Carcass of fair's champion steer inspected

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The carcass of this year's grand champion steer at the State Fair of Texas is being quarantined by the U.S. Department of Agriculture after a processor found an injection site in the carcass.

Deaf Smith County Extension Agent Davy Vestal said the carcass of the steer shown by Michael Berend of Hereford, a member of the Deaf Smith County 4-H, "is being detained for tissue residue testing. No illegal substances have been found so far and the steer has not been disqualified."

Vestal said a final laboratory report could be issued Friday on a substance found in the steer.

USDA has asked the Food and Drug Administration to find out what was injected into the steer.

The Houston Post quoted Gerald Vince, an FDA district director in Dallas, as saying the substance was "tricky." Vince said, "It appears to be a drug or an inert substance, potentially silicon."

A source close to the investigation who asked not to be identified told the Hereford Brand on Wednesday evening that the substance "was nothing illegal. I think everything will come out just fine after all of the lab testing is finished."

The source said the injection was likely to be a "health shot, not something illegal. I think they're just doing this to try to make a point, and they're not going to be able to make a point on this calf. I think everything is going to be just fine."

The Post story said that a number of substances, including silicon and iodine compounds, can be injected deep into a steer's muscle tissue, causing the animal to appear much larger in important areas.

The Post reported that the processor slaughtered the steer on Oct. 27 and found an inflamed area in the back hip, or round, portion.

The processor sent a sample of the area to the Texas A&M University Diagnostic Laboratory for testing, but the results were inconclusive, according to Allen Nelson, deputy regional director for the USDA's Food Safety Inspection Service in Dallas.

Errol McKoy, president of the State Fair of Texas, refused to comment on the investigation, but did say that a contestant who has been found to use illegal drugs in an animal is automatically disqualified.

McKoy did say that the state fair may institute a program similar to one to be enforced at the 1989 Houston Livestock Show that will test animals for drugs.

All animals entered in the Houston show will be tested for illegal substances, and all carcasses of animals sold in the Houston sale will be inspected by the USDA for illegal substances.

McKoy said the state fair "might" use a similar program in future.

The Houston show is the only major show in the state that has instituted the major testing program. The action came about after the Texas Veterinary Medical Association passed a resolution this year calling for such a program.

The TVMA resolution said that show contestants were asking veterinarians for drugs including diuretics, anti-inflammatory drugs, painkillers, tranquilizers, local anesthetics and anabolic steroids.

Blackwell files suit over 'illegal' votes

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

Kim Blackwell, defeated Republican candidate for Precinct 1 county commissioner, filed a lawsuit Monday against incoming commissioner John Stribling, charging that illegal votes were cast in the Nov. 8 general election.

The lawsuit, filed in 222nd District Court, states that "due to fraud, illegal conduct, or mistake by one or more election officers or other person or persons officially involved in the election, eligible voters residing within Precinct 1... were prevented from voting."

Blackwell said he filed the lawsuit because several Precinct 1 voters were not listed in the right precinct.

"For one thing, I was dropped from the Precinct 1 roll several days before I even filed for the election," Blackwell said. "And then I find out both my neighbors on each side of me should have been listed in Precinct 1, but they were in Precinct

2. And the guy across the street lives in Precinct 2 and he was listed in Precinct 1. There were illegal votes cast in the past election, maybe not knowingly, but it should be taken care of."

Stribling defeated Blackwell by 575 votes in the general election, and County Clerk David Ruland said there were mistakes made on the voter registration rolls but not enough to compensate for the 575 votes.

"Sure, there were mistakes on the roll but there's no way there were that many mistakes made," said Ruland. "The reason Kim was dropped from the roll was because the Secretary of State said we can't use route numbers on people's registrations. Kim was only one of the many people who lives in the country that didn't return our questionnaire about directions to the residence, so he was dropped."

In fact, about 524 people in Deaf Smith County did not return the questionnaire and were dropped from the roll.

District Attorney Roland Saul said the lawsuit was strictly between Blackwell and Stribling and that neither the county nor its workers would be involved in the case.

Stribling found out about the lawsuit Wednesday night and said he isn't too concerned about Blackwell's allegation.

"It's a frivolous lawsuit to me," Stribling said, "especially when the vote was 834 to 259. I'm sure there were mistakes made on the voter registration, but when the vote is so lopsided, it really seems frivolous."

Blackwell said another reason he filed the lawsuit was to "change the system. There have always been discrepancies in the voter registration list and this is just my way of trying to correct that before it goes on too long."

Ruland said Stribling will be county commissioner unless defeated in a recall election.

CSF puts Christmas within reach

Christmas is a time when many families don't have the money for the extras most take for granted. A special gift for someone, a brightly decorated tree, and goodies from the kitchen are items we all associate with the holiday.

For the less fortunate in this community, all these things are far out of reach.

There are many individuals and families who have applied for assistance from the Christmas Stocking Fund this year because of pressing problems that are long-term. Huge medical expenses are especially pressing for some applicants, who simply have no money to provide their families with anything special at Christmas.

