecoming," Windegger said. "Overall, we may come up and be over 30,000 average for the year and that would be very good."

Windegger hasn't been sitting still. He got an extra 10,000 people into the stands at the Washington State game with a $5 Labor Day ticket.

"It brought it more concession money, parking and all," he said.

Basketball officials needed for HJH games, varsity girls scrimmage

Hereford High School basketball coaches Jimmy Thomas and Dickie Faught are seeking officials for the upcoming season.

Game officials are needed for all boys and girls junior high games as well as sub-varsity contests. Officials do not need certification but should have knowledge and understanding of basketball rules.

Officials are also needed for a three-way scrimmage the Lady Whitefaces will hold at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Whiteface Gymnasium. As many officials as would like to participate will be worked into the scrimmage, which will include teams from Lubbock High and Vega.

For more information, contact Thomas or Faught at 364-8229.

USDA looks hard at computerized fertilizing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers complain about the rising cost of fertilizers and pesticides, and say they'd like the government to do more research to reduce their need.

At the same time, however, they're reluctant to give up the chemicals that have done so much to increase crop yields, despite the warnings of long-term environmental damage.

Enter John Colburn of Houston, and his Soil Doctor.

Colburn's "prescription application" computerized equipment is being eyed by experts at the Environmental Protection Agency as a good way to reduce ground water pollution caused by excessive fertilization.

The 1990 farm bill requires the Agriculture Department to teach farmers and agricultural dealers how to use chemicals in "prudent, economical and environmentally sound" ways.

Dr. Lloyd Murdock, a soil specialist at the University of Kentucky who works as an extension agent for USDA, said Colburn's instrument "looked pretty good" for conserving chemical fertilizers.

Murdock conducted a one-year test using the instrument on a farmer's corn field near the university.

Colburn, president of Crop Technology Inc., said his idea originally was to save farmers money, but his equipment "addresses environmental issues, too."

The machinery costs about $13,000, but it can pay for itself in two years through the $20 to $25 an acre a farmer saves in fertilizers, he said.

The problem has been with farmers who apply fertilizer in quantities large enough to account for runoff from heavy rains. Since not every part of a farmer's land is equally productive, the grower also usually measures his chemicals for the least productive areas without accounting for any residual nitrates still there from the last planting.

These practices can lead to a lot of unnecessary nitrates in the soil and eventually into groundwater.

The EPA says 10 micrograms of nitrate per liter of water is considered the limit for the most vulnerable humans - babies, for example.

Meanwhile, some crops grow best with 22 to 24 micrograms of nitrates per liter.

Colburn's equipment, which he calls the Soil Doctor, uses two computers to regulate the amount of fertilizer applied. It can be installed on the farmer's existing equipment.

Simply put, a probe on the front of the tractor tests the soil as the farmer drives along, telling a computer in the cab how much fertilizer to release out the back of the vehicle.

Colburn said his system has been under development since 1984 and tested extensively in the Midwest. About 40 have been sold for use this year, he said.

It's being used exclusively for corn at this time because corn is the highest nitrate-consuming crop, Colburn said.

Farmers don't always like computers, he said, "but this is fairly well appreciated once a farmer gets behind the wheel."

Terry Behymer, of Sterling, Ill., said he has saved money and increased corn yield with the invention. Last year, he won state honors for corn growing with 209.5 bushels per acre, and this year is doing even better with 249.5 bushels an acre.

Behymer's 700-acre farm grows corn, wheat, soybeans and alfalfa. He said Colburn's equipment is suitable only for the corn, but it has enabled him to measure the amount of nitrate appropriate for each area in his field.

He said the nitrates in the soil vary depending on which crop was grown last on the particular acreage.

Behymer said he wanted something that would tell him how much nitrate already as in the soil before he applied more.

Murdock said the nitrate level detected by the Soil Doctor compared favorably with more conventional testing. He said he was optimistic about the equipment's value to agriculture.

Cost-price squeeze hits farmers hard

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department's latest monthly indicators of prices paid and received by farmers shows a classic pattern of cost-price squeeze.

In July, the index of prices farmers receive for what they produce averaged 152 percent of a base period used for comparison.

During August, as seasonal harvests and other factors came to bear, the "prices received" index dropped to 151 percent. In September, the index declined to 148 percent.

This week, the department's Agricultural Statistics Board reported a preliminary reading of 147 percent for October, the lowest monthly reading of 1990 so far. Last year's low mark of 143 percent came in September.

Meanwhile, the other half of the equation involves prices farmer pay out to meet expenses, including commodities - livestock feed, for example - used in production, services, interest, taxes and wages for hired labor.

This "prices paid" index is measured only four times a year because budget cutbacks forced USDA to abandon the old monthly review.

In July, when the previous cost index was announced, these prices paid by farmers averaged 184 percent of the base year. This week's report showed the index at 188 - an increase of 2.2 percent in the quarter. Compared with October 1989, the index was up 5.6 percent.

The statistics board said it was the largest quarterly prices-paid index increase since January 1982. A sharp rise in fuel prices since July was blamed on the sharp upturn - a result of the Mideast crisis and the global oil crunch.

A separate index for fuels and energy bought by farmers jumped 29 percent from July to October. It was up 30 percent from a year ago.

"Prices for diesel fuel increased 48 cents per gallon; bulk delivered regular gasoline, 31 cents; and service station unleaded gasoline, 30 cents per gallon during the quarter," the report said.

Although energy costs were the heavyweight factors, farmers were hit by other punches, too.

Fertilizer prices generally were up 1.5 percent since last April, when those items were last surveyed, and 0.8 percent higher than in October 1989.

Tractors and other self-propelled machinery prices were reported 3.5 percent higher than in July and 4.5 percent above a year earlier. All items were higher except cotton pickers.

Price rises were also reported for feeder livestock, building and fencing materials, farm services and cash rents.

Some good news included lower feed prices for livestock producers. But that came at the expense of grain and soybean farmers, who grow the basic feed ingredients for cattle, hogs and poultry.

Prices generally held steady from July to October for a number of production items used by farmers, including agricultural chemicals other than fertilizer, automobiles and trucks, interest, taxes and wage rates.

Living expenses among farm families were shown to have risen 2.3 percent from July and 6.3 percent from October 1989.

The squeeze of prices received by farmers and their costs of production also affects the historic "parity ratio" computed by USDA as required by law. Under the parity formula, prices farmers get for commodities are compared with prices paid to meet expenses.

The formula then uses a 1910-14 measurement to express what happened. At 100 percent, the indicator theoretically would mean farmers had the same buying power they had in 1910-14.

For example, the average price of corn in October was reported at $2.15 per bushel, only 38 percent of the theoretical price of full parity - $5.67 per bushel.

Overall, the report showed commodity prices averaged 52 percent of parity in October, the lowest reading since April 1988 and one of the lowest since the early years of the Great Depression in the 1930s.

Although some USDA records are contradictory, the all-time low mark in the parity ratio was around 49 percent in June 1932. It hovered near that five years ago at 50 percent for several months.

Many economists, including some in USDA itself, say the old parity concept is outmoded and doesn't reflect today's agricultural finance sector, including efficiencies of production and net income.

Its defenders say parity still is important in showing a relationship between prices and costs, trends and changes from one year to another.

TCFA leaders look forward to decade

"Our industry is facing a decade like no other and I am awed by the prospects for change that we see in the beef industry," president Leo Vermedahl said this week at the Texas Cattle Feeders Association convention in Fort Worth.

Vermedahl spelled out his vision of the future and his thoughts about what cattle feeders must do to adjust to a new and changing business environment.

"Number one, preserving the environment will perhaps be the most significant issue that we will deal with in this decade," he said. Secondly, animal welfare will continue to be an issue. "Just like the environment, this is a case where the issue is not the threat."

Vermedahl said cattlemen are committed to both issues, but differ from some radical groups on how to accomplish the protection of environment and animal welfare.

"Food safety will continue to be a consumer concern—not just in the U.S. but worldwide," the TCFA president said. Fourthly, he said industry concentration will continue, especially in the packing sector.

Exports were listed as No. 5. "They will become an even more important part of domestic beef production," he said. His sixth point was the fact that the TCFA area will continue to be a major center for fed beef production.

Seventh, Vermedahl predicted the expansion phase of the present cycle will be the smallest of any cattle cycle in history. "That means we'll continue to sell cattle in the $70 trading range over the next five years," he said. Total numbers won't increase much, he added, but total beef production will continue to climb.

Finally, Vermedahl predicted that the structure of the industry will continue to change. "As it does, our price discovery process will change also. That will cause all of us to grapple with where we as individuals fit into the scheme."

Homfeld, Straffuss re-elected

Jerry Homfeld and Carl Straffuss were recently re-elected to the Tierra Blanca Soil and Water Conservation board of directors. Homfeld represents zone one and Straffuss zone two.

The purpose of the Tierra Blanca SWCD is to promote sound soil and water conservation programs on farm and ranch lands within the district and to serve as a voice for farmers and ranchers on conservation matters.