The circumstances in many of these cases aren't easily changed or (See CSF, Page 2)

Furr's Foundation gifts

Furr's makes donations to Day Care, foster children

By JOHN BROOKS

Two Hereford organizations received $1,000 donations Wednesday from the Furr's Foundation, the philanthropic division of Furr's, Inc.

The Hereford Day Care Center and the Golden Spread Foster Parent Association each received $1,000 checks.

"We really appreciate Furr's," said Charlene Connally of Hereford, representing the foster parents group. "They have come through for us for three years, and without them we couldn't have had Christmas for all of the foster children."

"I also want to thank everyone in the community for their help this Christmas, their donations of foods and gifts for our Christmas party."

Connally said donations will be accepted through December for the foster children's group.

"This is where we trade for the day care centers," said Bettie Dickson. "We had applied for a grant last spring, and we appreciate them coming through for us."

"A lot of kids will benefit from this."

The donation from the Furr's

Foundation is part of the annual Share Bear Project which is implemented through the sale of stuffed, toy teddy bears.

For each bear sold for $9.99, $5 goes into the Foundation, which then distributes monetary gifts to over 60 organizations in Texas and New Mexico which benefit children and the needy.

This year's Share Bear Project is expected to net $1 million. More than 100 grocery stores in Texas and New Mexico support the effort by displaying and selling Share Bears during the holiday season.

One of the Christmas traditions in the Nieman household, unfortunately, is a "losing tradition."

Knowing my love for divinity candy, my wife has tried every holiday season to prepare some divinity for the occasion. She recorded her 37th "flop" Wednesday.

Now, don't get me wrong--she calls it a flop, not me. Even if you have to eat with a spoon, it's still good.

When I got home from work Wednesday evening, I knew something was amiss. A big bowl of divinity candy was on the kitchen bar, and three or four blobs of candy were nearby on waxed paper.

Lavon was in the den watching tv. "Hey, you made divinity candy," I cheerfully greeted her.

"I don't want to talk about it," she replied emphatically. Then I noticed a note on the bar:

Dear Mr. Publisher:

I tried as hard as I could and just completed my 37th effort to make you a batch of divinity for Christmas. I know it was the 37th because I've tried it every Christmas since we married.

I just wonder how many other people get as frustrated as I do over such a thing.

I have studied many recipes and have tried a number of new ones. This one was called "Fail-Safe Divinity." But when it comes to DIVINITY, nothing seems to work for me.

As I poured the hot boiling syrup into the beaten egg whites, the bowl got to turning so fast it threw white candy syrup all over me and the kitchen before I could get the mixer speed turned down.

Yes, the sun was shining--I was told not to try it on a cloudy day. At least the sun was shining when I started, but two hours later it had turned dark. Do you suppose I should have started in the morning?

I really had intended to send some of the candy to The Brand employees. Now, I hope they enjoy it as frosting for a chocolate-chip cake.

Oh, well, maybe it just wasn't meant for me to make good divinity--just like some people aren't born to be skinny!

Merry Christmas, anyway,
Your loving wife

As you might suspect, this "tradition" has become somewhat of a family joke, except for Lavon. Although she is still serious about making a good batch of divinity, she goes along with the good-natured ribbing about her divinity.

And, I should point out, that divinity is her only failing in the kitchen. She is known, at least in our circle of friends, for making the best homemade rolls in town.

I checked around the office this morning, and everyone thought the chocolate-chip divinity cake was delicious!

Appeals court says system OK

Legislature to examine school funding

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1989 Legislature probably will examine public school funding even though an appeals court has said the current finance system is constitutional, state leaders predict.

The 3rd Court of Appeals on Wednesday overturned state District Judge Harley Clark's finding that the finance system violated the Texas Constitution, but those judges also said the current system doesn't fairly distribute money to all schools.

"Certainly, the Legislature is going to be addressing that issue, and they should," Gov. Bill Clements said. "The Legislature is well aware of the inequities that might exist, and trying to bring about a balanced situation is their objective."

Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby, a defendant in the lawsuit, said he hoped the appeals court ruling wouldn't be used as an excuse for lawmakers to do nothing.

"There is a need for continued improvement of the Texas school finance system and the place to make that improvement is the Legislature," Kirby said.

Many lawmakers had predicted a bloody fight over school finances in the next Legislature, which had faced a Sept. 1, 1989 reform deadline set by Judge Clark. Cost estimates for meeting Clark's ruling had ranged from $600 million to $2 billion.

The property-poor school districts that filed the lawsuit said they would appeal to the Texas Supreme Court, but Wednesday's appeals court decision appeared to remove the immediate pressure on the Legislature.

"It was a moral victory, but we wanted a real one. There are a lot of kids who are going to school in low-wealth districts and they are just not dealing with that problem. If anything, this will slow down that process, which is very sad," said Al Kauffman, lawyer for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

But legislative leaders said the issue would remain on the front burner.

"Despite the court's ruling, it is apparent that inequities do exist," said House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, who is expected to continue leading the House when lawmakers convene on Jan. 10.

"The (1989) Legislature must continue to commit itself to examining those areas and take whatever steps are necessary, without harming local integrity, to guarantee that every school child in Texas receives the best education possible," Lewis said.