The board of directors coordinates the conservation efforts of various local, state and federal agencies and other organizations. It has authority to enter into working agreements with these governmental agencies and private concerns to carry out its purposes.

As two of five individuals serving on the district board of directors, Homfeld and Straffuss will be responsible for district policies and procedures for carrying out the district program within the framework of the Texas soil conservation district law.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to comment on the letter from the pregnant woman in Toronto who couldn't get a seat on the bus:

I've been using public transportation in Detroit for 11 years and have never seen a man give his seat to a pregnant woman. Women passengers do it all the time.

When I was in my seventh month I gave my seat to a pregnant woman who looked like she was about to deliver triplets. When she sat down she took my hand and said, "Bless you for saving my life, honey." The man who'd been seated next to me turned red as a tomato.—L.M.

DEAR L.M.: The mail generated by that letter was staggering and many of the responses were unpredictable. Read on:

From Anchorage: This is for Sally in Toronto who figures she is entitled to a seat on the bus because she is seven months pregnant: Get real, lady, this is the 90s. You women have been screaming about equal rights, so now you've got 'em. Live with your equal rights and stop

Guidelines for cancer detection

Recently, eleven of the nation's largest health care and medical research organizations issued guidelines for detecting breast cancer in women without symptoms. Major points include:

*All women should continue the practice of monthly breast self-examination.

*Beginning at age 40, women should have an annual breast examination by a physician and a mammogram every one to two years.

*At age 50 women should have both a breast examination by a physician and a mammogram every year.

You can find a facility that practices good mammography by asking your physician or contacting a chapter of the American Cancer Society.

*Ask if the mammography center has x-ray technologists and radiologists specially trained, experienced and skilled in mammography.

*Ask if the center uses "dedicated" mammography equipment, that is, equipment specifically designed for mammography examinations.

*Ask if the performance of the x-ray machines and image quality are routinely evaluated.

*Women with breast implants should also ask if the x-ray technologists and radiologists are trained and experienced in using the special mammography technique, which show more breast tissue and as little implant as possible.

If the answer to any of those questions is no, you should think about choosing another facility.

Remember, mammography is the best method currently available for detecting tumors in their early stages, offering women their best chance for survival against breast cancer.

For more information on breast cancer and mammography, write to Mammography, HFI-40, Food and Drug Administration, Rockville, Md 20857.

'INTELLIGENT' STEREO LOOMS FOR MOTORISTS
NEW YORK (AP) - An intelligent car stereo has been developed to provide motorists with the music they want, reports Automotive Electronics Journal.

The stereo has 4,500 AM and 4,900 FM radio stations stored in its system, and the unit is programmed for stations in more than 5,100 U.S. cities.

When a radio station is chosen the unit displays its call letters, city and state of origin and programming format. The user can program the unit to tune in rock, classical, jazz, easy-listening or country and western music, or all-talk stations.

beefing.

Oakland: So your Toronto reader is blubbering because she's in a delicate condition and nobody offered her a seat? Well, isn't that a shame? The major problem in the universe today is overpopulation. Anyone who would bring a child into this crazy, mixed-up world is insane. That woman doesn't need a seat on the bus, what she needs is a better set of brains and a reliable form of birth control.

Fresno: Do you know why so many women are standing on buses and subways while the men sit and read their newspapers, pretending not to notice? I'll tell you. Those men were raised with no manners. Last week I was seated behind a woman and her teen-age son. The kid was engrossed in his comic book. An elderly lady got on and stood near us, struggling to stay upright. She had a cane and limped badly. The woman in front of me gave her son a sharp poke in the ribs and said, "Get up and give that lady your seat, Howard, before I let you have it upside your head." Maybe she wasn't very refined but she was doing a fine job of bringing up her son and I told her so before I got off.

Philadelphia: The last time I offered a woman a seat on the bus was in 1972. She glared at me and said, "Do I look helpless?" I replied, "No, but I thought..." She cut me off with, "You THOUGHT? The trouble with you chauvinists is that you DON'T think. Women today don't want a seat on a bus. They want equal pay." She then launched into a women's liberation lecture. I was never so glad to get off of a bus in my life.

Montreal: Why should a man give up his seat for a woman on public transportation? Pregnancy isn't an illness. It's a normal state. If you ask me, it's a phony issue.

Long Island: I was boiling mad when I read the letter from the Canadian woman who had to stand on her swollen feet, pregnant and miserable. I once saw a TV show where Phil Donahue tried on an "Empathy Belly." It's a plaster stomach strapped on over the arms, which weighs about 35 pounds and is used by therapists to give men an idea of what it's like to be pregnant. Every man over 25 should be forced by law to wear one of these things for 30 minutes before he is issued a marriage license. It would sure as hell change the way men think about pregnancy.

DEAR LONG ISLAND: What an unusual idea! Actually, it wouldn't hurt and it might help. But write and let me know how you'd get this through a male-dominated legislature. Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Lowdown, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $4.45.)

PILAR DIAZ, JESUS SUAREZ

Marriage planned

Maria del Pilar Diaz and Jesus Suarez, both of Canyon, plan to exchange nuptials Dec. 22 in St. Ann's Catholic Church of Canyon.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mauro Hernandez of Canyon and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Suarez of Hereford.

Miss Diaz, a 1987 graduate of Canyon High School, is a senior nursing major at West Texas State University.

Plastics improve future

Thanks to plastics, here are some of the surprising things we can look forward to:

*Plastics will be used to rebuild livers and other organs, using new techniques such as selective cell transplants. Here, only the cells most important to the function of the organ are replaced. Research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) suggests that attaching these cells to a polymer (plastic) matrix before implantation may improve the success of these procedures. Once in the patient's body, the plastic would serve as a foundation for building new cells, and be absorbed into the body as new cells are cultivated. The plastic implants also hold promise for bone regeneration and intestinal and pancreatic procedures. Suarez, a 1983 graduate of Hereford High School, is a senior biology education major at WTSU. He is a past president of the Mexican-American Association and is a member of Phi Alpha Delta Pre-Law Fraternity. He is employed as an LVN at Palo Duro Hospital of Canyon.

*A Massachusetts inventor has found yet another way to bridge the gap between waste and want. He turns waste polystyrene foam—the kind used to make cups and containers—into a remarkable material called "microbites." They resemble a fine powder and can be mixed with other materials such as paper pulp, glass fibers and other plastics to manufacture products ranging from filter paper to bullet-proof thermoplastic panels.

*A new polyurethane plastic bumper, developed especially for school buses, can withstand a 25 mph impact. To test the new bumper, a school bus was crashed into parked cars more than 70 times at speeds ranging from two to 25 mph. Neither the bus nor the bumper was damaged.

YOUR EYES

COLOR BLIND?

What we call color blindness is actually color deficiency. Almost everyone can see some color, but many have varying degrees of difficulty differentiating between certain colors. Most common is the inability to distinguish between red and green.

It may not seem like a serious deficiency -- yet it is important that color-deficient pedestrians and drivers learn to interpret what they see in place of red and green so that they can be safe on roads and crossing the street.

At least once in your relationship, your optometrist will test for color deficiency. Most commonly, this is accomplished with a chart on which numbers -- made up of various shades of green dots -- are integrated into a background of various shades of red dots. For most people, it's a simple matter to "read the number." Those who have difficulty are color-deficient to some extent. Males are more likely to be "colorblind" than females.

WILLIAMS

The first scar William suffered came last spring when he compared rape to foul weather, saying if it were inevitable, "just relax and enjoy it."

His campaign was rocked by the political shock wave. Williams followed the rape-weather comment by:

- Describing how he was "serviced" by prostitutes as a youth
- Saying it made him "uncomfortable" to run against Richards because she was a woman.
- Joking that he hoped Richards, a recovering alcoholic, had not gone back to drinking when she said she was making up ground in the polls.

RICHARDS

- Refusing to shake her hand after calling her a liar because of her attacks on his Midland bank.
- Being unable to explain Proposition One on the state ballot.

"The weather remark was certainly a mistake and I've apologize for it and I regret it," he said, shaking his head. "(But) a lot of people haven't seen the other side. I have great respect for women."

Williams maintains that he just needs a chance to show what he can do after he sits in the governor's chair.

"They tell me, 'Claytie, you can't ride horseback into the space age,'" he says. "Well, you can if you're riding a good horse."

She also was boosted in the week before the election by polls showing her gaining support.

Richards expresses no regrets about the campaign. In the Democratic primary, she made an enemy of opponent and former Gov. Mark White when she accused him in a television ad of lining his pockets while in office.

"I don't look backwards in my life," she said of that attack. "The past is past. I really look forward to what needs to be done next."

A recovering alcoholic who just celebrated her 10th year of sobriety, she also was dogged in the primary by the question of whether she ever had used illegal drugs.

She refused to say yes or no, explaining that she was concerned that answering the question might deter others from seeking help.

Asked whether she could have handled that question differently, she said she must live by her principles.

"Somehow the suggestion is if that doesn't fit with the political expediency of the moment, well then you ought to just abandon what your principles are," she said. "I don't believe that."

How she handles herself is what matters, she said. "The important thing for me to be able to say at the outcome of this election, regardless of how it goes, is that I gave it everything I had, that I did my best."

Festival of Trees to benefit HSC Assoc.

Keyed to the holiday mood, a first annual Festival of Trees will come alive in Hereford Senior Citizens Center Nov. 15. Offering several events new to this area, the Festival has a dual purpose: Fun for the community and funds for the sponsoring HSC Association.

Preview and auction of more than 25 professionally designed and decorated Christmas trees will feature a Festival Gala with catered dinner and a band on opening night. Entertainment will continue four days.

Breakfast with Santa, a Teddy Bear Tea for children, and a Christmas concert on Teen Night are among other special events. Meals, refreshment bars, shopping booths and much live entertainment are scheduled.

Clubs, schools, businesses and churches are being invited to take part as sponsors and program guests. It is all open to the public, with general admission tickets priced at $1. All proceeds go to the HSC Association.

Advance tickets will be required for the Festival Gala ($25), Fashion Show and Salad Bar ($5.50), Breakfast with Santa ($3), and Teddy Bear Tea ($3). Margie Daniels and Mary Ann Resch of the Center's staff are co-chairmen of planning, with guidance from the HSC board headed by Lester Wagner, new president, and Shirley Garrison, past president.

Administrative secretary is Dodie Brookhart; Cecil Boyer is finance chairman; Jolene Bledsoe is the artist; Barbara Wirt is overseeing the entire decorating and layout of the Festival. Sponsors for the elaborately decorated trees are being signed now.

Christmas bazaar set for Nov. 17

The public is invited to attend the Nazarene Christmas Bazaar scheduled Nov. 17 in the gym of the First Church of the Nazarene.

Among the items for sale will be various pastries including cheesecake. Proceeds will go to the Nazarene Christian Academy.

In 1969, the federal government banned the use of artificial sweeteners known as cyclamates because of evidence they caused cancer in laboratory rats.

The trees will be on display Thursday, Nov. 15, through Sunday, Nov. 18. Call the Center for more information on sponsoring trees.

As continuing activities during the Festival, visitors will find the Herd Restaurant in the new snack-bar area to be operated by Grant and Troyce Hanna and helpers; handcraft booths, bake sales, and varied live entertainment. Tickets are on sale for all events. Clubs are groups interested in sponsoring a booth with homemade crafts may contact the Center.

A glance at the schedule shows a Day Care Celebration at 9 a.m. Thursday as a beginning of special times set aside for age groups. Senior citizens will have their day from noon to 4 p.m. Youth celebrations are scheduled Thursday and Friday, 4 to 6 p.m.

Children from kindergarten will come in groups Friday morning for the surprise shopping, thumbprint ornaments, face painting, picture taking with Santa, Mrs. Claus' story hour, and Lionel train exhibits. Juanita Coker is general chairman of children's activities.

Student musicians and entertainers will participate in Student Activity Day at 1 p.m. and the Youth Celebration at 4 p.m. Friday. After a salad bar meal at 7 p.m., a fashion show with Becky Horton as coordinator will be staged.

Children will have Breakfast with Santa at 9 a.m. Saturday, and the Teddy Bear Tea is set for 2 p.m. Mrs. Shirley Garrison heads planning for these, as well as Teen Night Saturday, also the fashion show and living tree.

Final events are a buffet lunch at noon Sunday, then a Festival of Choirs. Local and area choirs from churches and schools will sing, as well as the HSC Young-at-Heart Choir.

Publicity for the Festival is in charge of Larry and Genevia Summers. Emeline Kreigshauser, assisted by Judy Cloud and Annette Albracht, have made posters for the event.

Loretta Kindsfather is chairman of tree sponsorship and trimming. Chad Fitzgerald will arrange decorations for the Gala dinner and the salad bar. Volunteers will be scheduled by Helen Spinks as they work on hospitality, the check-in table, aprons, name tags and information booth.

Dozens of HSCA members and their friends are serving as volunteers to get ready for the Festival, and will continue to help during the event in which the entire community is becoming involved.

Gas. It's A Natural For Economy.

When it comes to heating your home or business, cooking your food or heating water, nothing does it better or more economically than natural gas.

Heating with gas costs less, by far, than electric heat. Gas also out-performs electric heat pumps. As it gets colder, heat pumps become less and less efficient. But, whatever the weather, the air flowing from gas heat is as much as 30 degrees warmer than heat pump air.

Water heaters using natural gas far out-perform electric water heaters. On average, a gas water heater can save hundreds of dollars in energy costs over five years. And, gas heats water much faster than electricity.

Looking to the future, gas may play a significant role in vehicular use. It is estimated that if only 10% of our vehicles were converted to natural gas in America, it could displace 700,000 barrels of foreign oil per day!

Whatever the energy job, go with gas. For economy, it's a natural.

RONNA LEWIS, PATRICK TRAYLOR

Wedding planned

Ronna Deanne Lewis and Patrick Dale Traylor, both of College Station, plan to wed Dec. 29 in First Baptist Church of Dimmitt.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Avie Justice Lewis of Dimmitt and is the granddaughter of Virgil and Geneva Justice, also of Dimmitt. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Traylor of Dayton, Texas.

Miss Lewis, a graduate of Dimmitt High School, is a May 1991 candidate for graduation from Texas A&M University when she will receive a degree in English. She has a house cleaning service and is active with United Campus Ministries where she is a council member.

Traylor, a graduate of Dayton High School, is also a May 1991 candidate for graduation from Texas A&M when he will receive a degree in history. He plans to attend law school. He is employed by the Texas A&M Department of Chemistry.

Fall concert set by Chamber Singers

"Gospel Celebration" will be the fall concert of religious music presented by the Hereford Chamber Singers. The two performances have been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m. Dec. 1 at First Baptist Church and at 3 p.m. Dec. 2 at St. Thomas Episcopal Church.

There will be no admission charged for the concert which will include a variety of religious songs with the feature selection being "Gospel Mass" by Robert Ray. An offering will be taken to defray expenses of the group.

Other selections will include two numbers by Eugene Butler, "O Lord, Thou Hast Searched and Known Me" and "A Psalm of Assurance"; "O Praise Ye the Lord" by Dale Wood; "Mary's Song" by former Hereford resident, Carlie Burdett; "Go Ye Now in Peace" by Joyce E. Eilers; "Were

You There" by John Welch; three spirituals: "Mary Wore Three Links of Chain" by Joseph W. Clokey, "Elijah Rock" by Jester Hairston and "I Got Shoes" by Alice Parker and Robert Shaw.

The Chamber Singers was organized in 1974 to promote "human relations through music." It is composed of 35 adults from all walks of life who love to sing. Each year two or three concerts are presented, plus the group makes itself available to sing for musical entertainment for various functions in the community.

NEW YORK (AP) - Henry Hill, the mobster-turned-informant whose book "Wiseguy" inspired the movie "GoodFellas," has emerged from the federal witness protection program to review the movie recounting his Mafia life.

"Martin Scorsese captures everything - good and bad - with almost total accuracy," Hill writes in the December issue of Premiere magazine. "Had I the opportunity to direct the film myself - if I knew anything about directing - I don't think I could have done a better job."

Hill also offers his views on the portrayals by the film's stars.

-Robert De Niro: "Plays (mobster 'Jimmy the Gent') Burke as well as Burke could play himself."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - The red carpet has faded for Saudi Prince Turki bin Abdul Aziz.

The prince has been stripped of a security detail made up of off-duty police officers from Harvard University.

Harvard Vice President Daniel Steiner ordered an end to the guard detail, which reportedly earned officers at least $27,000 a week, to avoid the perception that it compromises routine police work.

"We had tried to be helpful to Prince Turki, and I think it went on longer than either he or we expected," Steiner said Tuesday. "Our mission is providing security for Harvard."

The prince has paid Harvard and Cambridge police to protect his entourage of 65 bunked in the top two floors of the Charles Hotel since their arrival in August.

Turki, the fourth in line to the Saudi throne, at first received a royal welcome.

BRANDED Women

By Sandy Stagner

"Heal it, repair it or yank it out!" That about sums up what I tell my doctor if I think I'm about to bite the dust.

A couple of months ago I had emergency surgery. The operation itself didn't worry me. In fact, I felt so bad I was looking forward to it. What concerned me after I was admitted as a patient was that I had not brought with me any necessities from home such as nightgowns, toothbrush or my electric fan (which I cannot sleep without). To my horror, I also realized I had not shaved my legs or painted my toenails. After all, it is important to keep up appearances even in an operating room!

After a quick consultation with my surgeon before being wheeled into surgery, I was given a wonderful pre-op injection. This delightful drug totally relaxed me. I never knew I could enjoy watching television without the set ever being turned on, nor did I know how very entertaining it could be to stare at the little holes in the perforated ceiling tiles. I had not had this much fun since I inhaled the laughing gas at the dentist office.