Across the Capitol rotunda, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby agreed. "The state has been making steady progress toward equity and excellence in education," said Hobby, who presides over the Senate. "I expect the Legislature to make additional gains in our efforts."

Comptroller Bob Bullock, who offered one of the first comprehensive proposals for solving the school funding crisis, said he hoped lawmakers would reform the finance system.

"The court's decision ... doesn't lessen the need to make sure we're giving our children the best education possible," Bullock said. "We shouldn't need a court to tell us to do what's right and what's needed and what's fair and equitable and economically wise."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said much remained to be done. "We are a long way from addressing the educational needs of our children," he said.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen and chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted school finance would remain on the agenda.

"I think we need to get on with our work and get that part of the educational system taken care of," he said.

Clements said he continues to believe that the Legislature should place before voters a constitutional amendment to guarantee that school funding be an issue for the Legislature — not the courts.

Officials of several school districts that intervened on the state's side of the case said they hoped the Legislature will look at equalizing funding as needed around the state.

"Those of us who are fortunate to be in more affluent situations must be committed to work with all school districts in effecting the most reasonable and efficient system of delivering state and local dollars to where the greatest needs reside," said Winston Power, superintendent at Highland Park.

"I think that philosophically, students are certainly entitled to an equal opportunity to education in Texas. However, I think absolute equity is impossible to obtain, said Richardson superintendent Arzell Ball.

The goals of equity, Ball said, should be "reached by legislative action rather than judicial action ... I'm sure they (lawmakers) will and I don't know of anybody philosophically that opposes substantial equity."

In Plano, Superintendent Wayne Hendrick said he was "most pleased with the ruling ... The present financial system will go a long way in the next two to three years in remedying the problems the poorer districts are trying to get remedied... There does need to be additional funding placed into it to address the true cost of education."

Stage Band to perform

The Hereford High School Stage Band will be among the features of the HHS music department's annual Christmas Concert at the HHS Auditorium. The Stage Band is also one of 17 area high school and college groups that will perform on the "Music of Christmas" program Monday at 11 a.m. on KACV, Channel 5 on Hereford Cablevision.

School finance battle heated

AUSTIN(AP)--Poor districts said they will take their battle for a fairer school finance system to the Texas Supreme Court, after a state appeals court reversed a district judge's ruling against the current system.

"Everybody knew all along that this would be finally determined by the state Supreme Court," said Superintendent James Vasquez of the Edgewood district, a lawsuit plaintiff, after the Wednesday ruling by the 3rd Court of Appeals.

"We're disappointed that we lost at this level, but we're prepared to carry on until we resolve it, hopefully in our favor," Vasquez said.

The 2-1 decision with a strong dissent was "the best we really expected from the Court of Appeals," said Craig Foster, Equity Center executive director, who predicted the plaintiffs would win at the Supreme Court. About 60 of the 67 districts that brought the lawsuit belong to the Equity Center.

Gov. Bill Clements, who hailed the appeals court ruling, said he hoped the state would win in the Supreme Court. An appeal could be filed there if the 3rd Court rejects a motion for a rehearing by the plaintiffs.

The appeals court ruling overturned the 1987 decision by State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin. Clark, who concluded that education is a fundamental right, had said the school finance system violated the Texas Constitution because it didn't ensure each school district has the same ability to obtain money to educate students.

"The system does not provide an ideal education for all students nor a completely fair distribution of tax benefits and burdens among all of the school patrons," said the majority opinion by Chief Justice Bob Shannon of the appeals court.

"Nevertheless, under our system of government, efforts to achieve those ideal come from the people through constitutional amendments and legislative enactments and not through judgments of courts," the opinion said.

"This court concludes that education, although vital, does not rise to the same level as the right to exercise religion free of governmental interference, both rights which have long been recognized as fundamental and entitled to protection under both the federal and state constitutions," the opinion said.

Everybody knew this would be determined by the State Supreme Court

James Vasquez

Justice Marilyn Aboussie concurred with Shannon, and Justice Bob Gammage dissented. The three composed the panel that heard the case.

State officials applauded the ruling, but added that the finance system still needs improvement.

Texas Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby, a lawsuit defendant, said the ruling "correctly interprets the Texas Constitution and state laws and affirms the authority of the Legislature to make policy decisions regarding the funding of public education."

"The Texas Legislature has made tremendous progress in equity over the last 40 years, and in my opinion, will continue to address equity in the future," Kirby said.

Shannon's opinion said the court decision "should not be viewed as an affirmation that the present school financing system is desirable or that it should continue without change; rather, our conclusion is solely that the system is not in violation of the Constitution of Texas."

The lawsuit was filed in 1984 by school districts with low property values. Public schools are funded largely through a combination of local property taxes and state aid. The federal government also contributes.

Clark's ruling was to take effect Sept. 1, 1989. The state, joined by other districts, appealed to the 3rd Court of Appeals.

The school funding battle had been viewed by lawmakers as a major issue facing the 1989 Legislature, with solutions that would satisfy Clark's ruling estimated to cost between $600 million and $2 billion.

The appeals court called the current system "rather patched-up and overly cobbled," but it said citizens and lawmakers, rather than judges, should fix it.

Dissenting, Gammage said Clark's ruling hadn't prevented lawmakers from doing their job.