Isn't it strange what we think, say and do in the recovery room as the anesthesia begins to wear off? In my stupor I heard a little voice gently whisper in my ear, "Sandy, wake up. It's all over." (Okay, great, just let me go back to sleep.) "You need to cough. Come on you can do it," prodded the same voice. (What's to coughing, I thought. I'd been doing it all my life. If that will make the little voice happy, I'll give it a try.)

BOARDS ACROSS THE COUNTRY

ATLANTA (AP) - An estimated 12.6 billion board feet of Southern pine lumber was produced last year - enough, if placed end to end, to stretch from San Francisco to Albany, N.Y., more than 800 times.

Southern pine, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., is used to meet various domestic and foreign wood needs, including construction, repairs and remodeling in residential and non-residential markets.

I coughed and then screamed the four-letter word--OUCH!

Around 2 a.m., I slowly became aware of my surroundings. I must have lived through the ordeal because I had a lot of tubes running into my body. I decided to take inventory of the situation. I cautiously lifted up the sheet and looked at my incision. I wonder how Dr. C. got those metal staples into my abdomen? Did he use a staple gun? Was it smaller than a bread box? Oh, well, time to go back to sleep.

The next couple of days were quite pleasant. I was nursed and entertained by the nurses (they really were terrific); friends and family came to visit; I received cards and gifts; and I had little chats with Dr. C.

I quite literally owe my life to this man and I should have been a more cooperative patient but I'm stubborn and had to learn the hard way. Within hours of the surgery, Dr. C. explained the importance of me becoming mobile. He told me I needed to sit-up on the edge of the bed and begin walking around the room periodically. I looked at him incredulously. I had sneezed two minutes before he entered my room and almost jumped to the ceiling from the pain. He might as well have been asking me to run the 10-K.

I contemplated my next move. I'd make a deal with Dr. C. "Tell you what," I said meekly. "As soon as I get my next pain shot which will be in exactly three hours, two minutes and 36 seconds, I'll walk around the room for you." I thought that was fair. Not falling for this obvious ploy, he grinned as he responded, "I don't make deals. Just do it!" Gosh, he sounded like the Nike television commercials I'm always hearing--"just do it!" I did it but I muttered unkind things about my doctor as I hobbled around my bed.

Even though I could have stayed at the hospital quite contentedly for another week being waited on hand and foot, I knew that I would be released within a couple of days. Little did I realize then that there was a catch--I had to walk down the hospital corridor (which was at least 10 city blocks long) before I went home. I was in a state of panic because I knew darn well it was going to hurt.

I finally decided that I had no other alternative than to follow my doctor's orders. I guess I thought I was going to a tea party because I wouldn't poke my head out the door until I had put on my best robe, fixed my hair and applied my makeup. Okay, if I collapsed on the hall floor, at least I had medical help readily available.

I literally inched my way down to the nurses' station wishing I could just fall down on all fours and crawl. This was not my idea of how to spend a Saturday morning. After what seemed an hour, I reached my destination. I had made it. I was jubilant! About that time one of the nurses saw me and patted me on the back. That little show of encouragement got me back to my room without having to ask for a piggy-back ride.

Feeling very smug with myself, I stood for a few minutes in the hallway. I spied a woman at least 20 years older than me walking past in her housecoat. Sensing someone was staring at her, she turned around and spoke. "I had abdominal surgery yesterday and I'm trying to regain my strength. This is my third trip down this hall." Obviously, the lady had been eating her Wheaties. Perhaps it was time for me to switch from my "Tony-the-tiger" cereal.

I stayed at home for six weeks to recuperate. Although I knew I needed to walk, I didn't, it hurt. So, I opted to eat, sleep, read 21 books and stay up all night watching old black-and-white reruns on television.

I paid the price for this lackadaisical lifestyle when I returned to work. When I got home from the office that first day, I burst out in tears. "I'm so tired I don't know my own name," I cried to my husband. "In fact, I'm so tired, I don't even know your name." I got no sympathetic words from him. Instead he popped off, "You should have done what Dr. C. told you to do--WALK!"

I drug myself to the office the following day only to go home after a couple of hours. I was a pathetic mess.

On the third day, I cornered my boss and whined to him that I could no longer work full-time. I was a wreck, I explained. With a gleam in his eye Speedy asked, "Have you been doing what your doctor told you to do, like walking?" Was this a conspiracy among my husband, my surgeon and my boss?

This was just too much. I'd show them all. If I died from walking they could have my tombstone inscribed with, "Here lies Sandy what's-her-name. She died with her Nikes on."

Planning annual event

Sharon Hodges, at left, and Melinda Bridge, members of Toujours Amis Study Club, are making plans for the club's annual Benefit Bridge Tournament. The event, which is open to the public, is planned for 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 12, at the Hereford Community Center. Proceeds will be used for a Hereford High School scholarship. Tickets are priced at $5 and can be purchased from any club member. High/low and door prizes will be awarded during the evening. The grand prize will be a card table and chairs.

Bud to Blossom represented at convention

Texas Garden Clubs Inc. met in Midland recently for the 62nd Fall Convention. Representing the Bud to Blossom Garden Club of Hereford were Mrs. Jess L. Robinson, district director; Mrs. Charles Brown, president; and Mrs. John N. Jacobsen Jr., delegate.

"Tumbleweeds in the Oil Patch" was the theme chosen by Midland Council of Garden Clubs with Mrs. J. Keith Somerville and Mrs. J.A. VanAuken of Midland serving as co-chairmen.

Mrs. Ben P. Denman, president of Texas Garden Clubs of Dallas, presided over the executive committee and board of directors meeting.

In the Judge Council meeting, floral designs, framed spatial and sculptures were presented and discussed.

During the official opening ceremony, members of Company D, 103 M.P. Battalion of the Texas State Guard at Midland, gave the presentation of colors by honor guard and Robert Dorn sang the National Anthem. Mrs. Denman conducted the state business.

Programs presented carried out the western theme stressing conservation in resources. Earnest Kiker, Texas agriculture extension service, spoke on "Watering in Texas" explaining the many problems in growing trees, shrubs and flowers in the Permian Basin and how to treat them. Mrs. Charles Shields presented a narrative slide program titled "Historic Roots and Temples of Justice" showing famous Texas historical trees and county courthouses throughout Texas.

A tea and reception honoring Mrs. Ben P. Denman, state president, and Mrs. Jack A.C. Miller, South Central region director, was held in the home of Mrs. Stanley Weiner.

Following the Design Banquet, Mrs. Jimmie H. Courtney presented a program on "Designs in Motion".

During the business session reports from all state officers and state chairmen were presented. State life memberships were presented to 10 members including Mrs. Charles Brown, president of Bud to Blossom Garden Club. National life membership were also presented.

Packets of wildflower seeds were given to district directors to be distributed in the 10 districts throughout Texas. These were to be planted as a remembrance of American military in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf.

T-shirts of wildflowers from the 10 districts will be sold at the 1991 state convention to be held in Austin in April of 1991.

The total attendance was 201 garden club members from throughout the state with 96 state life members and 78 national life members present.

Following the state convention, Mrs. Jess Robinson will conduct the district board of directors meeting in Lubbock, the southern zone of district in Seminole, the central zone meeting at Sundown with Whiteface Garden Club and Morton Garden Club assisting. The northern zone meeting will be held in Hereford with the Bud to Blossom Garden Club serving as hostess. Robinson will present a report on the state convention with state recommendations to be discussed at each meeting.

Massage therapy discussed

Kimmi Waters, massage therapist, was guest speaker of the L'Allegra Study Club when they met in the home of Julianne Lawson.

Waters demonstrated her technique to members and explained the benefits of massage therapy. She stressed that a regular routine of therapy is a must for it to be effective.

After the program a short business meeting was held.

The next meeting is scheduled for Nov. 15.

Members attending were Janice Conkwright, Judy Detten, Carmen Flood, Kitty Gault, Priscilla Ham, Dianne Hoelscher, Barbara Kerr, Sylvia Khuri, Joyce Lomas, Karen Payne, Hilda Perales, Dee Anne Trotter, Ella Marie Veigel, Jan Weishaar, and Lawson.

NURSING SCHOOL ENROLLMENTS UP

WASHINGTON (AP) - Enrollment of first-time students in four-year nursing programs rose by 5.8 percent in the past academic year, the first such increase in five years, says Internal Medicine News.

According to a survey reported in the medical journal, for the 1989-1990 academic year, 60,522 first-time students were enrolled in four-year college and university nursing programs, both on a full and part-time basis.

In the previous year, the publication notes, 57,154 students were enrolled in nursing programs.

Applications to graduate programs also have increased. The enrollments in masters degree programs was 8.2 percent higher than in 1989, while enrollment in doctoral programs was 9.2 percent higher.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR BETTER HEALTH

Dr. Gerald Glasscock

CHIROPRACTOR

"ASPIRIN WON'T CURE IT"

If you have recurrent headaches and take aspirin for relief, you're only masking the problem, not solving it.

A headache is like any other kind of pain. It's a symptom that something may be wrong. If you only suffer headaches occasionally, like when you're overtired or have had too much to eat or drink, things can probably be set right again by getting a proper amount of sleep and eating and drinking normally. But if you have a "headache pattern" -- frequent headaches over a long period of time -- you may need treatment to get relief.

Perhaps the underlying cause is a misalignment of your spine.

This may be causing the vertebrae to exert undue pressure and irritation on your nervous system. Your nervous system extends from your brain down through your spine to every part of your body. It plays a vital role in the body's health.

Why suffer from recurrent headaches needlessly when treatment is available to help correct the problem?

Preparing for Smokeout

Keywanette members, Rachel Alaniz, at left, and Amy Stark, have been putting up posters for the annual Great American Smokeout to be observed Thursday, Nov. 15. The event is sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Between the Covers

BY SHIRLEY WALLICK

Robert Block and Andre Norton combine their writing talents in The Jekyll Legacy. This is not a recreation of Stevenson's original title, but a brand new sequel. Hester Lane is a reporter in Victorian London, reporting on the newly-formed Salvation Army. Her story, however, is rejected and she finds herself penniless. Through a newspaper advertisement Hester is led to the offices of the solicitor of the missing-and-presumed dead Henry Jekyll. She is the long-lost niece of the doctor and his only heir. But her visits to the solicitor's office makes her the prime suspect in Jekyll's disappearance. Her life is closely watched by police and Jekyll's servants. In Dr. Jekyll's abandoned lab, Hester sees a mysterious, misshapen figure glaring at her. Is it Dr. Jekyll or Mr. Hyde?

Lois Wyse's novel, Seconds, tells the engrossing and powerful story of three women who are second wives.

These three women (Anne, Bronwyn and Sienna) are the glamorous women behind the men who run New York. The find themselves united in a scandal from their childhood adolescence. These women must fight this scandal while juggling the demands of family, career and love.

Washington, D.C. is the setting for Linda Cashdan's novel, Special Interest. Cynthia Matthews is a reporter who has taped an interview with Senator Frederick Barker. Adled by a few too many drinks, the senator lets it slip that he has taken campaign money from a special interest group. This expose could make Cynthia's career. But her involvement with Jed Farber, a former employee of the senator and still a close friend to Barker, clouds her ability to come to a decision about the expose. Capitol Hill, the glitzy D.C. party scene and the Adams-Morgan district are the backdrop for this novel that mixes newswork, politics and love.

The Devil in Texas/El diablo en Texas is written by Presidio, Texas native Aristo Brito. The author has mixed fiction and history to give readers an insight into the border society of Presidio. The border world is brought to life in vivid dialogue and dramatic encounters as Brito presents us with a glimpse of Presidio in 1883, 1942 and 1970. The author portrays Presidio as a sort of prison, stockade and enduring village on the border of Texas and Mexico. This book is the English and Spanish text of the novel.

Today women are leaving the home and entering or reentering the job market. But these women find themselves facing unique problems as they try to market their skills and formulate a resume that wears apron strings. In E. Edward Good's book, Does Your Resume Wear Apron Strings?, the author provides information on how to assist women in their job searching strategy. By providing information on how to write a resume that will spark the interest of the employer, Good speaks directly to the woman entering or reentering the job market after gaining experience in other pursuits.

Other books of interest for mystery lovers include: John Jakes' Johnny Havoc; George Simeon's Maigret and the Burlar's Wife, and Eileen Dewhurst's Dear Mr. Right.

From Better Homes and Gardens, craft lovers might like Friendship Quilting, Floral Needlepoint or Christmas Quilts and Afghans.

Two books of interest to those concerned with environmental issues on our planet are 50 Simple Things You Can Do To Save the Earth and Diane MacEachern's Save Our Planet: 750 Everyday Ways You Can Help Clean Up the Earth.

Adventure fever set Nov. 4

Cadette and senior level Girl Scouts will be exploring "Wider Opportunities" at "Adventure Fever" on Sunday, Nov. 4, at Western Plaza (stage area) from 2-4 p.m.

Junior Girl Scouts are also invited to see what is ahead for them in scouting.

Displays will be set up and manned by girls who have attended wider opportunities in the last two years.

Girl Scouts who attended the "Wider Opportunities" this past summer are Connie Cuellas attended "Put Your Best Foot Forward" in Dallas; Krista Mills attended "Pedal Pushers" in Martinsburg, W.Va.; Penny Schuster and Elizabeth Warren attended "Meet Me In St. Louis... City Charms and Country Yarns" in St. Louis, Mo.; and Pamela Skraastad attended "Computers and Medical Science" in Rochester, Minn.

Lori Walton attended "Arts, Odyssey '89... The Plays the Thing" in Johnstown, Pa. and Sara Walker attended "Congress, Culture and Careers" in Washington, D.C.

NEW YORK (AP) - Growing up without a father made two-sport professional athlete Bo Jackson appreciate his mother even more.

"My mom is my dad. She's the only mom and dad I know," Jackson says in Sunday's issue of Parade magazine. "Whenever she needs me, I don't care what I'm doing, I'm gonna drop it and go to her, 'cause that's all that matters."

Jackson, speaking with his autobiography collaborator, Dick Schapp, vividly recalled not having a dad when he grew up.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR
Loss by Neglect

Neglect may be one of our greatest sources of loss. It seems so easy to be neglectful, even when this is not what we desire to do. It is not easy to maintain the proper level of interest and concern regarding the important elements of one's life, and in the general responsibilities and opportunities of life. Of course, we must never stop trying to do so.

Much is being said and written about neglect, and some of the areas of neglect are receiving very special attention. Many of the problems associated with 'neglect' and from which 'neglect' issues are being identified and efforts are being made to deal with them, and this is commendable.

The material and spiritual losses which we incur by 'neglect' are astounding. In this consideration, we have the loss and abuse and misuse of our natural resources, but the loss of human resources may be even a greater loss. In fact, it all seems to go together, involving human character, value systems, the aims and the ambitions of people, and the degree of respect or disrespect that we people have for established truth, for time-tested standards of thought and behavior, and for our personal responsibilities.

We seem to be realizing the shocking loss of the neglect that has been so much part of the human scene for so long. We appreciate all that is being done to offset and overcome and compensate for the losses of 'neglect', and we must never relax our good intentions and our diligent work. Some of the consequences of our 'neglect' have become critical and are requiring immediate attention.

Neglect is pervasive, and is to be considered common enemy. All of us must do our best to preserve, and care for, and make the best use of both our natural material resources and our human resources.

HOME MOVIES

PARK RIDGE, N.J. (AP) - Home video cameras used to be heavy and bulky. Now, light and compact camcorders using the 8mm format account for more than 40 percent of industry output.

Sony Corp. of America claims one of its new 8mm camcorders is the world's smallest. It is less than 7 inches long and weighs 25 ounces.

It records up to two hours of video on a single 8 mm cassette, slightly larger than a standard audio cassette.

Poppy sale

Mayor Wes Fisher signed a proclamation Thursday declaring Friday, Nov. 9, as Buddy Poppy day in Hereford. VFW "Buddy" Poppies are assembled by disabled veterans in hospitals throughout the United States. The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4818 will be selling poppies. Funds raised through "Buddy" Poppy sales by VFW Posts and Auxiliaries are used exclusively for aid to veterans and their dependents.

Training conference held

Members of the Hereford Keywanettes met recently for their fall training conference with 85 members and nine guests present. During the event, Hereford FFA members presented a practice run through for their leadership contest held Saturday. The Keywanettes are still collecting coats for the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross. The coats will be distributed by Red Cross volunteers to local school children. For those wishing to donate coats, contact a Keywanette member or the local Red Cross office. Keywanettes are also participating in the annual Great American Smokeout sponsored by the American Cancer Society. The event, held to encourage smokers to quit, is planned for Thursday, Nov. 15.

The art of quilting, still popular today, has been practiced for thousands of years. Soldiers of the Middle Ages wore quilted coats and hoods under their armor.

Red Cross Update

The Toys for Christmas program is underway and many previously donated toys are being cleaned and repaired. Bike parts are still needed as well as other toys.

A one family fire workshop will be held at the Lubbock Chapter Nov. 28. All interested volunteers are invited to attend the program presented by Madelyn Mercado, specialist for Region III. Preregistration is required and may be made by calling the Deaf Smith County office.

A First Aid class for persons holding a current CPR will be held Thursday at 7 a.m. at the Red Cross office. A book for the class may be picked up at the office before the class begins.

A support group for families of servicemen overseas is being formed. If you are interested in being a part of the group, call the office at 364-3761.