Reagan dealing directly with PLO

WASHINGTON (AP)--The Reagan administration's decision to deal directly with Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization is a stunning and historic policy reversal on the group long shunned by America as an outcast on the world scene.

The announcement Wednesday night left Israel in diplomatic isolation and came just a few hours after President-elect Bush had taken a tough line against the PLO, declaring that it had not met U.S. conditions for direct dealings.

But President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz said that Arafat, in statements made in Geneva about the same time that

Stunning reversal on shunned group

Bush was speaking, had met the U.S. conditions for a "substantive dialogue"—a form of diplomatic acceptance long sought by the Palestinian group.

Opening meetings will be conducted in Tunis, where the PLO has its headquarters, by U.S. Ambassador Robert H. Pelletreau Jr.

Only a day earlier, the State Department had said Arafat failed to meet the U.S. conditions. And less than three weeks ago, Shultz had accused the PLO of terrorism and said Arafat was "an accessory to such terrorism."

Shultz, asked Wednesday if h had changed his mind on that subject, said the PLO had issued a statement Wednesday that "was clear; it was not unambiguous."

He said Arafat's group had accepted U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338, recognized Israel's right to exist in peace and security, and renounced terrorism.

"As a result," Shultz said, "the United States is prepared for a substantive dialogue with PLO representatives."

Bush just a few hours earlier had demanded that the PLO satisfy U.S. demands.

"I want a very clear, unambiguous statement on the right of Israel to exist as a state, and I want a clear endorsement of Security Council resolution 242."

The U.N. resolutions, adopted in 1967 and 1973, affirm the right of all states in the Middle East to live in peace. Israel is not specifically mentioned.

Reagan's decision put to an end decades of U.S. isolation of the Palestinian group and shocked the Israeli government. The Israeli embassy called it regrettable and said it would not advance the cause of peace in the Middle East.

Save 'n' Gain changes

Hereford's Save 'n' Gain was officially "reopened" as a Furr's Supermarket Wednesday, and it will mean more than changing the sign on the front of the giant supermarket, according to manager Richard Selmon.

As a full-service supermarket, Furr's will "give better service and lower prices," said Selmon. This includes sacking and carrying groceries to cars and cutting down on long check-out lines.

Furr's, Inc. had undergone a major restructuring with its 1987 agreement to acquire Safeway's El Paso division. Furr's now services its 149 stores through two distribution centers in Lubbock and El Paso, according to Bob Hurmance, vice president of public affairs.

Hereford's new Furr's falls under the "conventional supermarket" approach rather than the high-class warehouse system under the Save 'N' Gain name, added Hurmance.

Service set for slain Dallas police officer

DALLAS (AP) — Lawrence R. Cadena, who left his police desk job to work undercover on drug raids, already had experience and knew the work was dangerous, but nothing prepared him for a "buy-bust" that ended his life.

A memorial service was planned for Cadena at 1 p.m. today at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Dallas. The vice officer died late Tuesday night while attempting to purchase drugs from several suspects at an East Dallas convenience store, police spokesman Ed Spencer said.

A rosary service for Cadena, 43, was scheduled at 7 p.m. Friday at Alamo Funeral Home at San Antonio, with funeral services at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. Paul's Catholic Church in San Antonio, and burial at noon Saturday at San Fernando Cemetery No. 2.

Police said Wednesday that Cadena's killer apparently did not know he was an officer when he delivered bogus drugs to him. Cadena's assailant threw the fake drugs inside the car in which he was sitting, then shot him at close range with a semiautomatic rifle.

"The drug was bunk," narcotics division Capt. Eddie Walt said. "Essentially, they killed him for the fun of it."

Cadena was shot in the chest, abdomen and both arms, while a suspect was killed and two others wounded in the ensuing gunfire. Cadena was pronounced dead at

Service set for slain

Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, some 30 minutes after the shootout.

Police said lab tests showed the white powder delivered to Cadena was not cocaine.

Cadena's sister-in-law, Sylvia Cadena of San Antonio, told The Associated Press she was saddened by his death.

"He knew the work was dangerous," she said.

Contacted at a hotel room in Dallas, Cadena's brother, Robert, referred all questions to a police officer.

Colleagues and supervisors said Cadena was a conscientious officer who did not want to take unnecessary risks.

Now You're Cooking

By GAYE B. REILY

Living in Oregon was one experience LaJuan Fowler will always cherish.

"All three of my children were born there and I really enjoyed living in that state," she said. "The mountains and trees were beautiful. We could look out our window and see Mt. Hood."

The Fowler children are Kim, who lives in Jackson, Miss.; Don, who is a member of the U.S. Marine Corps, and is stationed in North Carolina; and Brian, who is a senior at Hereford High School.

This Christmas season looks pretty bleak for the Fowlers, but there is a bright spot. "Our two eldest children won't be able to come here for Christmas, but our daughter, Kim, will give birth to our first grandchild in January. We are looking forward to visiting them then."

Born in Muleshoe, Fowler was raised in Hereford. She married Roy Fowler in 1958 and they moved to Oregon the next year. They returned to Hereford about 11 years ago where she completed her dream of earning a high school diploma.