I would like to thank all of the volunteers that helped with the Health Fair, Halloween Carnival, and at the office. All of the volunteers would like to thank all of the United Way volunteers for their work in raising funds for our Chapter. Without their help, our volunteers would not be able to do the work they do.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

OUTSTANDING PLAN INCLUDES ISOLATED MASTER BEDROOM SUITE

FEATURE HOMES

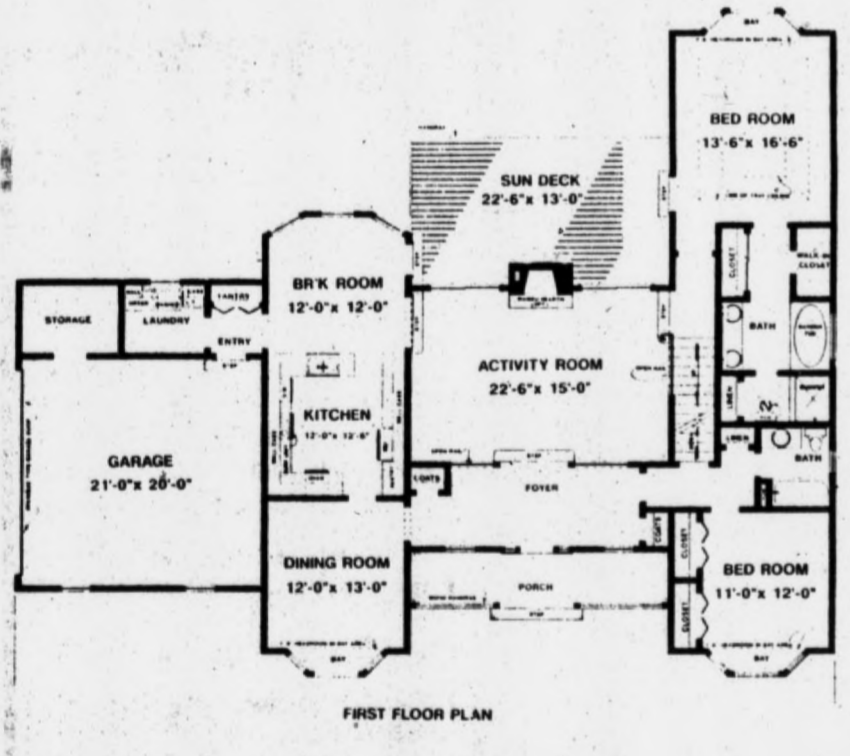

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

A dynamic entry presents a great impression as the twenty-two foot wide foyer leads to the sunken great room, bedroom wing or formal dining room. Bay windows are located at the front of each wing and the sun deck is accessible by way of two sets of sliding glass doors. The breakfast room and master bedroom are also endowed with a bay window and deck access is again available from these two rooms. The fully sized kitchen will allow the greatest cuisine preparation as it is equipped with surplus cabinet space and counter top. Laundry facilities are located at the rear of the garage, separated from the main body of the home and the garage entry boasts a bonus pantry.

The master bedroom suite delights in the privacy of a compartment bath, extra closets, garden tub, separate shower and tray ceiling. Stairs are tucked one beneath the other for great use of space and the attic room access is located close to the master bedroom or great room. Additional baths are shown for the two bedrooms up and for the guest room and daytime use on the main floor.

The exterior is cape cod, embellished with bay windows, gable roof dormers and a recessed wood rail front porch. Wood siding is suggested for the exterior finish. The plan is Number 2654. It is a computer generated plan. It includes 2,654 square feet of heated area. All W. D. Farmer plans are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Alcoves become decorator's dream

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

Different times, different tastes. Not so long ago, alcoves were tucked behind a false wall, removed or ignored. Now they're valued for their decorative distinction, and rooms without them are being altered to create them, especially if other remodeling is done, says Linda Carol Webb, a designer in Lancaster, Pa. Away from a room's general traffic pattern, alcoves make fine seating and work areas. Their presence inside often means a jog in the wall outside, lending exterior interest to the house, according to Webb.

The most desirable alcoves are windowed, but many windowless niches end up as extra storage space, fitted with open shelving or with shelves behind doors, so lighting is not required. Webb recently collaborated on one of the prettiest alcoves around when her firm, Classic Quarters, created a bathroom with two alcoves at the Lancaster-based photographic studios of Armstrong World Industries. Fabric-covered shelves are installed in a partial alcove - an obstruction is at the bottom of the

NEW LISTINGS

219 FIR
Pretty home with the large front kitchen/dining looked for by many wanting to buy in the medium price range. Panelled den with full wall fireplace. Mini-blinds, window treatments, carpet and linoleum new in 1987.

132 ASPEN
Another best buy. Seller motivated by need to settle family estate. Over 1,850 sq. ft. Very reasonably priced at $48,000. Redecorated to fit your scheme. 3-2-2, livingroom & den. Use extra room for either a 4th bedroom or dining room.
Assumable loan with small downpayment. 416 Ave. J. Good for the investor (rents with Community Action). Low monthly payment and easy move in so it's good for the first time home buyer, too.
If there is a question of you getting a new loan, 207 Aspen is perfect for you. You pay sales expenses but no downpayment to take over the loan or you can lease purchase. 3-2-2. Let us work out a deal.
Large two bdr., home, South Hwy. 385, easily convertible to a 3 bdr., 2 living areas, domestic well, pretty brick, double garage. Price reduced and management company very anxious to sell.

CLASSIFIEDS

Call Janey Allmon at the Hereford Brand, 364-2030, or come by 313 N. Lee to place your classified advertising. We reach thousands everyday!

CLASSIFIED ADS

Classified advertising rates are based on 14 cents a word for first insertion ($2.80 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy charge, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.14	2.80
2 days per word	.24	4.80
3 days per word	.34	6.80
4 days per word	.44	8.80
5 days per word	.54	10.80

If you run ads in five consecutive issues with NO changes, you get the same ad in the Reach 4 More free. The regular charge for that ad would be $3.80

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines-those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing, all capital letters. Rates are $3.95 per column inch; $3.25 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS

Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS

Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

Toaster care, repair can be simple

By READER'S DIGEST
For AP Newsfeatures

Most toasters and toaster ovens are relatively sturdy appliances that will give years of service if you keep them up. Here are some tips for maintaining and making simple repairs on both:

Use and Care

CAUTION: Unplug the appliance and let it cool, before cleaning or repairing it.

- Toast always getting stuck in your toaster? Unplug it and use wooden toast tongs, available at kitchen specialty shops, to gently pull the bread out. Be careful not to damage the heating elements.

- Empty the toaster crumb tray regularly. Shake the toaster over the sink to remove particles, particularly raisins, that may interfere with moving parts. Wipe the toaster oven tray; take care not to damage the bottom heating element.

- Clean the exterior of a toaster or toaster oven with a damp cloth. Abrasive cleaners or scouring pads may scratch the finish. And never immerse either appliance in water.

- Do not try to clean the heating elements in a toaster oven. They self-clean by burning off spills.

- Be careful not to let a metal or foil pan touch the top heating element in a toaster oven. This can create a short circuit that may burn out the element. And if you are touching the metal, you could get a shock or even be electrocuted.

Troubleshooting Tips
TOASTER BREAD CARRIAGE DOES NOT STAY DOWN - A scrap of toast may be stuck. Open the crumb tray and try to spot the offender. If it's not easy to remove, shake the toaster over the sink, first with the toaster upright, then upside down. Also, try it with the lever in both the up and down position.

If that isn't the problem, unscrew the fasteners and remove the shell of the toaster. Brush away crumbs and dirt, especially around moving parts. Straighten any bent parts with needle-nose pliers. Lubricate the lock and the release with a small amount of powdered graphite.

CARRIAGE STAYS DOWN BUT TOASTER DOES NOT HEAT - Unplug the appliance and check the wall outlet with a lamp you know is working. If there is no power, replace the fuse or reset the circuit breaker. Reduce the number of appliances on the circuit.

CAUTION: Never replace a fuse or a breaker with one having a larger capacity.

Replace a broken power cord with an exact duplicate. A typical cord has spade lug connectors that slip onto terminals. To reach them, remove the panel or leg unit through which the cord enters.

BREAD TOASTS UNEVENLY - If the problem is occasional, the trouble may be due to uneven moisture content of the bread.

Otherwise, remove the toaster shell. Check the inside of the shell for discoloration that causes variations in reflected heat.

TOASTER OVEN DOOR DIFFICULT TO OPEN - Unplug the unit, then wash the pivots and hinge rods with a cotton swab dipped in water mixed with liquid dishwashing detergent. When the parts dry, use another swab to apply a light coating of a heat-resistant silicone lubricant, available in hardware stores. Open and close the door a few times to spread the lubricant.

TOASTER OR TOASTER OVEN SHOCKS USER - Turn off the power to the appliance at the fuse box or circuit breaker panel. Then unplug it. Discard it or have it repaired by an appliance repair shop.

NOTE: Making major repairs on either a toaster or a toaster oven is probably more than the average homeowner will want to undertake. A toaster is complex while a toaster oven has factory riveted and welded seams.