"Since I married during my junior year at HHS, I didn't finish high school. I received my GED this year and I've stressed the importance of graduating from high school to my children."

Fowler is employed by Deaf Smith County Library as a circulation supervisor assistant while husband Roy is self-employed. The family belongs to First Assembly of God Church where she has kept the nursery class.

A collector of Precious Moments figurines, Fowler enjoys doing cross stitch and crocheting. She is currently crocheting an afghan in anticipation of her first grandchild.

She once was an experimental cook who specialized in desserts, but working outside the home fulltime has changed her lifestyle. "Now I want to cook whatever is fast and easy and I don't experiment much any more."

Fowler learned to cook by taking home economics classes in school and learning from her husband. "Roy is a good cook--he can throw anything together and it works. Even Brian has begun to cook."

Mexican food and hamburgers are among her favorite foods. Her chocolate pie is the most requested dish at church socials. "Everyone loves my chocolate pie and I'm not sure why. It is a simple recipe but that is what everyone always wants me to bring!"

The recipe for Fowler's chocolate pie follows, as do some of her favorite recipes:

CHOCOLATE PIE

Mix together:
3/4 c. sugar
1/2 c. flour
2 c. milk
1/4 c. cocoa
2 egg yolks

Bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Boil over medium heat for 5 minutes.

Remove from stove and add 1/4 stick butter and 1 tsp. vanilla. Pour into a 9" pie shell and add meringue.

CRAB DIB

In blender, mix 12 oz. cream cheese, 1 can tomato soup, 1 Tbsp. lemon juice, 2 heaping Tbsp. salad dressing, and 2 cloves garlic. Stir in 1 can crab meat, drained.

CORN CHOWDER

Fry 5 pieces of bacon until crisp. In bacon grease, add liquid from 1 can whole kernel corn, 1 c. diced potatoes, 1 medium onion diced. Salt to taste. Cover and simmer 15 minutes or until tender.

Add 1 can corn, 1 can cream of celery soup, 1 1/2 c. milk, and heat. Serve garnished with bacon pieces or French fried onion rings.

LAYERED ENCHILADA PIE

1/2 lb. ground beef
3/4 lb. pork sausage
1 c. chopped onion

NBC stunned by loss

CBS wins baseball pact with billion-dollar bid

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC and the major leagues, partners since the beginning of televised baseball, are severing their ties. CBS, which hasn't broadcast baseball since 1965, has won the network rights for $1 billion over four years.

NBC stunned CBS 13 days ago when it paid $401 million for the U.S. network rights to the Barcelona Olympics. CBS stunned right back Wednesday, winning the World Series, both league playoffs, the All-Star Game and a 12-game regular-season package. CBS's bid was the largest by a single network in the history of televised sports.

"It is clearly the most exciting event," said Laurence A. Tisch, president and chief executive officer of CBS Inc. "It dwarfs any other possibility."

Arthur Watson, president of NBC Sports, criticized CBS and said he was "saddened by the loss."

"We made every effort to keep it," Watson said. "Regrettably, someone bid far more than was responsible. Everybody evaluates things differently. That bid was beyond our reach. Let them explain that bid."

Neal Pilson, president of CBS Sports, did explain. And he continued the verbal warfare between the two network sports divisions.

Watson said last May that CBS overbid when it got the Albertville Winter Olympics for $243 million.

Two weeks ago, Watson implied that his earlier criticism was a trap CBS fell into when it bid on the Barcelona Games.

"Looking at the numbers, I think we're better off spending a billion dollars over four years than half a billion over two weeks," Pilson said.

Asked if he thought Watson's remarks were uncalled for, Pilson said Wednesday: "Art Watson can run his business and I'll run mine. You can ask him what happened to NBC's bid on major league baseball."

Watson would not say what NBC's bid was, but said it was substantially less than that of CBS. Television industry executives speculated that NBC's offer totalled about $800 million and ABC's about $650 million, but no one who knew the exact offers would divulge them.

Each network was delivered a bid sheet on Monday. According to Bryan Burns, baseball's senior vice president for broadcasting, the legal-sized paper contained boxes for various events. Networks could bid on combinations of shared deals or the whole thing. They also could fill in a line with their own proposals. Burns and Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said the CBS offer clearly was the most lucrative.

Brent Musburger, the likely No. 1 play-by-play man for CBS, was elated at Wednesday's turn of events.

"Today was like having an early Christmas and a dream come true," said Musburger, a Midwest League umpire in 1969. "I've worked for CBS for 20 years and it's the one sport we never covered. Never in my wildest dreams did I think we'd get it all."

CBS got all network rights, but baseball will award cable rights next month for a package of four to five games a week, for which it is expecting an additional $75 million to $100 million a year. Ueberroth said he had narrowed the cable bidders to four: ESPN, Turner Broadcasting's TNT Network, USA Network and SportsChannel America.

CBS officials said day games would be considered, but also said they were counting on baseball to improve the network's last-place, prime-time schedule.

Ryan raps Astro chief

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Nolan Ryan decided if the Houston Astros didn't want him he wouldn't even go back to the Astrodome to clear out his locker.

Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout king, tried out his new Texas Rangers uniform on Wednesday.

He said he wouldn't even be wearing one if Houston Astros' owner John McMullen had really wanted him.

Ryan, who signed with the Rangers for over $1.5 million with a one-year option, said "the position they (the Astros) took was not realistic. It was John's attitude. He was the one who made the decision."

Asked if he thought McMullen had created a public relations blunder, Ryan said, "Yeah, I'd say he did. He's had a lot of criticism until Jackie Sherrill took the heat off him (by resigning as athletic director and head football coach at Texas A&M)."

Ryan, who lives near Houston at Alvin, Texas, said he didn't even go back to the Astrodome to get his equipment.

"The equipment man is a good friend and he cleared out my gear, boxed it up and sent it to me," Ryan said.

Miami Heat finally wins

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

After 5½ weeks and 17 games, the Miami Heat finally has a "W" for the very first time.

"It's great, just exciting," Grant Long said after the Heat edged the Los Angeles Clippers 89-88 Wednesday night to snap a record 17-game losing streak. "It feels like we can go on and get the next one. Our confidence level is high."

Miami coach Ron Rothstein wants to savor the first victory first.

"I'm just thrilled to finally get a win we deserved," Rothstein said. "We've been in about six games this season that could have gone either way, and I thought at least three of those should have been ours."

Six of Miami's losses have come by six or fewer points.

"I'm just sorry the first win didn't come for the fans in Miami," Rothstein said. "It's a milestone day for our franchise and the city of Miami. It hasn't been easy, but we've got a great group, a group of resilient young men and some great veterans."

Pat Cummings, Grant Long and Billy Thompson each scored 15 points and Jon Sundvold had 14 as the Heat built a 12-point lead, then held off the Clippers in the final two minutes.

"We just played exceptionally well together tonight — we passed the ball and the picks were set," Long said. "It was an all-around effort by the team."

In other games Wednesday, it was Milwaukee 119, Detroit 110; Atlanta 103, Philadelphia 96; Charlotte 115, Indiana 106; Boston 112, Utah 104; and New Jersey 118, the Los Angeles Lakers 113 in overtime.

The Heat's losing streak — the longest in NBA history from the start of the season — began at the hands of the Clippers on Nov. 5. The streak was three games short of tying the record for most consecutive losses in a season, 20, by the Philadelphia 76ers in 1972-73.

The longest losing streak ever was 24 games over two seasons by the Cleveland Cavaliers in 1981-82 and 1982-83.

Clipper coach Gene Shue said his team's downfall was committing 15 turnovers and getting out-rebounded 26-17 in the first half.

"I saw the game slipping away in the first half," Shue said. "We allowed the Heat to win."

Danny Manning scored 23 points and Quintin Dailey 21 for the Clippers, who missed a game-winning shot with two seconds to go.

Ryan said he was surprised by the Astros' actions.

"I guess John wanted his salary structure to go in another direction," Ryan said. "It's his decision. That's the way he runs his business."

He added, "I think the fans in Houston understand I really didn't want to leave but had no choice under the circumstances. The fans there were great."

Ryan, 41, said he came to the Rangers although they didn't give him the top money offer.

"(Manager) Bobby Valentine was a teammate of mine," Ryan said. "Also it made it easier on my family to stay in Texas."

Ryan pitched in the American League nine years ago for the California Angels.

Ryan, the National League's strikeout leader the last two years, is 27 victories short of the magic 300 mark and said "at the end of this year I'd like to be in a position to say I had a good shot at 300. If I help the Rangers next year, then I can."

Ryan said it will be interesting to see if he can handle the July and August heat in Arlington after pitching in the air-conditioned Astrodome.

"To be honest, I don't know how the heat will affect me," Ryan said. "Ferguson Jenkins and Gaylord Perry handled it pretty well in the twilight of their careers so I think it's reasonable to say I should be able to adjust to it."

Ryan said he was enthused about the potential of the Rangers, who were the talk of the winter meetings in Atlanta with their wheeling and dealing.

"There's a lot of excitement on this team," Ryan said. "I think the Rangers had reached a plateau where they needed to do something and they did."

"I hope I can have a leadership role with some of the younger players," Ryan said.

Asked how long he would pitch, Ryan said "Well, I never anticipated pitching this long. Maybe I can go another three years if a stay healthy. It's hard to predict whether it will be one year or three years. There are a lot of factors."

TRAUMA SYSTEMS COULD AVERT DEATHS

Of every 10 Texans who died yesterday from critical trauma, as many as three or four could have survived, according to the Texas Department of Health (TDH).

Dr. Robert Bernstein, Texas Commissioner of Health, said that the reason why so many trauma victims die is not always because treatment is beyond the scope of modern medical expertise and equipment. Rather, it can be because Texas lacks a uniform system by which the best medical resources are readily available to all victims who need them.

Trauma is loosely defined as any injury—a cut, wound, burn, or internal damage—caused by accident or intent (as in homicide or suicide attempts). Most trauma is treatable at home with first aid, or at a general hospital. But about 5-8 percent of trauma cases, those involving life-threatening injuries, require specially trained staff and advanced technology.