Some problems are sure signs that an important toaster part is broken. Bread that toasts only on one side, for example, indicates a defective heating element. Heating elements that stay on and burn the toast's bottom after it pops up indicate a faulty main switch. Similarly, if a toaster won't pop up - and there's nothing jamming it - the lift spring or pop-up mechanism is probably broken. In such cases, it's usually easier and cheaper to replace the entire toaster.

SAFETY TIP: Get your family in the habit of unplugging a toaster or toaster oven after each use. This will decrease the odds that someone may accidentally leave it on, causing it to overheat and start a fire.

ALCOVE

opening - and the shelves are hidden by wooden doors salvaged from an old armoire. A spacious windowed alcove accommodates a dressing table and chair.

"Many women would like a dressing table if they had room for one," says Webb.

Smaller rooms have made it hard to fit in such a bulky piece of furniture. Webb's dressing table has antique linens atop a Laura Ashley cotton print skirt. The window treatment complements the dressing table, and walls, ceiling and floors are the same as the rest of the room.

In general, to make decorating capital out of alcoves, they should be integrated into the rest of the room's design scheme.

"Make it look as if it had always been there," says Webb. "Use the same type of window treatment as on the other windows. If there's a chair, make it backless or a swiveling type."

If a uniform floor covering is impossible, allow the table skirt to puddle on the floor or use a dressing table with interesting legs.

These days with many types of lighting fixtures and lamps available, lack of windows need not be a drawback. Keep the lighting level in the alcove even with that in the rest of the room. This usually means more light is needed in the alcove, since walls are closer. But take care, Webb says. Novices have a tendency to make the light too bright.

To minimize heat - created by high levels of light in a small space - use fluorescent bulbs in a full-spectrum formulation, or one that mimics natural light.

Webb advises against painting an alcove a color other than the rest of the room unless you want it to stand out. Instead, treat the entire wall the same "so that it all looks as if it had always been that way."

A partial alcove can become a bonus storage area. "Many homes have spaces with an obstruction above or below," says Webb.

To integrate the space with the rest of the room use a fabric or wall-covering that matches or coordinates with others in the room. Another way to carry a theme through is to use the same molding details and drawer or door hardware.

One way to create an alcove with little expense is to remove the door from a narrow closet. At this year's Kips Bay showhouse in New York, Feldman-Hagan Interiors took down a skinny closet door in an attic room, exposing an alcove about 18 inches wide and 14 inches deep. A slab of unpolished granite was laid in at desk height. Atop it were a small lamp, an antique box and a vase with a single flower.

To visually pull the viewer into the space, the back of the wall was painted a shade darker than the rest of the room and a small picture was hung on the wall. A small mirror would have had the same effect, according to Simone Feldman, one of the designers.

- Each page measures a large 15 x 11 inches
- Presents the entire state in stunning detail
- Appendices and specialty maps of many different features

THE ROADS OF TEXAS is the culmination of a mammoth project that has involved many individuals for over two years. When you get your copy of THE ROADS OF TEXAS you'll wonder how you ever traveled the state without it.

This 172 page atlas contains maps that show the complete Texas road system (all 284,000 miles) plus just about every city and community! Texas A&M University Cartographics Laboratory staff members produced the maps, based on county maps from the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. The details shown are amazing—county and local roads, lakes, reservoirs, streams, dams, historic sites, pumping stations, golf courses, cemeteries, mines and many other features too numerous to list.

Become one of the first in our community to own a copy of this magnificent atlas.

Smith a breath of fresh air

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Will Smith keeps a chessboard handy on the set of NBC's "Fresh Prince of Bel Air." But like the character he plays, what he'd really like is a pool table.

Smith, a Grammy-winning rap singer known as Fresh Prince, frequently plays chess when he's not working on his new NBC comedy series. The show is his acting and television debut in the role of a tough street kid from Philadelphia sent to live with wealthy relatives in Bel Air.

The comedy hinges on his attempts to adjust to the alien environment of wealth and excess, and to bring his relatives back in touch with their humbler roots.

The 21-year-old Smith's frequent chess opponent is Joe Marcell, who plays Geoffrey the butler as though he's just stepped out of "Masterpiece Theatre." They've also had a game on an episode of the comedy series.

"I play a lot of chess, but I don't know if I could say it's a passion," Smith says. "Pool is more of a passion with me. I put in a request for a pool table on the set."

Smith sees a similarity between himself and his character, also named Will Smith and nicknamed Fresh Prince. Smith also comes from the Philadelphia area and says he prefers not to fit in.

"I've never done any acting," he says. "I've never had any formal theatrical training whatsoever. I'm playing a character I designed five years ago for my rap concerts. It's pretty much a part of me now."

Smith, like his character, is a person who smoothes the way with incredible charm and an ability to think - and talk - fast. On the screen he seems at ease and natural, although his lack of training and experience occasionally surfaces in scenes with other cast members.

Prior to its premiere in September, NBC ballyhooed the show as its breakaway hit of the season. As often happens to highly touted young racehorses, it stumbled coming out of the gate. ABC's "Cop Rock" stumbled even more so, as did ABC's "Chicken Soup" last year.

In the ratings for its first weeks "Fresh Prince" has often barely ahead of its Monday night competition, CBS' "Uncle Buck" and ABC's "McGyver," and trailing ABC's NFL Monday Night Football.

Part of the problem may be that the audience apparently is not reacting well to Smith's making fun of middle-class values. As a result, some of the sharper edges of the humor are being honed down.

"Fresh Prince," like NBC's "Ferris Bueller," which immediately follows it, is part of television's trend of youth-oriented comedies - replacing "sitcom" with "punk-com." In such shows, including NBC's "Hull High" and Fox's "Parker Lewis Can't Loose," wisecracking kids outsmart slow-witted adults.

Among those hoping that Smith's "Fresh Prince" recording and stage performance success will transfer to a new audience is 20th Century Fox, which recently signed him for an action-adventure movie.

Smith picked up the nickname Prince in school. It has nothing to do with rock singer Prince.

"My eighth-grade teacher started calling me Prince and it sort of stuck," he says. "She did that because I was a pretty charming guy. I had a couple of different names. I don't remember all of them. When you're rapping you change your name every week trying to find one that fits. Once I was Willie Will. I settled on Prince in 1986, then I added Fresh because that's the new slang for cool."

"I was performing rap at parties by 1981 and getting paid for it. I always did rap. I play a little piano and guitar."

His rap partner was Jeff Townes, and by 1986 they had become D.J. Jazzy Jeff & the Fresh Prince. Their first single was "Girls Ain't Nothin' But Trouble," which they recorded on their own label and sold nearly 200,000 copies in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey. A major company picked it up and it became an international hit.

They've since recorded three albums, one of which sold 3 million copies. A fourth album is due out next year.

"Fresh Prince is not very different from Will Smith," he says. "He's fun-loving, mischievous and very handsome. He's just a sweet fellow. It's me, not a character. It's just me, rapping or acting."

"Rap is the only real musical art form we have in America now, other than jazz. You can listen to Elvis Presley and other stuff. It's all stolen from black Americans. Elvis is nothing but bits of Little Richard and Chuck Berry."

"Rap is more expressive and more individual. You have to write your own material because rap comes from the heart. I'd never sing anyone else's song."

Urich enjoying role in 'Dreamer'

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Robert Urich, best known as a street-wise detective, moves away from the urban battleground in a new TV comedy series, "American Dreamer." He plays a modern philosopher in a small town.

The NBC show offers a mixture of humor, introspection, remembrances and fantasy focusing on Urich, who portrays a former network journalist seeking a new life after his wife is killed by a terrorist while they are on assignment together.

The TV reporter quits his high-paying, high-profile job to move his son and daughter to a small town to write a weekly human-interest column. His new assistant, played by Carol Kane, says, "Human interest? Oh, you mean fluff." Each episode becomes a meandering odyssey as he explores his innermost thoughts en route to arriving at his column.

"The way he thinks about things is the nut of the show," Urich says in an interview at his home on the edge of the Hollywood Hills. "The writing of a column can be a catalyst for him to explore some personal experience. The column is his life, and his life is the column."

"In a novel a writer can take a chapter to examine a character's feelings. We can do it in a snap, by having him step into limbo. The stage suddenly goes black except for the spotlight on him. We're experimenting with different lighting techniques. The limbo is a chance for us to not complete scenes, but to let him explain what happened or re-create a scene from his past."

Despite more than a decade in tough-guy roles, Urich sees "American Dreamer" as a return to his roots.

"I started out on the straw hat circuit, doing 'Father of the Bride' and all that stuff," he says. "When I came to L.A. the first thing I did was 'Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice.' I was told it was comedy and it's difficult. You have to read. I said, 'Wait, that's what I do for a living.' Then I was in 'Soap' and 'Tabitha.' So it's familiar, yet different."

"The way they work here is amazing. You don't have a finished script when you start out. At least 80 percent of it's rewritten. It's an exploration by the actors and writers. The writers listen and watch and fine-tune it. Finally, by the end of the week you've got it down. When the audience comes in it's like opening night. The writers and producers dress up, send flowers, and come in ready to have a good time."