Dr. Bernstein said that the key to saving more lives of trauma victims is the establishment of "trauma systems" statewide, a concept which is nationally recognized for its effectiveness. Simply stated, a trauma system is an arrangement among available resources to coordinate emergency health care. Resources include emergency medical services, local hospitals, and specialized hospitals. Each has clearly outlined responsibilities for trauma cases.

Such systems ensure that victims receive the treatment warranted by the degree and complexity of their injuries—as quickly as possible. And each part of the system knows its own role in rapidly stabilizing and treating the victim. That includes transferring the victim, if necessary, to a hospital—commonly referred to as a trauma center—which is able to comprehensively treat seriously injured persons.

According to Dr. Bernstein, several studies, spanning three decades, show that where trauma systems have been instituted in other states, deaths from critical trauma have been reduced by 30-40 percent. In Texas, traffic fatalities alone could be dramatically lessened. If, for instance, trauma systems had been in place last year, and succeeded in saving the lives of 35 percent of the 1,508 reported killed on our highways, 528 victims could have been spared.

TDC will ask the 71st Texas Legislature in January for authorization to create trauma systems throughout the state. "We all must realize, however, that there are some very real problems which must be solved before trauma systems can work in Texas," Dr. Bernstein said.

He explained that state and local economics present the main hurdles to creation of comprehensive trauma systems. Critical trauma treatment is the costliest kind of medicine, since it requires the broadest range of equipment and specially trained personnel around-the-clock. These hospitals must be able to handle any of the many types of life-threatening injuries. In addition, treatment often entails long hospital stays and rehabilitation services.

Compounding the expense of maintaining state-of-the-art equipment and full-time staff, a trauma system must also be able to accept patients who may be unable to pay for treatment. "Certainly any legislation authorizing creation of trauma systems must contain a mechanism to help reimburse participating hospitals and personnel for uncompensated care," Dr. Bernstein added.

Auxiliary holds meeting

The American Legion Auxiliary met in the Legion Hall for their regular meeting recently.

Vice president Betty Jo Carlson conducted the business meeting where 10 members were present. It was reported that two birthday cards, one 'get well' card, and one sympathy card were sent.

It was reported that the total value of merchandise donated to the VA Medical Center Gift Shop was $773.70. Gifts brought to the meeting were donated to the Red Cross.

The next meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. Jan. 3. A chili supper will precede the Legion and Auxiliary regular meetings.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A while back you published a letter from "Worried Sick and Looking for Answers." We liked your response.

The writer was upset because a woman her husband had had sex with as a teenager tracked him down 41 years later and wanted him to meet "his biological son." The writer said her husband was outraged and refused to talk about it.

So long as that small, noisy group continues to track down adopted persons and biological parents, lives will be disrupted and old wounds will be opened. Millions of biological fathers and mothers, and adopted persons, have put the past behind them and they don't want it opened up. These folks have the right to be left alone.

On the other hand, when all the parties involved want a meeting, there ought to be a simple, legal and sensitive way to proceed. We believe that mutual-consent state adoption registries, now in place in 21 states, serving more than 75 percent of the population, can meet their legitimate needs.

Readers who send us a self-addressed, stamped envelope can get a list of the states with registries. Write to: Adoption, 1930 17th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009-6207.--William Pierce, President, National Committee for Adoption

DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for the information. And now a word from me:

Adopted teenagers often fantasize that their "real" parents are much wealthier, more beautiful and more understanding than their own. I do not recommend that these adoptees become involved in a search.

After 33 years of writing this column, I can tell you that the overwhelming majority of searches result in anxiety and heartache on both sides. Moreover, once that Pandora's box is opened there is no closing it. Like it or not, your newfound relatives will be a part of your life forever.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My boyfriend and I were in a horrible motorcycle accident. I will be in a cast for at least a year. My boyfriend lost a leg. We are trying to get on with our lives and hope to be married as soon as we both can walk down the aisle.

Please print this letter for all those ignorant people who ask, "Will you ever get on a motorcycle again?" When I reply, "Of course I will," they look at me like I'm crazy.

Has anyone out there ever been in a car accident? Will you get into a car again? If your house burns down, will you ever go into a house again? If you fall off a horse, will you get back on?

Every time I hear the sound of a motorcycle, I panic. The accident was at a main intersection in town and when we go past it, my heart pounds and I get a queasy feeling in my stomach.

I really don't want to get on a motorcycle again, but I have to! Maybe this letter will help people understand why.--Just Miiki

DEAR MIKI: I understand why you feel as you do, but I have a somewhat different point of view.

After you house burns down, you must go into another house again. And if you have a car accident you can't stop going into cars unless you are willing to be terribly inconvenienced. But nobody needs to get on a motorcycle. You can live a completely happy (and a lot safer) life without it.

Feeling pressured to go "all the way" because everyone else is doing it? You're not alone. For answers to your questions about sex, and to learn how your peers really feel about it, write for Ann Landers' newly revised booklet,

Deadline nears

Residents who donate to Project Christmas Card by Monday, Dec. 19, will have their names appear in The Hereford Brand's special Christmas edition set for Dec. 23. As in the past, proceeds from this year's annual Project will benefit Deaf Smith General Hospital. According to Hilda Perales, chairman, money will be used to buy several pieces of medical equipment including a Boerne birthing bed, new delivery table, and a pulse oximeter. L'Allegra Study Club members, who are sponsoring the Project, have placed specially decorated canisters throughout town to receive contributions. Hospital employee, Dawn Murray, displays a KDC infant intensive care warmer bought with past proceeds.

NEW YORK (AP) — The sound of thunder is caused by the violent expansion of the air after a electrical charge of lightning has heated it.

Thunder is usually heard some time after lightning has flashed, since light travels at 186,282 miles per second, while sound travels at only about 1,100 feet per second.

By counting the number of seconds between lightning and thunder and dividing by five, it is possible to tell how far away a storm is, say weather experts. If it is five seconds between the lightning flash and thunder clap, the storm is about a mile away.

ASK DR. LAMB

Should Reader Take Six Aspirin Daily? BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have taken three aspirin in the morning and again at night for around 24 years. I'm a 47-year-old male, 6 feet 2 inches and weigh 250 pounds. I'm in good health as far as I know. I have not had a checkup since I got out of the U.S. Marine Corps in 1964 and have never been in a hospital. I have been divorced twice and my sex life is average. I don't smoke, and I drink three or four cocktails when I go dancing on Friday or Saturday night. I do not workout and have felt real good all my life.

Your comments on aspirin have got me thinking. All the different questions cause me to wonder if I am wrong in taking aspirin. I have never had bleeding of any kind and no side effects. What should I do? Stop? Keep taking aspirin? Get a checkup?

DEAR READER: The unanswered question is, why did you start taking six aspirins a day in the first place? There must have been some reason. That may have a bearing on whether you should continue to take aspirin or not.

Otherwise there is no reason to take that large an amount of aspirin. The more a person takes, the greater the risk of a bleeding episode, which could be from the stomach or intestines, and you might not even know it. Then there is the risk of hemorrhagic stroke. These are the negatives, but many patients with arthritis have taken large amounts of aspirin for years without complications.

I would recommend that you cut down to one aspirin a day at first, as I hate to see anyone who has been consuming that much stop abruptly, unless they have a complication such as bleeding. By all means have a medical checkup. You need to know where you stand in terms of your blood pressure and cholesterol levels and to have some base-line studies, such as an electrocardiogram, that may be important if you should develop medical problems.

Unless you have a medical problem you haven't mentioned, I can't see much reason to take more than one aspirin every other day in the hope of decreasing your risk of a heart attack. I have discussed the pros and cons of aspirin in my newly revised Special Report 41, Aspirin and Other Analgesics, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/41, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I had a spell of breathlessness. My regular doctor, an internist, examined me and said my heart had enlarged a lot in just a few months. He said my blood pressure was way up, and I had had a heart attack. He put me on Capoten for the blood pressure.

Then I had a bad spell when he was out of town and was taken by ambulance to the emergency room. I saw a cardiologist my mother had used. He said I had heart failure and my lungs had filled with fluid. He ordered Lasix and Lanoxin, Capoten and Nitrodisc pads to be worn only in the daytime.

My internist returned and said I should wear the Nitrodisc pads all the time, that it was very important. I asked him about a pacemaker and he said my heart had too many extra beats. I thought heart failure was a slow heartbeat. I am very confused and would appreciate anything you could tell me.

My blood pressure is now around 147 over 75 and my pulse is 76. I'm 70 years old, 5 feet 4 inches and weigh 100 pounds.

DEAR READER: From your comments and the rest of your letter I would advise you to decide with your doctors who is going to be in charge of your case. Who is going to be available if you need someone?

Your story is that of congestive heart failure which can cause breathlessness from the backup of fluid in the lungs. And the heart enlarges because it is weakened; it dilates. As the heart muscle regains its strength, the size may decrease. The heart rate is usually fast, not slow, unless there are also other problems. The extra beats are more likely related to the underlying heart disease that resulted in congestive heart failure. Evidently your internist believes that the underlying cause of your congestive heart failure was a heart attack. That happens when enough of the heart muscle has been damaged to decrease its ability to contract with enough strength.

The Lasix was prescribed to help you lose the excess accumulated fluid.

About the Nitrodiscs, the dosage, which means the strength and duration of application, has to be judged on the individual patient's response. There is no set rule.

You will understand your condition better after reading Special Report 64, Congestive Heart Failure, which I am sending you. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/64, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Would you tell me what is the difference between a heart attack and heart failure? I have heart failure and I can't find out what it is.

DEAR READER: A heart attack is a commonly used term for damage to part of the heart muscle from acute obstruction of a major coronary artery. The obstruction is caused by fatty-cholesterol deposits followed by the formation of a blood clot at that location. It usually causes chest pain.

Congestive heart failure occurs when the heart muscle is unable to pump enough blood to meet the body's needs. That can happen because the heart muscle is weakened from coronary artery disease or from a heart attack that has destroyed too much heart muscle. The heart muscle can be damaged from a variety of infectious diseases. Heart failure can occur because the heart valves are damaged and the heart has to pump more blood than normal, if it must contract stronger to pump blood out of the heart chambers or if the heart is overworked as a result of high blood pressure.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.