The show's from Gary David Goldberg's UBU Productions, which last did "Family Ties."

Of his past comedies, Urich may be best remembered as the sexy tennis pro whose dalliances and murder got "Soap" off to a rousing start in 1977.

He was a uniformed police marksman in "S.W.A.T." in 1975-76, but turned detective in "Vegas" in 1978. It lasted three years, then came "Gavilan," in which he played a sort of waterlogged secret agent. It lasted about three episodes. "Spenser: For Hire," based on Robert Parker's brooding, brainy, brawny detective also lasted three years.

"There's been a lot of talk about a 'Spenser' movie," Urich says.

"Spenser: For Hire" was filmed on location in Boston and Urich moved his family back from Boston only a year ago to concentrate on TV movie projects.

He played a Texas Ranger in the acclaimed miniseries "Lonesome Dove" and a convicted wife killer in "Blind Faith." During the summer he co-starred with Teri Garr in the NBC movie "A Quiet Little Neighborhood, A Quiet Little Murder."

Another movie, "83 Hours Till Dawn," will be televised by CBS on Sunday, Nov. 11. He plays a father whose daughter, Samantha Mathis, is kidnapped by Peter Strauss.

"My series have never gone beyond three years," Urich says.

He named his sailboat "Season Three."

"I bought it with third-season money," he says. "My family's not into sailing. It got to be too expensive. I'd just go down and sit on it once a month. I have to find something and name it 'Season Seven.' Maybe it'll be a self-fulfilling prophecy."

Urich is married to actress Heather Menzies, and they have two children.

He has not yet sold his house in Massachusetts, and his undersized new home here is up for sale.

"If the kids have the TV on we can't talk," he says. "So I put it on the market. It's a soft market, but I'm not in a hurry. I called my architect in Boston and asked him to draw up a four-phase plan for renovating this house in case we stay."

HAVE FUN at the Movies

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

SIBLING RIVALRY: Starring Kirstie Alley. Ok, so you have to check your I.Q. at the door to appreciate this one. What is so terrible about having a silly, good time? Some "art" critics are turning thumbs down and noses up at a film that, admittedly, is not much more than a long sitcom-comedy, but does deliver some very big laughs. Sibling Rivalry (the title has nothing to do with the movie) is an adult, formula comedy that gets very R in places, has uneven direction, is too long, and stumbles through an old-hat, sticky-sweet, predictable ending straight out of the 1950s.

But... as a movie about marital boredom, peopled with cartoon characters, it is very funny. You will laugh out loud, laugh to yourself, and giggle a lot. While its ninety minute run is way too long, there are enough really on-the-mark scenes to patch things up. You don't believe any of the characters, but who cares? In these days of blood, gore, and language that sears the eye balls, it's kind of nice to just sit back and have fun. Kirstie Alley plays the docile wife of a neglectful husband and the victim of his dismissive family. When she tries to break away from the boredom and neglect, in a chance encounter with a stranger, a comedy of errors ensues. The farce is very much on target and the none-too-subtle jokes are often hilarious.

Most of the supporting cast (Carrie Fisher, Bill Pullman and Jami Gertz) do little more than stand-up-comedy routines while delivering their laughs on cue. Sibling Rivalry is just an old-hat comedy with good delivery that is very enjoyable. After all, you don't have to be intellectually stimulated to have a good time. What the heck, life is serious enough. Rated PG-13 with a few, very adult situations (don't take the kids). This one is for people who can "lighten up".

POSTCARDS FROM THE EDGE: Starring Meryl Streep, Shirley MacLaine and directed by Mike Nichols.

Dust off the Oscar nominations - it's time. This poignant and savagely funny film about a very real mother-daughter relationship, set against the backdrop of a very surreal place (Hollywood), is a stunningly directed film with two brilliant female performances.

Shirley MacLaine, the consummate survivor, is touching and almost adorable as film star Doris Mann, the fictionalized Debbie Reynolds. Meryl Streep, the fictionalized Carrie Fisher (real-life daughter of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher), is wickedly funny as the daughter who desperately attempts to struggle out of her famous mother's shadow.

Postcards From The Edge is freely adapted by the author and sometimes film actress, Carrie Fisher, from her semi-autobiographical novel about life in a drug rehab center. Unlike the book, the movie script concentrates more on the relationship of the women as they try to establish a genuine contact and find the common ground that they have neglected for years.

Under the superb direction of Nichols, the scenes between mother and daughter are astonishingly meshed and intertwined. Nichols' incredibly deft touch, his sense of detail, and his sense of emotional sophistication focus on just the right nuances; Streep and MacLaine's rhythms overlap perfectly. Carrie Fisher's excellent, finely-honed, highly literate script is full of energy, humor and vitality. The script is peppered with one-liners that illuminate as much as they entertain.

Carly Simon wrote the musical score, and the score is - in a word - fantastic.

When you see this film listen carefully and watch closely, for you will be the hands of genuine talent. Rated R for language.

P.S. Stay for the credits. Streep, who does her own singing in the movie, brings down the house as the credits roll over her barn-burning version of Heartbreak Hotel.

SWEET CHARITY: (1969) Starring Shirley MacLaine.

Fans of the newly released Postcards From The Edge will be interested in seeing vintage MacLaine. Sweet Charity will also help see clearly the incredible energy that she always brings to her work.

This film is a fine, overlooked adaptation of the smash Broadway musical written by Neil Simon (and based on Fellini's Night of Cabiria) about a prostitute-with-a-heart-of-gold who falls in love with a naive young man. Naturally, the equally smitten young man does not know about Charity's "work".

The musical's wonderful Cy Coleman-Dorothy Fields score includes Big Spender, Rhythm of Life, and the show-stopper (danced and sung to perfection by MacLaine), If They Could See Me Now.

The late choreographer Bob Fosse, in his directorial debut, lost nothing in his spirited transfer to the screen of this infectious musical comedy. Rated G. Four Boxes NIGHTHAWKS: (1981) Starring Sylvester Stallone and Billy Dee Williams. From its explosive first scene to the breathtakingly suspenseful denouement, Nighthawks is a thoroughly enjoyable, supercharged, action film.

Two N.Y.C. street cops, Sylvester Stallone and Billy Dee Williams, reassigned to a special unit, are out to stop an international terrorist who has declared "killing time" from Paris to London to New York City.

The movie is both a nerve-tingling suspense thriller and an irreverent buddy picture. Both premises work and the film is on target from the first scene to the fade-out with plenty of hair-raising moments along the way. Rated R for violence, nudity and profanity.

A SHOCK TO THE SYSTEM: (1990) Starring Michael Caine. This Michael Caine comedy/murder was neglected when it was released in March because, according to one comment, the film may have "cut too close to the yuppie bone."

Though admittedly burdened by poor production qualities, the film is a sharp satire of corporate scrounging. Michael Caine plays a marketing executive who turns murderous when he's passed up for a promotion. This wonderful actor has such a chuckling rapport with the audience that you cannot help but smile when his voice-over narration turns the ghastliness of the film's premises into dry wit.

If revenge is sweet, Michael Caine and A Shock to the System will give you sugar diabetes. However, the script and the star's affability are not benign. In the most murderous moments, there's a chilling cruelty at work. You will laugh at Caine's bloody indiscretions - but they will also scare you just a little. The movie is a black comedy with even darker edges. Rated PG-13 for the suggested violence. This one is a very good video.

LOVE AT LARGE: (1990) Starting Tom Berenger, Anne Archer and Elizabeth Perkins.

Another tongue-in-cheek comedy (originally trounced by "art" critics) that delivers some very good laughs. The twist-and-turn plot is about a band of lovelorn, soft-hearted adventures who rearrange their romantic destinies over and over again. Tom Berenger plays a not-that-bright private detective who follows the wrong man. Anne Archer, with great high-camp, plays the mesmerizing beauty around whom the story revolves, and Elizabeth Perkins makes a formidable foe of romantic treachery.

The story line is sometimes a little obtuse and it takes much too long to get to some of the laughs. You can't fault, however, three very good performances in a low-key farce that has some very nice moments.

Another underrated movie that translates very well to the small screen. Rated R for adult themes.

FROM RUSSIA WITH LOVE

This column was surprised by the response to the information on Russian films. So, here's another... INCIDENT AT MAP GRID 38-60: Plot line: A malfunctioning computer on a crippled American submarine could launch all its cruise missiles at Soviet targets. Summoned to handle the situation, a Soviet naval squadron can either prevent or provoke World War III. Sounds like a job for Sean Connery. (HUNT FOR RED OCTOBER: 1990. Rated PG-13 Four Boxes) This time, the heroics are played out in the Soviet movie, Incident At Map Grid 38-60. The film is one of 18 by Soviet filmmakers being placed in video stores by IFEX International, a New York distributor, which calls its promotion "the hunt for red in October." Be advised that your local video store will probably not have this film. They can, however, get information for you by calling 212-582-4318. Ask them.
